INSURANCE.

EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES.

That substantial and successful Company, the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, represented in this city by

Calculations have been made showing the experience of the past seven years, which prove that the accumulated surplus on policies of this class is larger than the dividend heretofore declared by any company on any plan of insurance of policies of the same age.

ACTUAL RESULTS.

As an illustration of the success of the Tontine plan of insurance, practised by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, we call the attention to the particulars of the following policy, issued July 9, 1860. The assured was then at the time 37 years of age. The policy (No. 45,163) is for $10,000. He has paid five premiums, amounting in all to $1,408.50, and the accumulated surplus already credited to this policy amount to $725.33. More than 50 per cent. of the amount paid. Upon the basis of these results, this policy will, if the assured die before the expiration of fifteen years, realise $10,000: if in force at the end of fifteen years, be worth, cash $6,121, or, if the insurance is continued, it will secure a paid-up policy for $13,500. Further illustrations and explanations may be obtained from the agent of the Company.

MR. R. W. GALE,
199 St. James Street.

The above exhibits of actual results is better than any arguments based on estimates or theories, and we have no doubt that many who hold Tontine policies in the Equitable, will take additional insurance on this plan, now that it is proved to work successfully, while those who have delayed will not longer hesitate to insure.

ENGLAND.

The English papers are full of details of disastrous floods, resulting from such a downpour of rain as has not been experienced for many years.

Mr. Fildes, so well known in the railway world, particularly in late times as an active shareholder of the Great Western of Canada Company, died recently in Manchester. His age was 66. He is said to have acquired a large fortune.

The Standard says that a young lady of personal attractions and connected with a family of high social position, has mysteriously disappeared, and has not been heard of since the 14th of May, although the fact has been duly advertised.

On the 18th ult., Captain Burns, of the British ship "Dunloe," was presented with a gold watch in acknowledgment of his gallant behaviour in rescuing the whole of the crew of a burning ship, the "Pocahontas," of Boston, on the 9th of September. The watch was the gift of the President of the United States, to whom the facts of the case had been made known.

At the Chester Assizes, Jemima Hankey, a nurse girl, aged thirteen, employed by Mr. Stubbs, a farmer at Antrobus, was indicted for having attempted to murder two of her master's children by administering to them sulphate of copper. The prisoner's object, according to her own confession, was to get rid of the children, in order that she might have no work to do. She was acquitted by the jury, on the ground that she was too young to understand the nature of her crime.

At the Liverpool Court of Passage a servant has claimed damages for libel against a former mistress, who wrote, in answer to an enquiry about the servant's character, "She is neither strictly honest nor sober." For the defence it was submitted that the letter was a privileged communication, the portion in it complained of being a specific answer to a pacific question with reference to the character of a domestic servant. The learned Assessor concurred with the view taken by the learned counsel for the defence, and non-suited the plaintiff, remarking that it would be most disgraceful if people did not speak the truth in regard to their servants.

Mr. Dougall, of Glasgow, has been commissioned by the Prince of Wales to manufacture a number of the very finest double-barrelled rifles to form part of the fire-arms to be presented by the Prince of Wales to the more eminent princes and chiefs during His Royal Highness' visit to India. The Prince of Wales (as well as the Duke of Edinburgh) it may be mentioned, is an excellent judge of such weapons, and well skilled in their use, and, with his usual good taste, he has commanded that while they are to be of the highest intrinsic quality, the guns are to bear no unusual ornamentation beyond His Royal Highness' arms upon a gold medallion to be inserted into each stock.

On Monday night the chief constable and Mr. Whadlow, the county inspector, visited Mr. Chamberlain's farm at Hardwick, near Banbury, and ordered two animals suffering from pneumonia to be killed. The animals were worth about £40. Seven animals have been killed within the last few days, and some of them were Aldernays, so that the loss is severe. With a view to stamp out the disease, arrangements are in progress to slaughter all the healthy animals, to the number of about fifty, including some valuable bulls. This course was suggested some days ago, but the owner then thought the disease was not contagious. The Farm is in Oxfordshire, bordering on Warwickshire and Northamptonshire.

The Scotsman reports another collision between a whale and a ship, the "Triumph," bound from Liverpool for Burghead. About midday, while the vessel was about fifteen miles off the Lewes coast, under full sail and the master and crew below at dinner, except one man at the wheel, all were startled by a severe shock as if the vessel had struck on some sunken wreck. The men at once rushed on deck and saw a large whale floating a few yards off, either dead or stunned apparently with the shock. The monster had crossed the bow of the vessel. On finding that the ship had sprung a leak the master made for Stornoway, where the cargo had to be discharged. Information has reached Stornoway that a Greenland whale, upwards of 40 feet long, was towed ashore at Balranald, North Uist, having been found dead in the Atlantic.

A private letter received in Sheffield from one of the crew of the iron ship "Glance," of London, which arrived in the Thames from Adelaide on Thursday, gives intelligence of a terrible event which recently occurred at sea. On the 27th ult. the "Glance" passed an outward bound vessel, bearing the name of "Jessie Osborne," and was hailed by the captain of the latter ship, who reported that one of his crew had gone mad; that for five days the maniac had stationed himself aloft, and that nothing could induce him to return to deck. The captain further reported that the madman armed himself with a large chisel, with which he was cutting the ropes, and that the boatswain had tried to bring him down. The maniac, however, threw a block at the boatswain, knocking him on the deck and breaking his arm and leg. As a matter of safety to his vessel and crew, the Captain of the "Jessie Osborne" considered that it was necessary to shoot the maniac, and after some consultations that course was decided upon. The crew and officers of the "Glance" were requested to be present as witnesses, and in their presence the man was shot with a revolver. In consequence of the way in which he moved about the rigging, three shots had to be fired before he was fatally injured. He fell dead on the deck, and his body was eventually thrown overboard.

IRELAND.

A report from Mullingar says: "It is sufficient to say that there are no complaints from that gentleman so difficult to please—the agriculturist. No blight on the potato, no smut in the corn, no fly in the turnip."

A government proclamation has been posted throughout the county Cavan, cautioning parties against carrying fire-arms in procession, and stating that parties not having licenses are liable to be prosecuted, and persons having licenses and carrying arms are liable to have them revoked under the Coercion Act.

On July 5, two men named Hopkins and Baney, charged before one of the Dublin magistrates with attempting to destroy Prince Albert's memorial and having arms in a proclaimed district, were committed for trial. Counsel for the Crown strongly opposed the application of the prisoners' advisers to have them admitted to bail, which was refused.

In opening the Sligo assizes Mr. Justice Fitzgerald said: "Though I have been in the habit of coming this circuit for the last fifteen years, this is the slightest and most satisfactory calendar which has ever come under my notice. The constabulary returns of offenses reported since the last assizes are but sixteen in number, and the condition of your county seems eminently satisfactory."

The last general meeting of the Law Students' Debating Society for this session was held in the Lecture Hall, King's Inns, on Monday evening, July 12, when the following subject was debated: "That the principle of Federalism should be applied to the United Kingdom." Speakers—Affirmative, Mr. J. G. S. MacNeil, M.A., Mr. John Lowry; negative, Mr. A. M. Colgan, B. A., Mr. G. F. Waters, Sec.

The linen trade of Ulster (says the Dublin Freeman of Monday, July 4), has for the past eighteen months been in a very depressed condition, and, unhappily, matters have not as yet assumed a cheerful aspect. Some heavy failures have recently taken place at Belfast, and on Saturday it was currently reported in commercial circles in that town that another house had been obliged to give way.

The members of the Confraternity of the Holy Family held a meeting recently in the Catholic Chapel, Hill street, Newry. The building was densely crowded, 1,500 members of the confraternity being present. After a sermon by the Rev. Henry Harbinson, Superior of the Redemptorist Order, the 1,500 men connected with the Holy Family held up their right hands and solemnly promised "never again to drink in a public-house on Saturday nights or Sundays."

A Mr. Wilson, of Dublin, started on his velocipede from Londonderry, on Tuesday, July 6, at 11.15 A. M., travelled via Strabane, Omagh and Fintona, arriving at Fivemiletown at 5.50 P. M., a distance of 56 miles; left Fivemiletown at 6.05 P. M., for Cootehill, via Clones, a distance of 27 miles (over a very hilly and mountainous road) which he proposed reaching at 8.30. He had a small travelling bag strapped on his back.

A woman named Higgins has just been tried at the Leitrim assizes on a charge of the murder of her sickly little boy, by throwing him into a ditch by the road side, when she had failed to get rid of him by the method of depositing him in a workhouse. She did not announce his death, and when spoken to said he had died in the work-house. After the discovery of the boy she said he had slipped from her back. She denied that she was guilty of murder. The jury, after several hours' deliberation, were discharged without having agreed to a verdict.

A MOTHER'S SAD AFFLICTION.

A Des Moines, Iowa, correspondent of the Chicago Tribune writes:—"A remarkable incident occurred near Viroqua, a few days ago, in a family whose name my informant could not remember. There were three little children, the oldest being five years, two of whom went to the barn to find hens' nests. They found one and crawled to it, and one of them thrust his hand forward to get the eggs, when he quickly withdrew it, saying the old hen had bitten him. The other said he wasn't afraid, and thrust his hand forward, when he, too, was bitten. Both then screamed, which quickly brought their mother to the spot, when it was discovered that they had both been struck by a rattlesnake coiled in the nest. The mother seized the little boys in her arms and hastened to the house, where a new horror met her gaze. In her haste to secure the boys at the barn she had set down a boiler of hot water, into which the babe had fallen. In thirty minutes all her children were dead."

THE "LIFE" OF SUBMARINE CABLES.

The English Money Market Review says that a fact of some importance as tending to, if it does not entirely, dispel the prevailing impression that the "life" of a submarine cable is of a limited nature was lately mentioned by Mr. John Pender, M.P., at the meeting of the Eastern Telegraph Company. He stated that the various sections of the Eastern system, with the exception of a shore end of a short line at Lisbon which was undergoing repair, were in perfect working order. But of far greater importance, as affecting the future of submarine cable enterprise, was his announcement that the Suez and Aden section, which was laid in comparatively warm water, had improved in insulation by no less than thirty-eight per cent., and the other cables of the Eastern Company from forty-five to seventy-seven per cent. in insulation power, which is of course the chief element in estimating their capacity for the transmission of messages. Mr. Pender further stated that the cables longest laid have improved the most.

HEROISM.

The following incident is related in a European paper as having lately occurred in Prussia. A switch-tender had just taken his place to change the track, in order to turn a train which was in sight, so as to prevent a collision with another train from an opposite direction. At this critical moment, on turning his head, he discovered his little boy playing on the track of the advancing engine. He might spring to the rescue and remove him safely, but then he would not have time to turn the switch, and hundreds of lives might be lost by his neglect. In an instant his resolution was taken. "Lie down!" he shouted to his boy, and the child, happily accustomed to obedience, promptly threw himself on the ground, and the whole train thundered over him, the passengers little dreaming how much their safety had cost that father. The trembling man rushed forward, fearing to find only a mangled corpse, but no words can express his joy at seeing his child alive and unharmed. The next day the king, having heard of the circumstance, sent for the man and presented him the medal of honor for his heroism.

THE REDUCTION OF WAGES IN FALL RIVER.

The Fall River (Mass.) News makes the following statement of the questions at issue between the manufacturers and operatives of the mills in that city:

"That the margin on print cloths, at the market rates, is too small to admit of running the mills at present wages, is certainly as well understood by work people as anybody. It costs about 5 27-1,000 cents per yard to manufacture cloth, while the highest price it can be sold for is 5 125-1,000, leaving only 98-1,000, or less than one-tenth of a cent per yard for profit. As this would give but one and one-half-per cent. on $20,000,000, it is plain that the mills cannot run. But, say some of the operatives, why not shut down entirely for the month of August, and thus diminish the production 28,000,000 yards—which would evidently make a great difference in the market. Simply for the reason that there are thousands of looms on wide goods that stand ready to jump right in and weave as much of that 28,000,000 as they can. Then again the rival manufacturers in Rhode Island are exceedingly anxious that the Fall River Mills should stop as it would give them a chance to drive business."

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE PARTHENON.

Those interested in ancient historical relics will be sorry to learn that the Parthenon at Athens is being shockingly wrecked and ruined. Tourists every season visit it, knock off limbs of statues, pull down portions of the frieze which Lord Elgin left, and, clambering up with hammer or stone, break off bits of the Doric capitals. These capitals, it will be remembered, are painted with rows of leaves, which are supposed to be bent double under the weight of the architrave, and relic-hunters seem to be especially fond of chipping this portion of the masonry. Not a fortnight ago a tourist knocked off the finger of one of the statues, as he wished to add to his private collection of curiosities at New York. The Greeks have determined to protect the building as much as possible, and to store up in a safe place the most interesting and valuable of the fragments of sculpture which lie all over the place, exposed to the rude winds, "and men more savage still than they." They have almost completed a museum at the back of the Acropolis, but the work has come to a standstill for lack of money. This fact has only to become known among artists and art-lovers in this country, and doubtless immediate steps will be taken to preserve that noblest remnant of Greece in her glory—the Parthenon.—Athenæum.

DID NOT CARE FOR UMBRELLAS.

Umbrellas, such a necessary convenience in our day, were, even in the beginning of the present century, but little used in England, or, indeed, in any part of Europe unless by invalids or very fine ladies. And they did not carry an umbrella in the street as we do; but one was kept hanging in the hall of stylish mansions, and held by a servant over visitors as they passed to and from their carriages. It was deemed very effeminate in a man or boy to shirk a wetting; and so it was no wonder that an old soldier like Lord Cornwallis should have had his ire aroused by the offer of an umbrella. He had been dining with a friend, and when about to enter his carriage to return home, stopped a few moments to converse with his host.

As it was raining in torrents, a servant in attendance attempted to hold the house umbrella over his Lordship's head, but the old soldier exclaimed, wrathfully, "Take that thing away! Do you suppose I am a sugar doll, to melt in a shower? or do you take me for a woman who is afraid of her fine head-gear? I have not been all these years fighting my country's battles to be frightened now at cold water. A shower of rain is no worse than powder and ball, and I never shirked them." Then, baring his head to the pelting rain, the nobleman walked deliberately to his carriage. The gallant old Duke of Wellington, the hero of Waterloo and many other battles, had the same opinion of umbrellas. During the Spanish war, in an action near Bayonne, in 1813, the Grenadiers, under Col. Tyngling, occupied an unfinished redoubt near the high road.

Lord Wellington, mounted on his veteran charger, rode past the redoubt, scanning with critical eye the disposition of the troops, and evidently as unmindful of the heavy rain that was pelting him over the head and shoulders as he was of powder and ball when facing an enemy whom he always meant, and rarely failed, to subdue. You may imagine, then, the indignation of the sturdy old chieftain at seeing the officers of a certain regiment protecting themselves, even under fire, from the torrents of rain, by huddling together under umbrellas. This was more than the equanimity of the "Iron Duke" could endure, and he instantly, after reaching his quarters, dispatched Lord Hill with the message: "Lord Wellington does not approve of the use of umbrellas by soldiers, and especially under fire, nor can he permit gentlemen's sons to make themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the Army."—St. Nicholas.

THE DEMON OF THE HEARTH RUG.

In their own families boys, before they attain to the dignity of breeches and short-cut hair, are not much worse than girls, the chief difference between the two being that boys roar more vociferously, and girls whine and wail more continuously. When they arrive at the period immediately preceding the school age, boys begin to be distinguished by specially unpleasant habits. They tease their sisters and lead their younger brothers into mischief; they defy the nurse, and express to the governess a lordly contempt for "only a woman." Even their mother is occasionally reminded of the inferiority of her sex. They have all the acuteness and memory of a first-class detective without his discretion. They see, hear, and repeat unpleasant things, to the utter ruin of all harmony. They annoy the women servants with all sorts of monkey tricks, and worry the male domestics—if there are any—by incessant requests for aid in carrying out their pastimes. Either John is called upon to mend a boat when he is cleaning the plate or James is harrassed when he wants to spend a leisure hour at skittles and beer, with errands about a bat. The father finds that Master Jacky's favorite amusement is to stalk about the house in the parental hunting-boots, while, as an occasional relaxation, he tries the temper of the razors on a new hair-brush. If fond of drawing, matters are even worse, for Master Jacky does not scruple to improve himself by delineating cats, dogs, horses, and houses on his parent's stationery, or even on unanswered letters. If an active high-spirited boy, he is for ever breaking the hall lamp with his india-rubber ball, or smashing the hall windows in his early attempts at cricket. If of a military turn, he persuades the gardener to make him a bow and some arrows, with which he, if the day is fine, tries his skill on the poultry, or if confined to the house by rain, on such family portraits as he may happen to dislike. In short, he appears to be never happy unless making himself disagreeable, and though frequently destroying things, including his own clothes, and hurting other people, he somehow seldom inflicts any injury on himself. His father is the only person of whom he stands in awe; but his father has neither time nor inclination to keep him in order. The boy is essentially a radical; indeed he is worse—he is a socialist. All order is abhorrent to him; no property is sacred in his eyes; he recognises no one as his superior, and therefore is guiltless of respect. Every one in authority is his natural enemy, and he has no delight equal to that derived from breaking laws and regulations as well as any material object.—The World.

THE INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

A correspondent of the St. John Telegraph, who has recently passed over the line of the Intercolonial Railway, from Metapedia to Moncton, has furnished the following account of the exact state of the road: The work upon the unfinished part of the entire line is progressing very rapidly, and the whole of the track will be laid this year. From Riviere du Loup the line has been running for some months to St. Flavie—a distance of about 85 miles. From that point the track has been laid this summer, and has now nearly reached the forks of the Metapedia, a distance of 60 miles. It is now being laid at the rate of about five miles a week, and at present there are about 35 miles to lay to reach Mill Stream, the lowest crossing of the Metapedia River.

There are three large bridges across the Metapedia—two are completed, and the third, at Mill Stream, will be finished next month. The track to it will be laid by the middle of September. The track is laid up to Mill Stream from this side, and from that point it is finished all the way to the bridge across the northwest arm of the Miramichi. The connection was completed about seven o'clock on Friday evening last, near Bathurst. The track is also laid from Moncton to the bridge across the southwest Miramichi, and less than a mile has to be laid to complete the entire line from Moncton to Mill Stream on the Metapedia. The southwest bridge is completed, and is now having the track stringers put on. The iron work at the northwest is being erected, and there is no reason to doubt that this bridge, which will be the best piece of work to be finished, will be carrying trains by the middle of October. By that date, a continuous railway of the standard continental gauge of 4ft. 8½ in. will be in existence from Halifax and St. John, extending to Sarnia and Windsor on the Western frontier, and reaching also Quebec, Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto, &c.

The work of ballasting is being pushed forward with great energy. Ten ballast pits are now being worked between St. Flavie and Moncton. Twenty-four engines and four hundred and fifty cars are employed in the operation, which will give some idea of the amount of work that is now being done. The line from Moncton to Campbellton will have a large lift of ballast throughout the entire length by the end of October, by which date the road will be ready for the running of the regular trains. It will, however, take three months next year fully to complete the ballasting of this section.

The necessary station buildings are in progress, and will be ready by the middle of October, as well as all the sidings that will be required.

At Newcastle the station buildings are all completed, including a twelve-stalled engine-house of brick with an iron roof.

At Campbellton the station buildings will be completed in about six weeks. There is an engine-house there similar to the one at Newcastle. There are also similar engine-houses at St. Flavie and Riviere du Loup, both of which are completed.

It is doubtful if the ballasting will be so forward at the end of this season between St. Flavie and Campbellton owing to the scarcity of gravel pits. The opening of that part of the line will depend upon the amount of ballasting that can be completed.

But the line from Moncton to Campbellton will certainly be opened for traffic about the 1st of November next. No doubt is entertained that this will be done.

The bridging upon the entire line is very heavy. The two branches of the Mirimichi and the Restigouche are crossed by seventeen spans of two hundred feet each. The whole work on these rivers is of the most solid character and has been very difficult and costly. The whole of the work throughout the line is heavy, and will average considerably more work per mile than any other railway in Canada. All the masonry is of the very best character, and the bridges of iron. The rails, as our readers know, are all of steel. The rolling stock and station buildings are ample for a considerable traffic. It is, beyond question, the best built railway upon the continent of America, and its cost, when finished, will be about £8,500 sterling, or $42,000, a mile.

CITY NEWS.

— A fire broke out last night at the corner of Colborne and Ottawa streets. The alarm was given from box 78 and the fire extinguished without any damage being occasioned.

—Thomas Thomas, who was slightly the worse of liquor, fell from the revetment wall yesterday afternoon on the railway track. The Water Police took him to the Hospital.

—Another charge, making this the thirteenth, has been lodged against Steinhart for larceny, and he will have to answer at the special sessions in September next.

—Two men employed on the wharves, whilst unloading one of Allan's vessels last evening, were slightly injured by a piece of pig iron falling on them. One of them had to have a finger amputated.

—Last night two Frenchmen had a fight in White's Lane, Vitre street, one of them getting decidedly the worst as he was left senseless. He was taken to the Hospital and his antagonist to prison.

— A man named Alexander Lavoie was severely injured yesterday by falling from his cart in Cote des Neiges street, one of the wheels passing over his body. He was attended by Dr. Proulx, who states he has received severe internal injuries.

— The Cote de St. Louis fire brigade held their annual pic-nic to the Back River yesterday. The firemen, with their families and friends, numbered over 100 persons. They were driven in express waggons, headed by the Independent Brass Band, returning to St. Louis about half-past 8, all well pleased with their excursion.

— An American conjuror, calling himself "Hermann," through offering presents to all buying tickets, got a large audience to come to the Mechanics' Hall last night. After going through a series of what he called legerdemain feats, and dismissing the audience without giving the promised presents, a complaint was lodged against him and he was arrested by the police.

— Two hundred and eighteen Scotch and English emigrants, ex steamship "Polynesian," arrived here from Quebec last night at 10:30 o'clock. Mr. Daly and his assistants paid them every attention and forwarded them at 12 o'clock to their destination. A dozen Mennonites arrived at the same time for Manitoba; this is the last batch this season from Russia.

— Last evening, some people living in Quinn's block, Juror street, began to remove their effects without the consent of the landlord, Daniel Puttocks. He, it is alleged, was drunk at the time, and, with the help of two laborers named Burns and Elsey, barricaded the street with poles, and would allow no one to pass in or out of the house in question. High words arose, which would speedily have been followed by a faction fight had not a body of police from the Juror street station arrived, and put the chief actors in "durance vile." Puttocks' excuse for his riotous conduct is that the parties are indebted to him in a considerable sum for rent, and were moving themselves and goods to avoid a seizure of either for distress.

DE BAR'S OPERA HOUSE.—The Royal Yeddo Troupe of Japanese appeared last evening at this house for the first time, and was greeted with an audience that filled the theatre from stage to dome. The troupe is not large, but very select, each person in it accomplishing really marvellous feats. The balancing and juggling acts by Gangero exceed in dexterity and skill anything we have before seen with Orientals. Que Taro, on the slide rope, is not outdone by the celebrated King Sabro, and his box balancing would lead one to think he had no bones in his body. The contortion acts by Tomey and Kuhne, the screen balancing, ball juggling, bamboo pole and other strange acts, although not new, were loudly and deservedly applauded. The interest never flagged throughout the performance, and the densely packed audience seemed as charmed with the entertainment as on the first appearance of the Japanese some years ago. The stock company commenced the entertainment with a comedietta.

THE O'CONNELL CENTENNIAL AND IRISH PROTESTANTS.

Relative to a complaint that the O'Connell celebration in this city was to be monopolised by Irish Roman Catholics, the Secretary, Mr. Cross, writes:

"It was never the intention of the Committee to exclude Irish Protestants from participating in the celebration; they have excluded themselves by remaining aloof from every meeting called since the Committee took the affair in hands. Three public meetings were called inviting all, irrespective of creed, desirous of doing honor to the memory of O'Connell, to attend. I would ask "Irish Protestant" how many of his creed were present at those meetings? If any were present they remained silent, for at none of these meetings did any one of the speakers claim to be an Irish Protestant, save and except Mr. Gough at that in the Mechanics' Hall. Again, over three hundred circulars were addressed to Protestants and Catholics alike, inviting them to assist at a public meeting in Perry's Hall, to make preparations to celebrate the Centennial Anniversary of O'Connell's birthday. How many Irish Protestants attended or replied to the circular? Not a single one attended, and only two replied, and of the latter one declined. Therefore, if the names of Irish Protestants are omitted from the programme and no place given them in the procession, they themselves, not the committee, are to blame."

MEETING IN FAVOR OF PROTECTION.

A meeting was held on Friday last at Mr. Charles Tourville's, St. Catherine street, to take into consideration the present commercial situation of the Dominion. About 150 persons were present. Mr. Charles Tourville was elected President, Mr. Alphonse Lapierre acting as Secretary.

The Chairman explained the objects of the meeting, and called upon Mr. L. A. Jette, M.P., to address the assembly.

Mr. Jette delivered a very energetic speech in favor of a trade protection act, stating he had always been in favor of it, and to-day more than ever. Three-fourths of the members of the House of Commons, among whom were Sir John A. Macdonald, Mr. Holton, Messrs. Cameron, Cartwright and many others, were in favor of free trade, which stood in our way to procure protection. He stated that, as a lawyer, he was not competent to judge of the benefits which would accrue to commerce from a protection policy, but would always be glad to lend all his influence and energies to the cause of trade protection.

Mr. Boivin showed by irrefutable arguments the advantages to be derived from a protective policy, and considered it the duty of all to assist in its realization.

Mr. Alphonse Lapierre and Mr. Chas. Tourville having addressed a few words of encouragement, the following resolutions were passed:

Proposed by G. Boivin, seconded by Chas. Galipeau:

"That Canadian industry is actually in a deplorable state, the Canadian manufacturers having to dismiss their hands and suspend their operations.

"That the Canadian manufacturers are threatened with a considerable importation of American manufactures, and cannot resist this invasion whilst laboring under the unequal conditions now crushing them.

"That the Canadian manufacturers require a protective tariff to be able to compete in the Canadian market upon an equal footing with the American manufacturers."

Proposed by A. Contant, seconded by H. Carretier:

"That the Federal Government would act justly if they imposed upon American manufacturers an import duty high enough to protect Canadian industry."

Proposed by L. A. Roy, seconded by J. Anger:

"That the Federal Government ought even (and by so doing would act properly) to raise the import duty on American manufactures to a standard equal to the import duty charged by the Government of the United States."

Proposed by M. C. Pepin, seconded by N. Lachapelle:

"That an import duty equal to that of the United States, on the same articles as those manufactured here, would protect Canadian industry, provide work for a large number of people now completely destitute, contribute to the development of the country, prevent emigration, induce our countrymen who have emigrated to return to this country, encourage a sound immigration, &c."

Proposed by J. A. T. Craig, seconded by M. Noel:

"That the representative of Montreal East in the House of Commons be solicited to head the agitation by the manufacturers and workmen to obtain the protective tariff which our Canadian industry requires."

MONTREAL WEST CONTESTATION.

SEVENTH DAY—MONDAY.

James Coghlan, manager to Mr. T. S. Brown, assignee—Had known Joseph McKenzie for 20 years; would not consider him a person whose word is worthy of credit under oath: Mr. Brown had not employed McKenzie more than twice as watchman, except when others were present; he was discharged for inattention and dishonesty and had paid him for his services; had heard that he was making some pretence to sue for his services as watchman on the Miller estate; he had been paid about $15 or $18, perhaps $20, for about 20 or 25, perhaps 30 days' services; the creditors did not kick up any row about one man being upstairs, and another time they were annoyed at the sort of man the assignee had placed there, namely, McKenzie.

Mr. J. S. Honey, Joint Prothonotary of the Superior Court, produced the poll books of the election of Messrs. Stevenson and Fred. Mackenzie.

Mr. Kerr objected to their production.—Objection maintained.

Joseph McKenzie re-called.

Q. Were you not sworn by the Returning Officer of a poll on the occasion of the election between Stevenson and Mackenzie, in connection with which it has been stated by witnesses for the respondent that you received $5 as an inducement to vote?

Mr. Kerr objected, and the question was overruled by the Court.

Chas. Forteaux, organ-builder—Know Owen Kinnear, or Kenna. Would not believe him under oath for the reason that two-thirds of his time he was under the influence of liquor. Had known him 18 or 20 months. Knew nothing personal against him, but did not consider that a person frequently intoxicated was worthy of credit. Had no knowledge of his swearing falsely.

Samuel C. Stevenson, Secretary of the Council of Arts—Visited Mr. White during the Mackenzie-White election; assisted his agent, Mr. McCord, at the committee rooms in Craig street; knew John Bolton; he came to the agent in a frank, open manner, stated that he was a Conservative and desired to assist in the election; he was appointed to keep the committee rooms clean and the fires going, and have a general charge of the premises; he was occasionally sent on messages, but had nothing to do with canvassing; Mr. Bolton's account produced and fyled, witness considered as reasonable; when Bolton was engaged he was given to understand that he would not be paid for his services; he was engaged for about six or eight weeks regularly; after the campaign he complained that his business was bad, that he had done a good deal of work, and after consulting Mr. McCord, it was decided to pay him. So far as witness could judge, every effort was made to secure an honest election.

By Mr. Kerr, Q.C.—Bolton came to us in a very open-hearted manner, said he was a Conservative, and asked to have the care of our rooms; the paying of his bill was entirely an afterthought and quite disinterested on both sides, for he was given distinctly to understand he would not be paid; he was engaged two hours a day.

Mr. D. R. McCord, advocate, knew Mr. Michael Harrington, a witness in this case; wrote him a letter simply asking him to call and see witness; received a reply, and remember destroying it immediately; its purport was that, for some cause, he did not intend doing anything for Mr. White; I believe he stated that he had no time; I gave no canvassing book to him or anybody, or allowed any one to do anything without distinctly making them understand that the election was to be gained purely or lost purely; there was no step we could think of for the purpose of securing a pure election that was not taken.

Alphonse Constantineau, printer: Know Edward Derousseau, a witness in this case; he lives in a room in the house of witness' brother-in-law, and is a kind of idiot; would not believe his statement under oath.

By Mr. Kerr: I work in the Gazette; Derousseau did at one time work for the Corporation, but cannot work now; he is a married man, and now subsists by begging; witness' only reason for disbelieving Derousseau's statements was, that he was inclined to be insane; two or three of his brothers were similarly afflicted.

William H. Hall, blacksmith, who appeared to be very deaf indeed, said he knew Stephen Quinn; saw him last Wednesday outside the Court-room in conversation with McKenzie; McKenzie said "it was a shame for the lawyers to rake up in the Court his old troubles in the manner that they had done after he had voted for Mr. White, and that when he entered the witness box again he would make the —— sweat for it."

By Mr. Kerr, Q.C.: Was standing outside in the passage; when he came out witness asked McKenzie how he was after his fall at Coghlan's, and he thanked witness for saving his life; they then commenced to talk about the election, and witness took down his words while speaking, especially as he said he was to be placed in the witness box again the next day, when he would give evidence that would puzzle the lawyers.

The envelope on which the notes were taken was, by request, produced by the witness and read as follows:

Q. How are you after your fall?
A. I am none the worse; you saved my life.
Q. You had a hard time of it yesterday.
A. Yes, it was a —— shame of them to fetch up old troubles, and it will go hard with the lawyers who put at me so much; I will make them sorry for it.
Q. Did you get any promise from Armstrong?
A. No, nor anything like one.
Q. You don't mean to say that you will swear falsely?
A. No, but I will swear in such a way that they will lose; —— them for mean —— of lawyers. They were conversing on the subject for about 10 minutes, not longer; witness said he could report very quickly when he was acquainted with the voice and manner of a speaker; was accustomed to McKenzie; the conversation lasted 10 minutes, not longer; the next day witness acquainted some of Mr. White's friends of the result of the interview.

Mr. C. W. Woodford—Saw the witness, Lafontaine, the other day in the witness box; did not take him to the poll at the last election; saw him at the Canning Street Poll; witness went in alone; Lafontaine followed, and was left there; did not speak to him; spoke to him about 10 months before; he was then not directly in witness' employ, but in that of the Montreal Rolling Mills Company; the works had been closed about two months and were then opened under new management from the States; witness was engaged to regulate the rate of wages, which were about to be lowered.

Q. Did anything occur that would render it unlikely for you to converse with him again?
A. I think there was. He was a labourer—a man whom we cared nothing for; I was conversing with skilled labour at the time; I was speaking to a heater, and Lafortune said their wages was none of my business; I fetched a policeman and he in company with others was ordered to leave the yard; at the last election I left him alone in the poll; went to several other polls and returned to town; he was not in my sleigh that day; I did no canvassing, nor did I vote; I went to my poll, St. Antoine street, and waited till my name was produced and then stated that I did not intend to vote because I was an alien; it is customary for me to do this at every election; have done so for the last four years.

It being 5 p.m. the Court adjourned until Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETIES.—The statement, just received, of affairs of Canadian building societies and loan companies for last year, is interesting in a variety of ways and would be more so did it include the entire Dominion. The Act 37 Vic., cap. 50, requiring the statement, extends to Ontario only, though some returns from Quebec are given. The total liabilities of these societies doing business in Ontario, amounted to $14,082,380, of these the sum of $6,917,407 was for stock; $1,209,856 reserved fund, and $4,335,674 which formed the principal part of the liabilities to the public. Chief among the assets were "loans secured on real estate," $13,161,277, and loans to shareholders, $213,360. The preceding figures refer solely to Ontario, in which the value of property held by mortgage in security for loans by those semi-banking establishments, amounted to the enormous sum of $33,654,157.

The oldest and strongest of these institutions is the "Canada Permanent Loan and Savings' Company," of Toronto, whose establishment dates back from 1855. Its capital stock amounted to $1,500,000; it held mortgages on real estate valued at $12,000,000, and paid 11½ per cent. annual dividend. The next in seniority is the "Compagnie de Pret et Credit Foncier," of this city, established in 1857 with a subscribed capital of $1,058,600, but an actual capital stock of $398,450. Its loans secured upon real estate amounted to $712,924. The yearly dividend paid was 9 per cent., with 3 per cent. bonus.

The youngest of the thirty-three Societies from which returns are given, is "The Credit Foncier du Bas-Canada," of this city, established in 1874, with a subscribed stock of $896,500. On account of the short period in which the Society has been in operation, its transactions have been but small, although the amount loaned during the year is given at $219,880, and the dividend paid, 8 per cent., which appears large for a new company, though possibly warranted by the business. Indeed, all the Societies paid large dividends, none being smaller than 8 per cent, and the majority upward of 9 per cent. The interest allowed for money borrowed, varied from 5½ to 7 per cent.

PUBLIC SCAVENGING.—The "Public Health Magazine" for this month, contains a paper by Mr. George A. Drummond, read before the Citizens' Public Health Association, on public scavenging, which is deserving of general attention. It is stated as a "remarkable fact" that no system of public scavenging ever existed in this city; that the Board of Health, when applied to, grant relief in extreme cases, leaving the duty to devolve generally upon individual householders of removing refuse matter which cannot be pressed into the sewers. In this way the work is but partially done, and can be done as it ought to be only by the city authorities. Hence, it is proposed that a new civic department be organized, the management to be in the hands of a permanent officer of ability and experience, by whom all subordinates should be controlled. The expense of the department should, in the meantime, be a charge upon the ordinary revenue of the city, but be ultimately met by special assessment. The staff and plant would comprise two clerks, four division superintendents, one hundred street scavengers, fifty-three large carts, fifty-five heavy draught horses, and all necessary tools and apparatus. The refuse matter collected would be taken to three or four depots outside of the city, from which farmers and market-gardeners could get it for little or nothing at first, though it would, in time, become a source of considerable revenue. The service would have to be conducted with regularity in order that the dwellers in each street could have the refuse placed in a convenient spot, failure to attend to which to be punished by fine. The concluding words are: "Whatever may be thought of the details, let this Association lay down in unmistakable terms that nothing short of an efficient plan for securing the removal of all offal at short intervals from every door in the city will be accepted, and let its influence be used to convince the public that however costly such a scheme may be, it can be demonstrated that it may be carried out at a smaller outlay by the city than is now entailed on individuals, and further, that the decency and improved sanitary conditions to be secured by this and in no other way, are not to be measured by money." His Worship the Mayor considered the amount now paid by the citizens for scavenging as altogether inadequate, being, this year, only 10 cents per head, while in Baltimore the per capita rate was $1.80. The four thousand dollars to be paid this year for cleaning the streets—"work that would require 150 horses and men for a considerable portion of the year," was, in the opinion of the Mayor, scarcely enough to buy hay and oats for the horses. The Mayor estimated that the public scavenging, including lanes and yards, as proposed by Mr. Drummond, could be accomplished for $50,000 per annum, or about 30 cents a head. This amount, he said, is believed to be less than is "paid by individual citizens for cleaning at long intervals;" or, in other words, it would cost less money to have the highly necessary work thoroughly done, than is now paid for its very imperfect execution.

Alderman McCord touched the core of the subject when he said "if we wanted a healthy city the Board of Health must have more money to work with, and if the Corporation could not give it we must be content to have a special tax levied for that purpose." The Committee of which he was Chairman, was he said willing to undertake the system of public scavenging; and if it cost no more than the sum mentioned by Mayor Hingston, no time should be lost in having it thoroughly tested. With the public scavenging supplemented by a system of general filtration of the water made use of by the citizens, the prospect of Montreal becoming both a cleanly and healthy city would be very materially enhanced.

IMPORTANT INSURANCE CASE.—We have received from the Secretary of the Board of Trade certain documents relating to the case of Wyld & Darling vs. the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Company. From a narrative given of the case it appears that on the 9th of August, 1871, the plaintiffs, merchants in Hamilton, applied to the local agent of the defendants to insure the goods in their store. The agent agreed to do so, giving the usual interim receipt. Next day the plaintiffs notified the agent that they had added two flats to their premises and moved a portion of their goods into them. The agent required an additional premium, on account of the additional risk thus occasioned, and the plaintiffs agreed to the request. The head office in Montreal was notified of all this by their agent, the increased premium fixed and paid on the 23rd of September, and the policy issued bearing date the 9th of August, with the following written across its face:—"N. B. There is an opening in east end gable of above, through which communication is had with the adjoining house, which is occupied by one O. as a coal oil store, &c." Some time after, the goods were destroyed by fire, when the company refused to pay for the goods destroyed on the two flats. The plaintiffs sued for damages and recovered a verdict against the Company, in the fall assizes of 1872. On appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench a rule for a new trial was granted on the ground that the policy, as issued, was held not to cover the goods in the two flats. In delivering his judgment Judge Wilson held that when the plaintiffs paid the additional rate on the 23d of September, they had every reason to believe they were paying on the amended application. The defence he declared to be "unfair and impolitic." In Chancery, a decree to reform the policy was given against the defendants, the Vice-Chancellor regarding the Company as bound by the act of their agent, Mr. Hooper, who personally surveyed the premises and accepted the risk for the Company.

The responsibility of companies for the acts of their agents is the highly important matter in dispute. Mr. Hooper's evidence that he, as agent, thought the receipt and policy covered the stock in both buildings, and so intended that they should bind the company, leaves the latter little, if any, excuse for resisting payment of the goods destroyed. The grounds taken by the defendants that they did not understand the matter as the agent did, are untenable in view of their having received and accepted the money paid by the plaintiffs for the increased risk. It is obvious that the agent did not at first explain the matter clearly to the head office, or the Manager would never have risked the reputation of the Company, by resisting a claim which appears to be indisputable. At immense expense, the Company have been engaged in litigation for over three years, with a prospect of continuation, whilst the decisions of the Courts have so far been the reverse of encouraging to the defendants. The loss in law costs is, however, the smallest loss the Company must sustain by continuing to resist the payment of a claim for which they are bound apparently in law and certainly in equity. Their action has received the condemnation of the Toronto Board of Trade, and the Board of Trade of Hamilton, who assert that they "regard it as at once the duty and the right of this and other Boards of Trade, to protest against any such interpretation of the law, and to discountenance in every legitimate way any insurance company which shows a disposition to put such a construction on their contracts with the insuring public." The character of the Company, an old, wealthy, and respectable one, may be ruinously affected by a stubborn persistence in the course adopted in this case which, if for no weightier reasons, the shareholders would, in our opinion, act wisely in ordering to be settled. The plaintiffs may be injured and time spent by a longer prosecution of the affair, but costs will be superadded without any prospect, that we can foresee, of ultimate success for the Company in their efforts to get rid of an obligation voluntarily entered into by their duly authorized agent.

"THE MANITOBA SENSATION."—The above title has been applied to Chief Justice Wood's famous charge to a Winnipeg Grand Jury—a charge in which he touched upon matters which evoked the thunders of certain Government organs against him. He had the temerity to draw the attention of the jury to the fact that, in his opinion, the Government had made a grand mistake in the location of the Pacific Railway so as to have the line run across the Narrows, north of Lake Manitoba, instead of keeping more southerly in the vicinity of Winnipeg. "Looking," said he, "at the map of the North-west, and assuming that the trunk of the Saskatchewan River is fit for cultivation, and that its branches are navigable, and that the produce of that vast region, settled and developed, will be drained by this great stream and its tributaries into Lake Winnipeg, and thence by a railway tapping the southern end of that lake, eastward into Lake Superior, one can understand the line selected for the Pacific railway. But the conclusion rests upon the assumption of premises which are controverted by every one who professes thoroughly to know from actual experience and personal observation, during all seasons of the year, the whole country lying between Lake Winnipeg and the Rocky Mountains." This was equivalent to saying the Saskatchewan country is not generally fit for cultivation, that the river's branches are not navigable and that the vast country lying between Lake Winnipeg and the Rocky Mountains will never be likely to produce enough to supply sufficient traffic for a railway. Thus the learned Judge, not content with decrying the Government for lack of judgment in the selection of the railway route, went a great step farther in publishing to the world, the poor opinion entertained by him, the Chief Justice of Manitoba, of our entire Northwest territory, excepting a portion of Manitoba. The only way in which we can account for the Judge entertaining views so much at variance with the generally accepted opinion of that country, is that he may have been studying the evidence given by Sir John Richardson and others before a committee of the House of Commons, some eighteen years ago. Since then, he should bear in mind, there has been a very great change in the public estimation of the value of the Northwest country. It has been explored by surveyors for a railway route and by travellers; and unless the reports were favorable, the Government would not expend a million on a telegraph line across it, send mounted police to protect the inhabitants, and erect buildings for the new Government at Fort Pelly. But however erroneous his opinions may be, his words may just now serve a good purpose in checking, for a time, to great an influx of immigrants at a period when Manitoba is in a state of want, owing to the ravages of the grasshoppers. Whilst the Federal Government are showing wisdom in gradually stopping the immigration from being now forced upon this country, the words of the Chief Justice of Manitoba combined with the stories of distress which come from the Northwest, will have the effect of preventing intelligent settlers from proceeding to "the great lone land" until the prospect brightens.

The real "Manitoba sensation," felt throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion, has its foundation in the tales of distress which come from all parts of the prairie Province, many of whose inhabitants are menaced with famine, during the approaching winter. The Globe of Toronto, usually possessed of a good knowledge of the affairs of Manitoba, recently made an appeal to the charitable feelings of the community, in behalf of the sufferers, arguing that assistance given in the way of voluntary contributions, could be more promptly and readily distributed than Government aid. That this view of the subject is correct, we have no reason to doubt; but may not all the aid that can be procured from both public and private sources be required? Whatever should be done must be accomplished speedily. But three months remain during which breadstuffs for the winter's supply and seed for next spring can be sent in. After the beginning of November there will be six months during which Manitoba may be said to be excluded from the rest of the world, save whatever little communication there may be kept up with the American outposts, by sleighs or carts. Therefore, whatever is needed by those who remain, or have not the means of getting away, must be attended to with the least possible delay, the Government taking the lead by pushing forward works that have to be done, so as to furnish employment to as many as possible. In connection with this, the recruits for the Mounted Police Force should be drawn from Manitoba instead of from the older Provinces, and surveying parties should be filled up from the distressed population. No doubt, these matters have already occupied the attention of our authorities, who will surely not hesitate to take the steps necessary to ascertain the exact amount of help there will be needed, to prevent extreme suffering during the long, arctic winter which is impending. So soon as an accurate estimate of the quantity of flour and seed grain required, can be arrived at, the public will, notwithstanding the dull times, cheerfully do all in their power to alleviate the distress of the inhabitants of the sister Province.

The weather cleared up last night and today is clear and cool; no rain has fallen in this section for the past twenty-four hours, and the indications now are that we shall have a dry spell. The river here has risen two feet since last night, and is about thirty feet above the low water mark. No serious damage has been done so far. A considerable rise in all the river streams is still to come down, however, and the probabilities are that a good deal of the low land on the Illinois shore opposite here, and between here and Cairo, will be flooded. A disastrous freshet, however, is not looked for.

NEW YORK, August 3.

Information was received yesterday from an intimate friend of Duncan, Sherman & Co. that arrangements are in progress to pay all those creditors who are travelling abroad with letters of credit and circular notes for which they have paid cash, and who have been unable to sell since the failure of the firm. Alexander Duncan, father of William Butler Duncan, has offered to guarantee these credits if the Union Bank or some other institution in London will undertake payments, and it is believed that arrangements for that purpose will be consummated to-day. Mr. Duncan stated yesterday that his objection to firms going into bankruptcy through the U. S. Court, instead of placing its affairs in the hands of an assignee, was that the former course would have locked-up not only all assets of the firm, without opportunity of manipulating them to the best advantage of all interested parties, but also a large amount of deposits that are held by the firm for safe-keeping, and which can now be obtained by owners simply proving property.

The Presse says:—"According to intelligence received from the camp of the Herzegovian insurgents, a number of engagements have been fought between the Turkish troops and insurgents during the last three days—first along the left bank of the river Nareilta, and subsequently at Kupa, St. Olatz, Nevesigne and Drenarace. The Turks are reported to have lost three cannon and eighty rifles. Poporalje is also risen. Seven hundred insurgents intend occupying the road to Trebeigne. The insurgents expect the inhabitants of Suma and the population of the frontier of Montenegro to join them in a couple of days, and that they will thus be enabled to besiege Trebeigne."

Hon. Mr. Letellier, Minister of Agriculture, is going to Manitoba. He is desirous of ascertaining the exact condition of the Mennonite settlement, and how far the Government will be under the necessity of relieving their wants during the winter.

Baron Von Schloesster, the German Minister to the United States, sailed from Hamburg on Saturday for New York. The German Federal Rifle Meeting has opened at Munich. Marksmen from the United States, Russia, Austria and Switzerland will take part in the contest.

Official despatches report that Gen. Martinez Campos continues to cannonade the citadel of Leo de Urgel. The Carlist Generals Saballo and Dorregaray have attempted to descend into the plains before Barcelona, but were met by the Alfonsist forces, under Gen. Weiler, and retreated to the mountains.

The Earl of Desart, of Killeny, a Liberal, denounces the O'Connell celebration as sectarian. The Fenian Amnesty Association of Dublin will parade on the occasion in mourning. Trouble is feared if Lord O'Hagan delivers an oration. The Irish Conservatives shun the movement. The indications are that Thursday will not pass without disturbance.

CANDID.

The Herald says:

"Election times, and particularly the exposes of such times which are occasionally made before the courts, bring strange things to light—matters which, indeed, were they not established by two or more witnesses, would be in no way credited."

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.

The Herald recently claimed that all the Protectionists in Canada were not to be found on the Conservative side, and the Globe has followed with an article claiming that though the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie is a "Free Trader" in name, he does not really favor "Free Trade," pure and simple, for Canada. Next.

A FASHIONABLE RIDDLE.

[N. Y. Times.]

It is a very curious and remarkable circumstance that, notwithstanding the scarcity of young gentlemen at watering places, the toilets of many of the young ladies continue to be so elaborate and costly. "Saratoga trunks" are not only becoming no smaller, but appear, on the contrary, to be growing in size. This affords a triumphant reply to those crabbed and unfair insinuations which we sometimes hear about dressing finely to catch the attention of the beaux. Indeed, we think that, as a general rule, the pains and expense lavished upon the toilet are apt to be in an inverse rather than a direct ratio to the number of the rougher sex present. What all the showy dressing at fashionable summer resorts is for constitutes an enquiry which does not properly come within the range of our present subject, and one to which we should not in any case find it easy to furnish an answer.

CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS.

The following recipe is sent by a subscriber, with an earnest desire for its publication:

"This recipe is taken from eminent and undisputed authority, and it is said to have cured, by the blessing of God, the talented father of one of our noted ministers of the Gospel: Sulphate of iron, 5 grains; magnesia, 10 grains; peppermint water, 11 drachms; spirits of nutmeg, 1 drachm. This amount is to be taken twice a day, and continued regularly for from five to nine months."

The above is the celebrated recipe of the father of the Rev. Newman Hall, which that excellent man believed saved him—in connection with repentance and prayer—from confirmed habits of intemperance.—N. Y. Witness.

A MODEL WIFE.

Fashion does not at this moment encourage feminine activity, high heels and tight skirts being unfavorable to rapid motion. They might, indeed, be trusted to paralyse the activity of a lady whose biography—contributed by her husband—is published in the Ballarat Star, should she condescend to wear them, which we doubt. Meantime Mr. Wilson, of the Telegraph Hotel, Ballarat, informs the public that three months after his marriage he and his partner "shifted" that establishment "50 yards at a cost of £130." This was a good beginning. "Mrs. Wilson then took to bacon curing," killing the pigs herself, "the most she ever killed in one day" being "fourteen, from nine o'clock in the morning till five o'clock in the afternoon." "Twelve months back," says Mr. Wilson, "she shingled the house all over, shifted the stable, fowl-house and butcher's shop, at a cost of £28. Then she went to the garden and made it larger. . . . She keeps no servant, there's only two of us; she makes all her own dresses; she knits the stockings and makes my shirts. She is first-class at cooking and household work of any description, washing and ironing too. She is 55 years of age, and I think her equal is not in Victoria." Considering that this fortunate husband boasts, in conclusion, that Mrs. Wilson "milks her own cows, makes her own butter, bakes her own bread, and if anything is ailing with her horses, cattle, dog, or self, is her own doctor"—it is pleasant to hear that this industrious housewife has found time to become "one of the best cribbage players in or about Ballarat."

THE HARM THE INNOCENT OLD LADY DID.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

She lives down on Baker street, and she has a daughter about eighteen years old. The old lady retains all her simplicity and innocence, and she doesn't go two cents on style. The other evening, when a "splendid catch" called to escort the daughter to the opera, the mother wouldn't take the hint to keep still, and wouldn't help carry out the daughter's idea that they had wealth. While helping her daughter to get ready she asked:

"Mary, are you going to wear the shoes with one heel off, or the pair with holes in 'em?"

Mary didn't seem to hear, and the mother inquired: "Are you going to wear the dollar gold chain and that washed locket, or will you wear the diamond father bought at the hardware store?"

Mary winked at her, and the young man blushed, but the old lady went on: "Are you going to borrow Mrs. Brown's shawl, or will you wear mine?"

Mary bustled around the room, and the mother said: "Be careful of your dress, Mary, you know it's the only one you've got, and you can't have another until the mortgage on this place is lifted."

Mary remarked to her escort that it promised to be a beautiful evening, and as she buttoned her glove her mother asked: "Those are Mrs. Hardy's gloves, ain't they? She's a good neighbor to us, and I don't how you'd manage to go anywhere if she didn't live near us."

Mary was hurrying to get out of the room, when the mother raised her voice once more and asked: "Did you run in to Mrs. Jewett's and borrow her bracelet and fan? Yes, I see you did. Well, now, you look real stylish, and I hope you'll have a good time."

Mary sits by her window in the pale moonlight and sighs for the splendid young man to come and beau her around some more, but he hasn't been seen up that way since that night. The old lady says that he seemed like a nice young man, and she hopes he hasn't been killed by the street cars.

SOUTHERN WOMEN AND MEN.

From a recent letter, written by Miss Constance Fenimore Woolson, while on a trip through the South, to the Cleveland Herald, we quote the following:

You can tell a Southern girl at once. She is rounder than her Northern sisters; indeed, she is never thin or lank; she walks with a languid step, and all her movements are slow and indolent; she is never alert. She has fine soft eyes, with a serene expression, very different from the quick, keen eyes of the North; she has not the beautiful red and white complexion of New York and New England, rather she is sallow, with few rose tints; you might call her cream color. She never looks anxious, no matter what happens; she does not think she can help matters by her advice or interference, but sits back calmly and leaves everything to "Brother," or "Pa," pronouncing the latter word in a way I defy a Northern girl to imitate. The word might be used as a shibboleth; it is not exactly "Pay," but half-way between that and the sound of "a" in "cat."

Our Southern girl dresses picturesquely rather than trimly, and has brighter colors and more floating ends and curls about her than a Northern belle allows. She has pretty, plump hands, but she is not particular about the gloves that cover them—I mean particular compared with Fifth Avenue rules. In short, she is a more voluminous sort of a girl in every way, and cares less about "the fashion." She has one decided advantage over the Northern girls, however, and that is her voice, it is sweeter and lower, a little trainante, perhaps, but essentially gentle and womanly. I cannot speak so highly of the Southern men, the young men of to-day. They do not seem to know exactly what they represent. They have neither the calm certainty of importance possessed by the old time Southerner, nor the bright, active energy and ambition of the young Northerner. They are either swept down, bewildered by the stream, or else, having drifted ashore in some little bay, they sit on the bank, and talk about their ancestors. A younger race is growing up, however, with ideas more adapted to the times.

A REMARKABLE COLLISION.

A CUNARD STEAMER RUNS DOWN AND KILLS A WHALE IN THE IRISH SEA—THE MONSTER TOWED TO LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL, July 20.

The chief topic of conversation in shipping circles to-day is the wonderful story which has come to light of the killing, by the Cunard steamer "Scythia," of an immense whale in the Irish Sea. The collision occurred on Saturday, off Ballycotton, and, although the steamer sustained no injuries except a "bump" and a little rocking, the monster of the deep was instantly killed. When the news reached Liverpool first that the steamer and a whale had been in collision, the story was looked upon as a joke. The captain of the steamer, it was alleged, had mistaken his reckoning, and instead of being in collision with a whale had only struck a buoy off Ballycotton, with which all navigators accustomed to that part of the coast were acquainted. It was useless to appeal to the evidence of passengers on board the steamer, that after the collision the sea was "covered with blood." This was held to be a mere figment—the invention of the fertile brain of some Yankee newspaper correspondent on board the steamer. In fact, the existence of the whale off Ballycotton, and its encounter with the Cunard liner would have led to as much disputation as the reality of the great Sea Serpent, had not the whale been found floating, dead, near the place where the steamer was said to have been in collision with it.

HOW THE COLLISION OCCURRED.

How the great fish got into collision with the steamer is likely to remain a mystery. There are different theories. One is that the whale was taken at an unguarded moment. Not suspecting that it was in the track—or "lanes," as the Cunard captains call them—which the steamers of this line take in crossing to America, the whale was floating peacefully on the billows and asleep, and that its slumbers were rudely interrupted by the propeller of the "Scythia" coming smack against its snout. This is the theory of those who believe that whales sleep. Another theory is that the unfortunate whale, which had been drifted down from northern latitudes by forces which it could not control, on getting near the Irish coast was in a sportive mood, and that, while it was the "Scythia" suddenly came up, and the propeller of the steamer, striking the monster of the deep, brought its gambols to a sudden termination. Whatever may have led to the whale's unhappy end, that it is dead, and, as sportsmen say, "bagged," is beyond doubt, for the carcase of the creature was safely towed into the Mersey, last night, by the tug "British King," commanded by Captain Rooee.

Playing high its buoyant roll and leap,

THE WHALE IN TOW—HIS ARRIVAL IN LIVERPOOL.

On Saturday, the 17th, while between Ballycotton and Roche's Point, the yacht "Kilmany," "picked up" the carcase of the whale. The yacht took the whale in tow for the purpose of taking it to Queenstown. The yacht, with its extraordinary prize, became becalmed. While in this position, the "British King" hove in sight, and, those on board the yacht communicating the position of affairs, it was agreed that the tug should take the yacht and whale in tow to Queenstown. The hawser given by the yacht to the tug was not strong enough for the strain, and after towing a short distance it gave way. The crew on board the tug, however, were determined not to lose the whale, now that it was captured, but resolved to bring it to Liverpool, for the purpose of showing that the encounter between the steamer and the monster was not mythical. Some tackle was lashed round the tail of the whale, the tug's hawser was employed, and ultimately the carcase of the "king of the sea" was towed into Queenstown by the "British King."

The "Scythia," the slayer of the whale, happened to be in the harbor at the time. The carcase of the whale was towed alongside the steamer, and the crew and passengers, on seeing it, gave a hearty cheer. The tug and the whale remained in the harbor until 11 o'clock on Sunday, and during their stay were visited by thousands, who were anxious to see the "great creature that was kilt by the steamer." The "British King," on Sunday morning, set sail for Liverpool with her strange charge in tow. In crossing the Channel the invariable signal was, "Where are you bound for and what have you got in tow?" When the reply was "A whale," the interrogatories were not continued. The "British King" and the whale, which measures fifty-six feet long, reached the Mersey late last night, and took up a position off the Albert wall, to the no small wonderment of those who witnessed the strange arrival. The Mercury announces that the monster will be beached, this afternoon; but, as the "Parthia" sails before the ceremony takes place, I hasten to send you these hurried particulars.

LAWLOR'S PATENT WASHING MACHINE.

Patented at Ottawa, 20th May, 1875, and United States, 13th July, 1875.

A thoroughly practical labor-saving Washing-machine is an article that is required in every family and is a necessity which will be hailed with universal rejoicing, as the requirements for a first-class Washing-machine have never been satisfied.

The principal features of this machine are the ease and rapidity with which it operates, and its adaptability to all kinds of material, from the heaviest to the lightest, doing its work effectually, and without the least injury to the clothes; it requires so little exertion to use it that a child of ten years of age can operate it with the greatest of ease, thus changing the laborious and arduous task of washing to a pleasant pastime. It is not proposed to give a detailed description of the machine here, as it is now on exhibition in this city, and ten minutes' inspection of the machine will yield more satisfaction, and give a better insight into its working than pages of description. The inventor and patentee of this machine proposes to form a Joint Stock Company for the purpose of purchasing the patents and manufacturing the machine; it is estimated that within three months, after the construction of the necessary machinery, the Company would be able to place in the market and find customers for at least 100 machines per week, the profits on which would be such as to make it a most profitable investment. A working model can be seen at LAWLOR'S, 365 NOTRE DAME STREET, Montreal, who has had one in use in his own family for the last three months. 181-law

This celebrated Pharmaceutical preparation exerts a specific effect not only in severe hacking coughs and obstinate bronchial affections, but it is also a palliative of undoubted efficacy in the worst consumptive cases. Children take it with pleasure, and many an attack of what is usually called Croup may be warded off by giving a dose of this Syrup as soon as the first symptoms appear.

Now that Gray's Syrup of Red Spruce Gum has been adopted by so many families throughout the Dominion and United States as their household Cough Remedy, we would respectfully request the public to see that they are not deceived by any of the fraudulent imitations sometimes attempted to be palmed off on them. The Genuine has the name of the inventor (H. R. Gray, Montreal,) blown in the glass. Druggists and General Dealers of good repute throughout the Dominion keep none but the Original and only Genuine.

VIGER CATTLE MARKET.

TUESDAY, August 3.

There was a disposition on the part of butchers to abstain from purchasing, for which there was apparently only one reason—the scarcity of money. The supply of cattle—considering the size of the market—was more than the average and stock holders were willing to accept fair prices. Of beef cows the principal shipment was from St. Thomas, Ontario, brought down by C. Sinclair. They were of fair quality, and numbered 20 head; $3.50 per 100 lbs. live weight was the price asked, but the stock met with a dull inquiry. Several milch cows, with calves a week or ten days old, were sold at $28 to $35; $1.75 to $2 was the price of the calf. The highest price for milch cows was from $45 to $48, but in exceptional cases at the outside price. A few lean hogs—not exceeding a dozen—were sold at from $8 to $10. Spring Lambs were scarce at $2.50 to $3.50, and Sheep from $3.50 to $5.

ST. JOHN, N.B., August 3.

The supposed Carleton prowler, McLaughlan, accused of breaking into a house and attempting an outrage on two young ladies, was tried yesterday in the County Court but the jury failed to agree, standing seven for acquittal and five for conviction. He will be tried again.

A rigger, named Neptane, shot himself fatally in Carleton last night, whether by accident or design is not known.

A brakeman, named McCann, while shunting yesterday on the Intercolonial at Salisbury, had his leg badly crushed, and it had to be amputated above the knee.

FALL RIVER, August 3.

The Stafford and Richard Borden mills are the only two remaining in operation, and they will shut down if requested to by the Board of Manufacturers. How long the mills will remain closed it is impossible to say, for the manufacturers do not know themselves; but one thing that will influence them is, they think it hard that the operatives who are opposed to the strike, and who are willing to work at a reduction, should be locked out. Many storekeepers have given notice that if the help can afford to take a vacation of thirty days they can afford to pay cash for their goods, and that no credit will be given until they get to work.

WASHINGTON, August 3.

A gentleman just returned to the city had a conversation with Andrew Johnson at his house in Tennessee a day or two before his death. Johnson said: "I am winding up my affairs. I wish to be my own executioner. I have had a feeling in my head which makes me fear apoplexy, and a man liable to that never knows how suddenly he may be cut off." He was to have been in Washington this week to look after his money in the hands of the receivers of the first National Bank. He had also nearly perfected arrangements to deliver a speech in Baltimore on the political situation with especial reference to financial affairs and the relations of capital and labor.

BOSTON, August 3.

At the Boston Museum last night a man caused an excitement by standing up in the centre balcony and saying in a clear voice:—"Ladies and Gentlemen,—Before the entertainment commences, I should like to tell you all that unless you change your way of living and follow in the footsteps of Jesus Christ, instead of wasting your lives in theatres, you will all certainly go to Hell." He was put out without a show of resistance and went directly to the Boston Theatre, where he repeated the same language.

Schooner "Lady Ellen," with a cargo of bricks, from Wiscasset for Boston, sunk off half way rock last night. Crew rescued.

CHAMBLY CONTESTED CASE.

THE JUDGMENT.

The Court opened at ten o'clock this morning, when His Honor Judge Beaudry, after reviewing the evidence at some length, delivered the following judgment:

"After having heard the respective parties through their lawyers on the merits of the requete or petition of the said Pierre B. Benoit et al., examined the procedure and listened to evidence on both sides, and having finally maturely deliberated on the whole of it. Considering that at an early election held in the month of December, 1874, in the electoral district of Chambly, in the Province of Quebec, for the purpose of electing a member to represent the said electoral district in the House of Commons of Canada, the said Amable Jodoin, fils, was a candidate as well as Pierre B. Benoit, and that at that election the said respondent, Amable Jodoin, fils, was on the 30th of the said month of December, 1874, declared elected as representative of and member for the said district of Chambly; considering that according to the proof made in this case, it results that this election is tainted with corrupt practices at the hands of the said Amable Jodoin, fils, personally as well as by his agents and partizans, we, judge of the Superior Court, sitting in virtue of an act of the Parliament of Canada, known as "The Federal Contested Election Act of 1874," pronounce the said election to be null and of no effect, with costs against the said Amable Jodoin, and considering that the petitioners desist from that part of their conclusions tending to have it established that Pierre B. Benoit was legally elected at said election, pronounce that portion of the conclusions to be without effect.

(Signed) J. U. BEAUDRY,
J. S. C.

Before rendering the above judgement His Honor read some notes on the evidence. He began by complimenting counsel on both sides upon the able manner with which they had conducted their case; he could not, however, compliment the witnesses upon their mode of giving their evidence, some of them having displayed a want of sincerity. With regard to the evidence, it was patent that bribery and corruption had been resorted to by the agents of the respondent and by himself, notably in the case of Isaie Brodeur, to whom he had given $12, evidently to influence his vote. The election must, therefore, be annulled

THE TORONTO HORROR.

The Globe of yesterday says:—The dead body of a young woman was yesterday found in a ditch on the Bloor-street road under circumstances which, taken in connection with those preceding and following the discovery, have led to the arrest of two persons who have been living in our midst, on suspicion of having perpetrated a crime of the most serious nature. It appears that about half-past ten o'clock last Saturday night a private watchman named Campbell, while on his beat on Scott-st., observed some persons place a box in an express waggon which was then drawn up almost opposite the residence of a person who is known and advertises himself as Dr. Davis.

After a few moments delay the waggon was driven off, and was followed by a man and a woman, who proceeded on foot. Upon reflection, the whole occurrence struck Campbell as being very unusual, and he accordingly reported what he had seen to the policeman whose beat was nearest. The constable conveyed the intelligence to the City Hall police station, and Detective Newhall and Reburn at once started for the Great Western and Grand Trunk stations, expecting that an attempt would be made to convey the box from the city by rail. They succeeded, however, in finding nothing at the stations of a suspicious character.

A few minutes before eleven o'clock Mr. Nicholas Rooney, who had left his house on Bay street in order to satisfy himself that a warehouse owned by his firm was safely secured, while walking along Melinda street, towards Jordan street, noticed a waggon cross the road and proceed down Jordan street. He followed as far as Gunther's warehouse, and then saw the waggon on the east side of the street, and a man and woman standing on the sidewalk. He then rushed to the door of the St. Lawrence Bank, when the woman hastily jumped on to the seat of the waggon by the side of the driver. Mr. Rooney, seeing a box in the waggon, had some vague idea that a robbery might have been committed, and, acting on the impulse of the moment, he ran to the spot and placed himself in front of the woman's companion, thus preventing him following her into the conveyance. The driver, in the meantime, whipped up his horse and drove off. Mr. Rooney then asked the man thus left behind what he was doing with the waggon at that hour of night. "I know nothing about it," was the reply. At this juncture night-watchman Bluett appeared on the scene, and was told by Mr. Rooney to follow and stop the waggon, so as to find out what the box contained. Mr. Rooney then walked side by side with the mysterious stranger towards Wellington street, keeping his eyes fixed sharply on the other's face. On nearing a lamp he saw that the fellow had a white cloth or handkerchief tied round the lower part of his face so as to partially conceal his features. Mr. Rooney then repeated his question, and the man finally replied that he had told those in the waggon the way to Yonge street. As the waggon had turned up Wellington street, Mr. Rooney observed that was a wrong direction. The watchman Bluett here returned, and stated that he had caught up to the waggon, and that it was all right, as there was only a coffin inside, sent probably from Phillips' coffin store, on Jordan street. Although Mr. Rooney was not satisfied, as he thought the box had not the shape of a coffin, he then allowed the man whom he had stopped to go.

At half-past one o'clock on Sunday morning, Night-watchman Watts saw a woman alight from a buggy and enter the residence of Dr. Davis.

About seven o'clock the same morning, a farmer found a large white wooden box in a ditch on Bloor street, some distance beyond the city limits. Upon examination it was found to contain the nude corpse of a young woman. The discovery was reported to the officials at No. 3 station, and by them telegraphed to the City Hall. Detectives Newhall and Reburn, reviewing the fact in the light of the information they had received the previous night from Night-watchman Campbell, proceeded to Scott street, and arrested Dr. Davis and the woman living with him.

In the afternoon an inquest was held on the body at Mrs. Mantel's, Dundas Road, by Coroner Fisher, a post mortem examination having been previously made by Drs. Wallis and Beatty, both of whom gave it as their opinion that death had been caused by the operations of an abortionist. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical evidence, and the case was then left to the Toronto detectives to work out.

It might be mentioned here that Mr. Rooney identified Dr. Davis at the station-house as the man he had spoken to on Saturday night, and the box as that he had seen in the waggon.

Last night the body of the young woman was brought to the city dead-house for purposes of identification. It is that of a woman apparently about 25 years of age; blue eyes, dark brown hair; rather stoutly built; height, 5 ft. 1 in.

Mary A. Whyte, the little daughter of Mr. Whyte, of the Mansion saloon, King street, found yesterday in a barrel placed in the rear of the saloon a quantity of wearing apparel, as follows: Black and white straw hat (evidently a woman's), lavender grenadine waist and skirt, black cape trimmed with black fur, a night-gown, white knitted stockings, elastic garters—all of good quality. A piece had been cut out of the neck of the night-gown, where might have been a name or initials. The only article of clothing found in the box with the body was a chemise, and a pair of boots belonging to a lady was found at the residence of Dr. Davis.

The Spy gives additional particulars of the murder at Petersham. Towne, the murdered man, is known to have had a quarrel with Frost, his brother-in-law, on the 4th July, after which he was never seen alive. Frost told contradictory stories about his disappearance, and suspicion was excited by his conduct. Ten days ago a neighbor having business at his place went during the absence of Frost to the barn, and seeing the ground appear fresh, took a crowbar and pierced the earth. On examination a few human hairs and bits of clothing were discovered. Keeping the matter quiet, except to trusted parties, watch was set upon the movements of Frost as stated.

TORONTO, August 3.

Great crowds flocked to the dead house yesterday to see the body of the unfortunate woman who came to her death by malpractice. Lizzie Henderson, a girl of 15, who lived in the neighborhood, recognized the corpse as that of the woman whom she had been in the habit of seeing about Davis' house as a domestic for some four or five months since. She saw her alive a fortnight ago, and she remembers the occasion as her mother beat her when she came home for having spoken to any one connected with the Davis establishment. The Detectives think they have got a clue to another murder committed by Davis about six months ago.

A boy named John Hill, of this city, while trying to get off the propeller "America" yesterday at Niagara before she landed, slipped and fell into the water. A man jumped in after him, but as the propeller was approaching the wharf he had to let the boy go and escape being crushed.

An inquest was held last night on the body of Wm. Walsh who was found suffocated on board the schooner "Evaline" yesterday a.m. It appears all hands were paid off on Saturday, but Walsh remained on board, and yesterday, when the mate came down to the schooner, he found the floor of the forecastle on fire and Walsh lying dead in bed. A verdict of "Death from Suffocation—cause of fire unknown"—was returned. A suspicious circumstance is that while Walsh was paid on Saturday, only 10 cents were found in his pocket.

The West Peterboro' election trial concluded yesterday, when the Judge declared the election voided by reason of the agent of Cox, respondent, having ordered a tavern to supply Cox's voters with drink. The question of personal bribery is reserved till the 17th, when judgment will be given here.

Chief Justice Draper gave judgment yesterday at Peterboro' in the East Peterboro' election case. He declares the election void by reason of bribing by Cavanagh, the agent of O'Sullivan, respondent.

There is a report now current that the victim of the Davis malpractice is the daughter of a Mr. Woodbridge, who is on his way to claim the body.

LONDON, August 3.

A special from Madrid to the Times says the Alfonsist troops continue to be successful in their operations against the Carlists. Several important victories were gained last week. The Carlist forces are evidently approaching dissolution.

The Spanish funds have risen, owing to the improved prospects. The projected Constitution declares the State religion to be Roman Catholic. The nation is obliged itself to maintain its worship and its ministers, but nobody shall be molested on Spanish territory for their religious opinions, or in the exercise of their respective worships, so long as the respect due to Christian morality is paid. Nevertheless, other public ceremonies or demonstrations than those of the State Religion are prohibited. Canovas del Castillo, President of the Constitutional Committee, declares the meaning of this to be that Protestants may have churches with open doors, and celebrate their worship inside, but there must be no manifestations in the streets. It is believed that the Cortes will be summoned to meet soon, when the proposed Constitution will be submitted thereto. Consequently, the political agitation is recommencing.

It relates mainly to the Denison contract between Port Schuyler and the Lower Mohawk Aqueduct, on which more than four hundred thousand dollars have been paid for work contracted to have been done for less than eighty thousand dollars. In this report the Commission have developed a profligate system upon which extraordinary repairs have been made for the last eight or ten years.

NEW YORK, August 3.

Morris, counsel for Tilton, says that undoubtedly the new trial will be short as they propose to try Beecher for adultery, as he had been tried on several outside matters. He says there is testimony of great importance which will materially alter the complexion of things and which will prove Beecher guilty. Gen. Prior says if Tilton had not called this case the Congregational Church would have acted on it. The three leading witnesses of the next trial will be Loes, the druggist; Henry C. Bowen and Joseph Richards, Mrs. Tilton's brother. Until late last evening Tilton did not know of the new names on the case.

The Custom House was closed and the flags on the City Hall and other city government departments were at half-mast, out of respect to the memory of ex-President Johnson, whose burial takes place to-day.

PORTAGE, N. Y., August 3.

The new iron bridge of the Erie Railway over the Genesee Falls at Portage, N. Y., has been completed, and put to a thorough test preparatory to running through trains. The first engine passed slowly upon the bridge, coming to a full stop immediately in the centre of the main span, 235 feet above the river, whistled a shout of triumph, and finished its course across the bridge; the multitude that lined the high banks of the river on either side sent up cheers of congratulation. A second test was made by sending two mogul engines across, and finally a whole train, composed of six monster locomotives, whose cabs were covered with employees of the road, moved slowly forward with waving banners, and came to a full stop midway on the bridge, remaining there till the test was pronounced satisfactory. The President and party, accompanied by a number of journalists, then passed over the bridge in a special train, following a long passenger train containing excursionists from the surrounding country. This substantial iron bridge is 800 feet in length, and takes the place of the famous wooden structure that was destroyed by fire on May 6.

Daniel Brown, colored, was shot and instantly killed by policeman Philip McDonald, at a negro ball in the North-western District. At the Coroner's inquest it was elicited that officer McDonald knocked at the door of the house and said there was too much noise. Brown replied that it was his house, whereupon the officer struck him with his locust and then shot him, the ball entering the left side of Brown's head. McDonald alleges that Brown caught him by the throat before the locust was used. McDonald was committed for trial.

LONDON, August 3.

Nothing is published or current here concerning the steamship "Faraday." No London papers except the Shipping Gazette announced her arrival at Deal. Inquiry fails to develop the information negativing the strong probability that the "Faraday" has failed to repair the Direct Cable, as heretofore rumored in London.

MIDDLETOWN, N.Y., August 3.

On Saturday night last, at Liberty County, a market gardner shot and killed Wm. Kepler, a laborer, who was causing a row in his house.

CITY NEWS.

— The Montreal Telegraph Company have opened an office at St. Thomas Village, Quebec.

— The citizens of Montreal, of African descent, held their annual pic-nic on St. Helen's Island yesterday.

— The Allan clipper ships "Gleniffer" and "Glenbervie," from Glasgow, were reported off Bic yesterday.

— There are no new developments in the Dessaulles case to-day. Parties holding notes are busy verifying them.

— There were two heavy actions entered in Court to-day: One for $3,003.03, Ritchie & Borlase, advocates, and the other for $2,200, Jette & Co., advocates.

— A decided improvement has taken place within the Recorder's Court; the rusty old paper has been torn down, the walls colored blue, and the ceiling whitewashed.

— The following are arrivals from England to-day at the St. Lawrence Hall: Messrs. Cartwright, Parker, Baker, Steel, Dr. Grant, Colonel C. Gibbon and Captain Ferris, 12th Regiment.

— Six seamen of the Swedish barque "Hakan Jarl" were arrested this afternoon by the Water Police for refusing duty. They will be brought up for trial to-morrow before the Police Magistrate.

— At the meeting of the Council of St. Henri last night, Mr. Redford was elected as a member in succession to Mr. Bickerdike, who has resigned. The vote of the rate payers on the water supply question will take place on Monday next.

— At one o'clock to-day, Police Officers Constant and Cinq-Mars arrested one Leda Gagnon, a prostitute, for stealing $30 from a stranger who had been in her company. The officers discovered a sovereign in a stocking, and found that she and a carter had been spending the money right and left. She will be brought up for trial to-morrow.

— A man named Cyrille Gauthier, a laborer, while discharging coal from the steamship "Lady Clair," met with a terrible accident by the breaking of the whipple tree, and the bucketful of coal falling on him, inflicting injuries to his spine, which is supposed to be fractured. Dr. Raymond attended him, and states he has sustained serious but not fatal injuries.

— The Corporation will have all they can do before the fall to lay the flags that are in different parts of the city. In Dorchester street, they have been piled for six weeks and not one laid down. St. Catherine street is somewhat in the same condition, whilst St. Denis has only been laid in the last week. The stones, as they are, are a great nuisance, in several places preventing vehicles from drawing up alongside the pavement opposite to the house they want to stop at.

— In the Police Court the case of Odilon Lemieux, for selling liquor on a Sunday, postponed from the 30th ult., is taken en delibere. Francois Xavier Dufour, charged with larceny, was dismissed. Marceline Longpre against Jose Perrault, assault and battery, settled. Charles Herman, obtaining money on false pretences, dismissed. Marie Gregoire, 32, living at Fulford street, and Louis Lemoine, 41, tinsmith, on a charge of child stealing, were remanded to the Queen's Bench. Maggy Connors, 42, drunk, was fined $5 or 2 months' common gaol.

— Mr. Doutre, Q.C., counsel for Mr. Peter Tiernan, presented a rule to-day to Mr. Justice Beaudry in Chambers for the committal of Sir Hugh Allan, as President of the Montreal, Ottawa & Western Railway Company, in the case of Peter Tiernan as plaintiff vs. said Company. The case will be brought up for further hearing before Judge Beaudry to-morrow. The plaintiff complains that, in contempt of a writ of injunction served upon the Company's officers, the latter are taking forcible possession of his land, without expropriation, or otherwise complying with the law.

— The following summons cases were disposed of at the Recorder's Court this afternoon: W. H. Kerfoot, neglecting to cleanse a drain, was fined $5 and costs or 15 days. The cross cases of S. J. Harper vs. M. A. Layard, for assault and battery, were dismissed, after a long and patient hearing, each party to pay their own costs. Paschal Patenaude, for driving animals on the sidewalk, was fined $1 and $2 costs. Regina vs. Aglare Pepin, for keeping a musical hall: Defendant was fined $2.50 and $2 costs. Regina vs. T. Burdett, for keeping a musical hall: Defendant had to pay $2.50 and $1 costs or 15 days.

— It is stated upon good authority that nearly all the cabins situated on the line of Commissioner street where fruit, cakes and so-called temperance drinks are sold, are simply a lot of shebeens where "whiskey straight" can be had by the thirsty "sun-fish" who congregate in the neighborhood. Many of these dens remain open all night and are frequented by all sorts of night prowlers and thieves. It is only lately that a proprietor of one of the shantys, named Monette, was fined $20 for committing an abominable offence. Whiskey selling is also said to be carried on in stalls round Bonsecours and St. Ann's markets.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY.—The dry goods store of Mr. John Cuddy, of 567 St. Mary street, was entered by burglars about 3:15 this morning and from eight hundred to one thousand dollars' worth of goods stolen therefrom. The articles abstracted consisted of four shilbugs of broad cloths, venetians, &c., worth from $500 to $600, underclothing, umbrellas, silk scarfs, &c., worth between $300 and $400. The police constable on the beat was informed by Mr. Patrick Wright that there were two suspicious looking individuals lurking about the neighborhood. The information had not the desired effect, however, as the burglars got off with their booty without being detected.

ABDUCTION OF A CHILD.—A notorious courtesan named Marie Gregoire, along with a man called Louis Lemoine, have been arrested for child stealing. It appears that on the 30th of July these persons went to the house of Mrs. Bedeau, Lagauchetiere street, and, during her absence for a few minutes, took away her young child. Nothing has been heard of the child since that day. Telegrams were sent to Quebec, and the Provincial authorities were put on the alert. As the police here, however, had reason to believe that the prisoners were implicated in the affair, Government Detective Cinq-Mars arrested them. They were brought before the Police Magistrate this morning, and were recognized by the mother as being the parties who visited her house on the 30th of last month. They state that they had been paid $1 by the father to remove the child from its mother, as he considered it was not being brought up according to his wishes. The prisoners were committed to take their trial before the Court of Queen's Bench. As the examination of the prisoners was taking place this morning, Detective Cinq-Mars recovered a gold watch, in a pawnbroker's shop, which had been stolen by the female prisoner.

CANADA ABROAD.—To the Editor of the STAR: Sir,—Your readers, no doubt, will hear with pleasure of the brilliant success obtained in Paris by one of our citizens, M. Guillaume Couture. After a severe examination he was admitted as pupil of the Conservatoire of Paris, which, being a government institution, had until this date refused admission to all strangers. In a few months we see him outstripping pupils of first and second years, shortly afterwards ranking with the best and most talented, and six months after his admission receiving the best mark at the yearly examination in the first musical institution of the world. A few months ago a composition, "Memorare," procured for him the signal honor of being unanimously admitted member of the "National Society of Music." The Continental Herald contains the following concerning this composition: "Mr. Couture, one of the most talented pupils of the Paris Conservatory of Music, is a Canadian by birth, and has only left Montreal within the last two years. The composition we heard yesterday at the Madeleine betrays throughout a precocious musical genius. The opening chorus, which is sung without accompaniment, and the soli for soprano and baritone possess, besides, a genuine stamp of the classical sacred cantata—very impressive passages, which contain both religious sentiment and moral taste." Yours, &c.,—A LOVER OF MUSIC.

RECORDER'S COURT.—Tuesday.—Before His Honor the Recorder.—Thirty-one prisoners were on the sheet. Xavier Desormier, 45, stonecutter, George Elsey, 20, laborer, John Burns, 19, bricklayer, John Mitchell, 62, laborer, James Merrill, 48, gardener, John McMahon, 38, clerk, Owen Kenna, 40, clerk, were each fined $1 for being drunk. John McLean, 34, printer, Daniel Puttock, 37, plasterer, John O'Keefe, 56, milkman, Chas. Harris, 20, clerk, Henri Dusseau, 27, tinsmith, Hugh Cameron, 31, farmer, Joseph Lafonesse, 22, all for lying drunk, or drunk and disorderly, $1.50 each. Ann Doran, 45, drunk, $2.50. Francois Laviolette, 48, carter, driving furiously, $2.50. Emil Toiffor, 20, Joseph Lefrance, 27, butchers, $1.50, for driving without a number. Mary Burns, 40, an old offender, $5, for being drunk. Francois Unold, 30, finisher, was fined $5, and $1 costs, for assaulting Ilisma Delaigre. W. Allen, 28, machinist, loitering in a house, $5 or one month. Francois Leclere, 74, for vagrancy, was fined $5 or one month. Eliza Burns, 65, Margaret Burns, 18, Matthew Fitzpatrick, 21, James McKeown, 20, were all charged with being drunk in a brothel in St. Mary street, kept by the older Burns. The place seems to be a very pandemonium, so much so that the neighbors had to leave the next house, owing to the disgraceful scenes that were being enacted by the prisoners. Another man named Joseph Arcand was charged with assaulting the younger Burns, whose both eyes were fearfully black; McKeown is one of the "Black Horse" gang, and was arrested sometime ago on suspicion of complicity in the murder of a man on the wharf, but was discharged. The first four prisoners were sentenced to a fine of $10 or two months; and Arcand two months imprisonment, to pay $10, or in default, two months more. Xavier Gravel, 39, laborer, for assaulting his wife, was fined $10 or two months. Peter Daly, carter, for being drunk and for cruelty to his horse, was fined $5. Thomas Murray, 15, for loitering on the hay-market, was fined 50 cents.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE BURGLARY AT MR. CUDDY'S.

The entrance was effected by prizing open a door leading into the store from Jacques Cartier street, which was a heavy piece of work, considering that there was a shelf behind it, well wedged in. The piece of steel used in this operation was left behind, and is in the hands of Detective Riche. It appears that when Mr. Wright saw the burglars loitering about the store it was a little after eleven o'clock, and at the same time Dr. Remo observed them from his residence, nearly opposite Mr. Cuddy's. Mr. Wright followed the men to be able to identify their faces along the street until he met a policeman, to whom he spoke, but this worthy guardian of the lives and property of the citizens could not understand a word of English. Mr. Wright was obliged to return with him some distance along the street until he got an interpreter, and he explained to the officer his suspicions about the parties he was following, when the officer said they were Americans, but as they were gone away they would not come back that night. He had further remarked, however, that his beat was only from Dalhousie square to Montcalm street, and he would keep a sharp look out. The burglars must have been well acquainted with the premises, as instead of taking the goods out of the front door, they opened several doors leading into the back yard and placed their booty into a waggon they had waiting outside. It is a strange feature of the case that the watchful policeman acknowledges seeing the waggon there but made no further enquiry about it. A woman living on the opposite side of the street saw the men drive off in the waggon. They must have been good judges of cloth, as they did not touch any worth less than three dollars per yard. In fact they cleared the shelves of all the best West of England and Venetian cloths which they contained. They also ransacked the counter cases and took what jewellery and other valuables were there. They have also got miscellaneous articles such as underclothing, silk, scarves, &c., as would stock a small store. This is the third time within nine months burglars have made a descent on Mr. Cuddy's premises. It is only last week that a lady living in the next house on Jacques Cartier street had her house entered and robbed of $560 in money, the thieves getting off. Within two weeks past four burglaries have taken place on St. Mary street and one in Papineau Square, without the perpetrators being detected. There is not a single night that has passed for several weeks but there has been burglaries in different parts of the city, but it is only on rare occasions they come to light, as when the people report a burglary at the station, they say they are told to keep quiet and not let the press know anything about it. As not one burglary has been detected for every ten that has taken place in the city, it would be well for the public to give immediate information to the press in future, and see if, by the publicity that is given, more burglaries are not found out than on the "keep quiet" system which has been in vogue hitherto, and that has proved of no service.

FINANCIAL.

STAR OFFICE, 4 p.m.,
August 3, 1875.

Messrs. Davis & Phillips, cigar manufacturers, of this city, have called a meeting of their creditors for this evening. This course has been forced upon them by their bankers refusing to extend their credit. Local merchants have not a large interest in the estate, most of their creditors being in New York. The exact amount of their liabilities has not been definitely ascertained.

The money market this forenoon was quiet, and rates of discount unchanged at 8 to 9 per cent. for commercial paper. Sterling Exchange was firmer at 9⅞ for round amounts between banks, and 9⅞ over the counter for cash. Gold drafts were drawn at par. Call loans were made at 7 to 8 per cent., and time were quoted nominally at 10.

The stock market was flat this morning in consequence of a feeling of uneasiness created by the defalcations made public yesterday. Montreal Telegraph was not dealt in; buyers at 158¾ were present, but sellers held at 159½ without business. Bank of Montreal was weaker, and Toronto sold at ¼ decline. The sales were: 55 Bank of Montreal at 189; 50 Toronto at 187; 60 Merchants at 102; 18 Royal Canadian at 94¼; 53, 27 and 8 Commerce at 127¾.

Customs receipts to-day, $17,725.71.

At New York gold opened at 112⅞, and closed without change. Sterling Exchange was quoted at $4.87½. The opening and closing quotations were:—Pacific Mail, 39¾, 39⅞; W. U. Telegraph, 82¾, 83⅛; Lake Shore, —, 61¼; New York Central, —, 104; Rock Island, 105⅞, 105; Ohio & Miss., 19, 19⅛; Northwest, 41⅞, 42⅛; do, preferred, —, 55⅛; Union Pacific, —, 73; C. C. & I. C., —, 4; Toledo & Wabash, —, 5¼; St. Paul, 36, 36⅛; do, preferred, —, —; Erie, 14⅛, 14⅛.

A NEEDLE'S TRAVELS.

The Poughkeepsie Telegraph says that a young lady of Cornwall, when a child of two years of age, ran a needle into her chest, and that the same needle, very much rusted, after remaining in her body sixteen years, came out a few days ago just above the ankle bone.

A SALOON-KEEPER KILLED.

At 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning a murder was committed in front of the premises No. 68 Greenwich street, New York. The following are the particulars:

Andrew Nordstrom, the keeper of a Swedish boarding-house, which is located within two doors of the scene of the tragedy, was engaged during the early part of the night in playing cards with one of his patrons, Johann Berbengtson, also a Swede. The room was crowded. At the close of the last game Berbengtson left the table and proceeded to the bar, accompanied by Nordstrom. Berbengtson handed what he claims to have been a $10 bill to Nordstrom, in payment for some drinks, but the latter stoutly asserted that it was only a $1 bill. A dispute arose and both parties proceeded outside, where a scuffle ensued, during which Berbengtson drew a knife and stabbed Nordstrom, inflicting a wound of which he died immediately.

A RUSSIAN TRAGEDY.

One of the most revolting scenes recorded in the annals of modern executions took place on the 15th of May in the Russian city of Mohileff. Six months before an altercation had occurred at the dinner table of the Hotel de l'Europe, in the same place, between two officers of the Second Regiment of the Imperial Foot Guards, Col. Rampoe Sojinok and Lieutenant Prizzik. The latter, it appears, was engaged to be married to the daughter of the landlord of the above named hotel, Anna Mirasky. He was fondly attached to the handsome girl, and looked upon all the attempts on the part of his comrades to flirt with her with undisguised jealousy. On the 3rd of December, 1874, Colonel Sojinock had drunk considerably before going to dinner. At the table he offered loudly to bet that for ten thousand dollars Anna Mirasky would sell her virtue to him. Lieutenant Prizzik, her affianced lover, was not present, but a note which the girl immediately addressed to him brought him in a few minutes to the spot. No sooner had he heard what the colonel had said about Anna than he seized a cane and administered a terrible castigation to the foul-mouthed scoundrel. The colonel tried to parry the blows, but the lieutenant did not cease belaboring him until his face presented a sickening appearance. It was one mass of bruises. The nose of the colonel was broken, and his front teeth were knocked out.

The cries of the chastised officer brought the police to the spot. Prizzik was arrested and taken to the military prison. Next day he was court-martialled by a military commission, consisting exclusively of friends of Colonel Sojinok. The trial lasted two hours, at the end of which the President of the Court said to Prizzik:—"The court unanimously finds you guilty. It sentences you to be ignominiously expelled from the army, and then suffer death by powder and lead." From this sentence the doomed man appealed to the Czar. Anna Mirasky, his fiancee, went herself to St. Petersburg and threw herself on her knees before the Emperor Alexander II. The latter was deeply moved by the tearful appeals of the unfortunate girl, and he promised to take the case under careful consideration. Over five weary months passed, during which time Prizzik, loaded with chains, languished in jail. On the 14th of May, at length, the Military Governor of Mohileff received orders to have Prizzik executed.

At daybreak on the following morning the doomed lover was led out. Two burly corporals immediately fell upon him and tore his uniform from his back. They then repeatedly struck him and spit in his face. Staggering under the blows, he was tied to the stake, and the death warrant was read to him. He cursed the Czar loudly for his injustice, but the roll of the drums drowned his voice. Six soldiers were drawn up in line before him. They fired three volleys at him, but not one hit him. Such an ordeal was too much for the nerves of the poor young fellow. He begged piteously that an end might be put to his anguish. The fourth and fifth volleys resulted in receiving seven wounds. He was still conscious, and writhing in indescribable agony. Then a corporal ran up to him, and, putting his musket against his temple, blew out his brains. It was loudly asserted in Mohileff that the two first volleys were fired with blank catridges in order to prolong the prisoner's agony.

THE TRUE HEIR;

OR,

LOVE'S CONSTANCY.

Wrapped in these thoughts, Cassinove reached his humble lodgings, where he encountered a scene that soon put to flight all his beautiful day-dreams.

As he entered the small shop, he found Mrs. Russel wringing her hands in distress, and the little children crying about her. The shelves were dismantled, and the drawers open and rifled.

"Why, whatever is the matter?" hastily inquired Cassinove in surprise.

"Oh, Mr. Cassinove! Oh, sir!" was all that the sobbing woman could reply.

"What has occurred?" again inquired the young man.

"Oh, Mr. Cassinove! Oh, sir! and the rent due to-day!" cried the widow.

"Oh, it's an execution?" said the young man, in a tone of compassion.

"An execution! Lord, no, indeed, sir; if it were only that, I might have met the costs!"

"Then you have been robbed!" exclaimed Cassinove in dismay.

"Robbed! oh, no, sir! if it were only a robbery, I could apply to the police, you know."

"Then, if it is neither an execution nor a robbery, what is it?" inquired Ferdinand, looking in consternation at the emptied shop.

"Oh, Mr. Cassinove! Oh, sir!" was still the only reply of the poor woman.

A dreadful suspicion occurred to Cassinove that the widow's stock had been seized by the police as stolen goods.

"Good Heaven, Mrs. Russel! You have not been so unfortunate as to have purchased your stock from smugglers, or any such illegal traders!" he exclaimed in dismay.

"Oh! Lord bless your soul, no, sir! I deal only with respectable houses."

"Then, in the name of everything inexplicable, if you have not been robbed, nor had your stock taken in execution, nor had it seized by the police as contraband—whatever is the cause of your loss?"

"Oh, Mr. Cassinove! Oh, sir!" exclaimed the widow, putting her handkerchief to her eyes, and weeping vehemently.

"Don't cry, mother," here put in the boy Frank. "Indeed, we didn't know any better, he was such a nice-looking gentleman."

"Oh, yes, such a very nice-looking gentleman, mamma," said Emily, with her little light hair; and he took me up in his arms, and kissed me," said little Emily.

"And he told me to give his love to you, and said that it was all right. And we thought it was all right because he said so, and he was such a very nice-looking, smiling, pleasant-spoken gentleman."

"Right! right! oh!" sobbed the poor woman, in a paroxysm of indignation and grief.

"If you will only explain to me what has happened, perhaps I may be able to serve you in some way," said the young man, compassionately.

"Oh! Mr. Cassinove, come into my room, and I will tell you what the children have told me," said Mrs. Russel, with a deep sigh, as she arose, shut and barred the shop-door, and, followed by Cassinove, and the two children, led the way into the back parlour. She handed a chair to the young man, and then seated herself with the children on each side of her, their heads laid together upon her lap, and her arms around them, as though she would gather and defend them against some impending peril.

"I will tell you as they told me, Mr. Cassinove," she said. "You must know that soon after you walked out this morning, I went out to market, leaving the shop in charge of Frank and Emily. Well, it seems that I had not been gone above five minutes, when a cab drove up, and a stranger alighted, and came into the shop, and inquired for me. First he asked—

"'Is this Mrs. Russel's shop?'

"'Yes, sir,' replied the children.

"'Mrs. Ruth Russel's?'

"'Yes, sir,' they repeated.

"'And you are Frank?' inquired the man, addressing the boy.

"'Yes, sir,' replied my son.

"'And you, my pretty lass, are Emily?'

"'Yes, sir,' answered the girl.

"'And where is your dear mother?'

"'Gone to market, sir.'

"'Well, I thought she would have been back to meet me before this time, but it is all right,' said the gentleman, smiling very sweetly, and adding by the way of interrogative—

"'She is a good mother?'

"'Oh, yes, sir, and we love her so dearly,' said the children.

"'And she sends you to school, and teaches you to say your prayers?'

"'Oh, yes, sir.'

"'That is right, my dears. Always mind your mother, and keep the Commandments of your father; be sure go to church, and never forget to say your prayers every day, and so you will be sure to go to heaven.'

"'Yes, sir,' said the children, who took the stranger to be a minister of the gospel.

"'And now,' said the stranger I must proceed to business. I am sorry your mother is not here to assist me, but I must do the best I can without her.'

"And the nice-looking man went behind the counter, and began to take down the goods.

"'What are you doing, sir?' inquired the children.

"'Oh, my dears, it is all right; the trustees of the Orphan Asylum bought up all the stock for the poor orphans, to help your dear mother.'

"And so saying, the stranger continued to remove from the shelves rolls of silk and velvet that composed the most valuable part of the stock.

"When he had piled upon the counter as much as he could carry away, he quietly called the cabman and ordered him to assist in carrying the goods out and packing them inside and on the top of the cab.

"Lastly, he coolly emptied the till of all its contents, put them into his pocket, kissed Emily, shook hands with Frank, told the astonished children to give his love to their dear, good mother, and got into the cab and drove off—having stripped the shop of everything that was valuable, concluded the widow.

Here both children burst out into loud sobs again.

"He was such a nice-looking gentleman, with nice light hair, and nice blue eyes, and rosy cheeks, and white teeth; and he smiled so kindly, and spoke so pleasantly, and kissed me, and sent his love to me! I did not think he could be a bad man," wept little Emily.

"And he was dressed all in black like a parson, and he gave us such good advice; I am sure I thought it was all right," sobbed Franky.

"There! I do not blame you, I am sure, poor children! You are as unfortunate and as innocently so as your poor mother," said the widow, trying to soothe them, though weeping bitterly herself the while.

"Then it appears that, after all, you have been robbed, coolly robbed, in broad daylight, by a most daring villain; and no time must be lost in setting the police upon his track," exclaimed Cassinove, starting up.

"Stay," said the widow, catching hold of his coat and stopping him. "I told you that it was not a robbery; and had been a simple robbery, I should have known what to do from the first. Besides, would our robber, even the most daring, have come and dismantled my shop in broad daylight?"

"Then, in the name of heaven, if not a robbery, what was it? and if not a robber, who was it that riddled your house in this manner?" inquired Cassinove, in great astonishment.

The widow looked in his face with a sorrowful, deprecating gaze, but said nothing.

"Do you know the man?" inquired Cassinove.

"Yes."

"Who is he?"

"I dare not tell you. Oh! Mr. Cassinove, there are sorrows in the world of which one must never speak, upon which no eye but that of God must ever look." Mine is such an one as that. You came in and found my house made desolate and myself and children weeping in the midst of our ruin. It is not the first time such a disaster has visited me, and it may not be the last; but if you had not come in and discovered our calamity, you never should have known it."

"But your business is for the present broken up. What can you do? And now, can I help you?"

"Ah, Mr. Cassinove, you could not help me unless you could change the laws of the land. I and my children must leave this house with what haste we can, and seek safety in some obscure suburb. The greatest trouble is the unpaid rent. I fear the whole of my little household furniture will be stopped for that."

"Do you mean to say that your mysterious visitor swept the till of all your money?"

"Of every penny! and I have not a farthing, except a few shillings left from my marketing, and there are ten pounds rent due to-day."

Cassinove dropped his face into his hands and groaned. It was just at such times as these that he most bitterly felt his own poverty. At length he looked up and spoke:

"I have a few sovereigns—not as much as you want; but they are heartily at your service, Mrs. Russel, as far as they will go towards settling the rent."

"I thank you, Mr. Cassinove. Heaven forbid that I should ever take such an advantage of your generosity. But one thing I beg of you, to see the agent of my landlord and get a little time," said the widow gratefully.

"And who is he, Mrs Russel?"

"Mr. Noakes, the city agent of Sir Vincent Lester, who owns this row of buildings."

"Sir Vincent Lester! Oh, I shall be able to manage the affair easily!" exclaimed Cassinove, brightening up, for he immediately resolved to pledge his salary and services in security for the widow's rent. "So you may begin to pack up as soon as you please, while I go and seek an interview with Sir Vincent Lester," he concluded, seizing his hat, and hurrying away to escape the widow's fervent gratitude.

He hailed a cab, and drove rapidly to Belgrave-square, where he asked to be admitted to Sir Vincent upon particular business.

He was shown immediately to the library, where he found the baronet just where he had left him hours before, sitting reading at a centre table. He advanced, bowed, apologized for his intrusion, and explained the nature of his errand.

He then offered to pledge his salary as security for the widow's rent, if she could be permitted to take away her goods, and indulged with a few months' time to make up the money to pay it.

The baronet smiled dubiously.

"Now, what does a generous and romantic young man like yourself wish me to do in this case of the distressed widow?" Doubtless, you expect me to play the cold and cruel proprietor, who refuses to interfere, and refers you to his hard-hearted agent, who has secret instructions to show no mercy to delinquent debtors. I shall do nothing of the sort. Occasionally I give myself the pleasure of disappointing people," he said; and drawing towards him writing materials, he wrote a few lines on a piece of paper and handed it to Cassinove.

It was a receipt in full for the widow's rent. "God bless and prosper you, sir!" burst impulsively from the lips of the young man as he read this release.

"God bless and prosper us all!" said the baronet, smiling and holding out his hand.

Cassinove seized and pressed it fervently, and then left the house, and hastened to carry the good news to Mrs Russel.

He found the poor woman in the midst of her packing. He handed her the receipt and explained to her that it was a free gift from Sir Vincent Lester.

Poor Mrs. Russel wept with gratitude. Cassinove then divided his little stock of money, and forced one half of it upon her as a loan.

The same afternoon Mrs. Russel found another little house in an obscure part of the city, to which, upon the next day, she removed.

Cassinove, who had remained helping her to the last, finally bade her adieu as he handed her into the cab that was to convey her and her children to their new home. Then he entered the cab that had been in waiting, and was driven to Belgrave-square, to commence his new career as a private tutor.

A POPULAR CLUB.

At the recent election at the Athenæum Club, in London, there were over sixteen hundred applicants, though there were only about fifty vacancies. At this rate of progress it would take more than thirty years to get admission to this club. Of course the reason why it is so popular is that only the most distinguished in the literary, scientific and artistic worlds are admitted. Otherwise the club is not nearly so comfortable as many others. For instance, no member can invite a friend who is not a member to dine, and strangers are ruthlessly excluded. For all these reasons it will stand a vogue, and the list of applicants for admission, and always will be. A gentleman who had recently passed with eclat the Indian Civil Service examination, and received an appointment which would probably keep him absent from the country for twenty years, had his name put up at the Athenæum before he left England, and hoped by the time he has finished his Asiatic career he may be so fortunate as to get elected.

A BALLOONIST'S CAREER.

Washington H. Donaldson, the ill-fated aeronaut who lost his life during an ascension made at Chicago, was born in Philadelphia, April 7th, 1840. His family were Quakers, and his father was one of the earliest photographers of his native city. Donaldson learned this business, and soon became expert in it. In 1860 he was employed in a photographic studio in this city. He began to learn line engraving on stone, but as his health seemed to suffer from the confinement, he took to athletic exercises, and finally became a teacher of gymnastics. From this he went into the sleight-of-hand business, and thence into the show business generally. He became an excellent performer on the trapeze, and was also a skillful tight-rope and wire-walker.

His introduction to aeronautics came about in a singular way. He made the acquaintance of a certain young lady at a small town in Pennsylvania, and many tender passages occurred between them. He had some sort of engagement with another town near at hand, and subsequent to his performances the landlord of the hotel said:—"There is a balloon here in my custody? It was left behind by an unlucky aeronaut who couldn't pay his board bill. It is just the thing for you to start upon. Why don't you buy it?" "I don't know anything about ballooning," said he, "but how much do you want for it?" The landlord said $300. As Donaldson's ventures had not been very successful about that time, he did not possess a third of the sum; but, as it came out that the landlord was a relative of the lady before mentioned, Donaldson wrote to her on the subject, and by her interest he procured the balloon at a very great reduction upon the original price.

Donaldson was one of the most perfectly-fearless men that ever lived, but he admitted that he had no sooner got possession of the balloon than the most gloomy forebodings filled his mind. However, he determined to make an ascension. Accordingly he went to Reading, and, having made all the necessary preparations, he ascended on the 31st August, 1871. It was a trapeze balloon, that is, it had no car, but the aeronaut sat upon a small bar of wood, suspended from the concentrating ring. He told the writer that before going aloft he was haunted with premonitions of death, but no sooner had he reached the upper regions than a complete revolution took place in his thoughts. The astounding beauty of the spectacle of the earth as seen from a balloon the exhilaration of spirits which follows an ascent, and the wonderful and unexpected serenity of atmospheric travel—for under ordinary circumstances one is scarcely conscious of motion in a balloon—all this impressed him so powerfully that his despondency gave way to enthusiasm, and from that hour aeronautics became to him a passion.

At the time of his death he had probably made about 360 ascensions, which, considering the brief space in which they were made, is more, proportionately to time, than those of any other aeronaut that lived. But in all these voyages he never noted a single scientific fact, nor made an observation of the slightest value. He had no taste for scientific enquiries, and indeed his education was too defective to permit him to appreciate the value of scientific information. As an aeronaut, however, he probably had no superior in the world. Beginning the business but a few years ago, in total ignorance of the apparatus and the methods of aerostation and the management of balloons, he rapidly acquired a fund of information and experience which made him master of every operation, and equal to every emergency in his profession. He knew everything that related to the making of balloons; he had all the formulæ for cutting the gores at his finger's end; he knew to a nicety what rope, anchor, ropes, and gear. He had by heart all the tables for estimating the quantities of gas that balloons of different sizes would hold. And, finally, if you gave him the elements of a balloon he would at once tell you how much ballast she ought to carry, how many passengers, and how long she would probably float. And he was always right.

The most important event of his life was undoubtedly his connection with the Daily Graphic transatlantic balloon enterprise. Donaldson had always believed in the feasibility of a balloon voyage across the Atlantic, and when he was called in to take the management of that enterprise, after it had been sadly mismanaged by an older aeronaut, he entered upon his duties with enthusiasm, and persevered amid a series of discouragements which would have driven other men from the task. A remarkable incident in connection with the equipment of the balloon deserves to be noticed. A little paper canoe was presented to the publishers of the Daily Graphic, to be carried in the balloon for possible use on the occasion. Without having had the slightest experience in boats or vessels, Donaldson undertook and did actually effect a voyage from the Battery to Long Branch—a feat as wonderful for its audacity as for its accomplishment. The Daily Graphic balloon, when completed, was the most magnificent aerostat that was ever manufactured. It was forty times larger than any balloon that Donaldson had ever before managed. He ascended in it from the Capitoline Grounds, Brooklyn, accompanied by Messrs. Lunt and Ford, on the 6th October, 1873, in the presence of thousands of spectators. The voyage, which was to have been a transatlantic one, came to an unlucky end in the midst of a tremendous storm in Connecticut, the aeronauts barely escaping with their lives. Of the three persons who formed the balloon crew on this occasion, Ford is now the only survivor, Lunt having been most suddenly and lamentably cut off in the prime of manhood about a year ago.

In the early part of 1874, Donaldson entered into an engagement with the managers of Barnum's Hippodrome to make ascensions in connection with that establishment during the summer. The engagement he most faithfully carried out, to the satisfaction of his employers.

Donaldson made a second engagement with the Hippodrome managers this year, the sum to be paid him being, we understand, $20,000 for the season. It is certain that he was always liberally provided with whatever materials he required; indeed, he always told his friends that the managers of the Hippodrome gave him a carte blanche for whatever he desired; and here it must be remembered that the frailest balloon is actually as good as the best for an ascension. The balloon that will stand a voyage across the Atlantic will also can destroy it but a tempest such as Donaldson lost his life in. But in that fearful exigency no mere strength of materials could have averted his fate. He had to die; and those who know him doubt not that he met his fate as he always lived—like a man.

Mr. Donaldson leaves a brother and two children. To the latter he was always a kind and indulgent father, and he rarely allowed a month to pass by without paying them a visit.—N. Y. Graphic.

A COAL MINE HORROR.

A THRILLING STORY OF A MULE BOY'S ADVENTURES IN AN ABANDONED MINE.

(From the N. Y. Herald.)

DUNMORE, Pa., July 27.

Through the brutality of a miner in the employ of the Pennsylvania Coal Company at this place a mule boy in the same mine was recently put to so terrible an experience in one of the Company's abandoned mines that he has become, it is feared, hopelessly insane, and has been sent to the lunatic asylum in Danville, Montour County.

The miner's name is James Barrett. The boy is the son of a poor widow, and although but fourteen years of age, contributed largely to her support. His name is James Gallagher. The man Barrett, it is feared, hopelessly insane, and has been sent to the lunatic asylum in Danville, Montour County.

The miner's name is James Barrett. The boy is the son of a poor widow, and although but fourteen years of age, contributed largely to her support. His name is James Gallagher. The man Barrett, it is feared, hopelessly insane, abusing the lad in a shameful manner, having no apparent cause save a mere personal antipathy. The boy stood in mortal fear of Barrett. A week or so ago the latter had been tyrannising over young Gallagher with more than usual cruelty, and finally swore that if he did not quit his sight at once he would kill him, at the same time running towards the boy with his pick raised as if to strike him. Gallagher ran screaming away from his persecutor, and made directly into the abandoned chamber, never stopping to look where he was, in his fright only thinking of getting out of the reach of Barrett. After running for some time the boy stopped, and for the first time saw that he was in the worked-out mine. Even then terror of his cruel taskmaster was uppermost in his mind, and it was not until the little mine lamp on his cap began to grow dim and finally went entirely out that he awoke to the horror of his situation.

THE ABANDONED MINE.

If there is a chamber of horrors anywhere in the world it is a coal mine that has been worked out and deserted. Its labyrinth of silent corridors responds to the least sound with the most demoniacal echoes, and noxious gases generate in the pools of slimy water that exudes from the walls and drips down upon the slippery floor. Pitfalls filled with water that accumulates without interruption abound in these noisome walls, and myriads of hungry rats, bold and even aggressive, haunt the desolate chambers hundreds of feet below the earth's surface, and prey on all the more repulsive darkness. There is no darkness like that in a mine. It is so dense and heavy that one feels its weight upon him as if he were beneath fathoms of water, and the eye does not become accustomed to its pall sufficiently to penetrate it in the slightest degree. On every side the constant drip, drip of the unwholesome water is heard, and the noise of rats, which frequently displace some loose boulder of coal as they scamper over it, and send it tumbling to the floor, awakening a thousand horrid echoes, and sending them reverberating through the deserted chambers.

It was in such a place as this that young Gallagher found himself, without a light, alone and entirely ignorant of the way out. His first thought was to shout aloud for help, but the sound of his voice traversing the devious corridors and yelling back to him his cry prolonged and multiplied a hundred times, as if so many fiends were mocking his distress, so frightened the boy that he could not gather courage to repeat the cry, and he commenced groping his way along in silence in the direction he thought most likely would lead to the entrance of the mine. He had proceeded some distance along the slimy wall when a certain difficulty of breathing and choking sensation warned him that he was trespassing where that greatest of all terrors to the miner, fire damp, prevailed, and he hastily retraced his steps with the intention of turning into the first corridor he came to. It was a long time before he reached one. It turned off to the right, and he entered it and followed it for a quarter of an hour, feeling his way along one side of it, and being careful not to turn into any of the corridors crossing it, so that he might not become confused if circumstances compelled him to again retrace his steps. Suddenly, in putting his foot forward he found no rest for it, and, before he could recover his balance, he fell headlong into a pit. His head came in contact with one side of the excavation. He attempted to regain his feet, but he was overcome with a sense of numbness, and fell back into the slime and ooze that covered the jagged bottom of the pit. How long he lay there unconscious the boy did not know. He came to himself with a knowledge of a peculiar pain in his fingers and toes. At first he did not realize where he was, but the impenetrable darkness and cold, damp atmosphere soon recalled his situation. He drew up his hands and feet to make an effort to rise, when an army of rats scampered away from about him. They ran over his body and trailed their cold, slimy tails in his face. He sprang up with a shriek of terror that again startled the blood-curdling echoes through the chamber.

ATTACKED BY RATS.

From the feeling of his hands and feet, Gallagher knew that the rats had been gnawing at his flesh, but he did not stop to make any investigation until he escaped from the pit and was again on his way back to the place whence he had started. To get out of the pit he found no easy task. Twice he clambered up its ragged sides until he almost reached the top, and as many times fell back to the bottom. The third time trying was successful, and he drew himself out exhausted and fainting. He lay down on the floor of the corridor for several minutes before he had strength to proceed, and then gathered himself up and started away from the spot which was so full of terrors to him. When he reached the first cross corridor he sat down on a jutting piece of coal, and for the first time found that the rats had gnawed two of his fingers to the bone, had eaten away the uppers of his shoes and the flesh of his two great toes. He had often heard old miners relate over their lunch in the dismal chamber the experience of men lost in mines and attacked by rats, and now the reality of the thing nearly overcame him with its horror, and he almost swooned at the thought of what he had passed through and what he might yet be doomed to experience. To add to the terrible situation of the poor lad, hunger began to make itself manifest, and the tortures of thirst were beginning to afflict him. As was the case with the ancient mariner, there was

Water, water everywhere,
But not a drop to drink.

From the fact that he was growing so hungry and thirsty Gallagher judged that he had been a long time in the mine. Up to this time he had been confident that he would be able to find his way out of the old mine in the course of a few hours, but now hope seemed to be leaving him. He conjured up pictures of his mother waiting for him to come home at night, of her anxiety at his tardiness and then her uncontrollable grief at the news of his loss. Then his mind dwelt on the horrors of a death by starvation or suffocation in the mine, and the sickening thought that he was followed by a horde of ravenous rats that were ready to make food of him even before he was dead. These thoughts almost drove him crazy, and he aroused himself, determined to make another effort to escape from the mine. He followed one of the cross corridors and wandered about in the maze of chambers for hours. Once he thought he heard his name called, and he shouted in reply, only to hear it repeated for many minutes by the demon echoes.

THE LIGHT OF THE SEARCHERS.

While wandering about in this way, a prey to the tortures of hunger and thirst, and to both mental and physical agony, he saw a light flash for an instant across the corridors in which he was groping. It was a long way off, but he knew it was a miner's lamp, and felt that parties were searching through the deserted chamber for him. Regardless of the hard, jagged floor, the strong walls, the ever-accompanying stream of rats that kept in his rear, or dangerous pits that might lie ahead of him, he ran rapidly toward where he had seen the light, shouting until he was hoarse.

"This way! Here I am! Here I am! This way, for God's sake!"

The echoes took up the cry and carried it through the noisome avenues, lifted it up to the roof of the vault, and repeated it until it died away in a wail of agony; but the bearer of the light did not hear it in the course he had taken, and the almost exhausted boy, footsore and bruised by frequent falls on the hard, rough mine floor, hurried on in the subterranean labyrinth. Suddenly, in turning the angle of one of the corridors, a light again flashed upon his sight, and then another, and another. A voice shouted a prolonged call:

The inevitable echoes had scarcely taken up the cry when the boy returned the call with all his soul in his voice:

"Here I am! Come this way!"

His answer was heard, and in a few moments sturdy miners had found the boy. But he did not know that he was rescued. He had fallen to the ground unconscious, his strength having gone out with his last wild cry. He was soon taken out into the pure air, where his frantic mother and the most of the village had assembled to await the result of the search. The people were wild when it was announced that the boy was found, and his brave rescuers were borne aloft by the crowd. It was a long time before young Gallagher was restored to consciousness, and then it was only at intervals that he was in his right mind. In these same intervals he related the story of his fearful sufferings, and learned that he had been nearly two days and one long night wandering among the horrors of the mine. His lucid spells lasted but a short time, when he would be seized with frantic ravings, in which he would plaintively beg of Barrett not to hurt him, and then shriek—

"The rats are eating me up! Drive them away! Drive them away!"

The moments in which he was sane became less frequent, and finally days passed without one gleam of reason lighting up the darkness of his mind. The surgeons found it necessary to amputate one hand and three toes that had been gnawed by the rats, and to perform other painful operations to save the boy's life. One day last week, his physical condition being such as to permit it, they decided that he must be taken to an asylum for mental treatment, and expressed grave doubts of his permanent recovery. The brute Barrett, when the result of his cruelty became known, was compelled to fly the place in the night to escape the fury of the exasperated populace, and personal effects left by him were burned, as an expression of the indignation of the people against him.

JENNY LIND.

A LITTLE STORY AND A LETTER THAT MUST HAVE BEEN SINCERE.

"Pearl Rivers," the old-time correspondent and poetess of the New-Orleans Picayune, has lately been at Niagara Falls, and has written to that paper a long letter from which we quote the following:—There is an old friend of mine here, Capt. St. Clair Thomasson—Capt. Thomasson, who used to be "the most popular captain on the river"—Captain Thomasson, who says that he is afraid of only two things under heaven and earth—a mad dog and a widow—and who used to believe in Spiritualism, until the mediums told him there was a wife waiting for him in heaven, and she was a widow—Captain Thomasson, whom everybody knows, and, he tells a pretty story of the beautiful singer, Jenny Lind, who came here on a visit when I was a little girl in pantalettes. It seems that she came up the river on the Captain's steamer, the "Magnolia;" and he fell in love with her, of course, he always does, escorted her from St. Louis to this place, and accompanied her on the morning after her arrival to see the mighty Horse-shoe Falls—when she had drawn near enough to take in its awful grandeur, all unconscious of the crowd that had followed, more to see Jenny Lind than the Falls, this noble woman and simple child of genius fell on her knees with clasped hands, and raising her tearful eyes to Heaven, sobbed out in broken English this touching little prayer:

"Almighty God, wilt thou be pleased to accept my heartfelt and most grateful thanks for allowing me to look upon this one of Thy greatest works. Its creation tells us there is a God, and if there is an unbeliever on the face of the earth, be pleased to bring him forth and show him this mighty work of Thine."

The Captain has never forgotten this prayer. How could he forget it? and I have given it to you word for word as he repeated it to me on the steps of the hotel last evening. He has also given me a letter that he received from the famous singer after her marriage. I send you a copy; would not part with the original for anything. Read and see what a womanly woman the celebrity was:

NEW YORK, May 22., 1852.

My dear, good Capt. Thomasson:

You will believe me when I tell you that I was really glad to receive your kind, friendly letter. I knew you felt for me, for I put great trust and earnest confidence in a character like yours, and will, to my last breath, continue to feel perfectly sure never to be deceived in similar honest faces as that of your own kind. Do you understand that straightforward language, my good Captain? I know you do; and if you were here I would heartily shake you by the hand and tell you how beyond words I feel happy: and what a rich blessing God hath given me in a husband I not only love with intense, warm love, but one who I also can fully and truly respect and admire, and whose advices are the wisest and purest. I did not think when he played for you at Springfield (do you remember?) that I was going to give him, and with a light heart, too, my whole life and existence; and little did I fancy that he feels toward me as he did and has done for years past.

My dear, good Captain, why does not your friend appreciate such a solid friend as you are? I cannot help feeling that you still will see your heart's desire accomplished, and that you yet may, one day, from experience know what it is to be married, and happily married.

My most serious wishes go with you, and I shall not forget you, good Captain, and do not cease to believe that God most surely will give you "your heart's desire," as long as you wish a thing so holy as a wedded life. God has shown me a great wonder in sending me a friend just when I thought; now it is too late to expect any earthly happiness more, and why should He not in His graciousness think of you—you are much better than I.

Shall I really give you what you asked of me for your little friend? Well, so I will. Tell her when she gets your gift, that it is the hair of a person who truly believes that Capt. Thomasson is made to make a good woman very happy, and that when he gives away his heart, he gives it entirely and with confidence.

We leave America this next Saturday, the 29th inst., in the "Atlantic." We do not intend to ever return to this country again, and God also knows if I shall ever see you again. If not, we will, through the only Mediator—the only door through which we will find entrance to heaven—our Saviour, our blessed Holy Saviour—certainly meet again, where no separation, no sorrow, no grief is to be.

Oh, dear friend! let us prepare ourselves for that lasting joy, and never cease to feel that next to the immense gift of this, our Saviour, is pure affection and pure friendship of greatest value, and that people who have felt those feelings here below certainly will continue to feel the same "up-stairs," and therefore it is that my good Captain will find me even in heaven his truly attached friend. God be with you.

JENNY GOLDSCHMIDT, born Lind.

THE DANGERS OF SAILING BOATS.

Ignorance and recklessness cause most of the accidents which occur, and a study of the following caution, given by the Cape Ann Advertiser, would be profitable to all whose love for the amusement is greater than their experience or ability in "managing" a boat:

One fruitful source of danger is the habit of making sheets fast when sailing in squally weather. The flaw comes in an instant, quick as the lightning's flash, and strikes the sails, which are made fast, and ere they can be loosed, the damage is done, with the boat nearly filled with water or capsized and sunk, jeopardizing the lives of those on board. Always have the sheets in your own or some reliable person's hands, when sailing in squally weather, as they need as much care as the helm, if not more.

Another source is carrying too much sail. Most of the small yachts' sails are made too large for sailing when there is a stiff breeze. There seems to be a recklessness in this respect which we oftentimes wonder does not result more disastrously. Then again those venturesome persons carry sail too long, deeming it a weakness to reef and make things snug and safe. They had rather run the risk, and many of them pay the penalty with their lives.

The large majority of these sailing accidents could be avoided, if persons would only exercise a little common sense. The first and most essential thing for those who wish to sail a boat is to learn the principles from some experienced hand and to practice sailing, taking each reverse just as they come and practicing it over and over again, and especially recommend it for family use, as being free from any hurtful preparation.
