CORONATION POSTPONED.

WILL NOT TAKE PLACE FOR SOME TIME.

The King Underwent an Operation Which Was Successfully Performed.

HIS CONDITION IS GRAVE.

London, 2 p. m.—King passed comfortable morning, his condition is now satisfactory.

PASSED A GOOD NIGHT.

London, June 25—8.03 a. m.—The King passed a good night. There are no complications.

The various bulletins received during the forenoon all state that the King is progressing favorably, and is as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

AT THE PALACE.

The King lies in a room facing the gardens of Buckingham Palace, and far from the street and the crowd. If tonight's programme is maintained, he will probably tide over the effects of his severe operation, which has successfully removed the local trouble; but should any complication occur, such as septic peritonitis or blood poisoning, it is feared His Majesty's present physical and nervous condition would prove unequal to the strain involved. There is consequently intense anxiety as to the outcome.

The King's doctors believe that His Majesty would have been dead before now except for the operation. His condition became so alarming last night that at one time it was feared death might ensue before the surgeon's knife could afford him relief. Intense swelling of the extremities, accompanied by other alarming symptoms, constituted the emergency which demanded an immediate operation. To the last the King tried to avoid this, and he was even willing to be carried to the Abbey for the coronation ceremony in order it should occur as arranged. The influence of Queen Alexandra is bearing the strain with bravest spirit.

An official announcement has been published in the Gazette officially announcing that the Coronation has been postponed. A Cabinet Council was held last evening at which it was arranged to carry on so far as possible public business requiring the King's approval signature without reference to His Majesty.

THE NEWS IN LONDON.

Widespread Consternation Everywhere.

London, June 24.—The sudden announcement of the postponement of the coronation, just on the eve of the ceremony, caused the utmost consternation everywhere. The news spread like wildfire. The tens of thousands of occupants of the streets suddenly stood still under the shock and gazed at one another in silent dread of what might come next.

On Saturday and Sunday society was discussing the reports of the King's illness and though the circumstantiality, detail and sources from which they came precluded entire disbelief, there was a disposition to doubt the stories, and when the positive, categorical denial was officially issued they were dismissed as being unfounded. Haemorrhoids, apoplexy and lumbago were of the King's maladies discussed in the clubs and drawing rooms, and those discussing them recalled the stories of how the King even quite recently reiterated his belief that he would never live to be crowned.

On the stock exchange the effect of the startling news was immediate. Prices weakened, led by consols with a fall of half a point. His Majesty, under ordinary conditions, was not looked upon as a good subject for operations, and though the King passed successfully through the ordeal it is believed that four or five weeks must elapse before he will be able to undergo the arduous labors of the coronation ceremonial. Therefore, no date can yet be indicated for carrying out the coronation.

Official announcements of the King's serious illness were made to public bodies as speedily as possible. Word was sent to the House of Commons, and the acting Lord Chamberlain, Lord Churchill, personally delivered to the Mansion House, the official residence of the Lord Mayor, a message regarding his Majesty's illness, and at this morning's rehearsal of the coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey, the Bishop of London, the Right Rev. Arthur Ingram, at the request of Lord Esher, the deputy governor of Windsor Castle, made a statement as follows:

'I have to make a very sad announcement. The King is suffering from an illness which makes an operation necessary today. The coronation, therefore, is postponed.'

The Bishop requested the congregation to join in the Litany out of the coronation service, and pray for the recovery of the King. During the course of the afternoon the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, issued the following notice: 'The Earl Marshal has received the King's commands to express His Majesty's deep sorrow, that owing to his serious illness the coronation ceremony must be postponed. The celebrations in London will in consequence be likewise postponed, but it is the King's earnest hope that the celebrations in the country shall be held as already arranged.'

The King also expressed to the Lord Mayor his desire that His Majesty's dinner to the poor of London be not postponed. Nothing has yet been decided regarding the movements of the foreign guests. The first intimation which Mr. Whitelaw Reid, the special ambassador of the United States to the coronation, had that anything was wrong was contained in a communication cancelling the state banquet which was to be held at Buckingham Palace tonight, but no mention was then made of the postponement of the great ceremony of the week. It is understood, however, that the special ambassadors and royal guests will return to their respective countries so soon as more definite news is received of the result of the operation.

Outside of Buckingham Palace enormous throngs of people congregated since early morning for the purpose of witnessing the arrival of the special ambassadors who were to be received by the King and Queen today. Large numbers of foreign representatives actually arrived, but the shortness of their stay was noticed, inquiries were made, and soon the news of His Majesty's serious state of health was circulated among the waiting thousands.

At the various palaces and at the Grosvenor, Buckingham, Carlton, Cecil and other hotels, where the foreign representatives are staying, the news created the greatest dismay. Royal carriages were already drawn up in readiness to take the guests to the reception at the Palace, but the moment the 'tickets' announced His Majesty's illness all the preparations for the day ceased.

In the streets the change which came over the crowds was most pronounced. Traffic seemed momentarily paralyzed and it was long before the full effect of the startling intelligence was felt. Large crowds quickly gathered around the Mansion House, where

W. T. OUGHTRED.
Marbleton, May 27, 1902.

The official notice was put by a police inspector, who first mounted the step and read out the bulletin, which was received with respectful silence.

The work of demolishing the stands and all the paraphernalia prepared for the coronation pageant was in full swing during the latter part of the afternoon. Hundreds of workmen who this morning were engaged in putting finishing touches on the various jobs were busily engaged in tearing down all that has taken weeks to accomplish. The barriers in the streets were being removed, the barricades merchants had constructed to safeguard their shop windows were rapidly disappearing, vans filled with garlands and multi-colored bunting striped off masts and house fronts, lined the streets, and London promised soon to resume its usual appearance.

The streets, as the day wore on, became more and more congested and the holiday crowd concentrated into groups, reading and re-reading the 'extras.' Most of the people apparently felt dazed and scarcely appreciated the full import of what they read.

At about one o'clock in the afternoon three copies of the signed medical bulletin were posted on different parts of the railing surrounding the front of Buckingham Palace. The crowd which had been so numerous during the earlier part of the day, had by that time dwindled to a few hundreds, but a constantly increasing number of fashionable occupants of passing carriages descended to read the bulletins.

In the course of the early afternoon the bulletin from Buckingham Palace announcing that the operation had been successful, that a large abscess had been evacuated and that the King's condition was satisfactory, was issued and posted at the various points where people congregated, and shortly afterwards a court official informed a representative of the 'Associated Press' that His Majesty was recovering satisfactorily from the effects of the anesthetic. The King treated the idea of the operation very lightly, his great concern being for the disappointment of the people.

'This, however,' added the official, 'was entirely unavoidable, for up to the last moment the medical attendants confidently hoped the patient would be able to go through, at all events, the more important of the coronation ceremonies.'

Immediately after recovering from the operation the King asked for the Prince of Wales and it was announced that a bulletin would be issued at 6.30 p.m. and a final one at 11 p.m. The fixing of these times was regarded as a good sign. Lord Salisbury, the premier, and other members of the cabinet called at the palace during the day. The cabinet has been summoned to meet at six o'clock this evening.

Queen Alexandra is terribly upset and nervous. The Royal grandchildren were driven to the palace from York house shortly after one o'clock.

The Prince and Princess of Wales remained at Buckingham Palace throughout the afternoon, receiving the visiting members of the Royal families who drove up in Royal carriages to the inner court yards. Princess Henry of Battenberg arrived late and entered the palace, almost unnoticed through a private door.

It is understood that the operation was performed by Sir Frederick Treves, who correctly diagnosed the complaint and is a specialist in abdominal operations. Many of the foreign representatives

The decorations in the hall were a special feature, and was admirably carried out by Mr. Archer, who spared no pains to make the affair successful. The decorations were very patriotic in character, and was the finest attempt of the kind ever seen in the city. The entertainment was a lengthy one, and consisted of dialogues, choruses, drills, patriotic songs, dances, &c. The play, "Aunt Jenima's Will," was well put on and the several characters well sustained, as was every feature on the programme. The hall was surrounded by tastefully decorated booths, where cut flowers, candy, ice cream, and fancy work were sold, and brought a ready sale. The proceeds of the evening amounted to about $200.
