FUNERAL OF LESLIE W. SELLAR

Held Under Directions of Masonic Order

The funeral of L. W. Sellar on Saturday morning was largely attended. As the immediate Past Master of the local Masonic Lodge the funeral was of Masonic nature, the members marching in a body to the house and accompanied the body to the church and then to the grave where V. Wor. Bro. M. T. Robb, conducted the lengthy Masonic burial ceremony. St. Andrew's church was filled and it was necessary to throw open the Annex to accommodate all. The service was conducted by Rev. Isaac Nelson, former Methodist minister of Huntingdon. With him in the pulpit was the Rev. Mr. Hughes. The choir was composed of Masons. Mr. Nelson's sermon was:

Much more than I can express to-day to you does the pastor of this church who is away for a much needed rest regret that because of distance, when one of the homes of his parish is overshadowed with bereavement and more especially when that bereavement has visited where one of his now translated predecessors in the pastoral office once resided and from which this day the remains of so important and influential a citizen as the Editor and proprietor of the Huntingdon Gleaner have been borne and accompanied here by such a large assemblage of his brethren of the Masonic Fraternity, of which he was a Past Master—much more than I can express to you does he regret his inability to be present at these obsequies.

I would indeed he might have been with us. I am more than thankful however that in his absence, as a friend of the family, having a very warm attachment for the departed, and also as Chaplain of the local fraternity, it was possible for me to be present, and together with my brethren of Chateaugay Lodge pay this last tribute of love and admiration to the memory of a dear brother beloved.

On hearing of the death of Mr. Sellar and of the kind request to come and conduct this service, I said to Mrs. Nelson, "What would you think would be the most suitable words to use on this occasion?" We have known Leslie both of us favourably and well. And Mrs. Nelson opened her Bible and read to me these words found in Ephesians Chap. IV, and Verse one.

"I therefore the prisoner of the Lord beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye have been called."

These words were so truly fitting to our translated friend that they were at once accepted in preference to anything else thought of and thus became the Scripture portion for this service.

The War
In August 1914, there broke upon the world that great Armageddon of which there had been murmurings and rumblings for a number of years. Of these rumblings of war some had spoken but triflingly and others as being but of little consequence. But prophets of keener insight into world affairs, more accurately discerning the signs of the times declared that they forecast all too definitely the inevitable—the greatest international conflict and clash of arms of all time.

When war was actually declared it soon became clearly understood that it would make the greatest demands upon and impose the most stupendous toll of our splendid young manhood ever known. In that awful hour men heard the clarion call from every quarter of the globe. And among those millions who thus fought for civilization, for freedom, for home and native land, for the faith once delivered unto the saints,—fought with a spirit and determination that could not be misunderstood; and in the training of young men for the service of the air was Leslie Watson Sellar of the Huntingdon Gleaner, whose mortal remains lie before us to-day, and whose voice is hushed for ever in the stillness of death.

I am fully persuaded that if the Church of Christ upon the Earth had been as much to the great Commission committed to her trust by the head of the Church, Had she been as much alive to the highest interests of mankind as the nations of the world had been for years to selfish ambitions and world domination, the great Armageddon would never have materialized. It might and would have been averted. The best thinking part of the world have ever thought so. In fact the greatest Prime Minister in the world believes that it is only the Church can save us from even a worse catastrophe, namely the utter destruction of civilization. If Jesus therefore is given the right of way in human affairs, He will not only subdue every opposing spirit but will also make all things new.

I also further believe that when the Great War did at last break out, that great army of men who volunteered for service among our allies were just as truly called of God to do so as the first missionaries were commissioned to proclaim the Gospel of Christ to the Gentile world. This man, whose demise we mourn to-day, casting aside therefore all fear for himself and seeing the menace which so threatened the freedom of the world, left his beloved home and business, put on the King's uniform and crossed the ocean and until the power of the invader and of militarism was completely broken for the time being, did he

FAIR ARRANGEMENTS PROCEEDING

Dinner To Be Served by St. John's Church

At a meeting of the Directors of Huntingdon Fair on Friday night the tender of St. John's Church to serve dinner in the dining hall on Fair days was accepted. For the first time in many years there were two tenders for it. The Huntingdon Methodist church offered $40 for the privilege. The St. John's offer was $55.

It was also decided to make arrangements with the local club on an International League game on one of the Fair days. It has not been decided what teams will play on the other. The West family of Montreal have been engaged to give platform amusement.

The cups for the fair are now on exhibition. That of the Bank of Montreal is most striking. The cup is not high, but well proportioned and made of sterling silver. It is being offered for the best display of cattle and must be won two years. The Canadian Bank of Commerce is also offering an attractive cup for the best display of registered Ayrshires and the Hon. Mr. Robb is offering a cup for the best display of heavy draft horses.

M. W. Leehy was appointed Special Superintendent on the petition of W. A. and A. H. Crutchfield to regulate a watercourse in the 6th range.

The Valuation Roll as amended was homologated and the bills of the valuator ordered paid as follows: Wm. Hamilton, $3; Arthur Taylor, $3; Talbot Irwin, $2.

By-law No. 165 levying a rate of taxation of 13 mills in each dollar of valuation for the current year was passed.

Place Names.

The charm of English place names is not only in their bewildering variety, but in the fact that almost all of them seem indigenous. At any rate, they are all rooted deep, from whatever original soil they came. Latin and Danish names have been weathered and mellowed in so many centuries of English history that one remembers only with an effort that they are not English in origin. Only the Norman names have the slightest tincture of foreign suggestion about them. French is still a rather tender exotic which needs to be trained against the sunny southern wall of the language. Beaulieu does not seem to belong naturally in Hampshire. But even to domesticate the names from the three or four other languages is no small triumph in verbal horticulture. — Christian Science Monitor.

Murdered the Clergy.

The Bolsheviks in Russia from 1917 to 1920 killed one Metropolitan, five archbishops and eighteen bishops, of whom thirteen were shot and nine tortured to death, according to a telegram sent by Archbishop Anthony, Metropolitan of Kiev, to the Archbishop of Canterbury, says the London Times. The Metropolitan says he has no information concerning the year 1921.

A Strange Fact.

According to a medical authority, the passengers who are asleep when a railway collision occurs escape most of the bad effects of shaking and concussion.

New Aerial Regulation.

The small Australian who flies a toy balloon or runs with his Japanese kite against the wind may offend against the majesty of the war precautions act. A new war regulation issued in February, 1920, gives power to the naval or military authorities in the commonwealth to declare any area a prohibited area for the flying of balloons during any specified period. "Balloon" is defined as anything up to an airship. The reason for this all-inclusive regulation was primarily the fight from Sydney to Melbourne of Sir Ross Smith, the airman who crossed the world from London to Darwin.

MURDER AT OWL'S HEAD

Man Killed Neighbor then Committed Suicide

Saturday Owl's Head was the scene of a ghastly murder when Eugene Boyea was shot and killed in the presence of his wife and child, by Frank Whitmore, a neighboring trapper.

Whitmore and Boyea both lived on the Ragged Lake road a mile and a half south of Owl's Head. Boyea, with his wife and son, William, was going berrying in a patch near their home. Whitmore resented their intrusion in the patch which he seemed to consider his own although it was not on his property. He warned Boyea that if he went berrying there he would be sorry. Boyea defied him and started ahead. Whitmore raised his rifle and fired five times. One bullet penetrated Boyea's body just above the groin. He fell dead in the road. Whitmore deliberately reloaded the gun, placed the muzzle against his head and fired, blowing out his brains. His body lay only a short distance from that of his victim.

The shooting is believed to have been the outgrowth of an old grudge held by Whitmore against Boyea. He is said to have threatened to take Boyea's life some time ago, but when Boyea told him he would notify the authorities regarding the threat and have Whitmore locked up, the latter appeared to retract and told Boyea they would let bygones be bygones and that he need fear no further trouble.

The shooting occurred at a cross-roads near Whitmore's home. Whitmore, carrying a rifle, went out into the road as the Boyea rig approached. Only a few words passed between the two men. Whitmore seemed infuriated at Boyea's calm indifference to his threat and when the latter started his horse to proceed toward the berry patch he swore a terrible oath and drew the high powered rifle to his shoulder. Before the onlookers could realize the seriousness of the quarrel the enraged man had fired. Boyea's dead body toppled from the buggy into the dusty road. Another shot rang out and Whitmore crumpled up where he stood, blood streaming from a gaping wound in his head.

POWERS COURT

Earl and Alton, young sons of Mr. Elmer McHardy of Seymour, Conn., are again visiting at the home of their uncle, E. A. McHardy after spending some time with their aunt, Mrs. McCormick, White's Station. There was a large attendance at the Methodist church Sunday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Davis, the new pastor, is a gifted speaker. Mrs. Elvin Wood has kindly offered her services as organist for a little while and has an embryo choir in training.

Our custom officers have been very busy, so that American friends cannot visit relatives on this side of the line, without going to Atholston to report.

Miss Maud Simm spent a few days in Montreal last week.

Mrs. Crushion and little son of Valleyfield are the guests of her mother, Mrs. Jas. McClatchie.

Miss Eva Todd spent a few days with her school-mate, Miss Gladys Ross.

DON'T TICKLE THE CELLIST

Happening at Detroit Shows the Unwisdom of That Particular Form of Playfulness.

One should never tickle a cello player in the ribs, especially if he is a famous one such as Phillip Abbas of the Detroit Symphony orchestra, remarks the Detroit News in a recent issue. Graham Harris, second violinist, did, and it almost cost him a lot of trouble, to say nothing of a new violin bow.

The story came out when Harris filed a suit for $100 in justice court against Abbas. It was a story of temperament and temper and the trouble arose at rehearsal. Ossip Gabrilowitsch, director, was away for a few minutes, and the temperamental one indulged in a few moments of playboy, not music. Harris reached his violin bow over and tickled Abbas in the ribs. Abbas does not care to be tickled in his ribs and he swung a wicked cello bow to demonstrate that he did not care for tickling. There was a snap and the second violinist's best bow was a mess and a wreckage.

"Ah, ha," shouted Harris. "You have broken my bow. You shall pay." "Shant," shouted Abbas. "Your own fault. You had no business in my ribs." They glared and then the director appeared and the fight was dropped. It was taken up again via a justice court suit. It is believed that the suit never will be heard. The orchestra manager heard about it first. He got the men together, scolded, fumed, argued, coaxed and at last won. They shook hands. The damage was settled. And harmony of both sorts reigned.

FIRE IN HUNTINGDON

Poor Fire Pressure Causes Much Comment

For the second time within two months buildings adjacent to the O'Connor Building have been on fire. Some weeks ago the property of Mrs. Moriarty on Chateaugay st. was burned, on Wednesday morning the house occupied by Sam Monette and owned by Mrs. F. H. Lachance went up in flames. The building was of frame construction and by time fire was discovered everything seemed to be ablaze. The family escaped, but all the contents of the house were lost. It is an old building and the flames soon broke through the roof. The night was comparatively calm, a light north-westerly wind blowing the sparks down over Chateaugay st. Fortunately fires did not break out in other buildings for the water pressure was miserable. The fact was clearly shown when a small barn to the rear of the dwelling took fire. The flames were around the gables, but the streams from the hose were hardly strong enough to reach up to put them out.

In a town like Huntingdon, where many of the buildings are of wood the only hope when fire breaks out is to have plenty of water and at once. The last two fires have shown that this is not the state of affairs just now and the Aldermen should at once see that proper protection is given.

The cause of the fire has not been ascertained.

VALUABLE WHEAT AND STOCK

FARM FOR SALE

Four miles N. E. Kenaston, Saskatchewan on the Canadian National R. R. between Regina and Saskatoon, 50 miles south of Saskatoon. This is considered the best combine farm in the province. 125 acres of permanent pasture that will pasture between 75 and 100 head of stock in the dryest season, balance 675 acres under cultivation. Soil is of the choicest chocolate loam, free from stone and noxious weeds and does not blow even in the dryest season. Seven years ago this land was all in raw prairie so that land is all new. There is a lovely grove of about 500 trees set out and all in a thriving condition. There are about 6 miles of woven wire fence, barbed top and cedar posts; about 3 miles of barbed wire fence, tamarack posts. On this farm there is a seven roomed house, full cement basement, sink and soft water tank. Good stable for 12 head work horses, also ample room for 12 head milk cows and young stock. Frame stock barn suitable for 50 head of stock to run loose. Spring well in front of this barn also good well with wind-mill in front of other barn. Cement granary with corrugated iron roof, four bins with passage in centre; chopper and engine in passage. Capacity of granary 6000 bushels. Pigery same dimensions, cap. 100 hogs. Chicken house partitioned off for different sorts of fowls. Garage and implement shed for all necessary machinery.

This land is the choicest wheat land and never missed a paying crop. Were I to farm this land myself I would put on 60 head of Black Polo cows and sell their calves every Fall which will command ordinarily $40 each. As these cattle are so adapted to this climate they will winter well on oat and wheat straw and run loose in stock barn, which will mean scarcely no work whatever in the winter. I experimented along these lines myself while running farm and found that it worked out very satisfactory.

Three four horse outfits will operate this farm in the summer. This land is now under lease. About 600 acres in grain. Will sell with my one third crop included or without. Can give possession in March, 1923. Price $60 per acre without crop with a substantial cash payment and balance to suit purchasers. Can sell 700 acres of said land as a neighbor will buy 100.

This is an unusual good neighborhood, mostly Americans. Any farmer in the east that has two or three boys, I think would do well to look over this land before harvest as I figure there can be more money made and less work on this farm than a farm in the East.

Object of selling is that I have only one boy who does not care to farm. Keep this in mind when your boys are coming out from the harvest excursion and have them look over this land. Can produce clear title.

The Huntingdon Gleaner

Published by the Executors of the Late Leslie W. Sellar.

HUNTINGDON Q. Aug. 24th 1922.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

Little did anyone think that Leslie W. Sellar would be editor of the Huntingdon Gleaner for only three years. His death at the early age of thirty-four years and ten months adds another to those startling circumstances that draw our attention periodically to the uncertainties of life. The middle of June saw him able to umpire a strenuous ball game, three days later he went to the hospital to have two lungs removed from his neck. The doctors hesitated, for his lungs seemed to be still weak from the flu of 1918, but ten days later thought that his strength was sufficient to cut open the neck and to clean out the diseased glands. At first it seemed as though the operation was successful, then came a reaction and he was kept to his bed unable to move. Deciding that he might do better at home in the fresher air of the country the change was made, but day by day he weakened. Flashing up with surprising turns for the better he dropped lower and then still lower until all hope of recovery was lost and on Thursday afternoon just as cooler shades of the day were beginning to come his breathing became laboured and the dreaded climax had arrived. Two hours later he was dead.

The life of an elderly man is easy to judge, that of Leslie Sellar was more difficult. Much that he had started, much that he was planning for, had never reached a stage where the strength or weaknesses could be seen. Yet if the doctrine of the war years be accepted—"Life is not of years but of deeds"—he has had a share. Blessed with a strong body and ready skill for games he was prominent in athletics. In the war years he was in the Flying Corps, resigning with the rank of Flight Commander. In business he had trebled the affairs of the Gleaner and was gaining a wider knowledge and interest all the time. Gruff in days of health he showed in the last illness of two months a consideration for others that was remarkable. So passes the second editor.

This issue of the Gleaner appears under the management of his brothers who will continue the efforts of the Sellar family from the day that the first issue appeared to make each issue of the Gleaner better than the one before.

The Entente in Danger

The Reparation Commission under the Treaty of Versailles held a conference at London, England, last week. All the Allies, including Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium were represented. The main purpose of the meeting was to consider Great Britain's proposal of a moratorium under which Germany would have until 1924 to make further payments to the Allies on account of the indemnity now payable to them by her according to the Treaty of Versailles. The occasion was marked by a disagreement and a sharp verbal encounter between Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain and Premier Poincaré of France, Poincaré going so far as to declare that should the Allies grant the suggested delay he would immediately despatch a French Army to collect from Germany the money now payable to France. For a time it looked as if the present Entente between Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium would be destroyed. Immediate meetings of the English and French Cabinets were held and both unanimously endorsed the stand taken by their respective Premiers. These occurrences caused a world sensation and have been the subject of discussion everywhere.

capacity for leadership. Notwithstanding statements in the press to the contrary, there is a widespread impression that the Liberals mismanaged the election and the government, although it has won an electoral fight, has really sustained a moral defeat.

Dairy Production

The United States Census department has just issued a statement showing the increased production of milk during the past fifty years in the Republic. In 1871 the average amount of milk sold off a farm per cow was 1,771 pounds. Last year the production was 2,622. While this increase shows that the production has improved 53 per cent, still the amount demonstrates that the farmers are not getting all they should. The figures are American, but probably a like comparison would be made on the Canadian side. The struggle for better farming methods is an unceasing one. The publicity gained by the good districts, and the good dairymen causes us to shut our eyes to the weaknesses of others. Individually the fact that one farmer gets a small production and is not prospering, may appear to be just an unfortunate circumstance, but when a country as a whole is considered the national loss must be tremendous. Even when all the good dairymen push their cows to the limit the national average is but 2,622 pounds. What must be the earning power of the lowest producers? Indeed experts would soon say that a cow that only produces 2,622 pounds represents an actual loss, so the dairymen business is operated at a loss in the United States. The present day is a critical one in the farming business of Canada. The migration to the cities is depopulating the rural districts to a certain extent, but food must and will be produced. The root of the trouble lies in the methods of farming. If progressive methods are used, and the maximum of income secured for the labor less discontent would be noticeable. Farming is a great specializing business, and the sooner a great many farmers recognize this and use more forethought and commonsense the better. Too many refuse to face facts and won't learn in actual figures what their herds are producing. Too many others would refuse to buy a defective tin of canned food lest their families be poisoned, but who will sell their milk without caring whether it contains tubercular germs or not. That is not good business.

Many expressions of regret have been heard during the week at the early passing away in life of the late editor of the Gleaner, Leslie W. Sellar.

The Mission Band members enjoyed a visit from Miss Hope Jack at their meeting on Thursday, and were quite interested in hearing her tell about Mexico and the school where she does Mission work.

The Bowling Club sent two rinks into Montreal last week to play a friendly game with the Westmount Club, as this was the first game played with an outside team, since the organization of the Club the result was highly satisfactory to the home team, as they were only defeated by eight shots on one rink and six on the other in 21 ends.

The baseball game on Tuesday between Ormstown and Huntingdon resulted in a victory for the home team by 13 to 12, the locals were short their regular pitcher, so that the winning of the game came as a surprise. Earl Melkie pitched good ball until the seventh inning, when the Huntingdon team landed hard on the ball getting the lead by four runs, and won the game as they thought, but in the last half of the ninth, everything came Ormstown's way and the match was won.

The macadam gangs, though in full swing, lost a day for want of stones. It was too bad for they were progressing fast. They are now past the church in the village with the last coat of stones before the bituminous coat. If nothing happens the road will be completed for the Fall.

The frame for the cattle building on the Fair ground was put up Tuesday and the whole building will be completed by the first week in September. It is a building similar to those on Ormstown Fair grounds.

Last Friday we had a regular thunderstorm with a heavy rain that laid down the corn and oats badly. It will make it very hard to cut them with the binder.

Two daughters of Nap. Mallette employed as stenographers with the firm of Beaulieu, Gouin, Marin & Mercier, 11 Place d'Armes, Montreal, are spending a week's holiday at their father's home in this village. They are accompanied by their cousin, Jeanne Doré of St. Remi, who is a daughter of Napoleon Doré, formerly a merchant at St. Urbain Premier.

The Boy Scouts' Field Day was a failure owing to the inclemency of the weather. A good crowd attended the pictures in the evening. The total proceeds were $98. Much credit is due Scoutmaster Dunlop for the way in which the Scouts acted their parts. They had been well drilled Sunday being the occasion of her 71st birthday, Mrs. John Cookman of Henrysburg was quite pleasantly surprised by a visit from all her children (two sons and two daughters) and nineteen grandchildren. Only one grandchild, who is in the West was not present. Mrs. Cookman was presented with a beautiful leather handbag and received all good wishes for many such happy birthdays. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Collings were among the invited guests.

Miss Ethel Fisher spent the week end at the home of Mr. Findlay Fisher.

The Designation Service of Miss Bessie Cairns which took place in St. Andrew's Church Thursday evening, August 17th was very largely attended. Miss Cairns was presenter with a Bible and a gold watch by the W. M. S. Among the speakers were Mrs. Kinnear, President of the Presbyterian W. M. S., Revs. Messrs. Murray, A. S. Ross, Ballantyne, St. Aubin and Sproule. The special collection amounted to $39.

Local Masons attending the funeral of the late Leslie Sellar of Huntingdon were Dr. De Moulplied, Mr. Ellerton and Mr. McClatchie.

MONTEAL WHOLESALE MARKETS

The standard expression for the markets this week is that "It's easy." Prices are holding fairly firmly with an upward tendency in those departments where the late summer supply demands a rise, and in others where the market is more heavily stocked the drops are slow and gradual. Perhaps calves have shown the greatest strength during the week and the markets each day this week report stonker prices each day. A few good veals brought $8. Medium ones went for $7.50. Lambs were numerous and this week it has taken several days to clean out Monday morning's shipments.

J. A. LAPOINTE DEAD

A figure well known about the Court House in Valleyfield passed forever from the scene yesterday when Mr. J. Arthur Lapointe died. Mr. Lapointe had been ailing for the past two years and dies an elderly man, being over 71 years of age. His wife, three sons and four daughters survive him.

again sheathe his sword and return to his native land.

How far the results of to-day in the case of Leslie Sellar are to be attributed to the nerve strain, to the suffering and exposure of these days can be understood only by the professional mind. But to us who constitute the lay mind it would not be at all surprising were we informed that the seeds of this day's harvest were implanted during the process of that world struggle.

His Profession

No sooner had he returned from the scene of militarism and carnage, than he entered with all zeal and enthusiasm upon the work of his chosen vocation; and of which there was no doubt he was truly called, namely, that of Journalism. Most assuredly one of the most important in the world, the instructing and moulding of public opinion.

In this Robert Sellar, of very precious memory, had been one of the mightiest forces for righteousness as Editor and Author in Eastern Canada for half a century and one of the greatest stalwarts of our Dominion. And now the son steps into and assumes for himself this important task. How successful he has been and how excellent he has proved himself to be is evidenced by the remarkable growth of his business which has required the services of a staff of from ten to fifteen to meet its growing demands, and the claim of the Gleaner to be the best News and Advertising medium of the District is indeed a very modest claim. Its influence extends vastly beyond the confines of that domain.

His Venture

It signified a good deal to make such a venture as he did three years ago in connection with the business; but the splendid results have more than justified the wisdom of the experiment. They have evinced very distinctly the far seeing mind the new Editor and proprietor possessed, and there can be no doubt whatever that had he been spared he would have developed into one of the great journalists of Canada. He had the business instinct, the taste for the profession. His passing therefore must needs be recorded as a distinct loss.

Mr. Sellar was also a most practical and useful citizen. He associated and identified himself with every interest of the Town and community that made for improvement. There was seldom any enterprise of any kind for the welfare of the town but he was identified therein in some form.

When meetings were called of the citizens to discuss the advisability of inaugurating anything that would further increase and extend the interests of the town and adjoining municipalities, you would invariably find the Editor of the Gleaner present. Of course he was there perhaps as the representative of the press of the community as a wide-awake man, but that was not all. He was there also because of the deep practical interest he felt in his home town and in whatever work for its benefit. The public spirit which should always characterize us all, found expression in him, on every occasion. Though such occasions were at times but slimly attended you generally found him present with wise counsel and suggestion and his contributions on all such occasions were wise and judicious. There can be no doubt whatever, had he been spared to you, he would have been called in the near future to occupy a position on the Board of Aldermen for municipal affairs and also to preside over its deliberations, and would have done so with credit to himself and the cause he served.

Mr. Sellar was a representative man and citizen in the realm of sport. And whatever our grand old fathers may have thought of this, let us be assured of this fact we are living in a day when it is being universally recognized that our social nature is equally as important as any other. I do not know but what in the schools of higher education it stands among the very first of requisite requirements and in connection with all this part of our life I am in the deepest sympathy. Helpful, wholesome clean sport and pure social intercourse are not to be considered secondary and to give them a very secondary place in the program of life's varied exercises and attainments is to neglect a very important part of our education.

Our translated Brother threw himself into all this with the enthusiasm of an athletic competitor and did so for two reasons. 1. Because he thoroughly enjoyed it. From the time he was a youth he took great delight in the recreation and sports of the town, fully believing as he grew older they made for stronger and healthier manhood and I have noticed he was one who could always be depended upon to act his part "and see the thing through." The second reason, no less important, he believed it was for the good of the community, for the cultivation of the spirit of right understanding and goodwill in the community. There is nothing better than coming together for clearing away the cobwebs of misunderstanding. It must needs be that offences come, and oftentimes we are at a loss to know how they come. But when they do come the very best thing is to resolve the sun shall not go down upon your wrath, but cast out of your bosom any poison of misunderstanding the evil one would fain nourish.

To bring people together thus, therefore, in the realm of sport and social enjoyment locally, nationally and internationally is to contribute toward better feeling in the world, toward truer brotherhood. The men of that realm therefore have suffered a great loss in this respect and the juniors a real sympathizer in the passing of Mr. Sellar.

Power of Concentration

If a man is taken up with the work of his vocation, as indeed we all ought to be, it will demand his best and deepest thought. In working out life's problems in the field of very absent mindedness, however, indeed he may become so absorbed as to be oblivious of what is going on around him, even at the closest range, and may even be considered unfriendly. Not a few have judged Mr. Sellar thus. But this was not really so. In fact, it was the very opposite of this. The fact was he was very much absorbed in business, working out his plans. No one ever goes into business and made the ventures he did without getting down to a good deal of hard thinking. He knew what it signified to thus think and think hard, and he enjoyed the satisfactory results of such meditation.

In this perhaps he has set a splendid example for all youth. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do do it with thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest."

I am also pleased to bear testimony to another element so important in the realm of Journalism toward Temperance.

He was not what might be called a fanatic along that line, but his paper had the right ring about it. It was clear cut, you knew where he stood on a question so important. He was not afraid to speak and to speak out plainly. The traffic of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes was wrong, debasing. There is no regard for truth, uprightness, the sanctity of home, purity, yea, nor life itself if the traffic can only carry through its unscrupulous designs.

Mr. Sellar learned that there were in connection with the traffic two opposing elements to good, namely, perverted appetite and covetousness. The former rendered its victim a poor slave bound by an unbreakable chain. A craving that must be satisfied at the sacrifice of home and loved ones. Hence the poor dupe became the victim of unscrupulous and wicked men. The latter became the power which controlled governments and corporations to such an extent that the temptation to gain "filthy lucre" became overwhelming. The late Editor was pronounced against this octopus that wrought such disaster. We in fact blush with shame as we think of those engaged in the traffic. I have heard on every hand and over and over again both in these parts and also in those where I am now laboring such statements as the following: "You would be astonished if you knew the so-called good men who are engaged in this detestable work." Do not our cheeks grow crimson as we think of these people who otherwise enjoy good reputations, tampering with and giving consent to a traffic whose headquarters (outside the limited sphere of necessary service) are in the realm of darkness. I would that all these wherever found might hear my voice or its echo over the dead body of this journalist to-day. They are one and all opponents and enemies of the kingdom of grace and glory, and emissaries of that cruel power secretly working toward the undermining of all that is pure in the family circle.

The Brevity of Life to Walk Worthy of our chosen and Divinely appointed Vocation

It would seem to us that any one having given at the age of 34 years such satisfactory proof of good and useful citizenship should have been permitted to remain to make still further contributions toward this world's good. But the facts are otherwise. In making this statement however, I desire to speak wisely. I do not think God is to be blamed for the awful war of 1914-18. For all the millions who made the supreme sacrifice and millions of others who returned home broken and battle-scarred. No, it was not God's fault. The results of disobedience were there. The conditions had to be met. The conditions of national disobedience, national selfishness and unbelief. We went forth and by the help of God we met them successfully. But, Oh! at what a cost! and the world can never be the same again.

"The bird with the broken pinion Never soars as high again."

But John the Baptist at 32, General Wolfe at 34, and multitudes of others engaged in useful service who fell in the midst of their days, thank be to God have not lived in vain who thus lived to serve.

Our hearts are very sad, they could not be otherwise to-day as we are called upon to stand with bowed heads beside the tomb of Leslie Sellar at the age of 34. But I would like to emphasize the fact that his active aggressive life lived so intensely in these various spheres of public service and usefulness has not been a very sad thing. He was an example to the youth in the wide circle of his acquaintance and has surely in the arena of active service set up an example worthy of imitation.

Now I desire in closing to say a word with regard to our personal relation to our Lord and Master. Thank God, and the privilege of saying that word to him "while it was yet day." And I would like to say it to you when he is now silent, "and the silver cord is loosed." All these things I have said of Brother Sellar I know to be true, but they have not been done without the influences of heaven about him. The influence of a godly father, truly great and noble life, the influence of a Christian mother whose life of faithfulness in all that is good and true has been continuous and unbroken. The influence of a noble ancestry, whose service, whose prayers and whose faith have all been contributing to helpfulness. All these unseen powers of grace which are ever at work for our good have been around and about him as bulwarks of protection and as towers of strength.

What I would specially emphasize is that it is not sufficient to have been the recipient of these favors, neither to have shared in all the privileges and favors that Brotherhood brings. We must have a fraternity as signally blessed in many things. We are taught how to live in order to be the most useful to our fellowmen, and we are as assuredly reminded of the hour which awaits all men, the hour of our departure from this world. Yea, it does further than that, it informs us that trust in God and preparation to meet Him are essentials in order to assure our passport into the heavenly life. Let me urge therefore, to-day, the one thing we are in danger of lacking, so vital to truest efficiency and helpfulness here and to our eternal glory hereafter, namely, a definite surrender of your life to Jesus Christ, without the least fear that His demands will be too great for us. Brethren of the mystic tie. We need to fit us for the daily round and the common task, the living vital touch of the "Days-man," the full coming into our hearts of the Supreme Grand Master of the Universe, who dethrones wrong, who breaks the power of, and abolishes evil habit, and who leads men into the fulness of victory over sin, making them masters of themselves. "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his own spirit than he that taketh a city."

I had the privilege of a heart talk with our late Worshipful Brother in the Hospital. It was one of many talks as we often met and conversed together as he passed and repassed, hence there grew up between us a friendship deep and abiding. I visited him as he lay in his cot in the hospital, on my way to my new field of labor, and later sought the privilege of going with him indirectly through correspondence right into the immediate presence of the King. May I say to you, and many of you know it to be true by personal experience when this vital relationship with Christ is realized, by a personal surrender of your life to Him it surpasses all other joys the heart of man can know.

The poet has expressed it thus: "I come to the garden alone, While the dew is still on the roses; And the voice I hear, falling on my ear;

The Son of God discloses. He speaks, and the sound of His Voice Is so sweet the birds hush their singing, And the melody that he gave to me, Within my heart is ringing. And He walks with me, and He talks with me And He tells me I am His own, And the joy we share as we tarry there None other has ever known."

"Thus, walk we worthy of the vocation wherewith we have been called." Amen.

MAN AGED 134 DIES

Veracity Supported by Former Local Resident

Generally claims of extreme age are accepted with a shrug, but a clipping comes to hand which is interesting and at the same time is supported as being accurate by a married daughter of Mr. J. S. Dunning who formerly resided here but who lives in Saskatoon now.

"Uncle" John Shell, "the oldest man in the world," who said he was 134 years old, died last week at his home near Hyden, Kentucky, and was buried with two of his sons, William Shell, 90 and Albert Shell, 7, as mourners at his grave, according to reports received in Hazard Tuesday.

"Uncle" John, it was said, retained his faculties up to the last, and discussed the funeral arrangements with his relatives while he was dying. He had always maintained that he was born in Tennessee in 1788, the son of Samuel Shell, a gun maker, and that he had lived in the little cabin on Greasy Creek, in which he died, for more than 100 years.

Up until the time he was "discovered" about four years ago, "Uncle" John had led a secluded life in the mountain country, but since then he had traveled considerably.

He had appeared several times at the State Fair at Louisville and at that in 1919 he took his first airplane ride.

On his visit to cities "Uncle" John told newspaper interviewers that he remembered once to have seen Daniel Boone, and that he recalled the general mourning that followed the death of George Washington. He said he was too old to enlist in the Mexican War.

As recently as three years ago "Uncle" John was represented to have been a crack shot with the rifle. At a shooting match held on his farm in the autumn of 1919, he is said to have beaten a grandson, 25 years old, shooting at a target.

The patriarch was examined by a number of physicians in the last few years who were skeptical of his claims about his age. While some of them discounted his story by a score or more years, nearly all said that he must have been over 100. His neighbors in Leslie County were convinced that he was as old as he said he was.

The chief proof on which "Uncle" John based his claims to antiquity was a paper dated 1809 showing that John Shell had paid his taxes to the Sheriff of Clay County. The old man argued that he must have been at least 21 years old before he began to pay taxes.

In his young manhood, he said, he helped his father in the making of flintlock rifles, and it was said that it could be proved that he was the maker of the old-time rifles preserved in historic collections.

"Uncle" John was twice married, and he said that his first wife died shortly after he passed the century mark. A few years later he married again and the son aged seven is a result of the second marriage. His oldest child is said to be a daughter, 99 years old. He had great-grandchildren, who were older than his youngest son. The Shell family is supposed to have come from Holland to Pennsylvania 200 years ago.

"Uncle" John at the time of his last appearance in the lowlands weighed 130 pounds, was 5 feet 5 inches tall, never wore shoes much and chewed tobacco inveterately. He grew three sets of teeth during his lifetime, he said.

CABBAGE WORM

August and September are the two bad months for the cabbage worm. The beautiful white butterfly, the adult of the cabbage worm, may be seen in large numbers in most gardens flying among the cabbage, cauliflower and turnips, depositing her eggs on the leaves. This insect should be attacked in time before it causes too much damage to the vegetable foliage by eating out numerous holes. A dust made up of 1 part arsenate of lead to 10 parts hydrated lime and placed in a bran sack and shaken over the plants once a week is a good method of control. Another excellent remedy is to spray the plants with a solution of arsenate of lead (paste), ¼ pound to 10 gallons water. If the insects are very bad it will be necessary to make up a mixture of 1 ounce Paris green to 1½ gallons middlings (shorts or bran) and apply a little to each plant by hand. Spread with the thumb and finger so that a small portion of the poison bait will fall at the base of the leaves. In small gardens, where only a few plants are to be treated, pyrethrum powder, 1 ounce to 1½ gallons water, will be found very valuable if sprayed in time. To control any insect pest it is necessary to spray ahead of the damage that might be done, not after.

Most Cattle Are Dehorned.

All the market-topping cattle which are sold at the largest live stock terminals are dehorned nowadays and even heifers equipped with such fighting paraphernalia are now discriminated against by the buyers.

Suitable Soil for Alfalfa.

Land where crimson clover or cowpeas has been grown for several years and turned under in a green state, is suitable for alfalfa when given a dressing of manure just before seeding.

BUTCHERING LAMBS EXPLAINED FULLY

New Pamphlet Issued by Ottawa Throws Light on Important Subject Pamphlet No. 8 of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, for which the Live Stock Branch is responsible, is really a text book on the art of properly killing lambs, and the dressing and cutting of the carcasses, so that there shall be the least possible waste and the greatest profit. It is generously illustrated, showing in precise manner all the different operations required for the dressing and cutting of the carcass and preservation of the pelt.

Should Prevent Waste

It is not difficult to understand that, as the pamphlet says, through careless handling in killing, dressing and cutting, much waste may result, and that the flesh may even depreciate in flavor. Every operation required is clearly and explicitly defined, and at the end there are suggestions as to the manner in which lamb rings can be formed similar to, or within, beef rings, so that farmers themselves may enjoy some of the choice meat that they have bred and fed.

There is also in the pamphlet, which can be obtained without cost by writing to the Publications Branch, Ottawa, some excellent counsel on organized distribution for local markets, by following which farmers can become their own middlemen. Attractiveness is a good salesman, and, therefore, the suggestion that carcasses should be kept cool, free from dust and flies, certainly commends itself.

Why Pianos Strike.

This story might also be called, "You can't blame them." It is about a piano that stood in the school building at Lexington, Ind., that has been torn down to give place to a new building. For safety the piano was placed in the Presbyterian church and as it was difficult to tell which was C sharp and which was B flat, a tuner was called. The catalogue of "finds" included one song book, two delectable drinking cups, nearly a pint of chalk, one ink bottle, 13 six-penny nails and two spiders, all extracted from the interior. It is said the pupils at high school tried all ways of playing it, from walking across the keys to playing jazz music, and the average person couldn't be sure at any time which of the two was on the program.

RULER FLEES FROM ALIMONY

King Mike Fogel Goes Back to His South Sea Isle and His Dusky Life Partner.

The divine right of kings theory means, briefly, that a king can pay no alimony.

That, at least is the interpretation of King Mike Fogel I, sovereign of the South sea isle of Moorea, and all Pacific way stations within canoeing distance.

King Mike has just returned to his principality, his queen and his coconut grove, leaving his morganatic, or commoner, wife in San Francisco, sans alimony, and a cabaret jazz band without a good slipshorn player. The king did not leave ceremoniously. He went, incoz, through a porthole, and the police in San Francisco are what you might call baffled, to use an original word.

King Mike's kingship smacks of South sea romance.

Before he was a king, he was a slipshorn player in good standing in the San Francisco union, and all dues paid. He had a wife and paid his grocery bills prompt like.

Then he got the itchy foot. He went to Moorea and the wife of his bosom saw nothing of him for years. But Mike was busy. He married her royal highness, Princess Taata Mata, native queen of Moorea, and became the most worshipped loafer on the island.

The queen sent him to San Francisco to market the annual coconut crop. The first person he met on the pier was his first wife. Despite his protestations to Officer Mahoney that he was a king, he was hauled into court and ordered to pay $50 monthly alimony.

The king told the court that his chancellor of the exchequer was out, but that he would get a job slipshorning and follow the judicial dictates. He did. He got a job in his old orchestra, playing nights in a cabaret. Daytime he carried out the wishes of his queen and marketed the coconut crop.

But a red-headed wife appeared in court and told the judge that the king and paid no alimony. A chamberlain was sent for him.

His slipshorn was gone from the orchestra and the piano player told the chamberlain that King Mike had taken the suite reserved in the stoke-hole of a trader for the king of Moorea and had left—South sea bound.

THE HUMORS OF LIFE

"Holy Water" Seized for Contraband Liquor

A raid in Constableville, N. Y. resulted in a huge joke on the officials. The District Attorney and two deputies rushed into a place known as Zimmer's flashed a search warrant and began the hunt for booze. The bar and the space below and to the rear of it yielded nothing stronger than loganberry juice. The cellar proved even less fruitful, and Mr. Smith, the District Attorney, decided to search the house, which was attached to the hotel proper. At last, he espied something which looked promising—a quart jar, transparently colorless and filled with a liquid that looked as though it might be gin or corn whiskey. The manner in which it was hidden in the rear of the closet lent an even stronger suspicion. The jar was opened with due deliberation. Mr. Smith sniffed and ever tasted of the liquid. It offended neither the nostrils nor the palate. He passed it to another, who was admittedly a good judge of firewater. He, too, sniffed and sipped. No kick. Dumbfounded, Mr. Smith inquired of one of the women standing by "What is this stuff, anyhow?" "Holy water," was the response. The raid ended right there.

Willing to oblige a suave customer from Vancouver, John Prevedoros, head of a fruit firm with branches in Vancouver and elsewhere, cashed a small cheque without looking hard at the name. It was signed "Knott A. Red." The signer had "not a red" in the bank.

617,285 AUTO TOURISTS

This Motor Traffic Represents Expenditure of $108,000,000 a Year

A remarkable increase in the volume of motor traffic into Canada is shown by returns compiled by the department of customs. According to their registrations, 617,285 automobiles entered Canada for touring purposes during the last calendar year. This figure compares with a figure of only 93,300 for the previous calendar year.

Of the total number of cars registered in the last calendar year 615,074 remained in the Dominion for less than one month and 2,211 for more than one but less than six months. The parks branch of the department of the interior has calculated an expenditure in Canada of more than $108,000,000; and it is estimated by the same authority that on a basis of five per cent "improved roads are worth over two billion dollars without taking into account the service they render Canadians themselves."

The parks branch estimate of expenditure in Canada by motor tourists is based on a stay of seven days for the larger number of cars and 30 days for the smaller number, while the daily expenditure is put at $25 and $20 for the latter.

The registrations in the different provinces were: Nova Scotia, 223; Prince Edward Island, 22; New Brunswick, 1,826; Quebec, 43,264; Ontario, 537,283; Manitoba, 3,080; Saskatchewan, 427; Alberta, 363; British Columbia, 25,957.

They Want what they read about

The standards of living for the average family in Canada grow higher each year. The luxuries of yesterday are the necessities of to-day. People in the smaller towns and on farms want the newer things they read about.

Dry Goods Stores, Grocers, Shoe, Hardware and Paint Stores, in the smaller towns, all find they can show the newest things by carrying small stocks of them and re-ordering by Long Distance. The jobber or manufacturer's warehouse is at their elbow — their order departments are alert for telephone trade!

Shipments are often made the same day. Up-to-date-ness of merchandise is no longer confined to the big city stores — and large sums are not locked up in stock.

Try it. Have a big store in a small town. "Use the Bell to Sell" — and to Buy.

Every Bell Telephone is a Long Distance Station

THE GREAT IMPERSONATION

Seaman's little bow to the chairman was good-natured, tolerant, a little wistful. The Duke's few words, preceded by an indignant protest against the intrusion of a German propagandist into an English parlour, were, however, did nothing to undo the effect produced by this undesired stranger. When the meeting broke up it was doubtful whether a single adherent had been gained to the cause of National Service. The Duke went home full of wrath, and Seaman chuckled with genuine merriment as he stepped into the taxi which had been secured at the corner of the street.

"I promised you entertainment," he observed. "Confess that I have kept my word."

Dominey smiled enigmatically. "You certainly succeeded in making me feel of a number of respectable and well-meaning men."

"The miracle of it extends further," Seaman agreed. "Tonight, in this way, is a supreme example of the inconceivable follies of democracy. England is being slowly cooked and strangled with too much liberty. She is like a child being overruled with jam. Imagine, in our dear country, an Englishman being allowed to mount the platform and speak, undisturbed, English propaganda in deadly opposition to German interests. The so-called liberty of the Englishman is like the cuckoo in a political nest. Countries must be governed. They cannot govern themselves. The time of war will prove all that."

"Yet in any great crisis of a nation's history," Dominey queried, "surely there is safety in a multitude of counsellors?"

"There would be always a multitude of counsellors," Seaman replied, "in German as in England. The trouble for this country is that they would be all expressed publicly and in the press, each view would have its adherents, and the Government would be split up into factions. In Germany, the real destinies of the country are decided in secret. There are counsellors there, too, earnest and wise counsellors, but no one knows their varying views. All that one learns is the result, spoken through the lips of the Kaiser, spoken once and for all."

Dominey was showing signs of a rare interest in his companion's conversation. His eyes were bright, his usually impassive features seemed to have become more mobile and strained. He laid his hand on Seaman's arm.

"Listen," he said, "we are in London, alone in a taxicab, secure against any possible eavesdropping. You preach the advantage of our Kaiser-led country. Do you really believe that the Kaiser is the man for the task which is coming?"

Seaman's narrow eyes glittered. He looked at his companion in satisfaction. His forehead was puckered, his eternal smile gone. He was the man of intellect.

"So you are waking up from the lethargy of Africa, my friend!" he exclaimed. "You are beginning to think. As you ask me, so shall I answer. The Kaiser is a vain, bombastic dreamer, the greatest egotist who ever lived, with a diseased personality, a ceaseless craving for the limelight. But he has also the genius for government, I mean this: he is a splendid medium for the expression of the brain power of his counsellors. Their words will pass through his personality, and he will believe them. What is more, they will sound like his. He will sell himself to the knight in shining armour. All Europe will bow down before this self-imagined Caesar, and no one except we who are behind will realise the man's head. There is no one else in this world whom I have ever met so well fitted to lead our great nation to its destiny she deserves. And now, my friend, tomorrow, if you like, we will speak of these matters again. Tonight, you have other things to think about. You are going into the great places where I never penetrate. You have an hour to change and prepare. At eleven o'clock he Prince von Terloff will expect you."

AFTER YOU, ALPHONSE

Paris.—Owing to the excessive politeness of all present, the King of Spain, for 2,000 francs, acquired a horse he did not want to buy at the sale of Prince Murat's yearlings at Deauville. The King, who is visiting the resort incognito, as the Duke of Toledo, wishing to give a mark of esteem to Prince Murat, attended the sale of the latter's yearlings. Having no desire, however, to actually buy a horse, the King merely opened proceedings with a nominal offer of two thousand francs for a horse called Ogresse. But he had not reckoned with the respect for etiquette of all the others present. The King having bid, nobody else liked to go any better, the result being that Ogresse was knocked down to him for practically nothing.

OVERSIZE TIRES ALTER INDICATOR

Alterations of Wheels Necessitate Change in Speedometer Gears

Sometimes, a change is made in the diameter of the tires used upon a car and occasionally the bevel gear and pinion are changed for gears of different numbers of teeth in order to secure a higher or lower driving ratio. Both alterations necessitate a corresponding change in the driving gears of the speedometer or it will indicate incorrectly.

For example, suppose that the speedometer is operated from a front wheel, and the front tires are changed from 32 x 3 1/2 to 33 x 4 inch. With the larger tires, the car will travel 31 per cent. farther for each wheel turn than formerly, but as the mileage indication is based upon the wheel turns credit will not be given for the additional mileage covered, and when 103.1 miles have actually been traveled the odometer will show but 100 miles. Speed indications are also proportionally low and a change in the speedometer gears is required. Changing rear tire size or final drive ratio, does not affect the accuracy of a front driven speedometer.

Now suppose that the speedometer is driven from the transmission. A change of front wheel tire size will not affect its indications, but altering rear tire diameter produces exactly the same error as changing front tire size does with the front-driven speedometer. The transmission-driven speedometer indication depends upon drive shaft turns and is thus affected by changes in the final gear ratio. If the final drive ratio is made lower, the rear wheels travel a less distance for each drive shaft turn and the mileage indication is greater than it should be and vice versa. For example, substituting a 4 to 1 ratio for a 4 1/2 to 1 ratio will make the car run almost 12 per cent. farther for each propeller shaft turn than it formerly did and, when the mileage indicated is 100 the actual mileage will be about 112.

The corrective change of speedometer gears required is obtainable from the speedometer maker, but it is sometimes quite a job to make it.

PRODUCE MILLIONS IN A SINGLE SEASON

Flies Multiply at Marvellous Rate—Winter in Manure Piles

A single fly lays about 120 eggs at one time. Every female lays two, possibly four, such batches a season. In about 24 hours 120 sons and daughters hatch out. It takes only about 12 days for these little maggots to grow into adults flies, who immediately begin producing a billion nephews and nieces.

In the midsummer a new generation is started about every 11 days, which allows an abundance of time for the development of 10 or 12 generations over summer.

And after summer?

Live in Manure Piles

After summer most of them die. They do not live in cracks and crevices as is commonly supposed. The hordes that suddenly appear in the spring come from manure piles, decaying vegetables or rotting potatoes. Such materials furnish the breeding places for flies. In such places a fly in the resting stage can spend the winter quite comfortably.

"It is because of this habit," says a U. S. official, "that the fly is so very dangerous to the health of human beings, carrying as it does, the germs of intestinal diseases, typhoid, cholera, from excreta, to the human food supplies."

THE MARK'S DIZZY DESCENT

(Toronto Globe)

The paper mark has taken another downward plunge, following the collapse of the London conference. The pre-war mark was worth 23.8 cents, or 11 1/4 d. To-day marks are exchangeable at about 1,050 to the dollar, or nearly 5,000 to the pound sterling. Two years ago this month the quotation was 160 to the pound, and a year ago 290. This year began with a rate of 800, but the exchange value held fairly until midsummer. Since then the descent has been swift:

Marks to £
July 1 1,650
July 31 2,900
Aug. 2 3,700
Aug. 17 (about) 5,000

This way lies national bankruptcy. Industrial activity in Germany has been stimulated artificially by currency depreciation, but there is a point beyond which the process will not work, and apparently it has been reached. Germany cannot carry on international trade while her currency is losing 50 per cent. of its value in a month. Her manufacturers cannot import raw materials, and her workers, whose wages do not rise automatically with the decline of the mark in the foreign exchanges, cannot buy foodstuffs from other countries. The note circulation is inflated, as more currency is needed to cover each fresh deficiency in the purchasing power of paper currency, and the debt is expanded because the value of the money collected in taxes shrinks overnight.

Mr. Lloyd George the other day likened exchange to a clinical thermometer, and thought that the quotation for marks, then 4,000 to the pound, showed Germany to be in a fever. Her temperature has again risen, and France must fear infection when she sees the franc dropping below eight cents. The collapse of the mark is more trustworthy evidence of Germany's real condition than the German Government's plea of inability to make further reparation payments at present. The world is now waiting to see what methods France will employ to wring money from her debtor. If she can do this without self-injury, without plunging Europe into new economic disasters and without precipitating a Monarchist or Communist uprising in Germany, she will have justified her post-war diplomacy. The dance of the European exchanges will be watched with new interest.

WESTERN FARMERS SACRIFICE STOCK

Heavy Sales of Cattle and Hogs
Feature of Prairie Markets

In each one of the first four months of the present year the aggregate sales of cattle at the Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton markets were less than for the corresponding months of 1921. May marked an increase in these sales as compared with the same month last year, and June a considerable increase.

During July there was a greater increase still, and the rush to the three Western markets in the first half of August has been yet further accelerated. In the week ending August 10th the combined sales of cattle at the three Prairie centres totalled nearly 13,800 head, or nearly four times the sales for the same week a year ago. Shortage of hay in Central Alberta doubtless accounts for part of the liquidation that is going on, but the chief cause undoubtedly lies in the fact that United States tariff legislation has left little hope of profit on cattle production in the West.

Going Out of Hogs, too
This liquidation of cattle stocks is scarcely cause for surprise, but an apparent desire in the same quarter to reduce hog holdings as well does seem strange. That Western farmers are showing a tendency to at least lessen hog production appears to be made clear by the proportion of sows marketed by them as compared with similar marketing by Ontario farmers. In Winnipeg, in the week ending August 10, the number of select hogs sold was only about one-quarter the number of hogs of the same class disposed of at the Toronto market in the same week, while in Winnipeg the number of sows sold was almost four to one compared with the number sold in Toronto. Again, while the number of sows sold in Toronto represented only about 3 per cent. of the total sales, sales of sows in Calgary represented nearly 20 per cent. of the total and in Edmonton over 25 per cent.

Bacon Market Sound
This wholesale sacrifice of breeding stock in hogs is all the more surprising in view of the general market and feed grain situation in the West. While hog prices have been running a little below last year's figures at Calgary and Edmonton they are still such as to leave what a few years ago would have been considered an abnormal margin above feed costs, and feed, so far as grain is concerned, is plentiful on the prairies.

Nor is there anything in the present outlook to justify a feeling of pessimism as to the immediate future. The cubed reports given by the Dominion Department of Agriculture have stated choicest Canadian bacon as holding steady in London at a top of 140 shillings for some weeks past, and Danish bacon is 27 shillings higher now than at the end of March, when Danish weekly killings were about a fourth less than they are at present. If, however, Western farmers have definitely determined to go slow in hog production Eastern producers will have less reason for fear as to the more distant market prospects than some of them think they have now.

Stick to Horses.

Breeders of good work horses were told to hold their animals in anticipation of better conditions in the near future, at the recent meetings of the breed associations in Toronto. That this demand is not so far off as many persons imagine is indicated by reports from the West, the great outlet for surplus Ontario stock. Commenting on the probability of the horse's comeback, the Saskatoon Star offers the following opinion:

"Despite the recent sensational drop in the price of farm implements, 'Dobbin' is expected to prove more popular on Saskatchewan farms this year than for many years past, and his price has slumped along with other things."

"Tractors involve a considerable outlay of money, and money is listed among the things farmers have not too much of, though no monopoly is claimed for them in that regard. Any way farmers are expressing the opinion that horses will be used more in 1922 than any other year in the past five."

"It is generally understood among farmers that they must get rid of from two to four horses before they are justified in buying a tractor. The popularity of the tractor always depends to a large extent upon the relative cost of the horses and the tractor and horse feed and tractor fuel and repairs."

"Cost of operating a tractor is also a factor in favor of the horse. It is pointed out that not every farmer can acquire skill in operating a tractor, and in such cases he has to hire help. They state that almost any laborer that comes along can drive a team of horses, but there are very few of them who can drive a tractor."

"The sum total of this is that farmers this year feel that they cannot afford to pay skilled mechanics $1 to $1.25 an hour to run a tractor when they can hire men for $1.50 to $2 a day to drive a team of horses."

Foreign Birds Brought In.
A total of 66,793 canaries were imported into the United States during the past fiscal year under permits issued by the biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture. The number of permits issued during the year authorizing the importation of foreign birds and animals increased more than 20 per cent, or from 433 to 560.

City Treasurer Receives $100 from Unknown

$100 in a letter was received by the City Treasurer of Valleyfield last week. It was signed "A Stranger" and stated that the money was to settle for stolen goods. It was:

Secretary Treasurer
City of Valleyfield
Dear Sir:

I enclose in this letter a Money Order for one hundred dollars which you will place to the credit of the accounts of the City.

I ought to explain to you that I owe this sum which I used in the form of materials stolen from the said city.

For a long time I wished to remit it but it was impossible to do so. Acknowledge the receipt in your weekly paper for I claim that this should be published. It is useless to attempt to learn my name. I gave a false name when buying this money order.

A "Stranger."

The Endless Argument.

"What's the argument?"
"Just a couple of rich guys trying to settle the question whether Florida is a better place to spend the winter than California."

Bunyan Opposed to Kissing.

John Bunyan is the first recorded opponent of the kiss. Here is what the famous Puritan wrote many moons ago: "The common salutation of women I abhor. It is odious to me in whomever I see it. When I have seen good men salute those women whom they have visited and that have visited them, I have made my objections against it, and they have answered me it was but a piece of civility. I told them it was not a comely sight. Some, indeed, have urged the holy kiss, but then I have asked them why they have made balks. Why did they salute the most handsome and let the ill-favored ones go?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

If President-Elect Should Die.

If the successful candidate for President or vice-president should die before the second Monday in January after an election, the electors would be empowered, under the law, to vote according to their judgment. This contingency has never arisen. No President-elect has ever died. If a President-elect should die between the second Monday in January and inauguration day the electoral college would not be reconvened, but the houses of representatives would have to bear the responsibility.

THREE SMUGGLED DIAMONDS SOLD

Gems Sold for $2,595.

About a year ago U. S. officers at Westville seized a car and detained the occupants, Arthur Aranow and Wm. Abramson. At the same time three valuable diamonds were found on them. The diamonds were valued at $5,000, but the sale price showed that local experts only wanted to pay half that amount.

This ends one of the humours of border life. When the men were arrested one remarked that he had dug the diamonds out of the sand in Westville and that it was his intention to open a diamond mine there believing that the sand contained many more gems. His remark was assessed at its true value by the officers, but went the rounds as a smuggler's joke. Both Aranow and Abramson were city men and they made considerable litigation in the Federal Court before they were eventually fined by Judge Cooper. Following the termination of the case in the U. S. District Court the diamonds and automobile were scheduled for sale as seized property.

Telling Fortunes by Hair.

It has been scientifically demonstrated that a person's hair bears the imprint of his race, his origin, and his character. Also, that the way the hair grows and the direction it takes show what an individual has done, and further reveals what the man (or woman) is doing at the present time. It shows his habits and often his thoughts.

The hair of human beings, as well as animals, grows in the lines of least resistance. Though the manner and direction of the growth may be interfered with, the natural characteristics are not easily departed from. When hair is turned from its own inclinations the purpose of the individual is sent along new lines of investigation.

Men who weigh the affairs of others in the balance—judges and executives of great businesses—often have hair that lifts itself slightly away from the head at the ends. Melancholy people generally have straight, lanky locks.

U. S. NEIGHBORS COUNTING TRAFFIC

Malone has 1000 Cars a Day

During the past week the U. S. Troopers at Malone have been taking counts of the automobiles entering Malone. As a result of their observations the statement has been issued to the effect that over 1000 cars a day enter Malone between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. This is not intended to include local traffic. Each car contains from three to four passengers, and practically all the cars stop in Malone, where the average expenditure is estimated to be between $10 and $25. The Malone Telegram criticizes the figures as no count was made of the cars coming in over the Fort Covington or Constable roads. These two roads supply the bulk of Canadian traffic.

A census was made at Molra on Friday and Saturday of the vehicles that passed over the state road. From 7.00 in the morning until 7.00 at night, on Saturday, 1,004 vehicles were counted; all of these were motor driven except 43 one-horse drawn wagons and 12 two-horse. Among the motor vehicles were seven motor cycles, 25 light trucks, and 44 heavy trucks and busses. 130 of the automobiles carried license plates other than New York State. On Friday the numbers were slightly smaller.

She Would Know Them.

Seven-year-old Elizabeth was shopping with her mother when the following conversation took place:

"Mother, why does Santa Claus always wear a false face?"

"He has to wear a false face so the children won't recognize him."

"Well, he didn't put anything over on me. I took particular notice of his hands and they're real old hands. I'd know that pair of hands anywhere," Elizabeth asserted.

—At the service of Sunday evening in the Methodist church there was special music, the choir being assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Wilson of New York, Mrs. Rose of North Dakota and Mrs. Griffith of Montreal. In addition to the customary anthem by the choir, Mr. Wilson and Mrs. Rose sang a duet and Mrs. Griffith, who is a daughter of Mr. J. T. Ewart, sang a most appropriate solo after the sermon. All the music of the service was eminently helpful and worshipful and was much appreciated by the united Presbyterian and Methodist congregation. Mr. J. B. McMillan was organist.

—There are not many double weddings reported and it has been years since there was such an event in Huntingdon. Yesterday morning Rev. —O'Connor Bros. are gradually working down towards Huntingdon with their road gangs and it will not be long before some of the new road receives its oil coating. As a tank car brings sufficient to do three miles of road this finishing touch is not being added until the three miles are ready and then all will be done at once. The big trucks that are used in hauling stone have broken a corner of the cement road at the turn near the power house. This is the first break in the cement road since it was laid down.

—A conflict of dates in the Fairs has been avoided by the St. Louis show withdrawing their first date and advancing the show one day. It was to be on the 7th of September, which was the opening date of Huntingdon. Now it is to be on the sixth.

—The N. Y. C. officials had a busy time about train time last week, handling the crowds for Valleyfield fair.

—Work on the new cement sidewalk on Wellington street is proceeding. The walk is now completed past Dalhousie street.

—Ladies from the Quebec department were here last week speaking in connection with the school Fairs. Unfortunately their meeting in Huntingdon was not at all well attended. Better gatherings were reported in Elgin and at other points in the eastern part of the county.

—Mr. C. B. Kelly returned home last week from an extended but busy trip to Europe. During his visit he was in the British Isles, France, Belgium, Austria, Hungary and the new republics of central Europe. BASEBALL

ELENBURG AGAIN WINS

There was no doubt about it, the game on Friday was a fine exhibition of ball. Both teams were out to win and when the ninth inning opened with the score 2 to 1 for Huntingdon, it looked as though Chief Ero was going to have his first loss chalked up against him, but the fates ruled otherwise. It was drizzling slowly but steadily and the ball was getting slippery and McArdle found it hard to control. Nichols was first up and had two strikes and no balls called on him. The next three were all balls and the fourth was grooved. He hit it. Hoff was walked and Ero's drive did the damage, two runs scoring. In their half Huntingdon could do nothing and the game ended three to two for Ellensburg.

A good crowd turned out for the game, but not as many as had been expected. The sky looked unsettled and a walk from the Fair Grounds in a rain is not a pleasant experience, and once caught, Never again! The game was full of excitement, both teams playing good ball and backing the pitchers well. McArdle threw his first game for Huntingdon this year and put up a good exhibition. He struck out 11, but spoiled the record by walking 5. The teams:

STIRRING TALE OF LIFE IN

TIMBERLANDS

"God's Country and the Woman" is Thrilling Film.

James Oliver Curwood, the famous author, has written many stories of the North Woods and of the big-hearted men and women who live there. He has written none, however, more vigorously compelling and characteristic of the frozen outdoors than "God's Country and the Woman," which has been visualized by Vitaphone and will be shown at the O'Connor Hall on Saturday Sept 2nd.

Romance and adventure may occur in the big city and the small town, but it is away from the softening influence of civilization that the real nature of people asserts itself and passions become simple and elemental. The endless timberlands of "God's Country" give just exactly the right setting to a story such as Curwood has written.

The loneliness, the dangers from nature, man and beast, the vast spaces—all these fit in and become a vital part of the atmosphere of the stirring drama. Where in another setting the actions would appear to border on melodrama here it is startlingly realistic and true to life. It is a canvas on which the deeds of people may be painted in bold strokes, and Curwood does it with a power and reserve which are tremendously effective.

"God's Country and the Woman" has been done in a big way and features William Duncan, who is supported by an all-star cast including Neil Shipman.

OUR INDIAN POETESS.

Her Grave In Shadow of Siwash Rock In Vancouver.

Under the shadow of Siwash Rock in Stanley Park, Vancouver, B.C., lie the ashes of Canada's Indian poetess, Pauline Johnson.

Shaded by branches of closely sheltering trees, in summer, and protected from winter winds by their thick growth, and where the waves from the Gulf lap and lash incessantly, it is one of the ideal spots of that great natural woodland.

Now it is to have an added charm, for through the persevering efforts of the Women's Canadian Club, a rustic, antique fountain is to be erected from moss-covered stones gathered from the park, the water to flow through this granite protection as a natural spring, and fall into a small pool at one side. The headstone will have a life-size reproduction of the head of the poetess, while on the west side emblems of her legends, showing the flint and feather, will be carved, and on the east side a canoe and paddle. The eyes of the figure will be focussed on the stream of water and beneath the carving will be the name, "E. Pauline Johnson," with date of birth and death. The fountain will be backed by a huge log, already on the spot. It will be of native granite, and the water will come trickling into a pond where will be reeds and water lilies.

The trees immediately in the foreground will be trimmed to some extent and a rustic Roman seat will be added.

Ever since the ashes of the poetess were placed there in 1913 there has been a movement on foot to erect some kind of memorial to her memory, also a reminder to future generations of an unselfish life and poetical genius. Miss Johnson had, herself, expressed aversion to monuments, and this happy idea of a fountain was, therefore, decided upon.

The Women's Canadian Club of Vancouver have assumed responsibility of raising funds for the memorial.

The Parks Board has approved and will co-operate with the committee in making the spot selected a secluded and beautiful "Poet's Corner."

Each year on the anniversary of her death, March 7, the Pauline Chapter I. O. O. E. visit her tomb in a body, where they pay fitting tribute to her memory by placing there the wild flowers that she loved, and holding a short, memorial service.

Sleep on, dear heart of love, thy life-work o'er,

No bard has ever chanted truer note. And when thy bark canoe touch yonder shore

Thou'lt rise, triumphant, from tiny earthly float

To sing the praises of the Lamb, who gave

His life, His all, this sinful world to save.

PROBABLY MEANT IT

"What was the feature of the 'get-together' meeting?"

"A more or less prominent citizen offered a resolution urging that better men be elected to office."

"A good idea. And I dare say he was sincere?"

"Unquestionably. He's been running for office for the last twenty years, and all he ever got out of it was the exercise."

A Giant Duck.

Something new in the way of a float for sportive aquatic exercise is the invention of a New Jersey man, James M. Maroukis. It may take the form of a giant duck or any other creature that is at home in the water. The body of the duck has a covering of canvas, appropriately painted, and is filled with cork. Through the middle of it is a hole big enough to enable the user to put the contrivance over his head and beneath his arms. Straps fastened to the under side of the duck are passed and secured between the user's legs, furnishing him with a support for his person and giving the affair proper attachment. For the latter purpose other straps on top pass over his shoulders. The tail of the duck is provided with a ring, so that a cord may connect it with another duck following behind. If desired, there may be a whole string of them. — Philadelphia Ledger.
