GRINNEL CO. LTD. NEW PASTOR FOR SPRINKLER IN CATHEDRAL AT BAUMERT PLANT VALLEYFIELD

Sprinkler System Has 875 Sprinkler Heads Spread Throughout Plant.

100 Lb. Water Pressure.

Inexhaustible Supply of Water Found in Baumert Co. Limited Well.

The Grinnell Co. Limited of Canada have just completed the installation of a sprinkler system in the Baumert Co. Limited plant in Huntingdon. The Baumert Co. Limited have from time to time urged that a local fire brigade be formed to combat fires and it is largely through their recommendations that our local brigade was formed. In the Baumert plant they have their employees organized as a fire brigade but to help combat any fires that might occur they have installed this most modern fire fighting system.

The system is of a costly nature but the reduction gained in the way of insurance rates made it a profitable investment, and at the same time practically eliminates any danger of losing the plant by fire.

In speaking to Mr. Fred Cummins, who was the engineer in charge of the installation we learned that no less than 875 sprinkler heads were installed throughout the plant, which has 36,000 square feet of floor space. The sprinkler head will come into active operation when an excessive heat hits same. When the heat hits these sprinkler heads it will open the way for the air in the pipe lines to escape and to be followed by water which will throw a spray a distance of eight feet. This spray will in most cases put out a fire as it functions its work at an early stage of the fire. When this spray comes into action a large fire going starts ringing at the rear of the plant living the alarm to the employees. The water comes out of these outlets at a pressure of 35 lbs. and when the direct pumping system is put into action the water pressure is increased to 100 lbs. The sprinkler system pipe lines are not only found near the ceilings in all rooms but are found between the ceiling and floors, under stairways, cupboards, etc. Of the 875 heads installed the majority of them will come into action when heat in excess of 100 degrees is reached.

Fire Hose Equipment

The fire hose is not being overlooked with the new sprinkler system being installed but the contrary are being installed. In order that hose may be available in the event of a fire starting on the roof or in an outbuilding a supply of fire hose is to be kept out of doors in a new hose shed about to be built. In this small building will be kept the supply of hose, nozzles, wrenches, axes, etc. On Tuesday the fire underwriters paid an official visit to the plant and approved the system as installed. On a previous occasion when the system was installed Mr. Windsor of the Fire Underwriters Association made a test of the Baumert Co. Limited well. He found that with three streams of hose running for one and a half hours at a pressure of 100 lbs. it was impossible to pump the well dry. With such a supply of water their water supply has been rated as 100% perfect. This was one of the points which prompted the company to install a water system of their own, for at times the town water pressure is not as high as might be desired at that part of the town.

On Tuesday, Mr. Harris of the Canadian Fire Underwriters Assn. again made a test of the water pressure, which proved to be a test with that of two weeks previous. The water was shot over 50 feet high.

All that remains to be done to complete the system is the replacement of the water tower, the present water tank having seen its day.

CHIEF LORRAIN HOPES TO BRING PRISONERS BACK IN TEN DAYS

Charles Slayton, alias Dayton, the 22-year-old prisoner at Butte, Montana, who was identified on Monday before a Butte tribunal as Fred Palmer named in a warrant for the murder of Adelard Bouchard, is expected to be brought before the extradition commissioner at Butte on Monday next.

Slayton has announced his intention to fight return to Canada where he is charged jointly with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. McDonald with murdering the Lachine taxi driver.

His intention to fight extradition has been wired by Chief Lorrain to his assistant Sergeant Shannon at provincial detective headquarters. Chief Lorrain in his telegram said that he hoped to return to Montreal within ten days with the three prisoners. The McDonalds have been surrendered to the Canadian authorities by the United States extradition commissioner and the surrender of Palmer, alias Slayton, is expected by Chief Lorrain. He will remain in Butte pending the return of the three accused.

TWO KILLED WHEN C. N. R. HIT TRUCK

Victims, Carting Bricks, Were Caught on Level Crossing at Laprairie.

Two men were killed when the motor truck which they were riding was struck by a C. N. R. train at a level crossing at Laprairie on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Oswald Patenaude, 30 years of age, of Laprairie, driver of the truck, was instantly killed, while his helper, Elias Lariviere, aged 50 years, also of Laprairie, suffered internal injuries from which he died Sunday afternoon at the Notre Dame Hospital.

The passenger train from Massena Springs, N.Y., struck the truck, loaded with bricks from the St. Lawrence Brick Co., at Laprairie. The truck was smashed to bits, Patenaude was caught in the wheels of the locomotive and was thrown some feet to one side of the tracks.

The train crew carried Lariviere aboard and although he was given medical attention on the way to the city, he was too seriously injured to recover.

Lariviere was Patenaude's assistant, both men being employed by Albert Beaugrand of Laprairie, the owner of the truck.

At the time of the accident the two men were driving behind another of Beaugrand's motor trucks, which was also loaded with bricks. This vehicle crossed the tracks a few feet ahead of them in safety. It is presumed that the noise of their machine prevented the two men from hearing the train whistle, and they drove on to the tracks when the train was only a few feet from them.

The engineer tried to stop, but he was unable to do so, and the momentum carried the train 200 feet past the crossing.

Sunday evening it was reported at Laprairie that Patenaude was married a month ago. He leaves his wife, and Lariviere, whose wife died six months ago, leaves seven children.

A jury under Deputy-Coroner Prince found a verdict of accidental death on Monday.

PEONIES FOR EVERY TOWN AND VILLAGE

On the departure from Canada of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, a gift of Canada-grown peony plants will be made to each city, town and village in the Dominion as a memento of his visit during the Diamond Jubilee year.

The Prince has been assured that the peony flourishes, unprotected, in any part of the country, and would be, if adopted by the people, an appropriate Canadian national floral emblem.

The plants which have been placed at His Royal Highness's disposal are to be distributed through the managers of the Bank of Montreal at its branches throughout Canada, in accordance with His Majesty's wishes.

His Royal Highness's query writes: "Remembering the beautiful specimens of the peony which were sent on board the Empress of Australia, His Royal Highness is glad to think that these flowers will now be distributed so widely throughout Canada—in commemoration of his present visit and of the Diamond Jubilee of the Confederation."

SHE EXPECTED TO SEE INDIANS

An American Tourist Was Looking For Them in Montreal.

"Where do we meet the Indians, and are they very wild, please?" inquired a young woman tourist of a Montreal hotel clerk recently. She was a member of a party from Springfield, Mass., and was under the delusion that Montreal citizens lived in terror of the redskins. The clerk questioned her, and discovered that her state of mind was due to a letter from a cousin in Fort William, who had written:

"We have trouble with the Indians here, who steal our fowl and occasionally use the back acres for their tribal dances. They look very fierce and wild, but if you talk to them soothingly, they seldom hurt you. However, they are worse nearer Montreal, so look out when you go there on your vacation."

The lady is a teacher in one of Massachusetts public schools.

PLAN TO KEEP HIGHWAYS OPEN DURING WINTER

Convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association Now Siding at Niagara Falls, Ont.

With the fourteenth annual convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association set for September 27th, 28th, and 29th, at such a centrally located and attractive spot as Niagara Falls, Ont., the indications are for the largest attendance which has yet been recorded at any meeting of this non-partisan and non-commercial body, working solely for the advancement of the cause of improved highways. Requests for reservations and program are reaching the head offices daily and the accommodations of the Clifton Hotel, the convention headquarters, are likely to be fully taken.

Several additions to the programme as previously published have been announced by G. A. McNamee, the secretary-treasurer. An added speaker will be C. A. Davidson, chairman of the Good Roads Board, Alberta, who will deal with the maintenance of natural earth roads. A topic of unusual importance will be winter roads for motorists, as studying the matter with a view to early action, while the Quebec Highways Department has intimated that some of the main highways of that province will be kept open this winter. Ontario has had more experience than any other province in this modern road development, and A. A. Smith, acting chief engineer of the provincial roads department, will talk on methods, equipment, cost data and the economic aspect of winter motor highways.

DAYLIGHT RAID ON BANK IN MONTREAL

Branch Bank in City Looted of $2,500 at Noon Yesterday.

THREE MEN IN HOLD-UP.

Clerks Forced in Vault—Mr. J. A. Bussiere Formerly of Huntingdon Was Teller in Bank.

Walking boldly into the branch of the Bank of Montreal at Papineau and St. Catherine streets yesterday, three men fired their pistols under the noses of the clerks, and ordered them into the book vault of the bank. They then proceeded to loot the teller's cage of $2,500 and decamped.

The staff of the bank were taken off the guard. The three men walked casually into the bank closing the door after them. While one stood at the door the other two ordered the clerks to hold up their hands emphasizing their order with several shots from the automatic pistols that each carried.

The terrified clerks withdrew hurriedly away from the cages and counter when ordered to do so and were herded together into the vault of the bank. One of the bandits paused before a burglar proof safe in the vault that contained a large sum of money but evidently finding it beyond his skill gave it up.

On leaving the bank premises the bandits walked towards Cartier street slowly but finally broke into a run and jumped into a parked automobile. Passers by alarmed by the clamor the clerks made inside the bank, released them from the vault which was not locked. Other pedestrians secured the license number of the auto and a good description of it.

All the men taking part in the hold up were young, and employees of the bank stated, not one being more than 25 years of age.

One of the men forced into the vault was Mr. J. U. Bussiere, a former teller in the Bank of Montreal branch in Huntingdon.

A Good Doctor.
"Let me kiss those tears away, sweetheart," he begged tenderly.
She fell into his arms and he was very busy for a few moments. But the tears flowed on.
"Will nothing stop them?" he asked, breathlessly.
"No," she murmured. "It's my fever, but go on with the treatment."

MURDERERS OF BOUCHARD TO BE EXTRADITED

Order of U. S. Commissioner Yet to be Approved of by Secretary of State.

QUICK DECISION.

Authorities Surprised at Speed in Completion of Trial.

Unless Washington reverses the decision of a Colorado extradition commissioner, George C. McDonald, alias H. G. Carter, and his wife, Doris, will be brought back to this province to face trial for the murder of Adelard Bouchard, Lachine taxi-operator, Denver dispatches announced Friday. After Chief Immigration Inspector W. C. Robie, of Malone, had identified the couple as two of the trio that tried to cross the border in the victim's limousine shortly after the murder, Commissioner Robert E. Foot ordered them to be held for extradition.

The ruling of the commissioner is subject to review by the Secretary of State at Washington, and pending that procedure the couple will remain in custody in Denver.

Chief Dan D. Lorrain, of the provincial force, who has been at work on the case from the start, attended the hearing, and presented the substantial evidence gathered under his orders before and after the arrest. The chief left Friday night with Inspector Robie for Butte, Mont., where the extradition of the man said to be Fred Palmer, the third accused, will proceed at once.

From present indications the trio should be brought back to face their trial some time next month. The rapidity with which the work of procuring extradition has gone forward indicates that something approaching a record may be achieved for procedure of this description. Chief Lorrain is sanguine concerning the early return of the accused.

Speed Surprised Authorities.

The completion of the trial of the McDonald pair Friday came rather as a surprise to authorities here.

Bouchard, with whose slaying the trio are charged, was engaged to drive them across the border on July 17th, the Crown says, and was shot twice and then thrown from his limousine into a deep ditch on the Caughnawaga-Malone highway, three miles from Huntingdon. The wanted three were refused entry to the United States at the River, N.Y., when they attempted to flee the country in the murdered man's auto. One of them tried clumsily to force Bouchard's name to customs papers, and wore the dead man's hat at the border.

Inspector Robie turned them back because he was dissatisfied with the manner in which they answered his questions.

The arrest took place in Butte, Mont., about a month after the murder. They were taken into custody there on several charges of passing bad checks. The man who police say is Fred Palmer, named in the murder warrant, has been held in the Montana city since the arrest, but the McDonalds were taken to Denver to face false pretence charges there.

Butte, Mont., September 19.—Identification of Charles M. Slayton, 22, who has been held in the jail here since August 22 on a charge of forgery, as one of three to have murdered Adelard Bouchard, was said to have been established.

D. D. Lorrain, chief of the provincial police at Montreal; W. C. Robie, chief immigration inspector of the U.S. Government at Malone, N.Y., and Max P. Zall, Denver attorney representing the British consul at Denver, were those who interviewed Slayton. Officials would not say whether it was Lorrain or Robie who identified the man.

Slayton, who was jailed here in company with the Carters on a charge of forging a $130 cheque, maintained his innocence, stating that on the date of Bouchard's murder he was employed on the farm of John T. Hunter, at St. Valres, Missouri. He said he would fight extradition.

The Seats of the Mighty.

A certain officer went calling upon the village belle. The old man kept a very vicious hounddog that was left untied at night. When the canine had finished with the captain the seat of the latter's trousers was missing. His brother officers, joshing him about his predicament, asked if the girl was worth risking his anatomy in that fashion. The captain replied: "Maybe not, but I have always been willing to give up my seat to any lady."

3 BURGLARIES MADE IN WEEK AT HOWICK

W. Logan's Bus Stolen And Abandoned A Few Miles Distant.

2 STORES BURGLARIZED

Cornerstone of United Church Expected to be Laid on Oct. 1st.

Three burglaries have taken place in Howick within a week, which, however, has not netted much loot for the thieves. W. Logan's bus was found some miles away along the Malone-Montreal highway, the robbers discovering that the gasoline supply failed.

Mr. Beaudin's general store was also broken into for some reason the thieves decamped without taking much property. The last building entered was during the night of the 20th, Sept., when the post office store of L. Gebbie had three windows and doors smashed before and entrance was made. Boots and other articles were taken to the value of several dollars. This building having been previously entered special precautions had been taken to make another attempt difficult, and apparently several plans were taken to break in before they succeeded. There is talk of the necessity of having a policeman on duty at night.

The first service of the United Church was held on the first Sunday in February, 1925. Rev. Donald McLeod officiating without induction. Under his oversight the congregation increased from one hundred to one hundred and seventy, and, recently St. Louis came under his charge, adding about thirty members. In June Mr. McLeod desired to sever his connection and his resignation was accepted with much regret. Several ministers supplied the pulpit and on the 13th, when the congregations met and unanimously decided to call Rev. Donald Morison, B. A., of Kirkhill, offering him a manse and nineteen hundred dollars stipend. The call with one hundred and fifty signatures was presented to the Presbytery on the 20th, Sept., 1927, and will be dealt with speedily. There is reason to hope that Mr. Morison will accept the call.

The cornerstone to be laid on top of the ten foot basement is expected to be placed in position on Oct. 1st, with all the appropriate ceremony that the importance of the religious and historic event demands. The floor of the auditorium will form a platform on which the program will be carried out.

THE INVITING FARM HOME

Going along the road, did you ever notice how inviting some farm homes look and how uninviting others appear? There are places which have about them the very look and feel of home, others which, to the passerby at least, are cold and forbidding. It is not all a matter of cost or of fineness, either. Some very humble homes, too one to enter them; some very pretentious places are entirely without appeal.

Usually, the difference is more a matter of surroundings than of anything else. Cleanliness and cleanliness, the green of grass and trees, the reasonableness of vines and shrubbery and rich-hued blossoms—these are the things that change an ordinary farm place into a lovable and inviting farm home.

These are things to which too little attention has been given. Beautiful and inviting farm homes we have, and the number of them increases with every year; but there remain too many yet bleak and bare and unhomelike. The traveller along our roads still passes too many places at which he must feel he would not care to stop.

Stately manor house or humble cottage it is possible to make the farm home homelike, to endow it with charm and appeal and the sense of comfort and kindness. And the labor of so endowing its home will not only prove a pleasant labor and one of love to the farm family that engages in it, but will also prove to be one of the most profitable labors from a purely financial standpoint, in which the family could engage.

Sarcasm.
The Man: "Two eggs poached medium soft, buttered toast, not too hard, coffee, not too much cream in it."
The Waiter: "Yes, sir. Would you like any special design on the dishes?"

Canada and the World.

The month of September has witnessed two international moves which will influence Canada's relationship with the world in no slight degree. One was the election of Canada to a seat on the governing body of the League of Nations; the other, the trade dispute between France and the United States. What influence the League of Nations exerts in world affairs is difficult to estimate, but it is the great gathering place of the nations and closer relations between countries always take their origin in friendships between men. In the old days the formal visits among the crowned heads of the nations completed treaty negotiations which had been started by the civil rulers of the nations, but the war changed all that, and now democracy meets at Geneva.

Canada is a trading country, as a matter of fact we now rank fifth among the trading nations of the world, and Europe is still the greatest buying and selling continent of the world. But signs are not lacking that the nations of Europe wish to trade only with those who will trade with them, and the policy of the United States has been to sell and not to buy so gradually a feeling of antagonism has developed against United States' products.

Since 1919 the United States has enjoyed complete access to the European markets, chiefly because the United States had the money to finance trade while the other countries were verging on insolvency. During the years that followed the countries bowed to necessity and paid the price without getting like favours in return, but now times have righted themselves. Europe is now back to a settled financial state and Great Britain has recovered its old financial position as the world's banker for short-term trading loans. The United States is still the leader in long term credits, but there is not the heavy demand now for loans of this nature, and the European countries do not feel the need of continuing the old arrangements.

The first break has been through the new Franco-German trade agreement, which in many cases has jumped the duties payable on United States goods 250 per cent. The United States complains, but is met with the argument that they have been following the same policy themselves, and that before they object they should do to others as they would have others do to them. If the United States makes a new deal with France, they will have to make changes in their tariff so that the term "favoured nation treatment" will really have a meaning. Up to the present it has meant nothing so far as the United States is concerned.

Both countries have many competent men who are capable of driving good bargains, and perhaps before another twelve months have passed, the United States will have adopted a new trade policy. In the meantime a tariff war between them will tend to help Canadian exporters, and if our representatives at Geneva handle Canada's attitude shrewdly we should continue to gain in Europe.

The Convention Draws Nearer.

In a little over two weeks the delegates from all parts of Canada will have gathered at Winnipeg to select a permanent leader for the Conservative party. Those who are in charge of the organization expect about 3,000 delegates, and if their estimate is correct, it shows a healthy interest in public affairs. No landslide is in sight for any man and it is quite possible that many ballots will have to be taken before a decision is arrived at, but for the moment it would appear that the selection will be made from one of three men, Bennett, Guthrie and Drayton. Mr. Bennett has the most colourful personality and carries more of an appeal to the rank and file than do either Mr. Guthrie or Sir Henry Drayton. But on the other hand Mr. Guthrie will take with him strong support from many sections of Canada, and his tactics in the North Huron by-election have added to his prestige. In this three-cornered fight for a rural seat in Western Ontario the Conservatives went into the struggle with a candidate who was not personally popular, and the only assistance given was by Mr. Guthrie, who took a chance of hurting himself, but having won deserves all the more credit.

Quebec has developed the habit of going en bloc and while Mr. Cahan has been cultivating the Quebec vote, it is doubtful if he will hold it past the first ballot, and it looks as though Sir Henry Drayton will receive the Quebec support when the crucial test comes. Sir Henry is the only one of the three who speaks French, and by strange chance a short speech made by him recently at Coteau-du-lac caught the popular fancy among French-speaking Conservatives. The occasion of the speech was not a political one, for it was at a community picnic arranged by Larry Wilson, the Liberal member for Vaudreuil-Soulanges, and Sir Henry did not speak about politics.

The United Farmers in Politics.

Two interesting phases in the Farmer movement of Ontario have developed this month. The first was in the North Huron by-election, which had been caused by the death of John King, who had represented the county at Ottawa as a Progressive since 1921. The seat was vacant for nearly nine months, giving all parties a chance to decide what they would do. The Farmer group held a convention and selected a man to run on the Progressive platform. Now the Progressive platform in Ontario is not the same as the United Farmers of Ontario platform, and when Miss Macphail went into the riding she demanded that the candidate run as a U. F. O. In this she was supported by Mr. Morrison, leader of that wing of the farmer movement and the candidate changed his platform. This brought Mr. Drury into the fray and he denounced the U. F. O. policy at several public meetings that he addressed in support of the Liberal candidate. The result was a split in the vote, and also in the Farmers' party, for many former Conservatives and Liberals who had turned Progressive decided that their old parties were better than a group that was fighting itself, and so they voted for either Mr. Spotten or Mr. Hislop, the Conservative and Liberal candidates.

On top of this comes the announcement that Mr. Raney, the political leader in the Ontario legislative field, has been appointed to the Bench. Thus the Farmer movement is in the position of having lost its chief spokesman in the Legislature at a moment when it is split in two by factions. At this moment it would appear that the days of a third party in Ontario are numbered.

ROUSES POINT IS BIG SMUGGLING CENTER

Forty-five miles from Montreal on the famous King Edward highway, Rouses Point, one of the most famous northern villages in New York state, is regarded by prohibition officers as the greatest rum smuggling centre on the Quebec border. It is the base for operations along the 80-mile international boundary from the St. Lawrence to Lake Champlain as well as the transfer point at which Canadian trucks back loads for boat distribution throughout New York and all of New England.

A village of 2,000 population, built flush against the Quebec border, a railroad centre and with the historic Richelieu river as a foreign refuge for Lake Champlain rum craft, Rouses Point is described by leaders in her greatest industry as the "most favored city" of the entire Canadian border. Nowhere else have so many factors conspired to produce a secure operating base for the growing smugglers' traffic.

Daily truck caravans carry Canadian stocks to the New York border by no less than eleven routes, to be stored for small lot shipments over New York's highways by night. River craft heavily laden with European as well as Canadian liquors bring their cargoes thirty miles from St. Johns, Quebec, on the Richelieu to the head of Lake Champlain. Here they are transferred to swift motor launches for shipment to New York points as far south as Ticonderoga.

Since 12,000 motor launches are listed in the United States customs office here as operating upon Lake Champlain. Including the legitimate tourist traffic, as many as 4,000 automobiles cross the border in a summer day at Rouses Point. Between the St. Lawrence River and Lake Champlain there are sixty-seven smaller points at which open highways cross the international line. Yet fourteen auto patrols of two men each constitute the entire border force in this vast open territory. Three pursuit boats capable of a maximum speed of thirty-five miles an hour, make up the rum navy of Lake Champlain where the smuggling craft draft about at 45 to 55 miles an hour.

A tribe of 2,600 Indians of the St. Regis government reservation, thirty miles northwest of Malone, carry on some of the largest and most troublesome operations in this section of the rum front. From this reservation which spreads over the international line the "fire water tribe" as they are known to prohibition officers, carry on the outlaw trade in row boats and canoes, paddling silently by night down the numerous New York tributaries of the St. Lawrence to four concentration points on the state highway system to make up auto loads from their small cargoes.

Because the reservation is theoretically cut up by the international boundary United States agents have never been able to stamp out the smuggling operations. Under a Canadian treaty, half of the Indians of the tribe are wards of the Dominion, while the other half are under the jurisdiction of the United States. When United States custom officer or prohibition agent arrives the Indian stocks are always in the possession of the Canadian Indians. When the Canadian authorities arrive which is less frequently, the stocks are safely in the hands of American redskins.

The lone-handed operations in rum smuggling have produced an unwonted prosperity in the St. Regis reservation.

vation. With the two governments providing all the necessities of life, rum profits are all "velvet" for the bootmen. The new affluence of the tribe finds expression in many curious extravagances of housing and adornment.

Private dwellings built to straddle the international line are numerous all along the Quebec border and constitute a problem in enforcement which is still to be solved. Within 30 miles of Rouses Point almost a hundred such smuggling havens are in operation.

All are spotted by the United States prohibition forces, but nothing can be done to stem the flow of rum which passes in them from Quebec to New York simply by being removed from the kitchen to the dining room. At the St. Regis reservation, United States officers always find the stocks on the Canadian side of the line.

A "line house" near the village of Champlain has trucking platforms on both the Canadian and American side. Many have large storage sheds on the Canadian side. Line houses were once a mere accident of pioneer location; prohibition has made them an institution of the border country. Real estate operators hold the available sites at square foot rather than acre prices. A 100-foot front on an improved cross border highway near Fort Covington recently brought $25,000. It had been carved from land normally worth between $150, and $200, an acre.—(Leader-Mail.)

APPLE CROP IS NOW ESTIMATED

Commercial Apple Crop in Our Province is Estimated to be Lower Than in Previous Years.

The Canadian commercial apple crop is now estimated at 92 per cent. with 2,740,800 barrels compared with 2,984,200 barrels last year and 82 per cent. of a five year average of 3,327,600 barrels. This makes the estimate approximately 243,000 barrels less than 1926 and 258,000 barrels less than the forecast of a month ago, the reduction being due to extensive apple injury, hail damage, and severe storms in the eastern provinces and prolonged drought followed by hail damage in some sections in British Columbia.

The combined commercial pear crop of British Columbia and Ontario indicates a yield of 103 per cent. or 211,730 bushels compared with 205,210 last year. Ontario crop is estimated at 185 or 114,320 bushels and British Columbia 97,400 bushels or 68 per cent. of 1926. Quality is fair to good.

The following is a summary of the commercial apple crop prospects by provinces on September 1st., as compared with last year and the five-year average.

	Percent 1927	of Estimated 1926	of Estimated 1926
B. C.	78	1,026,800	1,312,360
Ontario	94	558,200	598,700
Quebec	94	108,600	115,800
N. B.	90	27,000	30,000
N. S.	110	1,020,100	927,370
	92	2,740,800	2,984,200

The commercial apple crop in the Province of Quebec is now estimated to be 94 per cent. or 108,600 barrels as compared with 115,800 barrels in 1926. Fruit is of good size, fairly good quality and good color. The following table shows the crop estimate by districts for 1927 compared with 1926:

	1926	1927
Abbotsford	26,500	11,000
Rougemont	28,000	14,000
St. Hilaire	25,000	50,000
Chateauguay Woodlands	7,500	4,000
Oka-Saguenay	4,000	2,500
Montreal	7,000	6,000
Hemmingford	6,600	5,000
Chateau Richer	2,000	2,500
Island of Orleans	4,000	8,000
Charlesbourg	2,000	3,000
Dunham-Sweetburg	1,500	1,200
St. John's	1,700	1,400
Totals	115,800	108,600

Chateauguay-Woodlands: The commercial crop is forecasted at 4,000 barrels or 50 per cent. of last year. There are no outstanding heavy varieties although Wealthy, Alexander, St. Lawrence and Fameuse show best prospects. McIntosh are practically a failure.

Hemmingford, Covey Hill, Barrington, Sherrington: The commercial crop in these districts is now estimated at 75 per cent. of last year or 5,500. Heavy yielding varieties are Fameuse, McIntosh, Wealthy, St. Lawrence and G. Russet. Duchess and Alexander are very light. Fruit is shining well and of excellent colour, while quality is only fair.

P. E. ISLAND'S SUCCESS.

Canada's smallest Province, Prince Edward Island, says "Toronto Saturday Night" has long been noted for the beauty of its scenery, the fertility of its soil, and the industry of its inhabitants, more than three-fourths of whom are domiciled in rural districts. The Canadian Bank of Commerce, some years ago the Province gained further prominence as the scene of successful and profitable fox farming, and it continues to hold first rank in an industry that has invested more than $8,000,000 in silver foxes.

Within the last five years Prince Edward Island has won fresh renown by the production of certified seed potatoes. The soil and climate of the island are most suitable for the culture of potatoes, but the growers have not been content to raise only the ordinary strains, and they have, by their energy and foresight, established a very high reputation for the quality of two kinds of seed potatoes, the Irish Cobbler and the Green Mountain. In 1918 one carload of these was shipped from the Province, while by 1926 Prince Edward Island has become the chief source in America for these varieties, the production in the latter years being about 60 per cent. of the total quantity grown on the continent.

The history of this interesting development in what is generally regarded as a commonplace form of agriculture dates back to 1916, when the Dominion Division of Botany demonstrated the benefits of improved methods. These have been widely adopted and, together with rigid field inspection, have ensured the production of tubers which cut without the usual damage, and produce potatoes with the least possible loss from disease.

At present practically every farmer on the Island has become interested in improved seed, better cultivation, spraying and increased production. The results have been remarkable, as several farmers have succeeded in producing 275 or 300 bushels of certified seed potatoes to the acre, and the financial returns from sales in a wide market have proved to be well worth the attention that has been given to these improved methods.

A co-operative association sells the seed potatoes under a registered trademark and the organization has at its command the services of Mr. J. W. Boulter, a Dominion Government representative, who has devoted much technical skill and energy to the interests of the growers.

It is expected that this year about 16,000 acres will be planted with certified seed potatoes, which should yield approximately 4,800,000 bushels. The progress made in this branch of agriculture is an example of the value of enterprise and of adherence to high standards and has been of great benefit, not only to the farmers of Prince Edward Island, but the growers in many other parts of the continent.

Walk The Rest.

"How did you screw up courage to propose to the rich Mrs. MacTavish, Sandy?"

"Losh, mon, 'twas awful! I'd sworn I'd do it come Monday night, so I took her for a ride in a taxicab, and wif' one eye on the meter tickin' awa', I had her won at the end o' half a crown."

Mrs. Brown: "Jane, has Mr. Brown come home yet? I thought I heard him just now."

Jane: "No mum. That was the dog that was growling."

Frank A. Blair.

A former Huntingdon boy who wishes to contribute prize money towards the continuing of the Huntingdon Fair Baby Contest.

A letter has been received from Mr. F. A. Blair, Vice Pres. and Secretary of the Centaur Co. (Canada) who wishes to contribute prize money towards the continuing of the Baby Contest at Huntingdon Fair.

The following extracts are taken from Mr. Blair's letter:

"I left Huntingdon County in 1892, since which time I have been a constant reader of the Huntingdon Gleaner. Have always taken an interest in everything that had to do with the old county."

"I note that the Huntingdon Fair which in my time was the biggest event of the year in the whole section, has this year added a feature namely the baby contest. It would seem from the story in the Gleaner that it got a proper start, and was carefully conducted. It was also interesting to note that I was familiar with so many of the winning babies, that is, familiar with their families, one for instance, the child of Norman Brooks, whom I have known for all of his life. In fact, I know a little something about the parents of all of them."

WHEAT CROP SECOND ONLY TO THAT OF 1923

That Canada's 1927 wheat crop will be the second largest in her history is indicated by a new estimate made by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This sets the 1927 figure at 458,741,000 bushels, only fifteen and a half million bushels below the record total of 1923 and nearly fifty millions above the figure for 1926. The new estimate represents an increase of 101,000,000 bushels over that announced in August.

According to the estimate, Alberta has established a new high record with an estimated crop of 168,862,000 bushels of wheat as against 113,120,000 bushels in 1926 and 144,834,000 bushels in 1923. The total wheat production of the Prairie Provinces is indicated at 432,223,000 bushels, as compared with 383,440,000 bushels in 1926 and 452,260,000 bushels in 1923, the record crop year. In 1923 the total wheat crop amounted to 474,199,000 bushels.

Oat production is estimated at 42,199,000 bushels, of which 332,49,000 bushels were produced in the Prairie Provinces. Particularly good crops are being harvested in both Saskatchewan and Alberta, and the estimate for the Prairie Provinces is the second largest ever shown. In 1923, it was estimated that 391,756,000 bushels were harvested in the West.

The estimated yield of hay and clover amounts to 16,524,000 tons, from 10,187,326 acres as revised to date. This is the largest yield on record in Canada, the previous high point having been 16,348,000 tons in 1919.

Good weather is still required for the completion of the harvesting and threshing operations. Damage from frost is still possible. The report refers to the uncertain conditions during the present season, and states that damage from rust and frost has been considerable, particularly in Manitoba and Saskatchewan and points out that oat rust was prevalent in Manitoba.

McDOUGALL SALE.

In another column you will have seen notice of the MacDougall sale. This herd was founded some years ago and has been built up to a high standard, mainly through the owner's good judgment in buying the best sires available.

The cows have always been brought along with the idea of making a good paying dairy. There has been no forcing for records so that these cows will turn over to the new owners right and continue as a good paying investment.

The cows are all young, the oldest being eight years old. Many of them have been bred on the farm. The balance have been purchased with the idea of giving the buyers a good number to choose from and to make it worth while for anyone coming for a carload.

A number of the cows have been purchased from the Cummings herd at Lancaster, and are in calf to either Burnside Supreme Victory, son of Burnside Blossom Andrietta or Edgerstoun Sir Oliver, winning junior yearling at the 1926 Royal.

A Scotch Story.

A Scotch farmer had agreed to deliver 20 hens to the local market. Only 19, however, were sent, and it was almost evening before the 20th bird was brought in by the farmer.

"Man," said the butcher, "you're late with this one."

"Aye," agreed the other, "but ye see, she didna lay until late this afternoon."

"Manufacturing as we do an item which is almost exclusively sold through mothers, and used in rearing babies and children, we have as a firm taken an interest in all of these contests in this country. This is the first time I have noted one in Canada, and if this phase is to be continued, which we feel certain will be the case, we would like to contribute to the interest of it next year. I would like to suggest, if it meets with the approval of the authorities, that the cups which are offered be supplemented by small cash prizes, which might be distributed over a number of units in such a way as to enable a number of mothers to participate in the receipt of a prize on their particular baby."

REVENUE KEEPS UP TO MARK, DESPITE REDUCTIONS IN TAX

Increase This Year so Far is $9,000,000.—Income Tax Receipts Grow And Collections Improve.

(By WILLIAM MARCHINGTON.)

National revenue is being well maintained notwithstanding reductions in income and sales taxes announced by Hon. James A. Robb in his last Budget. The increase this year to date is approximately nine million dollars. Customs duty yielded an increase of nearly seven millions, the total revenue for five months ended Aug. 31st, 1927, being $71,504,795, as compared with $64,569,775 for the corresponding period last year.

Excise taxes decreased by nearly three millions, the figures being $7,421,894 for the first five months of the present fiscal year, as against $10,059,549 last year. These taxes include the stamp tax on cheques and the tax on matches, which were reduced by Mr. Robb.

The reduction in the sales tax from 5 to 4 per cent. also has curtailed revenue, which dropped from $27,411,317 last year to $24,523,820 this year. Excise duties, increased by more than three millions, from $21,054,250 to $24,557,163. This is attributed to increased vigilance in the department, which has checked smuggling of cigarettes at the border.

Perhaps the most notable increase, however, is in income tax collections, which, in spite of a 10 per cent. reduction in the tax, amount so far this year to $47,860,729, as compared with $42,827,005 for the corresponding five months of last year. The department has been vigorously prosecuting delinquents, and no fewer than 600 persons have been haled to court under the new regime for failure to file returns or for filing fraudulent returns.

Police Magistrates have exacted $10,000 in penalties.

ONE GOOD DAIRY BULL GOES TO BLOCK EVERY EIGHT MINUTES

It is unfortunate for the dairy industry that good bulls are sent to the butcher along with the mediocre and scrubs when their service is no longer needed in the herd. A careful estimate, says Dr. J. C. McDowell, of the United States Bureau of Dairy Industry, shows that really high-class dairy bulls are going to the butcher at the rate of one every eight minutes from daylight to dark every day in the year. How to stop this great slaughter and keep these bulls for a life-time of service is one of the great problems in dairying today.

A study of cow testing association records shows which are the good bulls and which the inferior ones. But unfortunately, by the time these records are available most of these bulls have been slaughtered. Doctor McDowell says that it is of little use to learn how good a bull was after he is dead, so he is urging that some system of exchange be started at once among owners of well-bred bulls in order that such animals may be kept until their daughters have demonstrated their sire's true value.

ST. AGNES

(Intended for last week)

On Sunday the 11th of September, a Missionary Day was held in the Parish Church of St. Agnes, on the occasion of the departure of Father William Murphy, C.S.C., for India. The solemn High Mass was sung by Rev. Father Willie Murphy with Rev. Ph. Boulay as a Deacon, and Father Harold Murphy as a Subdeacon. The sermon of the occasion was preached in both languages by Rt. Rev. Ph. Boulay who has been himself a missionary in India for 15 years. The departure of a young missionary from home, reminded him, he said, of the same emotions that he experienced on his own departure 15 years ago. He spoke of the divine mission given to the Apostles, and to the whole church to preach the Gospel and baptize throughout the whole world. Every body can be a missionary by prayer and the material help he can give the propagation of the faith. The Gregorian Chant was executed by the choir under the direction of Rev. Father David, pastor. The solos were sung by Mrs. Alphonse Leblanc, Miss Annie Quenneville, Mr. F. St. Pierre, Mr. H. Desautels, and Mr. A. Quenneville. Dinner was served at the Murphy home. The missionaries, Rev. Father David and many friends were present.

In the evening a very interesting lecture enhanced by lantern slides was given by Rt. Rev. Ph. Boulay who spoke in general of the mission of the Holy Cross Order in Bengal. He also explained the pictures in both languages, the customs of the people, their habits of life and the methods used in the conversion of the 19,500,000 inhabitants of the territory of Bengal and Arrakan, the territory allotted by the Sovereign Pontiff to the Holy Cross Order. Among those methods he signalled especially the work done in the schools and told us of the eagerness shown by the natives to get an education. Many of the youngsters are obliged to walk 4 or 5 miles or in the rainy season to go to school in a kind of shallow tub that they push through the water by the aid of a long pole.

Very often they come to school without their breakfast, and so the missionaries are obliged to nourish their bodies before nourishing their intelligences and hearts. As there is a great need of missionaries, the parishes being from 150 to 180 miles square, he drew the special attention of the congregation to the necessity of vocation to priesthood and to missionaryhood. He remarked the sacrifices that parents have to undergo to bring their children to such a noble end and that it would be a great blessing if God gives resistance to the grace of God not to do all that is possible to answer the will of God on one's child; some parents think more of temporal matters and of their own welfare than of the future and spiritual welfare of their own children. He noted that if God gives wealth and health and prosperity he wants every one to correspond to those graces and give to God the share he wants and belongs to Him. Then the Rev. Pastor said "au revoir" to the new missionary in the name of the Parish and in his own name. Reverend Father William Murphy answered in both languages expressing his gratitude to all his friends in the parish and asking them a souvenir in their prayers and Eastern work. He thanked his parents for what they had done for him and assured them of his prayers and souvenir when he will be far off in Asia. The evening was closed by the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament sung by Rev. Father Willie Murphy, Rt. Rev. Ph. Boulay as a deacon and Rev. Harold Murphy as a sub-deacon. Before the people left the church tickets were drawn that had been given to all those who had given an aim to the new missionary for his missions. Two souvenirs will be sent by Father Murphy to those having drawn the lucky numbers—Mr. Emman. Mainville of Port Covington and Mrs. Catherine Quenneville of Sainte-Agnes. The gifts amounted to $75.00.

PURCHASING VALUE OF DOLLAR INCREASES

Nearly Six Per Cent. Higher Than in December, 1925.

Since December, 1925, the purchasing value of the dollar has increased nearly 6 per cent., and now stands at the highest point since July, 1924, the National Industrial Conference Board announced recently.

On the basis of living costs last month, the Board said the dollar now is worth 61.7 cents, as compared with the 1914 dollar. It was lowest in July, 1920, when its purchasing power had shrunk to 48.9 per cent. of the pre-war dollar.

Declining living costs were given by the Board as the reason for the increase in the dollar's purchasing power, which, it is said, has been steady during 1926 and the current year.

During this period, the Board said, average wage earnings have fluctuated not more than four per cent., and employment has been steady, and in these circumstances it saw a fundamental factor arguing for wholesome business conditions in the immediate future.

Gentleman: "What would you do with a dime if I gave it to you?"

Gentleman: "My good fellow, here's a quarter. Go and support yourself for the rest of your life."

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENTS

The announcement of a birth through the columns of this paper is always welcomed and inserted free of charge, but often a personal announcement is desirable and here are a few of the proper forms.

Two visiting cards are printed. On the larger card will be printed the name of the parents, on the small baby card appears the name of the child. The two cards are tied together by ribbon. Pink ribbon is used for the baby girl and blue for the baby boy.

Two other forms that are quite proper and often used are as follows, and in each case only one card is printed.

Women Voters to Outnumber Males in England.

Women will be in political ascendancy in England next year so far as voting power is concerned, according to the statistical review of the Registrar-General just published.

Over 5,000,000 Will be Added to Lists.

It is estimated that when the bill extending the franchise to women on the same terms as men, to the introduction of which next year the Government is committed, is enacted into law, 5,249,000 voters will be added to the electorate. As the women electors already number more than 8,000,000 compared with 11,000,000 men, this will give the women more than 2,000,000 majority.

Men Are Already in Minority in Some Divisions.

There are already five English divisions where the men electors are in a minority, and three others where the numbers of the sexes are equal. All these divisions, with one exception, are consistently Conservative.

JOHN WESLEY'S IDEA.

"Gain all you can; save all you can; give all you can."

"It is no more sinful to be rich than to be poor, but it is dangerous beyond expression."

"How can you, on principles of reason, spend your money in a way which God may possibly forgive instead of spending it in a manner which He will certainly reward?"

"You will have no reward in heaven for what you lay up; you will for what you lay out. Every pound you put into the earthly bank is sunk; it brings no interest at all. But every pound you give to the poor you put in the bank of heaven. And it will bring glorious interest."

"If you are not in pressing want give something, and you will be no poorer for it. Grumble not, fear not, lend unto the Lord, and He will surely repay."

If you earn but three shillings a week, give a penny out of it, and you will never want. But I do not say this to you who have ten or fifteen shillings a week, and give only a penny. I have been ashamed for you, if you have not been ashamed for yourself. Give in proportion to your substance; open your eyes, your heart, your hand."

His biographer says: "He lived with the utmost economy himself, and gave away the whole surplus of his income. When he had thirty pounds a year he lived on twenty-eight and gave away two. The next year, receiving sixty pounds, he still lived on twenty-eight and gave away thirty-two. The third year he received ninety pounds and gave away sixty-two. The fourth year he received one hundred and twenty pounds, still lived on twenty-eight and gave to the poor ninety-two."

the Canadian farm woodlot plays a conspicuous part in the growth of forest products. According to the last census the total annual value of products provided by farm woodlots was $72,000,000, which was over 32 per cent of the value of all forage crops. About one-third of the pulpwood used in Canadian pulp-mills comes from settlers' holdings.

BRIGHT CATSUP THAT WILL KEEP
It is not necessary to use artificial coloring matter to make a bright red catsup of fine flavor and body. The trick of making good colored catsup is simple if a few precautions are observed, say specialists at an experiment station where catsup making has been studied intensively.

First, select fine, red ripe tomatoes, say the specialists. Second, avoid the use of cloves, allspice and other spices containing tannin because they darken the catsup. In their place use cayenne pepper and paprika and other spices which used in the proper combination give an excellent flavored catsup.

Third, add the salt, sugar and vinegar near the end of the cooking so as not to cause darkening of the catsup or loss of vinegar during the boiling.

Home-made catsups may have the body and keeping quality of commercial catsups if they contain sufficient sugar, concentrated vinegar and salt, say the station workers. The following recipe is especially recommended with the necessary precautions outlined above:

Thirty pounds of tomatoes after removing skins, seeds and green spots, 1 1/2 cups salt, 3 1/3 cups of redistilled vinegar or 6 1/3 cups of white vinegar, 8 cups sugar, 6 teaspoons celery seed; 3 teaspoons mustard, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 3 teaspoons paprika, 2 teaspoons cayenne pepper, and 4 onions.

THE HIGH FORFEIT

BY

BASIL KING

Author of "THE HAPPY ISLES" Etc.

All I know is that since he's got the news of it—well, it's been just touch and go with him."

Theo's manner changed to sudden anxiety. "Oh, but Spen, he is not ill, is he?"

"I'm not going to tell you what he is. You don't deserve to know. How much did you think about his being ill when you went off?"

"He wasn't ill then."

"He's always ill." You know a well as I do that with a heart like his a very shock might kill him. But you wouldn't care if it did him.

"Whether I'd care or not isn't your business."

"Isn't my business"—he picked up his clubs as if to go away—"when you bring disgrace on the whole family?"

"I must ask you again, Spen, to be careful of your words. One of these days—"

"One of these days, and some day very soon you'll be ready to take poison to think you've been such a fool."

"If it's being such a fool to marry the man I love, as my mother did before me—"

"Ah, cut out the high-falutin'. What your mother did before you we can't help. But don't you see that it's made a difference to us?"

Theo's fine eyebrows went up in surprise. "A difference to us?"

"Sure a difference to us. Look here! Let's talk facts. How do you think we stand—socially, I mean here in Old Tilbury?"

"She made a disdainful gesture. 'I don't care anything about all that.'"

"Bunk!"

"I never did care anything for social position."

"Aw, go on! You wouldn't be an American if social position was not in the back of your mind first, last, and all the time. We can deny it until we choke, and we'll still be trying to creep higher up, you as well as the rest of us. If that's the case—and I'm talking facts—we've got to take warning by what mother did to us."

Theo was frankly puzzled. "What mother did to us?"

"Just beginning to live it down, after nearly thirty years. When the daughter of a man whom everybody recognized—"

"Ran away with a bookkeeper in her father's bank. That's it, isn't it?"

"No! Ran away with a bookkeeper whose father kept a livery stable right under everybody's nose. That has been the trouble with father. He married mother. He made money. He pegged his way up. He got to be president of the Hudson River Trust, known to everyone in Wall Street. And yet, in spite of all that, here in Old Tilbury, which you might call a testing tube of everything social in the United States—"

Theo held her head haughtily. "Here in Old Tilbury his position is very good."

"Very good, but not the best. Listen here! We've got a big place. We're members of the best country clubs. We know some of the right people. But up till lately we have not known the right people in the right way. We've known them as neighbors, but not as friends. See the difference?"

"She snapped her fingers. 'I don't care that about your difference.'"

"You bet you do. That's only bull. You've felt it as much as I have that the right people have only nodded to us in country clubs, or grinned at us in coming out of church, or asked mother to be patroness of their charity things because she has the cash. But the right people were getting to do more. They'd begun asking us to tennis on their private courts, to lunches and teas to dinners and dances. Little by little we'd have got back into the big American front row in which mother lost her place when she ran away with dad—"

"Spen, how dare you?"

"But Spen went on serenely: 'In which mother lost her place when she ran away with dad, and that dad's been working all his life to win back for her. And now because you—because you have married that—'"

Bless your soul, Spen, I don't blame you. If the Lord made you a Miss Nancy it isn't your fault that you can't be a man."

Spen picked up his clubs again, muttering to himself: "Damn old lunatic! Ought to be in her grave."

Theo went toward her aunt, trying to make peace. "Spen did his best he could, Aunt Kathy dear—"

But Aunt Kathy only pointed with her horn spectacles at George. "Where's he taken you to live?"

"Just for now a little hotel."

"Cheap, I suppose."

Theo did her best to bluff. "Oh, not so very."

"Hm! Well, I'll come and see." The bride and groom exchanged embarrassed glances. "That'll be lovely, Aunt Kathy. In a few days' time, when we get settled, I'll let you know."

"Oh, I'll come before you get settled. I bet it's no better than a dog-hole," she pointed to the desk. "Go over there and write the address. I don't believe he's worth a cent."

Making another start as if to speak, George was silenced again by Mrs. Blent's appearance between the portieres, where she stood for a second, looking on.

"You're quite wrong, Aunt Kathy," Theo corrected, as she stayed her aunt the address. "We stayed at the Parcview in Atlantic City, and you know what that means when it comes to spending money."

Mrs. Blent bustled forward with a cry, "Theo!"

"Mother!"

While mother and daughter clasped each other, she danced round them, tugging at her mother's dress.

"Oh, mumsie, dear, do make Theo tell us how she got married. We haven't heard a thing."

Mrs. Blent threw up her hands. "Oh, dear! Oh, dear! It's all so unappetizing. I don't believe I could listen to a thing about it."

Miss Kathy's croak was delivered like the utterance of an oracle. "You'll get over it, just as your own father did. Everyone gets over everything it doesn't matter."

"But, mother," she insisted, "we've got to know sometime. As we've had yet in her telegram, just saying she was married."

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear! And the plans I'd made for her wedding day. Theo darling, there's not been an hour since you were born that I haven't had the model for your wedding gown in the back of my mind—and now she's gone!"

She didn't spare her father any pain. "She didn't spare her father any pain," came from Aunt Kathy, "when she brought home Jackson Blent."

Mrs. Blent whimpered on. "And the house linen I've got put away for you, all embroidered with your initials—"

Seeing Spen knock off the ash of his cigarette into the scrap basket, she picked up an ash tray and crossed the room to put it beside him. "Spen darling, do use the ash tray. You'll set fire to the house." Returning to the center of the room, she dropped into a chair. "And now I suppose you'll have one of those city apartments, as poky as a cabin on board ship—"

Theo sat down to discuss this subject with her mother. "You do not have to start out with a great big house like this."

"Not a great big house like this, but an establishment of some sort, however modest. . . . Darling, I do wish you could learn to sit like a lady. If girls only knew how unappetizing their legs can look, especially to men—"

Theo changed her position. "Oh, mother, don't worry about that. Tell me about father. Was he cross?"

"Cross is not the word, dear. He nearly had a shock, and you know what a shock might mean to him, with his heart—"

"With his temper, with his arrogance," Aunt Kathy shrieked. "Temper and arrogance! I'll kill him one of these days and then you'll be saying God called him home."

"Your father has hardly said a thing, dear; but he'll be here in a minute—"

"Oh, mother," Sheila broke in, at the end of her patience, "do make Theo tell us where she got married and what she wore!"

"What I'll wear, Sheila dear, but what I've got on? It was all I took away with me, and that little old suitcase."

"Yes, but where did you go?"

While Theo gave the details of the ceremony and the honeymoon which she knew her mother and Sheila were longing to know, feeling strangely superfluous. The whole thing seemed a family affair among the Blents. He himself scarcely counted. He was not to be reckoned with. Even Theo felt that she could best manage the situation by being herself the protagonist and leaving him in the back ground. As nearly as possible he was ignored. Spen sat with his back to him, Miss Kathy, when she did anything, scanned the morning paper. The three women, of whom one was his wife, had their heads together to hear or to tell the points of an episode in which his part was scarcely worth referring to. By a strong effort of the will he choked back his anger, knowing that if he had to speak anger would only strangle him. Unless he could keep cool, or unless he spoke from that sheer passionate emotion which always supplied him with words, he would only make himself ridiculous. Schooling himself to be calm, he prayed in his desperate inarticulate way that he might be able to make use of his opportunity when it came.

CHAPTER VII

A door slammed in the distance. There was a noise of puffing in the hall. Some one was refusing to be relieved of his hat and stick.

"Hannah, get out of my way!"

While Theo rose to meet her great cousin, Mrs. Blent whispered: "Here's your father, dear. Do be careful. The least little excitement, the doctor says, might easily—"

Bent pulled aside the portieres, making the rings rattle against one another. In his Harris tweeds he was distinctly the city man who on Sundays and holidays likes to be the country gentleman supervising his estate. Red in the face, almost apoplectic, he descended the three steps carefully, and went straight to his favorite big chair. He looked at no one in particular, not even Theo. Sinking heavily into his chair, he took off his Panama, throwing it on the floor on one side of him, and dropping his stick on the other. While he was getting his breath Theo took her place beside George, slipping her arm thru his protectingly.

Mrs. Blent's solicitude betrayed itself fustily. "Sheila, bring your father that footstool."

He kicked it away while Sheila was placing it. "Don't want it." As Mrs. Blent stuffed a cushion at his back he pulled it out and threw it on the floor. "Take that thing away."

Putting the cushion back on the sofa whence she had taken it, Mrs. Blent was still alert. "Sheila, pick up your father's hat and stick. This room looks like a pigsty."

"Leave them alone," he commanded. "Only staying a few minutes. Came in to see Theo. Where is she?" Looking over at her for the first time, he said, tenderly and rather sadly, "Come here."

Sighing and moaning, Mrs. Blent sank into a chair, Sheila perching on the arm of it in order to give comfort. Leaving George, who continued to stand behind the barrier of the table, Theo came slowly to her father, standing before like a culprit, yet ready to defend her husband and her act.

Blent spoke with a kind of yearning gentleness. "What made you come back?"

"To see if you'd forgiven me."

"I've nothing to forgive."

Theo's face lighted up. "Oh, but I thought—"

"You'd a right to do what you have done. I told you so the other evening."

"The other evening you said—"

"That you were of age and your own mistress. I said that you'd a legal right to marry this man, only that if you did we should all have to abide by the conditions."

"But the conditions you made then were that—"

"That if you married him—"

She broke in proudly, "Which I have done."

"That so long as you remain married to him—"

"It would be as if I'd never been your daughter."

Blent's voice was still gentler. "Exactly."

"But, father, I must remain married to him."

"That's the reason I asked you why you come back?"

"I came back because I couldn't believe—"

"That I meant what I said. Well, now you see I did."

"Oh, but you can't mean it. I am your daughter. I can never be anything else."

"I didn't say you'd be anything else. I said it would be as if you hadn't been my daughter. But it's always within your power to get back your position. The day you leave him for good—so that you can become free again—"

"But how can I leave him for good—and become free again? I have married him. I love him."

"That's entirely your own affair, dear. If you can't leave him—you leave us."

Sheila cried out promptly. "You don't leave me, Theo. I'll stand by you whatever anyone says."

"Thank you, darling!" She turned again to her father. "But, father, we've only done what you and mother did thirty years ago."

Miss Kathy's cackle of a laugh almost amounted to a scream. "And that's what gets his goat. You've made him feel the way he made your grandfather feel. He'll never pardon you for that."

"And with you and mother," Theo went on, pleadingly, "it worked out all right."

"Oh, did it?" whooped Aunt Kathy. "Much you know."

Blent turned on the old woman savagely. "If you know anything, speak out."

"All I know is what I've heard. Jackson, that no man works so hard for his money as the man who marries it."

Theo intervened tearfully. "Oh, don't let us talk about all that. Papa, darling, I want to know why it's so wrong for me to have done what my own mother did."

"What's wrong is that your mother got me, while you've got a man who'll never be better than a millstone round your neck."

Once more George was about to spring forward with some half-strangled exclamation, but Theo waved him back. "Oh, but that can't be, father—"

"You'll see."

"But I've seen already. He's—he's ideal. When you brought him down here after he came home wounded—"

"Oh, yes; he was good enough to be wounded. He took it well. I understand he made a good soldier. But the war is over—"

"And our debt to the men who fought it is over too, I suppose."

"You didn't marry him to pay that debt."

"You didn't marry him to pay that debt."

"You didn't marry him to pay that debt."

The town lockup has had a busy summer of it, largely occupied by Malone citizens. Four prisoners of the court were locked up on Thursday night for creating a disturbance at the Moir Hotel. They were each fined $10, and costs, not having the funds available at the time their auto was held as collateral.

On Saturday evening three men of Malone and a man from Montreal, who was holidaying in Malone were at the Moir Hotel and created a disturbance. They were lodged in the lockup and were let out on bail on Sunday noon. One of the prisoners broke away from Bailiff Small when being taken into the Court House but as he held the keys for the auto and the auto was put under guard he gave himself up at 2 a.m.

Saturday evening a Chrysler coupe with a party of four Americans ran into the deep ditch opposite the pump house. The car was forced into the ditch by a car which was parked and started up. The Chrysler was about to pass. The Empire Garage truck soon hauled the auto onto the road in an undamaged condition.

Mrs. H. G. Gessner of New York City returned Sunday evening after an enjoyable holiday spent with relatives at their homes in Huntingdon and at their summer residences, Port Lewis.

Mr. Cameron, formerly of Beauharnois spent the week end with his mother, Mrs. Shanks.

PICKING APPLES.

Rough handling is responsible for a large percentage of the decay and deterioration of apples in transit and after arrival at market. Every picker, packer and shipper should bear in mind that each apple is made up of delicate tissue, and any undue pressure and abrasions will cause a breakdown of the flesh. Careful handling should begin in the orchard, is the warning given in a Dominion Department of Agriculture bulletin on packing apples in barrels and boxes. Pickers should be instructed in the correct method of picking in order to avoid finger bruising and to prevent the pulling of the apples with the spur adhering to the stem, this being a frequent cause of skin punctures. Apples should be pulled by using the full upward motion to separate from the spur with the stem intact. The picking basket should be properly padded to avoid bruising and should be carried in front of the picker at all times.

The doctor listened to a patient tell how his breathing troubled him, and then offered to give him something to stop it.

LIFE IS GROWING LONGER.

When your grandfather was born he could expect to live only 37 years, but your baby born in 1927 has an expectation of nearly 58 years of life if a boy, and 60 years and 5 months if a girl.

This is due of course to the startling progress medicine has made, says an Old Country newspaper. For tens of thousands of years there was practically no such thing as medicine. Man had a few herbal remedies, but he had no way of combating terrible diseases and epidemics such as the plague, typhus, and smallpox diseases which swept away whole cities, even whole races. He did not know their causes, so he not only had no cures, but no way of preventing them.

The idea that infectious diseases could be spread by insects and animals had never occurred to him. He did not even know that many were due to dirt, and he had no knowledge of disinfectants.

Medicine has pulled down the death rate in London from seventy to about twelve per thousand yearly; and medicine is saving an enormous number of infant lives.

There are people that tell you that savage races are naturally healthy and long-lived. It is true that savages rarely suffer from cancer and certain other diseases of civilization, but it is absurd to say they are long-lived. Most savages are old at an age when civilized people are middle-aged.

Old age is being pushed farther and farther back. A century ago a person was old at sixty; nowadays a person of that age is merely middle-aged and in mind and body still fit for many years good work.

The fat woman was rushing up and down the station platform trying to get aboard the train. Finally the conductor asked her: "Madam, which end do you want to get on?"
"You mind your business and I'll get both ends on," was her response.

CANADA HAS FINE ARTIFICIAL SILK INDUSTRY

The Dominion's Vast Supplies of Pulpwood Offer Great Possibilities For The Development of This Interesting Method of Manufacture.

When we gaze on a great forest tree it is not easy to visualize it in terms of rich cloth and silken garment. And yet man, not content with silk, cotton, wool, linen, and a number of other fabric materials, now employs wood for the manufacture of the latest of textiles—artificial silk, or rayon, as it is called by the trade. The basis of all artificial silk is cellulose, and cellulose is the principal constituent of wood.

As long ago as 1889 Count Hilaré de Chardonnet produced artificial silk, but it has taken many years of incessant labour to bring the various processes to that stage of perfection which is essential to commercial success. That the industry has now become a great undertaking is shown by the fact that the world's production has risen from 7,500 tons in 1909 to an estimated 100,000 tons for last year.

The general principle underlying the manufacturing methods is the treatment of the cellulose with chemical reagents to give a gelatinous solution which can be forced through a number of minute nozzles into a bath of another solution (or in one process into air). This latter solution causes the coagulation of the liquid emerging from the nozzles and thus creates the actual filaments of artificial silk, though the material has to pass through several other stages, varying with the process, before it finally emerges as that glistening transparent gossamer to which we are now so accustomed, but which would have amazed people fifty years ago.

The possibilities for rayon manufacture in Canada, with her vast pulpwood areas, are enormous. The countries which were first to develop the industry, however, were not those which possessed much raw material, but those which already had the organization, the equipment and the markets for a big

THE MENACE OF THE CORN BORER

The Pest Has Been Discovered in Many Localities in Quebec.

The result of the scouting for the corn borer now going on in the western part of the province of Quebec shows the pest to be present in many localities. Some of our readers will perhaps remember that last year our paper called their attention to the discovery of the first born borers in the province of Quebec. There was last year a marked increase in the area invaded by the pest and on many Ontario farms the corn crop was completely ruined. The loss in two Ontario counties was estimated at $5,000,000. Though not unforeseen, the present invasion should be a lesson to the farmers who have left undestroyed remnants of corn or stubble of the previous year's crop.

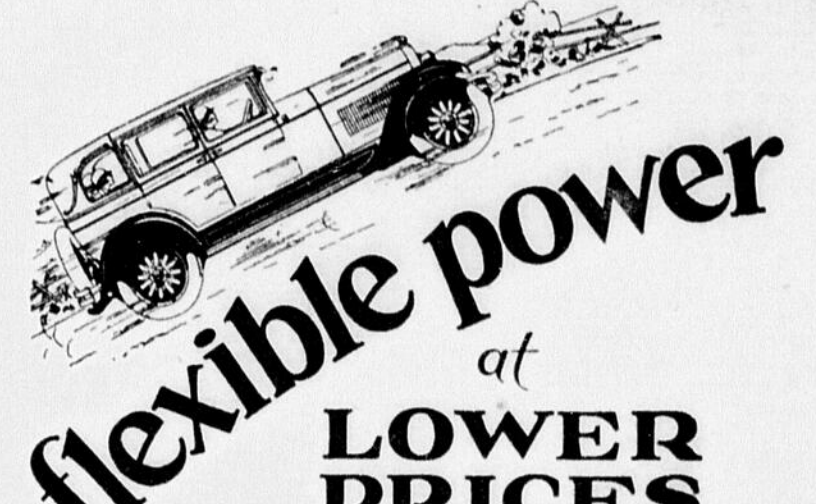

Corn borers hibernate in corn refuse of all kind and if same is not burnt or ploughed under before June 1st, the borers are allowed to transform into pupae and later in the season come out as moths. This means a new generation that will work havoc in the corn fields and spread miles away.

When farmers have any reason to suppose their corn is more or less infected with the borer they should immediately advise the Minister of Agriculture, at Quebec, who will see to it that scouts carefully inspect the field. All interested parties are urged to give a helping hand to trace the actual distribution of the pest in order to facilitate its control.

THE LOCAL PAPER

The Local Newspaper is the best friend that a retailer can hope to have. It is the means by which he is enabled to carry his messages to the very heart of the homes where they will be read and listened to by every member of the household.

The local newspaper stands by the local merchant through thick and thin. Like the trade paper, it works when it gets paid and when it doesn't. The merchant who does not use his local paper is paying for it just the same. He may not think so, but he is. The local paper is the backbone of good government. It is the most potent force in moulding public opinion, and to the credit of local editors be it said, that as a class the local newspaper is the most incorruptible institution of the present day.

If there is a single retailer anywhere in the country who does not use his local paper liberally and intelligently he is making the biggest mistake of his business career, for the local newspaper will furnish the demand which will sell his goods.

Using the local newspaper does not consist in running standing advertisements, but it does consist in supplying the editor with the best of copy for every issue. The man who does not change his copy hurts himself and hurts the paper. His trade wants a message, and the man who puts up a message in the most attractive manner is the man who gets the business.—Wesley A. Stranger.

The Flapper

On all sides lamentations are heard about the faults and failings of the modern girl, the greatest and most widely discussed of these seeming to be her dress. Her skirts are shorter, her sleeves have disappeared, her quantity of clothing has grown less and less, even in dead of winter. And those who remember the trailing skirt and high collar of another generation shake their heads in dismay and trepidation, whilst looking with horror to the future.

Still, she looks healthier than ever. She has come out of the age of perpetual shivering, snuffing and smelling, to the state of rugged health.

The Flapper

On all sides lamentations are heard about the faults and failings of the modern girl, the greatest and most widely discussed of these seeming to be her dress. Her skirts are shorter, her sleeves have disappeared, her quantity of clothing has grown less and less, even in dead of winter. And those who remember the trailing skirt and high collar of another generation shake their heads in dismay and trepidation, whilst looking with horror to the future.

Still, she looks healthier than ever. She has come out of the age of perpetual shivering, snuffing and smelling, to the state of rugged health.

Tommy entered the parlor where his sister was entertaining Mr. Dubleigh. Walking up to the latter, he held out his hand in the open palm of which were a dozen small white objects.

"What's these?"
"Why, those are beans," answered Dubleigh with an ingratiating smile.
"He does know 'em, sis," said Tommy triumphantly to his sister.
"You told me last night that he did not."
