Nehru is defeated; cabinet reshuffle, new look foreseen

No support

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal industrialist Paul Bienvu has hinted at general lack of support as the reason for his resignation as commissioner-general and president of the 1967 Montreal world's fair.

Seat belts

DETROIT (AP) — The auto industry made a major concession to the average motorist Thursday but the car owner will pay the bill.

General Motors, followed in quick succession by Chrysler, Ford and American Motors announced, effective Jan. 1, 1964, that all their new cars will be equipped with seat belts. Studebaker started the trend with a similar announcement last March 1.

All quiet

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam's capital was alive with rumors of general strikes, Buddhist suicides and street fights today, but conditions appeared quiet with the army in complete control.

Armored cars and tracked vehicles flanked the highway as U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, arriving to take up his post, was driven into the city Thursday night.

Huge backlog

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament resumes in five weeks with a huge backlog of business on hand that is sure to run this 1963 session into December.

Already some members of Parliament are trickling into the capital to catch up on office work and confer with government departments about constituency matters before the rush of work begins with the Sept. 30 reopening of the House.

UN argument

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Israel and Syria square off in the UN Security Council today, each accusing the other of aggression.

The special council session had been set for Monday but was advanced at the insistence of Israeli Ambassador Michael Comay. He claimed Syrian guns shelled two Israeli settlements near the Syrian border Wednesday night.

King in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — King Peter, exiled monarch of Yugoslavia, will arrive here Friday at the end of an official tour of visits to Yugoslav people in North America.

Great UK Train Robbery

Police net closes tighter

LONDON (Reuters) — Police carried out widespread raids in London and the British counties early today as the net closed tighter on suspects in the great train robbery.

Charles Frederick Wilson, 31, a "turf accountant" at one of Britain's legalized betting shops, was due to appear in court at Linslade, near the site of the robbery, in connection with the theft.

Wilson, a slim six-footer with a Cockney accent, was arrested Thursday night and charged with robbing Frank Dewhurst — the chief postman aboard the plundered mail train.

More than £2,600,000 ($7,800,000) in British currency — mostly worn banknotes — was taken from the Glasgow-London mail train. About 1-10th of the money has been recovered.

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — A new look was in store for the Indian cabinet today following Prime Minister Nehru's conclusive defeat of a parliamentary non-confidence motion against his government Thursday.

A major cabinet reshuffle was expected to end a two-week state of "suspended resignation" among top ranking ministers of Nehru's ruling Congress party.

It was decided earlier this month that some senior ministers should quit their posts to take up party work. All the central cabinet ministers and states' chief ministers, as well as some other state ministers, offered their resignations.

The party entrusted Nehru with deciding which members of his cabinet and which chief ministers should be transferred to party work and which should remain in office.

STRENGTH UP

Observers believed the 348-61 defeat of the non-confidence motion, the first in the history of Nehru's government, would enable the prime minister to go about the party reorganization from a position of increased strength.

The victory followed four days of bitter debate and attacks by opposition members against the Congress party and Nehru personally.

Nehru's chief critic, J. B. Kripalani, former Congress party president and now an independent, who presented the censure motion, said Nehru "treats the country with contempt."

Kripalani appealed for all party lines to be swept away in the vote in which he was supported by all non-Communist opposition members.

REDS 'GLOATING'

In a slashing counter-attack, Nehru told Parliament Communist China was "gloating" over the non-confidence motion.

He defended the country's economic progress, but said he agreed the government had failed to move fast enough on the road to socialism.

However, he added, Chinese progress in this direction was made at a cost in human liberty which he did not want.

He said Indian foreign policy had succeeded in putting the nation in "a far more advantageous position than China."

Rescue drill rig breaks down

HAZLETON Pa. (AP) — Unfaltering rescue workers were dealt another setback today when a giant drilling rig suffered two mechanical breakdowns as workers moved on three fronts in efforts to reach three miners trapped 331 feet underground for 10 days.

The second breakdown halted the drilling of a new 12-inch escape hole shortly before dawn at a depth of 220 feet. A hoist cable that lowers and raises the drill mechanism on the 10-storey, high 65-ton rig jumped off a pulley.

There was no immediate indication how long it would take to repair it.

FLQ sets fire at armory

MONTREAL (CP) — A side door of the big Craig Street armories in downtown Montreal was set on fire early today and police were told it was the work of Le Front de Liberation Quebecois.

Damage was light. Police at No. 1 station, which covers the armories, received a telephone call from a person who said: "I am a member of the FLQ. Watch the armories."

Seven minutes later, the side door of the armories was discovered to be on fire. Police found oil on the sidewalk.

The blaze was quickly extinguished and only the door was damaged.

Early Thursday, a bomb damaged a CPR bridge across the St. Lawrence Sea way near Montreal after a man who described himself as a member of the separatist, terrorist movement told police one would go off.

ST. PIERRE AND MIQUELON (CP) — Richard Bizier, 18, a Quebec resident seeking political asylum in these French Islands about 20 miles south of Newfoundland, was reported in hospital here Thursday but doctors would not disclose the nature of his illness.

Bizier, a suspected member of the terrorist Front de Liberation Quebecois, arrived on the island some days ago. He is charged with the time-bombing May 13 of an RCAF establishment in Outremont, a Montreal suburb, and was committed for trial July 5 in Montreal. Bail totaling $2,400 was granted.

Official sources in Paris said Wednesday the government had been informed of Bizier's presence in St. Pierre and that his application for asylum was being considered.

They said, however, he risks expulsion because he did not carry identity papers with him.

Quake recorded
BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A strong earthquake, possibly in the Solomon Islands, was recorded at the University of California Thursday. Seismologist Don Tocher said the quake began at 5:05:13 p.m. EDT and recording continued for two hours.

White and his wife Sherree left their home 10 days ago and later spent some days in a trailer home in which police found £30,000 of the loot.

Police believe the mail train gang numbered at least a dozen and perhaps up to 30. So far four men and three women have been arrested.

Three of the men are charged with taking part in the robbery. The rest are charged with receiving stolen money.

Another person charged in connection with the robbery was a woman who appeared at Linslade Thursday and was remanded in custody to Saturday.

Mary Kashin Manson, 42, appeared in court charged with receiving £835 of the stolen money Aug. 9 — the day after the gang stripped the mail train of 2½ tons of negotiable banknotes.

Creditiste rally may launch federal, provincial parties

By CUTHBERT JONES
(Record staff writer)

Launching of new parties with strong nationalistic tendencies in both the federal and provincial fields may result when two thousand supporters of la Ralliement des Creditistes gather in Granby over the Labor Day weekend.

Many observers of the political scene in Quebec believe the Congress being held Aug. 31, Sept. 1 and 2, will condemn the action of the national Social Credit organization in abolishing the post of Deputy Leader now held by Real Caouette, chief of Le Ralliement.

Organizers of the convention have made in plain that the abolition of the post is regarded as a slap in the face for the Quebec Social Credit delegation in the House of Commons. It is unthinkable, they say, that the man who leads 20 of the 24 man party should be sidetracked in favor of the nominal leader, Robert Thompson, who has only three supporters besides himself outside the province.

Undoubtedly much time at the convention will be devoted to discussion on a proposal to quit the national party and form a strictly Quebec group whose main aim will be to advance the separatist cause.

But the chief interest will be in the provincial field. Many Ralliement leaders have announced their intention of "getting" Premier Jean Lesage, whose last-minute intervention in the federal campaign in April is held largely responsible for the poor showing made by the Social Credit candidates in this province.

Their hatred of Premier Lesage has been aggravated by his action in naming Eric Kierans, former president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock exchanges, to the cabinet as Revenue Minister.

Mr. Kierans conducted a one-man campaign against Social Credit doctrines during the federal campaign and is Number Two man on the Social list of the politically-hated.

Many Creditistes believe that the Union Nationale opposition is on its last legs and that the time is ripe for a new entry into the provincial field.

Some of them have already selected a possible name for the new party "La Ralliement des Creditistes pour l'Independence Nationale." As its name indicates the new party would have very strong nationalistic policies.

If the Quebec wing breaks from the Thompson forces in the federal field, the formation of a provincial party would be a natural corollary.

The probable tenor of the Granby congress can be judged from the preliminary agenda sent to the delegates, which lists the following subjects of discussion:

If la Ralliement des Creditistes will enter the provincial field:

The position of la Ralliement following the decision of the national Social Credit executive to abolish the post held by Real Caouette;

A resolution that the national leader be bilingual;

If la Ralliement should dissociate itself from the national group and forms its own party;

If la Ralliement supports the ideas of the separatists.

Ayer's Cliff Fair has record crowd

AYER'S CLIFF — Doubtful weather didn't seem to bother visitors to the first day of the 118th annual Ayer's Cliff Fair yesterday.

An estimated record-breaking number of people passed through the gates, fair officials commented. The day was filled with judging contest—horticultural, cooking, agricultural — and other events including a horse pulling contest which observers have called the finest held at the fair in a long time.

Yesterday was Calf Club Day and amongst other things the winners of the judging contest were announced. The two winning

One of the most exciting events of the day was the horse pulling contest which took place in front of the grandstand, packed for the occasion. During the morning's event, Gerry Welspeake of Bennington, Vermont won top honors, but it was the afternoon spectacle which drew everyone's attention.

Pulling 9,000 pounds, two American entries fought it out to the gruelling finish. Bob Fletcher's team of Enosburg Falls, N.H., edged out Gerry Welspeake's by less than an inch.

An added feature started today at the Fair was the tea room sponsored by the Women's Institute. All day, coffee and tea were served to visitors, and many remarked it was an addition they hoped would be continued.

A new rift is seen within Sacred ranks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A new rift appears to be developing between Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson and Quebec Social Crediters.

In Ottawa, Jean-Baptiste Cote of Granby, Que., chief organizer for the Quebec wing of the party, issued a press statement saying that several Quebec party groups want Mr. Thompson to step down as national leader.

And in Rouyn, Que., Real Caouette, deputy leader of the party, accused Mr. Thompson of contradicting himself when he criticized six Quebec Social Credit MPs for declaring themselves in support of the Liberal minority government after the April 8 election. The six MPs later repudiated their declaration.

Mr. Thompson was not available immediately for comment. The Ottawa press statement said the anti-Thompson action will be raised at the annual meeting of Le Ralliement des Creditistes next weekend in Granby.

NO NAMES
It did not say how many constituency groups had passed resolutions calling for Mr. Thompson's resignation, nor did it name the ridings.

Party sources said the information will be kept secret until the convention is held. Mr. Cote's statement said some Quebec groups want a new national convention to be held to choose a leader to replace Mr. Thompson. The next convention of the national party is not scheduled for several years.

Other Quebec riding groups, the statement said, want the Quebec wing of the party, led by Mr. Caouette, to break away from the national party. Under this proposal, the 19 Social Credit members of Parliament from Quebec would withdraw their support from Mr. Thompson and the three other Social Credit MPs from the West.

In his hometown of Rouyn, Mr. Caouette said nothing about the brewing revolt in the Quebec party, but he criticized Mr. Thompson's handling of the earlier blow-up around support for the Liberal government.

SIX CENSURED
The six Social Credit MPs who announced they would vote with the Liberals were censured by the party and by Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Caouette said Mr. Thompson was blaming the six members on one hand while, on the other, was "taking a stand saying we were prepared to support the Liberals as a government without restriction."

In a telephone interview, Mr. Caouette added: "It's all right to blame others, but it's not so right when you do it yourself."

Mr. Caouette said he opposes any "understanding or agreement" with the old-line parties. "We were elected as Social Credit, to fight the old-line parties, not support them," he declared.

BC election Sept. 30 said desperate action

VICTORIA (CP) — With a plea for a united Canada and a greater British Columbia, Social Credit Premier W. A. C. Bennett Thursday called a snap provincial election for Sept. 30.

The announcement caught the province by surprise. Some opposition spokesmen called it an act of desperation. One said the election would be a question of time.

The man who has been continuously at the head of B.C. governments since 1952 and whose present government was elected in 1960 was not required by law to call an election for another two years.

The premier called a press conference and announced the election by calmly reading from a prepared statement.

He said he wanted a new man-

Municipal loans bill gets second reading after two-day debate

QUEBEC (CP) — The legislature gave second reading—approval in principle—to the Quebec government's municipal loans bill Thursday night by a vote of 53 to 25.

The legislative assembly sat for 25 minutes after the usual 10 p.m. EDT adjournment time to get the measure through second reading.

It had been debated for two full days of a special session, attacked by opposition members as a "betrayal" of provincial autonomy in the field of municipal loans.

The bill authorizes the Quebec government to borrow $120,000,000 from the federal government and lend it to Quebec municipalities for public works.

Premier Lesage says this approach gives the Quebec government control of the purse-strings instead of the federal government.

Also forecast in the throne speech is a resolution to the effect that Quebec should go ahead with its own universal and portable pension fund.

This is expected to go through without delay, as opposition members already have expressed approval.

The legislature also gave first reading Thursday to a bill giving minority school boards the right to set their own rates of tax on corporation holdings, instead of accepting the majority board's rate as they now do.

It is expected to provide tax relief for many small Protestant school boards outside Montreal and Quebec City.

Alberta fire probed

HIGH PRAIRIE, Alta. (CP) — A charred hole in the ground and part of a scorched mattress were all that remained today as police began investigation of a fire which took the lives of seven children in a two-room frame house.

One child, seven-year-old Gerald Payou, was the only survivor of the fire that took the lives of all but two of his brothers and sisters. A brother, Edward, 14, and sister Sharon, 11, were visiting their grandmother here when the blaze broke out at dawn.

Gerald was found about 100 feet from the blazing house by neighbors.

Remember the key word "ARCH"? Analyze the lead. Review the bidding. Count the losers. How to make this hand?

West opens the king of diamonds and continues with the queen and nine. East takes the third diamond with the ace and leads the ten of clubs. West's queen forces dummy's ace and you play two rounds of trumps. West discards the jack of diamonds on the second trump.

So far you haven't had to do any thinking, but if you want to make this contract you have to find the way to avoid the loss of a heart trick. Most players would try a few rounds of opening bid and that East trumps, lead a heart to dummy's ace and finesse the jack on the way back. West would take his queen and the hand would go down the drain.

the bidding and come to the conclusion that West needed the queen of hearts for the drop the queen of hearts they would lose.

A really good player would figure out that he could make the hand if West held the queen of hearts and East the ten. The odds would be against this, but at least it would be his best chance. When South played hearts he would start by leading the jack from his own hand. If West ducked he would let the jack ride. If West covered he would win with dummy's king and finesse against East's ten of hearts. Either way his opponents would be in the soup.

Those souvenirs made in Canada are catching on

GRAVENHURST, Ont. (CP) The idea that Canadian souvenirs should actually be made in Canada may seem revolutionary, but it seems to be catching on.

A survey of souvenir shops along heavily travelled Highway 11 in Ontario's Muskoka tourist region shows a growing preference for products made in this country.

But some shop owners report it hasn't been easy to replace the made-in-Japan plaster Mountie as king.

For example, Mrs. John Serres, operator of a shop north of Bracebridge who now sells only Canadian-crafted items, says that several years ago she was visited by local Indians who offered to supply her with native beadwork.

Eventually she and her husband became suspicious. They found the Indians had bought the items from a wholesaler in Toronto. They had been made in Hong Kong.

Some foreign-made souvenirs of Canada are still available. Some pennants with Canadian scenes and a Mountie in the foreground come from the United States. A pocket knife showing a Mountie is made in England. Cushions showing Canadian scenes come from France.

But carvings and polar bear rugs made in this country are being offered and blue china made in Collingwood, Ont., is a good seller.

Douglas Kennedy, who operates a shop on the highway near here, even subsidizes Canadian craftsmen who show skill in the souvenir line. One result is that more than half has even started turning out its own souvenirs now sold in the own plaster Mountie which, when turned around, plays O Canada on a built-in music box.

Final program for JMC camp tomorrow

MAGOG — (Staff) — The third JMC Mount Orford summer camp will close with an exhibition Saturday of the work done by campers during the 1963 season.

Exhibitions of painting, photography, ceramics, sculpture and other art work done by the campers will be shown in special booths outside the concert hall.

Parking lot gates changed

City employees are at work changing the three gate operations at the Webster Municipal parking garage from mechanical ones that used to freeze up in winter to electronic ones that will be impervious to weather.

City Services Director Langlois explained that the metal ramps the auto wheels used to press will be removed, and equipment will be installed under the entrance pavement to set up a magnetic field in which the entering auto will cause an impulse.

This impulse will have the same effect as the pressure on the ramps had — it will cause a time card to be issued to the motorist and will lift the gate for him to enter. Previously, the metal ramps had tended or refused to function in winter.

The change is an improvement to the system devised by Cameron Grant Inc. of Montreal, who put in the mechanism when the garage was built. The new Depot Street garage will omit the time card altogether, and a proposal by Ald. Camirand would eventually change the Webster garage to the flat-rate system for all periods of parking under 24 hours, too.

Needs at city hall are discussed

Two representatives of the Quebec public works department met with Sherbrooke Services Director Charles Langlois Thursday afternoon in his office at city hall to inform him of floor space the provincial government would need for its offices in a new city hall.

Mr. Langlois will report to city council Monday on the province's estimated needs. The public works department is more likely to occupy the space than to participate in the building of the new city hall, he said.

Quebec spokesmen were Planning Director L. P. Desy and Maurice Mercier, an aide. Mayor Nadeau has said the city hall must contain provincial offices to give taxpayers the services they have a right to expect from their city hall. He has also expressed the hope that the federal government might help finance it under Confederation Centenary legislation.

Terms of three aldermen will expire in six weeks

Municipal affairs will dominate the local political scene for the next six weeks with three of the 10 aldermanic posts being opened this fall.

The aldermen whose three-year terms expire this year are Everett Nicol in the North, Marcel Savard in the Centre and Antonio Pinard in the West.

According to the city charter the voting will take place on Wednesday, October 2 — provided opposition is offered the retiring aldermen — with nominations closing a week earlier, on Wednesday, September 25.

While none of the aldermen whose term ends in October has made any statement as to his future intentions, it is generally believed that all three men will seek re-election.

Similarly there has been no announcement officially that any opposition would be offered to the return of the outgoing Council members but in the North and Centre wards at least efforts are now underway to line up propective candidates. Ald. Pinard, who has held one of the two West Ward seats for more than nine years, is considered to have the best hopes for an acclamation.

The West Ward alderman has headed the Recreation Committee of the Council for several years and during his administration the municipal parks system has undergone a remarkable expansion. Not only have the number of parks operated by the city increased but the standard of playground equipment has been improved materially.

In addition he has been regarded as "a good ward alderman" by continuously fighting for municipal improvements required in the ward which is now the most heavily-populated in the city.

Opposition to Ald. Marcel Savard in the Centre ward may be forthcoming from a group closely associated with the Proprietors League who have been critical of many of the Council's activities in recent years.

As chairman of the General Administration Committee, Ald. Savard has been responsible for guiding the municipal finances and he would be a logical target for attack by this group.

Another factor favoring opposition to Ald. Savard is that he maintains his residence outside the ward although maintaining a place of business within the ward limits.

Ald. Amedee Roy, the second Centre Ward representative, also resides outside the district, and many residents in the upper section of the ward have expressed dissatisfaction with the situation.

They claim the ward should not be regarded as a "pocket borough" and that it should have representation of its own.

Existing conditions, they claim, gives undue importance to the North Ward. In addition to its two regular representatives, the North also houses the mayor and the two Centre aldermen.

For the past several years an element in the annexed sections of the North Ward has been seeking to elect their representative at the City Hall. Both Ald. Nicol and his colleague, Ald. Paul Gervais, have been opposed in their recent bids for re-election and it is expected that the same group will sponsor a candidate in the October voting.

But as yet the opposition has made no formal move to select a standard bearer although at least two names have been mentioned — those of Paul Hamel, a former alderman, and Gerard Marchand, who unsuccessfully opposed Ald. Nicol three years ago.

N. Nigeria bishop at North Hatley over the weekend

The Rt. Rev. J. E. L. Mort, Bishop of Northern Nigeria will be visiting North Hatley this weekend to take part in the regular Sunday service at St. Barnabas Anglican Church.

Later on in the day, at 8 p.m. Bishop Mort will be at the Connaught Inn at North Hatley for an informal reception. Rev. Charles Cheesman, rector of St. Barnabas has extended an invitation for everyone who is interested to come.

Bishop Mort is stopping at North Hatley on his way home to his diocese after the Anglican Congress which was held in Toronto, Ontario.

Holdups on increase in the ET area

While it would be alarmist to describe recent holdups and break-ins in the Eastern Townships as reaching the proportions of a crime wave, there can be little doubt that the frequency and seriousness of these crimes is increasing in the region.

Bank and caisse populaire holdups are becoming almost weekly occurrences. In some cases, large sums of money are stolen by armed bandits. Most of these robberies are well-organized and executed, indicating an underworld operation being run like a business.

Some of the break-ins and holdups are being committed by comparative amateurs, but in most cases, the thugs are no penny ante crooks. They are, in every sense of the world, "professionals."

A mail truck robbery at Ascot Corner July 2 is a case in point. A gang of bandits held the postmaster there at gunpoint, waited for the driver of a mail truck to arrive, held him prisoner and made off with the contents of the truck. Included in that particular shipment were packets of money being sent to banks. Estimates of the haul have ranged as high as $40,000.

In another spectacular crime last winter, bandits robbed two banks in one evening, striking first at Waterville, then speeding over the hills to North Hatley in a delicately-timed operation.

It seems apparent that the increased efficiency of the Montreal police force over the past two or three years has forced the "professional" bank robber out of the metropolis and into the nearby countryside, particularly the Eastern Townships.

Bank holdups used to be almost an everyday occurrence in Montreal. This is no longer the case. Now they are on the increase in this section of the province.

For a short time, Sherbrooke was the target for holdup artists. But quick apprehension of the culprits by Sherbrooke police in almost every case put a stop to that.

Few of the small communities on which bank bandits now prey have proper police forces. Some, indeed, have no police force at all. Nearly all depend on the Quebec Provincial Police for law enforcement.

But, as the director of the Quebec Provincial Police himself has pointed out, the force is woefully understaffed for the job it must do. The problem is complicated by the fact that the OPP is in the midst of a re-building operation which will take some years to complete at its present pace.

This pace may have to be quickened. Organized crime is taking too great an advantage of present weaknesses. Armed holdups — in which loaded guns are nearly always employed — are too great a danger to the lives of innocent people to be allowed to continue unchecked.

Ontario Premier avoids TV debates

Ontario Premier John Robarts has indicated he will reject a proposal that he engage in a TV debate or series of debates with Liberal and New Democratic leaders during the present provincial election campaign. And the reason for his disinclination to participate in such arguments is obvious.

Circumstances compel that these debates be loaded unduly in favor of the opposition speakers. While the government spokesman must be prepared to defend the record of the administration along a wide front, the critics are able to concentrate their fire on those inevitable weaknesses which even the strongest government cannot escape. Thus, the premier is compelled to spend most of his time discussing issues of minor importance in which his government might have erred and has little or no opportunity to present the many accomplishments to the credit of the administration.

Perhaps one of the few debates in which the government spokesmen scored the greatest advantage was that between Quebec Premier Jean Lesage and Union Nationale leader Daniel Johnson prior to the 1962 Quebec general election.

And in many respects this could not be considered a full-scale political debate. The election revolved about a single issue — the nationalization of the private power companies. The government record and its future policies in other fields were held to the sidelines. The debate rules held the discussion to the one issue, which proved to the disadvantage of the Opposition Leader whose party was already committed to the same general principle enunciated by the Premier.

Europe distrusts US military pledges

"It is not reasonable for a country to abandon itself completely to another country for its defence," was the reply of France's minister of information to the promise made by President Kennedy in Frankfurt, Germany, in June that the United States would risk its cities in defence of its European allies.

Other European politicians have openly expressed similar doubts in the last two months about U.S. intentions in the future defence of Europe. It was good protocol for President Kennedy to commit his administration to the course he so frequently referred to on his European trip; but will the president of 1970, say, continue to ask the American people to contribute high taxes for the defence of Europe?

While cabinet officers and lesser political figures ask such pointed questions openly, none of the European chiefs of state has expressed verbal doubts about continued American intentions to help protect the Continent from aggression. They express their doubts more subtly by working to develop an all-European defence force.

Some critics in the U.S. point out that the British, despite cool political attachments of France, are co-operating closely with Paris on development of the Concorde airliner, while at the same time re-organizing their Rhine army. And it was Prime Minister Macmillan who effectively threw a monkey-wrench into American plans for a unified European defence force by turning down the mixed-crew Polaris fleet proposed by Mr. Kennedy.

France is also co-operating with West Germany in a number of common defence projects, probably the most important of which is the Europa tank to be used by North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces. It is not likely, however, to share its nuclear armaments with anyone.

These are arrangements which will provide an excellent auxiliary force of need as well as provide the Europeans with a sense of security they apparently will never have as long as the American army is so important to their defence system. Greater reliance by Europe upon its own defence forces should not agitate Washington. This is the very goal it has been trying to reach as part of the solution to U.S. international payments problems.

Nevertheless, one could wish that these new arrangements would be worked out within the framework of NATO. The Communist danger, although less obviously acute these days, has not diminished to the point where the West can afford to weaken its overall defence attitude. It is still a case of "United we stand, divided we fall."

Contrast between two parliaments

According to cross-channel mythology there ought to be some differences about things that happen on the one side and on the other, as all Britons and all Frenchmen should agree. And in the manner in which the British and the French Parliaments wound up their sessions this summer there were.

In Britain the outstanding political figure was emerging from a storm, and taking about as much notice of the rain as a duck would. Neither the opposition nor the government party could make much of the Profumo scandal without hurting themselves as much as the Prime Minister. And on other issues like Rhodesia and Skybolt, where a split might have been expected among the Tories, looked-for rebellions were looked for in vain.

As the session was ending Mr. Macmillan seemed to be gaining strength while those around him were losing some of theirs and blaming it on him. Party opposition to the leader may grow faster in the holidays than it did during the session, but so may Mr. Macmillan's strategy for meeting it.

In France, however, the later part of the parliamentary session was marked by signs of increasing revolt against the rule — as distinct from leadership — of President de Gaulle. Even Premier Debre, widely regarded as simply the agent of de Gaulle in a fictional parliamentary system attracted attention by an atavistic attack on a bill to ease the lot of conscientious objectors — a bill which the government had sponsored as an advertisement of its "liberalism."

The Premier, to be sure, standing to right of de Gaulle on this issue, seemed only to be making a show as possible successor to "le general." More important parliamentary troubles blew up, however, over a government bill against strikes and another

Miss Scott good wholesome reading

Dear Sir,
I have been a reader of the Sherbrooke Daily Record since a child and I consider Jane Scott's column one of the best pieces of Christian literature that the Sherbrooke Daily Record has ever printed.

It is wholesome reading, inspirational and enjoyable and filled with plain Gospel truths.

Bridge will hurt downtown business

Dear Sir:
The merchants on Wellington Street and some of the aldermen are doing their best to have the bridge to East-Sherbrooke built at the foot of Montreal Street claiming that it will benefit their business, but none can be found that can see their viewpoint in that regard. They would be well advised to stop and think again of the outcome of what they are trying to do, for it will damage the future of Wellington Street as the main business street, their own business being hurt, therefore defeating their own ends by helping to destroy the North Ward.

They may rest assured that those who live there will not come down Portland Avenue and Montreal Street or any others, in heavy traffic to do their shopping. Oh no, they will go up instead and shop at the King St. West Shopping Centre and at the Shopping Centre to be built on Belvidere St., and other good stores nearby.

There will be others who will drive into Montreal periodically over the finest of roads, in an hour easily, shop for a couple of hours and return in an hour with their requirements after having a fine outing in good air and scenery that cannot be surpassed anywhere.

The aldermen and the merchants who want the bridge at this point must have an idea that they know more about town planning than Mr. Le-Haye, the expert, who did not have any bridge on his plans at this point but he had two bridges on this plan to be built on the Brompton Road crossing the St. Francis River to the East Ward.

We happen to know that some of the merchants on Wellington St. are dead set against the bridge being built at Montreal St. and the huge cost of it, and they think we should follow the LeHaye's plan to the letter.

For your information we are told by those in the know, that the moving of the City Hall from Wellington Street will decrease the traffic there by about 10 per cent.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor for publishing this letter.

Handle 8,000 claims each day

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's medical care administration machinery races through 8,000 accounts a day keeping up with the mountains of mail that arrive each morning.

About 200 employees of the Medical Care Insurance Commission are using modern equipment to cope with claims expected to reach $20,000,000 a year.

Still there are criticisms. Doctors complain that too many accounts are being returned for additional information, that some treatments are not covered and that copies of diagnoses are being returned to patients.

A long dispute about slow payment of accounts has virtually died. Doctors blamed the commission for the delays while the commission blamed approved health agencies which submitted the accounts for the doctors.

Donald Tansley, chairman of the commission, said there have been disputes over the amount paid on claims but that most have been settled by the medical assessment board. Fewer than 10 had required his personal attention and none had been referred to the court of last resort — the special appeal board appointed by the health minister.

Claims average less than $10 and Mr. Tansley said the commission expects to handle 2,000,000 each year. Figures on total costs for a full fiscal year are not yet available. However, up to May 31 this year costs were $12,500,000 while revenue was $18,300,000.

The healthy cushion resulted from the fact that from the end of the 23-day doctors' boycott of the plan in July, 1962, to the end of the year relatively few accounts were handled.

Commission revenue comes from annual premiums of $12 for all single persons and $24 for families, a six-per-cent surcharge on personal income tax, a one-per-cent surcharge on corporate taxes and a 1.5-per-cent sales tax.

On housing credits. On these questions impressive opposition developed, including that of Gaullists.

Now for the time being de Gaulle's hold on power is actually as firm as Mr. Macmillan seems to think his may be. But to the French picture of parliamentary life something new has been added in the recent session. There have been new signs of an awakening among parliamentarians. The government has been forced on Administration is expected to cost about $1,500,000 a year, said commission Secretary Jack Kinzel.

He said there has been no evidence of abuse but that as a precautionary measure the commission is considering a watchdog procedure to ensure the plan's benefits are not used improperly.

About 870,000 of Saskatchewan's 970,000 residents are enrolled in the plan and have to pay premiums. Most of those outside the plan are Indians, the responsibility of the federal government.

PAYS 85 PER CENT

The commission pays claims on the basis of 85 per cent of the schedule of fees set down by the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons. Patients billed directly by doctors can recover up to 85 per cent from the commission. The remaining 15 per cent is their own responsibility.

Dr. Harry Portnuff, president of the college, objected to the procedure of returning diagnoses to patients along with payment of an account in cases where the patients bill the commission. He said secrecy of the diagnosis is of utmost importance and that a letter could fall into the wrong person's hands.

Mr. Tansley said the reason "we send back what they send in" is that patients may have more than one account in the commission office and when they receive the diagnosis they know what the cheque is for.

Patients billing the commission directly for reimbursement constitute 10 per cent — $1,826, in the province.

Americans anxiously waiting

Mafia kingpin to tell all

By GORDON DONALDSON

WASHINGTON — (TNS) — After reading with admiration and some envy, the stories of Britain's Great Train Robbery, Americans eagerly await the staging of a hometown drama that will firmly reestablish the U.S. position as leader of free enterprise crime.

The star is Joseph Valachi, 60, a Mafia executioner who broke his oath of silence and now talks like Cassius Clay. The stage is a white marble Senate committee chamber. The hometown could be anybody's, as the crime cartel covers the length and breadth of the United States and extends well into Canada.

Attorney - General Robert Kennedy calls Valachi's tale "the biggest breakthrough yet in combating organized crime."

It had better be good. For the versions released so far by the Justice Department hardly surprise any regular viewer of "The Untouchables."

ARRESTS MAY have been made but nobody has yet been charged on Valachi's evidence. Officials say its main value is its revelation of the structure of an Italian-American syndicate that makes $10,000,000,000 a year from dope smuggling, gambling, loan-sharking and legitimate investment.

Valachi calls it "Cosa Nostra" (Our Thing) but every paperback reader knows it as the Mafia. For 25 years the federal narcotics bureau has insisted the Mafia does exist.

Vito Genovese, named as boss of Cosa Nostra, has been called lord of the Mafia and king of the rackets since Tom Dewey tried to get him when gang-busting in New York. He is now serving 15 years for dope running.

So why the fuss? Firstly, Valachi may have spilled much more exciting information than so far revealed.

Even if he has not, the fact that he has talked at all is a victory which the Justice Department is determined to exploit. In 1930 he cut his hand with a knife and took "omerta" the 18th century Sicilian blood oath — "If I talk, I'm dead."

To back up his oath, he said, members could be called on to murder suspect blood-brothers or their friends or real brothers.

In 1962 the squat gray-haired Valachi was kissed on both cheeks by Genovese, his cellmate in Atlanta penitentiary and realized a Mafia executioner was on his way. So he battered to death the fellow-prisoner he suspected had been chosen to kill him.

Then he began to talk. Today he is under guard by U.S. army authorities.

Justice officials say the underworld has put a $100,000 price tag on his head. But as this goes to press he is still alive and will be brought to Washington sometime in the next two weeks to testify before the Senate investigations subcommittee.

THE WATE will not be revealed until he is safely in Washington. Arrangements to spirit him in and out of the capital will be elaborate. Valachi himself may now be advising on the details. For he knows more than most about Cosa Nostra's methods of handling informers. He has taken part in several executions and told police about 14 in New York City alone.

For such a big firm (the biggest in the U.S., according to its estimated annual profits) its methods are crude and have changed little since the Al Capone days.

The question very much on Valachi's mind now is whether Cosa Nostra can carry out its most spectacular execution on Capitol Hill.

For Cosa Nostra knows that if Valachi can talk and live others may do the same. The Justice Department, which is confident it can protect him, welcomes a blaze of publicity to demoralize the syndicate and encourage new informants to come forward.

FROM CONGRESS, it wants a law permitting federal agents to interrogate witnesses after a court has begun. At present they are not allowed to do so as this is considered obstruction of justice.

As a result, they say, gang bosses can torture or kill informants before they get to court.

By presenting the story of Cosa Nostra to congress the justice department hopes to bolster its case. After that, Joseph Valachi will vanish to a new hideaway and a lifetime of well-protected idleness.

Political issue threatened

Bombay has owner-tenant fight

BOMBAY (CP) — A landlord-tenant struggle has exploded in this city of more than 4,000,000 people and it threatens to become a first-class political issue.

Involved directly are the owners of some 7,000 ancient houses and more than 100,000 low-income families occupying the buildings.

But the issue also has brought in others — the Maharashtra state administration, the Bombay Municipal Corporation, India's ruling Congress party and the whole spectrum of opposition parties ranging from Conservatives to Communists.

The collapse of many of the houses under the impact of the heavy monsoon rains has made the issue a lively one.

During the last two months, some 20 houses have collapsed in Bombay. Eighteen persons, including three school boys, have died in the incidents.

Municipal authorities say that by the time the rainy season ends late in September, another two dozen buildings may have collapsed.

All the 7,000 houses were listed as "dangerous" four years ago. Landlords were asked to make repairs and tenants to vacate where necessary. Both refused.

Tenants wanted alternative accommodation, which they could not obtain. The landlords said they had no money to finance the repairs.

Canadian-born Russian happy

Has 2 countries to call her own

Ellen Romanova is a native of Canada who has lived in the Soviet Union for the last 31 years. In this story she tells a Canadian Press reporter of her life during those three decades.

By ALAN HARVEY

MOSCOW (CP) — Any Canadian wishing to peer behind the stony Soviet mask of veto and recrimination should have a word with Ellen Romanova. She knows the story from the inside.

She has lived through it for the last three decades, sharing privation and suffering with her Soviet countrymen as the world's first socialist revolution bumped along its stoical course from dirt roads and mud huts in 1917 to space ships and sputniks in 1963.

She is a unique "Canadian" interpreter of the Soviet scene because she was born in Winnipeg and grew up there and in Saskatoon, acquiring an accent that still has an impeccable Prairie twang; because she is neither an embittered misfit nor a one-track zealot; and because she flaunts a stubborn independence rare in this intimidated capital of communism.

Thirty-one years ago Ellen Romanova sat in a Grade 8 classroom in William Whyte school in Winnipeg, serenely contemplating many happy years in Canada. Months later, at the age of 16, she was in the Soviet Union with her mother and two young brothers, there to stay through thick and thin.

With a balanced view maintained even at the height of the Stalinist terror, Mrs. Romanova acknowledges that "mistakes were made in the past" but appeals for a greater effort of understanding by the West, saying she sincerely believes closer contacts could do much for both sides.

"No other people in the world could have withstood what the Russians did," she said.

"They started from scratch. They had nothing after the revolution — no doctors, no teachers, no engineers, nothing. The country was hundreds of years back in the sticks. The people were mostly illiterate."

"The aristocrats and the experts were either dead or had fled. Thousands of motherless, fatherless, homeless children roamed the country ragged and starving, hanging out in hovels or banding together to steal."

"Men and women exhausted from lack of sleep and overwork, hardly able to do their sums, went to evening classes, existing mainly on black bread and cabbage soup."

When the people finally built something "out of their blood and sinews" along came the war and knocked it all down.

Talking breathlessly once she got started, this spunky, big-hearted woman, who was once a raving beauty and still draws stares at 46, poured out the story of a crowded life, in snapshots on a park bench beside the huge Lenin sports stadium and later in her two-room, ninth-floor apartment by the Moscow River.

Over a dish called summer flapjacks made from a recipe in the July, 1958, number of an English magazine, she apologized for the glaring green paint—"never get around to a finishing layer"—and pointed to a pile of Pat Boone records.

"I love the language I was born with and listening to the records brings back happy memories."

She motioned to the bathroom. "And that's my pride and joy. I'm in it two to five times a day, no kidding. I can't get over the novelty of having a bath of my own. I'm a fish by nature."

Mrs. Romanova, nee Giventhal, is a sturdy, spirited, good-natured woman with handsome copper hair. She has been through so much that nothing worries her now. She spares no effort for people she likes and is careless about money.

The move that changed her life came in 1932. Her mother, from a poor family in the Ukraine, emigrated to Canada in 1910 after working as a governess. There she met and married another Ukrainian emigrant, by coincidence one of her former pupils.

The marriage broke up. The determined woman from the Ukraine went back to Russia, taking her three children though she knew the difficulties.

"BIG ADVENTURE"

"No words can describe it," recalls Ellen. "When I think back I am astonished that it all seemed one big adventure. The Russia that I live in today is a new world."

"Everything was so different then. The inconveniences were boundless. To people living in established countries it is hard to convey the full flavor. You have to live through it, live with it."

"There was the drabness of it all, the way people dressed, the lack of amenities—and yet there was a tremendous friendliness and the joy of the people when they found we had come to share their troubles and help restore their ravished country."

"They had a pride in the fact that it was their country, that it belonged to them and depended entirely on their efforts.

could have lifted the Soviet Union from the chaos that followed the 1917 revolution and the Second World War. This photo, taken about 1956, shows Mrs. Romanova

I think finally that the root of their strength and endurance lies in the knowledge that what has been achieved at such inhuman effort they will give up to no one whatever the cost."

After arriving from Canada, the family lived in an old hotel near the Kremlin. They had no room and the four of them took turns getting rest in a "kind of armchair thing" in the corridor—good training for tough post-war years when she lived 11 years in a basement room 12 feet square.

Her first husband, a navy man, was killed in 1941 when his trawler hit a mine. Her kid brother Joe, a promising sculptor, died along with hundreds of young volunteers in an untold epic of heroism outside Moscow. Her other brother, Alex, lost his right leg below the knee after five operations. He now is a Moscow press photographer whose work has won awards in several countries, including Canada.

Mrs. Romanova is separated from her second husband and lives with her 23-year-old student son by her first marriage. Her strong body and laughing eyes betray few signs of a gruelling life. A peil-mell person, she dashes about Moscow in a small "tin can of a car" doing odd jobs connected with the English language — translating, interpreting, dubbing films and teaching.

Her son was born in 1939 and she stayed at his side through the war, travelling on cattle trains, living in a cubby hole at a circus through the kindness of a group of midgets, selling her last Canadian dress to buy a tin pail full of butter and fat which was all the nourishment she could get for a long time.

She has no complaints about the past. Looking at conditions today, she says she is not a politician and therefore not in a communal kitchen shared by 12 families during the post-war housing crisis. All of the families since have been relocated. (CP photo).

Polly's pointers

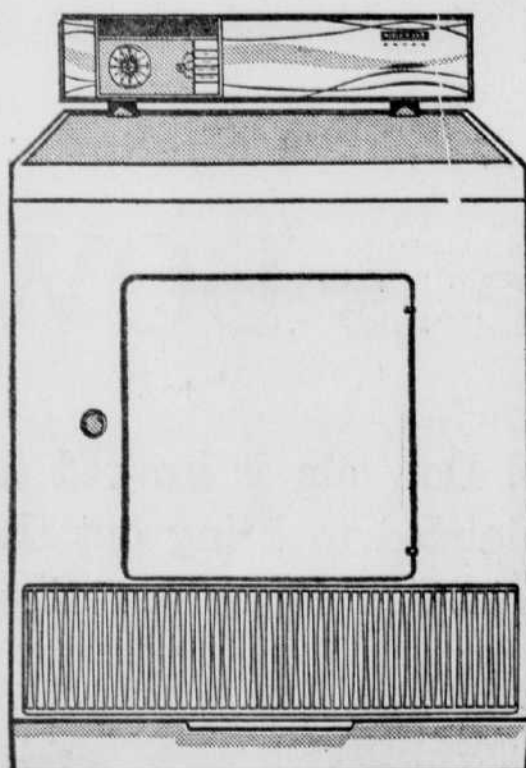

DEAR POLLY—Last summer I was caught at our country place with two young grandchildren and no lights due to a power failure during a storm. With a match I melted a few drops of wax from the bottom of candles into the bottom of two wide-mouthed peanut butter jars, set the candles in and held each in place for a few seconds until the wax set. Presto, instant light. If the candle is taller than the jar, cut off to the right size before setting it in the jar. I now keep some, all ready for just such emergencies.

less and low-backed, is magnificently cut with floating shoulder panels attached the full length of the dress. The matching flowing coat has a yoke effect in the front and is lined with ruby broadcloth.

Highlights of the C.W.L. convention

CALGARY (CP) — Women have done little to answer the late Pope John's call for Roman Catholic participation in social action, a member of the Catholic Women's League of Canada said Wednesday.

"I think that this is a problem that is very large, but it can be put into a few words," Mrs. P. C. Lomer of Hafford, Sask., told the 500 delegates and visitors.

"Our membership is not Christian enough. We are not the kind of Christians Christ wants us to be and if we are going to try to revitalize the world about us and revitalize the social order, we'll have to begin in our own ranks."

"There is only one thing they should be working for—the salvation of our souls and the souls of others. If the CWL is not going to do this, then I'm not interested in the Catholic Women's League."

She suggested that a problem be drawn up and be made available to CWL parish councils outlining Christian duties.

Mrs. Hermon Stevens of Calgary was elected Wednesday to a second year as president of the 146,000-member Catholic Women's League of Canada.

Most Rev. Thomas J. McCarthy, Roman Catholic Bishop of St. Catharines, Ont., was appointed national director of the CWL, replacing Most Rev. Francis J. Klein, bishop of Saskatoon.

First Vice-President Catharine A. Toal of London, Ont., and second vice-president Mrs.

H. T. Donnihee of Cornwall, Ont., also were re-elected.

Other vice-presidents included Ruth Robinson, Quebec, and Mrs. J. F. Steele, Charlotte-town.

Secretary Mrs. J. C. Macneil of Moncton and Treasurer Mrs. H. F. Craigen of Moose Jaw were re-elected.

A new mission has been given to 146,000 Roman Catholic women in Canada — to play a larger role in public affairs, and take a greater interest in community volunteer work.

A resolution urging members of the Canadian Catholic Women's League to adopt the increased responsibilities was passed Wednesday during the closing business session of the league's six-day annual convention here.

A closed executive meeting was scheduled for today.

The resolution reflected discussion in five forums during which CWL members were exhorted to make more use of their intellects, become more internationally-minded, and cast aside parochial ideas to become positive Christian participants in community life.

The hardest-hitting address was delivered Tuesday by Very Rev. E. C. Garvey of Vancouver, who told the 500 delegates and visitors that he always marvelled at the intellect of women, and marvelled that they haven't used it.

He said women must come of age. They must stand on their own feet, take their own responsibilities outside the home and make their own decisions.

Wednesday, Mrs. P. C. Lomer of Hafford, Sask., told the convention that women have done little to answer the late Pope John's call for Roman Catholic participation in social action.

"Our membership is not Christian enough," said Mrs. Lomer.

She suggested that a program be drawn up and distributed to parish councils outlining Christian duties.

In a resolution during the business session, the league was asked to encourage Canada's external affairs minister to extend the country's foreign aid program "in keeping with our resources and responsibilities."

In another, the league petitioned the federal government to urge all nations to resume talks on general disarmament, and another conveyed to the federal government "our very strong conviction that membership in the Organization of American States is long overdue."

The federal government and Citizenship Minister Guy Favreau were commended for establishing a claims commission to settle all Indian claims and grievances against the federal government, "in a just and equitable manner."

Be nice to be with

When a woman has warmth and charm, she adds a great deal to any occasion. She makes friends with the greatest of ease and is often envied by other women because of her popularity.

The women who envy her would do well, instead, to emulate her.

She likes to meet new people and shows it in several ways. She is friendly and interested at the first meeting. She remembers the person's name, and goes out of her way to speak first the next time they meet. And she is always quick to introduce a new acquaintance to an old friend.

She talks enough to put other people at ease, but not enough so that she ever monopolizes the conversation. When someone else is doing the talking she listens with a responsiveness that is both satisfying and flattering.

She laughs easily, so that the little incident someone else tells for a laugh never falls flat.

Other women are comfortable in her presence, for she doesn't try to outdo them, or give herself a big build-up. She doesn't seem to need to always be right. She is as pleasant and agreeable with women as she is with men.

She can make small talk with anybody. It isn't especially scintillating—but it is friendly and interesting and lively.

Not one of the traits that won her the reputation for being a delightful person is difficult to acquire. Anyone can develop warmth and kindness if she cares enough to work at it.

Questions readers ask

Q—I am trying to lose weight and all my friends tell me I must cut out potatoes and bread. They are my two favorite foods. Do I have to give them up entirely? Please say "no."

A—Here is good scientific news for you. Dr. Margaret Ohlson, Department of Internal Medicine, State University of Iowa, points out that experiments show it is self-defeating to reject potatoes and bread in a weight reducing regime because, when starch is substituted for sugar in a diet constant in other components, appetite is reduced. Also, starches are the only classification of foods which apparently can be eaten without restriction and not cause an increase in the blood fats.

Anglicans urged to forget fears of the RC church

TORONTO (CP) — Anglicans have been urged to forget their past "fear, anxiety and suspicion" of the Roman Catholic Church in favor of the new spirit of Christian unity.

"Reunion may be very far away," said Very Rev. C. H. W. de Soysa, archdeacon of Colombo, Ceylon, "but a real breakthrough in relations between the Roman Catholic Church and the rest of us has occurred."

Archdeacon de Soysa was one of two speakers to stress the prospects of closer relations between the churches Thursday, as the 11-day Anglican Congress neared its close.

Still further evidence of the new feeling between the churches is today's "courageous call" by James Cardinal McGuigan, Archbishop of Toronto, on Most Rev. Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury. After a public encounter in the lobby of the hotel where the Anglicans have met, the two church leaders retired to a private suite to discuss "matters of mutual concern."

TO HEAR IDEAS

Today's sessions are the last formal meetings of the Congress. Delegates will hear ideas for action from 37 study groups set up at the beginning of the conference and approve a "message" summing up the spirit of the congress.

Most Rev. Joost de Blank, Archbishop of Cape Town, South Africa, will speak at the closing religious service late today at St. James Cathedral.

Archdeacon de Soysa, one of the Anglican observers at last year's Vatican council, said Catholic theologians are "thinking very hard" about the equality of all Christians through the common faith of baptism.

And delegates applauded when he said: "I have hope the Roman Catholic Church may apply for membership in the World Council of Churches. When that happens, a very great thing will have been done."

"... Fear, anxiety and suspicion, no matter how well founded in the past, must be put

Eskimo carvings said 'new art'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Eskimo soapstone carvings seen in gift shops across Canada are a new art, not part of the age-old work done by the northern natives, says a University of California anthropologist.

Dr. Edward S. Carpenter has made a lifetime study of the Eskimo and says the carvings popular today were introduced to the Arctic in 1948 by the white man.

The new art is genuine, however, actually carved by Eskimos, he says.

A former Canadian, educated in Toronto, Dr. Carpenter gave an anthropology course at the University of British Columbia's summer session in Vancouver.

He knows the Eskimo and his art from having lived among northern tribes during his early research. With little money, he lived with Eskimo families in their igloos on Baffin Island and in the Melville Peninsula area, hunted with the tribesmen, ate their food and spoke their language.

Dr. Carpenter plans to spend a year in Copenhagen studying one of the world's largest collections of Eskimo art. Biggest collections of northern carvings are in the Soviet Union, Copenhagen, New York and Toronto, he says, and are composed mainly of work from the Canadian Arctic.

The anthropologist will return to Vancouver next year to stage an Eskimo art exhibition in conjunction with the 1964 Vancouver International Festival. He has received a grant for the show and is dealing with several countries for Eskimo artifacts in their museums.

date before a provincial federal conference in November.

He said the conference "comes at a time when Confederation is at stake" and "we are anxious to build a united Canada." His party would campaign on the slogan "forward to a greater British Columbia."

But he went on to say that a key stone in the Social Credit election manifesto will be the government's two-rivers power policy and the continuation of lower rates, greater industrial development and full employment.

Spokesmen for all opposition parties made it clear that the tangled situation revolving around a recent finding that the expropriation of the B.C. Electric Company in 1961 was outside the jurisdiction of the legislature would be the key issue of the election.

Standing at prorogation of the legislature was Social Credit 30 NDP 16, Liberal 5, vacant 1. Social Credit retained Columbia constituency in a July byelection but the winner never had a chance to take a seat in the House.

The announcement caught Liberal Leader Ray Perrault on his honeymoon in Hawaii.

It will be the first personal test at the provincial polls for E. Dave Fulton, former federal justice and public works minister who took over the B.C. Progressive Conservative party last year.

Robert Strachan is Opposition and NDP leader.

None hurt

NEWMARKET, Ont. (CP)—Freight cars were tossed about like match sticks Thursday when a heavily loaded CNR freight train smashed into a standing line of railway cars at a siding near this community 35 miles north of Toronto.

The four-man crew of the standing freight leaped to safety. Three crew members in the travelling freight stayed in the engine until it ground to a stop. None was injured.

and Paulette Laliberte. W. G. MacDougall, who founded the first Calf Club in this area in 1921 advised the youngsters in an address at the dinner to take every opportunity of a good education to become good citizens of Canada. He further advised them to take the prize money and deposit it in the bank to help pay for a trip across Canada in order to better appreciate the country.

Other speakers last night were Don Robinson, Yves Forest, and Tom Ride.

Als banking on Marriott for win over Argos

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal

Alouettes are banking on a second-string quarterback to bring them a badly-needed victory tonight.

Toronto Argonauts might just do the same.

The Eastern Football Conference teams meet for their first encounter of the season at a time when a win for Montreal would tie up all four teams for the league lead or the league cellar, however you look at it, or when a win for Toronto would give the Argonauts a two-point lead.

The Alouettes, after benching highly-paid and highly-publicized

Sandy Stephens as just too pudgy to play properly, announced that they will give 24-year-old Francis Marriott a chance to start the first professional football game of his career. He warmed the New York Giants' bench for two years as a sub quarterback.

Toronto coach Nobby Wir-kowski said he would not place Rechner in the trade for

Parker, but was brought back in a trade for Bruce Claridge.

Hickman was hurt in Toronto's 17-16 loss to Edmonton last week.

Montreal's only serious injury is to tackle Ted Elsy, an all-star homebred who is also on the reserve list now. Dick

Dalatri will be shifted into Elsy's place.

Coach Jim Trimble dismissed

any "pure speculation" any suggestions that if Marriott turns in a good game, the Als will buy up the remaining two years of Stephens' three-year no-cut contract and ship him away.

Trimble ordered Sandy, the all-

American from Minnesota University, to get down to 210 pounds from 220 in a week if he wanted to start the game tonight and Stephens didn't make it.

The Record's Farm Report

BE CAREFUL WITH DAMP GRAIN

In the old days, grain used to be cut before it had become too hard, so as to obtain better quality and avoid shattering. After cutting it was left stacked in the field until completely mature. It was then carted to the barn, care being taken to make sure that it was quite dry, and threshed from the mow late in the fall or in the course of the winter. All farmers are well aware of the trouble caused by the heating of stored grain, especially from the point of view of palatability — barley in particular acquiring a bad flavour. Powers of germination are also more or less affected, so grain that has heated presents a problem to anybody who is thinking of using it for seed.

Since the good old days, there has been the era of the big threshing machines followed by the coming of the combines, power-driven or otherwise. As for threshing machines, it should be remembered that, although they do a fairly quick job, there is a limit to what they can handle efficiently. Operation within their capacity will prevent too much grain going into the straw and allow better preliminary cleaning, so that more weed seeds are removed — especially those that, being still green, tend to make the grain damp.

Grain that is to be harvested with a combine has, of course, to be left standing till it is ripe, and thus, because cutting and threshing are carried out in one operation, J. B. Leduc of the Quebec Department of Agriculture and Colonization believes that there is also a limit to what a combine will handle. Even if this is the age of speed, hurried work is still usually poor work. Combining should be done in good, dry weather and neither begun too early in the morning nor continued too late in the evening.

Certain weed seeds such as lambs' quarters and green foxtail or others that are still green should be distrusted; they may help to retain excess moisture in heaps of threshed grain. In such a case, or whenever there is a possibility of heating, it is wise to see that grain is not piled too deep in the granary or bins; when it is spread out, it can be stripped up more easily and as often as necessary with a shovel. This will prevent heating and all the resulting trouble and damage mentioned previously.

CARE OF THE LAYING FLOCK

The profitability of a laying flock during the year depends principally on special care taken to ensure the comfort and well-being of the birds when they are starting to lay. Since the laying period lasts from 12 to 18 months in the case of modern, "improved" birds, it is not hard to understand the importance of good poultry management.

As soon as the old birds have been removed, floors should be carefully cleaned and thoroughly disinfected. The best way to go about this is to remove all the litter and hardened droppings from the floor and then wash it, using plenty of water and swilling it well. Scrub floors, nests, and roosts with hot water and lye and then apply a strong solution of a good disinfectant. Following disinfection, Mr. Andre Melancon of the Quebec Department of Agriculture and Colonization recommends that the inside of the poultry house be white-washed and the roosts and dropping boards painted with a mixture of six parts of old lubricating oil to one part of kerosene. The main purpose of painting the roosts is to kill all the mites that may be lurking in the cracks and chinks. Be sure that the oil penetrates into these hiding places because that is where mites are likely to be.

Roosts and nests should be placed at a height of 18 inches from the floor. To avoid overcrowding, it is advisable to allow 2½ to 4 square feet of floor space per laying bird, depending on their weight and the size of the pens. The heavier the breed and the smaller the pens, the more space should be allowed per bird. Provide 36 to 40 linear feet of hopper space per 100 birds of light breeds, and 40 to 48 linear feet per 100 birds of the heavy breeds or, alternatively, five round feeders.

If grain is fed in an automatic hopper or scattered on the floor, a minimum of 30 linear feet of feeding space per 100 birds should be allowed. As regards grit and oyster shell, there should be half a linear foot of hopper space for grit and linear foot for oyster shell, per 100 birds. For water, if drinking fountains of the Johnson type or similar design are used, there should be at least one per 150 birds; in the case of automatic drinking troughs, eight linear feet should be allowed per 100 birds. For heavy breeds, or during hot weather, it is better to allow extra drinking space.

The question of nest space is very important. It is suggested that there should be one square foot for every four or five birds, or the equivalent of one community nest measuring 2' x 6' for every 50 birds. These nesting requirements must be satisfied, because shortage of laying space leads to broken and dirty eggs.

Liquid diet is good for plants

By MARGARET E. DOVE

Late summer and fall flower shows are soon to be here. If gardeners expect to produce prize-winning specimens at these shows their plants will need special attention now.

Dahlias, gladioli, chrysanthemums and annuals will benefit from a liquid diet, continuing from now until show time. Applications should be repeated at two-week intervals. After a rain or a thorough wetting of the soil with the hose, each plant is given about a pint of liquid fertilizer, made by mixing with water according to the manufacturer's directions any general fertilizer such as 20-20-20.

Fight Insects

Good clean foliage is as important as fine large blooms in exhibition material, therefore the fight on insects and disease must be continued.

Spray residue should not be perceived on any foliage of specimens exhibited; it can be removed by careful washing. All good specimen exhibits must have straight stems; they may need to be carefully staked in the garden.

While disbudding of many plants encourages large blooms it should be done early if it is to serve its purpose.

Rose are the exception to the late summer feeding program. Any fertilizer given later than July produces soft, tender growth which does not harden sufficiently to withstand the rigors of our winter.

Repeated spraying should be

Do-it-yourself

It's easier to prevent rust than to remove it

BY MR. FIX

It's annoying to hunt up a tool that you haven't used in some time and discover that it's rusted.

Or to have an otherwise good paint job ruined by rust stains. Rust can be prevented. It can even be removed once it has formed, but prevention is easier by comparison.

Rust or corrosion is a chemical reaction which occurs when metal and some other clean and paint with rust preventive paint.

You'll go a long way in keeping gutters from rusting if you will use coated nails when installing galvanized gutters and downspouts, aluminum nails for aluminum gutters.

Rust stains that appear through the paint on the siding often means that the siding was installed with plain iron or steel nails rather than coated or aluminum nails. Sand the rust, drive the head below the surface and cover with putty and an extra coat of paint.

Outside Inspection

Metal lawn furniture and children's toys that are left outside should be inspected frequently. At the first sign of rust, sand the spot down to the bare metal. Use a good rust preventive primer and finish with enamel.

Prevent rust by coating these items with wax. A good auto wax will do the job since it is designed to stand up under weather.

Inside Attack

Moisture can attack metal indoors as well.

But in this instance you can do something to prevent moisture. Provide ventilation. Use either a chemical or electric dehumidifier. Vent excess moisture to the outside through the use of exhaust fans in kitchen and bath.

Coat tools with a light film of oil. Check them frequently.

Scale forming inside your hot water tank eventually works to corrode the tank sides. Empty a pail or two of water from the spigot at the bottom every month or so. Stop draining as soon as the water runs clear. Don't drain and refill completely since this introduces air which hastens corrosion. (NEA)
