Kierans staggers imagination in eroding enemies

By RICHARD JACKSON
Record Ottawa Columnist

OTTAWA — It had to be difficult, almost beyond imagination, if not quite impossible, but Communications Minister Eric William Kierans has pulled it off... the political hat trick of this Parliament.

His eye-dazzling, mind-boggling achievement... surpassing even that expert Prime Minister Trudeau in the amazing art of stonewalling, snowballing and utterly baffling the Opposition, Conservative, New Democratic and Creditiste alike.

No member of the cabinet has made such an unbelievable mess of his department as Eric Kierans with the Post Office.

He permitted postal strikers to blackmail the Treasury into a pay raise going beyond the government's own guidelines and costing the public a hefty increase in mail costs.

He cut delivery schedules.

He stood still for wildcat strikes.

He let the bottom drop out of the once-proud mail service.

And the Opposition hasn't been able to lay a glove on him in their so-far hopeless fight with this most artful dodger in a cabinet distinguished for its fleet and fancy political footwork.

IT'S TO LAUGH:

In fact, they seem so disheartened, they've about thrown in the towel, not having asked him about his pony express-style mail service in a week.

For months on end there were complaints and protests about what the Opposition bleated and bled was his shocking "non-service."

Conservative, New Democratic and Creditiste members came to the Commons Daily Question Period armed with postmarked letters, documentary proof that it was taking a week to get a letter from Montreal to Toronto, five days from Winnipeg to Calgary, four days from one side of Ottawa to the other.

At first Eric Kierans agreed things were pretty awful. "The public is paying more," he said, "and getting less service for it."

Then he tried "shaming," as he put it, some of his slow-moving postal staff, reminding them that in no other occupation was anybody doing "exactly the same kind of work in the same way as their grandfathers did."

Finally he attempted frightening them with talk of welcoming "competition" for the Post Office which might compel his staff to smarten up in their own financial self-defence and economic preservation.

Nothing works.

Especially criticism in Parliament.

For Eric Kierans has got to the point of just laughing about it.

An Opposition MP brings to his attention in the House a particularly awful example of "non-service," and Eric Kierans simply sits there, grinning.

FUNNY:

He yuks it up, could be in embarrassment. And they give him the haw-haw, certainly in frustration.

The mail service, as it used to be called, has become a standing joke in Parliament.

Nobody in the Commons takes it seriously any more — how could they — and so Eric Kierans, who used to be Postmaster General, doesn't get bugged any more. What's the use, the MPs shrug, of trying to ride him when all he does is laugh it up?

So they're off his back. And it still takes four days to get a letter across the National Capital, and who knows how long between Parliament Hill and say, Cornerbrook, Newfoundland or Powell River, B.C.?

But that worker of parliamentary magic, Eric Kierans, has done even better than shrugging and laughing off his non-service as the giggle-of-the-session.

With a wave of the cabinet wand, the job of Postmaster General — that was what he was before he pulled his vanishing act — has disappeared.

In the new list of the Ministry — see the back page of the official parliamentary Hansard for any Wednesday — Eric Kierans is catalogued as "Minister of Communications." And nowhere is there any trace of "Postmaster General."

Good thing, too, Eric Kierans probably figures. For not only is it a matter of, hopefully, out-of-sight out-of-mind, but it gives him more time to turning his multi-talents to quarterbacking National Defence, External Affairs, and any other department he may feel requires his attention.

Rail wreck claims two

CAMPBELLTON, N.B. (CP) — Bodies of two crew members were removed today from twisted wreckage of two Canadian National Railways trains that collided head-on late Wednesday at nearby Point a la Garde, Que.

The men were identified as Dave Fitzgerald of Campbellton and Finley Sinclair of New Carlisle, Que., firemen aboard the trains.

A CNR spokesman said two passengers and three crew members had been admitted to hospital, none on serious condition. Another 15 of the 50 persons aboard the eight-car passenger train and five crew members were treated at hospital and released.

The spokesman said the 28-car freight train and the passenger train collided about 9 p.m. at an underpass. Fire broke out, but was confined to the five locomotives, two steam generating cars and a baggage car.

The fire was quickly brought under control, but officials had to wait for the metal wreckage to cool before a search was started.

The CNR has started an investigation into the cause of the accident.

Dual school proposal attacked

OTTAWA (CP) — State Secretary Gerard Pelletier's suggestion that every major city should have a French school was described in the Commons Wednesday as extremist by John Skoberg (NDP-Moose Jaw).

"Municipal taxation across Canada today is such that we simply can't afford this luxury," Mr. Skoberg said during debate on the official languages bill.

"I know of too many senior citizens who are losing their homes as a result of taxation," Mr. Skoberg said he supports the bill but urged the government to "tread carefully" in implementing it.

"Do not insist that civil servants at all levels become bilingual immediately," he said.

STUDY COST CRITICIZED
Bilingualism had to start at the bottom, in schools, rather than at the top, among men who had worked for years. He criticized the cost of sending top federal employees to Toronto and Quebec for year-long language courses at public expense.

There was public fear about how the bill would be used. Every railway employee and civil servant, for instance, might be told to learn a second language late in life.

The Commons returns to the bill Friday after a one-day debate on a Creditiste motion aimed at the government's economic policies.

Mr. Skoberg's qualms were echoed by other MPs. Clifford Downey (PC-Battle River-Camrose) asked why other Canadians should swallow bilingualism when there is a trend toward unilingualism in Quebec. George Hees (PC-Prince Edward-Hastings) said legislation guaranteeing the use of French has been introduced in Ontario and New Brunswick but a language bill in Quebec had been withdrawn.

He urged Prime Minister Trudeau to ask Premier Bertrand of Quebec to reintroduce it while Parliament debates the federal bill.

SEEKS ASSURANCE
Lloyd Francis (L-Ottawa West) urged, as did Mr. Skoberg, that federal employees with long service not suffer because of the legislation.

Mark MacGuigan (L-Windsor-Walkerville) defended the bill against criticism by J. J. Thomson, former Exchequer Court president, who said its measures are unconstitutional.

Mr. MacGuigan, a professor of constitutional law, said English has been predominant in Canada but it hasn't been official. The British North America Act did not stipulate an official language. And there was nothing in Canada's constitutional history to back up Mr. Justice Thomson's argument that English was official because the act didn't say it wasn't.

Jean Roy (L-Timmins) attacked the argument that the bill will mean discrimination in the public service.

Conservative heads court

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon Wednesday night nominated Judge Warren E. Burger, a conservative Republican and a tough law-and-order jurist, to serve as the 15th chief justice of the United States.

The grey-haired, 61-year-old midwesterner, a veteran of 13 years on the U.S. Court of Appeals here, is known as a strict follower of the U.S. constitution who has criticized "appellate nit-picking."

Senators, particularly conservatives, hailed Burger's selection. If Senate confirmation is as swift and easy as likely, Burger will step in next term for Chief Justice Earl Warren, who is retiring at 78 after piloting the Supreme Court through its most active and liberal period.

Nomination of Burger, a relatively unknown, follows a scandal surrounding former associate justice Abe Fortas.

Fortas stepped down Friday following disclosure of financial links with jailed financier Louis Wolfson. Nixon said he could vouch for Burger's integrity.

MAY END TREND

Selection of Burger, together with Nixon's expected choice of another conservative to succeed Fortas, is virtually certain to modify or even reverse the liberal trend of the Warren court, whose decisions have had far-reaching effects on the life of the country.

In naming Burger, an assistant attorney-general in the Eisenhower administration, Nixon appeared to support a view that the Supreme Court had gone too far in protecting the constitutional rights of criminals and demonstrators.

While campaigning for the presidency, Nixon said court decisions were "seriously hamstringing the peace forces in our society and strengthening the criminal forces."

He called for vindication of "the first civil right of every American, the right to protection in his home, business and person from domestic violence."

The nomination came as something of a surprise. Favored was Associate Justice Potter Stewart, 54, regarded as a middle-of-the-roader.

Police, snipers battle

Police returned fire from sporadic sniper attacks at North Carolina Agriculture and Technical University in Greensboro Wednesday night and early today, but no injuries were reported.

Meanwhile, demonstrators in Berkeley, Calif., continued their cat-and-mouse tactics against gas-dispersing police and National Guard troops, while students at City College in New York got some good news—no failing grades will be issued this term.

In Greensboro, guardsmen and armored personnel carriers remained near the campus, which quieted down about 2:30 a.m., after four hours of sniping, police said.

The outbreak at the predominantly Negro school followed signing of a restraining order late Wednesday by Superior Court Judge Walter Gambill, who forbid Vincent McCullough, the student body president, from entering nearby Dudley high school.

Dudley has been hit by recent demonstrations and absenteeism among black students, to protest what they say was the unfair disqualification of a black candidate for student president at the school.

PROTESTERS SCATTERED

About 2,000 Berkeley protesters were scattered by a dispersal gas Wednesday, after a campus march to press demands for reopening a "people's park" on a lot owned by the University of California.

A riot followed the closing of the park last Thursday. Police fired shotguns during the disorders and a 25-year-old man was killed. A police helicopter used tear gas to disperse crowds Tuesday.

Wednesday's protest was less violent, but police arrested more than 40 persons, bringing the six-day total to more than 250.

At City College in New York, officials announced all 20,000 students would receive passing grades.

Black and Puerto Rican students termed the gesture "an act of good faith" and promised to continue negotiating their demands.

The protesters seek a separate school of black and Puerto Rican studies and enrollment of more minority group students.

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Apollo 10 astronauts plan to fly a fragile spaceship to within 50,000 feet of the moon today to scout a site for a July landing by two Americans.

Thomas Stafford and Eugene Cernan are poised to detach the lunar landing craft, or LEM, from the command ship in the mission's most dangerous manoeuvre. They are to be gone more than eight hours.

They are to leave John Young alone in the command vessel in mid-afternoon to make a daring descent toward a landscape they described Wednesday in such terms as "rugged planet," "fantastic" and "out of this world."

They are to skim twice over the landing site at a height of 9.3 miles starting at approximately 5:30 p.m. EDT.

They hope to get a total of 13 minutes of radar ranging, photographs and visual observations.

Then they are to execute a series of tricky manoeuvres to rejoin the command ship, circling 69 miles above the moon but ready to fly to their rescue if necessary.

LINKUP NECESSARY

The linkup must be made if Stafford and Cernan are to get home.

LEM, a little, bug-like ship, was designed to operate in airless space and on the moon and cannot return to earth.

If the manoeuvre is successful, and Apollo 10 flashes safely back to earth Monday, Apollo 11 will be ready to set out on the lunar landing mission 55 days later.

Wednesday night during the first color telecast beamed from near the moon, Stafford, Young and Cernan gave the earth a preview of what they would see.

For 29 minutes, they pointed the camera out the window and showed pictures of a bleak, barren landscape of crater-pocked plains, boulder-strewn plateaus and rugged highlands.

In color, the desolate terrain took on a brownish hue. It looked to be a most inhospitable place.

The touchdown target for Apollo 11, near the crater Moltke, was in partial darkness but appeared relatively flat from the 69-mile altitude.

Although it is one of the smoothest stretches of moon-scape, the area still is scarred by craters ranging from the size of a dime to a football stadium.

FITS DESCRIPTION

It is an ellipse measuring four by nine miles. From a distance, the surface resembles the "dirty beach sand" description given by the Apollo 8 astronauts who circled the moon in December.

"That's where we're going down tomorrow to photograph," Stafford told the TV audience.

By charting landmarks on the approach to and in the zone, Stafford and Cernan are to plot a safe course for Apollo 11. They hope to be able to spot clearly boulders and craters 30 feet in diameter.

Reconnaissance is not their only goal. They also want to provide ground planners with information on how accurately man can navigate around the moon.

Tracking of Apollo 8 and unmanned satellites disclosed that orbital paths fluctuate, especially when the vehicles pass over large ringed plains where concentrations of impact material are believed to be buried. The material could be nickel-iron meteorites, as much as 50 miles in diameter, which exert a gravitational pull on an orbiting object.

By flying the LEM at various altitudes during the eight hours it is alone, ground trackers hoped to get a good fix on the nature of the orbit shifts and more accurately predict landing missions.

To make certain the LEM's major systems were operating and to prepare for today's exercise, Cernan Wednesday night wiggled weightlessly through a tunnel into the spindly-legged craft and stayed two hours.

Regional newspaper plight told in House

QUEBEC (CP) — The plight of small regional newspapers was aired Wednesday before the national assembly's committee on freedom of the press by an association grouping 86 French-language weeklies, including seven outside Quebec province.

Concentration of press ownership could result in the death of regional newspapers, said Les Hebdos du Canada in a brief to the committee.

Such concentration is inevitable economically and even desirable because it leads to "a more modern press," said association president Yves Gagnon. However it also raised several problems, including the danger that a media group might set its rates "to drain off almost the entire advertising market."

"As far as we are concerned in the regional weekly press," Mr. Gagnon said, "a 20-per-cent drop in circulation or in advertising would risk destroying at least 50 per cent of the papers."

The association's brief said the state has "the right and the duty" to intervene, but Mr. Gagnon said intervention by the government should be exercised only when "absolutely necessary."

Another group blamed "the capitalist system" for the difficulties faced by small newspapers.

The 90-member Syndicat des Ecrivains du Quebec, formed in 1967 to defend authors' rights, said in its brief capitalism in newspaper ownership and operation should be replaced by a co-operative system including profit-sharing for journalists.

Jacques A. Lamarche, president of the group, said 400 Quebec daily and weekly newspapers have folded since 1900 and recommended that the government, credit unions and the public combine to form a special company to promote newspaper co-ops.

ONE FIRE PUT OUT, OTHER BURNS — Walter Skinner, whose clothes caught fire while he was watching burning draft records near the Los Angeles induction station, is rolled on the pavement by a companion, Charles Friend, and a man (nearest camera) who had been picketing the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner across the street. Their fast work put the fire out so quickly that Skinner was not burned. Meanwhile the draft records were consumed by flames, resulting in the postponement of the induction of 231 men. (AP Wirephoto)

Memorial chimes to become reality

The congregation of the Lennoxville United Church will soon be called to worship by new electronically operated chimes. The contract has been awarded and the chimes should be operating in about five weeks.

The Memorial Chimes Fund was created in 1964 and approximately $1,500 is still required to meet the final payment on the purchase price. It is felt that some potential donors have been waiting to make certain the project will become reality. Should this be the case, the time has come.

Others who have left the community could wish to make contributions in memory of loved ones. Cheques should be made payable to the "Memorial Chimes Fund" and mailed to the Lennoxville United Church, Box 328, Lennoxville, Quebec.

Criminal negligence found in car-motorcycle death

Twenty-three-year old Marc Pepin struck the motorcycle when he overtook it from the right-hand side of the road.

Pepin admitted he had consumed one gallon of beer, and said he was travelling at about 45 mph when the accident occurred.

He said he had surrendered to police less than 12 hours after the accident.

Pepin's passenger, Michel Boutin, corroborated the latter's statement.

Pepin was represented by Sherbrooke Attorney Dewey Zaor, while the Crown was represented by Stanley Steinman.

The investigation revealed that hours before the accident, Pepin had drunk at least one gallon of beer, and that his old car did indeed have defective brakes and a bad steering system.

Philias Coulombe identified his son as the victim of the accident.

Young Coulombe died of multiple injuries, one being a fractured skull, and a massive hemorrhage, the coroner said.

At the moment of the accident, Coulombe was riding a motorcycle driven by Denis Guillemette.

Pepin testified he was caught short by a car travelling on the wrong side of the road. He said he attempted to stop, but his brakes would not function properly.

He added he tried to take the ditch.

Waterville residents 'win' one of 57,000 non-trips

WATERVILLE — (Staff) — A number of persons in the Townships will not be awarded their vacation trips to Hawaii and Puerto Rico, as promised by certificates they received after filling an ad in TV Guide recently.

It turned out the whole operation was a big fraud to collect money from different persons.

In Waterville, two women received certificates telling them they had won an all-expense paid trip to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico. All they had to do was send $25 to secure their presence for the trip.

The money was to be sent to different places, Hollywood and Vancouver. The sponsor of the trip, Deluxe Vacations Ltd. turned out to be non-existent, one of the women said.

The same lady checked with the Better Business Bureau in Hollywood to make sure the address given was correct; it turned out it wasn't.

One man in Lennoxville received such a certificate, along with others in the region.

In Los Angeles, two Germans were charged with mail fraud by U.S. authorities Wednesday after telling 57,000 people in the U.S. and Canada that they had won free vacations.

Each of the "winners" was asked to post a $25 registration fee, to be refunded the day of departure for either Acapulco or Hawaii, Assistant U.S. Attorney Edward J. Wallin said.

Wallin said Hans George Aust and Roland Graber, both 27, operating Deluxe Vacationer Co. of Hollywood, made false claims in an advertisement published in TV Guide magazine April 5.

The ad said the company was associated with leading travel agencies all over the world and was conducting a "travel preference survey" with 2,000 vacation prizes to be awarded persons who fill out a questionnaire.

Wallin said money telephone numbers for the company were listed and that 57,000 winners' "certificates" were mailed requesting a $25 deposit within 10 days.

No vacations would be scheduled before June 15, according to the notice, Wallin said.

The letters to winners prompted a flood of inquiries to district attorneys, chambers of commerce, better business bureaus, and postal inspectors.

At the arraignment of the two men in U.S. district court, bail was set at $15,000 for each and a preliminary hearing was scheduled for June 13.

Chamber's big do, June 5

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual meeting and Dance June 5 at 7 p.m. at the Sherbrooke Social Club.

Directors and council members will be elected at the meeting and afterwards members and their wives will be entertained by an orchestra.

The Chamber urges those interested in attending to get their tickets as soon as possible.

Dangerous decision by civic administration

The Sherbrooke aldermen finally have decided to make the plunge, authorizing the City Treasurer to proceed with the projected voluntary tax lottery scheme.

Time alone will tell whether they have displayed good judgment in undertaking such a scheme or whether they are building up future troubles for themselves and perhaps for the citizens who must pay the bills if for any reason the scheme backfires.

And backfire it might.

There is no guarantee that the ticket sales will reach even the minimum objective to be established by the organizers while the city will be morally obliged to pay the prizes offered to the ticket holders.

The experience of other governments who have resorted to lotteries has been none too happy. In New Hampshire where the revival of the state lottery originated has never reached the revenues anticipated and the ticket sales have been dropping steadily ever since the initial drawing was held.

And New York state is finding the profits small despite an intensification of its promotional activities and a steadily-expanding number of sales outlets.

Montreal citizens have learned the hard way that a lottery offers no simple solution to meeting a budget deficit with ticket sales far below estimates while prize money payout had to be boosted to maintain even the present level of public subscription.

And the future for ticket sales by the Sherbrooke municipal lottery is dim, especially if other municipalities in the province are permitted to stage such sweepstakes of their own.

The amount of money available for sweepstakes is limited and the receipts are bound to diminish as new entries appear in the fight for the dollars floating around.

We can never quite get used to dialing for the Tidiness Supervisor when we want the plant janitor.

Taxes firing inflation

Every time there is a substantial increase in the cost-of-living index, such as the near-record 1.1 per cent jump in April, there are loud cries of anguish from almost everyone and especially by the believers in the principle that the state should do something to "them," the villains responsible for inflicting new tortures on the pocket books of the consumers.

The "them" are a rather loose group — manufacturers, middlemen or workers or almost anybody who happens to be handy.

But somehow or another one important member of the "them" group happens to be overlooked by the socialists and that is the state, which is supposed to be doing "something" about the increased living costs.

And the state sure is doing "something" about it. During April, the month in which the costs rose so sharply, sales taxes were increased in six of the ten Canadian provinces which new taxes were imposed on a number of items such as tobacco and alcohol, meaning the citizens paid three per cent more for these luxuries.

Medicare premiums went up in Ontario and Alberta, increasing the cost of health care. Higher meal taxes in some provinces meant higher food costs. Boosts in mortgage interest rates, forced by heavy government borrowings, pushed up housing costs for proprietor and tenant alike. Automobile license fees and gas taxes went up in many provinces.

Thus, despite the protests of Tommy Douglas and his like, much of the April boost in living costs was not the result of profiteers and of unions demanding wage increases but to governments making an increasing demand on the consumer's dollar.

In learning the ropes on a new job, the first lesson to get down pat is: Don't hang yourself.

Jettisons old but Trudeau still unable to develop new Canadian defence policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is a man in search of a defence policy.

He now knows pretty well what parts of the defence policy he inherited a year ago from the Pearson administration he will jettison.

But he has not yet, except in a general way, made up his mind what to put in their place.

Mr. Trudeau may be no militarist. But neither is he a Gandhi. To him, there are some evils worse than war.

It is evident that the prime minister intends to set out a new defence policy by the end of this year. He has indicated that it will be oriented mainly to the defence of Canada—and North America—in co-operation with the United States.

Informants say Mr. Trudeau is searching for the best way in which Canada can work with the U.S. in the air defence of the continent.

Mr. Trudeau is grilling the military as they have probably never been grilled before on a future defence role for this country.

So far, he has not received answers which satisfy him.

WANTS MORE CONTROL
The prime minister is said to feel strongly that civilians in government have not held a nearly tight enough economic rein on the military.

In his view, some costly weapons programs have been undertaken without any adequate reasons.

Mr. Trudeau is particularly annoyed by the policy of the Conservative Diefenbaker government, continued by the Pearson administration, which put an air division of bombers on four—now two—bases in Europe.

In the event of war, the bombers would be caught on the ground by Soviet missiles because they are a "second-strike" weapon. Canada would never allow the planes to be used for a war-opening first strike and they therefore could be used—theoretically—only as a force of retaliation.

For similar reasons, Mr. Trudeau is said to feel that the navy's anti-submarine role is questionable.

Consequently, it is being freely predicted here that both the air division in Europe and the navy's air arm, comprising chiefly the carrier Bonaventure and its aircraft, will be dismantled within a year.

Estates General queried

PARIS (CP) — Jacques-Yvan Morin, president of the private-sponsored Estates-General of French Canada, ran into sharp questioning from young Quebecers Tuesday night when he addressed a Paris meeting about the work of his organization.

One of the questioners argued for Quebec independence while others demanded clarification of positions taken by Morin and the Estates-General on matters connected with the province's future status.

Morin told one critic that independence "is not a simple problem."

Quebec's main difficulty, he said, is development of skilled managerial groups. The people generally "are very divided" about their constitutional future, he added.

He said that the Estates-General, which held a meeting in Montreal March 6-10, serves only as a "forum for public opinion" on such questions.

VP TO PARTIES
Whether Quebec actually embarks on a course of independence is up to the political parties, Morin said.

Asked whether a basic problem is lack of Quebec control over foreign capital in the province, Morin said the solution lies not in expelling such capital but in "disciplining" it.

Another member of his audience suggested that the work of the Estates-General may have been "useless."

Morin denied this as he explained the organization's history and methods to a meeting sponsored by the Association France-Quebec.

The meeting, held in a Quebec government conference hall, ended in spirited debate after Morin insisted that Quebec could become "an extraordinary laboratory of civilization."

This could be accomplished through the fusion of fidelity to European traditions with North American technology, he said.

A NEW IMPERIALISM?
He was challenged by a questioner who asked whether loyalty to the idea of a world-spanning community of French-speaking countries means a new form of imperialism in disguise.

Morin insisted he is as much opposed to "spiritual imperialism" as he is to economic domination.

Quebec, he said, is sharing its experience in audio-visual techniques of cultural action with French-speaking residents of Louisiana.

The association which sponsored the meeting embraces a number of private groups in this country working for closer ties with Quebec.

The Estates-General has promoted meetings in the province designed to focus the attention of scores of widely-representative French-speaking Canadians on questions crucial to their future.

COMMENT

Lubor J. Zink

OTTAWA — (TNS) — Considering the intensity of the campaign for establishing diplomatic relations with the Peking regime, it comes as a surprise that only a bare majority of Canadians favor such a move.

Even more surprising is the fact that there are now fewer backers of an exchange of ambassadors with Peking than there were three years ago.

The latest survey by one poll shows that support of the drive for recognition of the Communist government in China has dropped from 55 per cent in 1966 to 52 per cent.

The institute offers no explanation of the reversal of the trend which marked an uninterrupted steady climb from the recorded 32 per cent 10 years ago to the 1966 peak.

I interpret it as a combination of second thoughts under the impact of Mao's "cultural revolution" and revulsion to the flood of pro-Peking propaganda peddled by the United Church and, to a lesser extent, by our mass media.

Judging by my correspondence, many people who were willing to swallow the seemingly "realistic" recognition line without giving it a second thought are nauseated by the one-sidedness of the "China-teach-in" conducted by the United Church.

They resent having their children brainwashed in Sunday schools by Maoist propaganda which "justifies" and glorifies "revolutionary violence."

And they resent having their churches used for high-pressure Communist indoctrination sessions under the guise of objective information.

"I thought we would hear both sides of the story," a typical letter among many from my readers says, "but all we get is concentrated whitewash of the Mao regime."

"Every discussion of China is completely dominated by apologists of the Peking government and the material in the 'China pacs' (printed and distributed by the United Church) is so one-sided that it makes me sick. Can you recommend some books that do not paint Chairman Mao as a saint and describe how the Communists came to power in China?"

There are rumors—but they are only that—that Mr. Trudeau may cancel the CF-5 program and also the project to build four new helicopter-carrying destroyers.

The government plans—and these are not rumors—to shut down or reduce many military installations across the country.

One presumed consequence is that the personnel strength of the armed forces will be reduced below the current 98,000.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux is scheduled to attend a Brussels meeting of NATO's defence planning committee May 28. He is expected to outline some Canadian defence plans to his NATO counterparts.

But the big defence questions—chiefly: What role for the armed forces?—remain to be settled.

Mr. Trudeau has said that defence policy will flow from foreign policy and not the other way round.

Father de Jaeger gives a vivid eyewitness account of the Communist methods of seizure of power in China. As a priest, he is particularly qualified to describe and assess religious and intellectual persecution under the Red regime.

Had the United Church wished to be impartial, it couldn't possibly have omitted a synopsis of de Jaeger's book from its "China pac," for there is probably no more authoritative Christian survivor of the upheaval on the mainland to tell the story of everyday life in China during the years of Mao's drive for power.

The United Church, which apparently has money to burn on flooding Canada with Mao-Marxist propaganda, could, and indeed should have invited Father de Jaeger to take part in its year-long "China teach-in" if it intended to maintain any semblance of Christian orientation and some degree of objectivity in its program.

Robert Loh's book is in a different category.

A Chinese scholar with first-rate Western education, Loh saw the Maoist revolution through the eyes of an idealistic left-wing intellectual, and hurried home to help build the socialist China of his dreams when the Communist regime established itself in Peking.

He describes with pain his gradual disillusionment and the horror of life under the Asian version of Red fascism which drove him to flee to Hong Kong.

Since Loh's book is the story of a Chinese refugee, it can conceivably be suspected of bias. But with that reservation in mind, it should certainly be read by those who find the United Church material unbearably one-sided.

No such reservation applies to Dr. Kubek's meticulously researched and amply documented history of Communist seizure of power in China. Reading this scholarly work, which assumes considerable expertise in Asian affairs and in American foreign policy, is not easy but it's rewarding for it demolishes the myths about China which are being peddled by the United Church and the mass media.

Familiarization with these three books would, I am sure, knock the backing of the Peking-recognition policy well below the 32 per cent of 10 years ago.

Medieval cities were built within walled confines for defense against brigands and conquerors. Carcassonne, originally a Roman outpost in southern France, is perhaps the best surviving example of a medieval walled town. The World Almanac says, "The 6th-century Visigoths began building the still-standing system of double walls and 52 towers for which the town is famed and within which some 40,000 people now live."

Vickers shipyard closes

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's dying shipbuilding industry took another step toward its grave Wednesday with the announced closing down of the Canadian Vickers Ltd. shipyard here.

J. Eric Harrington, Canadian Vickers' president, told a news conference the company "cannot continue its shipbuilding operation."

"There is no future domestic market to justify maintaining existing facilities," he said. "There already are too many shipyards in Canada for the number of contracts available."

Mr. Harrington said the company's industrial division "will continue to operate at capacity" and that Canadian Vickers has a backlog of $20,000,000 work under its diversified program.

About the time he announced the closing of the shipbuilding operation, 700 workers engaged in the company's shipbuilding division walked off their jobs in east-end Montreal and held an "information meeting."

A spokesman for the Confederation of National Trade Unions, which represents the shipbuilders, said the workers will stay off the job until the federal or provincial government does something to prevent the closing. "The federal government was informed some months ago of the steps that unfortunately now must be implemented," said Mr. Harrington. "It does not intend to do anything to keep us in business."

Meanwhile, Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen told the Commons that normal manpower department facilities will be available to aid workers affected by the shutdown of the shipbuilding operation.

Although Mr. Harrington painted a dismal picture of the future of the shipbuilding industry in Canada, John W. McGiffin, president of Canada Steamship Lines Ltd., said that so far as his company is concerned the future is as bright as ever.

Canadian Vickers, a subsidiary of Vickers Ltd. of London, last year sold its George T. Davies division at Lauzon, Que., to Davis Shipbuilding Co., a subsidiary of CSL.

The current work force of about 1,600 at Vickers will be reduced to 1,000 in the industrial and ship repairing divisions. Vickers had substantial losses in 1967 and early 1968, chiefly because of its ailing shipbuilding operation.

Sends Sirhan to gas chamber despite Kennedy family plea

LOS ANGELES (Reuters) — a letter released by District Attorney Evelle Younger: "My brother was a man of love and sentiment and compassion. He would not have wanted his life to be a cause for the taking of another life."

FEELS JURY RIGHT But Walker, who has reversed only one death verdict in 19 capital cases during his 16 years as a Superior Court judge, said: "It is the feeling of the court that the jury is right."

Sirhan, who entered the courtroom holding a cigar, showed no sign of emotion as Walker passed the formal sentence.

Nor was any emotion expressed by his 50-year-old mother, Mary, who sat directly behind him in the courtroom.

But Grant B. Cooper, Sirhan's chief defence lawyer, said Sirhan's mother "broke down and cried when she left him in his cell."

A series of appeals are expected to carry the case right up to the U.S. Supreme Court and should delay any execution for several years.

No prisoner has been executed in California for two years.

A total of 78 condemned men are currently crammed into two separate death row units at the maximum security prison.

A "no man's land" has been created at San Quentin to safeguard Sirhan from attempts on his life, Warden Louis Nelson said Wednesday.

"We are somewhat alarmed because we believe there may be people ready to kill Senator Kennedy's slayer to get their name in the history books," Nelson commented.

Awaiting Sirhan is Cell 33 on death row. Like those of 80 other occupants it is 4½ feet wide, 7 feet high and 11 feet deep, with a large bare overhead light bulb that can be turned on and off from inside the cell.

Sirhan's cell is equipped with a bunk, bookshelf, stool and toilet. A wire mesh screen will separate him from 28 other condemned men on his corridor.

Future hospitals seen as community centres

OTTAWA (CP) — Hospitals of the future will be pretty go-go affairs. They'll be as deeply involved in the neighborhood as a corner grocery store and as mobile as the library bookmobile.

That is Health Minister John Munro's picture and he framed it Wednesday with a warning to existing institutions which may resist change.

"Let me state plainly that it is my feeling that if the hospitals and other health facilities in this country will not get together to co-ordinate their services and divide their specialized functions, then my provincial colleagues and I will have to give serious thought to the selective use of government funds to foster this goal ourselves."

Mr. Munro portrayed storefront clinics and mobile units cruising on case-finding missions as part of a broader, more integrated hospital and health-care system of the future.

For a start, he suggested, they had better take care of the poor and disadvantaged who have substandard hospital care before building bigger and better institutions for the 'haves' of society.

FORESEES VARIED CARE Hospitals will mean more than active treatment care in a bed. They will mean rehabilitation units, convalescent care, health counselling by mobile clinic, psychiatric consultation and emergency services and even comprehensive mental health services.

Mr. Munro's suggestion to the annual meeting of the Canadian Hospital Association that governments may flex their financial muscles to get hospitals on the road to integration was treated pretty gingerly by hospital administrators already worried about money.

R. Alan Hay, association president, had just forecast lower quantity and quality of hospital care if the hospitals continue to receive a shrinking share of provincial revenues.

But he told a press conference after Mr. Munro's address that the minister's statements would cause hospitals at least to investigate ways of doing a better job.

He also said there probably is some reason to believe the federal government now is having second thoughts about withdrawing eventually from programs like hospital and medical care insurance for which Ottawa contributes a percentage of the cost of provincial programs.

The message had got through that replacement of this fixed percentage for hospital or medical care would make it harder for provincial health ministers to get a share of the revenues from the expanded tax room being offered the provinces by the federal government.

FEARS BAD RESULTS The realization may have come home to the federal government as well that making it harder for the hospitals to get needed funds from the provinces would result in lower standards of care in another three or four years.

Stanley Martin, chairman and general manager of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, said he reads Mr. Munro's warning as an indication that "a pretty heavy hand will be imposed on them (the hospitals) from the outside" if they do not move voluntarily in the direction of integration of services and division of responsibilities.

Mr. Munro had said some progress was being made in this direction in Saskatchewan, New Brunswick and Ontario.

Mr. Martin estimated that it would take four or five years before there is widespread integration of health services through regional and area planning councils in Ontario.

He said he thinks Mr. Munro expects the current "task forces" of medical and hospital care costs and services will produce a guide or pattern for integration that can be discussed with the provincial governments.

No doubt you've heard the term "grey matter" used as a reference to people's intelligence, and their ability to reason. The people who write for our newspaper have a lot of "grey matter", in fact, Le Progrès editors and reporters write the facts as they see them, and a lot of "grey matter" is credited with the articles prepared for this French weekly. You can gain a lot by reading Le Progrès... gain an insight into events from the French population's side of the fence. You'll enjoy seeing what is attributed to our writers' "grey matter"!

Le PROGRES
CHRONIQUE DE MAGOG

MAGOG — (Special) — Last Thursday this newspaper carried the first in a four part resume, prepared by a Montreal firm, evaluating the advantages and disadvantages of this city retaining the former post office building on Main Street West. In the second portion, the economic advantages by selling the property are discussed.

Writers of the report state that while the property and building are in good repair and appealing, it has limited application for rental purposes and thus, cannot be regarded as an attractive source of income for the municipality. It is the opinion of the researchers, that if cleared, the land could be used for other purposes, which could provide greater source of revenue for Magog, because it would no longer have the loss of interest on the investment and the cost of maintaining the premises.

Discussing J. A. Choquette's offer to buy the land and tear down the building, the researchers state, the property could be utilized for more advantageous purposes, enhancing the commercial possibilities of Main Street West.

Mr. Choquette has stated if he bought the property, he planned to demolish the building and turn the lot into a display centre, where special attractions could be staged, thus benefitting everyone along Main Street West. He told the city fathers, that his idea was to rent the site for special events, and on occasions, utilize it himself or lend it to groups, who could stage special events of public interest.

Aime Choquette has also intimated that he would allow Magog certain portions of the present site for street widening to make room for bus-stops.

In a quick appraisal of the suggestion, Mayor Maurice Theroux stated that the offer from Mr. Choquette would have to be further studied by the council, and all factors weighed on their merits, the results being dependent of the good such a transaction would have for Magog.

The researchers, in conclusion of their second report, said that such a venture could be of great commercial value to the community and would be unique for a centre the size of Magog.

Leaving Magog

MAGOG (Special) — Rev. Ronald N. Nickle, pastor of St. Paul's United Church, Magog announced officially to his congregation last Sunday morning, that he and his family would leave this community at the end of June to take up a post in west-central Toronto at the Clarkdale parish. Mr. Nickle came to Magog in September, 1963 from Sept Isles, where he served as chaplain with the RCAF, and had charge of St. Andrew's parish.

A member of the Magog Kiwanis Club, Mr. Nickle also serves on the Magog - Orford Tourist Commission as spokesman for the English language community. He has been one of the initiators for the planned home for aged in this city, and played active roles in community welfare work. His hobby is amateur radio operating, and belongs to the Sherbrooke Amateur Radio Club.

No replacement for Mr. Nickle has been named as yet, but announcements expected prior to the end of June.

inasmuch that the centre is competing for trade in face of stiff obstacles from outside of the community boundaries.

Next week, the third portion of this resume will be published in this newspaper.

MAGOG IS ON THE MOVE!

SLOGAN CATCHES ON — The "Magog is on the move" slogan initiated by this newspaper and Le Progrès-Chronique de Magog has caught on in this city, and is one of the promotional pieces adapted by various storekeepers.

maintaining operational staffs, and remaining open.

The storekeepers have suggested various alternatives, such as removal of parking meters from the public parking lots, and changes in traffic regulations. All proposals have been sent to the city council, where they are pending study and decisions. (Record photo: Charles Catchpaugh)

MAGOG LANDMARK DISAPPEARS — The Dominion Textile barn on Merry Street North in Magog is being demolished by Yvon Giguere Construction. The barn was one of this city's first buildings, originally serving the farm land that is now all built up as residential area. Later it was purchased by the textile firm, to be used by their subsidiary, Industrial Specialty, where horses and equipment, plus raw materials were kept. Large, and imposing, the structure was commonly used as a landmark by persons giving directions, as it could be easily seen from far around. (Record photo: Charles Catchpaugh)

Magog optometrist buys Coaticook practice

One of the Eastern Townships oldest optometry offices, formerly operated in Coaticook by Jay N. White, has been taken over by Gilles Lajoie, O.D., of Magog. The two practices have been amalgamated following the death of Mr. White recently.

Gilles Lajoie graduated from the University of Montreal in 1952 with a degree in optometry, and following a short practice in Verdun, opened an office in Magog during September 1952. He was a member of the Magog Lions Club for five years, president of that group in 1964, and a Lions zone chairman during 1965, but forced to withdraw due to professional commitments, which entailed post graduate studies in contact lenses. Mr. Lajoie married Suzan Meagher of Sherbrooke, and they have six sons. The Lajoie family take an active role in community life, and are noted sailors.

During Jay N. White's illness, prior to his death, Gilles Lajoie practiced in Coaticook. Recently, Marcel Sampson, a native of Quebec City and also a graduate in optometry from the University of Montreal, joined Gilles Lajoie in the Magog office. A member of the Quebec College of Optometry, Mr. Sampson is presently engaged in post graduate studies originating from the United States. He first practiced in Drummondville before coming to Magog. With plans to reside in Coaticook, Mr. Sampson will marry in June.

Montreal Expos slump to their 6th consecutive loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Denny Lemaster singled in the decisive run in the sixth inning and Fred Gladding protected it as Houston Astros slipped past Montreal Expos 3-2 Wednesday night.

Doug Rader walked to open the sixth and reached second with two outs before Lemaster drove out loser Bill Stoneman, 3-4, with a run-scoring single for a 3-1 lead.

Lemaster gave up Gary Sutherland's first homer of the year in the eighth before Gladding took over at the start of the ninth and completed Houston's fourth consecutive victory and 13th in 17 games. Montreal dropped its sixth in a row.

Lemaster, who beat Montreal a week ago for his first victory, is 2-5.

Denis Menke, hitting in his 14th straight game, doubled and scored on Rader's hit in the second and Norm Miller tripled in a run in the third. Rusty Staub doubled and eventually scored on a ground out for Montreal's first run in the fourth.

Tom Seaver silenced Atlanta on three hits and lowered his 1969 National League earned-run average to 1.96 Wednesday as New York Mets tripped the Braves 5-0 in Atlanta.

Seaver, considered the leader of the Mets' pitching staff although only 24, collected his fifth consecutive victory and raised his record to 6-2.

Bob Moose of Pittsburgh and Claude Osteen of Los Angeles each gave up five hits as the Dodgers edged Chicago Cubs 3-1 and the Pirates clubbed San Diego Padres 11-1 on 15 hits.

In other games, San Francisco Giants nipped St. Louis Cardinals 4-3, Houston Astros downed Montreal Expos 3-2 and Cincinnati Reds defeated Philadelphia Phillies 6-5.

Seaver, since his winning streak started, has limited the opposition to only seven runs. He hasn't lost a game since April 25 and his only two defeats were 3-1 decisions to Bob Gibson of the Cardinals and the Cubs' Ferguson Jenkins.

RETIRED 12 STRAIGHT
Wednesday he retired 12 consecutive hitters during one stretch.

Cleon Jones, the leading hitter in the major leagues, drove in two first-inning runs for the Mets off Phil Niekro and Bud Harrelson wrapped it up with a three-run triple in the eighth.

"He's been a little down on himself after losing a couple of real tough ones," said manager Gil Hodges of Seaver, "but tonight he was great."

"It was my best game by far this year," Seaver added. "I seem to have straightened myself out and I think I'll have a good year now."

Osteen raised his record to 6-2 and only missed his second straight shutout when Billy Williams doubled home a run in the eighth with two out. But that was after Willie Crawford's fifth homer had opened the game for the Dodgers and Osteen and Crawford singled home runs in the fifth.

Willie Mays gave Gaylord Perry his seventh triumph against three losses for the Giants when he broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run homer in the eighth inning. It was his fifth of the season and 592nd of his career.

Perry, who also singled in a run, scattered eight hits, but two of them were solo homers by Tim McCarver and Jim Hicks.

Moose had the easiest time as rookie Al Oliver hit a grand slam homer and Jerry May, Richie Hebner and Willie Stargell each drove in two runs. May also had a homer.

Houston, after a dismal start, won its fourth game in a row and 13th in 17 starts as Denny Lemaster captured his second straight win after five losses. Lemaster, who gave way to Fred Gladding in the ninth, also singled in the decisive run in the sixth inning as the Astros handed Montreal its sixth consecutive defeat.

Cincinnati rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth on Johnny Bench's single and a bases-loaded walk issued by Jerry Johnson to pinch hitter Ted Savage. The Phillies had taken a 5-4 lead in their half of the ninth on a wild pitch.

Claude Ruel to coach Canadiens once again

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Ruel, who led Montreal Canadiens to the Stanley Cup and National Hockey League east Division title in his first season as coach, has signed for next season.

General manager Sam Pollock, in announcing the signing Wednesday, said Ruel received a "substantial raise" but contract terms were not revealed.

Pollock also told a news conference Montreal is negotiating with Ken Dryden of Toronto, star goaltender with Cornell University. Ken, 21, is due to graduate soon and must decide between a pro hockey or a law career. He is a brother of Dave, a Chicago Black Hawks' goalie.

Another matter that remains under negotiation is Canadiens bid to operate an American Hockey League franchise in Montreal next winter. Pollock said AHL owners will decide following a special league meeting scheduled for Springfield, Mass., next Wednesday.

EASIER THIS TIME

Pollock said it was easier to sign Ruel this time than to his initial contract last year.

"Last year he was replacing Toe Blake, who had the greatest coaching record in the history of hockey. Now he goes into his second year with a league championship and a Stanley Cup."

The pounding Ruel took in reaching the league title and the Stanley Cup had left him a bundle of nerves. He had even let it be known that he would almost welcome a relief from the job. However, a few weeks rest since the end of the season has left him eager for another season.

CAHA unhappy with reports

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, making no bones about age limits imposed by professional hockey, is concerned over a possible breach in its contract with the National Hockey League.

Part of the CAHA-NHL agreement signed in 1967 reduced the junior age limit to 20 years as of Dec. 31. Included in the NHL's part of the agreement was a clause that guaranteed amateurs a forewarning before a professional club moved into amateur territory.

The CAHA, despite protests from some delegates attending the annual meeting this week, has already decided to abide by the current age limit, while showing concern over reports that the NHL is planning to place minor professional clubs in Montreal, Kingston, Ont., and Ottawa.

Earl Dawson, CAHA president from Rivers, Man., said Wednesday he had sent a telegram to NHL president Clarence Campbell, stressing the concern.

The telegram was approved by delegates.

CAHA IGNORED
"We have not been notified and we should object to being ignored in a matter of such importance," Dawson told delegates in plenary session.

The meeting was told that

Montreal is interested in placing an American Hockey League franchise in Montreal, which was the main concern for Dawson who had already written Campbell regarding the Kingston and Ottawa situation.

Minnesota North Stars plan to put a franchise in Kingston and Detroit Red Wings are thinking about placing a team in Ottawa.

Dawson said such a move by Montreal "would be detrimental to amateur clubs."

Earlier, a memorandum of understanding between the CAHA and Hockey Canada, which has taken over management of Canada's national team, was read to delegates by Dawson. It was deferred to Friday.

The CAHA says it will co-operate in every respect, but wants its relationship with Hockey Canada governed by seven general principles.

In one of the principles, the CAHA wants to be acknowledged in its position as the sole governing body for amateur hockey in Canada, and its position as the official representative of Canadian amateur hockey in the international sphere.

MUST BE REGISTERED
While agreeing to accept and abide by the directions given by Hockey Canada regarding the national team's participation in international competition, the CAHA has insisted that the players, managers, coaches and trainers of the team be registered members of organized hockey associations.

Financial reports presented to the plenary session Wednesday said the CAHA earned $63,809 from 1969 junior and senior playoffs.

The CAHA picked up $46,380 as its share from nine junior series which netted gross receipts of $309,201.

After expenses were deducted, the CAHA said the 10 teams who took part in the junior series for the Memorial Cup would divide $54,013 with Sorel Black Hawks getting the biggest chunk—$14,323. Montreal Junior Canadiens, who eliminated the Hawks in four games in the eastern Memorial Cup final and went on to defeat Regina Pats to win the Canadian title, get $10,333.

It took seven series to decide an Allan Cup winner and the CAHA netted $17,429 despite an overall loss of $383 for the playoffs.

After expenses and the CAHA levy wiped out gross game receipts of $118,755, there was $6,524 left for five of eight teams involved.

Galt Hornets, 1968-69 Allan Cup champions, receive $624.

Planning Canada's role in International competition

MONTREAL (CP) — David Molson, a director of Hockey Canada which has been set up to rebuild the country's national team, said Wednesday a special meeting of the organization here next week should provide "significant developments" on Canada's role in international competition.

"You'll notice I said 'international' not professional or amateur," Molson told a news conference. However, he refused to comment on what these developments could be.

Molson, president of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, agreed with NHL president Clarence Campbell that it would be against the league's constitution if Toronto Maple Leafs or the Canadiens supplied the nationals with players during the NHL schedule or playoffs. "The NHL constitution states any team has to have its best players on the ice at all times," Molson said. "Therefore we can't loan one or 10 players to the national team."

Leafs' president Stafford Smythe previously indicated he would give three of his players to the nationals.

Prince to attempt the triple Crown

NEW YORK (CP) — A badly-withered blanket of roses and another of drooping black-eyed susans are propped up beside barn 9 at Belmont Park.

They're symbols of victories in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness to assistant trainer Mike Boa, who hopes to take them back to California along with a blanket of carnations if Majestic Prince wins the Belmont Stakes June 7—third leg of racing's Triple Crown.

And inside stands the powerful chestnut three-year-old, declared unfit to tackle the 1½-mile Belmont by trainer Johnny Longden before the decision was overruled by owner Frank McMahon of Calgary and Vancouver.

The Prince was shipped here from Pimlico Wednesday and McMahon said: "We're going to give him a chance to win the Triple Crown."

In California Longden said he will travel to New York to resume the thoroughbred's training.

PLANS CHANGED
Longden, who paid $250,000 on behalf of McMahon for the colt as a yearling, had gone to California to wait for Majestic Prince who was to be shipped there for a rest. However, his plans were changed by McMahon's decision.

"I talked to McMahon last night and he said he wanted to run the Prince in the Belmont if everything goes all right," Longden said Wednesday.

"I thought we had decided to give him a rest after his Preakness victory. That race and his run in the Kentucky Derby were hard ones. He looked a little tired and he's lost some weight and I said then if he was mine that I'd give him a rest."

"I felt Frank and I were in agreement, but apparently he's changed his mind."

"I spent a year preparing the Prince for the Derby and that was the race I really wanted. But he came out of the Derby in such good condition and I thought the Preakness might be a little easier on him, so we went after it. But it was a hard race and it's been a hard campaign."

"We'll do our best to get him ready for the Belmont and we'll try to win that one, too."

PRESSURE TO RACE
McMahon said there was no question that there was a lot of pressure to have the big red horse go in the Belmont.

The Prince would be the ninth horse in the last 50 years to win the Triple Crown by a victory in the Belmont. The first, back in 1919, was Sir Barton, owned by the late Cmdr. J. K. L. Ross of Lindsay, Ont., and Montreal. The last to do it was Citation in 1948.

McMahon said, however, that his decision to enter the horse in the June 7 Stakes race was not final.

"We'll look at him for the next few days and if he looks right, he'll run," McMahon said. Longden had announced last Sunday, the day following Majestic Prince's victory in the Preakness, that he considered the thoroughbred a valuable piece of property that should not be risked in a race three weeks later.

Terry Kerridge pitches no-hitter

BY TED ANDERSON

Young Terry Kerridge pitching for the Twins against the Tigers in the Sher-Lenn Little League, started off the 1969 season in brilliant style as he came up with a no-hit, no-run performance. In his win he had 14 strikeouts and also hit in two runs.

Tonight the Red Sox meet the Orioles and the Indians and Senators clash. Both games are at the Parade Grounds.

Kerridge in the final three innings had eight strikeouts. He gave up one walk in the innings.

A base on balls to Gendron issued by Johnny Mills the Tiger hurler set up the first Twin tally. Kerridge with a double sent in the tally. Kerridge in the fourth got two more men, on strikes, bringing his total up to ten.

The Twins second run came in the top of the fifth inning. Kerridge again sent in the tally with a triple.

Five more strikeouts in the fifth and sixth finished off the Tigers, giving the Twins a 2-0 win. Johnny Mills the Tiger hurler though losing struck out 10 men and had good control, only walking three men. The teams played good ball despite the Canadian Johns-Manville Company, Ltd.

Asbestos, Que.

ENTHUSIASTIC FANS — On this warm sunny day everyone is gathered to see the completion of the Junior 1000 yard dash.

The 27th annual Eastern Townships Interscholastic Track and Field Meet will be held on Saturday May 24 at the Parade Grounds on Queen Blvd. North in Sherbrooke. The meet is sponsored by the Y's Men's Club of Sherbrooke and the local Hi-Y Club.

The meet is limited to schools in the Eastern Townships area. This year a total of 18 schools will be represented by some 450 boys and girls from the locality.

The following schools have indicated that they will contest: Bishop's College School; Cowansville High School; Granby High School; Lennoxville High School; Knowlton High School; Princess Elizabeth High School; Sherbrooke High School; Stanstead Wesleyan College; Sunnyside High School; Sutton High School; Richmond Regional High School; Bedford High School; Waterloo High School; North Hatley High School; Thetford Mines High School; Ayer's Cliff High School; King's Hall Compton; and the College du Sacre-Coeur.

Five classes are covered in the meet with these age groups: Junior 18-19 years; Juvenile 16-17 years; Midgets 14-15 years; Bantam 12-13 years; and Pee Wee under 12 years.

Thirteen Trophies will be competed for at the meet. Six of these go to the schools in reward for team effort. The remaining seven trophies are awarded to the contestants for individual effort.

The Skinner Trophy is awarded each year to the team with the highest point total for the meet. This highly contested award went to Bishop's College School in 1967 and to Sherbrooke High School last year. The other high honor of the day is

The Sherbrooke General Sports Commission Trophy presented to the individual with the highest point total for the meet. The 1967 winner was J. Shanks of Stanstead Wesleyan College, and last year Danny Lemay of Sherbrooke High won with a total of 20 points.

The Track Meet was originated twenty-seven years ago to raise funds for the construction and maintenance of the Y's Men's Club Camp on Little Lake Magog. As the years passed, the event grew with the support and interest shown by the Eastern Township schools.

The Asbestos, Danville, Shipton consolidated school was last year's winner of the Sam Elkas Trophy for the team with the highest point total. This marked the second straight time that they carried home the honor.

Responsible for organization of this event are Bob Jarjour and Curt Bishop of the Y's Men's Club. The Head of the Hi-Y section is Jeff Boisvert. The officials for the day will be Bruce Coulter of Bishop's University as Chief Marshal; Gordon Ross as Field Marshal; Curt Bishop as Track Marshal; and Rollie Dewar as official starters, assisted by Doug Gutherie.

The meet is sanctioned by the Amateur Athletics Union of Canada, and all rules are the same as those used for major meets of the world. Since the meet is recognized by the A.A.U. of C. any record established will receive official recognition.

This competition is considered to be one of the top meets held in this province, and a high calibre of participation is expected. The day's events are scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. rain or shine.

DOCTOR'S MAILBAG

Dermatitis Treatment Depends on Type, Cause

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q—I have dermatitis on my legs. What causes it? Is there any cure for it?

A—There are many types of dermatitis or inflammatory skin disease. Before your doctor can prescribe any treatment for it he must identify the type and find the cause.

Q—I have just recovered from a bout of Dühring's disease. What caused it and how can I prevent a recurrence?

A—This disease, also called dermatitis herpetiformis, is characterized by a severe itching eruption with spontaneous remissions and recurrences. The victims are usually advised to avoid eating iodized salt, chocolate, nuts, fish and pork. It runs its course after several years. Recent studies suggest that the cause is a sensitivity to gluten. Seven patients with this disease ate a gluten-free diet for six months and showed a marked improvement in both their skin and their general health. Gluten is present in wheat, barley and rye.

Cortisone and various other remedies can add to your comfort during an attack.

Q—My doctor says I have dermatitis venenata. He has been treating it for six years but just when I think it's getting better it breaks out again. How can I get rid of it?

A—Dermatitis venenata, more commonly called contact dermatitis or contact eczema, includes poison ivy eruption and allergic reactions to various plants, fabrics, soaps, dyes and chemicals. The only effective treatment is to identify the offending substance and avoid it. Overtreatment is often responsible for keeping the disease going.

Q—I am 70 and my husband is 72. He is not ill but he mentions his impending death several times a day. This sort of talk is driving me up the wall. How can I get him to stop?

A—Although all of us must die sometime it is decidedly abnormal to dwell on the fact. We are placed on earth to enjoy life to the fullest and to live a day at a time. If your husband will not see a doctor, preferably one who specializes in nervous and mental diseases, you should ask your clergyman to talk to him.

Please send your questions and comments to Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D., in care of this paper. While Dr. Brandstadt cannot answer individual letters, he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

Here is another hand from the early stages of the Vanderbilt that shows Dick Walsh building up a big swing for his team.

Dick won the spade lead in dummy and while he is normally a speedy player, he really thought a long while with this one.

The elementary play would be to lead dummy's king of clubs. South would wind up making five no-trump, assuming that clubs divided 3-2 and that East and West did not cash their ace and king of diamonds. In fact, he might even make six if East threw away a heart.

The first part of Dick's study was to decide what the chance was that his opponents at the other table would be in game. He decided there was a good chance they would be playing in a club part-score and it behooved him to take the best play for his contract and forget about overtricks. Therefore Dick led a heart to his hand at trick two. Then he played his jack of clubs. West had to play his ace and dummy's whole club suit was now good. The best Dick could do was to make 10 tricks but that was a lot better than going down. He was also right about the bidding. Three clubs was played at the other table.

It should be noted that Dick's safety play was quite fetching. It would only help him if West held the singleton ace of clubs.

Nevertheless it turned out to be well conceived. The ace of clubs was singleton in the West hand and the no-trump game was not reached at the other table.
