Teachers resume walkout tactics

MONTREAL (CP) — Protestant teachers today were to re-join striking French-Catholics in walkouts to protest against re-classification of teachers qualifications and salaries.

The French-Catholic Alliance des Professeurs de Montreal said they are stepping up their rotating strikes in response to forcible police removal of teachers sitting in at education department and school board offices here Wednesday.

The Protestant teachers said all their members would participate in study sessions today, a return by the Protestants to strike tactics abandoned last Friday.

Altogether, 135,000 students were expected to miss classes as a result of today's walkouts.

The alliance said 4,000 of its 9,500 members would withdraw their services from 103 French-language Roman Catholic schools today, affecting more than 75,000 students.

The Montreal Teachers Association said all 3,000 of its members would attend study sessions, leaving about 60,000 Protestant students without classes.

RESUME STRIKE
All strike action was suspended last Friday in a move to encourage talks with the provincial government and representatives of school boards. However, when no agreement was reached during weekend talks.

UN leadership convention set for June 18-19

QUEBEC (CP) — The official Opposition Union Nationale party will hold its leadership convention June 18 and 19, it was announced Wednesday.

Jean-Paul Cloutier, UN member of the Quebec national assembly for Montmagny and chairman of the convention, announced the date at a news conference after a meeting of the party's convention committee.

Mr. Cloutier said the convention committee favors the sports pavilion at Laval University here as the site of the convention, but that a final decision has not yet been reached.

Four other Quebec City sites had also been considered. Mr. Cloutier said the convention committee decided to create a nominations and credentials committee to supervise the nomination of leadership candidates and the more than 1,300 delegates to the convention.

So far, only Mario Beaulieu, finance minister in the former UN government, has announced his intention to seek the leadership.

Nominations for the leadership close May 29.

Former premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand announced shortly after the Quebec general election last April 29 in which his party was defeated that he would not lead the party into the next election.

In November, he asked the party to organize a leadership convention, and last month, the party's governing body began preparations for the convention by creating the nine-member convention committee.

the Alliance des Professeurs returned to strike tactics.

Explaining the decision of Protestant teachers to resume their walkouts today, Don Peacock, president of the Montreal Teachers Association, said:

"We can't hold off forever. We understand the alliance's refusal to accept a truce was based on the belief that the government has no solution to offer."

Earlier the Protestant group had expressed regret that continued strikes by the Franco-phones were preventing further talks.

In its announcement of stepped-up protests, the Alliance des Professeurs said the government "systematically refused" to negotiate seriously for a settlement of the French-speaking teachers' grievances.

POLICE MOVE IN

The move followed an action earlier Wednesday in which riot-equipped police cleared teachers out of the boardroom of the Montreal Catholic School Commission and the regional offices of the department of education, where the teachers had been sitting-in.

No arrests were made. Twenty-nine teachers, who chained themselves together when they received word of the coming ouster, were removed from the department of education offices by order of the minister of education. Their occupation began last week.

Police sawed the chains off when the group began marching around outside the building.

Two hundred teachers were forced from the MCSC boardroom at the request of the commission, which became concerned when several teachers spread the occupation to the service area housing the building's water and electrical supply.

Those who refused to leave were carried out by 50 helmeted police. Others walked out carrying with them the stocks of blankets, sleeping bags, food and magazines accumulated during a three-week sit-in.

The occupations were part of a prolonged dispute involving salary classification for Quebec's 70,000 school teachers. Another tactic was intermittent teacher walkouts which since Jan. 25 have closed classrooms for hundreds of thousands of students.

Derby Line bank robbery suspects now plead guilty

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Another of the four Canadians accused of last November's holdup of a branch bank office near Newport has pleaded guilty to an armed robbery charge.

Norbert P. Houle, 30, of Beebe, Que., withdrew his earlier plea of not guilty in U.S. District Court here Tuesday. He was ordered held for a pre-sentence investigation.

A week ago, Camille Pruneau, 26, also of Beebe, withdrew his not guilty plea and entered one of guilty to one count of armed robbery. He also is awaiting sentencing.

The two remaining suspects, Raymond Belleville, 20, and Teacher dissatisfaction with a classification review board has mainly affected Montreal schools in the last month, but walkouts and protests have spread to other parts of the province.

The provincial government has told disgruntled teachers that any talks to settle their grievances could not begin until they stopped leaving their classrooms to hold "study sessions."

Education Minister Guy Saint-Pierre said Tuesday the government may be forced to take action against the teachers, and a government spokesman hinted that such action might involve injunctions ordering teachers back to classrooms.

OTTAWA (CP) — With the apparent aim of economic stimulation, the government Wednesday released somewhat its squeeze on the public coffers in 1971-72 spending estimates of $17,523,919,586 tabled in the Commons.

The increase is 6.9 per cent over last year's estimates.

Departmental outlays are up 11.2 per cent over last year's estimates and over-all "controllable expenditures" have risen by 10.2 per cent.

Most departments, but not all, will have more money to spend in the coming fiscal year.

Spending by the finance department will go up to $3,391,160,000 compared with the $3,099,022,198 authorized in the current year; the health and welfare department increase is to $2,628,813,100 from $2,370,879,000, the state secretary's department, in raising its spending on aid to education and the arts, will have its authorized spending increased to $375,058,000 from $465,991,000.

The CBC's share of this departmental estimate rises to $181 million from $161 million.

DEFENCE FREEZE ENDS

The budget of the defence department, in the last year of a three-year freeze, moves up only fractionally to $1,822,465,000 from $1,816,252,000. The increase will help stimulate regional expansion.

The defence estimates showed four helicopter-carrying destroyers are going to cost taxpayers about $31 million more than originally estimated when the program was undertaken several years ago for a predicted $220,692,000. The new estimates list the cost at $252 million.

Major departmental increases of $650 million were partially offset by lower estimates for unemployment insurance, manpower, trade and commerce and the Cape Breton Development Corp. The reductions total more than $116 million.

The estimates predict that the gross national product for 1971 is expected to reach $90,000 million, an increase of about seven per cent over last year.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, who tabled the estimates, said they are designed to be expansionary.

"The government will be putting more money into the economy than it will be taking out." More jobs would be created, both directly and indirectly, with the increased spending.

BUDGET IN APRIL
Finance Minister E. J. Benson is expected to bring down his budget in April and it will show how the government plans to cover increased spending.

The main estimates tabled Wednesday do not represent the final predictions of government spending for the fiscal year. It is customary to add supplementary estimates during the year. Such estimates for the current year totalled $528.9 million.

The gross estimates of $17,523,919,586 include planned increases in old-age pensions and loans to government and international agencies even though the government does not count these in its ordinary budgetary outlays.

A major increase in loans involves an estimated $153 million for the International Development Association, which is an increase of $60 million over the current fiscal year.

The big increase in finance department estimates is made up mainly of $125.9 million for interest on the public debt, $157.6 million for higher subsidies to the provinces and an additional $4.8 million for grants to municipalities.

CRITICIZES PRACTICE
After the estimates were tabled, Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), his party's financial critic, said the new practice of sending the estimates to Commons committees for examination means the Commons itself has lost some of the direct control it used to have over government policies and programs.

Highlights

OTTAWA (CP) — Highlights of the government's main spending estimates for the 1971-72 fiscal year starting April 1, presented to Parliament Wednesday.

Spending by ordinary departments and agencies is to rise to $14,352,223,711 from $12,909,786,336 forecast a year ago, an increase of 11.2 per cent.

Increase in so-called "controllable expenditure" of 10.2 per cent, reflecting loosened purse strings to stimulate economy.

Gross national product for 1971 expected to reach $90,000 million, up about seven per cent.

New taxpayer's guide to government spending released for wide distribution.

Finance department outlays, including debt interest and subsidies to the provinces, to increase to $3,391 million from $3,099 million.

Health and welfare estimates to rise to $2,629 million from $2,371 million.

Defence budget still frozen, increasing only $6.2 million to $1,822 million.

Small reductions planned in outlays for manpower and trade and commerce departments.

Foreign aid loan to International Development Association set at $153 million, increased from $90 million.

ON TRIAL IN SOUTH AFRICA — The Anglican Dean of Johannesburg, the Very Rev. Gonville A. French-Beytagh (centre), leaves court with friends after being released on $7,000 bail. The dean has been charged with aiding two organizations banned under South Africa's Suppression of Communism Act. The act is one of a series of security laws which give the nation's justice minister broad powers to arrest and hold people suspected of subversion. (CP Photo)

President Nixon says

No limitations on air support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon said Wednesday he will place no limitations on potential use of United States airpower anywhere in Indochina—except to bar use of tactical nuclear weapons.

Asked at a news conference about speculation that South Vietnam might send some of its forces across the demilitarized zone into North Vietnam, Nixon said he would decline to speculate on what the Saigon government might feel impelled to do to protect its own national security.

But he made it clear that, should the South Vietnamese army push northward, the operation would have to meet with his approval if American forces were involved in any way.

Asked whether he thought operations in Laos might prompt China to enter the conflict, the president said those operations were in no way intended to threaten China "and should not be interpreted by the Communist Chinese as a threat to them."

He added that he did not believe the Chinese would see the Laotian incursion as a threat.

Nixon was questioned at the outset about the limits he would place on American involvement in Indochina. While re-stating that the United States would use neither ground forces nor advisers in Laos or Cambodia, he said: "I'm not going to place any limitation in our use of airpower."

Then he added that, of course, tactical nuclear weapons would be out of the question.

Most of the news conference session hinged on foreign policy matters. Some highlights:

—Nixon said U.S. troop withdrawals from South Vietnam will go forward on schedule and the Paris peace talks will be kept alive but, in that regard, he declared: "We're not going to make any more concessions" diplomatically.

—The president described himself as encouraged by developments in the Middle East, declaring that he felt the United Arab Republic had been "more forthcoming" than expected and added Israel had taken a similar course. Saying the United States would not exert pressure on either side, he predicted that the Mideast ceasefire, when it expires, will be extended.

—Nixon said the United States is closely watching movements of a Soviet nuclear submarine in the Cuban area to determine whether it is being serviced there.

Joe... expose yourself

OTTAWA (CP) — Radio CKOY has sent a telegram to Joe Frazier offering to rent advertising space on the soles of his boxing shoes during his March 8 fight against Mohammed Ali.

The telegram asks Frazier to name his own charge.

Sports director Ray Boucher of the Ottawa station also sent a copy of the telegram to Ali, the former Cassius Clay, suggesting that, as a good businessman, Ali do his best "to give this ad proper exposure" during the heavyweight bout.

Ottawa plans $26 million estimate for Quebec works

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to spend $26,036,000 on 35 major public works projects in Quebec in the 1971-72 fiscal year beginning April 1.

Estimates tabled in the Commons Wednesday also list estimates of $1,180,000 for continuing contributions to two special projects in the province—a drydock subsidy of $180,000 to Canadian Vickers Ltd. in Montreal and $1,000,000 for the federal share of construction for Highway 6 in Matane and Gaspé, North counties.

Only projects valued at $250,000 or more are listed in the estimates in detail. In some cases the amounts will be less than that figure because projects will run through to another year.

Quebec projects:
Quebec — Champlain Terminal, improvements $500,000
Quebec — 15 Henderson Street, improvements $200,000
Quebec — Postal station "Charlesbourg" $50,000
Quebec — Postal terminal, improvements $340,000
Sherbrooke — Public building, improvements $700,000.

Masse announces candidacy

SAINT-HYACINTHE (CP) — Marcel Masse, MNA for Montcalm, said last night he would be a candidate at the Union Nationale leadership convention in Quebec City June 18 and 19.

Appearing before a group of union members from Saint-Jean, Saint-Hyacinthe, Vercheres and Rouville counties Mr. Masse said "What remains to be decided is not whether I will be a candidate for the leadership. Rather, I must decide what I will represent."

A source close to the former minister indicated Mr. Masse will officially announce his candidature in Quebec City in a few days.

Tourism worth $1,000 M

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's tourist industry was worth more than $1,000 million to the provincial economy in 1970, says the president of the Quebec Hotel and Restaurant Suppliers Association.

Pierre Bernier said Wednesday it is difficult to determine an exact figure for tourism revenue, because there is no way to ascertain what a tourist spends on his hotel room, meals, drinks, travel, gifts and numerous other commodities.

NU convention may well decide party's fate

By CUTHBERT JONES
SHERBROOKE — With the convention for the selection of a new leader for the National Union Party scheduled for Quebec City in June, party stalwarts are asking themselves just what the once-dominant element on the Quebec political stage needs to restore itself to a state of health and well-being.

Most of them will agree that the decisions taken at the Quebec City gathering this summer may mean the rejuvenation or the death of the party founded by Maurice Duplessis which, except for a brief period, ruled the Quebec scene for a quarter-century.

If the party can select a leader that can gain the confidence of the urban dwellers and can prepare a clear-cut program designed to meet the problems facing Quebec and Canada today, there is every reason to believe it can return to power in the next general election, they argue.

But if the leader cannot inspire confidence and the platform is not viable, the party might well disappear from the picture following the next vote.

For a party that ran a poor third in the popular vote in the last elections — behind the Liberals and the separatist Parti Quebecois — to seriously consider regaining power two or three years hence may seem excessively optimistic.

But any good National Union enthusiast — and there are still some floating around — can present a strong argument as to just why this is possible.

First and foremost, they claim that Premier Bourassa is doing a fine job of committing political harikari.

He led the Liberals to victory by a three-pointed appeal to three important elements in the population: For the economically-depressed in the cities and towns he promised to revive the economy and create 100,000 new jobs within a year of taking office; for the non-French minority he pledged to guarantee that their rights would be preserved; for the moderate French-Canadian nationalist he declared that the autonomy of Quebec could be advanced without the provincial government becoming a lackey of Ottawa.

But, according to the Official Opposition, he has been very effective in selling everybody out.

The economy of the province is not improving despite ponderous statements from Cabinet Ministers about new industries and unemployment is growing.

The English feel deceived, so UN supporters maintain, by the recent language legislation, French as a working language policy and the latest declaration by Premier Bourassa that there are no linguistic safeguards written into the constitution.

And, obversely, the moderate nationalists are said to feel that the Quebec Premier has knuckled under to the Ottawa centralists, not only during the kidnap crisis of last October but during the recent federal-provincial conference when a rather vague formula for revising the constitution was presented to the public.

All these things, they say, are working in the minds of the people and leave the way open for a united party with a strong program.

And as a preliminary step, they believe the Official Opposition should drop its passive role when the National Assembly reconvenes next week.

The Government is vulnerable on a number of issues, especially in the economic field, and the more ambitious party members believe the National Union should hit hard and hit often on the failure of Premier Bourassa and his ministers to improve the economy.

This is one issue on which all opposition groups can agree, whether they be extreme federalist Creditistes or separatist Parti Quebecois.

economy, the Opposition just might win the next election.

Jim: "East won the spade lead with his ace and led the suit back in the hope that his partner had led a singleton. Caroline won and proceeded to play ace and another club, which she ruffed in dummy. She started after trumps and when they broke 3-2 she was home. She could enter dummy with the last high spade and discard her last three clubs on the ace, king and queen of hearts."

Oswald: "It wasn't difficult to play and it doesn't look difficult to bid but six diamonds bid and made was worth 10 match-points out of a possible 12."

Jim: "Other pairs stopped at game or bid the impossible heart slam, thus their accurate bidding gave them a good score."

Oswald: "It was nice to see Caroline (Mrs. Camp) Floumy of Shreveport and George Dawkins of Houston win the Master's Mixed Pairs at the recent Nationals."

Jim: "It was indeed, I must be getting old because they both appeared in tournaments after I started."

Oswald: "Here is a hand that helped him. George sat North and, as frequently happens in mixed pair games, took control of the bidding."

Jim: "However, he took control in a rather unusual manner. After checking for aces he gave up his fine six-card heart suit and let Caroline play the slam in one of her suits."

Oswald: "If he had insisted on hearts they wouldn't have won. You can't make a slam when you lose one ace and a trump trick."

Don't Ignore Signal of Repeated Dizzy Spells

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I have been suffering from dizzy spells for a year and a half. Blood tests and X rays show nothing. But I still have these dizzy spells where I almost completely black out.

What could cause this problem and what can I do to get some help?

Dear Reader—Dizzy spells are caused by many different things. Children get dizzy from whirling around and around in a circle, then stopping suddenly. The small balance mechanism inside the ear is not accustomed to the circular movement and sends out confused signals to the brain. The balance mechanism called the semicircular canals or labyrinth may also become inflamed (labyrinthitis) in a variety of infections, including simple respiratory illnesses, and cause dizziness for a limited period of time.

In other people the small ear canals undergo degenerative changes for no apparent reason. This may cause recurring attacks. Treatment is often difficult. A common cause for dizziness of this type is changes in the small arteries to the balance mechanism. This also causes buzzing and ringing in the ears and little can be done about this when it develops.

Dizziness, with "blacking out," often means fainting or near fainting episodes. This is a symptom and almost everyone has one or more of these episodes in his life. They can occur from the sight of blood, a needle prick, acute illness, as a result of certain drugs—notably tranquilizers—and a host of other factors.

The basic problem often is inadequate circulation to the brain. The mechanisms are complex. A single episode with good spontaneous recovery usually can be ignored. Repeated episodes should be investigated.

In young, healthy people this can be caused by pooling of too much blood in the legs during prolonged standing. Sometimes because of anxiety the normal heart will actually stop for a few seconds—just long enough for the person to faint. In some cases anxiety causes a person to breathe too fast and too deep. We call this hyperventilation.

Card Party

HUNTINGVILLE — The Huntingville Ladies Aid held a card party in the Community Hall, Feb. 10. Cards were played at eight tables. Prize winners were as follows: Ladies High, Mrs. L. Raycraft, 2nd, Mrs. A. Crawford and low Miss Diane Booth. Men's High, A. J. Smith, 2nd, Mr. W. Aldrich and low, Wm. Bolton. The Lucky Cup was won by Mrs. Buzzell.

The Door Prizes were won by Mrs. Pat Smith, Sandra Spaulding, Eva Beaton, Mrs. C. Spaulding, Mrs. Helen Hyatt, and Mrs. J. Tarte. A box of groceries was raffled, and this was won by Mr. Robinson.

meaning overbreathing. This causes the body to lose too much carbon dioxide, which in turn changes the entire body chemistry and results in dizziness or faintness. Recognizing the problem and training the person not to overbreathe—but to take slow, shallow breaths—often helps control the symptoms. Cause of the anxiety, however, needs study.

Low blood sugar can cause faintness or dizziness but this is actually not a common cause, although it is a popular idea. Many people seem to like to talk about their low blood sugar. The problem with tests and X rays in many of these problems is that the episodes and their cause may be transitory and between episodes they show nothing.

ET farmers take case to Quebec

SHERBROOKE (DM) — More than 1,200 farmers representing the Catholic Farmers Union (UCC), including a 100-strong delegation from the Sherbrooke area, are holding a day-long study session in Quebec City.

They hope to show the Bourassa government their displeasure with recent government inaction. UCC spokesman Rosaire Coutu told The Record recently.

The UCC grievances focus on three major points: failure of the government to put teeth into its new laws protecting Quebec egg producers, failure to introduce legislation giving the farmers' union the same status as other major labor unions in the province and failure to reform government agricultural policies as promised in the Liberal election campaign.

EGG PROBLEM

The egg problem stems from the fact Ontario farmers produce more eggs than Ontarians consume but not enough poultry, the exact reverse of what happens in Quebec.

A Montreal UCC spokesman told a news conference yesterday the Ontario government has brought down stiff and well-enforced laws to prevent dumping of Quebec poultry on the Ontario market at below-cost prices.

He said Quebec promised to do the same thing for its egg producers but the law creating FEDCO (Federation of egg producers) has no teeth and is not being enforced.

Six of Quebec's 2,000 producers — representing 10 per cent of production — have refused to cooperate and have created a black market "which is virtually an institution", he continued.

EQUALITY WITH OTHER UNIONS

The UCC also wants legislation creating a union shop for Quebec farmers, giving the farmers' union the right to act as a bargaining agent and to collect dues from all farmers.

The UCC has for several years counted more than 65 per cent of the province's 72,000 farms as members. It is asking for a formula under which all workers who benefit from the union's activities be obliged to pay dues even if they do not join.

REFORM

The same Montreal-based UCC spokesman said all parties agreed to the need for reform of governmental agricultural policies but the government had done nothing so far. He pointed out also the agriculture department had a large staff and a budget of some $80 million.

Eaton Corner man acquitted

By DAVID MAGIL

SHERBROOKE — An Eaton Corner resident was acquitted on two separate charges yesterday by Sessions Court Judge Roland Dugre.

Vance Little, 31, was accused of stealing two licence plates belonging to Gaston Bilodeau, 27, of Ville D'Asjou and of impaired driving.

A Quebec Police officer told the court the plates were found on Little's car. He also revealed a breathalyzer test showed a high alcohol content in the accused's blood.

Other witnesses testified Little had not put the plates in his 1964 Cadillac and had become inebriated while waiting for police to arrive after being involved in an accident the night of his arrest.

Testimony heard yesterday revealed the following:

Bilodeau and Little parked their respective cars in front of the Cookshire Hotel. Bilodeau stayed briefly and then left Bury. Once on the highway to Bury, another motorist alerted him to the fact his licence plates were missing. He drove into Bury and notified the Quebec Provincial Police of the theft.

Meanwhile, Little remained at the hotel with two friends, Keith Harrison and Russell Brown. He passed most of the time dancing with another friend, Heather Richmond, and drank one small beer. He did not leave the hotel during that period.

Little and his two friends left the hotel at around 12:15 in the morning and headed to Sawyerville. They stopped there briefly at a restaurant, then headed back to Eaton Corner.

Little's car was involved in a collision with another vehicle driven by a Mr. Coutu a few miles out of Sawyerville. Coutu's vehicle was parked in the middle of the road with the lights off, according to testimony given by the accused and corroborated by the two others in his car and one other witness.

Coutu's car was forced into a ditch at the side of the road as a result of the accident.

The QPF took about an hour and a half to arrive at the scene of the accident. During that time, two passers-by offered liquor to Little. William Lackie, who witnessed the accident, shared a bottle of rye with the accused. Jerry Wilson gave the accused three quarts of beer of which Little consumed one.

When the police arrived, they found Little in a seemingly inebriated state and took him to Montreal for a breathalyzer test.

At the same time, they had the two damaged vehicles towed to a near-by garage. Little's car was found to contain the two missing licence plates upon investigation by police at the garage.

Reviewing the evidence presented before him, Judge Dugre said there was more than a reasonable doubt Little had not committed the crimes. Jacques Page represented the Crown in the case while the defense was handled by J. Guy Blanchette.

Women's Club speaker says

Restoration of Old Montreal an important cultural need

SHERBROOKE (PG) — Members of the Women's Canadian Club of Canada watched the restoration of a home in Old Montreal unfold in slides and narrative at their annual Gentlemen's Night at the LeBaron Hotel last night.

Guest speaker Eric McLean, best-known as music critic for The Montreal Star, described how the run-down building once owned by Louis Papineau was fully restored to look as it did in the 1830s.

He said he never really meant to get involved in restoration at all — it was something he "more or less fell into."

"Good sense militated against it and besides, I never did very well in history at school."

"But after giving many talks illustrated with slides to 'ladies who used to cluck their tongues and say that's progress,'" he decided the only way to do something was get involved himself.

When he was a child, his father owned a store in the old quarter, he said, and often took his children on walks through the area, which was a very active place in those days.

"But when I came back after the war, I realized how much the place had changed. There was much less activity and it declined even further when businesses left St. James Street for Dorchester in the 1950s."

"Many houses were given over to dead storage or pulled down to make parking lots."

The Viger Commission set up by the city, which placed a moratorium on changes in the area, saw things change, he said, but he was the first person to actually buy up a house, renovate it completely and move in. Since then, $29,000,000 in city and private money has been pumped in towards restoration of the area.

As his collection of slides showed, it was no easy task to renovate the structure. Stonework had to be restored where doors had been cut into it, every window had to be replaced and two brick stories were torn off the top and replaced by a pitched roof modeled on the original.

In one room alone, "we steamed off 19 coats of wallpaper and when we got the last one off, the whole wall fell down — the wallpaper had been holding up the plaster."

But the hours of work and the money spent paid off. With its new roof and completely re-done interior, it is as fully magnificent as it was at the turn of the nineteenth century.

Court briefs

SHERBROOKE (DM) — Four young men accused of theft were sent to trial before judge and jury in September, 1971, by Sessions Court Judge Roland Dugre yesterday.

Michel Fortier, 21, Guy Pelletier, 23, Richard Boutin, 21, and Georges Beaulieu, 20, all of Sherbrooke, are charged with stealing a $6,000 truck belonging to Roger Cournoyer. The vehicle was taken from Phil's Diner on King St. W. Jan. 26.

Testimony heard yesterday at the quartet's preliminary hearing revealed Fortier, Boutin and Beaulieu got into the truck in front of the diner and Pelletier joined them 200 feet down the street.

They were arrested by Sherbrooke police after abandoning the vehicle at the King St. W. and Wellington St. N. intersection.

The theft was noticed by a City of Sherbrooke employee who notified police on his two-way radio.

The four accused are free on $200 personal bail fixed by Sessions Judge Benoit Turmel at their arraignment Jan. 26.

Laurent Dube is acting as defence counsel for Pelletier. The other three men are represented by Claude Nadeau. Michel Cote is the crown prosecutor in the case.

A Sherbrooke resident and regular visitor to the court house was granted a one-week delay by Sessions Judge Roland Dugre yesterday to enable him to notify his witnesses to appear and testify at his trial on a theft count.

Jean-Paul Gaudreau, 50, who is affectionately referred to by other court regulars as "The Swiss", is accused of stealing a pair of opera glasses valued at $200 from the Tabagie Plaza Engr.

Gaudreau decided to conduct his own defence at the beginning of his trial yesterday and grilled Crown witnesses mercilessly.

Jack Freeland, owner of the tobacco store, admitted when questioned by Gaudreau that he could not swear the opera glasses presented by the Crown as evidence were actually the same ones taken from his store.

Those opera glasses had been found in Gaudreau's possession by a Sherbrooke Police constable.

In requesting the delay, Gaudreau told Judge Dugre his two witnesses were "important and honest."

The trial will continue Feb. 25.

Michel Cote is representing the Crown.

The preliminary hearing for Donald Gaudette, 43, of La Patrie, on a charge of making a false declaration will proceed on March 14.

Gaudette opted for trial before judge and jury at his arraignment before Sessions Court Judge Roland Dugre yesterday. An accused does not have to enter a plea at his arraignment.

Gaudette is accused of falsely stating he had no previous criminal record when applying for a liquor licence for his hotel.

Judge Dugre accorded the accused $500 personal bail.

Steinberg-Miracle Mart Ltd continued its attempt to discourage shoplifting by bringing 11 individuals before Sessions Court on theft charges yesterday.

Six accused pleaded guilty to the charges against them and were sentenced to $25 fines each by Judge Dugre.

The five others will have their cases proceed next month.

Unemployment finally impresses Trudeau

Both internal evidence and nudges from his entourage confirm the importance of the speech on unemployment which Prime Minister Trudeau gave in Regina last Friday. Suddenly ... well ... at last Mr. Trudeau is sensitive about the danger of the issue.

The speech is taut, packed and well-polished. It has comparatively few witticisms and an unusual seriousness of tone. The Asian junket and the Commonwealth conference are ignored.

There's not a mention of the War Measures Act or Francophony or Parliament or the re-structuring of government.

The few references to the Liberal Party were clearly tossed in just for the fund-raising occasion. These absences, or slight touches, underline that the Prime Minister is finally tensed up about the political dilemma of the jobless.

Mr. Trudeau's economic analysis begins with the unemployment statistics published last week.

... The January rise was the smallest percentage increase since 1959. Indeed, in seasonally-adjusted terms, unemployment fell from 6.6 per cent of the labor force to 6.2. That, I suggest, is encouraging. It is an indication that the Government's economic policies are sound.

The Prime Minister denies that the basic issues of the economy are ones of compassion. He and his colleagues have as much of it as anyone else. The issue is one of jobs. Any Canadian Government is limited in what it can do to encourage a healthy economy and a high rate of employment.

Mr. Trudeau then lists and examines five factors which: "... Contribute to winter unemployment, to the costs of production and to the costs of government."

These are: One of the most severe winters in the world; a small population spread over an immense land mass, making marketing, transportation, and communications costly and giving us short production runs; a highly-developed social conscience has saddled us with a broad, advanced and expensive social security system; adjacency to the huge American economy opens ours to all its problems of recession, unemployment, inflation, etc.; our high birth rate of 18 to 21 years ago is sending an inordinate number of new seekers for jobs into the economy.

Mr. Trudeau acknowledges that none of these factors came without warning. None can be or will be used as an excuse by him or his colleagues for the "very disturbing unemployment situation."

On the other hand, they shouldn't be forgotten by those who race from coast to coast leaving behind them a trail of inconsistent, unworkable and irresponsible theories. Despite the incredible content of these Jeremiahs, they've convinced a few people that he took a deliberate decision 18 months ago to concentrate on beating inflation at the expense of unemployment, that inflation and unemployment are two unrelated, even contradictory, aspects of our economy.

Mr. Trudeau reviews the devastation of inflation, ridiculing those who say a little bit of inflation is harmless. We are terribly vulnerable to unchecked inflation because 20 per cent of our total output is exported. Price ourselves out of international markets and factories close, unemployment soars. A severe recession would settle in with staggering unemployment.

"When the Government fought inflation, it was fighting the long-term battle against unemployment ... had we not taken on that fight, we should have been irresponsible."

Then Mr. Trudeau takes up the charge that he and his colleagues have overdone it, inhibiting the economy by attacking inflation "too strongly and for too long."

Tuning the Canadian economy takes a long "lead-time."

In March last year, with the budget the Government decided: "Restraints should be eased and some gentle stimulation commenced."

"The opposition now says we waited too long."

Then Mr. Trudeau gets into a very shifty argument. He says that the Tories were outspoken in their criticism of that March budget. He makes the impression that they objected to its expansionary nature. This is untrue. The fact is that even Mr. Benson did not declare that the March budget was expansionary until months later.

Mr. Trudeau goes into an odd "aside" about the Government's allegedly early expansionary policies. "I remind you," he says, "that there are serious and respected economists who tell us even now that we are moving too rapidly and that by doing so, we are taking the risk of generating another spiral of inflation. They may be right."

What a little masterpiece in covering one's rear? Who are these serious and respected economists? Rasminsky of the Bank of Canada? John Young of PIC? Art Smith of ECC? Edgar Benson, minister of finance? To popularize Mr. Trudeau, his line goes like this: "Gosh, we've been prescient, wise and deft. Things are much better as a result of our thoughtful management than some fools allow, but even with such masterful work, job-making may have been too extravagant."

After this reminder how soundly the Government is in the centre, between two opposing economic theories, Mr. Trudeau marshals all the things "we have done ... to stimulate the economy as fast as possible without, at the same time, re-introducing inflation."

The total of all the steps in money to be spent, comes to well over $2 billion.

"That is our record," says Mr. Trudeau. "Some indifference."

He asserts that the results "... are impressive and give every reason for optimism." They are most impressive and give every reason for optimism. They are most impressive because of the regional nature of the improvements. Unemployment is up relatively in Ontario, down elsewhere.

The PM lists the good news such as price indexes going up slowly, interest rates down, record housing starts, all-time merchandise trade balance, a near-record grain export, the dollar strong, and the stock market vigorous.

"This," says Mr. Trudeau, "is an exciting country — one which offers to every man and woman the hope and the promise of a better tomorrow."

Our economic problems do not daunt him. He knows them. He and his colleagues have them under control. In sum, everything is for the best in the best of all possible countries.

Sloppy CBC practices

Eastern Townships residents have learned that, when it wants to, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation can go "way out" in producing supposedly historical programs. But the continuing show at Ottawa where the accounting practices of the Corporation are under review by a House of Commons committee indicates that some of this "way outness" apparently has seeped over into the business operations of the state broadcasting system.

Members of the public accounts committee have expressed frustration — and with little wonder — over some of the answers given by Corporation executives.

The vexation came following disclosures that 20 CBC employees working in the United States went five years — from 1964 to 1969 — without paying income tax either in Canada or the United States. As a result the Canadian public, through the guise of the CBC, ended up by paying the United States government $120,000 on behalf of the employees.

And for some reason or another, the CBC representatives before the committee seemed to think the MPs were unreasonable in demanding an explanation for these atrociously bad business practices.

The average Canadian citizen knows he can expect little aid from the federal government in paying his income tax. In fact, if it is discovered that he underpaid his taxes in previous years, he can expect the National Revenue department to demand full restitution, with interest.

It is difficult to understand how the CBC employees were exempted from income tax assessments. It seems rudimentary that the employers determine exactly what tax regulations apply, which country the income taxes should go to, and in what manner.

Such sloppy action on the part of the CBC management is inexcusable. The fact that it had public funds available to dish out to settle a problem that never should have been allowed to occur in the first place, is open to severe censure from the Commons committee.

That beautiful snowfall

Perhaps we had better not mention it to the householder struggling to get his car free, but the fact remains that snow is beautiful. There is nothing in nature more simply graceful than the curve of a snowdrift, and the lip of a drift beside a country brook.

But the ultimate beauty is in the snowflake itself.

To see this snowflake symmetry and intricacy one needs a magnifying glass. Catch a few snowflakes — that is easy enough these days — on a dark sleeve of a square of dark velvet and stay out in the cold and inspect them through the glass and you have a glimpse of a fantastic half-hidden world of order and inconceivable variety.

One can look for years and never see two flakes exactly alike. Yet all are based on the six-pointed star for their designs. The six points occasionally are simplified to a major three with minor three somewhere in the pattern.

So there they are, those six-pointed stars, elaborated and encrusted and filigreed beyond belief. And the whole flake, of course, is simply the orderly elaboration of the basic ice crystal.

Yet that flake of snow is the substance of our winter's snowfall. It clogs our streets and highways, slows our traffic, sometimes rends our tress, loads our utility wires with ice. And renews our rivers, feeds our lakes and waters our farmlands.

THE ART BUCHWALD COLUMN

WASHINGTON — A week ago Sunday New York City had a blackout which caused all nine television stations in the area to go out for several hours. This created tremendous crises in families all over the New York area and proved that TV plays a much greater role in people's lives than anyone can imagine.

For example, when the TV went off in the Bufkins' house in Forest Hills, Long Island, panic set in. First Bufkins thought it was his set in the living room, so he rushed into his bedroom and turned on that set. Nothing.

The phone rang and Mrs. Bufkins heard her sister in Manhattan tell her that there was a blackout.

She hung up and said to her husband, "It isn't your set. Something's happened to the top of the Empire State Building."

Bufkins stopped and said, "Who are you?"
"I'm your wife, Edith."
"Oh," Bufkins said. "Then I suppose those kids in there are mine."

"That's right," Mrs. Bufkins said. "If you ever got out of that armchair in front of the TV set, you'd know who we were."
"Boy, they're really grown," Bufkins said, looking at his son and daughter. "How old are they now?"

"Thirteen and 14," Mrs. Bufkins replied.
"I'll be darned. Hi kids."
"Who's he?" Bufkins' son Henry asked.
"It's your father," Mrs. Bufkins said.

"I'm pleased to meetcha," Bufkins' daughter Mary said shyly.

There was an embarrassed silence all around.
"Look," said Bufkins finally. "I know I haven't been much of a father, but now that the TV's out I'd like to make it up to you."

"How?" asked Henry.
"Well, let's just talk," Bufkins said. "That's the best way to get to know each other."
"What do you want to talk about?" Mary asked.

"Well, for starters, what school do you go to?"
"We go to Forest Hills High School," Henry said.
"What do you know?" Bufkins said. "You're both in high school."

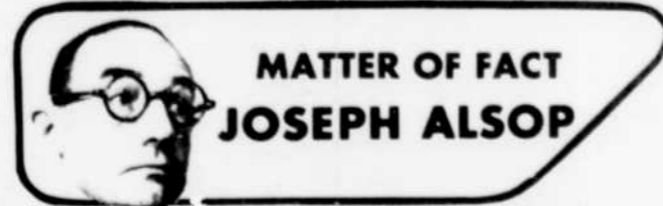

There was dead silence.
"What do you do?" Mary asked.
"I'm an accountant," Bufkins said.

"I thought you were a car salesman," Mrs. Bufkins said in surprise.
"That was two years ago. Didn't I tell you I changed jobs?" Bufkins said.

"No, you didn't. You haven't told me anything for two years."
"Yup, I'm doing quite well too," Bufkins said.

"Then why am I working in a department store?" Mrs. Bufkins demanded.
"Oh, are you still working in a department store? If I had known that, I would have told you you could quit last year. You should have mentioned it," Bufkins said.

There was more dead silence.
Finally Henry said, "Hey, you want to hear me play the guitar?"
"I'll be darned. You know how to play the guitar? Say, didn't I have a daughter who played the guitar?"
"That was Susie," Mrs. Bufkins said.
"Where is she?"
"She got married a year ago, just about the time you were watching the World Series."
"How about that?" Bufkins said very pleased. "You know, I hope they don't fix the antenna for another couple hours. There's nothing like a blackout for a man to really get to know his family."

MATTER OF FACT JOSEPH ALSOP

WASHINGTON — Every so often, you can feel a great change coming in the basic political landscape of this peculiar city. When such a change occurs, it imperceptibly but radically alters every relationship in government; so it is always mighty important.

It is now quite certain, moreover, that Washington's whole political landscape will be altered by the new Democratic leadership of the House. The speaker, Carl Albert, the majority leader, Hale Boggs, and their chief mentor, the formidable chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Wilbur Mills, form a team the like of which this city has not seen in many years.

To begin with, the importance of Carl Albert's accession to the speakership is being vastly underestimated. He aims to be a strong speaker, on the model of the great Sam Rayburn. He further aims to leave a stronger legislative impress than Rayburn ever did after the New Deal years. And under the new rules, the speaker of the House has got back rather more than half the power that was taken away long ago, during the liberal revolt against Speaker Cannon.

To go on with, the speaker and Reps. Boggs and Mills really do constitute a team, in the true sense; and this is another major novelty of high importance. This does not mean, of course, that Speaker Albert does not have close and warm relationships with the other key committee chairmen, like the able head of the Appropriations Committee, George Mahon.

But the fact remains that between Albert and Mills, there is the same special relationship that used to exist in the Senate between Lyndon Johnson as majority and the sage of Georgia, the late Sen. Richard Russell. Indeed, Albert has told Mills that this is the way he wants it, citing the historic Johnson-Russell partnership.

As to Boggs, the majority leader's election to his new post was actually clinched when Wilbur Mills came out for him in the most forceful possible manner. And in the person of Hale Boggs, Speaker Albert further acquired a partner whose total co-operation he can rely upon.

One has to go back to the extraordinary era of Lyndon Johnson's Senate leadership to find any real parallel for the authority that the new team in the House can be expected to exert. They have been exerting it already, although no one has paid much notice to date.

Because of the rising challenge to the seniority system, the matter of committee assignments could have provoked an unholy row this year among the Senate Democrats. The team decided against any disruptive changes. They decided in favor of the new rules recommended by Rep. Julia B. Hansen. And they concluded that a kind of quiet example had to be made of the particularly outrageous House Committee on the District of Columbia.

All this was very quietly, coolly done, as first predicted in this space. And the very fact that it was done in this manner, firmly but with a minimum of fuss, has made the House as a whole, and the House Democrats in particular, feel that there are now strong hands on the reins.

Strong hands on the reins are not very important, to be sure, unless the reins give guidance in important directions. But this, too, is obviously going to happen. Speaker Albert and his majority leader have jointly decided, for instance, that the United States cannot afford to have a navy vastly less strong and modern than the Soviet navy — which is where we are now headed.

So the Democratic senators who would like to scrap the national defense are due for a really tunic tussle with the House. And it is quite likely that when the dust settles, President Nixon will find he has about $1 billion more of naval appropriations than he asked for in the defense budget.

Yet this is a mere fleabite, compared to the vast overhaul of federal social programs, and particularly of Medicaid and the national welfare system, that is obviously in the wind. Here Chairman Mills will carry the ball. If Mills succeeds, the President's revenue sharing will be swallowed up in the overhaul, which will be strongly backed by the speaker and majority leader.

If the overhaul is made as planned, moreover, it will be the first really major piece of legislation to originate exclusively in Congress since Robert A. Taft passed his Taft-Hartley Act. So you can see that the change in the political landscape will be great indeed.

CHICKEN CAMERANI — Fragrant rosemary leaves, fresh or dried, provide a piquant touch for hearty meat or poultry dishes. Native to southern Europe the perennial overgreen shrub yielding this herb is now cultivated both in other parts of Europe and in the United States. Turmeric, usually sold in ground form, is processed from the root of a plant of the ginger family. The slight bitterness imparted by this zesty spice complements and accents the flavor of rosemary in this unusual recipe for Chicken Camerani. As with the use of other herbs and spices, a light hand is essential for perfect results. Crisp golden corn flakes crumbed and buttered with sauteed almond slivers add the perfect glamor touch to this dish for family or festive occasions.

A light hand with herbs and spices

- 2 cups corn flakes or 1/2 cup packaged corn flake crumbs
- 2 tablespoons regular margarine or butter
- one-third cup slivered almonds
- 2 cups uncooked noodles
- one-third cup regular margarine or butter
- one-third cup regular all-purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon crumbled rosemary
- 1/8 teaspoon turmeric
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 1 cup half-and-half or light cream
- 2 tablespoons snipped parsley
- 2 tablespoons finely cut pimento
- 1 cup sliced cooked, seasoned carrots
- 3 cups seasoned cooked chicken cut into bite-size pieces
- 1. If using corn flakes, crush into fine crumbs. Set aside.
- 2. In small saucepan melt the 2 tablespoons margarine, add almonds and cook until lightly browned. Remove from heat;
- stir in corn flake crumbs. Set aside for topping.
- 3. In large saucepan cook noodles according to package directions in salted water until tender. Rinse with cold water. Drain well.
- 4. While noodles are cooking melt the one-third cup margarine in saucepan over low heat; stir in flour, salt, rosemary and turmeric. Add chicken broth; stir until smooth. Increase heat to medium and cook until bubbly and thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from heat.
- 5. Add half-and-half, parsley, pimiento, carrots, noodles and chicken to cooked mixture. Stir until well combined. Portion one cup servings into six individual casserole dishes. Sprinkle evenly with corn flake crumbs topping.
- 6. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 25 minutes or until thoroughly heated and corn flake crumbs are lightly browned. Garnish with fresh parsley sprigs.
- Yield: 6 servings. 1 cup Chicken Camerani each

Weddings in the Townships

Carroll-Parkes

The marriage of Mary JoAnne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Parkes of Richmond to David G. Carroll, son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Carroll of Melbourne, took place recently at St. Bibiane's Parish Church. The Rev. Father Wilfred Brazeau, uncle of the bride, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Baskets of white gladioli and shasta daisies were used to decorate the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was in an empire style gown of Ligoda crepe, the bodice having a high neckline and waist-length full sleeves applied with Chantilly lace.

The A-line fashioned skirt was hemmed with the same lace as the Chapel train which flowed from the waistline. Her tiered waist-length veil of tulle illusion edged with French lace was held in place by a garland of organza roses. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and tangerine carnations.

Miss Donna Carroll, sister of the groom as maid-of-honor, was in a frock of forest green cut velvet, the bodice having an empire waist with a high ruffled neckline, long-cuffed full sleeves and a full skirt. She carried a ballerina bouquet of yellow and tangerine carnations. Mrs. Larry Cinnamon and Mrs. Gerald Badger as bridesmaids and little Miss Kathleen Carroll, sister of the groom as flowergirl, were in gowns fashioned on the same lines as the maid-of-honor, having forest green velvet bodices and gold satin gathered skirts with overshirts of gold sheer. The full long-cuffed sleeves were also of gold sheer.

They carried ballerina bouquets of yellow and tangerine carnations. The nosegay carried by the flowergirl was similar to the attendants.

Mr. Douglas Ray acted as best man for Mr. Carroll and Master Gregory Leonard, cousin of the groom, acted as ring-bearer. The ushers were Mr. William Brazeau, cousin of the bride, and Mr. Bruce Carroll, brother of the groom.

Mrs. Parkes, the bride's mother, was gowned in gold crepe and wore a brown peau-de-soie hat with toning feathers and brown accessories. Her corsage was of feathered red-bronze pompoms.

Mrs. Carroll, mother of the groom, wore an off-white double knit ensemble and wore an off-white fur felt hat with black accessories. Her corsage was of orange sweetheart roses.

The reception was held at Motel Le Marquis de Richmond, where yellow Town Crier roses in white bud vases were used to decorate the tables. Miss Beth Fraser was in charge of the guest-book.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Carroll left for Pennsylvania, the bride travelling in an off-white pant suit under a silver-tipped Raocoon coat and brown accessories. Her corsage was of mauve monochromatic carnations.

Out of town guests were from Belleville, Ottawa, Cornwall, Ontario, Montreal, Chomedey, LaSalle, Laprairie, St. Hyacinthe, Ste. Rosalie, Knowlton, Danville, Melbourne, St. Felix de Kingsey and St. Bruno.

Young Rev. Gurlof Lokhorst of East Angus officiated assisted by Canon Church Mrs. Douglas Mayhew played the organ for the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by an old friend, Mr. Sturnis Coates and wore a grey tweed suit with an orchid corsage, a small white fur hat and gloves.

The matron-of-honor, Mrs. Alice Coates, chose a winter blue bonded dress with a yellow sash and wore a yellow rose corsage. Mr. Prentice Jacklin acted as best man. The gentlemen wore white carnation boutonnières.

A small reception was held at the home of Mrs. Alice Coates after the wedding. The wedding cake centered the dining table and a buffet lunch was served by Mrs. Dennis Chapman assisted by several of the ladies.

The wedding and shower gifts, which were numerous and beautiful, were displayed in the living room. Mr. and Mrs. Young will live in Scotstown.

Pipers whip RRHS before road swing

A HEAD FOR BASKETBALL — Alexander Galt Regional High School guard Steve Buck (15) couldn't penetrate Richmond Regional High School's defence, so he made a heady play and passed the ball to Dave Partington (14).

By SCOTT ABBOTT

LENNOXVILLE — Alexander Galt Regional High School basketball Pipers disposed of their last local competition yesterday before embarking today on a three-day, four-game road trip.

In Eastern Townships Athletic Conference action at AGRHS, the host club downed Richmond Regional High School 62-27 in an easy win.

The Pipers poured in 13 points early in the contest before RRHS got on the scoreboard as Bruce Nicholson's foul shot. The quarter ended with Galt on top 21-6.

Richmond came alive in the second period to outscore the leaders 14-12 for a Piper edge of only 33-20 at the half, but the home team buried the opposition 18-4 in the third quarter.

Piper coach Wayne Nugent went to his bench and gave his reinforcements plenty of floor time preparatory to the trip, with the result that only Colin Campbell hit in the double figures, scoring 20 points.

Centre Albert Gass contributed seven, and Roy Lyonnais, George Barnes, Dave Kangas and Steve Buck netted six apiece. Many of the points resulted from the winners' hot-handed outside shooting.

Bruce Morin led Richmond's representatives with 11 points.

In ETIAC hockey action, the Bantam Pipers bested Seminaire de Sherbrooke 3-1 as Alfred Aleksa, Grant Learned and Donny Grant provided the scoring punch, and Bishop's College School took the measure of the Junior Pipers by a 4-2 count.

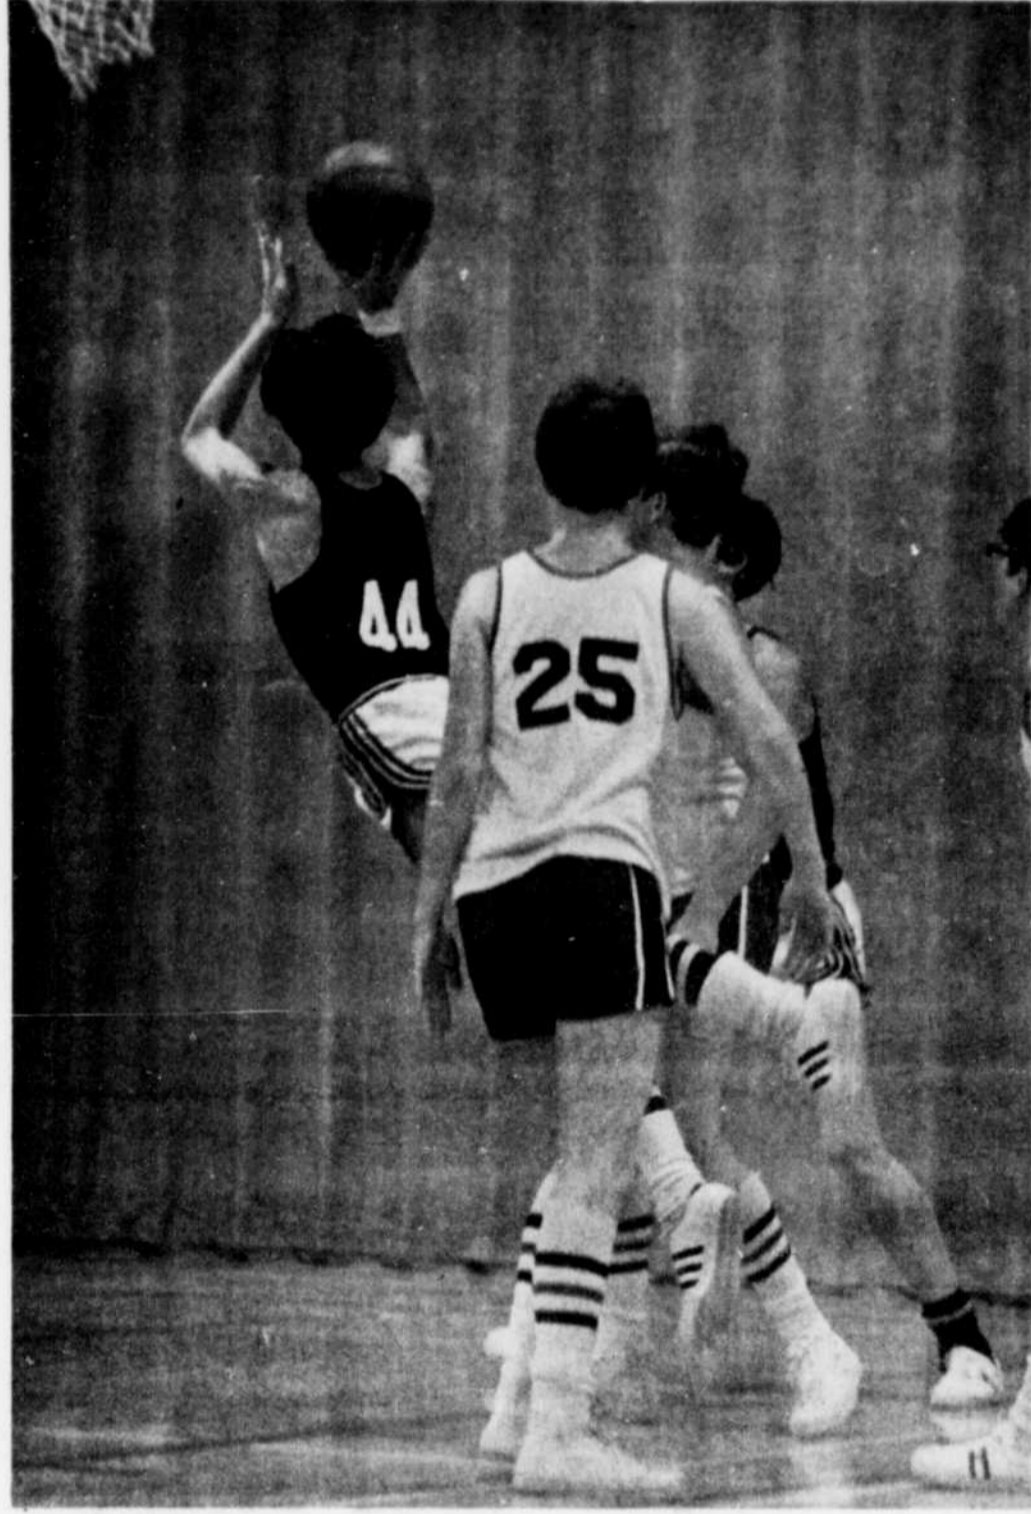

Hockey activity today sees BCS clashing with the Alexander Galt squad in senior play. The game shapes up as a battle for first place in the conference standings.

Meanwhile, the Piper basketballers and wrestlers and the Piperette cage crew travel to Montreal to face their Howard S. Billings High School counterparts.

The AGRHS senior basketball team will continue Friday to Ottawa to compete in a four-team round-robin tournament.

Also entered in the event is Rosemere High School, currently regarded as the number one collection of high school cagers on the island of Montreal.

The top competition is exactly what coach Nugent is looking for before next Wednesday's rematch with Stanstead College on that school's home court. The Stanstead five downed AGRHS 54-50 in overtime in their first meeting this year.

Beavers open home stand against Shawinigan

SHERBROOKE (SA) — Last Sunday's heavy schedule was expected to alter further the respective rankings of teams involved in the jockeying for Quebec Junior "A" Hockey League playoff positions, but bad weather resulted in all but one game being postponed.

Sherbrooke Beavers, who were to have met Verdun Maple Leafs, one of the teams evolving as an archrival this season, got back on the campaign trail at the Sports Palace tonight with a game against second place Shawinigan Bruins.

The last time the two clubs met was Dec. 20 last year when the Beavers won a home encounter by a score of 8-3.

Prior to that, the Sherbrooke squad's only victory over the Bruins was a 10-4 decision gained in Shawinigan, while the opposition recorded wins of 6-4 at home and 5-3 and 5-4 in Sherbrooke.

The 5-4 contest was lost by the locals in overtime and was a particularly bitter pill for coach Ronnie Racette to swallow. He has been working his charges this week to ready them to erase the memory of the loss.

Also to be considered is the fact that tonight's engagement is the first of four consecutive home ice games for the Beavers. This stretch of the schedule will, in all likelihood, determine just how high or low the team will wind up in the hectic race being waged by themselves, the Maple Leafs, Drummondville Rangers, Sorel Hawks and St. Jerome Alouettes.

The other visitors in the series are, interestingly enough, the Alouettes on Sunday, Three Rivers Dukes Feb. 26, and Drummondville Feb. 28.

An encouraging development for general manager Real Veilleux was the showing of the Midget Beavers, the junior club's farm team in the Sherbrooke Minor Hockey Association, at the recent international tournament in Drummondville.

Coach Yves Berthiaume's skaters acquitted themselves well enough to represent Canada in a special Canada-United States exhibition contest. The Sherbrooke team defeated St. Clair Shores of Michigan 4-2.

Ouebecers take silver, bronze in men's slalom

SASKATOON (CP) — Greg Athans, 15-year-old schoolboy from Kelowna, B.C., christened the man-made slopes of Mount Blackstrap Wednesday as he took the gold medal in the men's slalom, first skiing medal of the Canada Winter Games.

Andy Culver of Quebec City took the silver and Remi Cloutier of Lorraine, Que., the bronze.

In the men's slalom event, 50 skiers ripped down the course twice and officials said the runs were standing up "bloody marvelous."

There had been fears that skiing would be disrupted as unseasonable 40-degree temperatures and lack of snow beset the area.

However, it snowed overnight and the workers went out early. The cross-country course, which had ski officials trying to make other arrangements, was found to be covered with drifted snow and tracked vehicles went out to pack it down.

NARROW VICTORY

Athans had a combined time of 72 seconds while Culver totalled 72.06 and Cloutier 72.08.

Province-by-province standing after the completion of 10 events at the Canada Winter Games up to Thursday. Completed — badminton, basketball, boxing, fencing, figure-skating, judo, speed-skating, synchronized swimming, weightlifting and men's curling.
