THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

The Success of the Tontine System of the Equitable Life Assurance Society is Indisputable.

It will be seen that its pecuniary benefits, after the payments of death claims, are to be enjoyed exclusively by the surviving contributors to the Tontine partnership; while, on the contrary, the pecuniary benefits of ordinary life insurance are enjoyed by the heirs of those who die. By this system every member of the partnership has an insurance on his life, while to those who live longest an equitable disposition of the common property is secured.

How is it in the ordinary form of Life Insurance? A man 25 years of age, insured under the ordinary system for $10,000 by the annual payment $198.90 dies during the first year. His heirs will receive a payment amounting to over 5,000 per cent. of the money invested! Should a dividend be also paid, the disproportion between the money expended by him, and the money received by his heirs, will be still greater; and the transaction may appear to be unjust to those who live longer and pay more to the Society.

Now, although it may be theoretically correct that the surplus from the payment of a premium in the case of a man dying during the first year, is the same as that derived from the corresponding premium of one who lives long, yet in fact, as any one can see, no profit results to the Society from the transaction which we have referred to. Indeed, for those who die early, there is no investment which is so pecuniarily profitable as Life Insurance. It has therefore been urged that Life Insurance is correspondingly unprofitable to those who do not die early—that is, to those who live long. But this objection, although fallacious, cannot find a point to rest upon in the Tontine system; for there is certainly no violation of equity, when by a mutual agreement the accumulated surplus or dividend is enjoyed exclusively by those who live long, and who contribute steadily year after year to its formation. This is precisely what is accomplished by the Tontine system as first introduced, and now successfully practised by the EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY. And the nature of the system is of itself a guarantee of its permanent success.

LONDON, November 10.

The factory of Messrs. Cook & Jones, wholesale clothiers, at Tamworth, Staffordshire, has been destroyed by fire; 600 operatives are thrown out of employment by the disaster.

DUBLIN, November 10.

To-morrow Cardinal McCloskey will attend the commencement of the Catholic University in this city, when Cardinal Cullen is to preside as Chancellor. Several Bishops, the Lord Mayor and leading citizens are expected to be present. The University will present an address to the American Cardinal. Cardinal McCloskey will embark at Queenstown on Sunday on board the steamer "Abyssinia," for New York.

PARIS, November 10.

The Minister of Finance has informed the Committee of the Assembly that the revenue since the commencement of the present year is $22,000,000 in excess of the estimate.

HAVRE, November 10.

The "Ville de Paris" is now moored to the quay, apparently in a safe position. Her stern is considerably damaged. It is expected she will go into dock to-morrow.

LONDON, November 10.

The following order, dated November 16th, has been addressed to the Russian troops in Khokand: "The territory of the right bank of the Syr Diaris, from the Russian frontier to the river Naren, hitherto belonging to Khokand, is annexed to Russia."

UNITED STATES.

GALVESTON, Texas, November 10.

The steamer "Buckthorn" was despatched outside again at three o'clock this morning, in search of the missing passengers and crew of the "City of Waco." She will cruise west sixty miles along the coast before returning. Captain J. N. Sawyer, agent of one of the Mallory line, also started out, on board one of the pilot boats, in search of the missing boats; the only hopes now entertained for the safety of the passengers and crew are based upon the statement of Captain Irvine, of the steamer "Buckthorn," who saw a foremast while out yesterday. He reported that the end of the mast was burnt off, apparently between decks, or very close below the floor on the upper deck, which indicates that the fire was below the between decks, in which case the fire might have been burning some time, and given the officers, crew and passengers ample time to have left the ship before the flames reached the upper deck and were discovered by the other vessels. It is thought the passengers and crew may have escaped in the darkness on board one of the ship's small boats, before the fire on board was seen from the "Fusuyma" and steamship "San Marcos." In this event they would have drifted with the sea about thirty or forty miles westward before the wind changed to the north-west. Another statement, which would appear to confirm the location of the fire, is that the "City of Waco" had a small wooden case or house built around her foremast, where matches, &c., were stored; this casing reached up on the deck four feet, and above the top of the mast was grained; below it was only painted white; the foremast was evidently burned off below the deck; on the upper deck forward large quantities of oil were stored, and as soon as the flames reached this, the entire upper portion of the vessel was swept by the flames. The officers of the "San Marcos"—a steamship lying in the fleet—state that the fire was first discovered about four o'clock; nothing wrong was discovered with the unfortunate ship until she appeared wrapped in a sheet of flame; nothing was seen of her boats or passengers and crew. The return of the pilot boat and steamer is anxiously looked for; it is thought they will be in late to-night.

GALVESTON, November 10.

The English steamer "Abdiel" has just come from outside; she was anchored directly to leeward of the "City of Waco." Her mate reports the fire was discovered about 12:30, and the ship appeared to be one mass of flames. The officers of the "Abdiel" immediately ordered steam up and their small boats in readiness for assistance; the mate states he heard cries of distress from five or six persons in the water; one was the voice of a woman or child, clinging to what appeared to be a spar or a piece of one of the vessel's masts; the sea was breaking over the "Abdiel;" the mate went aft and saw the spar again, but every soul had been washed off it; as soon as steam could be made the "Abdiel" moved up alongside the burning ship as near as the officers dared to go; they state that not a person was to be seen on her, and they do not think it possible for one of her small boats to have been launched. The "City of Waco" was rolling fearfully in the storm; sparks and cinders were flying over and past the "Abdiel;" the officers of the "Abdiel" placed lights in their small boats and had them in readiness to launch; her crew were on the watch for the "City of Waco's" people, but none were seen or heard; the mate states that the fire on the "City of Waco" seemed to spread over the entire vessel in a few minutes; he thinks she was first struck by lightning, which ignited the oil on board, and burned everything on the upper decks before the passengers and crew could leave their berths and reach the boats. The steamer and pilot boats sent out this morning have not yet returned.

GALVESTON, November 10, 9:30 p.m.

The steam-tug "Buckthorn" has just returned from outside; Captain Irvine saw one of the "City of Waco's" boats, which had been considerably burned, and some steps and pieces of the after cabin; no trace of any passengers or crew. It is reported to-night that when the steamship "Clinton" passed the "Australian," lying at the mouth of the San Bernard River yesterday, she was signalled, but the "Clinton," not knowing the "City of Waco's" disaster, did not stop; hopes are entertained that some of the "City of Waco's" people may be saved on board the "Australian." If the pilot boat now cruising in that vicinity does not reach here, there will be another steamer despatched west to-morrow.

WASHINGTON, D.C., November 10.

The Vice-President's condition at midnight was comparatively comfortable, though he had been very restless, and had slept very little during the night. His physician, Dr. Baxter, remarked at 12 o'clock that he was still encouraged to believe that morning would find the Vice-President improving.

UTICA, November 10.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Utica and Black River Railway Company to-day, the old Board of Directors and officers was re-elected. President West's report shows the road to be in a prosperous condition.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 10.

A despatch to the Merchants' Exchange from Port Townsend says the United States revenue steamer "Oliver Walcott," at three o'clock on Monday morning last, picked up one of the crew of the foundered steamship "Pacific," on a raft, 30 miles inside the Straits of Fuca. He says Captain Howell was drowned from the same raft, and the "Pacific" was struck by a vessel under full sail.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 10.

The man rescued by the revenue steamer "Oliver Walcott" says the steamer "California" passed in plain sight of the raft while several were surviving. Other vessels also passed in their vicinity. The "Walcott" has also recovered one or two dead bodies. The steamer "Gussie Telfair" reports seeing a vessel in distress outside the Cape, with the flag union down and bowsprit gone, which was undoubtedly the vessel colliding with the "Pacific" steamer. The "Telfair" has recovered three bodies.

OTTAWA, November 10.

It was feared for a time that a number of the Canada Pacific Railway surveyors were on the ill-fated "Pacific," but the officers in the Department believe they had not sailed.

Mr. Perrault, Secretary of the Centennial Commission, states that arrangements for the representation and products at Philadelphia are now complete. The Advisory Boards in each Province have worked admirably under the directions of the Minister of Agriculture. The greatest success has attended the commissioners so far, and ample space has been secured for all purposes. Special rooms will be provided for the use of the representatives of the Canadian press.

Mr. Macdonald, of L'Orignal, reached here this a.m. on his return home from Thunder Bay. He gives a favorable account in an evening paper of the condition of affairs at that place and the adjacent mining regions. The new stamping machine erected at Thunder Bay for testing ore was, when he left, so far advanced towards completion as to be ready for work in a few days. A new York firm has purchased the silver mining location known as 17 K, and will commence working it immediately. A Canadian company, formed to work the gold mines situated at Heights of Land, near Lake Shebandowan, has succeeded so far in obtaining very fair returns, with prospects of an increased yield.

TORONTO, November 10.

A case of considerable importance to commercial men comes up before Mr. Justice Morrison at the present Assizes—McLean vs. Dun, Wiman & Co., mercantile agents. The plaintiff is a well-known leather merchant, of Yonge street. It appears that the plaintiff, on the very favorable representation of the defendants, gave credit to the extent of $525 to one Ernest Maillon, a shoemaker, who afterwards absconded. Mr. Hillyard Cameron and Mr. M. C. Cameron have been retained for the defendants.

GUELPH, November 10.

Henry White, convicted here last week of the murder of his wife, to-day made further confession in the presence of Rev. W. S. Ball, the jailor and members of the press. It was long, and simply a summary of the evidence for the prosecution. He said that he had hit her on the head with a stick, which he had before placed in the yard. When she fell she said, "Oh, Henry, you have killed me." Prisoner than said, "Well, you wont sauce me again as you have done." She said, "No, Henry, I won't." Prisoner said, "Yes, you will," and struck her on the head with the stick; she groaned, but did not say anything; prisoner then picked her up, and as he did so, she breathed heavily; he carried her to the well and threw her into it, head downwards; after this, he got into his house through the window; brought out a tin pail, which he threw into the well, to make people think she had fallen in, and he called out to Farr, who lives close by, but no one answering, he went to Farr's house and knocked at the door; Farr came out and helped to pull the body out of the well. The stick used was a black ash one, which he laid by the fence in the afternoon. He expressed sorrow at the dreadful deed he had committed, which, he says, was done in a fit of jealous passion.

The Herald says that the Presbytery in the case of Mr. Cullen, the converted Roman Catholic priest, finally decided that so far as concerned them the matter should for the present lie on the table; it was, however, decided privately afterwards that application should be made to Knox College, and if arrangements could be made, Mr. Cullen should be admitted there.

MILTON, ONT., November 10.

The election trial of Wm. McCraney, M.P. for Halton, began to-day at 10 o'clock a.m. in the Court House, his Honor Judge Patterson presiding. A large number of witnesses were examined; the evidence offers to prove that inducements were held out to three electors to vote for McCraney, one instance being personal to McCraney. The respondent claims to be able to easily refute these charges. The Court will most likely be through to-morrow.

QUEBEC LEGISLATURE.

THIRD PARLIAMENT—FIRST SESSION.

QUEBEC, November 10.

The Speaker took the chair at 3 o'clock.

Hon. Mr. Ouimet presented a petition of the managers of the Longue Pointe Lunatic Asylum asking for a loan; also a petition from inhabitants of St. Henri des Tanneries asking for incorporation.

Mr. Mathieu introduced a bill to amend the Game Laws Act.

Mr Ouimet—A bill to provide for cases in which the writ of injunction may be obtained and to regulate procedure in the same; also a bill respecting building societies, and to provide for their amalgamation and other purposes.

In reply to Mr. Landry,

Hon. Mr. Garneau said that this Province, like the other Provinces in the Dominion, had now its Advisory Board for the purposes of the Philadelphia Centennial Exhibition. As to a special commission he might mention that the Dominion charged itself with that duty for the benefit and information of the entire country.

Hon. Mr. Ouimet moved for a copy of the commission of the commissioners appointed to enquire into the facts and circumstances respecting the Quebec Fire Loan; a report of the progress made, and other information connected with the subject.

Hon. Mr. Robertson said there could be no objection to the granting of this motion. He might mention, however, that the Commissioners had not yet completed their report, but were hard at work upon it. So soon as it had been submitted to the Government it would be laid before the House.

Mr. Joly asked if the Government had any business for the House to do. He thought that it might interest the House to know what were the intentions of the honourable leader.

Mr. Angers said the Government had no intention of taking advantage of their victory in order to defer measures. No time would be lost, and measures would be introduced as rapidly as possible. He would remind the hon. gentleman that committees had to be formed, and until this was done but little progress could be made. The Government would not take rest in the same way as Hannibal had done after his victories, and defer all operations.

Mr. Joly hoped that the committee to strike standing committees would meet as early as possible. He suggested that it meet to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

Hon. Mr. Angers assented, and then moved to appoint the committee to assist the Hon. Mr. Speaker in the internal economy of the House, and also to act as the Joint Library Committee.

Mr. Joly pointed out that the motion proposed an increase of the committee, which he thought inadvisable.

Hon. Mr. Angers did not think that it was an increase, but in any case he did not think the number proposed was too many.

Mr. Beaubien called attention to the fact that the privacy and quiet of the library were not observed there. It was the only refuge which members had, and he regretted its quiet was disturbed often by wranglers, much to the annoyance of those who had gone to get quiet. It was not the same at Ottawa, where there was a rule which was strictly enforced. He complained, too, that committees were accustomed to meet in the library.

The Speaker replied that there was an insufficiency of committee rooms; it would be for the new committee to bear this subject in mind.

Hon. Mr. Angers having consulted the record, said he had been in error as to the number of members of the Committee of Internal Economy; he found that it had previously been eight. He therefore withdrew his motion and offered it as a notice.

The House adjourned at 4 o'clock.

PUBLIC OPINION.

NEW YORK AGAINST MONTREAL.

To the Editor of the STAR:

SIR,—I notice that the New York folks propose to take advantage of the Canadian enlargement of the Welland canal by running a ship canal from Oswego to Troy, via the Oswego, Mohawk and Hudson rivers. By doing this, New York has precisely the same advantage over Montreal as she had before the Welland canal enlargement, for Americans will not ship produce for sale on commission in Montreal. So there is not much use enlarging our St. Lawrence canals, unless Montreal can checkmate New York, by being able to purchase in Chicago, and having her grain transported to Montreal so much cheaper than it can be taken from Chicago to New York as to enable Montreal markets to be always lower than the New York markets. Can this be done? It can.

Run a ditch through the head of the Bay of Quinte into Lake Ontario, one mile long, 12 feet deep (water depth), and 45 feet wide, and you have at once New York checkmated by Montreal. You add at once 70 miles to barge navigation, but as the barges are towed by powerful tugs, which can run at full speed from the lake to Prescott, while the barges on the New York route are mainly towed by horses, the saving of time will be tremendous. Again, schooners running down the lakes would reach the carrying place, as it used to be called, some 12 hours sooner than they would Oswego, and 24 hours' sooner if the wind is against them. Prescott is 24 hours from the ocean steamer at Montreal, so I calculate that grain brought by this route from Chicago to Montreal should reach the latter port as much sooner as there is difference of time at present between Prescott and Montreal, and Oswego and New York, by barge navigation.

Respectfully yours,
H.

Montreal, November 4.

C. E. PARISEAU AND THE COATICOOK LUMBER COMPANY.

To the Editor of the STAR:

SIR,—Several articles have appeared lately in the press of your city having for their purpose to excuse an act which among honorable men in our community is regarded with infamy. Who can countenance the fact that men having gained the confidence of the public, hoarded great wealth during a series of years of prosperity, would repudiate what at last should prove an unprofitable purchase or transaction, by absconding to a foreign country with a full treasury box, the earnings of their days of prosperity, then defy with a semblance of impunity the fulfilment of their most sacred obligations?

The reasons alleged by Mr. Pariseau in palliation of his dishonorable act will not find favor with his creditors or the business community; they are intended to deceive others and cast the odium of the responsibility of his acts as best he may. Those he has the audacity to accuse are men who have a record of integrity that they not only invoke for the present as well as for the future guide of their actions; they will not desert their post to escape the ruin of their whole competence inflicted upon them through the non-compliance of Mr. Pariseau's obligations towards them.

Mr. Pariseau, in transacting with the Coaticook Lumber Company, secured the assistance of some of the best legal advice and guidance of your city, both among the lawyers and notaries at command, and took fully three weeks of discussion and consideration of the whole before transfer and completion. That Mr. Pariseau went several times to Coaticook to inspect minutely the whole plant and property he was about to acquire; that he is a man of mature age, of long experience, of business habits; that he has the reputation of being sharp and close in effecting a trade.

Mr. Pariseau's book-keeper here, Mr. Etienne Chartier, denies in toto having discovered and reported a discrepancy of $85,000 from a total of $112,000, being the inventory amount of the transaction stipulated in the Deed of Transfer.

I am warranted to state that the Coaticook Lumber Company are willing to stand manfully by their whole obligations entered into with Mr. Pariseau without shield, cover, or dishonorable means to elude them. If Mr. Pariseau has any sense of honor left within his breast, let him appear boldly and prove the truth of his assertions, either before a Court of Justice or to the arbitration of competent men; this is the light that business men of honor meet the exigencies of honorable contentions.

CITY NEWS.

— The Dog Show at the Rink comes off to-night.

— The S.S. "Waldensian," from Glasgow, passed Fox River at two o'clock yesterday afternoon.

— A meeting of Mr. B. Devlin's supporters will be held this evening at St. Gabriel Market, Point St. Charles.

— The lecture on "Irish Melodies and Irish Character," with vocal illustrations, will take place under the auspices of St. John's Lay Association, at 276 St. Urbain street, this evening. The Rev. F. H. Clayton, the lecturer, is an able gentleman, and is sure to offer a treat to his audience.

STREET CARS.—Now that St. Joseph street is in such a slippery condition that it is almost impossible to walk along it, the street cars are nowhere to be seen, excepting on the switches, where they are compelled to wait for the up cars to put in an appearance. In walking in from St. Henri this morning we noticed four switches, on each of which a street car was waiting. Surely it is high time that another track be laid along this street, to do away with the switches altogether. As matters are at present the cars are almost practically useless.

ROBBERY.—As Constables Enright and Brunelle, of the Tanneries police, were wending their weary way along Delisle street about one o'clock this morning, they perceived in front of them a man with a sack on his shoulder. On the constables moving towards him, with the intention of having an interview, the fellow dropped the sack and skedaddled in rather a lively manner. Thinking this a little suspicious, the officers gave chase, but soon lost sight of the thief. The bag was found to contain a miscellaneous collection of blankets, clothing, (still damp and evidently taken off a clothes-line,) two dead hens, and a live rooster. The bag and its contents are at the Tanneries police station, awaiting identification. A warrant will be issued to-day against the robber, who is believed to be an old offender.

BRIEFLETS.—Two further arrests, in the persons of Joseph Crostiere and Damase Provencal, were made yesterday, for being implicated in the Guibord riots.——A writ of attachment before judgment was issued yesterday against Pierre Dion and J. E. Getty, subcontractors of the M., O. & W. Railway.——Mr. A. M. F. Gianelli, Consul-General for Italy in this city, has been appointed by his Government general manager of the Italian department of the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia.——The Police have received information of the arrival of a notorious burglar in the city, and desire to warn the public of his advent.——The special Committee of the City Council met the deputations of the Board of Trade and Corn Exchange yesterday afternoon, to make arrangements for the reception of the delegates of the N.Y. & C.C.R. on the 16th inst.

PAUL DU CHAILLU.—This distinguished traveller will inaugurate the course of lectures for the present season, at the Association Hall, on the 16th inst. There are few, indeed, who have not heard of Mr. Du Chaillu's wanderings in all quarters of the globe, but unless they have been present at his lectures they can have no conception of the wonderful interest with which he presents his subject, and his graphic mode of conveying information to his auditors. The subject which he has chosen for his first lecture is "The Land of the Midnight Sun." The lecturer has spent much time in visiting every spot of interest in these high latitudes, and what he has not seen, to use an American expression, "is not worth seeing." Those who hear him deliver his first lecture will be sure to patronize his second, and their only regret will be that he does not give six instead of only two. We have heard Mr. Du Chaillu "talk," and we can very cordially recommend others to spend two pleasant and profitable evenings in his company on the 16th and 17th inst. at Association Hall.

BOARD OF HEALTH.—The usual weekly meeting of the Health Committee took place yesterday afternoon at 4½ o'clock. His Worship Mayor Hingston was in the chair, and there were present Alderman Grenier and the health officers. The minutes of the previous meeting were read, and, after a slight correction, approved. The report of the Sanitary Police shows a total of 89 cases of sanitary neglect on the part of proprietors, 61 of which have been rectified, and the remainder promised better arrangements, three of them having been prosecuted. The mortality report has an exhibit of thirteen fatal cases of small-pox, nine within the limits, three outside, and one case from the Civic Hospital. Upon the reading of the report of the Meat Inspectors, it was decided that hereafter, when seizures of meat are made, the Inspectors shall place the same in the hands of the clerk of the market wherein the confiscation occurs, or else bring the meat seized to the health office. After further discussing matters of detail in connection with the small-pox in the vicinity of Point St. Charles, with a view to vaccination in that quarter, the meeting adjourned.

JUDGMENTS.—Judge Mackay gave the following judgments yesterday:—Ex parte Robt. Hamilton, of Quebec, vs. John L. Hardman, leather belting manufacturer, for $12,480, with reference to a deed of obligation and mortgage, executed on the 4th of January, 1874, before Mr. Phillips, notary; the major portion of the sum bears interest at the rate of 7½ per cent, from the 4th of last March, and another portion at the rate of 6 per cent. from the 19th of last June. Richard Wolff et al. vs. Wallace M. Holdbrook et al, for $166.96, the amount of an account. Patrick Rooney, wholesale merchant, vs. Jerry Grogan alias Grogan, for $100, amount of a bon given on the 25th of last May. Mr. Justice Mackay also, in the case of the Canada Tanning Extract Company vs. James Foley, dismissed the motion made on the part of the defendant, that the plaintiff be ordered to fyle letters, certificates and vouchers, to which he made reference in his declaration. Dame Marie Malvina Ferdinand Gervais vs. Ovide Joseph Paradis, plumber, her husband,—decree by Judge Beaudry of separation de corps et d'habitation; the plaintiff is living at Three Rivers, and has been for some time separated, as to property, from her husband, whom she married on the 11th of August, 1869, when he was proprietor of certain mills in the parish of St. Michel d'Yamaska. The following were delivered on Tuesday:—The Canadian Bank of Commerce vs. William McNaughton, for $263.60, apropos of a cheque signed on the 2nd of last September, for the payment of $260 at the Metropolitan Bank to H. E. Burleigh and Bros.; it was endorsed and delivered to the plaintiff. Charles Rousseau et al. vs. Cyrille Houle, for the amount of a promissory note of date the 2nd of last September, payable at one month, to the order of Rousseau and Phillippe, at the Ville Marie Bank.

REV. GAVIN LANG VS. THE TEMPORALITIES BOARD.

This case, as well as that of the Rev. Mr. Simpson vs. the Widows and Orphans Fund of the same Board, was called before Mr. Justice Beaudry yesterday for hearing of the demurrers.

Mr. J. L. Morris, for the defendants, stated the issues raised by the demurrers were almost identical with those which would be raised with respect to the injunction, and that it would be for the convenience of all parties to have the argument deferred until to-day, in order that both proceedings might be taken up together.

Mr. C. P. Davidson urged that, for the convenience of the Court, they were justified in asking the postponement for 24 hours.

After some remarks from Mr. Macmaster, urging that the argument should be continued with, His Honor granted the application for postponement until this morning.

INVESTIGATION.

An enquiry was commenced last evening, before the Fire Committee, Ald. Hood in the chair, into the truth of certain charges preferred against the Boiler Inspector, Mr. Short, as contained in a petition of manufacturers, which states that the present inspection of boilers is erroneous in principle, and should be changed, and that the present system is not carried out efficiently. The petitioners further ask for the dismissal of the Inspector, among other reasons, for his refusal to grant certificates according to law, (stating that the requirements of the law in the construction of boilers had been carried out), and his attempts to collect fees in excess of those authorised by law. The petition is signed by C. Esplin, J. Esplin, N. Holland & Son (for overcharging and neglecting to give certificate), E. N. Carter & Co., M. Mullin & Co., Robert Ballantyne, Engineer Canada Horse Nail Co.; S. Woods, Manager Dominion Oilcloth Co., (for incompetency and neglect); James Fyfe & Co., (for impertinence and want of common sense, &c).

Mr. S. Woods, the first witness, testified that Mr. Short inspected a boiler for the Dominion Oil Cloth Co. several weeks after he had been notified, and refused to grant a certificate to run the boiler at 30 lbs. pressure, although witness stated that it had previously been tested to 125 lbs. hydraulic pressure. Mr. Short during his inspection said a stay in the boiler had been broken, but on examination found such was not the case. The Hartford Boiler Insurance Co. insured after having it thoroughly examined by their inspector, who certified it to be run at 60 lbs. pressure. Said boiler had been tested three different times—by the maker, the Boiler Company, and the previous inspector, and all these three parties found it of sufficient strength to run at 60 lbs.

Witness continued: The boilers of his firm were built by Mr. McDougall, who promised them to be able to run at 100 lbs. Mr. Fessenden examined them both in the yards, and also after they were erected, each time testing them up to 120 lbs., and declared that they were quite capable of carrying the outside pressure, although they expressed their intention of not running them over 80 lbs. They were examined by the present Inspectors about a year afterwards. He told them to get a force pump, and refused to supply one, saying that the city did not remunerate him sufficiently. In fact he really seemed to think he was doing them a personal favor to inspect. The Hartford Inspector said they were sufficiently stayed, and locked them up by request. Mr. Moore had charge of the shop at the time, and said they were quite capable of being run outside of 80 lbs. Mr. White tested them between 120 and 123 lbs. Messrs. Esplin would not have allowed the boilers to have been locked down at 40. Witness held that Mr. Short, to do his duty, ought either to have made them shut down as running beyond safety or have given him a certificate to run at 80 lbs.

Mr. Esplin—Mr. Short subsequently sent in by his brother a bill for $12, being $5 for each boiler the first visit and $2 each the second, whereas the by-law allows only $3 for the first inspection and $2 each additional. Witness refused it and asked the brother to leave the bill. He refused, on the ground that it was receipted. Asked the brother the next day to leave a bill, also as to whether the charges were made according to the by-law. He replied that the charges were left to the decision of the Boiler Inspector and City Treasurer. The demand was not paid, and Mr. Short had not since applied for it. The boiler had ever since been run between 70 and 75 lbs. Obtained lock ups with the boiler but they were never used, as Mr. Fessenden stated they were being given out by the city.

Mr. Hersey, of Pillow, Hersey & Co., produced a receipted bill of Mr. Short's for inspection, as follows:

1873.		$ c.
Dec. 1,	Inspection of two tubular boilers	15 00
Dec. 8,	......	5 00
April 25,	Attendance for purpose of inspecting boiler (at new mill)	1 00
Nov. 22,	Examining two new tubular boilers	5 00
Dec. 12,	Examining one tubular boiler	3 00
Dec. 16,	Testing one tubular boiler	3 00
		$32 00

Witness was not aware that the price of inspection was regulated by the by-law; told Mr. Short at the time that he thought his charges high; the boilers were tested up to 150 and 160 lbs.; Mr. Short visited the place a number of times, and new stays were put in at his request; witness and Mr. Short did not appear to have a good opinion of each other's manners.

By Mr. Short—Were on better terms before they parted; could not say what caused the unpleasantness, but it was something that he did not like to have occur when he met a gentleman for the first time; all the boilers had been tested at over 100 lbs., but they were not wanted to run over 80.

Mr. James Fyfe, scale manufacturer: In March or April, 1873, Mr. Short called at his place, and behaved in a lofty manner; he said there was not sufficient stays in the boiler, but, on opening up the smoke stack, saw that there were more stays than he thought for, and, after examining the steam drum, said the boiler must be stopped immediately; witness explained that it was a new boiler, built by Mr. McDougall for 80 lbs. pressure; Short said the crown should be stayed every six inches, without any regard to the thickness of the crown sheet.

By Mr. Short—Positively denied having said that a Mr. Moore ought to have obtained the Inspectorship.

Mr. Short—Do you remember asking me into your office to see you work out decimals, and then could not do it?

Mr. Fyfe (indignantly leaving his seat) said he had come there as a gentleman to give evidence, and not to be insulted. He refused to give further evidence.

Mr. Wells, manufacturer, said his boilers were made by Bartl... & Co., and tested by Mr. Fessenden. When Mr. Short was appointed he refused to apply the test, alleging that he did not want to injure them. Witness said he was willing to run all risk, but Short refused to test, and said they would hear from him in a day or two if they continued to use them. Paid $5 to Short for inspection.

Mr. Short explained that Mr. Mooney (connected with the firm) asked for 90 lbs. where he (Mr. S.) was only willing to give 60 lbs. A short time afterwards he visited the boilers, and they were burnt out by deposit.

Mr. Wells said he knew they had been patched and repaired.

Mr. Short stated that 90 lbs would involve a test pressure of 145, and he did not think the boiler could stand that.

Mr. Wells was not at all aware that Mr. Short had tested the boiler. Mr. Fessenden did so up to 140, with lukewarm water, and they have been running the boiler that way ever since.

It being 10:15 p.m., further enquiry was adjourned.

It was decided to adjourn till some evening next week.

THE ALLEGED PERJURY CASE.

The preliminary enquiry into the charge of perjury laid against Mr. Foley for the reason that he had made affidavit before Judge Beaudry to ownership of stock in the Canada Tanning Extract Company [Limited], having its head offices in London, England, was opened at two o'clock yesterday afternoon before Mr. W. H. Brehant, Police Magistrate. Messrs. W. H. Kerr, Q.C., and Monk appearing for the prosecution, and Mr. John Perkins for the defendant.

Mr. Edmond Watkins, Secretary and Manager of the Company, being cross-examined, gave the following testimony:—

Q. When did you enter the employ of the Canada Extract Company?

A. In February last.

Q. Did you see the name of the defendant entered for any shares or stock.

A. I may have done so, but I did not pay any particular attention.

Q. Will you swear that his name is not there for £13,000 stg. of stock and £6,000 stg., and one or the other, or both sums?

A. It may be or it may be not; I do not know.

Mr. Perkins—Then you cannot swear that he committed perjury.

Q. When you came to this country, was not the defendant manager of the Company here, under the articles of agreement of the 9th of April, 1873, between himself and the Company, a copy of which agreement is now fyled, marked A?

A. Yes; he was acting as manager.

Q. Do you not find by such agreement that the Company should pay the consideration of his sale to and purchase by the Company £2,000 in cash, and allot and issue to him, or as he might direct, 600 shares and 1,300 shares, £10 stg. a share, of the capital, to be credited as paid up from time to time as calls were made upon the shares of the Company's capital until they were fully paid up?

A. Certain conditions being fulfilled, they were to pay the £2,000 and allot the 600 shares, and allot and issue the 1,300 other shares to the defendant.

Q. Have not all calls on all shares of the Company been made and fully paid up?

A. Calls have been made, and I believe that they are all paid up.

Q. Does not such fact, under section 5 of the agreement, call upon the Company to allot and issue to defendant, or as he may direct, 1,300 other shares of the capital stock of the Company?

A. Provided certain conditions were fulfilled by the vendor, they had to allot such stock.

Q. Look at the balance sheet of the Company, made up to the 31st of December, 1874, now produced and marked B, and say if the Company has not credited itself in profit and loss account as follows: Payment to James Foley in cash and shares, in cash £2,000, in shares £1,900, and do you find any conditions attached to such entry?

A. They have not done so.

Q. Do you find such entries in such paper in writing?

A. I find such entry in another portion of the paper.

Q. Is not such paper B balance sheet of the profit and loss account made up to the 31st of December, 1874?

A. It is a balance sheet, and a profit and loss account—two separate things made up to such date.

Q. To your personal knowledge, what conditions were annexed to the issue of the 1,300 other shares to the defendant, save and except that they should be credited as paid up from time to time, as calls were made upon the shares of the company according to section 5 of the agreement above mentioned?

A. The fulfilment of the agreement by the vendor.

Q. Is this in the agreement?

A. That is my personal view of the matter.

Q. Under this agreement did not the company commence business in Canada?

A. I believe so.

Q. Under such agreement is it not doing business?

A. I can't say whether they are or not.

Q. Do you know of any other title to the company in Canada than the agreement of the 9th of April, 1873?

A. I do not.

Q. Look at the paper marked C, now produced; state what it is—by whom issued, and who is the vendor therein named for 600 deferred shares, and 1,300 fully paid up shares?

A. The paper purports to be a prospectus of the company, but I do not see any vendor's name. It mentions Mr. Foley's name as having made a contract with the company.

Q. Look at the ninth and tenth lines of such printed paper containing the words of the last question, and answer such last question?

A. I find no vendor's name, but I find the word vendor.

Q. Who is the vendor?

A. I suppose it to be Mr. Foley, the defendant.

Q. Is it not stated by sec. 13 that the defendant agreed to accept for his whole property and rights 1,900 fully paid up shares and £2,000 in cash, of which 600 fully paid shares and cash would be paid at present, and the remaining 1,300 fully paid up shares would be issued to Mr. Foley at the time of issuing the reserved stock to the shareholders and the public?

A. The paper states more than that; the 600 shares were to be retained in the hands of the Directors until the results of works have enabled the Directors to declare a dividend of 15 per cent. per annum on the entire capital issue of shares, and to be subjected to the following stipulation, namely: "That in each year, for a period of five years, the vendor shall forego all dividends and profits on the said 600 shares, unless and until a dividend of 15 per cent. in each such year shall be paid upon the remaining shares of the Company; or unless and until an aggregate dividend of 15 per cent. shall have been paid thereon."

Q. Would not the remaining shares of the company be in number 2,600 shares?

A. Yes—of the first issue.

Q. Has not all the reserved stock been issued to the shareholders and the public?

A. I believe so, with the exception of 1,300 shares.

Q. Are not such 1,300 shares, the 1,300 fully paid-up shares which the Company's prospectus, sec. 13, says will be issued to the vendor, meaning Mr. James Foley, the defendant, at the time of issuing the reserved stock to the shareholders and the public?

A. Yes—provided, of course, that he was entitled to them.

Q. If entitled to them, is it not under the agreement of the 9th of April, 1873?

A. I presume so.

Q. Has that agreement ever been cancelled?

A. Notice has been given of an intention to cancel.

Q. When was that notice given?—on your oath, was it since or before you gave your affidavit here? What notice? When and to whom?

A. It was notice of an action given through our solicitors.

Q. When?—on your oath is it not since you made your affidavit before the Police Magistrate?

A. I do not know whether it was before or since, but instructions were given before, to our solicitors.

Q. You will not swear that it was not on the 5th instant?

A. I cannot swear as to the day.

Q. Was the action not served after the arrest of the defendant on this charge?

A. I am not aware on what day.

At this stage, the hour being four o'clock, the enquete was continued until two o'clock to-day.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are so compounded from concentrated principles, extracted from roots and herbs, as to combine in each small granule, scarcely larger than a mustard seed, as much cathartic power as is contained in any larger pills for sale in drug stores. They are not only pleasant to take, but their operation is easy—unattended with any griping pain. They operate without producing any constitutional disturbance. Unlike other cathartics, they do not render the bowels costive after the operation, but, on the contrary, they establish a permanently healthy action. Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using them.
$500 Reward is offered by the Proprietor to any one who will detect in these Pellets any calomel or other form of mercury, mineral poison, or injurious drug.
They are sold by Druggists.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT RAILWAY POLICY.—The support which the bold railway policy of the Government receives is creditable to the intelligence of the Assembly. Even Mr. Joly's motion in amendment did not venture farther than the postponement of the work of construction, although its adoption might have been attended with the worst effects. The three-fourths vote by which Mr. Joly's amendment was defeated, must cause a very extensive feeling of relief to the minds of those who feared that a combination of members, actuated by various motives, might have succeeded in obstructing if not in defeating the apparently patriotic scheme of the Administration. This vote will prevent delay in carrying the Government measure through the legislature, enabling the contractors to proceed with such portions of the work as can be done in winter. By pursuing steadily the course which they have followed hitherto on the railway question, aiming steadily at economy and efficiency, and avoiding everything in the shape of favoritism in the matter of contracts and employment, the Government will succeed in giving the country a large quantity of cheaply and well-constructed railroads, which are very greatly needed to unite the ancient and modern capitals by railways embracing the commercial metropolis.

THE TARIFF QUESTION IN AUSTRALIA.—The London Times, of the 27th ult., contains a letter from its Victorian correspondent, which shows the existence at Melbourne of no little political strife between the Protectionists and Free Traders. Like ourselves, the Victorians have managed to roll up a considerable share of public debt, amounting to some $60,000,000, a pretty large sum for a population of 800,000. To meet interest and sinking fund and many other governmental expenses, the estimated expenditure amounted to over $22,000,000, or about $1,000,000 more than the estimated revenue. The Government, to meet the deficit, proposed a readjustment of duties, in the direction of free trade, including the abolition of all protective duties on articles not produced in the colony, and a large reduction of protective duties upon the kinds of goods manufactured in the country. These reductions were estimated to amount to sufficient to make the deficit about $2,500,000. This had to be met by the proposal of new taxes. Accompanying this was a proposition to borrow two and three-quarter millions sterling. The result was the defeat of the Kerferd Administration and its resignation. Kerferd was succeeded by Mr. Berry, the Protectionist leader, who, in turn, was defeated on the 7th October upon an amendment to his Budget, moved by Sir James McCulloch, who may be regarded as the leader of the Victorian Free Traders. He will be supported also by the larger land-owners, whom Mr. Berry threatened with a heavy tax. His proposition was to keep the tariff intact for the purpose of fostering native industry, whilst he would make up the deficit by taxing heavily all owners of more than 5,000 acres of land. To use Mr. Berry's own words: "We will not have a score or two of taxes to distract attention. For once, the proposition will be made, whatever may become of it, that instead of going to the very lowest classes and taxing their tobacco or beer, or tea or coffee, or sugar, we will go at once to the man of 200,000 rich acres, upon which he employs little human labor and from which he draws a princely revenue, and call upon him to pay his fair quota of the taxation." Mr. Berry's plan is strongly tinged with agrarian qualities, but it will have the support of the poorer classes. Sir James McCulloch's Government have to meet the difficulty of a large deficit, which may tax the financial ability of his Cabinet to the utmost. Should he be defeated in his efforts, it is probable the Governor will grant a dissolution, though it was refused to the two previous Governments. The direct appeal to the people, at an early day, is probably inevitable, when the question of Free Trade and Protection will be amply discussed and voted upon by our fellow-subjects at the antipodes. The result will be watched with interest here, where a somewhat similar question is being discussed in the press and on the hustings.

COMPLAINTS BY PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND PROPRIETORS.—We noticed, the other day one of the numerous letters to the London Times, written by proprietors of land in Prince Edward Island who feel aggrieved by the decisions of the Commissioners. Among those who have addressed the Times, is Miss Sullivan, who complains of the smallness of the amount awarded her by a commission which she regards as too favorable to the tenants, who, on the other hand, look upon the commission as "a proprietors' commission," entirely too liberal toward the proprietors. The tenants hold that the law should have enabled them also, like the proprietors, to have a direct voice in nominating a commissioner to represent them and their interests. The fact that neither party is satisfied with the awards given, is the best proof that could be afforded of the fairness and impartiality of the decisions of the commissioners.

Miss Sullivan complains that the sum awarded her, $81,000 for 66,000 acres, is smaller than that offered her by the Island government by nearly 40 cents an acre. She states that the cash rental which she received in 1870 and 1871 "amounted together to $10,787," or $5,394 per annum. This sum is larger, however, than that stated to be the gross rental by Mr. De Blois, her agent. He stated, when giving his evidence upon oath before the commission, that "the gross rental paid for the last six years is $27,060. The average would be $4,510." After deducting expenses of management, Miss Sullivan's annual income from rents was $3,247. Such is the sworn statement of her agent, which reduces the sum which she stated in the Times to be her annual income, very materially. But even from this smaller sum should be deducted the $320 of land tax paid yearly, according to the agent's statement. Thus reduced, her net income from rents would be $2,927. In addition might be mentioned the trouble and annoyance which Miss Sullivan must have experienced in dealing with a dissatisfied tenantry, reluctant to pay rents which they, or many of them, considered they had no right to pay, and it is plain that instead of complaining, that lady has every reason to feel satisfied with her $81,000 in exchange for her Prince Edward Island estate. Should she choose to invest her money in this country, in bank stocks or in mortgages, she could easily do so at seven or eight per cent. Even at the smaller figure, she would receive an income nearly double that which her troublesome estate produced. Should she prefer to invest in England, and accept of the four per cent. which her money would there bring, she would still be better off than in possession of the land. Thus, examined from several points, Miss Sullivan's case is not one which entitles her to the commiseration of the public on either side of the Atlantic. It is doubtful if any of the other proprietors have any greater cause than she, to complain of their treatment by the commission.

LORD DARNLEY MEETS WITH A REBUFF.—Considerable discussion has been caused in England by the conduct of Lord Darnley toward Mr. William Lake, one of his tenantry, whose son remained in a Yeomanry corps after his Lordship had resigned. Lord Darnley appeared to expect that his resignation would be followed by that of such of his tenantry as were serving under him, and, unless in the case of Mr. Lake's son, he was not disappointed in his expectations. This seems to have been regarded by his Lordship as an affront and a defiance of his authority as landlord, and the result was that Mr. Lake, sen., was notified by Lord Darnley to quit a farm which he had occupied as tenant for thirty two years. For this tyrannical act he has been justly denounced by the greater portion of the English press. Finding his position toward Mr. Lake to be both unpopular and impolitic, Lord Darnley, on the 25th ult., addressed a letter to him, apologizing for what he had done. In this he stated "I regret that I gave that notice, and now beg to withdraw it, and at the same time to express a hope that our friendly relations of landlord and tenant may be re-established on its former footing." Mr. Lake replied on the same day, saying, "I accept with great satisfaction the assurance that you now feel that you were not justified in giving me notice to quit my farm, and your expression of regret at having done so, but while I sincerely thank your Lordship for the just and generous impulse which has prompted you to offer the withdrawal of that notice, I cannot but feel that after what has recently taken place, and particularly after the expressions made use of by all your Lordship's tenants as to myself, my sense of honor and independence will not allow me any longer to remain a tenant on the estate." Such an exhibition of manliness and independence will teach Lord Darnley, and others of his class, that there are Englishmen who will not tamely submit to be insulted and deprived of equitable rights even by the landed aristocracy of Britain.

PARLIAMENTARY PROFILES.

SKETCHED FROM BESIDE THE THRONE.

NO. 4.—THE PREMIER.

It is but a step across the corridor from the House of Assembly to the chamber where sit in solemn state the peers of Quebec. The sombre dark green of the Lower House is forgotten, on entry here in the blaze of royal scarlet and gold, the glitter of crystal pendants and the polish of the massive brass railings which guard the Councillors from contact with the outside world, as represented by Assembly members on opening and proroguing days. The solemn state of the chamber is awe-inspiring, the officials are mighty in dignity, and from the Throne the Speaker looks down upon the choicest remnant of the legislative system of days that were that the continent has to show. Here we leave behind whatever of levity we may have become contaminated with in following the proceedings of the representative body, and when we consider the decorum marking every act of a Legislature which takes especial pride in close adherence to precedent, and displays at all times the most profound respect for the wisdom of its predecessors and our forefathers, the stately slowness of progress attendant upon a careful observance of form, the gravity and becoming severity of bearing presence in the chamber of the highest body of law-makers inspires may be imagined.

It is an eminently respectable and quiet House. Here debate never rises above the level of the most dignified conference, except, indeed, when the Honorable John Fraser de Berry, Seigneur of Contrecoeur and Cournoyer, Councillor of Rougemont and Chieftain of the Clan Fraser, so far departs from established rule as to display fervor in the elucidation of a scheme for the regeneration of mankind. The internal arrangements of this House preclude the easy intercourse between members which marks the Lower. Each Councillor occupies a desk, removed at decent distance from his neighbor, so that there is none of the familiar communication which we observe across the corridor, and consequently there is more solemn silence, more stately deliberation. Here members take time to speak, for the cares of State do not lie heavily upon them. Here little of the midnight gas is wasted in lengthy debate, but honorable gentlemen meet for an hour or so a day, and then adjourn to await the progress of business in the Assembly. It is very grand, with the Speaker enthroned, the Clerks brocaded and queued, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod obeisant, the Sergeant-at-Arms girt and sworded, mace reposing in crimson and gold, very impressive in its solemn state and splendor, and above all, very costly. For all this magnificence the Province pays about fifty thousand dollars a year—just the amount required for interest on a million dollars worth of railway bonds. It is perhaps profane to speak of money and cost in connexion with a legislative body which does not originate nor have to do with public receipts and disbursements, but as the Premier of the Province sits in the Upper House, and his policy is just the subject of the consideration of Parliament, we may be permitted the remark made a line or two above. The sketcher of these profiles ventures no political opinion; he is portraying men, not reviewing measures, yet he may be allowed to remark that there be many who question the usefulness of the Upper House as an adjunct to our Legislative system. The Upper House declares that such thinkers are iconoclasts, who would tear down every idol which the public has been taught to worship—among which idols is crown-appointed collective wisdom.

From the throne—for the Speaker of the Legislative Council sits under the canopy, but in a chair smaller, and more comfortable than that occupied by His Honor the Lieut.-Governor on opening and closing days—descended in February, 1873, the Honorable Charles Eugene Boucher de Boucherville. Under the Chauveau administration he had occupied a minor seat in the Cabinet, with the Speakership of the appointed House, but a change was thought necessary. Mr. Beaubien was retired from the Commissionership of Crown Lands after the acrimonious discussion in the Legislative Assembly on the extravagant disposals, at private sale, of timber limits. Mr. Chauveau was elevated to the position of President of the Senate to make way for Mr. Ouimet as Prime Minister, Mr. Irvine became First Law Officer of the Crown, Dr. Fortin took the portfolio of Crown Lands and Mr. Chapleau that of Solicitor-General. This change was necessitated by the general election of 1872. Mr. Cauchon was dissatisfied with his position at Ottawa, as President of the Senate, and he had an old grudge against Mr. Langevin that he wanted to have out on the floor of the popular House. His tongue, which is his most active member, was tied while high enthroned, and his pen had to submit somewhat to curbing also. To destroy Mr. Langevin's power he descended into the arena of active politics and courted the suffrages of Quebec Centre with success. Within little more than a year Mr. Langevin fell, in common with the whole Conservative party, and he may be considered, more than any of those overtures by the bursting of the Pacific water spout, a political ruin to-day. However, we will leave this little bit of history, which may be dished up very piquantly some day when the sketcher has more time at disposal, and proceed to relate that Mr. Chauveau was urged to go to Ottawa; there was a powerful Conservative cabal against him in Quebec, and he acceded to the wishes and the solicitations of his friends. That he was shamefully sacrificed, his devotedness to his principles and those of his party played upon for personal purposes, and himself made the catspaw of gentlemen who very soon singed themselves, there is not the slightest possible doubt, and we betray no confidence when we say that the ex-Premier has suffered more, pecuniarily, for his adherence to his political views and through his confidence in his fellows, than any man who has achieved equal note in contemporaneous Canadian history.

Mr. De Boucherville was Speaker of the Legislative Council at a time when the Conservative Government was beginning to yield somewhat to the impetuous attacks of the Opposition on the electoral system and contested election procedure. The onset was skilfully led by Messrs. Joly, Fournier, Laframboise and Holton, and encountered by Messrs. Irvine and Ouimet, Chapleau and Bellerose. While all was noise and fury in the Lower House, the Upper was calm and placid; it was none of the concern of the Quebec Lords how election matters went, and they easily passed the time away waiting for bills to come up for approval. Drowsy indeed must have been the present Premier in those dry, sleepy winter afternoons, and the sketcher has some idea that he once saw the honorable gentleman taking forty surreptitious winks. Who does not remember what Praed writ to the address of the sleeping Speaker?—

> Sleep, Mr. Speaker! Harvey will soon
> Move to abolish the sun and the moon;
> Hume, no doubt, will be taking the sense
> Of the House on a question of sixteen pence.
> Statesmen will howl, and patriots bray—
> Sleep, Mr. Speaker, sleep while you may!
>
> Sleep, Mr. Speaker, and dream of the time
> When loyalty was not quite a crime;
> When Grant was a pupil of Canning's school,
> And Palmerston fancied Wood a fool.
> Lord! how principles pass away!
> Sleep, Mr. Speaker, sleep while you may!

Change the names in these lines, and you have a pretty accurate conception of the state of the political world, so far as the Province of Quebec was concerned, when Mr. De Boucherville made way for Hon. Dr. Ross. It is a peculiar fact that the Speaker's Chair was occupied in the Council and Assembly Chambers alike, from Confederation until last session, by medical men. The present Speaker of the Council is a notary.

Mr. De Boucherville accepted his new position as a nonentity, or rather, a private Councillor, without making any particular disturbance over it. He bided his time, and it was not long in coming. The Ouimet Administration tumbled into the very first pitfall, the Tanneries one, and collapsed, and from the ashes of the Conservative phoenix, to use a rather intimately mixed metaphor, arose a new combination, with the ex-Speaker as the figure-head. It is hard to see how the Lieutenant-Governor could have made any other choice. In the whole range of the Legislative Council there was none who could have been pitched upon, while as for the Assembly, it was thoroughly disorganized. That body had not declared want of confidence in the Government, they fell when their legs went from under them, and, therefore, His Honor did not feel justified in sending for Mr. Joly, as it was expected he would have done. The Conservative leaders in the popular House were under a cloud, and no one was anxious to take up what public opinion had agreed was the unholy thing of the reins of administration. Mr. De Boucherville was applied to, and not in vain, though he was fain to confess that it was the next thing to a forlorn hope to attempt to lead Conservatism out of the Slough of Despond into which it had fallen. He made the effort, however, and succeeded, with the result we see to-day. His material was untried and weak, but he made it strong, he faced the public with his team, and carried it through, and he has met Parliament and achieved nothing short of a triumph.

Let us take a look at the man as he sits on the right of the Throne. He is undoubtedly of good blood. His name was an honorable one in Canada before the Conquest. His ancestor, Lieutenant-General Pierre Boucher, Sieur de Grosbois, was Governor of Three Rivers in 1653, and founder of the Seigniory of Boucherville. After him, scions of the same stock played their parts in the old and new worlds, in those days of France of which it has been written—

> For these were yet the days of halcyon weather,
> A marten's summer, when the nation swam,
> Aimless and easy as a wayward feather,
> Down the full tide of jest and epigram:—
> A careless time, when France's bluest blood
> Beat to the tune of "After us the flood."

He has almost a hereditary right, did we recognize such rights in Canada, to a seat in the Legislative Council, for his father sat there before him, with no discredit to himself or the name and arms he bore. He was born in 1820, at Boucherville, and was educated at St. Sulpice College, in Montreal. He studied medicine in Paris, where he graduated, and in his profession he holds high rank. As to personal appearance, he is a very handsome man, largely and firmly built, with a kindly, pleasant face and thoughtful eyes. His hair is black, somewhat grizzled, and he wears a carefully trimmed beard, which makes him look much older than he really is. At 55 one is not a patriarch, nor is M. DeBoucherville, though he has been married twice, and his beard libels his good looks. In manner he is pleasant, affable and kindly; he is more cautious than most people of his race, and his confidence is not rashly given, but his intelligence is keen, and he is ready to grasp a practical idea. As a speaker, he has never made a figure, and never will. Witness the tournament with that knightly foe, Mr. Joly, at St. Croix, on that dusty Sunday last summer. What he has to say he says in the fewest possible words, and with force, but there is nothing elegant in his style. In fact speaking is an effort with him, and he gives himself as little of it as possible.

Outside of this defect, if it be one, for goodness knows the land is infested with orators, he is a shrewd business-man, and he knows how to keep his forces together. All the mighty power brought against him in the recent elections failed to shake his strength, and he stands to-day apparently more steadfastly placed than his immediate predecessor ever was. He had the sharp wit to enlist the strongest of all influences on his side in the recent elections, and while we and others may hold our own views as to the expediency of invoking the aid that so firmly seated him, we must accord him all credit for the adroitness with which he used his weapons. For it must be remembered that he fought against fearful odds. He had emerged from an encounter with Parliament, but the people are more puissant than Parliament. The memories of the Land Swap and the bread and stone contracts were yet fresh, and the Tanneries investigation was looked upon as a sham, a delusion and a snare. The Cabinet was denounced as a clique keeping warm the seats of the old Government, and M. de Boucherville himself was held up to the Protestant population as an Ultramontane, who would sweep down upon them like a second Tilly and disperse their privileges to the four winds of heaven. For all this and much more that we need not dwell upon just now, as the struggle is fresh in the memory of every reader of the STAR, for all the desertions from the Conservative ranks, and the dissensions within them, M. de Boucherville has triumphed signally, and, we may as well say frankly, much to our surprise, for we did not think it was in him. He is now on the threshold of another Parliament. He saw in the vote on the amendment to the Address the most dangerous opposition to his policy—that of a number of the old Administration, and concerning whom we will have some few words to say in a day or two, dwindle down to the influence of a single vote. He saw his Government supported by that discontented element that is anxious for discord, but which is amenable to control if the brake be properly applied, and which we trust he will wisely apply, and seeing this, his mother wit will enable him to shape his course for the future. Whether he will be able in the whirl of conflicting interests to maintain his majority is hard to say, but like every solid-hearted man, he has everything to hope for, even in that gorgeous den of oppressive solemnity, the Legislative Council.

CITY NEWS.

—The programme of the St. Jude's Concert at St. George's School-room, on the 16th inst., is in preparation, and promises to be one of the finest ever presented here by amateurs.

—The Treasurer of the Ladies Benevolent Society acknowledges with thanks the following donations, per Mrs. Wheeler, in aid of the heating fund of the Institution:—Rev. Dr. Jenkins, $50; and a few friends in St. Paul's Church, per Rev. Dr. Jenkins, $50; total, $100.

—The Treasurer, Andrew Robertson, Esq., of the Montreal General Hospital acknowledges, with thanks, the following sums:—$106, being a donation from Dr. J. B. Barry, of Sydenham Hill, London, England, for care bestowed on his son, in the institution, during a recent illness, by the hands of Dr. George Ross; $10, being a bequest of the late Wm. Saxton, Esq., of Sorel, per the Rev. A. L. Fortin; and $3 from Mr. Simpson, of St. Mary street.

IMPORTANT SALE OF FINE NEW FURNITURE.—To-morrow (Friday) evening, a very large and valuable lot of furniture, including five plate glass wardrobes, bookcases, side-boards, dining tables, Morocco covered chairs and couches, elegant bedroom and drawing-room suites, &c., &c., the whole comprising the annual fall sale, at Mr. Shaw's stores, Craig street. Goods on view this afternoon. Sale at 10:30 o'clock.

THE MECHANICS' BANK.—In the answer to Mr. Duncan's first enquiry at the meeting of shareholders and directors yesterday morning, Mr. Brydges' reply, in the haste of making up our report for publication, is given rather ambiguously. It should be as follows:—"He was appointed a Director in July, 1874; he promised to look into the state of the bank with Mr. Shanly; he did so; he took the balance sheets as correct; saw many assets were bad and had to be written off. A considerable amount of notes was so written off as bad. There remained a deficit. Considered in his own mind that the shares were worth then from 80 to 90 cents on the dollar. He thought the bank could not continue as it was, and he entered into negotiations for amalgamation." In reply to a question put to him, Mr. Brydges admitted that Alexander Molson, the Manager, had given no security, and that as Vice-President, he (Mr. B.) had no control at all over him in the absence of the President. Molson acted, in Mr. Shanly's absence, as cashier and President.

TUQUE BLEUE.—The thirty-third annual meeting of the Montreal Snow Shoe Club was held last evening in the Montreal Gymnasium. It was the largest annual meeting the club ever had, over 60 members being present—the President, C. P. Davidson, Esq., in the chair. Mr. W. H. White, Secretary, in his annual report, shewed that the Club that once numbered scores now numbered hundreds. During last winter as many as eighty members at a time had taken part in the tramps. Financially the club was healthy, having a balance to its credit of $54.03, notwithstanding that a large number had not yet paid their last year's subscriptions. The election of office-bearers for the coming year resulted as follows: President, C. P. Davidson, Esq.; 1st Vice-President, Mr. Angus Grant; 2nd Vice-President, Mr. H. W. Beckett; Secretary, Mr. W. H. White; Treasurer, Mr. Fred. McIndoe. Committee: Dr. W. G. Beers, R. Crosbie, G. S. Pelton, D. E. Bowie, Jas. R. MacKedie, Jas. Sutherland and T. E. Hodgson. The election of President, Secretary and Treasurer was unanimous. This winter the Club will have their Wednesday evening tramps to Prendergast's, commencing next Wednesday, leaving, as usual, the corner of Union avenue and Sherbrooke street, at a quarter to eight o'clock. A vote of thanks was passed to the Directors of the Gymnasium for the use of the room. Above sixty new members were proposed.

CHICAGO, November 11.

The Grand Jury of the United States Court has adjourned, after finding sixty indictments, mostly against the crowd of whiskey men. It is expected that several of the indicted men will turn States evidence and make startling disclosures. The Chief of the Government Detective Service says the evidence against the whiskey men is very strong, and almost every one of them is sure to be convicted.

The exposition building in this city is to be turned into a mammoth skating rink.

The Ward will case, of Detroit, is now in the hands of the jury, and the verdict is hourly expected. The property involved amounts to five million dollars.

CINCINNATI, November 11.

Jas. H. Cole, a resident of Ripley County, Indiana, visited a gambling-house on Race street in an intoxicated condition, and after some words, was carried down stairs by a negro servant named Duncan. While going down with Duncan, Cole drew a pocket knife, and cut the negro in the hand. The latter returned to his room above, followed by Cole. The negro armed himself with a carriage spoke, and when Cole reached the upper end of the stairs, Duncan dealt him a terrible blow on the head, fracturing the skull. Cole never rallied, but died two hours later.

NEW YORK, November 11.

A run on Green Point Savings Bank occured on Tuesday and Wednesday, caused by reports of disappointed borrowers among German depositors, to the effect that the Bank was shaky. The run ceased yesterday.

A number of German merchants have united to raise fifty thousand dollars to defray the expenses of the reception of the German Crown Prince in this city, and his subsequent escort to Philadelphia on his visit to the Centennial Exhibition.

It is proposed that the Second Brigade of New York Militia, under command of General Vilma, shall escort the Crown Prince to Philadelphia. Fifteen thousand dollars have already been subscribed, and a meeting of the officers of the Brigade and of a Committee composed of leading German merchants is to be held on Saturday next.

John Graham & Son, cotton goods, have made an assignment.

A number of speculators who were squeezed in the recent lard corner refused to settle according to the decision of the arbitrators, and in consequence C. W. Ellis & Co., bankers and stock brokers, who were the principal movers of the corner, suspended yesterday. The delinquent shorts are roundly denounced, and summary proceedings against them are threatened.

Leonard Cox, cashier of the Western Union Telegraph Co. in this city, an old and heretofore faithful and respected employee of the Company, has been discovered to be a defaulter to the amount of thirteen thousand dollars. Stock speculations were the cause.

LOUISVILLE, KY., November 11.

Several days ago the family of Charles Masseys who lives at Fordsville, Ky., took suddenly ill. Physicians pronounced the sickness the effect of poison, and, despite their efforts, the son, daughter and wife died. The physicians discovered that the well used by the family was filled with poison, either strychnine or arsenic, but how it came there is not known.

CITY NEWS.

— The steamer "Montreal," from Quebec, had to anchor off La Plateau last evening on her way up, on account of the heavy snowstorm. She arrived here this morning several hours behind time. The "Abyssinian," of the Compagnie Union Navigation, arrived in time.

RECORDER'S COURT.—There were but ten prisoners before the Recorder to-day. John Robinson, 29, drunk in St. Ann's Market; James McGuire, 48, laborer, drunk in Police Station No. 6; Joseph Martin, 28, laborer, drunk and knocking at a door in Manufacturer street; Joseph Gagnon, 40, laborer, drunk in Craig street, were each fined $1 or eight days for drunkenness; Joseph Lalonde, 56, lying drunk in St. Paul street; and Alfred Lajeunesse, 40, mason, drunk in St. Catherine street, were both fined $1.50 or ten days; George Wilson, 26, and George Cornton, 28, laborers; and James White, 28, boilermaker, each for being in a house of evil repute and assaulting the notorious Celina Legris, were fined $5 or one month; Thomas Driscoll, grocer, McCord street, for selling liquor last Sunday, was fined $10 and costs, which was paid. Charles Forte, for keeping two offensive privies, was fined $5 and costs, or one month in each case; Philias Monette and Pierre Elie Plante, partners, St. Catherine street, for selling liquor without a license, were fined $80 or three months.

SPECIAL SESSIONS.

BEFORE JUDGE COURSOL.

Robert Kinloch, for the larceny of a shawl from a store on St. Joseph street, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the Penitentiary.

Emile Ouelette was again placed in the dock, charged with throwing stones at the Grand Trunk cars.

Mr. Macrae, on behalf of the Grand Trunk Railway, stated that although the offence was a very grave one, he would, on account of the tender years of the prisoner, ask the Court to take a lenient view of the case. He thought the boy was not the chief ringleader, but that there were other boys, who would probably soon be arrested. The habit of throwing stones at passing trains was becoming of too common occurrence, and on two occasions passengers had narrowly escaped being severely injured. He concluded by asking that the imprisonment already undergone by the boy should be considered sufficient punishment for the offence.

His Honor replied that, notwithstanding the application of the authorities of the Grand Trunk in favor of the boy, he must be punished. The law had been violated, and these little boys must be taught a lesson, and parents must learn to keep their children from committing such acts. His Honor then stated he would postpone giving judgment until Saturday.

[Special to the STAR.]

TORONTO, November 11.

A deputation is in town to-day from Lindsay, to Premier Mowat, asking him to give such aid from the Railway Fund to the Victoria Railway as will enable it to run from Kinmount to connect with the Canada Central and thus form communication with the Canada Pacific.

Goldwin Smith and George Stephen, of Montreal, were together in town yesterday. It is said they are engineering to obtain hold of the Mail in order to make it a Canada First organ.

Mr. W. Dale, M.A., has been appointed Assistant Mathematical Master in the Upper Canada College, in the room of Mr. Baker, who succeeded Professor Loudon in the University.

A Fuel and Clothing Club has been established and is collecting stores for the coming winter for distribution among the hundreds who are walking the streets.

The Legislative Assembly Buildings have been handsomely refitted and the library brought down stairs.

The active business of the session will begin this day fortnight, after the Speech from the Throne on the 24th. It is said on good authority that the speech will be remarkably short and blank. Reference will be made to the commercial crisis and to the decrease in immigration. One or two amendments to the Education Bill will be suggested and reference made to the necessity for a new Normal school in the west. The public accounts will be submitted almost immediately, and the session will close by Christmas.

It is probable that the Government will convert the Hellmuth Ladies' College building into the new western Normal School. Arrangements are now going on with that view.

The investigation into the conduct of the City Engineer is still in progress.

There are still no less than 98 civil cases on the Assize docket. The Assizes have already lasted over five weeks, and there is a month's work ahead yet. The present Assizes will overlap the winter Assizes, which were set down for the 2nd prox.

Weather soft; very muddy. Business dull. Navigation about closed.

[Press Despatch.]

HAMILTON, November 11.

Yesterday afternoon Mary Smith and Josephine Clinch were committed for trial, the former on a charge of conspiring to defraud Dr. Devlin out of $80, and the latter on the charges of perjury and conspiracy in connection with the same. The affair is creating considerable interest here.

Mr. J. McHaffie, of the firm of Messrs. Winer & Co., wholesale druggists, who mysteriously disappeared last week, has been discovered and restored to his friends.

[Press Despatch.]

TORONTO, November 11.

The Lieutenant-Governor and Miss MacDonald are going to give a grand ball at the Government House on the 23rd inst.

It is understood that the Holman Troupe have leased the Royal Opera House here for five years at a rental of $2,250.

Francis Corneal, who was arrested last night for feloniously entering the house of Mr. Robert Richardson, on Bathurst street, last August, made his escape from the new Police Station at St. Andrew's market, during the night.

Shipments of barley from this port this season have been more than twice what they were last year.

The erection of a new building for the Eye and Ear Infirmary is talked of here, and an appropriation is to be asked from the Local Government for that purpose.

The Ontario Tribune, a Catholic paper published here, says that out of a total of one hundred and four there are only seven Catholics on the Police force. It claims that at least one-fifth of the number should be of that religion.

The weather is dull, but mild; wind, northeast.

The market is quiet. Small sales of Barley at 70c. for No. 2, and 60c. for No. 3 f. o. b. Wheat nominally unchanged. Flour offering at $4.80 for extra; $4.60 for Fancy, and $4.50 for Spring Extra, without buyers; but Superior Extra is wanted at $5. On street Fall sold at $1.05 to $1.06. Spring at $1.02. Peas at 70c. to 72c, and 5,000 bushels Barley at 60c to 90c.

[Via Dominion Line.]

FERGUS, Ont., November 11.

Mr. Jas. Wilson's woollen mills here were entered last night by burglars, and a quantity of cloth, to the value of $200 or upwards, stolen therefrom. As some other burglaries of the same kind have lately taken place here, the authorities have issued search warrants against the suspected parties, who wear good clothes, and are not able to give a satisfactory account of where they got them.

CITY NEWS.

— The new winter boots of the policemen were served out this morning.

— There were no cases before the Police Magistrate this morning, the first time it has happened since 1866.

— A deputation, consisting of Messrs. Charlebois, Dugas and Deseve, is at Quebec in connection with an Act of Incorporation for St. Henri des Tanneries.

— Agnes Belanger, who was arrested on a charge of damaging property, was this morning discharged by the Police Magistrate, as the case had been settled.

— We understand that already nearly two hundred gentlemen have signalized their intention of being present at the dinner to Mr. Thomas White, Jr., on the 24th instant.

— The Bank of Toronto brought suit yesterday against the Merchants' Bank. Cause of suit a bill of exchange given to the latter for collection, which is claimed not to have been presented in due time.

— Thomas Geen, baker, 491 St. Joseph street, was arrested charged with committing an indecent assault on the person of Isabella Laird, a girl formerly in his employ. He was admitted to bail, his trial being fixed for Friday next.

— Hugh Clarke, of the firm of Clarke and Dowker, wine merchants, 81 St. James street, was arrested last night by the High Constable on a warrant on a charge of committing an indecent assault. James Anderson Lang is the complainant.

— An evening contemporary yesterday stated that a writ of mandamus had been taken out by Mr. Doutre, for the burial of Guibord's remains. This is not the case, as no writ so far of the kind has been issued by the Superior Court.

— Signor Hazazar's dancing classes are now open for the season and are being well patronized by the best families. In order to meet the pressure of the times he has reduced the fees for ladies from $5 to $1 each for the whole season. This is very liberal, and we hope the Signor will meet with all the encouragement which he deserves.

— The Police Court was crowded this afternoon on the occasion of the preliminary examination of the Guibord rioters. At one period it looked very much like as if there was to be a miniature riot amongst the lawyers who were defending the prisoners as to whether an adjournment or not should take place, and it required all Mr. Brehaut's authority to keep order among the limbs of the law.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS.—During Mr. Bell's absence the plans for the proposed harbor extensions are being diligently proceeded with. General Newton and Mr. Sanford Fleming are still carrying on their investigations, and their report, when completed, will be submitted to Mr. Bell in Europe for his approval, after which it will be presented to the Harbor Board. We understand the labors of the Engineering Committee will be concluded in about a month.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—This splendid new theatre, on the eve of being finished, will be opened to the public on Monday evening next by Mr. E. A. McDowell, with one of the best companies which has ever been collected together in this city. The lessee has just returned from New York with a number of new pieces, and all the most modern plays of the day will be presented in rapid succession. The opening piece is the fine military drama of "Rosedale; or, the Rifle Ball," and it will be brought out in such a superb manner as has never been approached here before.

JUDGMENTS.—The following judgments were rendered to-day by the Judges of the Superior Court: La Banque Ville Marie vs. Wm. H. Rae, judgment for $282.40. Louis Brunet vs. Frank O'Connor, judgment for $112.10. Patrick Carrill vs. E. H. Chas. Lionais, judgment for $770.00. Francis Stephenson vs. Wallace M. Holbrook, judgment for $230.80. A. A. Murphy vs. Joseph Townshend, judgment for $111.19. J. B. Lafleur vs. George Joyette, for $192.60. Wm. Henry Glasse vs. Angus P. Macdonald, $197.37. Amable Gandy vs. Dame Jane Lovell, judgment for $502.93. Chas. Desmarteau vs. Emery Greveline, judgment for $150.62. John Wiser et al. vs. The Wingate Chemical Co., judgment for $868.83. James P. Clark vs. Valentine Cook, judgment for $502.62.

NON-PAYMENT OF WAGES.—A case of this kind came before the Recorder this morning. Patrick Cannon, stevedore, was charged with refusing to pay Timothy Crowley, laborer, his wages for work on the 1st November, on board the SS. "Croft." It appears they are governed by a system of printed tickets, which are given by the employer to his employees at the end of each day, with the number of hours' work performed. At the end of the week, the laborer, on presentation of the tickets, receives his wages. The plaintiff, being short of money, sold a ticket, which is a common practice among these men. The prosecutor claimed having worked eleven hours on that day, but the defendant refused to pay him on account of selling his ticket. The judgment was that Mr. Cannon was to pay for eight hours' work, $1.60, and the costs, $1.50, which he did.

BREAKING A DOOR.—James Hogan, 24, carter, well known as a ruffian in Point St. Charles, was arraigned before the Recorder's Court this morning, charged with being drunk and breaking the door of Mr. Robert Richardson, on Richmond street. The prisoner often takes a drunken spree, and, when he gets his blood up, is in the habit of "running a muck" in true Malayan style, using his fists instead of a dirk, and leaving bloody noses indiscriminately on the faces of men, women and children in his track. He is a terror to many in his neighborhood, and is well known to the police, who have scores of complaints against him. He had skilfully managed to elude their grasp for some time past, until this morning at 12:15, when he was arrested by the policeman on duty in that district, for endeavoring to effect an entrance into the house mentioned with no good intent. The porch was found to be removed some distance from the house, and the door was damaged. The prisoner paid the penalty of his misdeeds in a fine of $10 or two months.

Bills receivable past due $215,213. Estimated at 33⅓ per cent	71,737
Furniture, &c., $5,441. Estimated at 50 per cent	2,725
Total amount likely to be realized	$364,334
Liabilities due the public	298,300
Balance left for the shareholders 11 cents on the dollar of the capital	$ 66,034

We have had the assistance of an able financier in making up the above abstract of the accounts. The estimate for the "bills receivable" is taken on the average class of mercantile paper, but it must not be forgotten that the notes discounted at a high rate of interest by Alexander Molson were of an inferior kind and the results may not be as favorable even as anticipated. As matters now stand the statements made by the STAR when the bank failed are fully borne out, and we fear the poor shareholders will never realize a cent out of their unfortunate investment in this rotten concern—rotten from the day it was founded until the hour of its final collapse. The directors seem to be doing their best now for the shareholders; the pity is they did not commence sooner, and they can never rub off the disgrace that attaches to them for their past neglect and mismanagement.

Egypt has long been noted as a country remarkably abundant in ophthalmic subjects, but not until recently has it had any school for the blind. One has just been established at Cairo.

The Messrs. Stuart, of New York have given to Princeton Theological Seminary within the last 13 years nearly $200,000. Over 170 students have been admitted to Princeton this year. The new dormitory building will be ready for occupancy in September next.

It is a singular fact that the four great Canadian banks—the Bank of British North America, the Bank of Montreal, the Canadian Bank of Commerce and the Merchants' Bank—are the four largest corporations selling exchange in this city. The bills command the highest figure.—N. Y. Herald.

If a man falls so as to strike his head violently on the ice or on the pavement, or if he gets a blow over his eye, he is said to "see stars." The cause of this curious phenomenon is found in a peculiarity of the optic nerve. The function of that nerve is to convey to the brain the impression of light. It recognizes nothing in the world but light. It is susceptible to no other impression. Or, if acted upon by any other agent, it communicates to the brain the intelligence of the presence of that agent by sending along its fibres flashes of light only. Irritate this nerve with a probe or other instrument, and it conveys no sensation of pain, but simply that of luminous sparks. The pain of the blow on the eye, or the head, is realized through the nerves of general sensation; but, unsusceptible to pain or any other feeling, the optic nerve sends to the brain its report of the shock by flashes, sparks, and "stars." The young doctor who died recently after falling upon his umbrella and puncturing his eye and brain with one of its steel ribs, complained of intense light in the eye for ever darkened.

4th EDITION.

SIX O'CLOCK.

Owing to a break-down in the wires of the Dominion Telegraph Company, and the fact of the Montreal line being able to work but one wire to Quebec, and which has been crowded all day, we are without our afternoon despatches from the seat of the Provincial Government.

UNION OF THE MARITIME PROVINCES.—Though the question of the Legislative Union of the three Maritime Provinces is one which more intimately concerns the inhabitants of the sister Provinces than it can possibly concern outsiders, yet any measure that affects the interest of such an important portion of the Dominion cannot fail to interest Canadians generally. The subject was discussed prior to Confederation, and has been more or less agitated subsequently, without anything definite being arrived at. This is the greater cause for astonishment, in view of the fact that the people of the Maritime Provinces are proverbial for their shrewdness, intelligence, industry and economy. To such an observing people, it must be evident that, in proportion to the wealthy and populous province of Ontario, the Maritime Provinces are vastly too much governed, and their small revenues wasted extensively in what is entirely unproductive. The last census gives Nova Scotia a population amounting to 387,000; New Brunswick, 285,000, and Prince Edward Island, 96,000; making, in all, 768,000 as the population of the Maritime Provinces. The same census places the population of Ontario at 1,620,000 who are governed by one Lieutenant-Governor, one Executive Council, no Legislative Council, and one Legislative Assembly. With less than half the number of people, the affairs of the Maritime Provinces are under the control of three Lieutenant-Governors, three Executive Councils, three Legislative Councils, and three Legislative Assemblies, each body requiring a separate staff of officials. Ontario has an Executive Council of five members only, whilst Nova Scotia has an Executive Council of nine members and a Legislative Council of nineteen members. New Brunswick has an Executive Council of five members and a Legislative Council of seventeen. Prince Edward Island has eight Executive Councillors and twelve Legislative Councillors, each Province having, besides, a Legislative Assembly—that of Nova Scotia numbering thirty-eight; of New Brunswick, forty-one; and of Prince Edward Island, thirty. The revenue, from every source, of the three Provinces amounts to about $1,441,000, or less than half that of Ontario, with its single Governor, Executive Council of five heads of Departments, and single Chamber of Representatives.

In an economical point of view, the figures and facts adduced in the foregoing comparison tell largely against the comparatively extravagant system of government existing in the Lower Provinces. As a writer upon the subject has said: "It is evident, therefore, that this multiplication of governing bodies is costly, and that a good deal of money which might be well applied in productive work is frittered away in keeping up a group of Legislatures where one might probably do all the business quite as effectively." The same reasoning might be used in favor of a Legislative Union of all the Provinces, including Manitoba and British Columbia, with their costly separate Governments. Whilst, however, there are obstacles in the way of the larger Legislative Union, neither geographical position nor lack of community of interests can be urged against the union of the three eastern Provinces. In addition to the large annual saving which such union would effect, there are other valid arguments in its favor. There is a strength in union which should commend the scheme to the people of the Maritime Provinces and to such of their many friends as desire to see arrayed on the side of religious equality and secular education in the public schools a powerful and united community, capable of wielding a mighty influence in the national Councils.

The initiative in favor of a Legislative Union must be taken by the press and people of the maritime provinces, as the officials, interested in maintaining things as they are, cannot be expected to advocate a change which would deprive many of them of employment. Should the system existing in Ontario be taken as the model for the government of the united provinces, there would be deprived of employment two Lieutenant-Governors, 17 Executive Councillors, forty-eight Legislative Councillors, and some sixty odd members of the Legislative Assemblies, together with a large portion of the employees now in receipt of salaries for services in connection with the various legislative bodies. It would be expecting too much to hope for assistance, in bringing about the union, from many of those holding official positions, and for this reason, we repeat, it is manifest that the agitation in favor of union must be the work of the people themselves, supported by the more independent portion of the press.

WASHINGTON, November 11.

At eight o'clock Vice-President Wilson aroused himself. In response to an enquiry from Sergeant-at-Arms Lench, he said, "I feel a little better, but I am not entirely free from pain." He has said nothing since. His condition is still considered very critical, and it is extremely improbable, even if he recovers his strength, that he will be able to do any work. His vital force has been consumed rapidly. His physicians seem unable to relieve the nervous excitement which attended his prostration yesterday.

CITY NEWS.

— The nomination for Montreal Centre will take place on the 26th inst.

— An hotel-keeper named Vidal, of Sorel, died last night from the effects of intemperance.

— The rumor mentioned in the Nouveau Monde, and copied into other papers that Dr. Hingston intends presenting himself for election in the Centre Division is utterly without foundation.

— It is reported that a young gentleman in Toronto, and not unknown here, has succeeded to a fortune of $85,000 left to him by a person who was formerly a noted character in the City by the Lake.

— The United Board of Out-Door Relief acknowledge with thanks a donation of eight reams wrapping paper, value $7.40, from Messrs. Alex. Buntin & Co. Also a donation of $40 from the German Society by the hands of their treasurer, L. Gnaedinger, Esq.

— The premises of Messrs. Fraser & Co., 377 Commissioners street, were broken into last night, but as the burglars found nothing more than barrels of salted fish, they did not think it worth their while to appropriate any of the stock, and decamped without doing any harm.

THE GUIBORD RIOTS.—The preliminary examination before the Police Magistrate into the cemetery rioters was postponed until the 18th prox. The following are the names of those arrested:—St. Antoine, St. Aubin, Cusavant, Laviolette, Paquette, Provensal, Dupre, Crochetiere, Leclaire and Galipeau. Messrs. Thibault, Archambault and Beique appear for the defence, and Messrs. Doutre and Euclide Roy for the prosecution.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS.—From a gentleman who has just returned from an extensive business tour in Upper Canada, we learn that business prospects are encouraging. The farmers have never had better crops than is now gathered into the granary. Wheat is more than an average, whilst barley is more than a third larger than in the previous year, and fully makes up for the 20 per cent. shrinkage in price which has occurred. Storekeepers are sanguine of getting in their outstanding debts during the season, and hope to be able to meet all their liabilities to the wholesale merchants promptly. They are purchasing very sparingly, and purpose pursuing a conservative policy is not overtrading in future, rather doing a moderate and safe business to a large and speculative trade. The crops are being moved with greater celerity this year than for many seasons past. On Tuesday last 75 car-loads and on Wednesday 65 car-loads of grain and flour arrived from the West at the Montreal Elevator Company's warehouse. Most of this was from Western Canada. The shrinkage of two to three cents a pound on cheese has been felt very much by the large farmers in both these Provinces. The lumber trade is looking up, a large advance having taken place in deals in England. Should this continue, the impetus that will be given to trade generally will be soon manifest, as a great many other branches are depending a good deal on the prosperity of the lumber market.

THE FOLEY CASE.

The preliminary examination into the charges of perjury against Thomas Foley, the late Manager of the Canada Tanning Extract Co., by the Company, was continued before W. H. Brehaut, Esq., P. M., this afternoon.

The cross-examination of Mr. Wilkins was resumed:

Q. Is it not true that each share of the Company is of the par value of £10 sterling?

A. Yes.

Q. When was the balance sheet, paper B, presented to the shareholders of the other Company, at the shareholders' meeting?

A. I do not remember the date, but I believe it was in the summer. I cannot tell the exact date of the shareholders' general meeting.

Q. Does not paper D, now produced, refer to paper B, and show the meeting to have been on the 22nd of June last?

A. Yes.

Q. Does not the balance sheet of the Company show on the 31st of December last £2,600 sterling, being balance of amount due to James Foley, to be applied in payment of calls on his share of the second issue, namely, 1,300 shares?

A. Such an amount is shown there, but there is also an amount shown as being due by James Foley.

[This answer was objected to by Mr. Perkins.]

THE FRENCH PRESS.

The Minerve writes of the vote on the Address: The first battle of the session was fought on Monday night in the House at Quebec. Mr. Joly offered battle with his ordinary ability, as will be seen from our report of the proceedings, that inaugurated the existence of a new Parliament. The Opposition chose to depart from the rules which have been adopted for several years, in essaying its strength on the Address and reply to the speech from the throne. The tenor of Mr. Joly's amendment is known. Three-fourths of the House voted with the Government, and the other fourth with the Opposition. The Ministry have a majority of twenty votes out of sixty, and the result needs no comment.

The Minerve also discusses the reception accorded the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie at Rimouski, and the speech of the member for the county, Dr. Fiset, on that occasion. Its sarcasm is bitter concerning the speech. It says the comedy would not have been complete if Mr. Fiset had contented himself with vaunting the advantages of the Intercolonial Railway. He alluded in his address to the harbour of refuge at Rimouski. From Quebec to the Gulf there is not a single port. The attention of the Conservative Government was called to this fact, and Mr. Langevin, who was not an incomparable Minister of Public Works like Mr. Mackenzie, ordered soundings to be made off Rimouski in 1872. Two hydrographic engineers worked for a whole summer here, and the Conservative Government voted $250,000 for the Rimouski harbor. Upon his accession to power Mr. Mackenzie erased this item, and now the Minerve asks how a Rimouski member can come forward and laud a Government that has thus neglected the most vital want of the place.

The National sneers at Mr. Solicitor-General Angers' remarks apropos the Federal Cabinet. Before Mr. Angers and the Canadien every Liberal should prostrate himself. Isn't it a shame for the Province to see Mr. Letellier, Mr. Laurier and Mr. Geoffrion enjoying public confidence, while Mr. Masson, our Saviour in this world, has nothing to console him but the crocodile tears of Thos. White, jr. It denounces the Canadien for exulting in the defeat of a Catholic, sustained by the Catholic vote of Toronto. Relating to the vote on Mr. Joly's amendment and quoting our Quebec despatch, it says, "the whole thing is explained easily enough, and Mr. Beaubien will be Commissioner of Railways in exchange for his zeal."

The Courier du Canada thanks Mr. Joly for his bad management of the Opposition. In this respect he renders a veritable service to the cause of Conservatism.

The Canadien congratulates Hon. Mr. Irvine upon the control in the House he possesses—over his own vote.

WANTED, a situation as Night Watchman ...

A ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE.

As I looked out of my window half an hour ago a man or two went by in a waggon. And something portentous in their air caused me to make inquiries, and to learn that in this, the year 1875, in the State of New York, whence I certainly believed all romance utterly banished, and everything earthly or heavenly reduced, as far as possible, to dollars and cents—yes, here and now, had been a romance enacted wild enough to have belonged, by every poetic right, to Scottish hills and heather, and the gallant days of young Lochinvar.

That was "the sheriff," and those were "his men;" and they were going over the roads in that waggon for Maggie ———'s "things." Maggie is a young woman with a heart and a will of her own, and she had been wooed and won by some rustic beau,

"A young man
With pockets lined with silk,"

when "the old folks" suddenly resolved that she should break with him, and

"Marry an old man,
With forty cows to milk."

Maggie refused to obey, of course, but the old folks persisted. They promised their daughter to the rich man, drove the poor one from their doors, set the wedding day, and sent for the dressmaker to make the wedding dress. Maggie said no more; but when the dress was made she put it on, and being of age, flitted by moonlight to the house of a friend, and there was married to her sweetheart. The old mother arose on the next morning quite unconscious of her departure, and went up stairs to wake the bride and prepare her for her wedding with the man of her parents' choice; but they found only a little note explaining matters.

The only revenge that remained for the "old folks" was to lock up the girl's trunk and her clothing, minus the bridal dress, which had done its duty while they slept the night before. And to-day the sheriff was going over, with due process of law, for that trunk. He and his merry men three returned with their prize; but it had been no easy matter to obtain possession of it. And the grim official is said to have been quite exhausted, and to have declared that "he never took so much jaw from any one in all his life before as he took from that old woman."

The wealthy suitor, meanwhile, sat beside his father-in-law who would have been, upon the stone-fence; they were simply "Lookers-on in Vienna," save that the former was heard to mutter: "Three dollars a yard—fourteen yards in the pattern!" From which it is inferred that he had presented the wedding silk, though, for Maggie's sake, we hope not: it spoils the story a little. Lochinvar had better have married her in calico, if it was so. Yet could a girl, who had a proper wedding-dress, refuse to wear it because of the giver? Let any poor girl ask herself.

TWICE MARRIED;

OR,

THE LAST KINDNESS.

CHAPTER XXIX.

I charm thee from the agony
Which others feel or feign;
From anger and from jealousy,
From doubt and from disdain;
I bid thee wear the scorn of years
Upon thee brow of youth,
And curl the lip at passion's tears,
And shake the head at truth.
While there is bliss in revelry,
Forgetfulness in wine,
Be thou from every love as free
As every one from thine!

MRS. HEMANS.

It was years before Orville Deville and his family returned to England, and established themselves in the best apartments of the most fashionable hotel in London. He arrived at the time when public interest was divided between two subjects. The first, and ultimately the most important, was the first murmurings of discontent that preceded the outbreaking of the revolutionary war.

The other, infinitely less important, but for the moment more exciting topic, was the advent of a great theatrical star—a wonderfully-endowed young tragedienne, whose almost fabulous beauty, grace, and genius, conjoined with a reputation of exalted virtue and nearly supernatural powers of fascination, had been the admiration and delight of Paris, and it was now the attraction and wonder of London.

"And who is this most marvellous—this all-worshipped Melpomene?" inquired Orville Deville of his friend, Colonel Bingham, as the two smoked their Havanas together in the reading-room of the hotel, where, as usual, the latest enchantments of the Circe were being discussed.

"Who is Melpomene?" repeated the Colonel, with a look of astonishment. "Is it possible that you are in earnest in that question?"

"Certainly. I am a returned traveller, you see, who should not be supposed to know all your celebrities," said Deville, laughing.

"But not to know Melpomene argues yourself unknown, with a vengeance—or, rather not to know of her: for few, I imagine, really know who she is, whence she came, or what her name. She is called Melpomene; and if ever a tragedienne had a right to assume that awful name of the tragic muse, this woman is the one!"

"All that I have heard before; but—who is she?"

"I repeat that I do not really know. No one does. Her origin and history are involved in obscurity, that only gets a little clearer as it nears the present time. Those who know of her scarcely deem her of human kind. Her admirers think her angel-born—her enviors would have us believe her a child of Satan. Her spells of fascination are certainly supernatural."

"And that, also, I have heard before. But is there nothing at all—no clue—no gossip—nothing whatever to point out her possible origin?" persisted Orville Deville, who felt a strange and unaccountable interest in tracing the antecedents of this wonderful woman.

"Gossip? Oh, there is gossip enough! How could it be otherwise? A woman endowed with the most wonderful beauty, genius, and power of fascination—and in addition to all these, possessing fame, wealth, and favor of all men—must excite envy and provoke detraction. Yes, there is plenty of gossip, if you will accept that for authentic history."

"Well, that gossip—in a great deal of chaff there may be a grain of truth."

"Not worth the trouble of seeking. But if you will have it you may. But mind, so far from endorsing, I speak under protest," said Colonel Bingham.

"Right," admitted Mr. Deville.

"Well, then, thus saith Madame Rumor—that some ten or twelve years ago a young creature, scarce sixteen years old, and yet at that tender age not only orphaned but widowed, and perfectly destitute, wandered in search of service to this city, where she arrived on foot late at night, in the midst of a snow-storm. Exhausted with fatigue, hunger, and cold, she sank, fainting in the street. She was picked up by a weak-minded old watchman, who, instead of carrying her off to the watch-house, pitied her condition, and took her home to his own dwelling."

"But this houseless wanderer could not have been the great Melpomene!" interrupted Mr. Deville.

"Wait a bit, Rumour further saith that this feeble-brained old watchman, who carried forlorn women to his own house, had a daughter who was employed as a ballet girl in one of the minor theatres, and that eventually the young stranger, being found unfit for everything else under the sun, went with her host's daughter to the theatre, where her personal beauty and grace, and her melodious voice and ready intelligence, procured her a humble engagement."

"Ah!"

"Yes; you begin to see how this might have been. Well, as years passed, and to her original gifts were added experience and knowledge of the business, our young artist rose in her profession through the successive stages of ballet dancer, singing grisette, walking lady, leader, &c., to her present position."

"Then, as every step of this tragedienne, from obscurity to fame, seems to have passed before the eyes of this public, I do not see how you can call this story mere gossip, and assert that her true history is unknown," said Mr. Deville.

"And yet I do assert it. Every step is not accounted for. There is a long gap. It is said that about the time this young actress had reached the rank of 'walking lady' at this theatre, that a part of the company went for a tour through the provinces, and that Nora Norl accompanied them. That summer this beautiful young creature attracted the attention of the celebrated Mrs. Bracegirdle, who, then in the zenith of her fame, was making a tour of the northern counties. The great actress, never dreaming of future rivalry, became the patroness of the friendless young aspirant, gave her instruction and brought her forward. From that auspicious time the star of the young actress arose, and she, who, nine years ago, left the London stage as the humble Nora Norl, returned as the great Melpomene."

"A probable story. I do not see why it should be questioned."

"Yet it is. Nine years change the character of a community as well as the appearance of a young female. And there are those who can trace no resemblance between the thin, undeveloped girl of seventeen and the magnificent woman of twenty-six. And others who totally deny the identity between the obscure Nora Norl and the illustrious Melpomene."

"I must see this world's wonder! She plays to-night?"

"Yes, and not again for a week. This queen of tragedy, like other queens, is jealous of her royal presence, and no inducement can bring her to appear more than once a week."

"And—let us see—what is her role to-night?"

"Roxalana, in the 'Rival Queens.' I have seen Mesdames Bracegirdle and Oldfield in that part, but I have never seen this Melpomene, who is said in that particular impersonation of the outraged wife and queen to surpass not only all the others, but even her own self."

"Then, shall we go together to test her merits this evening?"

"With pleasure, especially if the beauteous Lady Adelaide is to be of the party," said the gallant colonel.

"Lady Adelaide never goes to the theatre," replied Mr. Deville.

"Ah! conscientiously opposed to it?"

"Sincerely so—yes."

"By the way, Melpomene has apartments in this very house."

"Impossible!"

"True; however, though, she might as well be in Kamtschatka for anything we see of her here."

"Why, how is that?"

"She has not only her private suite of apartments, but also a private entrance to them, and private attendants, so that there is no possibility of seeing her without intrusion, and she receives no visitors."

"Except professionally, at the theatre."

"Except at the theatre, whither we will go this evening."

"Agreed."

And thus the friends parted, Colonel Bingham to go to the table d'hote, Mr. Deville to ascend to Lady Adelaide's private parlor, where their meals were served. Here he found no one except young Donald Lorne, who sat within the window seat, reading.

"Ho! Donald, my boy, always at your studies. Come, what do you say to an evening at the theatre?" said Mr. Deville, with an affectation of gaiety that was far from his heart.

The youth arose, and, with a respectful bow to his guardian, answered gravely—

"Lady Adelaide disapproves of the theatre, sir, and I should not like to displease her."

"Tut, boy; the women are making a muff of you."

Instead of replying the youth drew himself up with that air of self-respect, not to say haughtiness, that sometimes procured for him the name of "The Young Don."

Deville laughed, and before another word could be said, the door flew open and the lightsome figure of a dark-eyed girl danced into the room. Scarcely could any human creature be more beautiful than Perdita was now, in the twelfth year of her age. She was tall for her age, and with a form of perfect symmetry and a head of classic elegance, covered with luxuriant hair that fell in many long rich jet black ringlets down each side her crimson cheeks, and upon her ivory bosom and shoulders. Her large, black eyes, dark as night, and brilliant as stars, could melt or blaze, as love or anger inspired them. They were veiled by long, black lashes, and over-arched by slender black brows. Full, crimson lips, a thought too plump, gave the finishing character to a style of beauty at once too fierce, voluptuous and impassioned to promise much of good or happiness to the possessor. Well might the Lady Adelaide fear and pray and study for this child.

She came now dancing into the room and humming a gay tune, that was instantly arrested on her lips as she saw Mr. Deville, and exclaimed—

"Papa, you here? I thought you were in the reading-room."

"Well, my dear, and that in an instant the song should be arrested on your lips? Am I a kill-joy?"

"Oh, no, sir!"

"Then, doubtless, it was the presence of this sanctimonious young gentleman that sobered you," said Mr. Deville, pointing to Donald.

"Who? Donald? why he is my constant provocative to laughter. No, sir, neither you nor your ward have that honor. My song was finished," exclaimed Perdita, with a merry glance from one to the other.

"Well, my dear, I have a treat in store for you. You never saw a play, I believe?"

"Oh, no, papa, and I do so long to see one. Donald, don't you turn and look at me with your great solemn dark eyes. I tell you I do want to see a play. Yes, papa, I do."

TRAVEL, ADVENTURE AND NATIONAL CUSTOMS.

A FOOT LAMP.—One of the most interesting things in the Holy Land is the fact that one meets everywhere in daily life the things that illustrate the words of the Lord. The streets of Jerusalem are very narrow, and no one is allowed to go out at night without a light. Throw open your lattice in the evening and look out, and you will see what seems to be little stars twinkling on the pavement. You will hear the clatter of sandals, as the late traveller rattles along. As the party approaches you will see that he has a little lamp to his foot to make his step a safe one. In an instant the voice comes to your memory, written in that same city three thousand years ago, "Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path."

A USEFUL PLANT.—The mainstay of Chinese life is the bamboo. In fact, the bamboos of the Celestial Empire are more valuable than her mines, and next to rice and silk, yield the greatest revenue. Let us enter a Chinese dwelling. Within, hanging from the rafters, we see a number of hooks of prickly bamboo, on which hang pieces of dried pork and such like provisions. In one corner are a water-proof coat and hat, each wrought out of leaves of bamboo. Elsewhere we observe agricultural implements, chiefly fashioned from this plant; and, except the deal top of the table, all the furniture of the simple abode is of the same material. The fishing net, the baskets of diverse shapes, the paper and pens, the grain-measures, the wine-cups, the water-ladles, the chopsticks, and finally the tobacco-pipes, are all of bamboo. The man who dwells here is feasting on the tender shoots of the plant. Ask him of his earliest impressions, and he will tell you that they came to him through the basket-work of a bamboo cradle; speak of the end to which we are all hastening, and he will express a wish to sleep beneath some bamboo brake on a cool hillside.

AMONG WILD BEASTS.—Old traditions of the conduct of wild animals toward a traveller at night in the forest, says a Western correspondent who has been out in the mountains, tend to fill him with nervous apprehensions. The books advise a fire to awe them into keeping a respectful distance while you slumber. Pile on the well-dried pine fagots which are strewn over the ground. They will burn till a few hours of dawn, and although the restless tread of an army of wolves, catamounts, cougars and panthers may disturb the slumberer, he will be safe from their enemity. It is very romantic to spread one's blankets on the soft turf under a friendly pine and "lie down to pleasant dreams," though after a long day's jaunt the dreams very fortunately are apt to prove truant. But fiery eyes gleaming out of the darkness on all sides at the victim whom the red shining flames alone protect from being torn to pieces, do not fill the brain with the most soothing images. I, however, soon fell asleep, after rolling myself up in two blankets and a buffalo robe, and did not awake until just before the gray dawn. Then the last flickering ember of the fire had expired, and although the darkness was not yet dispersed, the voracious lobos and kiotes were no longer watching me. I saddled my horse and packed the pony by starlight. Before the sun peeped over the pine fringed hills on the east side of Gold Creek, I had ridden 15 miles.

THE ARENA AT SYRACUSE.—The tasteless masses of brick-work which surround the arena of the Roman amphitheatre, a little below the theatre, fittingly correspond with the brutality to the satisfaction of which they were devoted. The architecture of the Greeks does not embody intellect more strikingly than the architecture of the Roman's mere animal force. It is only when viewed in the gigantic proportions of a colliseum that Roman art, if art it can be called, produces an effect; and even then the effect is simply that of the monstrous and overpowering, and appeals rather to the lower and uneducated side of our nature. While we were looking up at the broken arches and mentally comparing them with the perfect symmetry and delicate proportions of the Greek theatre which we had just left, our guide told us a local story which seemed a mixture of the old tale of Androkles and the lion, and of the monk Telemachus in the gladiatorial shows of Honorius at Rome. Once upon a time, so ran the story, a cruel tyrant governed Syracuse, and, in order to satiate his lust for blood, built the amphitheatre we were visiting and stocked it with wild beasts. These were fed with the bodies of orthodox Christians who refused to deny their faith. Among others, a certain man, whose name Valerio could not recollect, was condemned to be exposed. Now, it so happened that he had already been a fugitive from the tyrant's displeasure, and had concealed himself in the woods, where the wild beasts had shown themselves more kindly and merciful than men, and a lion had adopted him as a foster brother. But the lion was caught by the king's servants just about the same time as his human foster brother. The latter was dressed in an animal's skin, as was generally the case with the victims of the tyrant, and thrown into the arena. The doors of the cage in which the lion was confined were then opened, and the imprisoned beast burst forth upon the unfortunate victim, whom it did not recognize at first on account of his disguise, but the man spoke to it, and at once the animal knew its old companion, and, instead of injuring him, became as gentle and delighted as a dog that has recovered its master. The people, struck with the lion's conduct, rose en masse, and, with the nameless hero of the tale at their head, killed the tyrant, professed themselves Christians, and destroyed the amphitheatre; and ever since that time the latter has remained in its present ruinous condition. Such was the legend—a curious example of the way in which a nursery story may entwine itself about a local site, the true history of which has been forgotten.—Fortnightly Review.

INDIANS IN GUATEMALA.—Guatemala has a population of about a million and a quarter of inhabitants, of whom nearly nine hundred thousand are pure Indians. Their principal characteristics are more or less the same. They are divided into tribes, using different dress. The principal languages or idioms are the Katchiquel, which prevails over the western part of the country, the Mams, the Pocomams, the Mayas, and the Lacondon; and these are again subdivided into dialects which have little resemblance to the roots from which they are derived. The individuals of each tribe dress exactly alike; their dress never varies, and, perhaps, has not done so for many generations. The women wear their hair adorned in different fashions, according to their tribes, but all have it tied or bound in some manner with red or orange-colored braid. Their covering for the upper part of the body is a kind of chemise, called a guipil, a short loose garment reaching below the waist, and which is nothing more than a piece of cotton cloth, with a hole in the centre, through which to pass the head, with other holes for the arms, and embroidery around the neck and arm-holes. The skirt is of heavy cotton material, woven by themselves; it reaches down to the knees, and is of different color, according to the tribe of the wearer. The skirt has no stitching, but is arranged by the Indian, when she puts it on, in large plaits round her waist, which she binds together with a broad band of thick striped cotton, which forms a girdle and great adornment. The only difference which exists in the dress of women of the same tribe is in the matter of the necklace, which is generally of coral interspersed with coins, the latter more or less valuable as the rank of the woman is higher or lower, and some of these necklaces are even hung with heavy silver dollars. They have the feet bare, and the covering for the head, called a reboso, is a long cotton scarf, which they throw over it on going out. It is almost impossible to meet with a more picturesque sight than an Indian market-place, between the hours of eight and nine in the morning, especially that of one of the larger Indian towns. The bright colors of the dresses, and their scrupulous cleanliness, the variety formed by the addition of a mixture of tribes, and the delicate tints in which the houses are painted or washed, are all set off by the clearness and brilliancy of the climate, and form a tout ensemble both lively and interesting in the extreme. With small exception, the clothing both of male and female is homespun; and every Indian girl's education is complete when she can spin well enough to clothe herself and her husband. ... the Indian's curse, they are a moral and a decently behaved people. They marry very young, the men at from sixteen to eighteen, the women as young as eleven years, and usually are faithful to their marriage vows; indeed, in this respect they form a favorable contrast to the governing class of Ladinos. They are often pilferers of little things, but are in many respects remarkably trustworthy and honest. It is the custom of owners of plantations, and also of tradesmen, to send them long distances with gold or silver coin. Sometimes one man will have a thousand dollars or more to carry four or five days' journey, and I never knew a case of these messengers failing in their trust, though, perhaps, the man who had thus been trusted on the road with a large amount of money would prefer cigars, or any other little thing which might lie in his reach. Unlike their nomadic brethern in the United States, they are essentially an agricultural race; but their system of agriculture is of the most primitive kind. They live in towns or townships, but every head of a family has his maize fields, usually one on the mountain slopes, and another smaller one in the vicinity of the town. The mountain plantation is that which gives the largest crop, and the system is to cut down the timber and undergrowth in the dryest part of the year, then as soon as it is dry to set fire to it, and the day after maize is dibbled into the soil without further preparation, the influence of the wood ashes, and the heavy rains which usually fall shortly after the time of planting, acting in the place of other cultivation of the soil. The weeds are cut down with a long knife, and about three weeks after the maize is planted it is hilled with a hoe, after which it is left to grow until the cobs are formed, when the stalks are bent over. At harvest time the corn is stowed away in a little hut, on the same plot of ground, and brought down to the town-house on the Indian's back at his needs require. The same plot of ground is never planted two seasons together, each Indian having, by right of custom, the privilege of the land above him in a direct line to the mountain top. The land planted one year is altogether abandoned after being cropped, and the high bush again grows on it for years, when it is again planted in the same fashion. April and May are the months for burning off, and the whole country is filled with smoke during these months to such an extent as to completely hide the sun, though there is not otherwise a cloud in the sky.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

The United States imported 20,000,000 clay pipes, mostly from Glasgow, last year.

It is estimated that at least 8,000,000 gallons of wine will be made in California this year.

It is stated in a French paper that the value of hens, chickens, and eggs annually sold in the markets of France is $80,000,000.

In Chicago, during the past year, more than 1,800 houses have been built or begun at an estimated cost of from $16,000,000 to $18,000,000.

The steam engines and labor-saving machinery in the United States are computed to be equivalent to the unaided labor of one thousand million persons engaged in the task of production.

The number of passengers between France and England by Calais and Dover, during September last, was 26,831, and in the first nine months of this year, 166,407, being an augmentation of 6,487 over the corresponding period of 1874.

The Philadelphia Times says the funded debt of Philadelphia has increased from $47,000,000 in 1872 to $64,202,000 in 1875, and the floating debt from $3,000,000 to $10,000,000. The expenses of the city have run up from $5,695,000 to $10,000,000.

The returns of emigration from Liverpool for August show that the total number of persons who left was 8,270, being a decrease of 6,124 as compared with August, 1874. Eight months of the present year, compared with the corresponding period of last year, show a decrease of 21,870. Of the total number of emigrants during those months, 6,710 went to the United States.

The following is given as a statement of the divisions of labor among the operatives in the British Isles:—Number of persons employed on textile fabrics, 1,054,947; metal manufactures, 180,660; leather, 8,692; chemicals, 49,987; articles of food, 31,255; building, 20,823; paper, 37,422; miscellaneous, 211,522; total, 1,595,288. Comparing the number of American operatives, 2,555,314, with the number of British operatives, 1,595,288, it appears that there are 960,026 more operatives in the United States than in Great Britain.

The St. John (N. B.) Telegraph states that enough of timber was exported from New Brunswick last year to produce 220,000,000 superficial feet of deals, an amount sufficient to "make a plank platform ten feet wide from St. John to Liverpool, and a thousand miles beyond it." The same journal points out that even if the forests of the province could stand so considerable a drain, the state of the timber market in Europe shows the necessity of curtailment in production for some years to come. New Brunswick, unlike some other timber-producing countries, has an excellent soil to fall back upon after the timber is cleared away, and as the supply of the latter fails, the population may be expected to become more and more agricultural.

If a complete or even approximate exhibit of the amount of money invested in mortgages and deeds of trust in American cities could be made, it would be instructive reading, for it would throw a good deal of light on the question of solvency. Statistics recently published in New York show an amount of mortgaged property in that city and Brooklyn that was hardly suspected; the savings banks and insurance companies alone are shown to hold mortgages in the two cities of $214,835,513, and it is estimated that $155,000,000 more is held by private lenders. This makes a total of nearly $370,000,000, which is a pretty large incumbrance even for two such wealthy cities as New York and Brooklyn to carry.

The late winter may be said to have lasted, says a medical contemporary, from the middle of November to the end of March. During this period of twenty weeks 37,326 deaths were registered in London, equal to an annual death rate of 28 per 1,000. In the corresponding twenty weeks of more moderate temperature, in 1873-74, the deaths in London were 32,378, and the death rate only 25 per 1,000. The excess of deaths during the past winter in London may be, therefore, roughly estimated at 5,000, of which excess nearly 2,000 were of persons aged upwards of 60 years. According to the English life table the average annual rate of mortality among persons aged upwards of 60 years is 71.6 per 1,000. During the twenty weeks first named the rate of mortality in London among persons of this age was so high as 117.6, against 94.8 in the corresponding period of the previous winter.

There are said to be thirteen hundred lunatics in Gheel, Belgium, a town of eleven thousand inhabitants. The insane are not in an asylum, but board and lodge with the people of the place. The patients are from all nations and all ranks of society, and they are accommodated according to their means; the wealthy are placed with the affluent, and the poor with the poorer. In a word this colony of lunatics is the special care of the commune of Gheel, the Government earning directly more than 500,000 francs annually through the keeping of the lunatics, and indirectly also a great deal through the cheap work of all kinds which the patients perform for the inhabitants. It is the personal interest of the inhabitants to do their duty well by the patients, as these are intrusted only to people whose moral fitness and means of existence are approved. In fact, a family at Gheel is not considered respectable if lunatics are not entrusted to it.

It has been calculated, by good authority, that the wages constantly owing for an average of a half month's service or work, amount, in the United States, to $120,000,000. And who is it that owns the deposits in the savings banks, amounting to about $760,000,000? Not the rich, but the laboring people and persons of small means, who put their surplus earnings there for safe keeping. It is estimated that the same class has, in national and private banks and in trust companies, another $100,000,000, and that nearly $180,000,000 are owing them in other kinds of debts. There is, then, the sum of about $1,200,000,000 owing to the laboring people and men of small means, constituting their savings to that amount. That class are creditors, and you pretend that for their benefit you will expand the currency. Gold being at 15 per cent. premium, these savings have a value of $1,000,000,000 in gold. Expand the currency until gold is 30 per cent. premium, and you have robbed these people of $180,000,000. Expand it until the gold premium is 60 per cent., and you have stripped them of $420,000,000 of hard earned money.

British Columbia intends to send to the Centennial Exhibition a flag-pole 140 ft. long, composed of a single tree.

A new kind of potato bug, much larger than his Colorado brother, recently appeared in Minnesota, much to the alarm of the farmers of that State.

Several people have been badly burned, some with fatal results, in Washington, D. C., within a short time, by the explosion of what is called "non-explosive oil."

Of the various kinds of nervous and dyspeptic ailments which medical men are constantly treating, Dr. Wilks finds at least six due to idleness to one from overwork.

Several porpoises have lately been seen below and above London Bridge. One was shot ... Rotherhithe, and another was captured near Waterloo Bridge.

The epidemic of measles, which recently caused much mortality in the Fejee Islands, has broken out in Alaska, and is spreading with fearful rapidity. The disease is of the kind known as black measles.

The champion rose of the world has been found in Santa Barbara, Cal., and is sixteen and three-fourths inches in circumference. It is of lemon color, possesses a delicious fragrance, and is a climber, growing upon a trellis.

In Germany a species of vegetable is found which is popularly known as "vegetable beefsteak." It is very juicy and tender, and resembles beef in appearance. When sliced and eaten with salad it is highly esteemed as a nutritious food.

At a Massachusetts golden wedding recently the marriage bell was three feet in diameter, and when the guests went away each of them was presented with two double eagles, or a pair of $40 sleeve buttons. There were 150 of the guests.

Several small pieces of ordnance were recently brought up by a dredging machine from the bed of the Appomattox river, where they have lain since Lafayette, from his position in Pocahontas, shelled the enemy who occupied Yorktown.

While tunneling into the side of Mount McLellan, Colorado, recently, the explorers came upon ground solidly frozen ninety feet from the surface. The question is how the frost got in, as there was no crevice through which it could enter.

Mr. Gilmore thinks that at the opening of the Centennial next year, at Philadelphia, the 100th Psalm should be sung by 100,000 voices on the 100th anniversary of the declaration of independence. Gilmore thinks he could organise the vocal feat.

There is a prospect that the price of paper will be considerably reduced by the introduction of the cactus leaf as material for manufacture. A trial has been made, with satisfactory results, the quality of the paper produced being pronounced superior to that now in general use.

Wilmington, N. C., reports a sea-serpent ninety feet long, and as big as a barrel. He ran on one of the shoals in that vicinity, and a party of brave men ran to attack him, but he raised his head and opened his mouth wide enough to swallow them one at a time, and they discreetly retreated.

Mr. Turle has resigned from the position of organist at Westminster Abbey, which he has held for upwards of fifty years. He has presided over the organ in the grand old abbey at three successive coronations—those of George IV., William IV. and her present majesty—and he is now to give way to Doctor Bridge, of Manchester Cathedral, who has high repute in his profession.

The postmaster of Monticello, Ga., recently performed the feat of reading a letter without hearing its contents. An old woman who had never been to school, got a letter one day and asked the postmaster to read it for her. She did not want him to hear it, so she took a wad of cotton out of her pocket and stuffed his ears with it. She then had him read the letter in a low voice, and was perfectly satisfied that the reader did not hear a word of it.

A section of one of the big trees of California has been received in Philadelphia for exhibition at the Centennial. The tree from which this section was cut grew on the west slope of the Sierra Nevadas. Its age, as indicated by the yearly rings, was about 2,250 years; the height 276 feet; diameter at the surface of the ground, 26 feet. The bark averaged one foot in thickness. It took two men ten days to fell the tree, and when it fell it broke into several pieces, but not from decay, as it was found to be perfectly sound and solid.

The Wadsworth estate, in Western New York, is owned by Charles F. and James W. Wadsworth, whose chief business is grazing cattle. It consists of about 80,000 acres, occupying parts of the five counties of Genesee, Livingston, Monroe, Erie and Niagara. One may walk miles above the village of Genesee to the city of Rochester, a distance of about thirty-six miles, without stepping off this magnificent domain. About 8,000 acres are flats in the Genesee River valley, from one to three miles in width, overflowed almost annually by that stream, and thus constantly enriched without artificial agency.

FAMILY MATTERS.

INFLAMED GUMS.—A drop or two of camphorated spirit rubbed on the gums will allay inflammation.

AMMONIA is the best and cheapest application to remove grease spots. Wash with clear, soft water after cleansing.

MUSTY BOTTLES.—Musty bottles or jars may be sweetened with lye or dissolved soda. Let either remain in them a short time, then dry and scald them. They will not become musty if a little salt be kept in them.

TO WASH LINEN.—A tablespoonful of black pepper put in the first water in which gray and buff linens are washed, will keep them from spotting. It will also generally keep the colors of black or colored cambrics or muslins from running, and does not harden the water.

THE HAIR.—A good hair restorative may be made of boxwood leaves, of which take a handful and put into one pint of boiling water, digest for an hour, simmer ten minutes, and then strain. In applying it to the hair rub it well into the roots.

STOMACHIC.—Salt is very good for disordered stomachs. Sometimes a single teaspoonful will have the desired effect. Even in the violent internal aching called colic, a teaspoonful of salt added to a pint of cold water, and drunk at once, has been known to afford relief as quickly as any other known remedy.

CHLORIDE OF LIME.—Chloride of lime, in a tightly-corked bottle, is a useful article to be kept in the house. Besides being an efficient disinfectant, it is said to be excellent to use in case of wounds inflicted by dogs or rabid animals until the physician arrives. Mix two tablespoonfuls with half a pint of fresh water, and bathe the wound constantly.

TO HEAT VEGETABLES.—Vegetables should never be washed until immediately before being prepared for the table. Lettuce is made almost worthless in flavor by dipping in water some hours before it is served. Potatoes suffer even more than other vegetables through the washing process. They should not be put in water until just ready for boiling.

LIP SALVE.—To keep the lips soft, use this salve: White wax three drachms, spermaceti one and a half drachms, olive oil six drachms, alkanet root one drachm. Melt the wax and spermaceti in a cup, then the oil and root in another, near the fire; strain through muslin, or fine linen, and mix with the wax; add balsam of Peru one drachm, essence of bergamot ten drops, otto of rose five drops.

BURNS AND SCALDS.—Soak a piece of linen rag in linseed oil, suspend it from the tongs over a saucer, and ignite the lower end. The oil which drops from it while consuming should be applied, when cold, with a feather to the burn or scald. If kept in a bottle well corked it looses none of its efficacy. Another remedy is to spread clarified honey upon a linen rag, and apply it to the wound immediately. It will generally relieve the pain instantly, and heal the sore in a very short time.

BLEEDING AT THE NOSE.—To stop bleeding at the nose, press the finger firmly upon the little artery that supplies the blood to the side of the face affected. Two small arteries branching up from the main arteries on each side of the jawbone supply the face with blood. If the nose bleeds from the right nostril, for example, pass the finger along the edge of the right jaw till the beating of the artery is felt. Press hard upon it and the bleeding will cease. Continue the pressure five minutes, until the ruptured vessels in the nose have time to contract.

HUMILIATION OF PATCHES.—A kindly woman declares that she fully agrees with any thoughtful woman who spares her boys the humiliation of wearing great round or triangular patches, when her own skill and a generous supply of pieces make the reseated pants look almost as well as new ones. May they hold her in grateful remembrance long after they have outlived the era of torn trousers. She suggests that when the pants need repairing over the knee, it is a good way to rip the seams each side of the worn part, cut it out and insert a new piece, pressing it nicely before closing the side seams again. Neither boy nor man need be ashamed to wear garments neatly patched, if it be necessary, and every girl should be taught that mending well is an essential part of domestic economy.

HOW MUCH TO EAT.—In order to keep the system healthy food should be judiciously consumed. The harder a man works the more nutriment he requires. While a working man would need daily five pounds of solid mixed food, two and a half would be enough for persons who lounge and sleep much. Life can be sustained two or three weeks on two ounces a day. A change of diet should follow a change of seasons—in winter, fats and sweets; in summer, fruits, fish, and lighter meats. Milk and egg, a blood food; steak, a flesh food; potatoes and wheat, which being heated material, are fuel; and coffee, a stimulant. It is important that the workman should eat mixed food, which, partaken of at regular seasons, stimulates the system, and keeps it in working order.

CLEANLINESS.—Too much attention cannot be given to that "cleanliness which is next to godliness;" cleanliness not merely of the person but of everything which may taint the air we breathe and the water we drink. Thousands of persons live in houses enveloped the year round and the waste of farm-yards, and die of typhoid and other low grade fevers, without suspecting that they owe their death to a neglect of proper drainage. Everything that is not actually consumed in the house and barn should find its way to the compost bin—not only because it is valuable, but for the better reason that its presence elsewhere is dangerous. Dig and wall up a covered sewer, so that the drainings of the kitchen and wash-house may flow into the compost bin instead of the wall.

CUPBOARDS.—In the construction of old houses, and in too many instances new ones also, a great defect is to be found in the absence of any mode of ventilation for the cupboards. This omission, says the Sanitary Record, is a serious one in all cases, but especially in those which are devoted to the reception of food or of dirty linen. In such cases these closets, with their contents, become laboratories for the manufacture of polluted air, which from time to time escapes into the living rooms and makes itself unpleasantly apparent. The remedy for this is not difficult; a few perforations in the door will be found serviceable, but if practicable the wall of the cupboard should be perforated, so that a thorough draught could be obtained. For damp closets and cupboards which generate a mildew, a trayful of quicklime will be found to absorb the moisture and render the air pure, but, of course, it is necessary to renew the lime from time to time, as it becomes fully slaked. This last remedy will be found useful in safes and strong rooms, the damp air of which acts frequently most injuriously on the valuable deeds and documents which they contain.

TO REMOVE FOREIGN BODIES FROM THE EYE.—A medical correspondent of the London Lancet makes a suggestion which may prove useful on emergency to some of our readers. He says:—"In consequence of the difficulty I experienced in removing from a patient a portion of steel imbedded in the cornea, which did not yield to spud or needle, some other means of removal became necessary. Dry, soft white silk waste suggested itself to me, and was wound round a thin piece of wood, so as to completely envelop the end. This soft application was brushed once backward and forward horizontally over the part of the cornea where the foreign substance fixed. To my astonishment, it was at once entangled by the delicate but strong meshes of the silk, and was withdrawn with the greatest ease, caught by the same. A gentleman, in turning steel at a lathe, suddenly felt a portion had entered his eye. He went at once to a surgeon, who, with the most skilful manipulation, failed to extract the same, saying it would soon work out of itself. The next morning the patient saw me, having suffered severely since the accident, and on the first application the portion of steel was extracted."

HOW THE OLD AND INFIRM ARE SUPPORTED BY FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES.

During the vigor of youth the expenditure of the power of the mind (which is the real seat of man's strength) is balanced by activity of the nutritive functions, without the aid of science. But Time, the everlasting dissipator of reason as of events, sets a limit to his power, and it is at this epoch that science may render to man the desired assistance, and restore the drain upon his wasted energies.

Each effort of the mind, every act of the body, will extract a volume of nervous element in proportion to the magnitude of the thought or action, and since this Hypophosphite combination really will supply the vis vitæ to the body, it must support the human mechanism successfully after the vigor of youth is past. 261x

FRY'S CARACAS COCOA.

IT is often asked, "Why has the firm of FRY & SONS adopted the name of 'Caracas' to designate one of their leading descriptions of Cocoa in packets, and also a very superior Chocolate in cakes?" The answer is because it is a fitting appellation for these articles, prepared as they are, with a careful selection of Cocoa of which the growth of Caracas forms the leading and distinctive type. The public, too long accustomed to accept indiscriminately the Cocoa presented to them, are now understanding the value in a dietetic point of view of the high class aromatic Cocoas in which the pure flavor is developed by careful curing and selection in the countries of production, such as those employed in the manufacture of FRY'S Caracas Cocoa and FRY'S Caracas Chocolate. As FRY and SONS manufacture a great variety of Chocolate and Cocoa, persons requiring these particular kinds must specially ask for FRY'S Caracas Chocolate and FRY'S Caracas Cocoa.
