THE PROTESTANT HOSPITAL.

It is likely that the proposed Protestant hospital for Sherbrooke will be begun in the spring. The probable cost of the structure will be eight thousand dollars. Of this, two thousand have already been subscribed, and as a regular canvas either of the city or the district has not yet been made it is hoped that the necessary six thousand will easily be raised. For the annual maintenance of the institution there are now fifteen subscribers for ten dollars, and thirty for five dollars each. It is also proposed to have a hospital Sunday in all of the churches throughout the district. We trust that financial support for the hospital will be generous and prompt.

BOULANGER.

It is generally thought that Boulanger's election means another war between France and Germany. There are two things, however, which stand in the way. Boulanger was elected by open and shameless alliances, not by a true popular enthusiasm, and versatile as French politics may be it is not yet clear that he will be able to grasp power. Then, again, under the circumstances attending the election, Germany is not likely to consider the voice of Paris to be the voice of France, and her present colonizing enthusiasm will dispose her to wait for a more decisive affront.

JOLIETTE AND HALDIMAND.

The Montreal Gazette says that two swallows do not make a summer. That is true enough, but when an opposition wins two bye-elections within a few weeks, in different parts of the country, it begins to look as if the said opposition was coming in for a big share of rays from the summer sun.

Haldimand has elected Mr. Colter, Liberal, by a majority of 39. The fight was intense and bitter, and the Conservatives left no stone unturned to re-instate Dr. Montague. Government promises were held out in the most tempting form, but the people have preferred principles to immediate advantages. We know something of the county personally, and we take the result as a proof that Honor is not a dead word in politics.

EAST AFRICA.

Prince Bismarck now says that Germany is acting in concert with England with regard to the suppression of the slave trade in the east coast of Africa. He has asked the Reichstag for supplies for an expedition to be undertaken under Captain Weissmann, the African explorer, who has been associated with Cardinal Lavigerie in the anti-slavery crusade. The Chancellor's professions of friendship for England are startling enough so soon after the Morier affair, and although the suppression of the slave trade is made a secondary object in the bill brought before the Reichstag, it is necessary for the restoration of order on the east coast of Africa, as well as the preservation of colonial rights, that another power should be associated with Germany in the expedition.

THE SESSION AT QUEBEC.

The most important features of the present session of the legislature have not yet been brought forward. The governments' bill with regard to the conversion of the debt has not yet been presented, and the official declaration with reference to the four hundred thousand dollars voted to the Jesuits, and allowed by the Dominion government, is still withheld. On both of these points a good deal of feeling will probably be displayed. As to the first, however, it is possible that the bill to be presented will afford every security to present investors in Quebec bonds, and as for the settlement of the Jesuits' Estates question it was hardly to be expected that the Dominion government would disallow the bill when the opposition to it at Quebec was so limited and feeble.

As for the other questions which have been brought up Mr. Mercier has shown a commendable disposition to have the fullest and freest discussion with regard to them. If the work of the session so far, therefore, has not been startling in extent or nature it has, at least, been conducted from a business-like rather than a party point of view. Mr. Mercier is proving himself to be a capable administrator and his stay at the helm will probably be longer than his enemies predict.

THE NEUTRAL PANEL.

The petition to be presented by the Montreal Protestant school commissioners to the provincial government should receive the deepest consideration. The facts of the case are briefly these. The school taxes levied on Protestants go to the Protestant boards and those levied on Catholics go to the Catholic boards, but the taxes levied on incorporated companies are put in what is called the neutral panel and then divided according to population. The objectionable feature of this arrangement is that the bulk of the capital invested in the incorporated companies of the provinces is owned by Protestants, while the bulk of the school taxes collected from those companies goes to the Catholic boards. The change asked for is that the law should be amended to conform with that of Ontario where the division is made on the basis of the capital invested. The Protestant boards should receive the taxes levied on the Protestant investors in incorporated companies, and the Catholic boards should receive the taxes levied on Catholic investors in incorporated companies. The proposed change presents no administrative difficulties, and should be readily assented to.

Sunday-School Convention

In our last issue we gave a brief sketch of the meetings of this body recently held in this city. The importance of the work and the interest manifested call for a more detailed account of its deliberations. The favorable state of the weather was conducive to its success, enabling delegates from all section of this part of the Eastern Townships to be present.

The following delegates were present from the various towns:

Sherbrooke: Rev. A. Lee, Mrs. Jas. Davidson, Wm. Price, W. A. Morehouse, J. R. Ball, R. Gunning, Geo. Ayer, G. H. Howard, Miss L. Hurd. Robinson; Rev. J. B. Hicks, W. A. Lowd. Massawippi: H. J. Hitchcock. Scotstown: W. F. Bowman, D. H. McLeod. Orford: Wm. Addie. Cookshire: Rev. M. Pratt. Coaticook: Rev. C. R. Flanders, Mrs. R. F. Trenholme, Mrs. Parker. Dixville: Mrs. J. B. Parker. Barnston: Miss Rue Parker, Miss Sution. Sawyerville: B. Alger. Richmond and Melbourne: Rev. John McLeod, Johnville: Matthew Hamilton. Windsor Mills: Rev. J. D. Ferguson, W. H. Moore, Franklin Rankin. Eaton: L. W. French. Birchton: Alonzo Todd, J. L. Taylor. Lennoxville: Rev. R. Robinson. Capelton: Wm. Rowe, John Dobb. Fitch Bay: L. H. Rand, L. Magoon. Stoke: Alex. Cameron, Wm. Taylor.

Dr. Barnes in his address of welcome struck the keynote of the convention when he stated that he saw no Baptists, no Congregationalists, no Methodists and no Presbyterians, though he was looking directly in the face of representatives of all denominations. He wished with all reverence to excite the ambition of all to be "fellow-workers with God."

Dr. Smith Baker, of Lowell, gave a most vigorous address, which made a lasting impression on the minds of his hearers. He plunged at once into his subject, "How to Teach the Lesson," giving twenty modifications which are required to make the teaching most effective, some of which we give. Punctuality: Be always there, and be there in time. In some schools the doors are locked during the opening exercises. Pleasantly: Make the pupils see that you love the work. Teach earnestly, independently and reviewingly. Overflowingly: Fill up so that the teaching may bubble out like a spring, not like the dribbling stream which comes when pumped. Teach ignorantly; that is, draw out the ideas from the pupils. With some it is talk, talk talk. Impartially: do not let all the questions be answered by the bright boy, but make the dull boy at the other end of the class feel that he is somebody. Helpfully: By giving the easiest questions to those who require the most help. Parochially: That is, by gathering and motherizing the members of the class. The Dr. made those who "have no time" and are "too tired" to visit their pupils feel ashamed of themselves. Some of the other leading thoughts were that the lesson chould be taught illustratively, suggestively, biblically, applyingly, tenderly, prayerfully and patiently.

George Bishop, Esq., of Montreal, next occupied the time, showing in a very interesting way how the blackboard may be made a valuable auxiliary in bringing out the thoughts of the lesson. He gave as an aid to the teachers the alliterative catch words, where? when? who? what? why?

The Thursday afternoon session was largely devoted to the business of organizing, under the name of the Eastern Townships Sunday School Union. After some discussion relative to the work and object of such a union the following officers were nominated and elected: President, Dr. Barnes; Secretary, Mr. Jas. Eadie; Treasurer, Mr. C. W. Cate, all of Sherbrooke. Central Committee—Messrs. J. R. Ball, H. Twigg, W. R. Price, G. H. Howard, H. D. Lawrence, Sherbrooke; G. L. Masten, Coaticook; W. H. Bowman, Scotstown; Manson Hunt, Ayer's Flat. Vice-Presidents—G. G. Bryant, mayor of Sherbrooke; H. E. Cairns, East Clifton; J. L. Taylor, Birchton; E. S. Orr, Cookshire; Rev. J. G. Sanderson, Danville; Samuel Hetherington, Melbourne; C. W. Coles Stanstead; Rev. John McLeod, Richmond; Rev. J. R. McLeod, Kingsbury; Rev. G. F. Browne, Melbourne; Rev. Geo. Purkis, Waterville; Revs. A. Burwash, A. Lee, James Kines, Sherbrooke; Rev. R. Robinson, Lennoxville; A. McCallum, Danville; A. W. Bannister, Richmond.

The Rev. C. R. Flanders, of Coaticook, in an eloquent address showed some of the reasons why a teacher should feel the dignity of his work, and Rev. A. Lee gave some interesting thoughts, showing what Sunday-Schools had done for children during the last quarter of a century.

The evening session was well attended in spite of the somewhat disagreeable weather. Rev. A. Burwash, gave the first address on the "Spirit and Method of Christ's Teaching." He pointed out the compassion He had for the needy, and the boldness to rebuke evildoers; that His method was the outgrowth of His spirit. He created opportunities for doing good, the aim was to save souls.

The chief speaker of the evening, the Ven. Archdeacon Evans, of Montreal, was listened to most attentively as he gave some answers to "Why should I be a Teacher?" After briefly reviewing the progress due to improved methods, he said the motto of the future should be "The Little Ones for Christ." In answering the question contained in his subject he mentioned three reasons which, though by no means all, were sufficient to prompt all who could do so to give their service in this great work. Our allegiance to Christ demands it, the claims of patriotism call for it, it is a means of grace to the teacher. He showed in conclusion that faithfulness was our duty, the results being in God's hands.

The addresses were all listened to with marked attention. Among those present who aided in making the meetings interesting should be mentioned Lt.-Col. Fraser and Rev. Mr. McKillican, of Montreal.

The general opinion is that this first convention of the E. T. S. S. U. was a success, and it is hoped that much has been done to stimulate Sunday School work in this section of the province.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

HOW THEY ARE ORGANIZED AND CONDUCTED—THE POWERS OF A CORONER.

A recent issue of the Montreal Gazette refers to the above subject, and as the matter is of interest to our readers we give a part of the article. The Gazette say:

"Very little is known by the general public as to the duties and powers of a coroner or the procedure to be followed. All that they know is that a death under peculiar circumstances is generally followed by an inquest, and a verdict more or less at variance with the evidence returned, but as to what should be done in such a case as the Benson tragedy, where the jury disagreed, people seemed to have a very vague idea. Coroner Jones (who is probably the oldest coroner on the continent) willingly entered into an explanation of the whole case, and explained his duties as laid down by Baker, James, Impie and Grindon, besides the American law. In the Bensen case, he said, a crime was committed and at the coroner's investigation twelve of the jury did not agree. Such being the case, the coroner was obliged to dimiss them and hold the prisoner, whom he sends to the Court of Queen's Bench, on the charge of murder, and sends also the records of the inquest.

In answer to a question as to the procedure to be followed, Mr. Jones quoted from Baker's Law of Coroners, 1841. "The following are by act of Parliament, passed upwards of 500 years ago, uniformly acted upon up to the present time:—All violent deaths; all casualties by which death ensues; all sudden deaths; persons found dead; persons dying in prison; lunatics who die by suicide; and felons who die of themselves." The governor of a prison or asylum in which such a death occurs is obliged to notify the coroner, but in all other cases the police are presumed to be responsible for notifying the coroner when a violent or sudden death takes place. In case of a person committing suicide there appears to be nothing to hinder the relatives from hushing up the matter if they can, but should the coroner hear of it afterwards he can exhume the body and hold an inquest without reference to the police or any one else. The coroner, although it is to his own disadvantage, frequently does not hold an inquest, even after being notified, when he deems it unnecessary, but the responsibility lies on him. When a case occurs in which it is necessary to hold an inquest the coroner notifies the sergeant of a police station to get him a jury of so many men, either French or English or mixed. This jury must not consist of less than twelve or more than twenty-three and to return a verdict twelve of these must agree. In an important case the coroner generally selects his own jury and issues summonses. This is in order to get men of education and judgment; in these cases the jury is chosen as much as possible in the deceased's station of life. If the evidence is all in one language the coroner usually selects a jury of that nationality, but in important cases, such as murder, he prefers a mixed jury, in order to give the public the benefit of the evidence in both languages. In case of a juror neglecting to attend after being summoned, the coroner makes a return to the Crown of the refusal of such parties to act, but Mr. Jones has never had any difficulty in this way. The coroner has the option of holding an inquest in public or private, as his court is a court of enquiry and not of trial, so that it is not necessary to admit counsel. The evidence is taken down by a clerk who reads it over in both languages to the witness, who then signs it. In case twelve members of the jury agree on a verdict of justifiable homocide the coroner would let the man go, but would make a return to the Court of Queen's Bench of all the proceedings, and if the crown officers think it necessary they can act as they see fit. There is nothing to prevent the man from clearing out, but a man who has been cleared by twelve "good men and true" would naturally pefer to take his chances with a petit jury rather than bolt. If twelve of the jury agree on any verdict the coroner is bound to accept it, but if not the prisoner is committed to the Queen's Bench on a charge of murder. The grand jury take in hand and examine the evidence taken before the coroner and in their wisdom return a "true bill" or "no bill." If a true bill the prisoner goes through the usual course of law.

If a case of homicide occurs while the Court of Queen's Bench is sitting and after the grand jury has been discharged, the Crown has the power of putting the prisoner on trial, on the verdict of murder or manslaughter rendered by the coroner's jury. A case of this kind occurred in Ireland (the Six Mile bridge affair) when the coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder against an officer and his soldiers for firing on the people. The case was laid before the grand jury who threw out the charge. The Crown officers stated that there was another charge by the coroner's jury, but in that charge a nolle prosequi was entered by the Crown and the matter dropped. In this province jurors and witnesses are not allowed any remuneration, which is a great hardship to some who are taken from their work and lose pay thereby. The coroner allows the police certain fees summoning jurors, etc., but there is no rate fixed by law. A coroner is appointed by the Provincal Government to act during their pleasure. They may appoint whom they see fit so long as he is a British subject, and he appoints his deputies and pays them. They act under the coroner's orders. Mr. Jones was appointed coroner for the district of Montreal and has deputies in several parts of the district who act when required. Mr. Loranger is his deputy in Montreal. It may be stated that there are local acts for the guidance of the coroners, irrespective of those above cited."

Coroner A. G. Woodward, of this city, who is the next oldest coroner in the Province to Coroner Jones, his commision dating Oct. 1st, 1860, informs us that chapter 10 of the Con. Stat. 1880 defines more specifically the duties and powers of coroners, from which it appears that all District Coroners are Fire Marshals, a fact not generally known, and as such are empowered to investigate the origin of fires at any time.

Terrible Disaster.

It is reported from Kingston that sixteen men and sixteen teams of horses were drowned in a lake in the back woods. The drivers were racing their horses on the ice when they became bunched, and, breaking through the ice all were drowned.

W. C. T. U. Convention at Richmond.

Richmond, Que., January 30.—The semi-annual session of the Richmond and Drummond W. C. T. U. was held in the new Presbyterian Church Richmond on Tuesday. There were two sessions during the day and there was a very large attendance, including delegates from other unions of the townships, to whom addresses of welcome were presented. Most of the resident clergymen were present, also the local temperance leaders and Messrs. Lambly and Howard, of Inverness. All the reports presented were very gratifying to the friends of the cause, and much enthusiasm was manifested. Dinner was provided in the basement of the church, of which upwards of a hundred persons partook. After dinner the assembly came to order under the presidency of Mrs. Sanderson, president of the union, when an address was read to W. H. Lambly by Rev. Mr. MacLeod, president of the county branch alliance, accompanied with a presentation of a handsome silver tankard and goblets, bearing this inscription: "W. H. Lambly, Dunkin act contest, Richmond county, November 29, 1888, majority 510, R. and D. W. C. T. union and alliance." Mr. Lambly acknowledged the compliment in fitting terms. A presentation of books was also made to Mrs. Middleton, the ex-president of the provincial union. The venerable lady was not present, but had sent a letter. A letter was also read from Mr. George Goodhue, whose name was received with great enthusiasm, all the speakers referring to him and his great sacrifices in the temperance cause in glowing and affectionate terms. Rev. Mr. Sanderson, on behalf of the union and other friends, then made a presentation of an address, accompanied by a purse of money, to Mr. Jones, of the Guardian, in recognition of his services to temperance during the Dunkin act contest. In the course of his address he referred in warm terms of praise to the great work the Guardian had done. Mr. Jones replied in suitable terms. Rev. Messrs. Browne, Howard and McLeod Kingsbury also spoke. Several ladies made short and pointed addresses during the proceedings. At a later business meeting several topics were discussed on the proposal to establish a reading-room in Richmond. Mrs. Sanderson was re-elected president of the union, and Miss Parker, Danville, and Mrs. Bannister, Richmond, secretaries.

Advice to S. S. Teachers.

Speaking at a Sunday School association meeting last week in Montreal, Bishop Baldwin of Huron said:

"Sunday-school teaching, he said, was just one of those works that was more difficult to do than people think of it till they tried it. Hence the number of disappointed superintendents. It was not, insisted His Lordship, the function of the Sunday-school teacher to produce philosophers of his pupils—the public schools would do that; nor philanthrophists—one of the fruits of Christianity, but it is to teach them to be the children, sons and daughters of the Living God. The power of sympathy must be taught the children. This was the age of missions, and if the wants of the age were to be grasped by the coming generation the children must be taught the power of sympathy. The theory of evolution was referred to as one that just killed out human sympathy. The central fact of the Bible story was the death of Christ, and in these days, when the great doctrin was being forgotton under a bald unitarianism, there could not be to much impressed the substitutional quality of the death. The Bishop insisted on the teaching of the joyousness of God's message."

Summary of Contents.

Perhaps the best sketch the Russian artist Vassili Verestchagin ever drew is the article on "A Russian Village," which he contributes to Harper's Magazine for February. It would have been well called "An Artist's Sketch," if the author had never in his life painted a picture, for the vivid impressions it gives of Russian peasant life could only have been created by a man with an artist's comprehensive vision. In the same number of the Magazine the reader has an opportunity to look at three other quarters of the globe. P. F. McClure writes exhaustively of Dakota; Bjornstjerne Bjornson begins a series of three papers on "Norway and its People;" and Henry Ballantine relates what he saw on a trip to "Nepaul, the Land of the Goorkhas." These papers are all elaborately illustrated (that on "A Russian Village," with drawings by the author himself. Intrinsically valuable, and relatively valuable owing to the rarity of genuine criticism, is the penetrating estimate of "The Work of John Ruskin," by Dr. Charles Waldstein. Theodore Child describes the Hotel Drouot, the Mecca of art collectors; John Habberton talks with amateurs about "Bulb Gardens Indoors," and Emilie Christina Curtis pleads for a wiser training of children's voices in public schools. Annie Fields, Annie Kent, Coates Kinney, and Amelie Rives are the poets represented, the last mentioned with two Scotch songs. Edward Bellamy, who is nothing if not original, writes a remarkable fiction, "To Whom this may Come." Constance Fenimore Woolson continues her serial, "Jupiter Lights." W. D. Howells, in the Editor's Study, pays tribute to two great foes of literary conventionality, Walt Whitman and Bjornstjerne Bjornson, and George William Curtis and Charles Dudley Warner vie with him in the interest of their respective departments.

English Dairy Methods.

The Co-operative Principle in the Production of Butter—Comparison of the Farm-house System and the Factory System—The English Dairy-maid—A Polite Suggestion to Canadian Farm Girls.

This letter is registered in accordance with the Copyright Act, and published in this paper by permission of the author.

LETTER NO. VI.

In the face of changes in the conditions of British agriculture, referred to in a former letter, are found new problems to vex the British farmer. One of these problems, though a minor one, is a troublesome one. It is the difficulty of finding good dairymaids.

One speaker at the Conference argued that this problem, simple as it may appear, actually prevented farmers making butter at all. Another speaker said he "advertised for a nursery governess and had twenty applications, and for a dairymaid, had only one!" What a pity, say we all, that the nineteen unsuccessful applicants for the nursery do not learn to handle the churn as well as the milk bottle, and so increase their fitness for a home, as well as chance for employment. Punch has turned upon this question:—Scene, a farmer's daughter playing the piano accompaniment for her brother singing. Pausing she says: "Do you know, Jack, mamma says I must help in the dairy; she helped when she was a girl. I told her I would rather go out as a governess."

"As to dairymaids, they seemed to be almost as extinct as the dodo. Those to be obtained did not sufficiently know what ought to be their work," so remarked one disgusted farmer at the conference. Another insisted that the sooner they trained up good dairymaids the sooner they should produce in England the butter and cheese for which they "paid the foreigner £15,000,000 a year."

Have we not a dairymaid problem in Canada? Are the farmers' daughters learning to make butter as their mothers did? Or, under the changed conditions, does not the mother find it easier to do the whole work herself than to initiate the daughters into the mysteries of the (old-fashioned) dairy? It certainly is true, in some parts of Canada, that while the girls have opportunities which their mothers never had for acquiring graceful and pretty accomplishments, the mothers largely monopolize both the knowledge and practice of dairy art, and even, in some measure, of the household art. Girls, take the advice of one who will not willingly stand second to one of his sex in his appreciation of and admiration for lovely girlhood, and who will ask for our daughters every accomplishment that their hearts desire, or that will make them more than ever charming in the home. That advice is not to allow yourselves, from false ideas of life, to lose the golden opportunity of girlhood to profit from all the rich experiences of mother, in the short time that you may have the privilege of a mother, under the same roof that shelters you. Let not a delight in brilliant accomplishments create a disdain for the common-place requirements. In a word, try to anticipate as a girl, your estimate, as a woman, of the relative value of what may be learned or acquired in the days at home with mother.

There are various ways in which a remedy may be applied.

First, young people may be taught by means of schools, how to do dairy work. This question of dairy schools, and the training of dairy maids may well be left for fuller discussion in a later letter.

Second, parents should see to it that the more intricate rule-of-thumb process of days gone by gives place to the simplest and easiest process known to the progressive workers of to-day, and one best adapted to the changed conditions under which we are living. Make the age which gives you a sewing machine and an organ give you a dairy suited to the new conditions which these other things have helped to bring about. This can be done. I have in mind a mother who has provided herself with the best implements she can get, and has adopted the best process she can learn of. Having no daughters, she has made her youngest son a most efficient help. He is now able to churn, wash and salt the butter (in the churn), leaving to the mother herself only the shaping or packing and the general oversight. Even the husband, whose whole life has been on the farm, has now begun to take a considerable interest in the dairy work and begins to pride himself on having acquired some knowledge of the "art of butter-making." It is safe to say that under the old system and the necessity of skillful hand manipulation the mother would have been to-day doing the whole work herself, almost wholly unrelieved of even the more laborious part of it.

The next thing noticeable in the discussions in England was the fact of a strong inclination towards co-operative dairying.

This subject appropriately follows that one just discussed. Having done the best we can with the home dairy, let us make the most of that great corrective of its deficiences—the co-operative dairy. Let us see what our English friends have to say about this question.

One speaker favored "small dairying" because it had been more profitable than grain growing. His "corn" return (grain growing) "did not pay his labor bill." Prof. Long expressed himself as doubtful about the establishment of creameries, owing to the low prices of dairy goods. He favored the Normandy system of buying up butter and "blending it in packing house. Others, however, favored co-operation. Said one speaker:—

"It is next to impossible to manufacture a uniform sample of good butter in the farm dairies to compete with that made in factories; the building and fittings are quite unsuitable. If factories were established on large estates for the use of tenants, or else were on co-operative principles, either milk, cream or butter could be collected or delivered there in bulk and treated and distributed in accordance with the tastes of modern consumers. Butter could be graded at the factory, and consumers would know what they bought; indeed, a local industry might be re-established were the factory system extended."

Another speaker (Mr. Howman), also favored creameries, where the farmer would send his milk to be separated, leaving the cream to be dealt with, and taking back the skim to be used on the farm. He said:

"The great difficulty in competing in the butter market is caused by the butter that is made in farm houses being not only small in quantity, but variable in quality and color, and I am convinced that if we combined together and formed butter factories we should be in a much better position to compete with the foreigners who now cut us out in our markets."

Professor Sheldon, who is so well known in this country, was not at the conference last May, but in 1886 he read a paper on this subject which took a dark view of the farm-house system in England. He confessed to having lost hope that reform was possible in home dairies.

"In theory," said he, reform is within reach; in practice it is not. We cannot well expect that the future will induce people to improve their dairy goods any more than the past has done; and if it be true that they have not, as a rule, improved them in the past, then it is pretty sure they will go on just about the same in the future. What then, must be done? I am not one of those who believe that the best of butter and cheese cannot be made, and is not made at the farm houses. I merely say this, that the great bulk of butter and cheese made in farm houses is not by any means as good as it might be, and I affirm my belief that it will be neither better nor worse, as a rule, in the future than it has been in the past. If I happen to be sound in this notion, it follows that only by a change of system shall we be able to effect the needed reforms. And what must this change of system be? Many there are, and their number grows, who think and believe that cheese and butter factories provide the only system under which we can attain the best results; and yet we are not head to the fact that even they are not always a success. They fail like other systems, if not well looked after, if the head man is not skillful and mindful as well. Sometimes they fail, but not often; and when they do, the cause is not hard to seek, as a rule. I favor them because they save expense, and produce even goods, and take labor from the women at the farms, and pay fairly well, as things do."

I endorse Prof. Sheldon's remarks so far as they bear upon the advantages of the factory system. So far as they bear upon the home system and its future, there are two weak points. First, the home dairy is a fact and has a lease of existence that is indefinite, so far as we are able to see now. It is, and is likely to be, a large factor in the problem before us. The factory has not replaced the home dairy to the extent that men have expected, either in England or in Canada. Believing this to be true, I am an advocate for the improvement of the home dairy. Prof. Sheldon's reasons for believing it will not improve are not conclusive. Because things go on badly when no adequate attempt is made to improve them, is not proof that they will not mend when the era of improvement sets in. There was a time, in the history of Denmark, when there was more need than prospect of improvement. There came a time when there was less need than a realization of improvement. We need only to know that the home dairy is a permanent factor in our problem here, to realize the necessity of urging its improvement so far as improvement is possible.

While believing in the largest possible improvement of the home dairy, I would urge the largest possible extension of the factory system.

While there may be difference of opinion as to what extent the factory system will supplant the older system, all are agreed that so far as the one has supplanted the other, or is likely to do so, so far has the industry been advantaged. While we must not fall into the error of looking to the factory system as a cure-all, we may safely regard it favorably as one of the most improvement at our hand.

The Island Farmer (P.E.I.) quotes in connection with the publication of my letters the following extract from the Rural New Yorker, bearing upon this question:—"Co-operation is a step towards a complete and powerful organization.

It encourages a wholesome and good natured rivalry. It encourages strict and methodical business habits. It breaks down the petty jealousies and distrusts so common in farming communities, and so harmful to the best interests of the farmer. It encourages public spirit and enterprise. The farmer who has an interest in the creamery and can examine the books from time to time can easily see how his returns for cream compare with those of his neighbors. If his neighbor is beating him, he will be sure to carry his investigation still further, and see what breed of cows, what foods, what are needed to even the returns. An intelligent creamery patron would certainly see the necessity of providing good roads, and conducting other needed improvements. By driving some of the selfish, self-interest feeling out of a farmer and developing public spirit, the co-operative creamery would work good results." Here followed a preference for the cream-gathering system, which because it will be discussed in other connection, I do not quote here.

What Am I To Do?

The symptoms of Biliousness are unhappily but too well known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A Bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. Too frequently, alas! he has an excellent appetite for liquids but none for solids of a morning. His tongue will hardly bare inspection as any time; if it is not white and furred it is rough, at all events.

The digestive system is wholly out of order and Diarrhœa or Consumption may be a symptom or the two may alternate. There are often Hemorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headach, and acidity or flatulence and tenderness in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower, it costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy. tf

A Kiss in the Dark.

A GAY YOUNG LIEUTENANT'S PROPOSAL AND WHAT CAME OF IT.

On one of the seats of a railway train was a married lady with a little daughter; opposite facing them was another child, a son, and a colored "lady" with a baby. The mother of these children was a beautiful matron, with speaking eyes, in exuberant health and vivacious spirits. Near her sat a young lieutenant, dressed to kill, and seeking a victim. He scraped up an acquaintance with the mother by attention to the children. It was not long before he was essaying to make himself very agreeable to her, and by the time the sun began to decline one would have thought they were old friends. The lieutenant felt that he had made an impression—his elation manifested it. The lady, dreaming of no wrong, suspecting no evil, was apparently pleased with her casual acquaintance.

By and by the train approached a tunnel. The gay young lieutenant leaned over and whispered something in the lady's ear. It was noticed that she appeared to be thunder struck, and her eyes immediately flamed with indignation. A moment more and a smile lighted up her features. What changes? The smile was not one of pleasure, but was sinister. It was unperceived by the lieutenant. She made him a reply which rejoiced him very much. For the understanding properly of this narrative we must tell the reader what was whispered and what was replied.

"I mean to kiss you when we get into the tunnel," whispered the lieutenant.

"It will be dark: who will see it?" replied the lady.

Into the tunnel the train ran. Lady and colored nurse quickly exchange seats. Gay lieutenant immediately threw his arms around the sable lady, pressed her cheek to his, and fast and furious rained kisses on her lips, in a few moments the train came out into broad daylight.

White lady looked amazed—colored lady, bashful, blushing—gay lieutenant belonged.

"Jane," said the white lady, what have you been doing?"

"Nothing," replied the colored lady.

"Yes, you have," said the white lady, not in an under tone, but in a voice that attracted the attention of all in the carriage. "See how your collar is rumpled and your bonnet smashed."

Jane, poor colored beauty, hung her head for a moment, the "observed of all observers," and then turning round to the lieutenant, replied, "This man kissed me in the tunnel."

Long and loud was the laugh that followed among the passengers.

The white lady enjoyed the joke amazingly.

Lieutenant looked like a sheep-stealing dog, left the carriage at the next station, and was seen no more.

To my Cousin Sir Philip,

IN REPLY TO HIS VERY INTERESTING POLITICAL POEM, PUBLISHED IN A RECENT ISSUE OF THE EXAMINER.

Since the Shepherds heard the tidings, of good will and peace to men
On the far off hills of Judah, 'neath the star of Bethlehem,
Such a greeting never sounded in the ear of living man,
As was sent me through your columns, from the town of "Oscar Ban."
How the cultured Town of Springfield must have shuddered with affright,
When the people learned with wonder that they harbored such a light.
I'm in hiding here no longer, for 'tis known as Philip writer,
That they have another shining orb among the stars and stripes.
Yes the "rising star of Canada" 's indeed a "shining" name,
But I fear Sir Bard, you've given me, the puff without the flame.
And our much loved Poet Campbell, stated words exceeding true,
When he sweetly sung that "distance lends enchantment to the view."
For the native land of "Oscar" did not deem him very bright;
Till the Prophet crossed the border, far beyond their human sight.
Now, how ever that he's famous, poor old "Oscar Dhu" would fain
Hie him back among the maples; when the "robbins nest again."
But alas he must content him to continue here awhile.
As he'll play a second fiddle, to no man but Tom Carlyle.
For another orb is risen, looming up so strong and bright,
That the California telescope would fail to find my light.
Yet I'll envy not his splendor but will stand aside and cheer
When that little "babe from Scotland," charms the universal ear.
None however know the beauty of his sweet poetic note;
Who have never heard him warble in his native gaelic rote.
Now Sir Philip for a moment, your attention "Oscar" sues.
And he'll strive to entertain you with some wise, and "solid views."
You imagine brother Jonathan retains me over here,
To prepare my wond'rous talents for the Presidential Chair.
But alas the White House mantle by this chick can ne'er be worn
For the honors here discriminate against the foreign born.
But another glorious privilege looms up before my eyes
And by strong consorted action you may help me win the prize.
Though the winning of the White House is denied me by the law
I may still obtain its equal in the chair at Ottawa!
Therefore tell those mighty chieftains whom you lauded to the sky
To make early preparations for their journey from on high.
For the voice of fate is crying John's regime is almost o'er,
And that "Barons of protection" will return up there no more.
Those monopolistic tories revel now in princely style,
Thinking always to deceive the honest tillers of the soil.
But grim Nemesis approaches and each combine, ring and trust,
With their babylonish strongholds, she will level with the dust.
They are like unto that "rich man," whom we've read of o'er and o'er,
Who had said "I'll build me houses and my riches in them store."
And we know the fate that followed ere the morning's early glow
Chased the darkness from the landscape, the avenger laid him low.
Now the welfare of the farmer is a secondary thing.
In the pompous estimation of this combination ring.
For with loyalty (?) o'erflowing they will strut upon the stage
Loudly shouting "let the farmers take a downward pilgrimage!"
If a man but dare assert himself in favor of free trade,
They'll denounce him as a "traitor" or a worthless "renegade,"
Just as if it were disloyal to the mother o'er the sea
For the son to look with favor on his own prosperity!
There are thousands here from Canada who favor reciproc.
And they're loyal to their country as McDonald ever was,
Neither seek they annexation to "the neighbors at the south,"
Nor that old Imp. Federation, with a mirage at its mouth.
But they do want trade extension, based on moral unity,
That will wipe away forever, causes for hostility.
Why should freer trade relations cause among you any fear?
Naught but good accrues from trading with the people over here.
Grant the farmers their desire, and this annexation talk,
Will, as current slang expresses it, be made "to take a walk."
What though Uncle Sam be lavish his hospitality,
Naught can make his guests forgetful of their "ain sweet counterie"
Therefore, Philip, heed my counsel, if you wish to make your mark,
Pray enlighten all those "Chieftains" who are groping in the dark;
Tell Sir John the mighty leader, reigning now without a peer,
That he's ending in disfavor, a conspicuous career.
I remember when he strutted as the farmers' firmest friend,
Saying if again elected, he'd assist them to the end.
Now there's naught but broken pledges, to remind us of the time
When Sir John and all his minions to our wishes did incline;
But Protection pure and simple, nursing well the favored few,
Is the rag they're boldly flaunting now before each farmer's view.
I was pleased to learn, Sir Philip, that you followed not the lead
Of the magnates in your party, pledged against a freer trade.
All their "talk" tends to the pocket, all their loyalty's a sham,
Give them up and gain free access to the marts of Uncle Sam.
Ev'ry river as it rushes with its burden to the sea,
Ev'ry fish exist'ng in it, murmurs reciprocity!
Ev'ry mine with wealth unbounded, undeveloped far below
Shouts the great enlightened chorus—"let the Yankee in and grow."
Ev'ry tree within our forests, birch and maple, spruce and pine.
Join the universal anthem—smash the duty at the line,
Ev'ry farm that groans with taxes—ev'ry lamb upon it cries,
"Much of all the wool we furnish, hangeth over farmers' eyes."
And the solemn lowing cattle gently grazing on the lea,
Murmur softly "how we'd prosper were it not for that N. P."
Then I heard the noble horses, one unto the other say,
"How we'd all increase in value if free trade should win the day."
As the sunlight softly glinted on each golden field of grain,
I could hear the wheat and barley joining in the grand refrain;
All unitedly are praying, that our country great may thrive,
"Tear away the tariff fences standing now at forty-five."
Then I heard a cackle, cackle, from the poultry in the pen,
And I saw a score of chickens, gathered round a stately hen;
"Why do all those mort ls quarrel o'er such letters as N. P.?"
Asked the little chicks with wonder, "tell us what they mean we pray."
Then the old hen flapped her white wings, as she answered with a cluck,
"Those two letters, O, my children, means that farmers have no pluck,
In this great and broad Dominion, none are prosperous as we,
And the cause in my opinion, is that eggs are duty free.
From the fields of Cochin China, clear around to Plymouth rock.
Eggs are freighted free of duty; therefore 'tis we're valued stock."
Now, Sir Philip, I must tarry, for this duan 's now too long;
And I fear 'twill get the basket, which perchance may not be wrong.
From the country of the eagle, where at present I sojourn
To the maple leaf and beaver many greetings I return.
Fare ye well—no space is left me, all is full from rim to rim—
I commit this to the "waters," let the fledgling sink or swim.
If you find it sick or starving feed it with a little grain,
If it's then not worth it's keeping, send it back to OSCAR DHU.

CONSUMPTION CURED

An old physician retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousand of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149, Power's Block Rochester, N. Y. 10 e.o.w.

October 21, 1888.

An attempt is to be made to have the cider clause in the Maine prohibitory liquor law repealed by the Legislature. The movement is in the interest of the farmers, who, it is asserted, are making loud complaints against having apple juice continued under the ban.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

DRUGGISTS,

Ask For Ayer's

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it, when you want the best blood-purifier.

With its forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring Ayer's to any other. The fore-runner of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, being in greater demand than all others combined.

Sarsaparilla

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it."—George W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far excel those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction."—L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them conscientiously."—C. Bickhaus, Pharmacist, Roseland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

"I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are staples. 'There is nothing so good for the youthful blood' as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—R. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have in stock. I recommend it, or, as the Doctors say, 'I prescribe it over the counter.' It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—C. F. Calhoun, Monmouth, Kansas.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

FACTS, FIGURES and FICTION.

If you are billious or have indigestion sick headache or dizziness, try Baxter's Mandrake Bitters, used instead of pills; they cure constipation. Price 25c. per bottle. For sale by all druggists. tf

"You have a good deal of wind here don't you?" enquired the tourist, "Well, ye-es," said the native, "we have, but"—brightening up—"it doesn't belong here; it all comes from away up in the North West, somewhere."

Look Out for it.

If you are troubled with a cold or cough, however light the attack, look out for it, do not allow it to settle on the lungs: break up the cough by loosening the tough phlegm with Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. 2w25

Customer (getting his hair cut)—"Didn't you nip off a piece of ear then?" Barber (reassuringly) 'Yes, milor', a small piece, but not 'nough to effect 'e hearin'.'

A spring medicine is needed by everyone. Winter food, largely consisting of salt meat and animal fats, causes the liver to become disordered and the blood impure, hence the necessity of a cleansing medicine. The best is Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

'I am growing up pretty fast, and soon I shall be raising a moustache,' said Tommy Toddler. 'You are mistaken, my boy. When you raise a moustache you'll be growing down.'

G. M. Milgay, Parkdale, Toronto, writes: My wife had several severe attacks of cramps in the stomach. Hearing of Dr. Austin's Phosphatine, and its pleasantness to take, I gave her two bottles and she has not had an attack since, and her health is much improved.' For sale by all druggists. tf

Trackman (to tramp)—'Sure, yez had better get off the track, the fasht mail is due. Tramp—'Say, boss, yer don't think I'd let it run over me, do ye?' Faix, it isn't that I fear, but the engineer will tak that nose of yez for a red light, and shtop the train.'

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me great relief in bronchitis. Within a month I have sent some of this preparation to a friend suffering from bronchitis and asthma. It has done him so much good that he writes for more." Charles F. Dunterville, Plymouth, England.

The chap who claims to have first used the expression, 'In the soup,' is Matthew Davis, of Lockport, and the public will be pleased to learn that he is laid up with a broken leg. The fool-killer struck for his head, but missed him.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer imparts a fine gloss and freshness to the hair, and is highly recommended by physicians, clergymen and scientists as a preparation accomplishing wonderful results. It is a certain remedy for removing dandruf, making the scalp white and clean, and restoring gray hair to its natural color. tf

An elder sister who was talking to a small brother the other day about the evils of using slang, happened shortly afterwards to use the word 'dictator.' 'You shouldn't say Dick Tator,' said the little purist, you should say Richard Potato.'

In a Better Humor Now.

"My son aged eleven, was cured of an eruptive humor that covered his head and face with sores, by two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters and Pills," testifies Mrs. Mary Fulford, of Port Hope, Ont. 2w25

Servant girl, who has been sent by her mistress to change a book—"Now mind you give me the right one this time!" Librarian's assistant—"You have always had the right book." Servant Girl—"Well, I don't know how you make that out; I've had to change every book we've had yet!"

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa; regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. 1y27

A wise boy, like a wise lawyer, considers how he will answer possible objections before he puts in his plea. "Papa," said Charlie, "will you buy me a drum," "Ah, but, my boy, you will disturb me very much if I do!' Oh, no, papa, I won't drum only when you are asleep.'

MOTHERS!

Castoria is recommended by physicians for children teething. It is a purely vegetable preparation, its ingredients are published around each bottle. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, regulates the bowels, quiets pain, cures diarrhœa and wind colic, allays feverishness, destroys worms, and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mother's friend. 35 doses, 35 cents. 1y13

Two friends, G. and H. are in the French Cathedral in Montreal. G. notices a number of pews near together each ornamented with a large white card, containing the words A Louer, and remarks in all seriousness: "H., this man A Louer must have a very large family. See how many pews he has." H. explains, and takes great pleasure in showing how many houses owned in Montreal by the same man, A Louer, (Fact.)

"Darling," said he, tenderly, "I've made up mind to ask you—to ask you——"

"Yes," she whispered, breathlessly.

"To ask you to become my wife. I know, dearest, that it is bold, it is presumptuous for me to do so. You are so much superior to me. I am, I feel, unworthy of you, but——"

"Say no more, John. I am yours. You may be unworthy of me, but——"

"But what, dearest?"

"Half a loaf is better than no bread."—Boston Currier.

A Good Housewife.

I can tell her
By her cellar,
Cleanly shelves and whitened wall;
I can guess her
By her dresser,
By the back staircase and hall.
And with pleasure
Take her measure
By the way she keeps her brooms,
And by peeping
At the "keeping"
Of her back and unseen rooms;
By her kitchen's air of neatness,
By its general completeness,
Where is cleanliness and sweetness
The rose of order blooms.

Looking to Matrimony.

"What is it, old fellow? Something's on your mind. Speak it right out!"

"Tell you the truth, old man, I'm going to get married pretty soon."

"I suspected as much. Well, what can I do for you?"

"That's just what I came to see you about. I want you to take charge of the funeral—I mean be my best man, you know."

"Yes, I know. You want me to be your second, and see that all the preliminaries are done regular and according to the code. You've got into trouble and want me to help you out. Well, old fellow, I'll see you through. I may want some one to do as much for me sometime."—San Francisco Post.

CITY ITEMS.

The weather looks well for carnival sports next week in Montreal.

☞Smoke the celebrated "Queen" Cigar and be happy.

☞If you want an overcoat, ulster or pea-jacket, go to J. Levinson. tf

☞"The talk of the city" is the wonderful bargains offered now in Dress and Silks goods at S. Carsley's.

The Witness Carnival number is received and is very good and has had a large sale.

☞Our Stock of Dry Good and Millinery Must be all cleared out and Store closed by April first—great bargains to be had. W. W. Morency & Co.

Twelve deaths in Sherbrooke during the month of December, 8 males and four females. This shows a pretty healthy state in a population of about 10,000.

A good opening for an energetic carpenter with some means is offered in our advertising columns. Read Wilson & Boutelle's advertisement.

The new Methodist church at Fitch Bay is to be dedicated on Friday next by Rev. J. Henderson of Montreal, assisted by Revs. C. R. Flanders, J. Kines and others.

The quarterly love feast and sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered at the Methodist Church Sunday after morning preaching,

Messrs. McFarlane, Austin & Robertson have our thanks for a fine large calendar, the card bearing a colored view of the country seat of the Earl of Shrewsbury.

☞L. Smith says he don't sell cheap goods, but if you want first class Watches and Jewelry CHEAP, he can furnish them in any quantity desired—including spectacles.

☞Owing to bad roads and weather and in order to give customers from out of town a chance to participate in his prize sale, Landsberg will continue for two weeks longer to issue tickets for every five dollar purchase, besides giving a discount of ten per cent for cash on all purchases of one dollar and upwards.

The Rev. A. W. McConechy, whose death appears in another column, was for some time a resident in Sherbrooke where he made many friends. While living here he went out gunning one day and by an accidental discharge of his gun received the charge of shot in his body, which it was thought would kill him, but under skilful treatment he recoved, and afterwards moved west where he entered the ministry.

"I beg to acknowledge the receipt of fifty-six dollars from Messrs. Ridout & Lyster, Gen. Agents of the Sun Life Assurance Co.; this amount being payment in full of the indemnity claimed by me for my recent accident. The "Sun" pays promptly and acts fairly and it gives me pleasure to tell it. A. BRUNELLE.

Capelton, Jan. 1889.

The Corporation of Montreal have decided to purchase three new fire engines the No. 1 Silsby and a Holloway Chemical Engine also a Clapp & Jones. Mr. J. C. Waterhouse of Sherbrooke is the agent in Canada for the Silsby and Holloway engines and has succeeded amid the strong exertions of rival dealers in disposing of the above solely on their merits and the excellent record given of the Silsby in Sherbrooke by Chief Davidson who pertinently answered the question as to its getting water-choked that you could no more choke the Silsby than you could a turbine wheel. That's the machine we want, said Alderman Grenier, and it was done.

FIRES.—The brigade had three calls on Tuesday last. The first was at F. A. Camirand's hotel, Factory St., at 3 a. m., caused by the chimney being stuffed up. Damage slight.

The next, about 7:30 a. m., was in Mr. Bryant's house on Portland Square occupied by Mr. A. H. Foss and Mr. John Murray. The fire was in Mr. Foss' side, and took in the floor and partition of the dining-room. The family were out at the time, but Mr. Murray discovered it and gave the alarm. Some damage was done to the floor and partition, also to the carpet and other things in the room by fire and water, but the loss is not serious.

The third fire was at Geo. Therrien's in East Sherbrooke, caused by a defective chimney. Damage slight.

CALENDARS.—It is getting to be quite the thing among leading business firms to issue to their regular customers an annual souvenir, and no better or more useful article than a handsome calendar can be offered. Such a souvenir has been issued py Messrs Lucke & Mitchell, the well known hardware firm of this city, they selected 4 designs of elegant steel engraved Calendars which have been eagerly sought after, the two dogs being most highly prized. The Quebec Central Railway have also issued a handsome steel Calendar for which they have had a great demand. Messrs Thompson & Co., Bobbin and Spool manufacturers issued a very taking Calendar, six little black dogs crowding in a basket. The E. T. Corset Company issued four small designs which were attractive. These calendars were purchased from the engravers by us and printed for the above firms.

☞It is well known all over the Dominion that S. Carsley is showning the best and the cheapest sailor suits in the market.

☞In making your selection of a 10c Cigar always ask for the celebrated "Queen," it takes the lead. tf

Carnival Programme.

The Canadian Pacific Railway have issued a handsome programme of the Montreal Carnival Sports, with Time Table and rates for return tickets to Montreal during the same. Outside of the programme is a night scene, two snow-shoers being in the foreground on the top of Mount Royal, while in the distance lays the city on one side and the ice castle on the other, illuminated with ascending rockets, while over all sails the glorious orb of night partially hidden by fleecy clouds. The programmes can be obtained of Mr. John Murray, the Ticket Agent in the Art Building.

Lennoxville.

A prominent young business man of this village was married one evening not long ago in a very quiet manner, in fact, so still was the affair that the notice in the EXAMINER appeared in the obituary column, it evidently being thought the most appropriate place....Our worthy road overseer Mr. James Crawford, is kept busy with his snow plow, and it is pleasing to notice how promptly the plow appears after each snow storm....Mr. Crawford has been doing a good job in blasting away the ledge by the roadside near Capt. Molson's residence, where it is proposed to change the road a little....We regret to hear that Mr. Paddon is seriously ill, but hope he will soon be about again.

(From another correspondent.)

The anniversary supper held in the Methodist Church Monday evening was largely attended and very successful, the ladies netting about $35. An effort was made to wipe off the old outstanding debt on the church and the whole amount was subscribed, some five hundred dollars, which speaks well for the loyalty and liberality of the members of the church and congregation. The organist of the church, Miss Allan, was presented with two pieces of silverware in token of the appreciation of her services in that capacity. A very interesting programme of speeches and singing was given by Revs. Wm. Adams, R. Smith and the pastor.

Kingsbury.

The friends of the Rev. J. R. McLeod gave him a genuine surprise on Monday evening. Not less than fifty put in their appearance and took possession of the manse. A very pleasant evening was spent. Both Mr. and Mrs. McLeod received many valuable and useful presents....We have now plenty of snow, and mill logs, bark and railway ties are on the move.... Arthur Martin, employed in the clapboard mill here, was seriously injured by being struck with a lever while removing logs. Dr. Stewart was in attendance a few minutes after the accident, and hopes he has received no internal injuries....Mr. Michael Delaney takes over the contract for carrying the mail from New Rockland to Melbourne on 1st April next, his tender being, it is said, ten dollars per annum less than the present contractor Mr. John Broderick. We have got a very good mail service, and ten dollars a year between a proved and an untried man is a small sum. We can only hope that the new broom in this case, will be as good as the old one.... Later: Arthur Martin, who got hurt last Monday while rolling logs, died Tuesday night, 29th January.

Coroner Woodward held an inquest on the body and the jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Johnville.

Since my last writing a much esteemed citizen has passed away, Mr. Chas. Smith, of whose serious illness mention was made in our last. His funeral services on Wednesday the 23rd instant were conducted by Rev. A. C. Scarth, M. A. During his lifetime he took an active interest in, and was identified with the public welfare of this place. He leaves a widow to mourn his loss, and two sons and a daughter, all of whom are residents of the neighboring Republic...Mr. Geo. Smith and Mr. M. Hamilton, our S. S. delegates to the late convention, presented a brief report of the proceedings to the school last Sabbath. They expressed much satisfaction and brought out some of the striking points discussed for local benefit. Because of illness Rev. Mr. Hanson was unable to preach anniversary sermons as announced for last Sabbath. Rev. Mr. Robinson preached as usual, and if the sermon was lacking in novelty it was full of the earnestness and ability that is characteristic of our respected pastor....Mrs. J. F. C. Oakes has been suffering from an attack of erysipelas, but is now recovering....Your correspondent desires to express satisfaction with a lately introduced feature of your paper, namely "Chat on Current Events." We wish you had more space to devote to Felix and to literary notices.

Randboro.

Many weeks have passed since you received any report from this place. The reason has been lack of news to write about. The want of snow for lumbering has been sadly felt until now. There are quite a number sick in this vicinity....Mr. Wm. G. Planche has been confined to his house for some time, is now better and able to ride and walk. Mr. S. N. Hurd is also better and goes out for short rides. Mrs. Hurd is also improving from her lameness and can walk across the room although the fractured limb is not strong. Mr. D. Stone has been troubled with a lung difficulty for some time but he is now some better. Mrs. Robert Leggett, sr., of Auckland, died on the 2nd Jan. 1889, aged 77 years and 7 months. She came from England with her former husband, Stephen Cable in the year 1836 and settled in Bury but did not remain there only a few years when they moved to Eaton where they lived until the death of her husband who left six young children. After a time Mrs. Cable married Robert Leggett who survived her only five days, Mr. Leggett dying on the 7th Jan., 1889, aged 85 years, 10 months and seven days. Mr. Leggett with his first wife and children came from England in 1826 and went into Bury, but not finding the prospects to his liking moved to Newport and worked for Mr. M. S. Rand for some years. On spare days he commenced to clear a lot of land in the Township of Auckland to prepare a farm and home for himself and family, which by perseverance and industry he succeeded in accomplishing. He was the only inhabitant in the Township for several years. He leaves a fine farm to his son with whom the deceased couple have lived and been cared for in their declining years of life. Your correspondent also came from England with his parents in the year 1837, and has known the above named persons ever since that date and believes he has given a correct statement concerning them.... There is now a fair prospect of having our winter roads in a better state for travelling, hoping it will enliven business and add to the comfort of all who have so long been waiting for sledding.

Have you ever heard the 'Chilian National Air' sung? Have you heard Chwatal's Eine Heitre Schlittenpartie performed with piano, triangle, cornet, sleigh bells, etc., etc.? If not, then go to the Y. M. C. A. Hall Tuesday eve., Feb. 5. Admission 25c. To begin at 8 o'clock.

Comets.

The date of the lecture to be given by Rev. C. R. Flanders of Coaticook for the Young People's Association of the Methodist Church is changed to Thursday evening the 7th instant.

Those who had the pleasure of listening to Mr. Flanders at the recent Sunday School convention will be glad of another opportunity of hearing him. Subject of lecture, "Comets." Admission 10 cents.

Bury Farmer's Club.

At a meeting of the Bury Farmer's Club held in the Town Hall, Robinson, on the 26th day of January 1889, the President, Mr. Anthony Allison, in the chair, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Officers elected for ensuing year:—Mr. Thomas Olson, President; Mr. F. Goodenough, vice-President; Mr. Anthony Allison, Treasurer; W. W. Webster, Sec. Directors:—Mr. Gardner Batley, Mr. Charles Anderson, Mrs. Wm. Lefebvre, Mr. Robert Clark and Mr. Able Whitehead.

C. O. F.

Court Angus, No. 7, C. O. F., intends, to have a church parade on Sunday next, Feb. 3rd, at 3 p. m., to S. Saviours Church, East Angus. The brethren of sister courts are cordially invited to attend.

Another Lottery.

Mgr. Racine, Bishop of Sherbrooke, in a pastoral letter to the faithful of the diocese, announces the formation of a lottery, to help in enlarging the Seminary building in that town, now much too small for the large number of pupils.—Star.

How I Escaped.

"How I Escaped," a novel edited by Archibald Clavering Gunter, author of "Mr. Barnes of New York," and of "Potter of Texas." The London Times says, "Mr. Gunter's books are more read than perhaps those of any other living writer." J. Theo. Robinson, publisher, Montreal, has issued "How I Escaped" at 25 cents. For sale at all book stores.

Death of Chief Justice Richards.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—Sir Wm. Buell Richards died at his residence here this morning aged seventy-four. He was Ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Diabetes was the cause of death, Sir William retired from the bench several years ago. He had been confined to his bed for several months past. The remains will probably be interred at Brockville.

The People's Jimmy Wins.

The Court of Appeals rendered judgment Wednesday in the case of James McShane, M. P. P., who had appealed from a judgment of the Court of Review, granting the appeal, which is a triumph for Mr. McShane, and enables him to take his seat in the Quebec Legislature as soon as the write is issued and served upon the Speaker of the Assembly.

The Peace Society.

BOSTON, January 28.—The American Peace Society to-day adopted resolutions congratulating this country, Canada and Great Britian on the recent absence of causes of irritation as to the fisheries and increase of friendliness shown in projects for commercial and political union, expressing sympathy with France's efforts to maintain peace, declaring that the Samoan troubles should be settled by negotiation or arbitration, deprecating the further ravage of civil war in Hayti and sharply criticising the recent suggestions of the United States engineers that the country should spend $5,000,000,000 in fortifications and have a standing army of 150,000 and a proportionate navy.

Legislation for the Protestant School Commissioners.

Ex.-Alderman Holland, Treasurer of the Protestant Board of School Commissioners, states that Mr. J. S. Hall, M.P.P., is taking charge of a bill which will in a day or two be presented to the Legislature, asking that the school law be amended like the one in Ontario, thereby providing that the Protestants of this province have the same right as in Ontario, so as to obtain their full share of the taxes paid by the joint stock companies. If the bill is thrown out in Quebec, the Board is determined to carry it to Ottawa, as provided by the British North American Act, and if necessary, even to the foot of the throne itself.—Star.

Death of the Crown Prince of Austria.

VIENNA, January 30.—Archduke Rudolf, the Austrian Crown Prince and heir apparent to the throne, died suddenly to-day. He was born Aug. 21, 1858; married May 10, 1881, to Princess Stephanie, second daughter of King Leopold of Belgium, and leaves one daughter, Princess Elizabeth, born Sept. 2, 1883. Prince Rudolf was a general in the service of Austria-Hungary.

The Crown Prince died at Mierling, near Balden. His death is supposed to have been caused by apoplexy.

Wide-Awake.

One of the most delightful of Susan Coolidge's stories, "Who ate the Queen's Luncheon?" opens the February Wide-Awake, with a beautiful frontispiece by Garrett. Another short story as singularly humorous, a valentine story, is entitled "The Apple of Discord," and will entertain all the school boys and girls; it is by Georgiana Washington. "Princess May-blossom" by Annette Lyster, with its eight pictures, is a dainty fairy story. "Children in Italian Sculpture," by Mabel F. Robinson, is a model art-paper for young people, with interesting pictures. The serial stories are very popular for family reading; Phrossie's "dragons" are irresistible. "The Tupper Children" is a short story of the old war-days, full of dash and fun. "Forty-eight Hours a Day" will interest all astronomically-minded young folk and their elders as well. "Nonsense Animals" is very amusing and affords a hint for home-fun of an evening. The other articles, are "An Old-Fashioned Boat" "The Tooth of Time, etc." In the new department, "Men and Things," are all sorts of good original anecdotes and breezy "short talk." The poems of the number are many and good, the Ramona, Post-Office, Puzzle and C. Y. F. R. U. sections very full and entertaining. Only $2.40 a year. D Lothrop Company, Boston.

On account of their inability to digest ordinary food, Scott's Emulsion can be digested and give strength and flesh when all other food fails. See what Dr. A. H. Peck, Penn. Med. College, Petitcodiac, says: I have used and prescribed Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, and find it an excellent preparation, agreeing well with the stomach, and its continued use adding greatly to the strength and comfort of the patient." Newspaper Folder.

We beg to draw the attention of all publishers to the advertisement of the "Kendall Newspaper Folder" which appears in this issue. We took the machine on trial for a month and were so well pleased with it that we concluded a purchase of it, and also secured the right of selling to Canadian publishers. The Folder costs only about one-third the price of other machines while doing the work equally well. It is built of well seasoned maple, simple in construction and not liable to get out of repair. Any further particulars desired will be gladly supplied by us to intending purchasers.

East Hatley

The Rev. Magee Pratt of Cookshire is to be the lecturer at the social in the Academy Hall, next Tuesday evening, Feb. 5th. Mr. Pratt has acquired considerably notoriety as a lecturer and is highly spoken of at Compton, Robinson and Sherbrooke. His subject will be "Flower Voices."..... The Ladies Guild held a very successful social at the hall last evening. The sugar was excellent, the company large and the entertainment good.... Sleighing is good and teamsters are happy. Mrs. Homer Pool who has been confined to her bed for several weeks is slowly improving.—Jan. 30.

Mr Blaine's Policy.

NOT LIKELY TO SETTLE THE FISHERIES —VIGOROUS ACTION REGARDING SAMOA.

LONDON, January 29.—The Daily News says it does not suppose that Mr. Blaine, if he becomes Scretary of State, will feel himself too closely bound by the comments of the Republican convention of Cleveland's policy to attempt to settle the fisheries question. It prefers to believe that he will be guided by his knowledge of the British people and the consciousness that more is to be gained by setling such ugly questions than by keeping them open.

NEW YORK, January 29.—A Washington despatch says Senators Hale, Evarts and Cameron had a private conference yesterday with Mr. Blaine. It is said the Samoan question formed the subject of discussion, and that Mr. Blaine gave his views very freely as to the action he believed the State Departement should take in the present will consent to discuss in detail the views expressed by Mr. Blaine, it is generally understood he outlined a vigorous policy.

The February St. Nicholas, 1889.—The frontispiece for February is a charming drawing by Mary Hallock Foote, having a quaint little remark upon its margin; Joaquin Miller begins the text of the number with a poem telling how "The Gold that Grew by Shasta Town' was discovered by a little girl. Arlo Bates recounts in verse the glee of Jack Frost over "The Snow Flowers." Then comes Noah Brook's very timely account of "The White Pasha," telling in a plain and interesting way the thrilling narrative of Stanley's past achievements and probable whereabouts. Mrs. Catherwood's serial is continued and introduces in "Petit-Pere" a character new in fiiction. A well-illustrated article upon Japan follows, and is contributed by Arthur L. Shumway, and this, with Mr. Alton's explanation of "The Routine of the Republic," makes up the list of the more instructive articles of the number. Of lighter papers we may note "A Modern Middy." "Lassooing a Sea Lion." "A Rose in a Queer Place." The other verse of the number includes "Ballad a of Runaway Donkey." "The Discontented Snowflake" and "Sombody's Valentine." "The Invitation" and "Sally's Valentine" and other short pieces, funny pictures, and the usual pleasing variety of interesting material offered by the Departments. Altogether the number is exceedingly varied in its scope, pleasing and instructive in a pleasant way, and, as usual, exceedingly rich in illustrations.

Mid-winter (February) Century.—A remarkable feature of the Mid-Winter Century is the opening article on "Gerome," the famous French artist and trainer of arts. Particularly interesting is the frontispiece, which is an engraving of this master's "Napolean before the Sphinx." Supplementary to this article there are published "Open Letters" on Gerome by well known American artists. Other specially artistic features of this number are Mr. Cole's engravings, from the originals of Simone Memmi, with accompanying articles by Mr. Stillman and Mr. Cole, in the series of "Old Italian Masters;" also the fourth of Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote's Pictures of the Far West, "The Orchard Wind-Break." Two leading serial features of the number are sustained in "Life of Lincoln" and a Siberian chapter "Exiles at Irkutsk." War subjects are continued in "Memoranda of the Civil War," the subjects being "The Battle of Franklin" and the "Canal at Island No. 10." "Slow Burning Construction," by Mr. Edward Atkinson, of Boston, is article of practical directions as to the construction of buildings, partly fire-proof, on the cheapest plan. Mr. Atkinson says that "some of the worst examples of combustible architecture are to be found among our prisons, hospitals, asylums and almshouses; next, among college buildings, libraries and school-houses: to these may be added churches, hotels and theatres." "Revival of Hand Spinning and Weaving in Westmoreland" is a charmingly written account of a very curious industrial experiment which has recently been successful in England. The article is illustrated by pictures of the neighborhood scenery, and of men and women at work after the old fashion. In an illustrated article on "The Portraits of Mary, Queen of Scots," Mr. Laurence Hutton has told briefly what is now known on this interesting subject. He says, "That Mary wore false hair, and of many different colors, there is every reason to believe." In Charles de Kay's series there is an illustrated article on "The Fairies and Druids of Ireland." Mr. Cable concludes the "Strange True Story" of "Francoise in Louisiana"; and Mrs. Catherwood concludes her "Romance of Dollard." A Southern story, "Two Negatives," and a pathetic Irish story, "Under the Redwood Tree." The "Topics of the Time" are "Imperfections of American Law Procedure," "Lynch Law as an Argument for Law Reform," "A Centennial Historical Exhibition," and "French Masters and American Art Students." In "Bric-a-Brac" Mr. Edwards, the author of "The Two Runaways," gives a song of the negroes entitled, "Coming from the Fields." There are "Two Valentines" in "Bric-a-Brac." In the next number of The Century will be begun a brief serial story by Mary Hallock Foote, author of "The Led Horse Claim," etc., entitled "The Last Assembly Ball: a Pseudo-Romance of the Far West.

A Great Sufferer.

That person who is afflicted with rheumatism is a great sufferer and greatly to be pitied if they cannot procure Hagyard's Yellow Oil. This remedy is a certain cure, not only for rheumatism but for all external aches and internal pains. 2w25

At the meeting of the Simcoe County Council, at Barrie, a memorial to the Dominion Government to submit prohibition to a "vote of the people on its own merits, clear of any other issue," was agreed upon. Memorials were also adopted asking the Legislatare to allow County Councils the appointment of all sheriffs, gaolers and other officers under the pay of the people.

Miraculous.

"My Miraculous Cure was that I had suffered from kidney disease for about two years, was off work all that time. A friend told me of B.B.B., I tried it, and am happy to say that I was cured by two bottles." Wm. Tier St. Marys, Ont. 2w25

Madam Albani, the renowned Canadian prima donna, scored a grand triumph at her two concerts in Montreal during the past week. Queen's Hall was densely packed at large prices ($4 per ticket) and the gifted lady received a perfect furore of applause, responding graciously to the numerous encores demanded. Her signing is described as grand. She is to give another concert there before leaving for Europe.

A Professional Opinion.

Rev. F. Gunner, M.D., of Listowel, Ont., says regarding B.B.B., "I have used your excellent Burdock Compound in practice and in my family since 1884, and hold it No. 1 on my list of sanative remedies. Your three busy B's never sting, weaken or worry. 2w25

We hear there is great excitement in Montreal over the publication of the Carnival number of the Montreal Star one firm alone offering to buy and pay cash for one hundred thousand copies. The Carnival Star this year is said to be of surpassing grandeur. The public were prepared for something good, but did not dream of such a galaxy of beautiful and thrilling things. The Star number is retailed at thirty-five cents. If people don't know how it can be produced for the money they must find out for themselves. We can't solve it.

A Single Trial

Is all that is needed to prove that Polson's Nerviline is the most rapid and certain remedy in the world for pain. It only costs 10 cents for a trial bottle. A single trial bottle will prove Nerviline to be equally efficacious as an external or internal remedy, and for pain of every description it has no equal. Try 10 cent sample bottle. Sold by druggists. Large bottles 25 cents. Avoid substitutes.

The Witness correspondent at Quebec says there is no truth in the report that news had been received that the Pope has decided that half of the $400,000 voted as indemnity for the Jesuits' estates shall go to Laval University and be paid over immediately by the Provincial Treasurer; that the Jesuits are to be allowed to retain their colleges independently of Laval, and that the latter will go on immediately with the construction of its Montreal buildings. Both the Premier and Provincial Treasurer were interviewed and they declare that no news whatever has been received by them in the matter, and as far as they know it still remains in statu quo.

This was the wail of a man who had endured the tortures of "Liver complaint" and dyspepsia for years; and he might have endured them for life, had he not heard that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery would make him a well man. He gave it a trial and was cured. Once he was hollow-eyed, emaciated, and slowly tottering towards the tomb; but now he is vigorous, robust and healthy. There is nothing that can compare with the "Discovery" as a curative agent for sour stomach, constipation, impure blood and biliousness.

The worst cases of chronic Nasal Catarrh positively and permanently cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

Sir John Macdonald stated to a Star reporter this afternoon that as the Fishery Treaty had been rejected by the United States authorities, that all that now remained to be done would be to enforce the treaty of 1818 which he expected would be done at the next session. The session, he said, would not be long, as no measure of great importance would be laid before the House. He expected that the whole session would be a very quiet one, unless something unforseen turned up. He intends to invite Mme. Albani to stay with him during her stay in Ottawa. This morning he drove round with Col. Henshaw, and was surprised and pleased to see the immense strides Montreal had made since last he was here. He also visited Father Dowd and said he had a talk with him about old times.—Star.

COMMUNICATIONS.

All honor to Mr. Robertson and all honor to all legislators everywhere who have the courage to lead not follow party on this question.

NOT A PIMPLE ON HIM NOW

Bad with Eczema. Hair all gone. Scalp covered with eruptions. Thought his hair would never grow. Cured by Cuticura Remedies. Hair splendid and not a pimple on him.

I cannot say enough in praise of the CUTICURA REMEDIES. My boy, when one year of age, was so bad with eczema that he lost all of his hair. His scalp was covered with eruptions, which the doctors said was scald head, and that his hair would never grow again. Despairing of a cure from physicians, I begun the use of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and, I am happy to say, with the most perfect success. His hair is now splendid, and there is not a pimple on him. I recommend the CUTICURA REMEDIES to mothers as the most speedy, economical, and sure cure for all skin diseases of infants and children, and feel that every mother who has an afflicted child will thank me for so doing.

A Fever Sore Eight Years Cured.

I must extend to you the thanks of one of my customers, who has been cured, by using the CUTICURA REMEDIES, of an old sore, caused by a long spell of sickness or fever eight years ago. He was so bad he was fearful he would have to have his leg amputated, but is happy to say he is now entirely well,—sound as a dollar. He requests me to use his name, which is H. H. CASON, merchant of this place.

Severe Scalp Disease Cured.

There has been no return of the disease, and CUTICURA ranks No. 1 in our estimation for diseases of the skin. REV. J. PRESSLEY BARRETT, D. D., Raleigh, N. C.

Constipation

Demands prompt treatment. The results of neglect may be serious. Avoid all harsh and drastic purgatives, the tendency of which is to weaken the bowels. The best remedy is Ayer's Pills. Being purely vegetable, their action is prompt and their effect always beneficial. They are an admirable Liver and After-dinner pill, and everywhere endorsed by the profession.

"Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."—Dr. I. E. Fowler, Bridgeport, Conn.

"I can recommend Ayer's Pills above all others, having long proved their value as a cathartic for myself and family."—J. T. Hess, Leithsville, Pa.

"For several years Ayer's Pills have been used in my family. We find them an for constipation and indigestion, and are never without them in the house."—Moses Grenier, Lowell, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Pills, for liver troubles and indigestion, during many years, and have always found them prompt and efficient in their action."—L. N. Smith, Utica, N. Y.

"I suffered from constipation which assumed such an obstinate form that I feared it would cause a stoppage of the bowels. Two boxes of Ayer's Pills effected a complete cure."—D. Burke, Saco, Me.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years and consider them an invaluable family medicine. I know of no better remedy for liver troubles, and have always found them a prompt cure for dyspepsia."—James Quinn, 90 Middle st., Hartford, Conn.

"Having been troubled with costiveness, which seems inevitable with persons of sedentary habits, I have tried Ayer's Pills, hoping for relief. I am glad to say that they have served me better than any other medicine. I arrive at this conclusion only after a faithful trial of their merits."—Samuel T. Jones, Oak st., Boston, Mass.

Poetry.

The Tired Foot.

The potter stood at his daily work,
One patient foot on the ground;
The other, with never-slacking speed,
Turning his swift wheel round.
Silent we stood beside him there,
Watching the restless knee,
Till my friend said low, in pitying voice,
How tired his foot must be.

The potter never paused in his work,
Shaping the wondrous thing;
'Twas only a common flower pot,
But perfect in fashioning,
Slowly he raised his patient eyes,
With homely truth inspired;
"No, ma'am; it isn't the foot that kicks—
The one that stands gets tired!"

A Young Girl's Wooing

BY E. P. ROE.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THE ENEMIES' PLANS.

As has been seen, Wildmere had too much conscience to try to sell his daughter outright, but since she was in a mood for bargain he had insured the possibility of one remarkably good in his estimation, and was now on his way with very definite offers and statements indeed.

In the late afternoon Madge was speaking about a book to an acquaintance who said, "Go up to my room and get it."

Madge was not sure whether she cared to read the book or not, and sat down to examine it. Suddenly she heard distinctly the words, "I don't believe Henry Muir is in danger of failure. Graydon scouted the idea. You and Arnault are seeking to mislead me."

Madge then rembered that the next room was occupied by Miss Wildmere, and her first impulse was to make a noise, that the proximity of some one might be known, but like a flash came the thought, "Chance may have put me in the way of getting information of vital importance to Henry;" and the next sentence spoken assured her that this was true, for she heard a voice which she recognized as Mr. Wildmere's say:

In all human probability Muir will be compelled to suspend to-morrow. Mr. Arnault has placed in his hands a call loan. You know what that is. Arnault is so alarmed about Muir's condition that he will demand the money in the morning, and I am perfectly satisfied that Muir can't raise it. You know enough about business to be aware of what will happen if he cannot. Such is the market now that if Muir goes down he will be cleaned out utterly, and Graydon will have to begin at the bottom like any other young man without resources. Of course, Arnault cannot afford to loss the money, and must act like any other business man

"But he did not send me here to tell you this. As his broker I know about it, and tell you of my own accord. This is what he did authorize me to say to you. Had not business interests, which have already suffered from his devotion to you, prevented, he would be here now to make the offer in person. He says that he will settle upon you one hundred thousand dollars in your own right the day you marry him, and also give you an elegant home in the city. Now what is your answer?"

"When Henry Muir fails I'll believe all this," was the sullen reply.

"Be careful Stella. Devoted as Arnault is, he is not a man to be trifled with. He has made you a munificent offer, but if you show this kind of spirit he is just the one to withdraw at once and forever. If you love Graydon Muir well enough to share his poverty, I have not another word to say, although I shall be homeless myself in consequence."

"Nonsense, papa! You have been on the eve of ruin more times than I can remember. Graydon assured me that he was abundantly able to take care of me, and that his brother was in no danger. I can have all the elegance I want and still follow my own inclination. If Henry Muir fails, of course that ends the matter; and if he is to fail to-morrow it will be time enough to give Mr. Arnault my answer to-morrow night, as he asked that I would. If I give him a favorable one I prefer to do it in person, for I don't wish to appear mercenary. You, I hope, have the sense to keep this phase out of view."

"Oh, certainly. Such high-minded people as we are should not be misjudged," was the bitter reply.

"One has to take the world as it is, and one soon learns that all are looking after their own interests," was the cynical reply.

"A beautiful sentiment for one so young! Well, I must return to the city to-night, and I cannot take your acceptance of Mr. Arnault's offer?"

"No. I will give my answer in person to-morrow night. I can either accede in a way that will please him, or in a manner that will keep his friendship. I suppose you believe what you say about Mr. Muir, but I am sure you are mistaken, and I have set my heart on marrying Graydon."

"Your heart?" satirically.

She made no answer.

"You are taking no slight risk," he resumed, after a moment.

"Either Arnault is misleading you, or Graydon is deceiving me, and I would believe him in preference to Arnault any day. I won't be duped."

"But I tell you, Stella, that under the circumstances Graydon's ignorance is not at all strange. He has been absent; he is not in the firm; and what is swamping Muir is an investment outside of his regular business."

"You yourself said within a month that if Henry Muir went through this business crisis he would represent one of the strongest and wealthiest houses in the country. If he is in the danger you assert, the fact will soon be manifested. Mr. Arnault has requested an answer to-morrow night. I have not promised to give it; I have only promised him not to accept Graydon in the mean time."

"The fact that Mr. Arnault is helping me so greatly counts for nothing, I suppose."

"Oh, yes; I appreciate it very much, but not enough to marry him unless I must. I am literally following your advice—to choose between these two men. I shall convey to Mr. Arnault the impression that I am deeply moved by the generosity of his offer. I am. Girls don't get such offers every day. You can show him that the very fact of my hesitation proves that I am not mercenary; or I can, when I see him. At the same time I am not at all satisfied that Graydon Muir's offer is not a better one, and it is certainly more to my mind—if you don't like the word heart. This fact, however, may as well not be mentioned."

After some moments' hesitation he said, slowly: "Very well, then. You are my daughter, although a strange one, and I shall do as well for you as I can."

"Yes please. I parted with sentiment long ago, but I can do well by those who do well by me. I shall soon be off your hands, and then you won't have me to worry about."

He made no response, and Madge heard his step pass into his wife's room. A moment later Miss Wildmere also departed, and her voice was soon heard on the piazza. The conversation had been carried on in a comparatively low tone, and some words had been lost, but those heard made the sense given above. Circumstances had favored Madge. The open window at which she was sitting was near the next window in Miss Wildmere's room, and within two or three feet there was the customary thin-panelled door which enables the proprietor to throw rooms together, as required, for the accommodation of families. Therefore, without moving or volition on her part information vital to her relatives had been brought to her knowledge. She was perfectly overwhelmed at first and sat as if stunned, her cheeks scarlet with shame for the act of listening, even while she felt that for the sake of the innocent and unsuspecting, to whom she owed loyalty and love, it was right. Soon, however, came the impulse to seek the refuge of her own room and think of what must be done. She stepped lightly to the outer door; there was no sound in the corridor, and with all the composure she could assume she passed quietly out and gained her own apartment unobserved.

CHAPTER XXX.

THE STRONG MAN UNMANNED.

Madge locked her doors, bathed her hot face, then paced her room in great agitation, feeling that not only her own happiness was in peril, but Graydon's also. Her mental distress was greatly enhanced by a feeling that in order to save her relatives, she herself had been guilty of what to her sensitive nature appeared almost like a crime. "Was it right?" she asked herself again and again, and at last reached the conclusion that the fealty she owed to her relatives and to the man she loved justified her course—that she should shield them even at such cost to herself. "It was not curiosity that kept me passive," she thought, "but the hope, the chance to save Henry from financial ruin and Graydon from far worse disaster." It would, indeed be "horrible" for any true man to marry such a girl; and to permit the man she loved to make such a fatal blunder was simply monstrous. Yet how could she prevent it without doing violence to every maidenly principle of her nature?

Should she tell her sister? This impulse passed almost instantly. Mary had not the tact, nerve, or reticence to meet such an emergency. It seemed, however, that if something was not done almost immediately this callous, selfish girl would cause lifelong wretchedness to Graydon, as certainly as to Madge herself. Such a nature could not long maintain its disguise, and probably would not be at pains to do after marriage. The self-sacrifice that she had led Graydon to believe in was all deceit. It was self with her first and last; it would be self always. Madge knew Graydon well enough to be sure that to him, when illusions were dissipated, the marriage vow would become a chain growing heavier with time.

This absolutely certain phase of the danger was so terrible, that at first it almost completely dominated her thoughts. "Oh," she moaned, "I could see him marry a woman who would make him happy, and survive, but this would be worse than death!"

As she became more calm and could think connectedly, her mind reverted to what had been said about Henry's financial peril; and while she was inclined to take the same view as Miss Wildmere, she soon began to see that her brother-in-law should be informed of all references to him. Then the impression grew upon her that it would be wisest to tell him all, and let him save his brother, if possible, from a fate infinitely worse than lifelong poverty. Would this involve the disclosure to Mr. Muir of her secret? Sometimes she thought that he half suspected her already, and she feared that she could scarcely speak of a subject that touched her heart's interests so closely without revealing to those keen gray eyes more than she would have them see. But the risk must be taken to save Graydon.

"Can it be?" she said, after musing a while, "that Henry is in any such danger as that man asserted, or was it a trumped up scheme to influence the girl? Still, he did say that if she would choose Graydon and poverty he would not interpose. Poverty! I would welcome bondage and chains with Graydon. I would almost welcome Henry's failure, that I might prove to them my devotion. Every penny of my fortune should be theirs. Henry has looked very anxious and troubled sometimes when thinking himself unobserved. He keeps everything to himself so—"

Suddenly she sprung up with a flash of joy in her face, and whispered to herself, excitedly: "Suppose there is truth in what was said by those speculators. I have a fortune, and it's my own. Henry said it was so left to me that I could control it after I was eighteen. I can lend Henry the money to pay Arnault. I will give him every penny I possess to carry him safely through. Oh, I am so glad he is coming to-night!"

"Come down to supper," called Mrs. Muir.

"Why, Madge," exclaimed the lady, as they sat down under the light of the chandelier, "how flushed you are! And your eyes fairly beam with excitement. I half believe you are feverish."

"Nonsense! No doses for me now! milk and beefsteak are my remedies. I've been dwelling on some scenes partly imaginary, and you know how wrought up I get."

"Oh, yes, now I remember, you asked Miss Thompson for a book, and went for it to her room. Of course that was the last seen of you. I never could get so carried away by a story."

"I haven't your even disposition, Mary."

"Miss Wildmere looks brilliant tonight, also. And if there isn't her father? This is the first time I've seen him up during the week. Well, I'm glad to see that his daughter can wake up a little for his sake, as well as for some other man."

Madge looked at her with mingled curiosity and repugnance. "Horrid little monster!" she thought. "Now she is performing her filial act. As her father said 'such high-toned people should not be misjudged.'"

"I think you dislike her worse than Henry does," said Mrs. Muir with a low laugh. "You look at her as if she were a snake."

"She is not a girl after my heart," Madge replied, carelessly; then added, under her breath, "She's a vampire, but she shan't drain Graydon's lifeblood."

Miss Wildmere was certainly in a genial mood. The munificent offer received from Mr. Arnault had enhanced her self-appreciation, and she felt that she had met it with rare nerve and sagacity. She had not shown herself dazzled like a village girl, and eager to grasp the prize. Moreover, she had thought, with proud complacency: "The man who can offer so much is not going to give me up, even should I keep him waiting months longer. I still believe that Graydon can give me all I want at present, and at the same time a position in society which Arnault could never attain, though worth millions. Arnault is on the top of the wave now, but he is a speculator, like papa, and I'm sick of these Wall-Street ups and downs. I believe in Henry Muir's conservatism. Because he is keeping quiet now they think he is going to fail. He is just the kind of a man to be five times as rich as people think. Graydon will succeed to his business and business methods, and will not only make an immense fortune, but keep it. Papa has given me the test of all these gloomy warnings. If Henry Muir does not fail to-morrow, I won't believe a word of all that's been said. If he does, I do the next best thing, and take Arnault. No tenement house for me, thank you. I've not been in society so long as not to make the most of my chances;" and under the inspiration of thoughts like these Miss Wildmere condescended to be affable to her parents, and to smile upon the world in general.

Madge Alden was an exception, however, and for her she had only a frown as she looked across the room at the young girl and saw the admiration and friendly regard that were so freely bestowed upon her. As was inevitable, the selfish spirit of one girl had repelled and the kindly nature of the other had attracted good-will. Human instinct is quick to recognize the tax-gatherers of society—the people who are exacting, yet give little except slights, wounds, and criticism.

"Oh," thought Miss Wildmere, "if I can only marry Graydon and snub that girl unmercifully I shall be perfectly happy!"

The late train would not arrive before nine o'clock, and Madge determined to go down in the stage to meet Mr. Muir. In the mean time her quick mind was coping with the emergency. She had often heard it said that in times of financial uncertainty an air of the utmost confidence should be maintained. Therefore she drew her sister into the parlor, and managed to place her in a lively and congenial group of ladies. Mrs. Muir herself was happy in the thought of soon seeing her husband, and appeared cheerfulness embodied.

Love, Courtship and Marriage.

The following is a lecture delivered recently before the Farmers Club, Hatley, by Mr. Thos. Ward of Compton, and published by request—Ed. Ex.]

"Our subject is as old as the human race, ever since the time when Adam first saw the fair creature that the Almighty made from a rib taken from his side during sleep, and fell in love with her, his posterity has been falling in love, making matches and marrying, but the mischief is they fall in love with very little reason, and then with as little reason fall out again, causing bitter heartaches and often life-long disappointments. But old as our subject is it is ever new. To the rising generation, its charms are unequalled, its pleasures untasted, its alluring paths untrod, hence they look to it as the source of the greatest earthly happiness which I believe not to be inconsistent with the designs of the Great and Good who said it was not good for man to be alone. But it is not to the young alone that this subject is interesting, when men of fifty, sixty, and even seventy, winters are so enthusiastic on the subject, that they outstrip the young in their eagerness for the smiles of the opposite sex.

There has been more than one Adam since the world was created who has astonished his neighbors, and even knights have been made bright by the beauties of love. And now we will beat no further around the bush but at once address ourselves to the subject in hand. We have our first, second and thirdly in the orthodox fashion with very little trouble. First Love, second Courtship, third Marriage. First then we have to speak of love, and when we speak of love we mean something very different from mere animal instinct, from mere brute passion, we mean something pure, noble, lofty divine, not something which seeks merely the gratification of the lower passions of our nature, but something which seeks an intelligent partner, a life-long helpmate, a being to share our joys, and for whose good we are prepared to risk even life itself. And here let me say away with all such notions, begotten of the romance and novel that love is something beyond the control of the judgment, something that the will has nothing to do with. I say that we can love that which is lovely, and we can hate that which is hateful. And if we have been at all trained to control ourselves, we can do so in the matter of love as well as anything else. Let our children be trained from childhood to use their judgment, their intelligence, and when they come to the important matter of love and courtship they will not be carried away with blind infatuation. And now allow me to address a few words to parents, for in my judgment they have a great deal to do with the manner in which their sons and daughters go about this important business. We find two very opposite errors are committed by parents, one (and I hope the ladies will pardon me when I say this error is chiefly confined to mothers,) that is as soon as these said mothers, have any marriageable sons or daughters, all their energies are bent, and all their wits are set to work, to match them. And so ma calls Lucinda to her side one day and asks her to be seated, then she begins: Now my dear Lucinda you know how deeply I am interested in your future welfare; pa and I have spent a deal of money on your education; you have been taught to play the piano, to paint, and I am sure no girl around here can do fancy work like you. Why, Mrs. Fingerington was here yesterday and she said her Meranda could not do fancy work one half so well, but their Meranda's education hasn't cost half so much as yours. And now, my dear Lucinda, listen to me. I have invited Mr. and Mrs. Stacy to supper and of course I invited George and I want you to put your blue silk dress on and look your best, for George is a nice young man, and he will have ten thousand from his aunt, Mrs. Winkle, when he comes of age, and that is enough to make the girls wild to get him. I call that abominable nonsense. A union for life is too serious and too sacred to be entered upon with such notions. Again, on the other hand we have a class of parents who go to the opposite extreme, they frown when ever such a subject is named in their presence; they will have no young men paying addresses to their daughters, and do their best to keep their sons at home, never thinking they are fighting against nature and the Almighty Creator who himself instituted marriage in the case of our first parents.

The results are there are sly meetings a short distance from home; young men of no character allure their daughters from the house; what the father and mother ought to have been well acquainted with, and what the sons and daughters ought to have the greatest encouragement to confide to father and mother is carried on deceptively by artful device, and often ends with the ruin of the fair daughter and the broken hearts of the foolish parents. Let father and mother talk and act sensibly on this subject, as they would on any other, give their son's and daughter's advice, just as they would on any other subject, lead them to regard your father and mother as a friend they have no need to keep any secret from; tell your daughter to bring Benjamin for you to look at, and your son to bring Martha to take tea with you. Allow me to say and say emphatically, however unsuited they are to each other, if the parents use violent opposition, it will greatly tend to bind them together, and accomplish what you are so anxious to avoid. Give them your best judgment on the matter, let them know that the important yes or no rests with themselves, and then you have adopted the most likely course to bring happiness to them and comfort to yourselves. And now for a few words to the lovers themselves; and speaking first to the young men let me say, do not attach too much importance to a pretty face. I think most of the good wives and good mothers are to be found among those with medium features; a pretty face is nice to look at but when a hungry man comes home to dinner, he wants something more than a pretty face; he looks from the face to the table, and if there is not a fairly cooked dinner, he forgets the pretty face, loses his temper and some of his admiration for beauty. What a man needs more than a pretty face in his wife is a good temper, a warm heart and willing hands; with these even with an ordinary face a man seldom tires of his wife.

And now for a few words to the dear, dear girls, just blooming into womanhood, and I suppose we must sympathize with them, for they are denied one privilege which the opposite sex enjoy; they may see ever so desirable a young man, but the custom of civilization forbids them the privilege of proposing. But as a set off against that they have the privilege that custom does give them, they are not slow to avail themselves of, that is of trying to make themselves attractive, and I see no sin in it, when nature and reason are listened to. The good Creator has given to woman a good deal of natural attractions, and I am not one who would have her make herself hideous; but when a young woman thinks to attract a husband by tight lacing until her waist measures fifteen (15) or (16) sixteen inches, and squeezes ordinary sized feet into number two (2) boots, and has something very peculiar which I must not name, about five or six inches behind her, I for one find it hard to think that any of the above supposed improvements increase their attractions. Suppose we try and improve the flowers that grow with a little paint, or suppose when we take a good horse to the agricultural show we attach a hump to his back like a camel, do you think the judge would award us the prize? no, sir, and sensible young men don't look out for tight-lacing. Young woman, a sensible man wants a wife, not a doll. Such a one may be ornamental, but not likely to be very useful. My advice to young women is this, don't be too anxious to attract the attention of young men. Make up your mind to be good obedient daughters and useful citizens; follow some occupation that makes you independent of any man, and I can assure you there are hundreds of young men looking out for just such girls. And now, Mr Editor, I think it is about time I turned to my secondly, which of course is "Courtship." I will now suppose that William has seen a suitable girl, he has had his eye on her for some time, and has come to the conclusion she would make him a suitable wife; he has also made himself somewhat acquainted with the family, for, allow me to say, however suitable a girl may be, if she belongs to a family that you would not like to acknowledge as father and mother, brother and sister, your prospect of happiness would be such unless you both made up your minds to migrate to a considerable distance. And now the very serious and difficult question arises, how shall I make known to her my mind, how shall I find out if my advances are accepted, (for in vulgar phraseology, how shall I pop the question?) I don't here mean the question of marriage. I see no difficulty in that question with a girl who has regarded me as her intended husband through a period of courtship, the only difficulty on the marriage question in my judgment is when I have to ask the parents, will you give me your daughter Jane, but with bashful young men, Mr. Editor, like yourself and me, it is a real difficult question to put to a well behaved girl will you accept of my attentions as, your lover; however let me advise you not to be such a fool as to write to the Family Herald or any other paper asking what to say, or how and where to say it. I would sooner ask my mother; one very good way is to write her a nice little note and first use your own words in the best way you know how, but a better way is to go to her and ask her personally if you are on speaking terms, but if not and if you have a sister and have always behaved properly to that sister, get her to help you, you will generally find a good help in a good kind sister, and if no sister your brother will help you; women are seldom at a loss for ways and means under such circumstances; probably they will arrange a little quiet party and the thing will be as easy as twice two is four and a great deal pleasanter, and to the girls let me say, don't be in a hurry to say yes as though you thought it the only chance in your life; you had far better have no husband than a worthless one, and I am sorry to say such are too plentiful if he indulges in the intoxicating cup, if he is always changing his employment, if he has no steady employment and poor prospect of maintaining himself and you. Give him a positive no; if a stranger, take a long time to consider and enquire; and I say emphatically be on your guard with all strangers. But if he be one you know well and has every good quality, even then I say, consult your mother before you say yes; and here let me quote from the old Book the Bible, "Be not unequally yoked together, believers with unbelievers, Godly with ungodly." Many young women have helped to cure their young men of bad habits and win them over to Christ after marriage but it is very risky and rarely succeeds, and is contrary to the teaching of God's word. If you are a christian girl have a christian young man to start with. The question is sometimes asked how long will courtship last? My advice is let it last until you know each pretty well, and until your circumstances are such that you have a fair prospect of living in moderate comfort. I will now conclude my secondly, with a few hints in the form of advice to those engaged in the pleasant occupation of courtship. And first of all let me say to you young men, don't keep the poor dear girls out of their warm bed until the small hours of the morning, if you sincerely love a girl unless you are very thoughtless, you will not allow yourself to injure her health and that of her future husband, by robbing her and yourself of nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep; few things will make a woman prematurely old sooner than loss of sleep. Again, don't spend your money in foolish presents for your girl which ought to go towards purchasing necessaries and comforts which would make her proud of her home and her husband after marriage. And lastly, don't incur the displeasure of the Almighty by spending the Lord's day in search of worldly amusements, but "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it Holy." Have a place for yourself and your intended in the House of God. And now, Mr. Editor, I must proceed to my lastly, which must of necessity be brief, which lastly, is Marriage. Opposite opinions are held about this important state. Many expecting that all their pleasures end when married, and not without good reason too in many instances, when young people have spent every cent they have earned in search of pleasure, right up to marriage, and then perhaps every eighteen months or so there is another little mouth to fill and a little naked fellow to clothe, that has come into the world without a shirt to his back or a cent in his pocket and they continue to come until when someone asks the father how many he has of a family, he has to stop a moment and count. I can assure you it does not need a mathematician to understand that there are a few difficulties to overcome, unless the income has increased with the family. Others go to the opposite extreme and expect nothing but pleasure, as is said of a servant girl who had married. There, the worst is over now? We may expect both pleasure and pain, care and comfort, joy and sorrow.

Married life is to a great extent what we make it. If all kind words and kind actions cease at marriage, happiness will take wings and be off pretty quick, but if the honey moon last until death, as I believe it ought to do, there will be a good deal of comfort. I would strongly urge this; don't expect too much of each other, have some room in the house for the two Scripture Bears, first bear ye one another in love—start your new house with a family—altar, have the Bible read and prayer offered daily, if you have never begun to pray before certainly it is time to begin now, when starting a home of your own. "House Warning" I fancy I hear somebody, say, I wonder which he would say is to carry the purse; well I give you my opinion on that subject. If a farmer have one purse and both have access to it and both keep some account of what goes in and out of it, if a merchant keep two, one for business and one for the house, kept by the wife, but if a man only have one purse and the wife to control it; now comes a much debated question namely who is to rule, or in vulgar phraseology, who is wear the breeches well now suppose by way of getting out of the trouble we turn the question and ask who is to wear the petticoats. I think the women will claim them, and surely they wont want to wear both. I think with a few exceptions the husband should rule, but that rule should be so gentle, so opposed to tyranny, that wife will find more pleasure in submitting than she would in ruling, but allow we to say that a sensible woman while really submitting to her husband, can so influence him, that in most things she will get more of her own way by far than if she opposed him. One writer has said on this subject, till a man has experienced the affection of an amiable intelligent unsophisticated woman, he knows not half the charm of life, nor till he has enjoyed the friendship of such a one does he truly know what friendship is. For men friendship for one another are always more or less shaped by a business feeling whereas women's for men are a generosity itself. Happy the man who has a woman for his friend, thrice happy he who has her for his wife; to be her husband's friend is woman's triumph, for the glory of his life lies not in her admiration of her lover, but in the solid confidence of her husband in his reliance upon her intelligence and truth, in his esteem for her piety and virtue. And now dear reader's as I have made this long enough I will conclude with a little poetry:—

They say that love's a cruel jest,
They tell of woman's wiles,
That poison dips in pouting lips;
And death in dimpled smiles.

It may be so, I cannot know,
Yet sure of this I am,
One heart is found above the grand,
Whose love is not a sham.

They say that life's a bitter curse,
That hearts are made to ache,
That jest and song are gravely wrong,
And health a vast mistake.

It may be so, I cannot know,
But let them talk their fill,
I like my life, I love my wife,
And mean to do so still.

Heaven bless the wives, they fill our lives
With little bees an' honey,
They soothe life's shocks,
They mend our socks,
But don't they spend the money.
