Romance amidst the horror

GOING VIRAL

ELLEN GOLDFINCH

I don't like horror movies or movies that have a blood bath of killing, but there's one TV show that I've watched week after week for the last six years. It's a show that has more than its share of icky and gory carcasses, and there's both romance and humour to be had while hanging around those carcasses. That show is Fox's Bones, which is on every Thursday at 9 p.m.

The show is very loosely based on Kathy Reichs, a real-life forensic anthropologist who has written many best selling murder mysteries. I am a fan of that genre, but not one of Reichs' style, which probably puts me in a minority. Reichs produces Bones and I really like the TV show a lot better than her books.

The plot revolves around a brilliant but socially inept forensic anthropologist, Dr. Temperance Brennan (Emily Deschanel) and her FBI partner, Sealey Booth (David Boreanaz, formerly the star of the show, Angel) who solve murder mysteries together. Booth is a former US Ranger and sniper. He is warm-hearted and relies on hunches to solve mysteries while Brennan (Bones) is a firm believer in scientific method and logic to solve mysteries. Bones just doesn't get people. The two spar constantly and the spark between them is reminiscent of the 80s romantic comedy Moonlighting, which spent two years with the tease of whether the characters (played by Cybil Shepherd and Bruce Willis) would ever become a couple. The two years in which they did become a couple was seen to lead to the cancellation of the show. Obviously, the writers of Bones have spent the last six years doing everything possible to avoid the "Moonlighting curse."

Bones also relies heavily on the ensemble cast who support the two main players. Brennan's best friend is Angela Montenegro (Michaela Conlin), the team's forensic artist and computer whiz, who tries to teach Bones how to behave like a normal person and has her own romance with Dr. Jack Hodgins (T. J. Thyne). Apparently, the Moonlighting curse has not applied to them because, after an on-again-off-again relationship, Hodgins and Angela were "allowed" to marry and now Angela is pregnant.

They are the more off beat couple on the show as Hodgins, who comes from a ridiculously wealthy family, is mad for conspiracy theories and Angela is a warm, high spirited artist type who doesn't exactly fit in with the squints or scientists. There is also a series of graduate students, each with eccentricities that adds comic relief to the mysteries that are solved each week.

This is the key to why Bones differs from the Law & Order and CSI series on television. There is more focus on characters and the development of their own lives interwoven with the mysteries makes the show feel more like a movie rather than an episodic TV murder mystery. This is why I think that I'm able to stand all the blood, guts and gore; there's humour and character development from week to week. The characters have changed and grown from the first year to this, their sixth season.

Will Bones and Booth ever get together? I think that they will when the show has a series finale. Meanwhile the writers will do everything that they can to stretch out that romantic tension for as long as they can to keep Bones going into as many seasons as they can manage.

OUTSIDE THE BOX

KELLY MCDEVITT

The following column was intended for last Friday, before the holiday in question. Alas, a few doctor's appointments and family obligations caused me some confusion and prevented me from submitting it on time. With my sincerest apologies, dear readers, I present you with your intended Valentine's Day gift:

Pink. I really, really hate pink. Anyone who knows me can guess why. You see the colour pink and you think of things that are fluffy and sweet, like cotton candy, bubblegum, flamingos. I'm neither fluffy nor sweet, and I have a hard time dealing with things that are.

That, more than anything, is what I hate about Saint Valentine's Day. Every window in every store is bedecked with god-awful pink till someone breaks out the St. Patty's gear. Forget all the socio-political nonsense - blah blah consumerism, blah blah pagan origins, blah blah. Singles Awareness Day (S.A.D. - geddit? Really, it exists). What peeves me isn't being single or having half-price chocolates shoved in my face (those two things work quite well together, actually) but the damnable, omnipresent pink. Gah!

Dear Internet, this year for Valentine's Day I would like an array of perspectives on modern love, preferably showcasing as little pink as possible. Love, Kelly.

Vamlumtimes Day! - The good people over at Homestar Runner really are comical geniuses. Their quirky little cartoon characters can seem silly at first, but amid all that silliness is some pretty hilarious writing. The Vamlumtimes Day cartoon from the website's Teen Girl Squad series is no exception. If you aren't familiar with the website (and you should be possums, I wrote about it many moons ago), this is a good introduction to their style and humour. Visit www.homestarrunner.com/tgs12.html and get some tech-no-logical romance.

Cat Food & Bean Dip - Probably the most unromantic title for a Valentine's-themed story ever, but it's a cute little film. Jason, a downtrodden, single grocery clerk, ponders the holiday of love while selling flowers, wine and chocolates all day for couples everywhere to enjoy. It's not the most positive perspective on V day, but I think it ends on a heart-warming note. To watch visit www.youtube.com/user/thedusty.

Do Not Disconnect - Ever walk down the street or get onto a bus and notice that everyone around you is plugged into their own personal bubble? Eyes fixed blankly ahead and ears firmly corked with a white wire or a blue tooth, many of us make our way through the streets utterly disconnected from those in our surroundings. This wonderful little short film explores simple human connection - one could call it love, or compassion, or even awareness. Check it out at www.youtube.com/DoNotDisconnectFilm. In a bit of irony, the film's concept was recently adapted (read stolen) for a Motorola Super Bowl ad. Eyeroll.

Awkward Embraces - Dating can be tough, mostly because it's a really embarrassing exercise. The forced manners and chivalry, the tricky balance between eating/drinking, talking and smiling simultaneously, the strange ritual of synthesizing all your defining quirks, habits and interests into one hour of exhibitionism - none of this is fun. This web series finds out those awkward moments and gets them right on, each episode as painful, embarrassing, and giggle-inducing as a hit to the funny bone. Follow the nerdy Jessica as she stumbles through what seem to be all my personal nightmare dating scenarios (seriously, the date in the Mexican restaurant... uncanny) at www.awkwardembraces.com.

Ladies of the Canyon

A band perhaps on the edge of their big break

JESSE FEITH

This Saturday, February 19 Montreal quartet Ladies of the Canyon will be making their way through Sherbrooke to play at popular microbrewery/bar Boquébière.

Billed as "four friends who got together to write songs," it doesn't take long to notice that the band is much, much more than that. Although truly friends first, composed of Jasmine Bleile, Maia Davies, Anna Ruddick and Senja Sargent, LOTC represent a unique situation in which all four members not only share the songwriting load, but also take turns on vocals throughout their range of songs.

Still touring off the strength of their last release, their debut album Haunted Woman, the band will be finishing off their week in Sherbrooke after playing shows both Thursday in Toronto and Friday night at Montreal's Highlights Festival.

The album itself is a mix of sounds difficult to pin a genre on, as producer Collin Crips explored the band's different possible arrangements and songwriting styles from all four members, eventually creating an album that could as easily be called country as it could rock as it could pop.

Early singles "Follow Me Down," "Maybe Baby" and "Give it Again" are arguably the most upbeat on the entire album, and when asked why they were chosen as singles, vocals/guitarist Senja Sargent agrees.

"Those three songs just seemed like the most attractive, straightforward and catchy on the album."

You can't let the catchiness and poppy country vibe of the singles fool you however as the rest of the album leans more towards old-fashioned 70s rock and roll ballads. Fittingly, as the band not only claims their main influences are The Eagles, The Band and Fleetwood Mac, but they also take their name from Joni Mitchell's third album. Songs such as "Lonely Town" and title track "Haunted Woman" show the bands ability to slow it down and write stretched out ballads that rely on not much more than simple acoustics and chilling vocals to get their message across.

When asked to choose a personal favourite off the album, Sargent singles out one of the songs on the album she wrote herself; "Poet." Inspired by Leonard Cohen's "Chelsea Hotel #2" and a past relationship, the song lyrically evokes thoughts of holding on to a fleeting relationship and musically offers one of the most intimate moments on the album.

The band is currently on the Quebec leg of their tour. Excluding their gig at The Dakota Tavern in Toronto, their next shows will bring them across our province stopping at places such as St-Jean-sur-Richelieu, St-Therese, Rimouski and finally Sorel on March 24.

"We always enjoy playing shows in Quebec, it just seems like there is a much more loyal fan base here, and a unique crowd that comes out to our shows," adds Sargent.

Letting the simple country image that surrounds this girl band define them simply isn't enough as LOTC pack more than a little punch once on stage. Known to give away ex-boyfriends' numbers on stage while encouraging the crowd to call them and for the occasional slip of the tongue vulgarity, the four "ladies" of the canyon have been known to cause a raucous onstage that may catch certain casual country fans off-guard.

Seemingly layered in more rock than they are in pop, at times LOTC would seem to be more at ease living in the freewheeling 60s and 70s than in today's era in which every album needs to have a genre embedded on it, and every band a scene to fall in to. Although all songs on the album may have a similar sound, they all simultaneously explore different corners of the country genre and when harmonized together live on stage the end result is something not to be missed.

The smaller stage on hand at Boquébière seems hardly enough to contain the four personalities of the band. With their broad stage presence and array of attitudes, LOTC are sure to deliver a well worthwhile show this Saturday night that most likely won't leave anyone on hand disappointed.

All things seem to be looking up when it comes to Ladies of the Canyon, currently already working on new songs to follow up the understated success of Haunted Woman, about six songs completed they say. Saturday night may very well represent one of those rare chances when you get to witness a great band playing smaller gigs right before their big break.

Catch Ladies of the Canyon this Saturday February 19, 9 p.m. at Boquébière. Tickets available at the door for $12.

Willie's Throwdown Tour set for Champlain Valley

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

The Willie Nelson's Country Throwdown Tour will stop in Essex Junction, Vermont, on the fairgrounds, on Sunday, May 29. This will be memorable because it has so much to offer.

The event will feature a lengthy list of outstanding artists on three different stages. It will be set up in a festival style, and you can take your lawn chairs, blankets, there's no assigned seating. The gates will open at 3 p.m. and the shows will continue throughout the day until 11 p.m.

The second annual edition of the Throwdown Tour is the only tour of its kind in the world of country music. Willie Nelson's Country Throwdown Tour mixes top country music artists with emerging singer-songwriters and all that at an affordable ticket price.

The festival event offers a great atmosphere where fans enjoy a constant stream of music on multiple stages all day long. It will feature a diverse lineup that brings together iconic and emerging artists in the country music scene as well as a full gathering of lifestyle attractions.

Jamey Johnson, Randy Houser, Lee Brice, Brantley Gilbert, Craig Campbell and Lukas Nelson and the Promise of the Real will be joining Willie Nelson on stage. This nationwide country music tour is kicking off in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania on May 27 and runs through July 4, where the tour will end with a big Fourth of July bang.

In addition to the seven main artists performing on two stages (a main stage and one side stage), the Bluebird Café Stage will feature six extraordinary singer-songwriters. Fans will get to see these artists perform intimate 'in the round' sets on the Bluebird Café stage throughout the day, as well as nightly performances on a specially designed stage during the main stage set changes. The Bluebird Café performers will include: Brent Cobb, Dani Flowers, Austin Lucas, Adam Hood, Erin Enderlin and Caitlin Smith.

With a career that has been lasting for 60 years and 200-plus albums, headliner Willie Nelson has earned every possible award as a musician and received accolades as an author, actor and activist.

This past April, Willie Nelson's Country Music, produced by Grammy- and

The rural life of cats, pastors and a butterfly specialist

GOOD READS

ELEANOR BROWN

In the last few months hundreds of New Arrivals have appeared on Lennoxville Library shelves. Here's a brief look at a mere handful.

The Wine of Angels begins with the renewal of an ages-old rural custom. Unfortunately, at the end of the gunfire an old-timer is dead — a suicide. It's one of the many shocking and unexpected events that pepper this 600-page book, one that slowly ramps up the creeps and the spooks and the supernatural.

Phil Rickman's 1998 mystery brings together small-town secrets with big-city hubris. (Or perhaps, big-city secrets and small-town hubris.) The book is the first in a series featuring the Reverend Merrily Watkins, an emotionally fraught single mum whose daily whispered prayers to God get on her 15-year-old daughter's nerves.

Adding to her troubles, Watkins takes over a rural parish and discovers some bad apples.

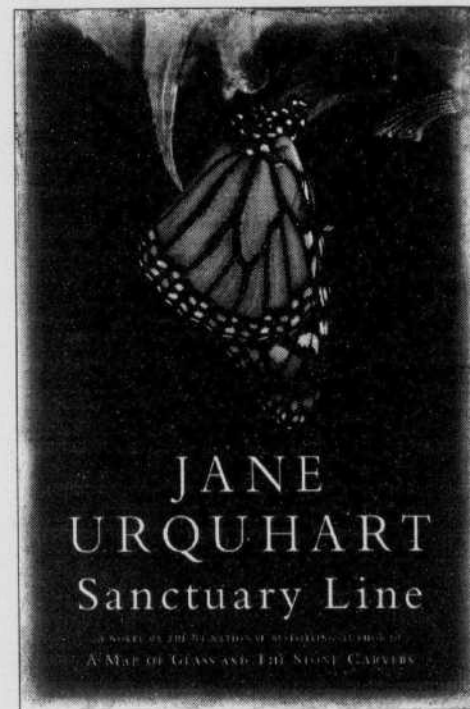

"Hostile looks were exchanged. Oh God, thought Merrily, it's going to be that sort of committee. She was suddenly depressed. Was this how [her predecessor] had started out, dutifully attending all the bitchy little meetings, wondering how God wanted him to vote?"

"Village life," Merrily asks herself: "the cradle of society, or just a shallow pond across which Jesus surely would never have bothered to walk?"

For those seeking a book with much a slower pace, last year's Sanctuary Line — it's the name of a road — is the newest from CanLit fave Jane Urquhart.

A soldier's body is flown back from overseas, and buried without her father's presence, since he'd disappeared two decades earlier. The narrator is a butterfly specialist, cousin Liz. She now lives alone in the family's old farmhouse, the acres surrounding it long sold to developers.

And, alone, she reflects on the past. "My mother was the sibling in her generation who had, through marriage, taken the first tentative step into the domain of business, professions, and cities. The next generation — all those cousins — would follow her with enthusiasm. There is no one, no one left. I live in a landscape where absence confronts me daily."

As Urquhart makes clear, you can't avoid the presence of the past. The stories of those who went before rise up around Liz, as she recalls her family history. Liz is steeped in grief, as is this

America, in ways that will shape their character's lives in this part of the world.

S. J. Rozen, Trail of Blood
(Ebury Press/Random House Group, 2009)

After a hiatus of several years award-winning author S. J. Rozen has returned to her fine series of tales featuring New York-based P.I. Lydia China and her estranged partner, Bill Smith. Shortly after Lydia is asked by a former mentor to locate a missing brooch known as the Shanghai Moon her friend is killed, and Lydia is dismissed from the case. But his death weighs heavily upon her, and she reunites with her partner Bill to pursue the case on their own. Their quest will take them back to the Shanghai of the Second World War and into a ghetto established by Jewish refugees who had fled Europe in a desperate attempt to avoid the Nazis. Before it is over the trail of the missing brooch will lead back to New York City, where the past will catch up with the present.

Part historical novel, part mystery, and part thriller, Trail of Blood (published in Britain as The Shanghai Moon) holds the reader firmly in its grasp from beginning to end. Rozen is a fine storyteller who has a good ear for dialogue and the ability to create a strong sense of place in a few, well-chosen words. She is eloquent in her depiction of the conditions facing the refugees, and leavens those dark scenes with light-hearted banter between Lydia and her mother, and equally entertaining exchanges with her partner. With a plot as intricately-fitted as a Chinese puzzle-box, Rozen weaves her tales seamlessly against the background of wartime Shanghai and New York City's Chinatown of today, and lays bare a part of history of which many readers will be unaware. Not to be missed.

Henry Chang, Red Jade
(Soho Crime, 2010)

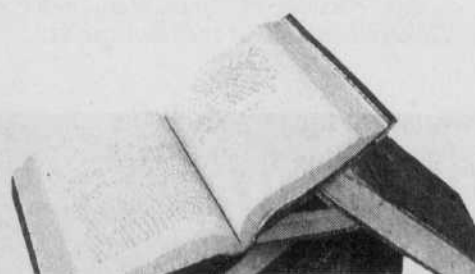

The third in author Henry Chang's brilliantly-textured noir series featuring New York police detective Jack Yu, Red Jade finds the loner detective redefining his life in the wake of his father's death. He is also seeking the man who shot his friend 'Tat' Louie during a robbery and left him in a coma. The trail leads to Seattle, and Yu accompanies his lady friend, lawyer Alex Lee-Chow there, ostensibly to watch her Chinese citizen-rights group receive an award, and using his free time to track down the man responsible for his friend's condition.

But unbeknownst to Yu an old nemesis is also in Seattle, preparing to Mention the word "Chinese" these days and most folks think of Walmart goods and takeaway restaurants. That's a shame, because China is home to one of the world's oldest and most distinctive civilizations, a rich culture harbouring many diverse and colourful traditions. Of course, not all traditions are benevolent: the ancient Tongs have morphed into today's Triads, gangs of organized criminals whose members number in the thousands, and whose reach is world-wide. Not surprising, then, that crime writers should turn to China for inspiration.

This week, then, a trio of tales that have their roots in China: each is unique, and each author draws upon Chinese culture to tell a captivating story in which personal and cultural histories are inextricably intertwined. And just as modern China itself casts its influence over the globe, so each of these tales inevitably finds its way back to North

RCM Radio Drama Writing awards

LATEST FROM CIDI

MAURICE SINGFIELD

A flagship program

Radio Communautaire Missisquoi is having too much fun! Last summer we initiated the first annual RCM Radio Drama Writing awards competition and today are pleased to announce the winners of the 2010 contest.

The distinguished panel of judges for the competition - Alex Paterson, Frances Gallagher and Jefferson Lewis - have completed their review of the entries. They met recently to select the winners and reached a unanimous decision that the prizes should be awarded as follows:

First Prize - $500 - Colin McGregor for "A Student Summer Abroad;" Second Prize - $350 - Roger de la Mare for "Enjoy the Dance;" Joint Third Prize - $150 - Pauline Clift for "Alice in Winterland;"

and Joint Third Prize - $150 - Denise Crawford for "A Death by the Pike."

It's hard to explain the joy one gets out of developing and producing an event whereby people are honoured and supported for their creative works. RCM's Radio Drama Writing awards is the brainchild of David Grenville; resident of the Town of Brome Lake. His interest in theatre and community radio along with his many friends, has enabled him to develop a competition supported by the likes of Louise Penny (patron), the Chawkers Foundation out of Toronto and the Townshippers' Cultural and Research Foundation.

"I'm pleased and relieved," says Grenville, "that the competition idea has gone off better than I had feared it would. Indeed, as a first-time effort I think we can judge it a success, and a model for future competitions that we can adjust as we go along."

Grenville pitched the idea to Kate Wisdom (Chairperson of RCM's board of directors) and me last year. "...she (Wisdom)," adds Grenville, "has worked closely with me on shaping and organizing the competition."

Wisdom is a huge contributor to the development of the arts in the Townships and has been working with the Oscar-winning T Bone Burnett, was released on Rounder Records and recently received a Grammy Nomination for Best Americana Album. Willie Nelson doesn't need any further introduction.

Jamey Johnson's album, That Lonesome Song was universally hailed as a masterwork. Rolling Stone, The New York Times, Esquire and The Los Angeles Times are just a few of the major publications that sang its praises.

The disc led to invitations from Willie Nelson to play Farm Aid and to appear on Letterman and Leno. In April 2009, the album earned Johnson a Gold Record. He toured with country legend Hank Williams Jr. His sophomore album, The Guitar Song also received rave reviews.

Country singer and songwriter Randy Houser was born and raised in Lake, Mississippi, where his love of music was apparent even as a young child. He started fronting bands when he was around 13 years old and continued playing local gigs all the way through high school.

While attending East Central Community College he realized playing music had its financial rewards as well, and he began working on his songwriting. Houser relocated to Nashville, Tennessee in 2002 and landed a song-publishing deal.

His debut album, Anything Goes, introduced him as an exceptional artist, someone with both a cutting-edge sound and a deep respect for classic country.

Lee Brice has been signed to Curb Records since 2007. He has released four singles to country radio, all four of which have charted on the Billboard Hot Country Songs charts. Brice has also co-written singles for Garth Brooks, Tim McGraw and Adam Gregory.

In August 2009, Brice charted with his fourth single, 'Love Like Crazy,' which is the first release from his debut album of the same name.

Craig Campbell won contests sponsored by True Value Hardware at age 15 and again at 18. In the mid-2000s, he was the pianist in Tracy Byrd's road band, and in 2010, he released his first single, 'Family Man.'

Here are some details about the show: The event will take place on the Midway Lawn at Champlain Valley Exposition on Sunday May 29, 2011. The gates will open at 1 p.m. and the show will start at 3:30 p.m.

Tickets are $49 advance, $55 day of show, children 13 and under free. Tickets go on sale this Friday February 18, 2011. Surely one of the greatest shows this year! For more information go at www.highergroundmusic.com.

return to Hong Kong. Known simply as Mona, she had been the mistress of Uncle Four, the head of a powerful Tong in New York City. Tiring of his possessiveness and her dead-end life, Mona killed him and ran away with valuable coins that would enable her to start a new life. Months earlier Yu had almost nabbed her in San Francisco, but she eluded him. Even in a land as big as America the trails of Chinese fugitives are likely to intersect, however, and the Tong picks up Mona's trail, closing in on her just as Yu tracks down Tat Louie's assailant. The result is an atmospheric, fast-paced thriller that builds to a gripping climax.

Rooted in the cloistered world of Chinese-Americans, where everyone knows something and old grudges are not easily laid to rest, Red Jade continues the compelling saga of the elusive and cold-blooded Mona in her quest for a new life, pursued by a cop who cannot let the case go. The clash between the two becomes a memorable tale of conflict both internal and external, and makes for another fine read from the discerning folks at Soho Press.

Donna Carrick, The First Excellence (Book Surge Press, 2009)

An exquisitely-crafted saga of one person's search for her roots set against a clash of cultures. In 1989 a young Chinese girl, Li Fa-ling, is given her newborn baby sister and sent away, so that the grandmother will not kill the unwanted infant. Against all odds she manages to find refuge in an orphanage where they are cared for and raised; but the sanctuary harbours its own dark secrets. Eighteen years later Fa-ling has grown into a strong young woman, and she and her sister have emigrated to Canada. Determined to put her troubled past to rest, she joins a group of Canadian couples who are traveling to China to meet their adopted children for the first time and take them home. The China she returns to, however, is far from the open society in which she has been raised in the West. Populated by dissidents and police spies, and motivated by repression and greed, before Fa-ling's journey draws to a close she will be drawn into a labyrinth of deceit and violence, her own fate far from clear.

Drawing on her own experience as an adoptive parent of a Chinese child, Carrick sets her tale against the grand sweep of events as China wrestles with the more open ways of the West, and skillfully employs converging story lines to heighten the suspense. An intricate plot that mirrors the subtlety of China itself, The First Excellence combines an original and entertaining tale with an insightful account of a complex land that remains a mystery to most Westerners.

So there you have it: three very different stories, each drawing on events of the past and then skillfully weaving them into engrossing contemporary tales that provide glimpses of the unique culture of China. Readers will not come away from these novels with a comprehensive understanding of that ancient land, but they will gain fascinating insights into a unique and often secretive people, and be well entertained in the process.

played in the comics section, located in a back corner.

Joss Whedon created the critically acclaimed TV series Buffy the Vampire Slayer and a musical, Dr. Horrible's Sing-Along Blog. Although Whedon's lawless-cowboys-of-the-future TV show, Firefly, did not survive for long, he did manage a movie, released after the show's cancellation. The graphic novel Serenity:

Those Left Behind (2006) is a prequel to the film. Starship captain/actor Nathan Fillion tips his hat to Canadian readers in the introduction.

Craig Thompson's graphic novel Blankets (2006) doesn't offer much comfort at first: "As a child, I thought that life was the most horrible anyone could ever live in." He's also haunted by his youthful inability to protect his younger brother. As a teen, Craig is an artist who considers the ministry, although his talents are not valued. One teacher laughs at him for his vision of Heaven, where he imagines an eternity spent with paper and pencils: "I mean come on, Craig, how can you praise God with drawings?" Perhaps a different career would be best. Eventually, he falls in love, with Raina, who makes him a quilt. This is a beautifully illustrated coming of age story, and a reminder that first love does not last.

Skim is written by Torontonian Mariko Tamaki, and drawn by Jillian Tamaki (a New Yorker). "Skim" is a young goth at an urban private school, collecting up stuff for her wiccan altar. She gets dragged into counselling when a boy she doesn't even know dies — apparently, goths are prone to depression. The cynical Skim rolls her eyes ("my school=goldfish tank of stupid"). She also tries to cast a love spell.

There's lots of Manga Shakespeare, and for younger readers, there's Jeff Smith's multiple-volume Bone series. Oldsters will smile at the homage to older TV toons and Dr. Seuss. Everyone else will just love it, period. Good guy Fone Bone is helping out two rather ethically iffy cousins who've been run out of Boneville. But the three end up lost in a strange land beyond the desert, stalked by a hooded figure carrying a scythe and protected by a dragon. It's a lot of fun.

You can also find some graphic novels filed in the Young Adult section.

COURTESY LA BAND À JACO

Townshippers' Association for more than thirteen years organizing Townshippers' days and sitting on committees and boards the likes of RCM and the CLD of Brome Missisquoi.

We are happy to have Wisdom as our chairman and supporter of RCM's community-building aspirations. When asked about our reception desk moving upstairs to street level 305 Knowlton Road, she said: "I think it is a great project...lots of social economy potential. It would be like having our own version of a legion back in Knowlton for weekend stuff (the community centre is closed on Friday evenings to Monday am). Could get real busy."

The RCM Radio Drama Writing awards gives us yet another piece to the community-building and arts-development puzzle. The puzzle is no more than a plan, a method of sorts, which will lead to the realization of a dream; a social-economy non-profit called Radio Communautaire Missisquoi.

"I've always envisaged that RCM/CIDI needs to have a small number of flagship programs," explains Grenville. "I think the musical competitions (RCM's Stop! TV show), both band and piano are already emerging as one such program."

Let's not forget Radio Village Hall at 305B Knowlton Road. Over the past month we have had three musical events and are looking forward to this Sunday's La band à Jaco performance at 2 p.m. The local band performs a Spanish/Latino musical mix of originals and standards. Everyone is welcome. Admission is $10 and $5 for RCM members. Please call for more information.

This is the strength of community, supporting each other to achieve a greater goal, and to build a stronger network that benefits everyone. Being who we are is CIDI, lots of great shows, lots of wonderful hosts and terrific volunteers. Give us a listen, send us your comments and suggestions.

For those of you who can't pick us up on the radio, go to our website (rcmmmedia.org) and click on the live-streaming button. If you missed a show you can listen to it on the CIDI player or go to the show/host pages and listen to past programs.

Maurice Singfield is a Radio Communautaire Missisquoi volunteer.
