When the party's over often it's no picnic

By Stephen Nicholls
The Canadian Press

The Party's Over is no picnic. It's a graphic half-hour of television that warns young people against drinking and driving.

It's full of the hard side of drunk driving, from tears and grim statistics to driving demonstrations and mangled bodies.

The film, made by the Alberta government, runs Friday on CTV.

Scored with upbeat rock music, it opens with kids at a party drinking and having fun. When the party breaks up, a young woman wants to take a cab home because she and her boyfriend have had too much to drink.

Instead, the boyfriend talks her into driving.

She's nabbed at a police spot check and fails a breath test. She ends up parting with her licence and $750.

Viewers are told that in a year — when she gets her driving licence back — she can look forward to doubled insurance rates.

All through the film, the young woman and her boyfriend are watched over by a spectre in a letter jacket who lurks in the background, railing against drinking and driving.

SHOWS AND TELLS

In one fantasy segment, he feeds booze to a race-car driver who then weaves through an obstacle course of road flares. After a few drinks, the driver starts flattening the flares and eventually spins out.

The spectre then listens as family and friends of victims of drunk-driving car crashes talk about their losses.

By far the most moving of the vignettes is the scene of a mother sitting with her little girl, who has been maimed in an accident.

Her six-week-old sister died in the car crash, which came at the hands of a drunk driver.

The film's closing images are of newspaper headlines about drunk drivers, graphic photographs of accidents and statistics on the toll of drinking and driving.

Vancouver's symphony is still facing it's toughest year

By Michael Scott

VANCOUVER (CP) — There's an old coatrack in the men's washroom at the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra's office, an undistinguished, metal-clad specimen from the 1950s.

Unless you happened to be standing there, coat in hand, it wouldn't be of much interest — except for the bright green inventory sticker on the rack's leg, about half way up from the floor.

In the dark winter of 1988, when the orchestra shut its doors and placed itself in receivership, its few thousand dollars of office furniture were inventoried — in the event they might have to be sold to satisfy creditors.

That ominous green label is a reminder of just how close the VSO came to never playing again.

Although the crisis was averted by a large infusion of public funds, and a series of deft manoeuvres that left the orchestra debt free, protected from labor unrest for five years and stripped of its quarrelsome 40-member board, the orchestra is still a long way from certifiable health.

Even the orchestra's stubbornly cheerful board president, Ray Peters, isn't saying that the VSO is home free yet.

"The second year of our recovery plan (the 1989-90 concert season) is going to be even more critical, and perhaps harder work than the first year was," he predicted earlier this year.

The orchestra played to 60 per cent houses last season, and the search for a permanent music director is incomplete. Moreover, according to the VSO Marketing Director Francine Collette, subscription sales this season are "flat," showing no improvement over last year.

CALLS IT QUITS

When the VSO cancelled half its 1987-88 season, leaving subscribers to join a long line of other creditors, public faith in the organization's ability to deliver the goods disintegrated.

Not surprisingly, subscribers stayed away in droves once the orchestra started playing again. Even with strengthening single ticket sales, the VSO ended the 1988-89 season with an average paid attendance of 60 per cent in its major Orpheum concert series.

That's not bad, Collette says, considering how deeply the shut-down eroded public confidence. This year, the orchestra has set 65 per cent as its paid attendance target.

"As long as we're not going backward, everything's fine," she says. "This season we'll be at 65 and next year, maybe 70. That's doing quite well, really. We're happy with the results, so far, especially considering what we've come back from."

Two months into the 1989-90 season though, the orchestra's paid attendance is less than encouraging. The first 15 Orpheum concerts have averaged only 55 per cent.

Collette and VSO president Diane Hoar both talk about a trend away from subscription sales to single-ticket purchases. It's a function of the lifestyle here, Collette explains. People just aren't willing to commit their money up front when other pastimes are so beguiling.

It's a trend other orchestras have yet to see.

In Seattle, a city at least as recreation-prone as Vancouver, subscriptions accounted for 80 per cent of the symphony audience last year, and sales remain strong this season.

BUYS LESS

"People seem to be buying smaller packages of concerts, say six or nine instead of 12," says Mimi Keller of the Seattle Symphony. "But they're still anxious to buy into the benefits of a subscription package."

Winnipeg has been experiencing an increase in subscription sales.

"We market in such a way that people just can't say no to subscriptions," says orchestra spokesman Yvonne Swiderek. "Subscriptions are critical for us, and they've grown every year for the past five."

"They're how we maintain a deficit-free organization."

Collette says the VSO sells only 30 to 50 per cent of its tickets to subscribers.

The VSO is pinning a lot of its hopes on a new music director, an appointment that's expected to come some time before Christmas.

"Until we have a music director, series subscriptions will stay relatively flat," Collette says. "It takes three to five years for people to trust you again, after what happened — for the bad taste to go away."

"When we have a new music director, people are going to say: 'Well, the VSO has finally got it together.'"

Board member Abe Sacks, who heads the orchestra's search committee, says the search for a new music director is proceeding well. The list has been narrowed to three finalists he says, plus a few alternate choices.

CIA toddlers with secret identities play at new day care centre

What fun! Now we've zillion-dollar spy-in-the-sky

"Why should there be darkness?" cried Alexander Dubcek in Czechoslovakia last week. "Let us act in such a way as to bring light."

Dubcek was speaking, of course, about glasnost — openness instead of secrecy, truth over lies, freedom replacing fear. And just about the time he was saying that in Wenceslas Square, the U.S. was deploying a secret spy satellite over Red Square to eavesdrop on Soviet communications.

Bulgaria — can you believe it? — announced last week that it would disband its secret police. And just about the time they were saying that, CSIS was asking permission to send secret agents into foreign nations. Canada can't be a grown-up country, they argued, if they are only allowed to spy on Canadians.

"We believe there is an issue of Canadian sovereignty here," explained Ron Atkey, head of the Security Intelligence Review Committee. Then — still with a straight face — he said Canadian spies would carry out their espionage without violating the laws of host countries.

Some nervous nellys in the press wondered what would happen in places like Central America and South Africa where Canadian foreign policy might conflict with American interests and CSIS agents clash with the CIA. Not to worry. In the spy game, the more the merrier.

MEANWHILE DOWN SOUTH OF US

President George Whatsisname has finally approved a $3 million secret CIA operation to oust General Noriega — even if he is 'accidentally' killed in the process. The FBI was recently given expanded powers to operate overseas and to comfort the CIA for this loss of exclusive privileges, the McLean, Virginia, headquarters were given a brand new $1.4 million day-care centre for children of employees. Enrollment will be a state secret, of course, and the tiny tots known only by their first names and middle initials.

Who's who

What fun! Zillion dollar spy-in-the-sky and secret identities for toddlers. No wonder CSIS wants to get in on the game in the face of Eastern Europe's unfortunate move toward glasnost. What's the joy in governing a democracy if you can't keep secrets from the people? How can Canada expect to take its place among independent nations unless it can subvert them and corrupt their citizens on the sly?

Why can't CSIS have a 'Department of Wet Affairs' specializing in assassination like the KGB? Why can't we conduct our own brainwashing experiments on unsuspecting citizens instead of relying on the CIA? Why can't we — not right away, of course, but given sufficient time, money and effort — have our very own 'Bay of Pigs'?

* * * * *

Espionage is, after all, a time-honored profession. Moses received specific instructions from no less an authority than God to create the first 12-man Israeli Secret Service:

"Spy out the land of Canaan..." he told them, "And see the land and what it is; and the people that dwell therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many; And what the land is that they dwell in whether it be fat or lean, whether there be wood therein, or not."

The message is clear. Spy out the other fellow's weaknesses and you can start a squabble that has lasted 3,000 years so far and shows no sign of a solution yet. There's espionage for you!

And Joshua "sent out of Shittim two men to spy secretly, saying 'Go view the land, even Jericho.'"

But there was a mole somewhere who exposed them and they had to hide out in Jericho under some flax spread to dry on the roof of Rahab the harlot — one of their undercover agents. She helped them escape down a rope from her window and they spared her when Jericho was besieged and the sun and the moon stood still and the walls came tumbling down and kings were hanged.

SPLENDID SPIES

Louis XV had a splendid spy in the Chevalier Charles d'Eon. Dressed as a woman, he became lady-in-Waiting to the Czarina Elizabeth of Russia — even read to her while she bathed — under the alias Lia de Beaumont. He was, everybody said, pink, petite and exceedingly pretty even as a captain in the French army.

The Duchess of Orleans had a spy named Richebourg who was only 23½ inches tall. During the 'Reign of Terror', he often disguised himself as a baby and was taken in and out of Paris by a nurse with secret dispatches hidden in his diaper.

Queen Victoria had T.H. Lawrence dressed up as a Bedouin Arab and Robert Baden-Powell pretending to be an eccentric butterfly enthusiast while making detailed maps of fortifications and gun emplacements in his drawings of wing patterns. All Canada ever had was a lady with a cow.

* * * * *

But oaks from little acorns grow. Israel began with a harlot on a wall and ended with the dreaded Mossad — short for 'Mossad Le Aliyah Beth' (Institution for intelligence and Special Services). Britain started with King Alfred disguised as a bard wandering around Danish military encampments and ended up with Burgess and McLean, Philby and Blunt.

The Elephant started with Nathan Hale regretting he had only one life to give for his country and wound up toppling governments in Central and South America, Asia and Africa. All we had (until 1984) was the RCMP and they were never any good at spying. When the Russian embassy in Ottawa burned down in 1956, they had to get M15 and M16 to plant bugs for them in the walls of the new building.

According to Peter Wright's 'Spycatcher' (the book Maggie Ironclaw tried to suppress), they called it 'Operation Dew Worm' — spooks just love making up names like that — and buried coils of microphone cable beneath the footings. Each night, undercover agents visited the site and raised one end of the cables through the new courses of stone and concrete block laid during the day until they could connect them to microphones previously hidden in aluminum window frames. Then they dug a tunnel to a safe house next door, brought the other end of the cables to receivers and Bob's your uncle.

The Russians twigged and never used the bugged rooms for anything important.

In 1957, the Mounties got the same experts to help them bug a wall of the Polish consulate in Montreal. After they'd gone to a deal of trouble and expense, the Poles knocked the wall down and built a new one.

A liberal democracy isn't very good at keeping secrets. The Mounties muddled along as best they could but eventually got caught stealing dynamite, burning a Quebec barn, tapping Warren Allmand's telephone and compiling dossiers on 800,000 Canadians. That led to the immaculate misconception of the Canadian Silly Idiot Society (CISI) in 1984 — although 95% of its staff were the same old Mounties. Now, however, they no longer had to wear red tunics, ride around to music or 'Maintain the Right'.

But then the director, Ted Finn, had to resign over a botched telephone tap which queered the investigation of the assassination of a Punjabi minister in B.C. The new boy, Reid Morden, has been greatly embarrassed over sending Marc Andre Boivin, convicted hotel bomber, to spy on Canadians attending an international peace conference in Copenhagen in 1986. That was all right, said Solicitor General Pierre Blais, and perfectly legal just so long as he was a part time spy.

But now CSIS, mandated only to investigate foreign agents and native subversives on Canadian soil, wants to expand its mandate by sending full time agents abroad. Paranoia fattens on itself.

Gordon Lightfoot finds Sting in the Brazilian rainforest

VANCOUVER (CP) — A byproduct of the greenhouse effect is that Gordon Lightfoot can hitch a flight with environmentalist David Suzuki, travel deep into the Brazilian rainforest to meet the villagers and run into Sting.

"David is making a film about the effects of the clearing of the rainforest on the Kayapo Indians and on one of his trips I decided to go with him," explains Lightfoot. "And there was Sting."

Sting, of course, has been making headlines in his attempts to organize both the pop world and the world's governments in a rally to save the rainforest.

Lightfoot's presence might be a little more surprising, yet during the last few years he's lent his talent to several causes. Among them are the Tears Are Not Enough single by Northern Lights and the last two benefit concerts for the Stein Valley wilderness area in British Columbia.

"I've been affected by these things — like the Stein — but I realize I'm driving around in my automobile and flying here and there and I'm polluting the atmosphere myself," says Lightfoot.

"What has changed for me is the meaning or the relevance of some of my older songs, like the Canadian Railroad Trilogy. When I sing that I put a different slant on it."

The 51-year-old singer seems free of the evil skeletons of excess and scandal which clattered behind him until 1982.

He survived alcoholism (his last drink was in Victoria that year) and his association and support of Cathy Smith, his former girlfriend who was accused of injecting the last dose of drugs John Belushi was to know in 1984.

CHANGES

Now, the favorite son of Orillia, Ont., has made the transition from Canadian folk music's enfant terrible to its eminence gris.

With one sweeping statement he says, "There is an entire generation of new artists out there now. I say, let them have the field."

This almost echoes the time, 15 years ago, when his Sundown album was so popular that Lightfoot called radio stations to ask them to stop playing it into the grave.

Now, without naming any, he would like the public and entertainment media to be more receptive to new artists.

Perhaps Lightfoot recognizes something of himself in them. Or the veteran songwriter could mean he's glad not to have to compete.

"I've now had five albums out since I last had any kind of a hit. But I don't worry about it; I'm taking it easy right now. I'm looking after my family."

Some associates have suggested that Lightfoot saw the folk boom of the '60s merely as an opportune vehicle for his desire to be in show business. But it has driven him to writing some of modern folk's most memorable, romantic and vivid songs.

Several were repackaged for last year's Gord's Gold Volume Two, an album that has been a catalyst to Lightfoot and his four-piece band overhauling their concert set.

"Right now I'm just feeling out the time to write again," the singer explains. "I don't want to make another album until I'm ready, as opposed to my first 17 years with the company (WEA Records) when I would make an album on demand.

"The Stein was an opportunity for us to rehearse a lot of different songs rather than the ones we've been doing in concert for such a long time, to be able to perform some of the tunes that people often request."

Richmond choirs will sing up a storm Sunday

By Claudia Villemaire

RICHMOND — For the first time in almost a decade, Richmond will ring with the sound of Christmas when massed local choirs put on a concert of specially arranged music imported from the musical Southland.

Under the capable direction of Ann Clark, several church choirs, including the juniors are practicing very hard to present a concert to remember this Sunday.

Latest news is that they asked to practice even more so that every note would be crystal pure.

"I am astounded at the turnout. Could be a sign that Richmond folks are hungry for some of that traditional stuff — Christmas concerts, choirs getting together and so on. Actually I expected 10 or 12 to answer my invitation to come out and we have, to date, 38 people of all ages, singing up a storm," Clark told us recently.

The concert is Sunday at St. Ann's Anglican Church. Better get there around 7:30 because we have a feeling seats will be in short supply by 8.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Claudette Colbert says her success at funny nice-girl roles probably blocked her from saucier parts.

The 86-year-old star of the 1934 romantic comedy It Happened One Night and 61 other pictures told Fame magazine in its December-January issue that there's "nothing less interesting than a goody-goody, and I played a lot of them."

"The difficulty was that they made money on my comedies and never thought of me as doing the other thing, which I could do. The best thing to play is a bitch, a bitch with a heart of gold," said Colbert, who lives in Barbados and New York.

Colbert will receive the Kennedy Centre Award from U.S. President George Bush on Dec. 3.

She says she is surprised she has remained so well known worldwide.

"Maybe it's because of my funny-shaped face," she said.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — About 50 top entertainers participated in a televised fund-raising benefit for the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation International that raised more than $4.5 million, organizers said.

Hosts for Sunday's event were Gloria Loring, Hal Linden and Mary Tyler Moore, herself a diabetic and who is also the foundation's international chairman.

Participants included Ricardo Montalban, Oprah Winfrey, Frank Sinatra, Arsenio Hall, Dick Clark and Belinda Carlisle.

The non-profit organization, which supports diabetes research, raised $4,554,549 during its four-hour Thanks for Giving broadcast, said a statement issued by the organization.

PARIS (AFP) — Magnum, the select photographic agency founded in Paris by Henri Cartier-Bresson and three friends, is celebrating its 40th birthday with a major retrospective.

The co-operative was actually founded in 1947. "So, strictly speaking, we should be blowing out 42 candles, but it has taken us two years to organize the event," said Magnum's director, Francois Hebel.

Magnum Photos is more like a select club. Its current 36 members are all internationally renowned photographers who share the conviction that their art is also concerned with ethics.

It pioneered the idea of copyright for photographs. Founding member Robert Capa maintained that a photographer was nothing if he could not keep his own negatives.

Christina Jones' puzzles — a maze of color and fun

By Sharon McCully

SUTTON — Necessity was the mother of invention for Christina Jones, a local artisan whose handcrafted wooden puzzles are becoming a hit at craft shows and exhibitions.

"When our first child was born," says the Swiss born Christina, "I combed the stores searching for the small wooden puzzles that I grew up with."

"When I wasn't able to find any, I decided to try my hand at making one."

As she pattered in her husband's wood-working shop, Christina was unknowingly laying the groundwork for a career in what has turned out to be a promising enterprise.

TRANPOSED FIGURES

Drawing on her love of sketching and recreational painting, Christina began by transposing colorful figures on scraps of plywood lying around the shop. She then carved the drawings into several pieces, and mounted them on a flat backing. With a little sanding and non-toxic finish to guard against nasty splinters, baby had a puzzle — and Christina had a career.

"In the beginning, I used any old pieces of wood I could find in the shop to try different designs," she recalls.

With the help of Nithi, a Pakistani refugee who found work in Canada with the Jones', Christina began production of the wooden puzzles in earnest.

BUSY AS ELVES

From the wood-working shop which doubles as a goat barn nestled in the hills of Sutton, Christina and Nithi are busier than Santa's elves producing puzzles for the Christmas rush.

A colorful glossy catalogue produced by husband Bob features fifty designs for puzzle buffs of all ages, including an adult version for those who like a challenge.

In fact, the intricate melange of woodcuts, could well replace the Rubic's cube as a brain teaser.

"I'm not sure if the adult puzzles will relieve stress or cause it," admits Christina. "One woman who bought one for a gift for someone else, drove fifty miles back to my house so I could show her again how to put it together," she laughs.

Taking into consideration the limited motor skills of younger tots, Christina has developed a special line of puzzles for the under-two set, equipped with buttons to help hold on to the pieces with drooly fingers.

Many of the puzzles have a decidedly Canadian flavor, Christina explains. A map of Canada, a colorful Eskimo, and a penguin set against a Northern landscape are just a few of the favorites chosen by shoppers looking for something "Canadian", she says.

"I'm inspired by the people here and the way of life," commented Christina who first visited Canada 14 years ago as a student. "I met my husband and we returned to Europe for awhile before moving to Canada permanently eight years ago." The small farm they share with Nithi and their two children is a "dream come true" for Christina.

LIFE IS SIMPLE

"We enjoy a very simple lifestyle," says Christina as her three year old makes his regular visit to the shop to help assemble the puzzles and offer his professional opinion.

"The children often give me inspiration too," remarked Christina. "It was my daughter who noticed I didn't have a dragon puzzle in the collection," she says.

Christina quickly set to work constructing a dragon to add to the fifty different puzzles in the collection.

"I didn't want to leave my children to work outside the home, and it wouldn't have been enough for me just to stay at home," says Christina marvelling at her own good fortune. "I was very lucky to find something that answers both of those questions for me."

"Frankly, I've been a little overwhelmed by the response to my work," she admits.

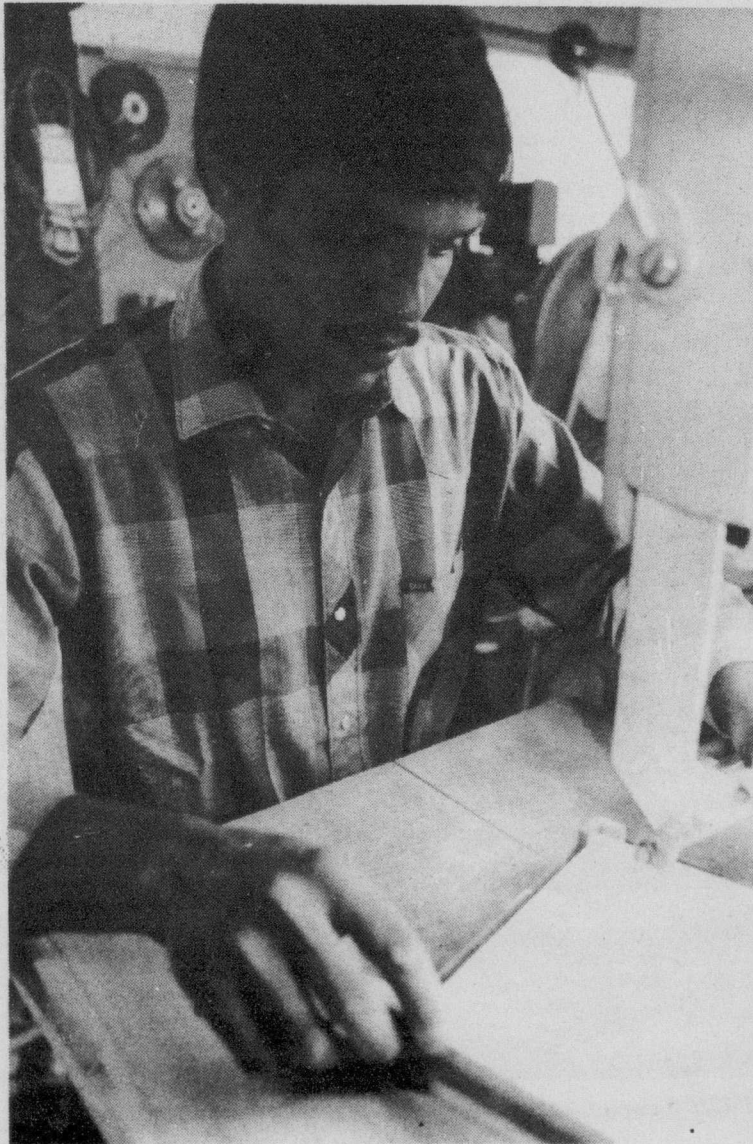

Christina and Nithi first showed the puzzles at the Sutton market.

"The puzzles looked so small in our booth that we decided to fill up our table with bread and vegetables from our garden." "But people were really interested in the puzzles," she added.

Business began to snowball when invitations to larger exhibitions started to roll in.

The increased demand has Nithi and Christina working long hours in the shop cutting, painting, and assembling each puzzle by hand. Hundreds are already packaged for the Christmas season. Depending on the complexity of the design — the puzzles range from 5 to 60 pieces and cost between $5-$35. They are available at some local artisan shops or may be ordered directly from Christina at her Sutton workshop. Just telephone 538-5656.

A Taste of History stirs up recipes of another era

By Claudia Villemare

SHERBROOKE — Marc Lafrance is a historian first. But, surprisingly, his study of history has led him into a totally different field where he and fellow historian Yvon Desloges are becoming even more expert and famous as cooks and writers of cook books.

"Four years ago, while excavating on the Dufferin Terrace in Quebec City, they unearthed the remains of the mansions that were the homes of former governors-general and other high-ranking officials," Lafrance described.

Archaeologists apparently found what they call echo-facts. If you think about it, you'll realize they mean the remains of everyday life such as seeds, bones, cooking pots, utensils and pieces of both fancy and everyday-type crockery.

Now we all know (or we're supposed to when we take the time to put two and two together), archaeologists work hand-in-hand with historians.

So, if you take one or two historians with a bent for cookery, who are presented with items identified as the things people would use for everyday food preparation as well as for fancy occasions, it wouldn't take much of a hint to get these two confrères interested.

"We began to tie the finds from the digs in with probate inventories (stocktaking at the time of a death) which included lists of every spice or condiment, every utensil as well as serving dishes — and the settings themselves are listed in these inventories," Lafrance explained.

Libraries were also recorded and often included handwritten copies of recipes taken from cookbooks originating in Europe.

"So we began experimenting with recipes. We would send a couple out to other Parks Canada stations such as campgrounds and lodges and our confrères there would prepare and try a recipe or two on their guests."

Apparently the recipes soon became popular, developing into specialties in many areas. It seems only natural that Parks Canada would ask Lafrance and Desloges to put their tried and tested finds into book form.

The result is a delight. The book is full of information as well as clear, concise recipes which have been adapted as much as possible to our late-eighties lifestyle. The daily fare of the 1700s and particularly company dishes are accompanied by descriptions of various kitchens, utensils or foods used in that era. Color plates are numerous and interesting too. As a matter of fact, the book, entitled 'A Taste of History' could just as easily be placed in the historical category.

You'll find this recipe for cooking game called 'Loin of Game with Pepper Sauce' calling for a large roast of game (bear, moose, venison, wapiti elk or caribou wrapped in pork lard, basted with pork fat and served in a sauce made of vinegar, onion, orange and/or lemon rind and peppercorns.

Or you might prefer pigeon pie cooked on a bed of veal meatballs called forcemeat balls, smothered with such things as asparagus, mushrooms, beef marrow, egg yolks, capers and truffles sprinkled with lemon juice, covered with pie crust, and slowly roasted — voila — a tender, tasty meal from a plentiful supply of fowl. Lafrance explained the early settlers were very fond of carrier pigeon, probably contributing to the demise of this extinct bird. But at the time New France was settled, this species was plentiful.

"Of course, eating habits changed drastically after the conquest," Lafrance added.

There was very little coming from France such as truffles and fancy wines. The settlers soon got used to English cooking however, especially the pudding, steamed or baked, as easy or as difficult as anyone chose to make it. One of the staples was carrot pudding.

In the book, this carrot pudding is a little fancier because it comes from a recipe used by the cooks in taverns and hotels, molded and served with a flourish.

While the original English pudding was not so different from the French boudin (blood pudding sausage), a stuffing of seasoned blood and fat contained in an animal casing, the term began to designate a whole range of sweet or salted dishes, prepared in various manners. As early as the end of the sixteenth century, some pudding recipes were actually desserts without suet, composed of cream, almonds, eggs, sugar, dried and aromatic fruits.

By the seventeenth century, some puddings were even confused with pies, since the stuffing mixture was placed in a mould with a pie crust and cooked in the oven. Fresh fruits such as apples, apricots, oranges and even carrots were often added to the usual pudding and baked in the oven.

For example: three small carrots, four eggs, sugar, clarified butter, brandy, lemon rind and one puff-pastry pie shell are the ingredients for a delectable version of a carrot pudding that turns out in pie form. Delicious.

So, if we have whetted your appetite and your spirit of adventure, the book is currently available only at Steinberg's stores across Quebec. The book is completely bilingual and the price is right — around $30.

assessment of the man and his works: "The place is decorated with hundred or so of Gibran's artworks. He was a dreadful painter — the gentle insouciance of Rodin and the technical abilities of Blake, all done in muddy earth tones. Gibran's coffin is bricked into the wall of his bedroom if that says anything about the man".

CHORTLING ALONG

Often though, you find yourself chortling along with O'Rourke's fantastic recapitulations of what he has seen and sampled. Here he is on the site of Heritage U.S.A., that pseudo-religious monument to the greed and folly of Jim and Tammy Bakker: "At one end there's the Heritage Grand Hotel — Georgian on steroids, Monticello mated with a Ramada Inn and finished in Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers gothic. This is attached to a two-hundred-yard stretch of bogus Victorian house fronts, which screen the shopping mall. The house fronts have extruded plastic gingerbread details and are painted in colors unfit for baboon posteriors. Interesting that the same God who inspired the cathedral at Chartres, Westminster Abbey and the Sistine Chapel also inspired this. That Big Guy Upstairs can be a real kiddier".

So, too, is P.J. O'Rourke, especially when he is taking a Christmas holiday in El Salvador, rubbing elbows with the American intelligentsia in the Harvard Yard, attempting to make sense of his pal Jimmy Buffett's fervor about the America's Cup. Watching the race, was to P.J. "about as interesting as watching George Bush get ready for bed".

Along with tours of Post-Marcos Manila in the Philippines, attempting to make sense out of apartheid in South Africa, and keeping track of the almost two million Mexicans entering the United States near Laredo, Texas, there are devastatingly satirical put-downs of a great many Third World locales. P.J. O'Rourke regales the reader with running commentaries on foreign food (not McDonald's), fashion ("The Syrian army has dozens of silly hats, mostly berets in yellow, orange and shocking pink, but also tiny pillbox chapeaux, peaked officer's caps with half a foot of gold braid up the front and lumpy Russian helmets three sizes too large"), and politics ("The Polish Communists have done their dimbulb best to recapture something of the pre-war Warsaw style. That is to say, not every building looks like a parking garage"), with bonuses such as architectural criticisms thrown in, as the last quotation proves.

DIFFICULT TRAVEL WRITER
As a travel writer, O'Rourke is definitely hard to please, but as a viciously pro-American spokesman, he admits his bias. When continually assaulted for his stance, he replies: "You say our country's never been invaded? You're right, little buddy. Because I'd like to see the needle-dicked foreigners who'd have the guts to try. We drink napalm to get our hearts started in the morning. A rape and a mugging is our way of saying 'Cheerio'. Hell can't hold our sockhops. We walk taller, talk louder, spit further, fornicate longer and buy more things than you know the names of. I'd rather be a junkie in a New York City jail than king, queen and jack of all you Europeans. We eat little countries like this for breakfast and shit them out before lunch". With this kind of conciliatory approach to Foreign Affairs, it's no wonder that the American face abroad is sometimes under assault!

RECORD REVIEWS

Tracy Chapman (ELEKTRA—WEA)

Not since the days of Elvis and The Beatles has an artist had the kind of album impact that Tracy Chapman has made with her second collection.

Lodging in as the number two album in North America according to the November 30th Rolling Stone, Chapman's Crossroads has the unusual feature of having a "New Entry" hand beside it—denoting that the record has not had the long climb up the chart from an entry position in the 100's up to the top ten. (Granted, Janet Jackson made an even grander entrance two weeks ago, in having her latest charted in at Number One, but we're talking Mercedes here, not Hyundais).

Following her debut album that also reached such lofty chart altitudes with more of the same style music has obviously been achieved by the talented Chapman.

Her album is co-produced by David Kershenbaum, no stranger to new or to significant recording projects, and it is equal parts sweetness and vitriol, as Tracy Chapman moves deftly from love songs to protest tunes. "Be Careful Of My Heart", one of the sparest arrangements on the record, features only guitar, bass, mandolin and percussion, flowing gently beneath the emotionally-charged lyrics and delivery by Chapman.

"Freedom Now", on the other hand, is a very moving tribute dedicated to Nelson Mandela, with a folksy banjo adding to the powerful effect of layered instruments and backing vox.

In addition to the love/protest poetry of Chapman, there are also very socially-conscious songs written about the plight of blacks in contemporary America, such as "Material World", which still sees "the links of chain binding", despite "upward mobility" and the trappings of materialism. "All That You Have Is Your Soul", is another song about the longing of people dispossessed of their dreams, which features Neil Young on acoustic guitar and piano.

"Subcity" takes a Dylanesque walk along streets that are far more threatening than any in "Subterranean Homesick Blues", "Where people live everyday/Off the waste and decay/Off the discards of their fellow man".

The power and simplicity of Tracy Chapman's delivery has apparently spawned a new interest in folk music, which means that more artists of the quality she embodies should soon be crowding out the synthetic pop for listener attention.

Rush Presto (ANTHEM—COLUMBIS)

Canada's Rush helped to prove that heavy didn't have to also mean thick as a brick, when it came to ponderous, weighty rock and roll. Writer Neil Peart has long been noted as the kind of rock writer who can add his poetic output to contemporary poetry anthologies, due to his incisive, responsive mind that reacts to everything that comes into his vision.

Rush's work is always insightful, providing in the scansion of their printed lyrics more than enough fodder for young minds who really react to the primitive, Cream—like musical accompaniment. A new Rush album, then, takes a bit more cerebral reaction, than say, Whitesnake's latest.

Peart and his companions in the trio, Alex Lifeson the drummer, and Geddy Lee the bassist, sequestered themselves in a studio—cum—retreat just far enough from Toronto to allow them to return to the bosom of their families on weekends, while toiling all last winter to come up with Presto.

Their latest rabbit from the musical hat is more of the familiar Rush approach to life and living. Peart's complex lyrics flow smoothly with poetic effects closely wed to sense in songs such as "Superconductor" or "The Pass", while experiments such as "Anagram" have fun with anagrammatic word-play: "There's a snake coming out of the darkness/parade from paradise/end the need for eden/chase the dreams of merchandise".

Peart often appears to have as much fun with the sound of words as he does with their ultimate meaning, much as John Lennon delighted in doing "I Am The Walrus" and other songs. In "Chain Lightning" Peart throws out these lyrics: "Energy is contagious/enthusiasm spreads/ tides respond to lunar gravitation/ everything turns in synchronous relation".

But even when the words fade into the background, with Rush there is ever the power of the music to drive home these latest samples of power pop from Canada's metal merchants with a mind.

COMIC COVERUP
For O'Rourke, whose blatant prejudices against all races non-Anglo Saxon are quickly established, it's okay to malign a foreigner, as long as you do it under the guise of comedy.

A trip to Seoul, Korea is a perfect example of O'Rourke's comic, but decidedly racial approach to world travel. "I was squeezed and heaved and, most of all, overwhelmed by the amazing stink of Kimchi, the garlic and hot-pepper sauerkraut that's breakfast, lunch and dinner in Korea. Its odor rises from this nation of 40 million in a miasma of eyeglass-fogging kimchi breath, throat-searing kimchi burps and terrible, pants-splitting farts".

Notes

Remember the cook book we talked about last week — the one with the far-out recipes that date back to the 1700s. Well, we have the full story this week, right on page 4.

The book is written by Marc Lafrance and Yvon Desloges. The recipes sound good, have tested out 'grrreat' and could take you back in time when a fat sheep never grew old but became succulent mutton chops. A Taste of History, a well-bound, hardcover book available now at Steinberg's Stores. Take a peek — you'll also find the price is right!

Drivers — take heed! Today, Safe Driving Week begins. I know that's not very entertaining, but the point is, we would like everyone reading this issue back to read next week's issue. And with the experiences I've had already between winter road conditions and summer-driving conditioned drivers, I think Safe Driving Week should be a time for all of us to take stock of our driving habits and make some definite improvements.

One other thing. Last week we spoke about gremlins in my computer terminal. Now, finally, I'll have to admit they weren't there at all. They are firmly entrenched in my memory bank. So, the first sorry goes out to George Foster, sculptor of beetles in bronze. I said his exhibition continues until January and it doesn't!! Actually the closing date is Dec. 8, so if you put off going to see it until after holidays, change those plans — cancel that trip to Florida — and visit the Champlain-Bishop's Art Gallery before Dec. 8.

Another BIG SORRY goes to all the others I either forgot to put on these pages or were just the tiniest bit too late and will go in this week. Every man, woman and child worth his salt seems to be getting something special ready for Christmas this year. We'll do our best to get everyone in. We just have to hire a gremlin exterminator who also looks after memory banks I guess.

CBC THIS WEEK

CBC News presents unprecedented live coverage of the from Nov. 30 to Dec. 2 from the Winnipeg Convention Centre. This will be a first for viewers as all proceedings will be covered, from the fights on resolutions to the final vote. Included on the broadcast team is Rosemary Brown, runner-up to Ed Broadbent in the '75 convention, Bob White, head of the Canadian Auto Workers Union and Alexa McDonough, leader of the NDP in Nova Scotia. The new leader will be elected Saturday.

Veronica Tennant brings her unique energy and exuberance to Sunday Arts Entertainment, beginning this Sunday, Dec. 3. The program debuts with a special hour-long edition wherein Tennant looks at Metropolitan Cats and take viewers on an affectionate ride on the merry-go-round in a feature item on the restoration and revival of carousel art.

CBC Television's Family Hour will air Brian Orser's very first special titled Brian Orser, Skating Free Sunday, Dec. 3 at 7. Orser's special guest for this first show is Brian Boitano, a good friend and competitor and a U.S. Olympian.

CTV HIGHLIGHTS

The Telethon of Stars begins Saturday at 8 with a dazzling line-up of stars and hosts Suzanne Desautels and Serge Laprade.

A CTV Special on Sunday at 9 brings Christmas into musical focus. Titled The Nicki Bear Christmas Show, Andy Williams, Glen Campbell, The Jeff Healy Band, Celine Dion, Sarah McLachlan and the comic troop, The Flying Karamazov Brothers will be on deck.

Another special on Monday at 7:30 — an enchanting adaptation of a French Canadian fairy tale — is called St. Nicholas and the Children.

Another special Friday at 7:30 — The Railway Dragon — tells the tale of Emily, a little girl who is a believer and a dragon who helps her realize her dream.

And don't forget the big hockey game between the NHL and the Soviets — Wednesday at 9.

VERMONT ETV HIGHLIGHTS

The Oscar-winning Film Oliver airs Sunday at 5:45 on Front Row Feature. Sunday evening you can catch the final two episodes of the Dickens story A Tale of Two Cities at 9.

Wednesday at 7:30, take the time to watch a stunning film on conception and birth titled The Miracle of Life. The film, using high-tech photography, follows the progress of sperm and egg.

Here's a date to mark for next week. The Peter, Paul and Mary 25th Anniversary Special as well as their Holiday Special will fill next Saturday afternoon from 2:50 to 4:50. Then, at 6:55, Great Moments from Austin City Limits brings 22 of country music's superstars out to sing classic renditions of their greatest hits.

L'Ensemble Vocal de Sherbrooke under the direction of Jean François Sénart will present their Christmas concert this Sunday, Dec. 2 at St. Jean Baptiste Church, Conseil St. in Sherbrooke at 8:30.

The program includes J.S. Bach's Cantata 191 Gloria in Excelsis Deo and the Magnificat. Several soloists, among them Gail Desmarais, famous Canadian soprano originally from Richmond will also be performing. Thérèse Laflamme is organist for the event and the choir will be joined by 18 musicians including as well Hélène Plourde and Daniel Doyon, soloists. The choir has just returned from a very successful European tour where their popularity reached unimagined limits. Tickets may be reserved by calling (819) 567-1640.

A very special event is coming to Centennial Theatre in December. The Glenn Miller Orchestra will bring those famous sounds and tunes of the Big Band era to the theatre stage on Dec. 4.

The legendary Glen Miller was one of the most successful of all the dance bandleaders back in the Swing era of the '30s and '40s. But they disbanded in 1942 at the height of their popularity, volunteered for the army and then organized and led the famous Glenn Miller Army Air Force Band and went on to entertain service men. But when Major Miller took off in a single-engine plane from England to meet up with his band in France, the plane was never heard from again and the army declared him officially dead a year later.

Today the orchestra plays under the direction of veteran trombonist Larry O'Brian, who has as one critic put it, returned a sense of swing feeling.

The 19-member band continues to play many of the original arrangements that keep exciting fans who have not heard them played for a while. They also play more modern selections in the big-band style, carefully selecting only those newer tunes that naturally lend themselves to the Miller style and sound. Tickets are still available at the box office — (819) 822-9692.

The Estrie Young Singers will also present their annual Christmas concert at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, 280 Frontenac St., Sherbrooke, Dec. 10 at 4. Everyone is welcome and there will be a free nursery during the concert as well as a coffee hour after. There will be a free-offering.

For the first time in nearly 10 years there'll be a Christmas concert with massed choirs in Richmond. Even now as they practice, neighbors can hear the strains of familiar carols taking shape as Ann Clark and her group swing into high gear practices at St. Ann's Anglican Church in Richmond. We have some photos and a bit of a story on page 4. The concert is Sunday at St. Ann's Anglican Church. Better get there around 7:30 because we have a feeling seats will be in short supply by 8.

On Sunday, Dec. 10 at 2, Music at Plymouth-Trinity presents the Queen Mary Road United Church Choir with a concert of advent and Christmas music, conducted by Kelly Rice. The program will include music by Byrd and Patriquin as well as traditional favorites.

Also on Dec. 10, this time in Racine, the Farandole choir with the participation of Orchestre Symphonique des Jeunes de Sherbrooke including 50 singers and about 60 musicians will present a gala concert. Racine is located on the main highway between Richmond and Waterloo.

At the Motel Le Marquis, in Richmond, it's changeover time. For the month of December — Country Plus, Richmond's own home-grown country and country-rock band with Bobby Patrick, Michael Patrick and Mike Doyle. They've practised up some of the latest hits and smoothed the rough edges in their repertoire — even added some of that nostalgic Christmas music to the program. So, beginning this Saturday, bring your best girl along with mother, the cousins and coerce some friends into a fun night of listenin' and dancin'. That's in the Salle le Grand Duc, downstairs. They even have a back door so a slight stagger or quiet get-away is always possible. The fun begins around 9:30 and there's no admission charge.

Back at the Hut, (Army, Navy and Air Force Association in Lennoxville — the Good Ole Boys — playing Dec. 2, 9 and 16. They are fresh from a successful run at Motel Bretagne where every weekend was filled with music and fans. Dancing at the Hut is from 9 till 1.

The Rocky River Band will tease dancing feet into action at the Sawyerville Hotel on Saturday, Dec. 2.

CBC's Family Hour presents Brian Orser. See NOTES

WHAT'S ON

Dion Country Band starts up at Motel Bretagne this Friday and Saturday from 9:30 till 2. They'll be there for two more weekends — Dec. 8, 9, 15 and 16. Then the Good Ole Boys come back for the holidays starting the party again Dec. 22 and 23, 29 and 30. The big New Year's Dance will see Dion Country back and, for that occasion, they'll serve up a grand, cold buffet. Reservations for the New Year's Bash are encouraged. Call 837-2323 soon as space is limited.

The K G B are at the Golden Lion Pub in Lennoxville Saturday, Dec. 2 beginning at 10:30.

Folks in Bulwer liked that arrangement for their last dance which included a pot-luck lunch. So they're doing it again, this time with music by Old Time Four, beginning at 9 this Saturday. You'll find the music and the eats at the Bulwer Community Centre.

Out near the border, in Stanstead at the Maples Hotel, Big Foot will play foot-stompin' music all month long. They tune up every Friday and Saturday.

Latest news tells me Bronco Billy's is the IN spot for country music in Magog. So far, folks have almost burst the doors off the hinges, out to hear that new star and old favorite, Lyndon Sheldon. It's right on Sherbrooke St., so you can't miss it. Come on out and bring your best ears.

But there's more. Bronco Billy's has a mechanical bull-riding competition going on. And being the nice folks they are, they are giving everybody the chance to practise their bull-riding skills Friday and Saturday nights. But, Sunday things get serious and the real competition begins — at 5. By the way, if anyone would like one or more of Lyndon Sheldon's recently released tapes of songs and music written by himself, you can buy them at Roland Shoe Repair, on Queen St. just across from the Provigo. Or just write or phone Robinson & Robitaille International, P.O. Box 330, Lennoxville, J1M 1Z5. Or better yet, come on out to Bronco Billy's, listen, dance, ride the mechanical bull and pick up a tape while you're there.

Rod Bray and the Countrymen will open the season at the Danville Curling Club this Saturday. Dancing is from 9:30 and everyone is welcome.

At the Richmond Legion Branch 15, they're cookin' up a gala celebration special for a New Year's Eve dance with all the trimmings. So far, all I can say is there will be a dance New Year's Eve and hints at some great music coming in for the event. They did say that tickets will be sold in advance and we'll get more news later. So keep your eyes and ears tuned right in.

And I know, you're wonderin' where that Steve Aulis is, with his whiskers and country music. Bet you thought he'd finally given into all the admiring glances and followed up some subtle hints I've seen being sent his way.

Well, you're all wrong, although he may just have stepped out of the pan into the fire. That's right, he's back at Hotel C'en Haut where all these rumors began. Country Fever will be holding down a month of fun weekends with special nights and surprises planned. They've planned a birthday party for Steve on Dec. 8 and a Christmas party the 22. They'll be there for a whopper of a New Year's Eve party too. Tickets are already on sale at $15 per couple or $8 if you want to go single and hope for the best. The price includes everything you need to bring in the New Year in the grandest manner along with a lunch to shore up energy (and legs) around midnight. There's even a rumor that a certain lady admirer of our whiskered friend has selected a most seductive gown for the occasion. Better keep a sharp eye on things Steve!

Don't forget — Michael Goodsell is playing during December at Restaurant and Bar Salon Chateauguay, 2490 Galt W., Sherbrooke every Thursday, Friday and Saturday night. This is a one-man band that manages a big country band sound. Could be a corner to explore one of these weekends. For info, call 565-9743.

Theatre

Ballenson Trio are back with another of their funny shows, this one a special Christmas presentation. They promise lots of surprises in their new bag of tricks, something for all ages. The curtain rises at Parc Jacques Cartier Theatre Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 2 and 3 at 1:30.

The Glenn Miller Orchestra comes to Centennial Theatre Dec. 4. See MUSIC

Events

Until Dec. 17, the Louis S. St-Laurent National Historic Site will receive visitors on Saturdays and Sundays from 10 to 12 and 1 to 4. On weekdays, only groups with reservations will be able to visit the site. For information, contact France Provencher — telephone (819) 835-5448.

Bishop's University now has its very own dance troupe. It is putting on a big bash to show-off a wee bit, and the big event is slated for Dec. 1, 8:30 p.m., at Centennial Theatre. Newborn Productions presents Rhythm in Motion performing its original work Footnoting the Typeset, a musical show that takes us back through some of the most important periods in modern times. The show is the creation of Crys-tyne Martin and Alexis Hooker and is their first full length production together. Footnoting the Typeset will run for one night only. Tickets are $3 for students and $5 for adults. For info or reservations, call (819) 822-9692.

A show by Jean Marc Parent entitled Ouvrir par le haut comes to University of Sherbrooke Saturday and Sunday at 8.

There's a very special event in Rock Island this weekend. The old Notre Dame school has been lovingly and creatively renovated by Ron and Bev Goodsell. Now the folks out there have a grand community centre and senior citizens' residence. In honor of the project's completion, there will be an Open House on Sunday, Dec. 3 from 2 to 5. Everyone is cordially invited.

This may not be the right place for the next announcement: but we're running short of space! Anyway, Cable-trie 11 and Townships Magazine present the second part of a reporter's trip through Alexander Galt Regional High-school in Lennoxville. This week they talk to principal Bob McConnachie and Bob Halsall. They also discuss special programs, enrichment courses and a current hot topic — Cooperative Education — with Ann Sparkes. The program is seen four times per week in the Sherbrooke area — Tuesday at 9, Wednesday at 11, Friday at 6:30 and Saturday at 4. In the Magog area, the show airs Tuesdays and Thursdays. Next, Townships Magazine will visit the old number one fire station on Marquette Street in Sherbrooke.

A Christmas Story Hour with Joan Buchanan will be held at the North Hatley Library on Saturday, Dec. 9 at 2 p.m. This is for all ages.

And they are launching a historical book in South Durham this week. Apparently the book has been prepared in conjunction with the municipality's 125th anniversary celebrations. Word has it there are lots of interesting things about former residents and settling families in this latest historical accumulation of facts. The launching is Dec. 3 at Notre Dame School in South Durham (Durham Sud) and organizers tell me they plan a gala send-off for their book.

Movies

At the Cinéma Carrefour — in keeping with seasonal fun and frolic — Christmas Vacation, rated 14 and up. It's another hilarious comedy starring Chevy Chase. Patrons take note: there'll be no passes for this one. Curtain rises Saturday and Sunday at 12:45, 2:55, 5:05, 7:15 and 9:30. Weekdays: 7:15 and 9:30.

And just to prove this is a great film guaranteed to make you laugh for two hours, they're putting it on in Cowansville too. Curtain rises every night at the Princess Theatre at 7:15 and 9:00. The Tuesday night special, $3.75 for each showing, is still in effect.

All you folks who try to work-in a little shopping across the border, take time for a movie at Merrill's Showplace, it has three to choose from. The first is Dad, a highly rated, and touching film. Starting times are Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 7 and 9:25; matinées at 1:40, weekdays at 7.

Second billing this week is Prancer, sure to please the younger set. Curtain rises at 7:10 and 9:15 Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Weekend matinées begin at 1:50 and weekdays, curtain goes up at 7:10.

Also on this week — The Bear — rated PG. Showtimes are Friday, Saturday and Sundays at 7:20 and 9:20. Weekend matinées at 2, and weekdays at 7:20.

Fort Lauderdale cleaning up its 'party town' image

By Brian Murphy

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Business remains brisk at a topless cheque-cashing outlet. There's talk of resuming semi-nude car washes. And for a $2 cover charge, bare-breasted women will serve you coffee and doughnuts at a shop near the airport.

Off the interstate highway, brothels thinly disguised as "gentlemen's retreats" boast in neon of all-girl staffs and round-the-clock hours. Male and female prostitutes patrol the palm-dotted beach.

But the permissive atmosphere has dissipated a bit recently in Fort Lauderdale, which has had a reputation as a free-wheeling party town for almost 30 years.

Reform-minded officials and outspoken citizens have taken aim at the remaining risqué diversions.

LIQUOR BAN

"It's not a morality issue, it's an image issue," said city commissioner Sheila Harrigan before a five-member board unanimously passed in October an ordinance banning liquor from clubs with nude entertainment.

The controversial effort to restrict the city's seven adult nightclubs — it faces a court challenge — is the latest crusade to tame Fort Lauderdale into a more family-oriented environment.

One reason is that the winter trek of northern tourists more and more ends at the wholesome Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla., and they never venture south to Fort Lauderdale.

"It's true that Disney and the other theme parks are competition, but we're trying to tie into that market," says Francine Mason of the Greater Fort Lauderdale Convention and Visitors Bureau. "Disney, after all, doesn't have a beach."

STUDENTS GONE

The long stretch of sand was the scene of the first skirmishes between police and partying college students. Beginning in the mid-1980s, police cracked down on Spring Break, an annual bacchanal that drew up to 350,000 college students to the sub-tropical sun of Fort Lauderdale.

Now Fort Lauderdale officials have turned their attention to the city's seamier side.

Gone are the adult bookstores and peep shows, pushed across the city limits. Ordinances have been passed to curb radio noise and cruising in cars along the beach strip, where police vehicles with pulsing blue lights are stationed like beacons warning lawbreakers to steer clear.

"We're slowly cleansing the city of its not-clean elements," says Mayor Robert Cox.

But critics of the crusade are easy to find.

Many merchants along the beach strip — a tawdry collection of T-shirt shops, hotels and hard-drinking bars — have vowed to battle a proposal to level their property for redevelopment as an upscale complex of boutiques and cafes.

The city also has hired consultants and launched an international public-relations campaign, boasting plans to upgrade its downtown with projects such as a $52.6-million performing arts centre and a $29-million science complex. Officials are considering a proposal to add a 64-storey skyscraper to the growing skyline.

SET A DATE

Signs are everywhere proclaiming Fort Lauderdale's goal of being the best city of its size by 1994.

"All of a sudden Lauderdale got religion," says Eric Murray, sitting on a stool at R Donuts, a coffee shop with topless waitresses. "This town built itself on being a party place. You take the fun out of Lauderdale and you're left with nothing."

"I wouldn't see Fort Lauderdale as your typical family destination," says Bill Carlson, marketing research director for Holiday Corp., which owns the Holiday Inn and Embassy Suites hotel chains. "When I think of Fort Lauderdale, I think college students and Spring Break."

Television cameras also have put the city's serious crime and drug problems on display. Earlier this year, the syndicated police show Cops followed Broward County sheriff's deputies though the mean streets rarely seen by tourists.

Mason of the visitors bureau notes, however, that Broward County had a record 3.5 million visitors last year, with a substantial increase in the number of foreign tourists.

"They don't have a negative image about Fort Lauderdale," she says, "because they have never heard of Spring Break."

Singles face same old problems on high seas

By Felicity Munn

ABOARD MS HOLIDAY (CP) — By the fourth day of the cruise, an air of faint discontent has settled over Jane, a 21-year-old from New Jersey.

"I went on a cruise on another line out of New York last year," she explains, "but it was older people and it was really pretty boring."

"So I decided to try a Carnival (Cruise Lines) cruise because they're supposed to be 'the fun ships.'"

So is she having any fun?

"Mmm, yeh," she says after a pause. "But gawd, I dunno, do you find the men that great? I haven't met anyone interesting yet."

Her friend Susan, on the other hand, isn't even looking; she has a boyfriend back home and came on the cruise because Jane wanted company.

"It's been OK," says Susan. "Except the other night one of the officers talked to me for a while, bought me a drink and everything, and then he invited me back to his cabin for a, quote, private party."

"Of course I said no. And he told me to (expletive deleted) and got up and walked away, just like that."

GETS AWAY

Gerry, a 35-year-old from Los Angeles, falls somewhere in between. He is not exactly on the prowl but says meeting someone would be a nice bonus to the trip.

"I separated from my wife a few months ago," he says, gazing sadly out over the moonlit water. "We have two kids and it's been pretty rough. And a cruise is a good way to get away from everything.

"It would be nice to meet someone, but mostly I wanted to get away."

Although singles are still a small minority on most cruise ships, more and more of them are taking to the high seas on their vacations.

With their non-stop activities and parties, Carnival's ships tend to attract a good share of those singles. In fact, some travel agents say another of its vessels, the Carnivale, is the best ship of all for singles.

On this cruise on the Holiday, most of the 1,800 passengers are couples and families. Nevertheless, a special singles party on the first night at sea attracts enough people to pack the disco.

The party turns out to be a series of adolescent games in which volunteers are led through their paces by Vance, the smooth, Hollywood-handsome social director.

PASSING ORANGES

One game, for instance, involves passing an orange down a line of people who are allowed to use any part of their bodies except their hands. The orange starts its journey cupped in a man's neck; with much writhing he passes it to the woman next to him, who then passes it to the man next to her with even more writhing, and so on. The audience loves it.

In another game, couples try to burst balloons between their torsos. The audience — many of them families with children, even though this is supposed to be singles' night — shrieks and hoots.

Carnival cruises gear up for kids

By Felicity Munn

She wore out the waterslide, then danced for hours at a disco party. Now she leaned her head against her mother's arm and sank into a peaceful slumber, even before the waiter took our order.

Through the clatter and conversation of dinner in a roomful of 800 people, she slept, her flawless skin burnished gold from the sun, her dark hair falling like silk across one eye.

It had been another full day at sea for five-year-old Carolina Ingco.

And for all the other kids on this cruise.

The Holiday is a Carnival Cruise Lines ship, and Carnival, which attracts a younger-than-average cruise crowd, is among a growing number of lines offering special programs for kids and teens at no extra charge.

Aboard the Holiday, the program is operated out of a small playroom by several "child counsellors" who supervise activities such as watersliding, swimming, scavenger hunts and "coketail" parties in the disco.

There is a junior program for kids aged four to 12 and a teen program for 13- to 17-year-olds, although organized activities in the two programs are essentially the same.

Activities operate practically non-stop, but during the brief lulls, the counsellors offer a babysitting service in the playroom for $3.50 US per hour for the first child in each family and $2.50 for each additional child.

STAFF BABYSIT

Counsellors and other staff are also available to babysit in cabins at night for the same fee.

The program frees parents to be on their own for a few hours or even all day, knowing their children are looked after. And the kids have a great time.

"I never see my kids," one woman remarked, "and when I do, I get the feeling they're having a better time than I am."

Carrie Ingco, Carolina's mother, was certainly pleased with the service. She and her husband Bob, along with Carolina and seven-year-old Manuel, were on their first cruise, and while they weren't certain they would do it again, they found the children's program was a bonus.

"It lets us have some time on our own, and the kids have really been enjoying themselves," said Carrie, a Miami resident. "They're already excited about the ice-cream-eating contest tomorrow."

Carolina slept on, but Manuel nodded in happy agreement. The next night at dinner, he was delighted because he'd won the contest, which involved eating a bowl of ice cream without using hands or utensils.

"Passport to skiing" hits the slopes

By Stephen Nicholls

TORONTO (CP) — TSN's new Passport to Skiing is sort of a Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous for ski bums.

Former World Cup racers Todd Brooker and Laurie Graham are the hosts for the show, which hits the slopes Wednesday night on the all-sports cable channel.

Each week, the pair will visit the world's most glamorous ski destinations from the Alps to the Rockies — places like Innsbruck, Albertville and Aspen.

"This show has got a little bit of everything," says Brooker in a telephone interview.

"It's a travelogue show. We do go to different areas.

"We'll highlight good restaurants in the town, nice hotels and things to do. It's a show I think will be fun even for people who aren't skiers."

Brooker, who won three World Cup downhill races and finished 34 times in the top 15 during his nine years with Canada's national ski team, is no stranger to these resorts.

EXPERIENCED GUIDE

"This year is my 14th year going to Europe and spending a lot of time there and skiing, and I've been to all kinds of different ski areas," says Brooker.

"But at our last trip we were at a glacier in Solden, which is near Innsbruck, and I've skied there almost every year — the ski team goes there to train. This time I saw things that I never saw before."

Besides touring the key attractions, hotels and restaurants, Brooker and Graham will interview international ski stars like Franz Klammer and Jean-Claude Killy, as well as home-grown Rob Boyd and Felix Belczyk.

Other features will include news from the World Cup circuit and reports on the latest ski gear and garb.

Rich Little is a man of a thousand voices on stage

By Stephen Nicholls
Canadian Press

The man of a thousand voices seems a touch sombre when he's relying on just one of them — his own.

A few minutes earlier, in a Toronto theatre, Rich Little was flamboyant and funny. Between takes of a variety show taping, the Canadian-born impressionist conjured up a tottering George Burns, a swaggering Bob Hope and a droll Jack Benny.

But now, away from the lights, he's almost sullen.

Looking at the thickly clouded sky, he says grimly, "I wouldn't want to be flying out of here today."

As an entertainer, he adds, "If you have a fear of flying, you're in the wrong business."

He should know. He travels 30 weeks of the year, mostly between his home in Los Angeles and the nightclubs of Las Vegas where he performs.

He has come to Toronto to be the host of the Nicki Bear Christmas Show, which runs Sunday on CTV featuring Andy Williams, Glen Campbell, Celine Dion, Sarah McLachlan, the Jeff Healey Band, the Flying Karamazov Brothers and a videotaped appearance by Wayne Gretzky.

HELPING HOSPITALS

The special was taped during a gala to raise money for Canadian children's hospitals.

"I'm going to be doing a little Christmas medley with Bing Crosby, Perry Como, Robert Goulet, Frank Sinatra," says Little.

"(Also) I'm going to be doing probably Reagan, maybe a little Brian Mulroney, George Bush, Jimmy Stewart, Andy Rooney from 60 Minutes — that's one of the new ones I'm doing."

He says he adds 10 voices a year to his repertoire. The latest include Arnold Schwarzenegger, Danny DeVito, Clint Eastwood and Sylvester Stallone.

He says it's hard to add new movie stars because most of them are uninteresting or have voices that are not distinctive. "How do you imitate Tom Hulse? Tom Cruise?" But even some of the oldies are tough, like Bob Hope: "You'd think it would be easy, but I've never been able to do it where I was totally happy with it."

SEX EXPERT

Others come easily, like Dr. Ruth Westheimer, the sex expert with the pronounced accent. "Took about three minutes to learn her."

One of his best, Johnny Carson, took five years.

"Now it's almost part of my own personality," Little says. "Sometimes I do him so well I get the urge to write out an alimony cheque."

He pauses to clear his throat. He does that a lot. Throat trouble and a raspy voice are an occupational hazard.

Celebrities aren't the only objects of his impersonations.

"Some of my best impressions are doctors, neighbors. I keep telling them, 'Geez, become famous. This could be my best voice.'"

Entertainment Briefs

PARIS (AP) — Landscape in the Mist, a movie about two boys searching for their father, was named best film at this year's European Film Awards, better known as the Felixes.

The director, Theo Angelopoulos of Greece, received the prize late Saturday at a theatre on the Champs Elysees. The presentation was the highlight of the second annual awards competition among film-makers from 27 countries.

The jury led by Norwegian Swedish actress Liv Ullmann chose the film ahead of the Soviet Union's Little Vera, Hungary's Eldorado, Iceland's Magnus, Portugal's Memories of the Yellow House, and Britain's High Hopes.

Frenchman Philippe Noiret won the best actor prize for performances in the French film Life and Nothing Else and the Franco-Italian Paradise Cinema. Those films also won special prizes from the jury for artistic merit.

Britain's Ruth Sheen claimed the best actress award for Mike Leigh's High Hopes, a satirical look at Thatcherite England, which also took prizes for best supporting actress Edna Dore and composer Andrew Dickson.

The jury selected Hungarian Geza Boszormenyi as best director for Eldorado. His film Recsk 1950-1953, made jointly with Livia Gyarmathi, was chosen as best documentary.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The brief marriage of Marilyn Monroe and Joe DiMaggio ended 35 years ago, but memorabilia hunters can buy part of their legendary union when the couple's nuptial bed goes on the auction block.

The bed's owner said the hand-carved English oak bed once occupied the master bedroom in the Beverly Hills, Calif., home that the screen star and baseball legend rented during their eight-month marriage in 1954.

It's on display at Regal Antiques of Ho-Ho-Kus in Newark, and the minimum bid is $25,000 US. Shop owner June Regal says it's not a bad price for a piece of furniture with such star quality.

"After all, Judy Garland's ruby slippers sold for $165,000 and a Marilyn Monroe brassiere sold for $1,200," Regal said.

Sealed bids will be opened next month, Regal said.

ELDERSBURG, Md. (AP) — Blaze Starr, the former Baltimore stripper and girlfriend of the late Louisiana governor Earl Long, says she is enjoying the quiet life now, selling jewelry in a suburban shopping mall.

"I have peace. Believe me, after 35 years around constant drums, constant noise, that's important," said the 57-year-old Starr.

Starr's relationship with Long, the self-described "last of the red-hot papas," is the subject of the movie Blaze, scheduled for release next month by Touchstone Pictures. Paul Newman plays Long and Lolita Davidovitch plays the young Starr.

The affair between the grizzled three-time governor, who was estranged from his wife, and Blaze created a scandal that clouded Long's last months in office.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer-actress Bette Midler, who climbed to fame as a brash, raucous cabaret performer, gives two reasons for her avowedly sentimental role in a soon-to-be-released tear-jerker from Disney.

"My hormones are quieted down for the moment," she says in the current issue of Fame magazine. Besides, "I really couldn't say no to this because (Disney studios) paid so much money for it."

Midler stars in Stella as a lower-class woman who gives up the daughter she loves so that the girl may have a better life. The film is a remake of the 1937 Stella Dallas, starring Barbara Stanwyck.

"I couldn't watch the first version," she says. "It seemed pretty sentimental."

NEW YORK (AP) — Although fame and fortune have brightened the future of Alberta native Michael J. Fox, the Back to the Future actor does admit success has a dark side.

"After Rebecca Schaeffer was killed, people said, 'Doesn't that scare you?' Of course it scares me," Fox said, referring to the actress who was gunned down, allegedly by a disturbed fan.

MOVIE NOSTALGIA

By Darrell B. Perry

Today we are experiencing a resurgence of interest in, and deification of, colorful stars of the past. One star who would have enjoyed the attention immensely, yet would have fought it playfully, was Josephine Baker.

Born in poverty in East St. Louis, Ill., in 1906, Baker's affinity with music became apparent at an early age. At 13 she appeared in local song-and-dance revues. At 15 she was a show-stopper in several New York City nightclubs.

In 1925, Baker went to Paris as part of "La Revue Negre" and received rave notices. A year later, she was the hands-down star of the famed Folies Bergere. The French were impressed with her wild, unique rhythm and her comic exuberance. To them, she embodied "le jazz-hot."

She was France's biggest box-office draw in her day but made only two full-length films. In "Zou Zou" (1934) she plays the adopted sister of Jean Gabin, a sailor who has a scrape with the law. She, a laundress, decides to become a showgirl in order to raise money for his defense. The film showcases Baker's unique voice, comic charm and rags-to-riches glamour. In "Princess Tam Tam" (1935), Baker plays an African who is found by two Frenchmen who try to "civilize" her and present her to Parisian society.

Although hailed by America's black community for both her grand style and civil rights efforts, Baker was never really accepted by the white mainstream. She adopted 12 children from around the world, calling them her "Rainbow Tribe." Baker died after a triumphant tour of the United States in 1975. Because of her fame and her work as a spy for the Resistance in World War II, France accorded her a state funeral.

Josephine Baker's life was a whirlwind of wit and circumstance, yet after her autobiography, "Living My Life," was published, she was accused of "revising" her past. To this, she replied, "I don't lie. I improve on life."

QUESTION: Harlem was the first place to embrace the international star. At what club was Baker a featured player?

ANSWER: The Cotton Club.

MARQUEE

THE LITTLE MERMAID (G - Buena Vista) Animated

By J.T. YURKO

Movies have the power to take us to distant lands and to other times. Their magic can give us the sight and sound of Robin Hood and his men in Sherwood Forest, a guy named Rick in a cafe in Casablanca or even a giant lizard stomping Tokyo. But animated films can also take us to the most remote and distant of places, our own imagination.

The best quality of animated films is that they create a world of their own. All rules are off, so if fish want to talk and crabs want to sing, so be it.

Such is the case with the latest animated film from Buena Vista (Disney), "The Little Mermaid." Based on the story by Hans Christian Andersen, this tale is the love story of a mermaid and a human. The human just happens to be a prince, because after all, this is a fairy tale.

As such, the film is primarily aimed at kids, but this is a case in which the term "for kids of all ages" surely applies. "The Little Mermaid" is a feast for the imagination, a superb blend of fantasy and adventure, of morality and music.

The story is simple enough for a child to understand, but filmmakers John Musker and Ron Clements keep adults interested with clever writing, nice songs by Howard Ashman and Alan Menken ("Little Shop Of Horrors") and dazzling animation that is the hallmark of Disney productions.

Take your own or borrow your neighbors kids - or be brave and go yourself. "The Little Mermaid" is a real treat.

Wednesday

HOROSCOPE

F. D. Smith

Week of Dec. 3-9, 1989

ARIES

(March 21-April 20)

The week holds a great deal of activity for you, and much of it will support your endeavors by week's end.

TAURUS

(April 21-May 20)

Reach out for new information. You will have to work through a veil of confusion, however, even some possible deception. But you can!

GEMINI

(May 21-June 20)

The scales balance in your favor. And for this reason, you must apply yourself to those long-range plans.

CANCER

(June 21-July 22)

What had seemed so elusive in the recent past, will become quite vivid by week's end. And it may even be innovative!

LEO

(July 23-Aug. 22)

This can be a time for you to develop new working arrangements and alliances. Love is at the center of it.

VIRGO

(Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Keep the promise to yourself, and apply that new perspective to your working environment. You are due to benefit.

LIBRA

(Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

Sidestep those who would pull you away from special meetings. Those with close ties want all your time. But work beckons, as well.

SCORPIO

(Oct. 23-Nov. 22)

Leave the grand plan for another day. Right now, you must focus on home and home-related matters.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 23-Dec. 21)

You'll ferret out the truth this week, especially in basic issues. Then, love appears on the scene in strident defiance.

CAPRICORN

(Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

The money that you're seeking is available. Know this, and press on without questioning your motives. You will win!

AQUARIUS

(Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

All eyes are on you as the week starts. And you will put that to good use. Profit results.

PISCES

(Feb. 19-March 20)

Once you are past a particularly uneven situation, you're off and running. And an increase in income is what you're seeking.

ASK TONI

Radner's genius came to light on 'Saturday Night'

By Toni Reinhold

How old was Gilda Radner when she died? — T.J., Holly Hill, Fla.

Gilda Radner

Radner, one of the funniest comedians on TV and in the movies, was 42 when she lost a battle with ovarian cancer last May. She and actor Gene Wilder, whom she wed in 1984, were together when she died. Radner came to nationwide attention in 1975 as an original cast member of NBC's "Saturday Night Live."

Is Sigourney Weaver married? How tall is she? — L.F., Niagra-on-the-Lake, Ontario, Canada

Weaver has been married to stage director Jim Simpson since 1984. She is 6 feet tall.

I remember Hugh Marlowe when he played "Ellery Queen" and as a cast member from "Another World." Is he still alive? — C.S., Belvedere, S.C.

Marlowe, one of several actors who portrayed mystery favorite Ellery Queen on radio and TV, joined the cast of "Another World" in 1969. He portrayed Jim Matthews until he died in 1982.

Did Martha Raye play Mel's mother in the series "Alice"? — J.G., Sidney, Neb.

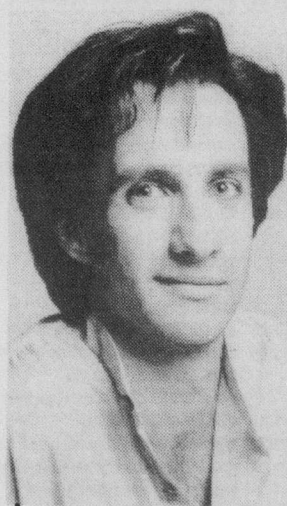

Yes. She played Carrie Sharples, Mel's mother, in a recurring role. Previously, she starred as the housekeeper in "McMillan and Wife" (replacing Nancy Walker). She also had her own TV variety show in the 1950s. Raye entered show business at age 3, working with her parents in their vaudeville act.

Didn't George Jessel have his own TV show? — D.F., Rome, N.Y.

The late actor and humorist had several TV shows, including "All Star Revue" (1952-53), "The Comeback Story" (1953-54) and "The George Jessel Show" (1953-54). He was also a regular on "The Jackie Gleason Show" (1965-66). Jessel died in 1981.
