TO THE AFFLICTED.—I wish to state that I have removed my consulting rooms to the Mechanics' Bank Chambers, No. 194 St. James street; and that I will, as usual, pay special attention to chronic diseases of all kinds, particularly those of a character that need not be mentioned, resulting in more misery than all the other sins in this world put together: Nervous Irritability, Morbid Sensitiveness, Loss of Memory, Lack of Confidence, Indecision of Character, Depression of Spirits, Incapacity to apply the mind to any Occupation, Imbecility, Impotency, and sometimes almost total depravity. All of which can be corrected by restoring the vital forces, which can be done without the usual drug and nostrum treatment, by which thousands have been injured or murdered. I have practised my peculiar mode of treatment for eight years, and during that time have treated an immense number in all parts of the world, in the best walks of life, and not one can say that I have ever done them an injury, and nearly all can say that I have cured them. Patients can be treated without my seeing them, no matter how great a distance, but those in the city must call and see me at my office. Office hours from 9 to 11 a.m., 2 to 4, and 7 to 10 p.m. Private and confidential. 96-12m M. H. [illegible], M.D.

INFALLIBILITY.

A GREAT BOON TO SUFFERING HUMANITY, THE DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE For the First Time Brought into Canada.

HEAR WHAT A SUFFERER SAYS:

MONTREAL, March 9th, 1874.

Dr. MILLER, Dear Sir,—I have been troubled for the last two years with Rheumatism in my arms and knees. I applied to Mr. Conner, your agent, now stopping at the St. Lawrence Hall, for a bottle of your DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE. Three doses of your valuable medicine have cured me effectually. I am now well, and a living evidence of the efficacy of this wonderful cure. J. ABRAHAMS, Ottawa Hotel Cigar Store.

MR. ISACCSON'S ENDORSATION.

MONTREAL, 21st March, 1874.

Messrs. DEVINS & BOLTON. Dear Sir,—I with pleasure concede to the agents wish that I give my endorsation to the immediate relief I experienced from a few doses of Dr. Miller's Diamond Rheumatic Cure, having been a sufferer from the effects of Rheumatism, I am now, after taking two bottles of this medicine, entirely free from pain. You are at liberty to use this letter, if you deem it advisable to do so. I am, sir, yours respectfully, JOHN HELDER ISAACSON.

There is no medicine which so promptly revives the depressed vital action, restores the general and local circulation, allays the pain, dissipates the congestion, prevents inflammation, and restores the healthy action as the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE. In thousands of instances the prompt and free use of this medicine has saved valuable human lives. Hence the DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE should be in every hospital and infirmary, in every doctor's office, in every family or factory, in every shop or ship, in every office or counting room. It is the remedy always ready for an emergency, prompt in its action, always reliable, always curable, doing all that it is advertised to do. An infallible specific, removing the cause, chronic, acute, or muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the head, heart stomach and kidneys, Tic Doloreux, nervousness, flying pains, twisted joints, swollen joints, pain in the back and loins, weakness of the kidneys, tired feeling, languid, weary prostration, and all nervous and chronic diseases.

In simple cases sometimes one or two doses suffice. In the most chronic case it is sure to give way by the use of two or three bottles. By this efficient and simple remedy hundreds of dollars are saved to those who can least afford to throw it away, as surely it is by the purchase of useless prescriptions.

This medicine is prepared by a careful, experienced and conscientious physician, in obedience to the desire of numberless friends in the profession, in the trade and among the people. Every bottle is warranted to contain the full strength of the medicine in its highest state of purity and development, and is superior to any medicine ever compounded for this terrible complaint.

This medicine is for sale at all Druggists throughout the Province. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to DEVINS & BOLTON, NOTRE DAME STREET, MONTREAL. General Agents for Province of Quebec. Or, to NORTHRUP & LYMAN, SCOTT STREET, TORONTO, General Agents for Ontario. Price $1 per bottle. Large bottles, $2. 77

THE GATES AJAR.

A Woman Who Claims to Have Had a Glimpse of Heaven.

The Eastern-shore Peninsula (so-called) comprises the three counties of Delaware, nine of Maryland, and two of Virginia. There is, however, more uniformity in its physical constitution than its political. The moderate-sized hills of Wilmington and Cecil soften very gradually into the rolling prairie lands of Queen Anne, the flatter plains of Talbot, the swamps of Somerset, and the sands of Accomac. Everywhere broad or deep rivers open up from either side access into the heart of the country. Everywhere the productions of the soil and the occupations of its owners are pretty nearly the same. Back from the water courses, occupying rough tracts of half-cleared woodland, is a population having all that love for the marvellous which always accompanies ignorance; and all that excitability of temperament which our climate seems to foster in the whole American race.

THE PROPHETESS.

These "Wild Catters" are Methodists too, and of the galvanically-uproarious stripe; and it is to one of their religo-physical epidemics that we are indebted for the following phenomenon; The malstrom caught up, and whirled fairly from its moorings, the soul of a devotional, exquisitely susceptible, but uneducated young girl residing in one of the most secluded corners of Queen Anne—Annie Rogers by name—so that she began to fall into trances, and see visions, and receive messages from above. In the eyes of the simple forester, she is their blessed sister who holds converse with her Maker face to face; their channel of direct revelation; their infallible prophetness and oracle.

Every day they gather in scores from far and near and hold tumultuous "prayer meetings" in and around the house. Even ministers publicly urge their flocks to partake from this new fountain of grace, and her attending physician, it is said, profess to believe her visitations are supernal. All this naturally flatters her vanity, unsettles still further her nerves, and makes her more of a prophetess. She professes to have visited hell and conversed with Satan, who she depicts in the genuine old school orthodox fashion, as a black man with fiery eyes and tongue. Under his treatment, she observed several defunct members of the congregation.

VIEWS OF HEAVEN.

Of Heaven she is unable to give a very circumstantial account, as St. Peter, who stood at the door, would not suffer her to enter. "It was not time," he said. However, he held it ajar for her to peep in, and she profited by this indulgence to make a desperate effort to defeat the designs of the saint. One of her rash feet (all this in the spirit) actually passed within the hallowed limits when she found herself violently cast out. However, she had been able to catch sight of her mother in the abode of happiness, and had previously found her father in that of woe; so that her mind must be fully at rest upon the score of family dissensions in the future world.

A CRUEL EXPERIMENT.

One or two medical gentlemen from the nearest county seat, armed and equipped with electrical apparatus, paid the damsel a visit with the view of shocking her out of hell, or wherever she might happen to be sojourning in spirit. But all they got for their pains was the dismal prediction that neither of them could ever see salvation, as they had intended to try sacrilegious experiments upon her body, while her soul was absent in pursuance of its divine mission. There was no chance for an application of the remedies, as their mere entrance sufficed to restore her to consciousness. Her friends, however, burning for a more convincing "testimony unto Israel," have not scrupled to resort to more serious tests. On one occasion she declared, as a new revelation, that fire never would be allowed to burn her so long as she remained in the trance state. Accordingly, her admiring disciples seized the very next opportunity to clap a live coal into the poor creature's hand, and, of course, scorched it terribly. But their faith was made of more enduring texture than her [illegible] for it does not seem to have suffered at all in consequence.

Annie can always predict her seizures with approximate correctness, yet sometimes they overtake her under ludicrous circumstances. On the instant, whatever her posture, her body and limbs are said to become perfectly rigid, and so remain until the vision passes. She has stood thus for forty-five minutes, balanced upon one foot, and the other elevated, as in the act of stepping. She had been walking across the floor when "taken."

These harsh experiences and almost impossible feats belie the theory of imposture, and it is probable that, like nearly all such zealots, she is her own most completely infatuated dupe. Pity and indignation both would seem to be the proper meed, alike of the fanaticism tortured by credulous ignorance, and the ignorance misled by so obvious an imposture.

A PREDICTION.

Luckily the end is soon to come, since the Pythoness has herself predicted it. On the 20th of next June, she proclaims, a final and crowning revelation will be vouchsafed, explaining a new and most effectual method of converting sinners. Meanwhile it is to be hoped that she will not be made irretrievably insane by the combined efforts of herself and her companions.

PRISON MANAGEMENT.

Life at Sing-Sing.

(New York Herald.)

We publish in another column a curious story of prison management. It reads more like a leaf from the history of the times of Louvois than a plain statement of well authenticated facts passing in our midst. What is set down to the account of Sing-Sing is, with little variation, applicable to other houses of correction, and the picture certainly is not a pleasing one—corruption, cruelty and mismanagement joined hand in hand to oppress the unfortunate and defeat the ends of justice. The prison ought not to be merely a place of punishment, but should aim at reformation, for if society seeks only vengeance on criminals then law loses its sanctity. But when the agents of justice use the power intrusted to them by the law for their own aggrandizement the interests of society suffer and law loses all claims to reverence in the eyes of the criminal classes. Official corruption appears to be inseparable from American institutions. The term of office is so uncertain that unscrupulous men seek to reap their harvest while the official sun shines.

The demoralization of politics influences the public service and tends to make public servants unreliable. A prison is the last place where one would look for politics, and yet it is notorious that our prisons are as much affected by party movements as are our custom houses and post-offices. The result is constant change of regulations, leading to confusion and general lack of discipline. It is no uncommon thing for different prison officials to be in open conflict and to wage war within the prison walls, to the destruction of all discipline and respect, on the part of the convicts, for the authorities. Perhaps the saddest fact in connection with the management of our prisons is the notorious corruption of all classes of officials. It is vain that judges and juries sentence men to severe punishment. If the criminals have money the persons charged with executing the sentence of the law are ready for a consideration to defeat its provisions. There is no luxury the wealthy criminal may not enjoy, and the dull prison life even may be varied by excursions into the country.

Every door flies open before the pressure of the golden lever, and only the poor wretches who steal from want are made to feel the full vengeance of the law. Only one crime will not be pardoned in a prisoner—poverty. He who can afford to bribe need have no fear of the hardships of prison life. His cigar and brandy will reach him as regularly as though he were free if he can afford to pay the tariff. Even the doctors, it appears, do not escape the contagion, and the hospital ward, under proper management, turns into a very mine of wealth. Repose and good nourishment can be purchased by the rich, while "diarrhœa mixture" and "suspension by the thumbs" are the favorite remedies for less fortunate criminals. All this is wrong and needs to be remedied. We wish some of our philanthropists would turn from dogs and donkeys and bestow a little of their sympathy and attention on these outcasts of civilization—the dwellers in our prisons.

THE PRUSSIAN HEADSMAN.

The latest arrival of a distinguished foreigner in America is the headsman of His Majesty the King of Prussia. This public functionary has taken up his residence in New York City. He is only 55 years old, but has, during his career as executioner, cut off forty-six heads.

A reporter from the Star interviewed him recently. The headsman said:

"Hard times and ridiculous obloquy caused me and my three daughters to leave the old country. By 'hard times' I mean the new criminal code of Germany. Nothing could be more ill-advised than that. I and my four colleagues thought so as soon as the German Parliament was foolish enough to pass it. What has been the consequences? Why, sir; in the past twelve months there have been more murders committed in Berlin alone than formerly, when we were about, were perpetrated in the whole monarchy. But, sir," he added sorrowfully, "all this is principally the fault of his Majesty the Emperor. Old William dislikes to sign death-warrants. He studies over them too long, and, worst of all, he never wants a woman to be beheaded. Two years ago I had an old girl who had poisoned her husband, just where I wanted her. I went with my 'implements' to Culen, to despatch her, and, just when I arrived there, a telegram came from Berlin commuting her sentence to penal servitude for life; and I had already cut off her hair!"

Our reporter thereupon ventured to question how many heads Mr. Scharfenberg had cut off altogether. "Let me see," said the ex-headsman, counting his victims off on his fingers, "forty-five—no, forty-six." "How many of them were women?" asked the reporter. "About a dozen," said Mr. Scharfenberg, "and I wish there had been less of them. They gave me more trouble than all the men I had to put to death. Why, the last person of that kind I had to attend to was an old lady with her son. They had poisoned the father to get his money. I thought the mother ought to have her head cut off first; but the clerk of the court, a meddlesome sort of fellow, directed me otherwise, and so I had to 'cut' (Schneiden) the young man first. His mother took it badly. I could hardly get her in 'good shape' on the block."

"What were your emoluments in Prussia?" asked the reporter.

"Three hundred thalers for each head cut off," replied the ex-headsman; "and, besides, I had in my district all the skinning of fallen cattle. I had, however, money of my own, both my grandfather and father having been in the same business. O, they had a good time of it; my grandfather alone had over two hundred executions."

"Two hundred executions."

"Yes," he said proudly, "and half of them he broke on the wheel."

"Did you ever break anybody on the wheel?" asked the reporter.

"No," he replied, "the worst I did was cutting with the sword, and little did I like it; for it is an uncertain way of doing it. Give me the axe and the head flies off like nothing."

"And you say the new German code is bad?" asked the reporter.

"Why, of course," said the old headsman. "Very bad! Very bad! Just see what they are doing in Berlin. One murder a day, and not an execution for six months. The Emperor is too soft-hearted. He will pardon them all. That's not the way of doing things. In 1847 I 'out' nine fellows in the Marien Werder District, and we never had a murder since. They do things better in Poland. They whip there the fellows so bad that they do not know where they are."

"But they do not kill them?" said the reporter.

"Do not kill them!" exclaimed the old headsman, scornfully. "Few of them do survive, indeed! The Russian lash is as good as an ax. But hardly anybody hears of the culprit's death."

The reporter had had enough of the headsman's experiences and opinions, and bade him good night.

THE ASHANTEE WAR.

Closing Scenes.

The London Times says:—

The history of the Ashantee War received yesterday its formal completion in the Review of the troops by Her Majesty at Windsor, and in the passing by the two Houses of Parliament of Votes of Thanks to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the various forces who had been engaged. The Review was favoured by splendid weather, and the thanks of the Sovereign and the distribution of honors to some of the officers who have specially distinguished themselves formed as brilliant a ceremony as could have been desired. The little Force was under the command of the General who had led them to victory, and it is pleasant to have the assurance of the Duke of Cambridge that, in spite of their labors and perils, the three regiments presented an appearance which did his heart good. He assured the House of Peers they looked so fit for service that he would not hesitate to sail with them to any place the country might despatch them to. Probably their appearance in some degree belies the reality, and it is well for them that they are able to look forward to a period of rest in a healthy climate, during which they may shake off the subtle germs of the African malaria. The Duke of Cambridge yesterday did well to explain that they had [illegible] "selected" for the duty. They were sent to the Gold Coast simply because they were the first three regiments on the roll for foreign service. It would, in fact, have been equally improper and unnecessary to exercise any selection; and the Commander-in-Chief expressed a just confidence that had any other three regiments been sent on the same service they would have equally maintained the honor of our arms. These three corps have been fortunate, as the Duke of Cambridge said their Commander had been, in the opportunity for distinction; and the highest praise that can be given them is that they have availed themselves of that opportunity in the manner which might have been expected of British soldiers.

The army will feel that Parliament and the country have shown a due appreciation of the services of their comrades. The Ashantee war will not, indeed, be remembered as one of the great exploits of history; nor can it be looked back upon with much satisfaction in its results. But, so far as the conduct of our individual officers and soldiers is concerned, it may be always regarded as one of the most creditable exploits of the British arms. The truth was accurately expressed by Lord Granville. "It is true," he said, "that this could not be regarded as a great war, such as one in which our troops would have had to meet a civilized and well-organized army; but I am not sure whether it did not afford even a stronger test of the qualities of the men engaged. Discipline and endurance they were sure to display, but I am not certain whether that sort of fighting is not the greatest test of each individual man."

Colonel Lloyd Lindsay expressed a similarly discriminating opinion in the House of Commons, and it will be felt that, whatever the policy which Lord Carnarvon may ultimately have to announce as that which will guide our future conduct on the Gold Coast, our Army, at all events, has won permanent honour there. More than one graceful tribute of sympathy was yesterday paid to those who have contributed to this honour but have not been spared to enjoy its rewards, and Lord Granville was once more particularly happy in drawing attention to the fact that the names of the dead have at least received more universal regard than is possible in a war of greater magnitude. All alike have done their duty, and have shown, as the Duke of Cambridge said, that the spirit of British soldiers is the same as ever.

AN ARTIST'S SUICIDE.

(From the Alta California.)

The case of William Freidricks, the young artist who shot himself through the heart on the Cliff House beach late Saturday night, has excited unusual interest. At the post mortem examination it was shown that the bullet had lacerated the point of the heart, passed through the stomach, and lodged in the muscles of the back. In the evening the Coroner's jury assembled, and the testimony was partially taken. L. C. Pierson testified to his acquaintance with the dead artist "On Saturday morning, at ten o'clock, he and Mr. Weber came to my room by appointment; we spent the day in enjoyment; went to the Scandinavian Club and played chess, and also attended to a little business; we also went to Mr. Freidricks' room, and stayed there from three to five p.m.; we then went to a store on Kearney street where he bought a revolver.

I asked him what he wanted with a revolver; he said he had always wanted one, and that he would have some target practice; I tried to persuade him that he didn't need one, but he insisted upon buying it; we then went to several livery stables to get horses, and finally got three saddle horses at the Dashaway stables; between seven and eight we started for the Cliff House; we stopped at his house for him to change his hat; we then started, but, when he got two blocks off he started back again to get something; he went into the house, brought out the little trunk and mounted; subsequently he left it in a drug store, corner of Taylor and Eddy; then went to the Cliff; when we got to the Cliff House Mr. Freidricks ordered dinner; after dinner Mr. Freidircks proposed a walk on the beach; it was a moonlight night; he had told us that he intended to kill himself that night; all that day he talked of committing suicide; he had been quoting Shakespeare all day, and said, 'Let me die as a Roman;' I argued the matter with him, and tried to convince him that there was no heroism in suicide; he told us at the Cliff House that it was his last night on earth; I was not convinced that he meant what he said; his usual manner was highly tragic; for this reason I did not try to disarm him; when we got to the beach we walked up and down for a long time; he seemed to be in good spirits, but said that he was determined to die; I thought that he was acting, an I was getting tired, I therefore proposed to go home; he started away from me, then stopped, and with his back towards us he suddenly struck a tragic attitude, and I saw a flash and heard a report; I still thought he was acting, but yet I rushed up to him and found upon opening his clothes that it was indeed a tragedy and not a farce; he told me positively that the depreciation of his pictures was the sole cause of his grief."

MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

A Mulatto Girl Found Dead in a Dirty Hovel in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.

A very mysterious case, and one attended by no small degree of horror, came to light in this city this afternoon, the principal circumstances of which up to this hour are involved in perplexity and doubt. The report was rendered to a district station house in one of the lower wards that there was a dead body in a room of the house located at 609 Middle alley, and an officer was detailed to make a thorough investigation. Subsequently the Deputy Coroner visited the premises, and from one the gentlemen who accompanied him I learn the following story:

Middle alley is inhabited in the main by negroes. No. 609 is a desolate looking house and a perfect rookery. Before entering the room we sought to ascertain a few particulars, but the parties living below remained entirely reticent. We ascended the stairs until we had reached the second story, when we entered one of the back rooms. A sight of horror met our eyes. Furniture was overturned, chairs had been broken, the bedclothes were upon the floor and everything in the room was lying about in the wildest confusion. The stench which pervaded the apartment was perfectly disgusting. Upon the floor, crouched in an unnatural attitude and dressed in tattered night garments the outline of a young mulatto girl was seen, with her head resting heavily upon her knees. Her hair was matted and tangled with the filth in which she had died. Beside her was a shattered lamp, and a tattered dress, with scanty underclothing, lay near by. There are none of us who presumed how she died. The sight was one at which the most indifferent would have been appalled, and one the frightfulness of which none but a visitor can comprehend. The girl was young, of slight figure and delicately formed. No one understands by what means she sustained the painful [illegible] that she was dead and that she had died in poverty and [illegible].

There is a sequel being developed, however, which is likely to bring to light many of the circumstances of which we are at present ignorant. We learn that the girl had been married, had seperated from her husband, and that last night a negro was seen to enter her room. This negro has escaped, but the officers are now upon his track and will use every means to effect his arrest. It is this negro alone who can give the statement which will explain all. The parties living below say that there was considerable confusion above, accompanied by no little noise, but beyond this they pretended utter ignorance. The Coroner's physician, Dr. Shapleigh, has made a partial examination, but nothing satisfactory will be made known until to-morrow morning at the Morgue. The girl appears to have died from great internal injuries and from natural weakness, which was greatly aggravated by the conduct of the man. The severity of the struggle is evinced in the confused condition of the room. The name of the girl is Adeline Gros, but the name of the man is unknown.

WHOLESALE MURDER IN THE SOUTH SEAS.

[Sydney Herald.]

The Plute, 286 tons, Captain Clarke, owned by Mr. Collingwood, of Sunderland, sailed from Newcastle, New South Wales, on the 29th of April, bound for Hong Kong with a cargo of coal. She got on shore on a reef outlying from New Caledonia, and became a total wreck. The crew secured one of the boats, and as a strong south-east monsoon was blowing Captain Clarke determined to make for the Solomon Group, and subsequently reaching Port Adams [Malayta.] Here a landing was effected by a portion of the crew, who wanted to obtain water, the boat meanwhile lying off at anchor; but the natives came down in numbers and killed every soul that landed. Captain Clarke at once put to sea; but canoes were in chase and unfortunately the boat got on a reef.

Being without any arms, the canoes soon ranged alongside and ruthlessly slaughtered all on board the boat with the exception of one man named John Collins, who has been spared to describe the horrible scene. This man was terribly wounded by arrows, but principally about the lower part of the body, and a superstition appears to exist among the natives of this locality that where death does not at once ensue, the victim must not be again attacked, and he is tabooed from further harm. He was taken on shore, and would appear to have been well treated. While at the "Banks' Group" Lieutenant Suckling received intelligence from the missionaries that a white man was in the hands of the natives at Malayta. He at once got under way and proceeded to the spot, and after considerable difficulty succeeded in getting the unfortunate man out of their hands and placing him safely on board the Renard. Her Majesty's ship Dido was fallen in with shortly after and Colins transferred to her, having been in the hands of the natives two months.

Collins states that the chief officer, who was in the boat and witnessed the deaths of the shore party, killed himself with a tomahawk to avoid falling into the hands of the savages. The Renard also found four of the missing men of Robert Towns on the south side of Mallicollo Island, where they had been almost six weeks. The natives treated them kindly up to that time; but they were getting tired of the men and it is not impossible that they would have killed them. Captain Macdonald, of the schooner Success, went in the Renard with Lieutenant Suckling to Mallicollo Island and treated with the natives for their release, which was conceded on payment of nine tomahawks."

THE MURDER PERIOD IN PARIS.

The correspondent of the London Daily News writes to that journal under date of March 5:—"It is characteristic of the present apathy of the public mind in Paris that even atrocious murders only create a kind of languid excitement. Tropmann himself just now could hardly hope to make a sensation. The last novelty in murders, however, is a crime which, both as regards atrocity and audacity, beats even the murder in Great Coram street. Very few of your readers ever heard of the Rue Blondel. It is one of the most populous of the old streets between the Boulevard Sebastapol and the Rue St. Martin. The street is not well inhabited. There are in it several dens of infamy, and right opposite one of these is the shop of a marchande a la toilette, which was kept by a widow of the name of Pelissier.

"The peculiar business of a marchande a la toilette it would be difficult to describe in decent English. Ostensibly the marchande buys, sells, exchanges and lets out for hire all articles of female apparel, and her clients consist as a rule of members of the demi-monde. Yesterday morning, at about 9 o'clock, a man went out of this shop and ran down the street. He had barely got a few yards, when the widow Pelissier staggered to the door with her throat cut. The neighbors rushed to her assistance, but she died in a couple of minutes without having been able to articulate a sound. The murderer got off clear. On the police entering the shop they found a razor all over blood, a thin walking stick, and a shirt stud; but no robbery had been committed. In the immediate neighborhood there was a good deal of excitement, but on the Boulevards, barely a couple of hundred yards off, people knew nothing about the murder until they read it in the papers this morning. One of the most singular features of this crime was that it was perpetrated at a time when business is most active in that part of the town, and that there were policemen on their beats close to the house; the murderer must have passed close to them when he ran away. The street, bear in mind, is a perfect bee-hive, and with a number of people about it is certainly astounding that the murderer should have so easily contrived to make good his escape."

CRIME IN HIGH LIFE.

(From the Paris Figaro.)

The Countess Della Torre, the descendant of an old and powerful Florentine family, and the widow of Count Della Torre, former Ambassador of Victor Emanuel at the Vatican, appeared before the Ninth Chamber the day before yesterday to answer a charge of swindling.

The Countess has been, it would appear from the accusation, a person of easy morality both before and since her widowhood. Her life has been a mysterious existence of love and political intrigue. She was brought up in England where she was taught to write and speak several languages, and where she became acquainted with many political characters.

In 1869 she could be seen on the public drive at Florence surrounded by the most fashionable young men of the city, and receiving the friends of M. Crispi, the leader of the Left in the Italian Parliament. At this time she was wont to give orders for flowers and mosaics to M. Bainaut, whom she forgot to pay.

In 1870, during the siege of Paris, she [illegible] Spend[illegible] having [illegible] pay. She ordered 15,000 francs worth of lingerie at the shop of M. D[illegible]. M. Aibnet, a jeweler, in the Rue de Choiseul, suspected her of having stolen from him a ring worth 150 francs.

In 1873, Madame Della Torre was condemned to prison for three days by the police court, for an impropriety. In June last the Countess rented the furnished hotel No. 10 Rue Lesueur, at 800 francs a month, and established herself therein with fifteen dogs and seventeen cats. Her only resources apparently were derived from a sum of 130 francs a month received from Italy. By stating her income as much larger, and making a skillful use of her name and title, she obtained a large credit. The complaint against her was made by nine tradesmen whom she had deceived.

At the trial, Madame Della Torre asserted that she had some means in Italy, and produced papers to show that she had influential relations with many persons of her family. She denied that she had any intention to defraud her creditors.

After hearing M. Mariage for the prosecution, and M. Mont du Taigny for the accused, the Court sentenced the Countess Della Torre to one year's imprisonment, and to pay a fine of 500 francs.

A STARTLED BRID GROOM.

(From the Boston Courier.)

Not many weeks ago a wealthy and middle-aged bachelor of San Francisco espoused one of the fairest daughters of that city and the wedding was celebrated in one of the most fashionable churches, and in the presence of an assembly of the creme de la creme of San Francisco society. The bridegroom was a Forty-niner, and he had once been anything but a sober and industrious citizen. There had even been rumors to the effect that when he made the overland journey he left behind in "the States" a wife and two children, and these rumors were awkwardly revived when his recent marriage was first announced. The Forty-niner was now undeniably rich and respectable, and people were generally disposed to pass over his antecedents without subjecting them to a scrutiny that might prove disagreeable. And so the wedding day arrived.

When the Forty-niner and his bride turned from their places in front of the altar, after the clergyman had pronounced them man and wife, the spectators were astonished to see a tall, dismal-looking, and sable-habited man rise from a place in one of the front pews, approach the bridegroom, and gently tap him on the shoulder. The effect of this proceeding on the Forty-niner was rather singular, for his countenance assumed a ghastly expression, and he quickly resigned his newly-made wife to her friends, and turned anxiously to the stranger, who simply remarked, "I wish to talk with you a moment privately, sir." The Forty-niner struggled hard to conceal his emotion, and finally said: "I assure you, sir, that—that—what in thunder did you come at such a time as this for?" "A moment will suffice," replied the funeral-looking gentleman firmly; "please step into this pew."

The Forty-niner did so, while the assembled company busied itself in winking and whispering, and looking alternately at the fainting bride and the agonized bridegroom. "When a man gets married, sir," said the dismal gentleman, "it is necessary for him to look with prudence upon the future, and he cannot begin too soon. Now, sir, a lot in the Oakdale Cemetery, which association I repre—." The sentence was never finished. There was a chorus of female shrieks, and a general rush of gentlemen, as the Forty-niner was suddenly observed to seize his interviewer by the collar and kick him into the aisle. The enterprising cemetery agent was quickly disposed of, the trembling bride regained her color and composure, and thereafter all went merry as a marriage bell.

A BRAVE DEED RECALLED TO MIND.

A recent debate in Congress brings to public attention the heroic conduct of Joseph J. Petri who, with the assistance of three Indians, saved the life of seventy snow-bound and starving emigrants in December, 1849. Mr. Petri was one of those who started for California while the gold fever was at its height, and had arrived at Davis ranche in the Sacramento valley in the latter part of 1849. As a miner he was very successful, and in a short time accumulated $15,000. In December, while all were making preparations for the storms of winter as best they could, with a scanty stock of provisions, news was brought into camp that a large party of emigrants were snow-bound on the waters of Deer Creek between the Sierra Nevada and the Trinity mountains. Several unavailing attempts had been made to rescue the famishing party, and several of the would-be rescuers perished from cold and exhaustion.

The Governor issued a call for volunteers for the rescue, and Mr. Petri volunteered to take command of the party of rescuers. He started out with fourteen men, but his force dwindled like Falstaff's army until he had but three Indians left. Pushing on in the face of terrible obstacles, and forcing their way through long wastes of snow, the heroic little party effected the rescue of the seventy emigrants, when they had become reduced to the contemplation of cannibalism. In order to feed the starving people, Mr. Perti had expended the greater part of his fortune for provisions. Not meeting with much success in mining, after his first "streak" of luck, Mr. Petri returning to his home in the west not much richer than he left, and, his wife and children having died, he is now old and poor. This session of Congress a petition was introduced for his relief, and calling for $30,000 to compensate him for the expense of the rescue and preservation of the starving emigrants. The House, though refusing to grant the amount asked for, has considered favorably the proposition to give him $5,000 in compensation for the expense to which he was put by his heroic exertions.

AN INEFFICIENT REMEDY.

A recent medical writer says:—"Sleep whenever you can—anywhere you can get a chance; the want of the age is sleep." This is not always safe to follow, as a certain gentleman knows to his sorrow. He was recently afflicted with a bad cold, and to cure himself of it resorted to the remedy of putting his feet in hot water and drinking a tumblerful of strong whisky toddy, prescribed by an aged and respected friend of the family. Having got everything in order for carrying out the prescription, he sat down by the fire, his feet immersed in warm water, and a tumbler of smoking toddy by his side. In this condition a sense of enjoyment stole over him as he sipped the exhilarating liquid and fell asleep. His wife had gone to bed, and, on awakening about three o'clock in the morning, wondered why she was alone. Going down stairs she was horrified to find her liege lord asleep in his chair, the fire out, his feet still immersed in the water, over which a cake of ice was forming, and an empty tumbler on the chair beside him. His cold isn't a bit better.

REMOVAL.—The offices of the DAILY and WEEKLY STAR have been removed to the commodious premises, Nos. 624 and 626 Craig street. A seperate saleroom has been provided for the newsboys, enabling newsdealers to obtain their papers unmolested.

IT is stated that the Imperial Government will contribute $150,000 towards the construction of a graving dock at Esquimault, British Columbia.

IN a mild way the Herald protests against that clause of the Hon. Mr. Dorion's Election Bill, which leaves the regulation of the franchise to the Local Legislature.

RESPECTING the tariff, the Gazette thinks that, despite the evident unpopularity of the proposed changes, "Mr. Cartwright will set his teeth, bid defiance to his assailants and by the mere force of numbers in Parliament, carry the resolutions through in their original shape."

DURING the past week a Parliamentary Committee has been enquiring into the Mercantile Agency question. The representatives of the several Agencies have been heard and questioned at length, and, of course, made out a very good case. On Saturday a member of the Committee said he thought they had heard enough and should report, but he was reminded that only one side of the story had been given, and that there were many persons, including several members of Parliament, who were desirous of relating what they know about these institutions. The enquiry was accordingly adjourned until Tuesday, when some interesting evidence may be expected.

IT is to be hoped that the City Council will try and push business along this evening. There are a number of vastly important sanitary matters which it is in every way desirable should be disposed of ere the summer sets in. It is high time, too, that the meat question was settled in a common-sense way. Prompt action should be taken to ensure that at least our main thoroughfares shall present a decent appearance in the matter of sidewalks this summer. Parts of St. James street and Notre Dame street are positively disgraceful. A good model pavement is that in front of Morgan's store.

Is it expecting too much to look for the establishment of Public Baths this year?

Spring, Spring, Gentle Spring.

The weather just now is calculated to bother "the oldest inhabitant" and must be particularly trying to young ladies "dying" to air their spring finery. Up to Saturday matters looked pretty fair; the last vestiges of ice and snow were disappearing from the most sheltered nooks, the streets were getting dried up, the wharves were showing themselves and boys were even "going a-fishing." Here and there one met a white hat and an occasional enthusiast minus an overcoat was among the city sights. Shop-keepers rubbed their hands and said to their neighbors in tones admitting of no denial "Well, we've got spring at last." But we hadn't; not by a long way. When the time came for opening one's eyes on Sunday morning there was a peculiar quietness in the streets and an unwonted brightness in the room; a glance through the panes explained the matter—it had been snowing, yes, and it was snowing—and it evidently was going to keep on snowing. And it did. Down it came; nice fleecy lumps, liberal in size and quantity, from morn to night, till the city presented a mid-winter aspect, and one felt inclined to wish that it was given man to hybernate like bears and butterflies. However, we have the satisfaction of knowing that the visitation was not local. From various parts of the United States come telegrams telling of worse misfortunes than have fallen to our lot. In New York State the snow was accompanied by what the telegraphers term "a terrific storm," and indeed the title seems well deserved when we hear that trains had to "lay to" in sheltered spots for fear of being blown from the rails." That is decidedly the biggest "blow" we have come across for some time. Then, again, while we had from six inches to a foot of "the beautiful" Poughkeepsie, N.Y., is under four feet of it! Interesting statistics these for U. S. emigration pamphlets, eh! Don't let us hear anything about Canada's "Artic climate" after this. But we are assured that the snow will do good and we are bound to believe it.

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION.

Sermon by Rev. Gavin Lang—The Position and Responsibility of Unpledged Temperance People—Question Viewed from Standpoint of non-Total Abstainer—Suggestions Towards the Solution of the Great Problem of the Age.

The Rev. Gavin Lang preached yesterday morning in St Andrew's Church, treating upon the position and responsibility of unpledged temperance people regarding the temperance movement; his text was 1 Corinthians, 10-15: "I speak as to wise men, judge ye what I say."

It seems to me that there is need for utterances on the subject of temperance generally, on a different key-note from that of many which find their way into the public ear. To men who are accustomed to think for themselves the tone of the majority of these is objectionable, because they too frequently exhibit not so much the strong points as what have been called, "the excesses and the counterfeits of a noble reform." One of the most extensively circulated religious journals of the day, in writing of "intemperate Temperance," observes, "there is a strong tendency to a tyranny of public opinion upon this matter among good people—in advocating Total Abstinence as the wisest course, it should be distinctly recognised that a man may hold different views without being any the less a Christian or a good man." Statements of a wild and inflammatory character, such as are constantly issuing from the Pulpit, the Press, and the Platform, are not calculated to be of any lasting benefit. As a rule, they only reach those who are prepared beforehand to receive them without challenge, or those others who are more swayed for the moment by rhetoric than permanently by argument. And then, we are apt to forget them; although thousands may be attracted, there are tens of thousands who are repelled, by merely sensational services in churches, articles in newspapers, or declamations at meetings. I am painfully impressed with the consciousness that, in this way, the cause of Temperance suffers incalculably. We see the pernicious effect of this kind of teaching, chiefly upon the upper ranks of Society. Instead of our more powerful citizens coming forward, in any large numbers, to assist in the suppression of Intemperance, they are driven back into an attitude of indifference, perhaps hostility, by the harsh and irritating strictures of well-meaning people. Their support is acknowledged to be indispensable, in so far as anything short of Divine grace is indispensable, for the accomplishment of that end; and this they are, I am persuaded, ready to give when rightly and rationally directed. But they are hindered from following the bent of patriotic inclination by the intolerance which, because they do not use the shibboleth of total abstinence, would stigmatise them as enemies to the cause of Temperance. And it was with the hope of bridging the gulf which has so long separated these two divisions of the great Temperance army that, upwards of a year ago, I ventured, in preaching from this very text, to make a suggestion as to the feasibility of forming a comprehensive Temperance Union which should embrace all of every nationality and creed who live soberly, whether they go the full length of total abstinence or not.

I am thankful that that suggestion, although then made for the first time in this Dominion, was endorsed by the most of those who make it their study to look at such questions without bias or prejudice. It was inspired partly by the circumstance that the plan it indicated was in actual operation with good results in connection with the sister Church of England at home, but more particularly because I had come to realize that outside the comparatively small circle of those who have taken the step of "signing the pledge," there is a host of men and women who daily and scrupulously cultivate temperate habits, and whose desires in that direction are as keen as those which are engaged on the side of a rigid Total Abstinence. I felt that as Intemperance was a grievous sin against society as a whole, the task of its removal should not in fairness be left to any one sect of the community; and that until the sympathies of the larger number of Temperance Christians were enlisted, no very satisfactory progress could be made in checking the spread of the evil which we all deplore.

He mentioned the formation of the Temperance Vigilance Association in this connection, upon such a platform, and the amended License Act which has been the sequel of their combined exertion; and alluded to the organization of similar associations in other cities of the Dominion and in New York, where, he observed, the principle has found its most remarkable sanction and embodiment. Only some weeks ago, he continued, at a conference of the leading ministers of the various churches composed for the most part of total abstainers, and called to deliberate upon the best means of more effectually dealing with intemperance at New York, one of the resolutions proposed contained the phrase "intelligent and consistent temperance." An attempt to change the phrase to "total abstinence" was almost unanimously defeated for no other reason than that it was thought essential to draw all the temperance sentiment into future temperance action.

Dr. John Hall, in reply to unfavorable comments made upon this feature of the Conference and as the mover of the resolutions passed, has gone out of his way to explain that the expression assailed "was intended to exclude rant cant, dogmatism, and the honest or dishonest blundering which makes the reform a religion. It is not intelligent and consistent Temperance," he goes on to say "to impute base motives, to employ abusive language against honest men if they are not total abstainers; to settle nice and still disputed questions in Hebrew, in Chemistry, in Physiology in language which the great world outside takes as proof that the speakers are under-educated, to rest a good cause on doubtful when it can be sustained on assured ground, or to strike as vehemently and passionately at fellow-laborers on the right and left as at the common enemy in front." The truth is—and this is the point to which I wish to bring our reflections—there is a place for us all in the Temperance movement, and the responsibility is laid upon us all to occupy that place. It is given us by God in His word, and no man can deprive us of it. Intemperance affects all alike. It is the enemy of both God and man. I ask when it is coming in like a flood on all sides, is it time to battle among ourselves about the exact ground on which as Temperance people we ought to stand. On the contrary, there is a supreme necessity for an exercise of forbearance in this matter towards one another. There are those who have no hesitation, there are those who have, in taking pledges to man. There are those who have made up their minds that there is no cure for Intemperance save the passing of a Prohibitory Law, there are those who do not see either logic or justice in reasoning by which it is sought that enforced prohibition would be a legitimate or an effectual remedy. Then there are those who, like myself, are convinced that Temperance principles will never wield their proper influence, or even Prohibition be possible, without the co-operation of those who, as the largest contributors to the State, are consequently the most powerful in it. Cannot we all agree to differ on such subjects without quarrelling over them? We are all entitled to credit for conscientiousness and sincerity. We are, most certainly, all concerned in the alarming prevalence of drunkenness. Archbishop Manning declared lately in London "that if the enormous traffic in liquors continued to extend itself year after year unchecked, the day would come when Parliament would be unable to cope with it." How is it to be checked? It is quite plain that all exertions which have been made hitherto have failed to bear the fruit which the hugeness and elaborateness of the machinery set in motion, or the pretensions advanced, justified us in expecting.

All honour and praise to Total Abstainers for their honesty of purpose, and the vigour with which they have prosecuted their labours! But, it is because these labours might be so much more crowned with blessing than they are, and because the emergency requires additional labourers, that I have advocated, and advocate still, an immediate and complete junction between pledged and unpledged temperance brethren. I will be pardoned for saying that the counsel of moderate men will do no harm, likely much good, to those who are inclined to be extreme in their views. Dr. Howard Crosby, one of the most gifted and learned ministers on our Continent, complains of the latter that they "make many to confound Total Abstinence with religion. The Churches," he charges, "swarm with Total Abstinence Societies, Total Abstinence prayer-meetings, Total Abstinence celebrations, Total Abstinence Bands of Hope, and Total Abstinence literature, until it is the most natural thing in the world to suppose that total abstinence is the one great burden of the Gospel." Is there not some little grain of truth in this criticism? But, on the other hand, are not we who are non-Abstainers open to the reproach of being lukewarm in our endeavors to stay the ravages of that Demon which stalks abroad on our streets, darkens many of our homes and hearts, and fills our jails with criminals? I spoke last year of the principal cause of drunkenness being a want of sunshine and a neglect of outward comfort in the dwellings of its victims. How much thought have those of us who could do something to alleviate these miseries bestowed upon a consideration of such importance? Let us, at least, be more active and eager in the future to help us in the holy crusade against Intemperance; and now that the door is opened to all who are willing to work on behalf of Temperance, to enter in and do what in us lies for our neighbor and for Christ. What we want and what we can bring about is a union of practical men, by whatever name they are called, who will strive to solve the great social problem, which is staring us in the face, with all the warmth and wisdom of philanthropists. What we do not want is men who are loud in accusing and denouncing others, but are never themselves found among those who are yielding time, energy, and sacrifice if, by any means, they may pour oil into this deep, open and festering wound of humanity.

In conclusion he pointed out that in this great work they needed consecration from above—the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

In the evening, Rev. Mr. Lang preached a second sermon, giving a general treatment of the temperance question.

ROUND TOWN.

— The Brydges Testimonial Fund has been increased to $8,815.

— Adjourned meeting of Christ Church Cathedral Vestry this evening.

— The governors of the House of Industry and Refuge meet to-morrow afternoon to elect office-bearers.

— Annual convocation for conferring degrees in Arts, in the William Molson Hall, McGill University, on Thursday next.

—We call attention to the adjourned meeting of the Montreal Pedestrian Club, which takes place to-night in the Gymnasium.

— A new spectacular piece will be put on the boards at the Theatre Royal to-morrow night entitled "The Magic Talisman, a Tale of Enchantment."

—The annual meeting of the Montreal Cricket Club will be held on Wednesday evening next at 8 o'clock, in the St. Lawrence Hall, when the names of parties desirous of joining will be received.

— A correspondent desires the Sanitary Police to visit Dorchester st., near Colborne Avenue, where he says there are several tenements and yards that require looking after.

— Dr. B. J. Harrington will read at the monthly meeting of the Natural History Society this evening, a paper on a number of the trap dykes to be found near the base of the Montreal mountain.

— Many of our readers will be pleased to hear that Mr. Fred. Boscovitz has been giving some successful concerts at St. John, N. B. The local papers report that he had large and delighted audiences.

— At the annual meeting of the Scandinavian Society, held on the 24th, the following were elected officers for the ensuing year: C. C. Bennet, President; J. J. Olson, Vice-President; Henry Bennet, Secretary, re-elected; A. Schmidt, Treasurer, re-elected.

MR. SHAW begs to call the particular attention of parties furnishing elegant residences to the mirrors, carpets, gasaliers, rich curtains, &c., to be sold at the residence of Geo. Desbarats, Esq., on Wednesday, 6th of May. These will be found among the finest in the city. Most of the furniture to be sold is by Thompson.

NOON TELEGRAMS.

The News of New Brunswick.

[Press Dispatch.]

ST. JOHN, N. B., April 27.

The difficulty between the mill-operatives and the mill-owners still continues. The Employers' Association comprises nine-tenths of all the mill-owners in or near St. John, and they declare that they will shut down every mill rather than submit to the tyranny of the trades union.

These combinations are working serious injury to the trade of the port, and there is every prospect of serious trouble ahead.

This morning at two o'clock a most destructive fire broke out on the north side of King square; two hotels and several stores were completely gutted; very little insurance; several of the boarders had narrow escapes for their lives, many lost their clothing; one woman was found by a fireman insensible and nearly suffocated. She was promptly conveyed to a place of safety. A heavy gale from N. E., with a snow storm, prevailed all night, and it was not till five a.m., that, with the three powerful steamers and an abundance of water, the flames were got under.

News of Quebec.

[Press Despatch.]

QUEBEC, April 27.

The Court of Queen's Bench opened this morning at ten, Justice Taschereau presiding. The calendar is a large one, including two cases for wilful murder.

An easterly storm prevailed all day yesterday, breaking up the ice bridge near Indian Cove, and opening cracks opposite the city. It is expected to go with the first high tides.

Weather warmer to-day.

THE DAILY MURDER.

NORFOLK, Va., April 27.

During a fight yesterday among some intoxicated men and a policeman, a young man named John Gaylord was fatally shot by a man, supposed to be Tobias Nottingham, who has fled.

U. S. FAILURES.

NEW YORK, April 27.

The number of failures in the United States for 1872 were 4,069; total liabilities, $121,056,000; for 1873, 5,183; total liabilties, $228,499,000.

A NEW PAPER.

NEW YORK, April 27.

Weather mild, cold and clear.

The Sun's Washington despatch says arrangements are completed there for establishing a new administration morning daily in New York, and negotiations are now going on with two papers with a view to purchasing two of them.

Orange Judd, editor of the Agriculturist and Hearth and Home, is reported dying in Italy.

FIRE—FINANCIAL.

NEW YORK, April 27.

The Fourth New Jersey Regimental Armory, Jersey City, was burnt last night. Loss, $10,000.

The Times says, financially, we apprehend that it is now too late in the season for serious disturbance to price or abundance of money by political events at Washington. Whatever may be finally agreed upon between Congress and the Executive on the question, the effect will come practically upon the fall trade rather than on the summer money market.

U. S. POLITICS.

NEW YORK, April 27.

A Washington special says some of the leading senators who voted for the Senate Finance Bill state that, contrary to the general impression, it is not their purpose to precipitate the debate upon the veto message. Many inflationists are now willing to make the House Bill and attach to it the farewell amendment which was before voted down.

Grave charges are made against prominent officials here of knowing in advance that the veto was coming and then telegraphing a statement to the contrary to New York to mislead the public and affect the stock market.

WANTS TO BE HANGED.

WELLAND, Ont., April 25.

Michael Finn, charged with assaulting his wife with intent to kill on 6th Nov. at Thorold Villiage, was found guilty of murder in a legal sense at the assizes just closed, and to-day sentenced to death by Justice O'Reilly, 4th July being the day fixed for execution. While passing sentence, His Lordship said he would represent the case to Government as favourable as circumstances would permit. The prisoner thanked His Lordship, and expressed a wish that the sentence would be carried out. Finn was convicted mainly on the evidence of his wife, who has recovered.

FITTING.

Nothing is so unpleasant as a badly fitting Shirt. It is not only uncomfortable to the wearer, but it spoils the fit of the rest of the dress. To those Gentlemen who have suffered in this respect, I would say, give me a trial. I have given great attention to this department, and long experience warrants me in guaranteeing a perfect fitting Shirt. Gentlemen can have a single Shirt made as a sample, and can then order when they find themselves fitted. Orders given before the rush of the spring business will have the advantage of the best sewers, and the SHIRTS need not be delivered before the summer months if desired.

A Fair Field and no Favor.

The Hamilton Times (Grit), a paper that once refused to see that Canadian interests were not treated fairly by the tariff, now frankely owns that such is the case. Alluding to the evidence given by manufacturers at Ottawa, our contemporary says:—

"It is satisfactory to find that in so many of these industries our men can hold their own against the world if they only have a fair field without favor. It is almost wrong to call what they ask by the distasteful [to many] name of "protection," as they chiefly seek to be saved, not from legitimate competition, but from the illegitimate exclusion from United States markets by a hostile tariff on the one hand, or on the other from the illegitimate use of our markets by rivals who enter them less to secure profit for themseves than to embarrass and crush our industries."

News of Quebec.

[Press Despatch.]

QUEBEC, April 27.

Rev. David Marsh, for many years pastor of the Baptist Church in this city, has resigned his charge. A successor has not yet been appointed.

Rev. W. H. Kay, assistant minister of St. Matthew's (Episcopal) Church, returns to England this week

Bark Renfrewshire, which cleared from this port on the 15th of October with a valuable cargo of timber for Greenock, was wrecked on Otto Point, Anticosti, on the 27th of the same month. The vessel is a total wreck. The crew was saved.

Brigt. Alexina, from Labrador, for Montreal, with a cargo of fish and oil, went ashore at Sand Top, east point of Anticosti, on the 19th of November. The crew was saved. Both crews, numbering 22 men, arrived in Gaspe on Saturday, the 25th inst. One man, named Deronin, of the Alexina, died on the 16th inst.

The ship South America cleared for London on the 25th, and the schrs. Lady Elgin, for Gaspe, and J. Marie, for Labrador.

Navigation Notes.

The ss. Sarmation passed Port au Basque, Nfld, at 6.30 o'clock on Sunday morning, being the first arrival from sea.

A barkentine passed west in the evening.

THREE RIVERS.—No ice passing; the ice in the Lake firm; weather mild.

SOREL.—No change in the ice this a.m; persons still crossing.

VERCHERES.—The ice shoved here yesterday; river clear.

VARENNES.—All clear here; ice went out Saturday morning.

ANOTHER CURIOUS VERDICT.

TORONTO, April 26.

The body of an infant was found on Friday night in a water-closet attached to the residence of H. D. Booth, on River and Don streets. The suspicion is that the servant girl, named Lizzie Herbert, is the mother of the child. She was in Booth's employ some months ago and left suddenly, complaining of being very ill. No suspicion was excited at the time, but the finding of the body points this circumstance home to her. An inquest was held yesterday afternoon, and a verdict of "died from the neglect of Lizzie Herbert" was returned.

ROUND TOWN.

—The Mayor has returned to town.

—Mr. A. H. Magrath has been appointed organist and choir master of St. Stephen's Church, in room of F. W. Evans, Esq., resigned.

—Fortification Lane, from end to end, sadly needs tidying up at the hands of the Road Department. The sidewalks are almost wholly covered with refuse, vehicles, old machinery, &c.

—M. A. Duseve, of the Brigade office, has been gazetted paymaster of the Mount Royal Rifles, 65th Battalion, in place of M. Cinq Mars, resigned; the latter in consideration of services rendered is permitted to retain his rank as Captain.

—Andrew McNeil, a young man, pleading guilty at the Police Court this morning, to a charge of assaulting one Defima Cinq Mars, a co-employee, was fined $10 or one month. James A. Edwards, late Brigade Sergeant-Major of Montreal Garrison Artillery, was fined $20 and costs or twenty days, for refusing to return his regimental uniform.

—The Floral Festival of 28th inst., at Mechanics' Hall, promises to be a success. A special messenger has been sent to Boston to procure flowers, which, with the contributions from our own greenhouses, will make a very gorgeous tropical display, and we hope all lovers of the beautiful in Nature will avail themselves of this entertainment. Admission only 25 cents.

—The members of the Corn Exchange Association met on Saturday and adopted the proposed amendments to the Inspection Law, with some additions; an additional clause was inserted to vest the appointment of Boards of Examiners with the Committee of Management of the Association instead of the Board of Trade, such Board to be elected annually in April. Copies of the resolutions will be forwarded to the city representatives in the Commons, with the request to use their influence in obtaining action in the matter. A special meeting of the Association will be held next Wednesday afternoon to consider the central system, recommended by the Dominion Board of Trade, and other important questions.

—Gold opened at 112⅞ and advanced to 112¼; bank 60-days' sterling varied from 109¼ to 109⅞; bank gold drafts from ⅛ to ⅛ per cent. premium.

The stock market was dull and somewhat less favorable: Montreal, Ontario, Toronto, Commerce and Montreal Telegraph dropped each a fraction.

American Securities were dull and weak:

Pacific Mail, 43, 43¾; W.U. Telegraph, 70¾, 70⅞; N. Y. Central, 98, 98 1-8; Erie 34¾, —; Michigan Southern, 75⅞, —; Rock Island, 99⅛, 98⅞; North-West, 46¼ 45⅞; North-West Preferred, —; Union Pacific, 32¼; Ohio and Mississippi, 26½, —; C. C. & I. C., 22¼; Toledo and Wabash, 41⅞; St. Paul, 37⅞; Delaware, —; 5-20 Bonds, 114¾.

Exchange advanced from from 4.86½ to 4.87.

Interest to carry gold stood at 3½ per cent.

Sales at the noon Board:—

THE fine residence and costly furniture in Berri street will be sold to-morrow morning by Benning & Barsalou.—See adv.

TO-MORROW afternoon a valuable piano and organ, at the residence of the late Professor Pierce, 148 St. Antoine street, will be sold by Mr. Shaw. See advt.

THE clearing sale to be held at Messrs. Devany & Co.'s salerooms this evening embraces a large quantity of Messrs. R. Hay & Co.'s celebrated furniture, including handsome drawing room, parlor, bedroom and dining room suites, hall stands, Canterburys, sofas, hair and cane seat chairs, &c., as well as a collection of good second hand furniture removed to their rooms for convenience of sale. The hour is convenient for those engaged during the day, being 7:30 p.m.

POST-OFFICE INVESTIGATION.

At the investigation this morning Mr. Wright applied for permission to produce evidence in rebuttal of what Mr. Emery had said about him. Mr. Davidson said he had other witnesses to call; if Mr. Wright would wait he could be heard afterwards.

R. J. Arless, re-called and cross-examined, said he had known Mr. Wright since 1865, and would not believe him under oath in cases where Mr. Palmer or Mr. Emery were concerned. Knew Palmer well and, judging from his character, could not believe him guilty of taking the letter. Did not recognize any resemblance between Palmer's writing and the fac-simile.

Mr. John McKeown, clerk in Post-office for 21 years: had known Mr. Wright since 1861, and Mr. Palmer for 25 years. Would not believe Mr. Wright under oath in matters where Mr. Palmer was concerned. Had a very high opinion of Palmer, and from his character did not think him capable of taking the Pope-Macdonald letter. Saw the fac-simile and did not think it was Palmer's writing.

OTTAWA, April 27.

All leading Frenchmen were present at St. Joseph Church yesterday, including Dr. St. Jean, at the presentation to Archbishop Tache. The French address was read by Dr. St. Jean, M. P., and the English one by Mr. M. Higgin, a clerk in one of the Departments. The Archbishop replied both in French and English. He expressed his desire for peace and order, of his love for the Queen, and of his effort to place matters in that Province upon a satisfactory footing. The Frenchmen were

MOST ENTHUSIASTIC.

Hon. Letellier de St. Just was called upon to make a few remarks, but abstained from doing so.

The sub-Committee of Public Accounts is now engaged enquiring into the charges made by Mr. Cunningham into the extravagant expenditures connected with the Dawson Road. The Committee sits with closed doors.

The Times says at the meeting of the Committee of Ball to the Governor-General the Treasurer brought in the report showing that there was a surplus over and above all expenses of about $900. This sum it was decided should be divided by giving 70 per cent to the Protestant General Hosdital and 20 per cent each to the Protestant Orphans Home, the St. Joseph Orphans Home and the St. Patrick's Orphans Home.

The Times, on the subject of Government railroads in Nova Scotia, says the Government have made up their minds to deal with this subject shortly, and from the facts brought out they cannot act a day too soon. No public works should be allowed to continue a drain on the public exchequer if there is any means of averting it. The Dominion has sufficient new responsibilities to meet as regards both West and East without a heavy annual deficit on account of the Lower Province railroads. If they can be worked to advantage by private companies, then let the latter have them. They will still be of service to the general trade of the country. Even if Mr. Alexander's figures doubled the actual loss, which is not as yet proved, beyond doubt, besides all the past and prospective outlay on the Intercolonial, is a little too much of a good thing. The duty of the hour is economy in every possible direction and those public works stand out as very inviting objects to all who value this species of reform."

A SACRIFICE OF $450,000 A YEAR,

Rev. Mr. McCormic, of Kentucky, entered yesterday on the pastoral of the Reformed Episcopal Church. In the evening he discoursed on the causes of secession from the Protestant Church of the States. As a preacher Mr. McCormic is an improvement on Dr. Gallagher. He is a middle-aged man and has been twenty years in the Ministry; he has less of what Canadians generally style the American accent than his predecessor, and of the style of our neighbors both as regards form of thought and manner of delivery.

The Postmaster-General entertained a number of members at his residence on Saturday night.

At the ovation yesterday to Archbishop Tache and Father Ritchot the following reference was made in the address to the troubles in Manitoba and the part the Archbishop played in them:—It would ill-become us to pass over in silence the prominent and important part played by your grace in connection with the unhappy difficulty which occured in Manitoba; promptly and patriotically responding to the call of the Governor of the day you hastened away from the celebration of the most august assemblage presided over by the illustrious Pius IX., at a time when Rome was more attractive for a prelate of the Church than at any other period in modern days. With admirable self-denial you did violence to your feelings; you tore yourself away from the Eternal City and sped across a great part of two continents and the wide ocean to restore peace, order and harmony in a distant portion of Her Majesty's empire; for the satisfactory and successful manner in which you accomplished this most important and delicate mission, your Grace is justly entitled to the lasting and heartfelt gratitude of every true Canadian. As far as our feeble voice can extend, we earnestly deprecate and protest against the false construction placed upon your Grace's actions and motives, and those of your estimable friend and co-operator in this good work, Father Ritchot, by a certain portion of the press of Ontario. During all that trying crisis you did no more than discharge the supreme duty of and maintains those eternal principles of right and wrong which have them in the light of God.

CONGREGATED IN THE VATICAN,

After the Archbishop had replied, Father Ritchot made a long and very plausible speech.

Bishop Lewis' change of base in regard to the Anglican Church question, as evidenced by his second lecture, is again subject of correspondence in the papers, a writer this morning congratulating him and the diocese upon the change for the better.

Some dissatisfaction is felt by the Lower Province members of both parties at the remarks of Senator Alexander and others with reference to the great cost of the Government Railways in the Maritime Province.

THE TARIFF.

It is understood that Cartwright will make modifications to meet some of the objections raised by the interests struck at. It is believed the Ministers are not absolutely of one mind as to the amount of the increase that should be made in the duties, some leaning more towards protection than others, but the "Free Trade" element has the larger influence in the Cabinet, and it is not probable that the line of twenty per cent. on foreign manufactures will be reached: It is known in the best informed quarters that will not be as good this year as formerly, partly owing to the high freights demanded, as also to the tameness of the trade in England.

Mr. Quinn, Superintendent of Cullers of Quebec, has arrived here to give his evidence before the Committee considering the re-organization of the Cullers Department. The reformers of this office desire a considerable reduction in the number of cullers, which has been petitioned for by some of these men themselves; the understanding being that those struck off the list would receive a year's pay. When reformed it is expected that there will be less favoritism less charge upon the trade, and better remuneration for removing cullers than at present. Reorganization is very probable.

News of the West.

[Special to the STAR.]

TORONTO, April 27.

In the Police Court this morning ten men were charged with violent assaults committed on the streets last night. In one case in which a man named Rodden attempted to strike a gentleman named Wm. Wright, it was shown that the motive was that the prosecutor had been a witness in a case against Rodden's brother in the police court last week.

ANOTHER LIVELY VERDICT.

The libel suit against H. T. Butler, editor of the Stratford Herald, was concluded on Saturday night by the jury returning a verdict of guilty of libel without malice. The Judge sent them back twice, instructing them that the verdict was tantamount and to not guilty; but they refused to make any alteration and were finally discharged.

Several large meetings were held here yesterday in favor of Prohibition, and petitions were numerously signed in Hamilton.

A PETITION FORTY YARDS LONG

was sent to Parliament.

It is rumored this morning that the murderers of Needham at St. Catharines have been arrested at Hamilton.

Propeller Enterprise from Port Dalhousie arrived at Kingston Saturday night, with 22,000 bushels of wheat for the Montreal Transportation Company.

The Globe this morning publishes a long editorial on Canon Kingsley who lectures here to-night. Great amusement is caused by its patronizing and supercilious tone.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH, QUEBEC.

QUEBEC, April 27.

The Queen's Bench Court opened this morning.

Six men were arrested yesterday for intimidating two witnesses in the Baker murder case. The Grand Jury this morning brought in a true bill against them. Trial fixed for next week.

The principal witnesses in the murder case have been brought from Pensacola and England, where they have been residing this winter.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

[Press Despatch.]

OTTAWA, April 27.

PETITIONS

Praying that the use of seines be abolished in the catching of codfish; for the encouragement and protection of home industries; of Northern Railroad, for leave to change their guage, were presented.

Mr. Page introduced a bill to amend Act 21st Vic., Cap. 17.—Second reading.

A bill to amalgamate the Canadian Telegraph Supply Manufacturing Company (limited) and the Toronto Manufacturing Company (limited) under the name of the Electric and Hardware Manufacturing Company (limited)—Mr. MacLennan.

To incorporate the Bank of Ottawa—Mr. Blackburn.

To incorporate the Calais and St. Stephen Railway Bridge Company—Mr. Appleby.

A bill for granting certain powers to the Richelieu River Hydraulic and Manufacturing Company—Mr. Jodoin.

In answer to Mr. Costigan, Hon Mr. Mackenie said the Government did not intend making any improvements on the St. John River above that portion which was navigable.

In answer to Mr. Forbes, D. A. Macdonald said it was not the intention of the Government to establish this year a semi-monthly steam mail service between the British and foreign West Indies and Canada, but it was engaging its attention and would be considered during the year.

In answer to Mr. Palmer Mr. Mackenzie said that Government has some negotiation in progress with the United States Government to obtain a Reciprocity Treaty, and of which, when they were completed, Government would be happy to inform the House and the hon. gentleman.

FIRE! FIRE! FIRE!

Small appliances, promptly used, have prevented many disastrous fires. The celebrated JOHNSON FORCE PUMP and FIRE ANNIHILATOR has proved a great success. The following testimonials are taken from a large number:—

Telegram from ex-Alderman Frye, London, June 2nd:

"Send another dozen of the JOHNSON; did good service at a fire last night."

Major Hambly, Belleville, says: "To it I owe the the prevention of what might have been a terribly disastrous fire."

"Without being able to replace it, I would not part with it for its weight in gold."

The Canadian Champion, Milton, of April 17th, 1873, says:—"We should not omit to mention a little Johnson hand-pump, of Mr. C. Racey's, which did valuable service in keeping the fire from spreading, and the way in which it threw the water was the theme of much praise."

Guaranteed equal to any $60 Extinguisher in the incipient stages of a fire. Sample one, for the present, on receipt of $6.

THE DEEP SECRET;

OR,

THE LIVING WONDER.

"How Geoffrey Trevelyan would laugh in his soul after that assurance," said Adlowe, with a demon's sneer. "How well your lordship has been entrapped by your assissin nephew! How completely you have fallen a victim to the wiles of his siren daughter! You have made a will bequeathing her a fortune. You have taken her to your heart. You have made her mistress of your house——"

"Whom?"

"Geoffrey Trevelyan's daughter! That siren-faced girl at your feet, Giralda Trevelyan!"

The marquis turned his gaze fully upon the now kneeling girl. Her white face gleamed through the twilight like the face of a dead woman. Her eyes, wild and anguished, shone on him in their full splendour—those eyes so like those of Geoffrey Trevelyan.

The truth of her identity rushed upon his soul in a quick flood!

He saw not her sweet, innocent face, her looks of frightened pleading, her utter terror—he saw only that she had under her fair brows eyes fatally like those of the man he cruelly hated.

"Ah, I have been duped—duped!" he hissed between his closed teeth. "It is the second time! And I believed her as innocent as an angel! She has warmed herself into my heart as Geoffrey did, only to sting me more cruelly. Oh, heaven!" and his voice rang out in a great burst of anguish, and he looked wildly upward. "Surely heaven must pity one so wronged and deceived as I!"

"Uncle! uncle!" cried Giralda, clinging to his keens in wild despair. "Papa is innocent! Oh, forgive him! He did not send me here. I did not know until we went to London that papa was Geoffrey Trevelyan—that I was really your niece by blood! Oh, uncle, take papa back! He never harmed you—never!"

"She acknowledges it!" said the marquis, hollowly, continuining to gaze upward. "She owns that she is the daughter of Geoffrey Trevelyan. Until now I had hoped——"

"My lord," said Adlowe, I came here from abroad unknowing that Geoffrey lived. That girl's eyes aroused my suspicions. I hired a detective and tracked my unworthy cousin. I learned the whole story of his base plotting. I beheld myself threatened with poverty, after years of expected wealth. In my depair I resolved to meet Geoffrey's plots with counterplots. I resolved to marry his daughter, and thus secure myself against a penniless future. I proposed marriage to her and she refused me. I carried her off, and she escaped. I am here to-night to carry her off again, it she should again refuse me. I am a reckless, desperate man, my lord. I have been outwitted in every way, defeated in all my dearest schemes, and now my infamous cousin steps in between me and my expected inheritance!"

In the depths of his own despair, Lord Trevelyan thought less harshly of the wrongdoings of his nephew.

"Say no more, Adlowe," he said, huskily. We will join hands in the pursuit of Geoffrey. The sum I intended for this girl shall be yours. We will be revenged upon Geoffrey and punish him as he deserves. We will crush his family. You and I will work together. He shall see that he has mocked at me too soon!"

Overcome with joy, Adlowe stretched out his hand. The marquis did not take it.

"Uncle! Oh, uncle!" moaned Giralda, clasping his knees, "papa is innocent! He loves you, uncle. Be merciful to him, to mamma, to my poor brothers!"

"Hush!" said his lordship, harshly, turning away his head, for he dared not look upon the sweet face he still so dearly loved, and he dared not listen to her tremulous voice, which yet had power to stir his soul to its lowest depths. "I loved you, and you deceived me. I might have known that you would have been base and scheming, for you had his eyes! Out of my sight, girl! I cannot bear to look upon your face. Away! Leave my house! Let me never look into your treacherous eyes again!"

He broke from her roughly.

Giralda tottered to her feet and stood facing him, compelling him by her steadfast gaze to look at her. He could just see that her cheeks glowed, and that her eyes shone like stars under her glistening rings of hair, and then she bore herself like an insulted princess.

"Lord Trevelyan," she said, in a tone that enforced his attention, "you have cruelly wronged papa. You have cruelly wronged me. In sending me away, you send from you the heart that loves you best in all the world. In spite of your harshness and cruel prejudices and revengefulness, I love you now, uncle. If you should ever need me I will come to you. This man," and she indicated Lord Adlowe, "has been your evil genius. It was he who concocted the plan to ruin poor papa. It is who has persecuted me from the hour he beheld me under your roof. Some day, my lord, you will know the truth. Some day justice must triumph and wickedness be punished. When I can prove papa's innocence and Lord Adlowe's guilt, we shall meet again. Till then, farewell!"

She turned away, gliding like a spirit into a shadows.

Lord Trevelyan aroused himself from the brief trance into which he had fallen, and his love for Giralda asserted itself; and forgetting all the charges of Adlowe, forgetting his hatred of Geoffrey Trevelyan—remembering only that mighty love—he stretched out his arms, and cried in the anguish of his storm-tossed soul—

"Oh, Giralda! my darling! Come back! come back!"

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Lord Trevelyan's distressful cry did not reach the ears for which it was intended. Half wild with excitement, Giralda had plunged into the shrubbery, not knowing or caring whither she went. To get away from the Park, and the mocking face and voice of her enemy, possessed her. She had, however, not progressed far in her wild flight through those trackless shades, when a woman's figure darted out into her very pathway, and a woman's hand caught her by the arm, bringing her to an abrupt halt.

The figure and the hand belonged to Mrs. Pumpton, the housekeeper at the Park.

Giralda looked at her in a bewildered way, recognizing her, and strove to break from her detaining grasp.

"Let me go! Let me go!" she panted, trembling like a deer brought to bay. "He told me to begone!"

"I know it," cried Mrs. Pumpton, all excitement and tears. "I heard it all, Miss Giralda! I was looking for you, knowing that you had gone to walk in the shrubbery alone. I came upon you in the glade at the moment my lord did. How his lordship raged! And Mr. Geoffrey's alive! Thank heaven, my prayers are answered!"

The good woman sobbed in the very excess of joy.

"And you are Mr. Geoffrey's daughter?" she continued, clinging to Giralda's hand. "I might have known it by your bonny eyes. I wonder I never suspected it. How blind I have been! Don't tremble so, my poor lamb. You've got a friend in me."

The housekeeper's tone of hearty kindness soothed Giralda's nerves, and she fell upon the good souls's ample bosom, and wept convulsively.

"It is so hard to bear!" she sobbed. "Papa is safe and they cannot harm him, but Lord Trevelyan will never be assured of papa's innocence! Oh, Mrs. Pumpton, I have hoped for so much, and now——"

"There! There!" said the worthy housekeeper, soothing the maiden as if she had been a child. "It will be all right some day, Miss Giralda. Don't go to crying yourself sick, my poor lamb. Think of Mr. Geoffrey and the rest of them. Don't loose your courage now at this late day."

Thus adjured, Giralda began to grow calmer.

"You must come into the house now, Miss Giralda," said Mrs. Pumpton, who was brimming over with joyful importance at the prospect of aiding even indirectly her beloved Mr. Geoffrey. "No, you won't see anybody," she protested, as the girl began to object. "You shall go in to my quiet little room, and we'll talk about your going away there at our leisure."

Giralda yielded to the woman's persuasion, and the two, hand in hand, threaded the dark shrubbery, crossed the shaded lawn, and gained the housekeeper's room, in the rear wing of the mansion, without being seen.

The glazed door of Mrs. Pumpton's room stood invitingly open, but there was no light save the faint glow emitted by the few embers in the grate. The housekeeper stirred the fire, closed the doors and shutters, and lighted a lamp.

A WIFE'S LITTLE TROUBLES.

The following letter from Lady Compton to her husband, Lord Compton, afterward Earl of Northampton, written in the year 1610, the eighth year of James I., shows that our grandmothers were not so sparing of their husbands' purses, after all, as some would have us think of them:

MY SWEET LIFE: Now I have declared to you my mind for the settling of your state, I suppose it were best for me to b think and consider within myself what allowance were meetest for me. I pray and beseech you to grant me, your most kind and loving wife, the sum of £2,600 ($13,000), quarterly to be paid. Also, I would besides that allowance, have £600 ($3,000) quarterly to be paid, for the performance of charitable work; and those things I would not, neither will, be accountable for.

Also, I will have three hrrses for my own saddle that none shall dare to lend or borrow; none lend but I, none borrow but you. Also, I would have two gentlewoman, lest one should be sick or have some other let. Also, believe it, it is an undecent thing for a gentleman to stand mumping alone, [illegible] hath blessed their lord and lady with a great estate. Also, when I ride a hunting, or a hawking, or travel from one house to another, I will have them attending; so, for either of those said women, I must and will have for either of them a horse. Also, I will have six or eight gentlemen; and I will have my two coaches, one lined with velvet to myself, with four very fair horses; and a coach for my woman lined with and laced with gold, otherwise with scarlet and laced with silver, with four horses. Also, I will have two coachmen—one for my own coach, the other for my women. Also, for that it is undecent for myself with my gentleman-usher in my coach, I will have him to have a convenint horse to attend me, either in city or country. And I must have two footmen. And my desire is that you defray all the charges for me.

And for myself, besides my yearly allowance, I would have twenty gowns of apparel, six of them excellent ones, eight of them for the country, and six of them very excellent good ones. Also, I would have put in my purse £2,000 [$10,000] and you to pay my debts. I would have £6,000 [$30,000] to buy me jewels, and £4,000 [$20,000] to buy me a pearl chain.

Now, seeing I have been and am so reasonable unto you, I pray you do find my children apparel, and their schooling, and all my servants their wages. Also, I will have all my houses furnished, and my lodging chambers to be suitably furnished with all such furniture as is fit, as beds, stools, chairs, cushions, carpets, silver warming pans, cupboards of plate, fair hangings, and such like.

So now that I have declared to you what I would have, and what it is that I would not have, I pray you, when you be an Earl, to allow me £2,000 [$10,000] more than I now desire, and double attendance.

A WILD BOAR HUNT IN THE FASTNESSES NEAR BALD POINT, KY.

(From the Covington Advertiser.)

On Saturday about one hundred and fifty persons, with dogs, guns, &c., met in the public square of Union, organized under the leadership of Mr. Clarkson, and proceeded to the farm of J. D. Smith, on Gunpowder, which a vicious wild boar had visited the night previous. Here Medoc, a noted dog belonging to Lucian Dickerson, found the trail, and the entire pack was soon in full cry.

After a run of more than an hour through the dense thickets and among the bluffs, the boar broke cover toward the open country, with the dogs in hot pursuit. Here the hunt grew very exciting, the pursuers being frequently in full view of the chase, and using their guns whenever they could, and the dogs (fox hounds) pressing the game closely, but as yet unable to bring him to bay. In fact, it was almost certain death for one to approach him, his formidable tusks proving such fearful and deadly weapons of defence that he had up to this time killed eight outright and wounded four.

Finally, as he was crossing the Big Bone road, near the residence of Erastus Garrison, a powerful bulldog, belonging to Ira Percival, of Union, was let loose, and immediately attacked the furious beast. Then ensued a desperate struggle. The boar fought as if he knew that his life was in the balance, and the dog was equally game. The latter seized the maddened animal by the right foreshoulder, and in spite of stabs and gashes from the sharp tusks held on with the tenacity for which the breed is noted. The hunters coming up joined in the battle with pistols, clubs and stones, and under the attack of the combined forces the boar was at length stretched on the ground, conquered only in death. On examination it was found that during the chase he had received fourteen shots, all inflicting severe wounds. He weighed about five hundred pounds, and his tusks were eight inches in length by actual measurement.

The chase lasted about four hours, and a notable feature of the closing scene was the fact that though the dog was nearly torn to pieces and his antagonist was covered with wounds, neither uttered a cry during the fierce death struggle, but both were grim, silent, relentless, and game to the very last, and not until the boar was dead could the dog be induced to release his hold.

A GOOD YARN.

A few evenings ago a young man, whose name we will withhold, was guilty of a most deporable act of absent-mindedness. It appears that during the afternoon he had procured a pair of small linen pants, which he wore when he was a little boy. He intended to take them home and submit them to his better half as a pattern, according to which some tailoring should be done for his own four-year-old young 'un, and in pursuance of that purpose he placed them in his pocket, where they remained all the afternoon. The young man went about his business, talking and selling to customers, for he is a merchant, so that by evening all recollection about the little bundle in his pocket had been obliterated. Now, it so happened that a friend requested the pleasure of his company to dinner that evening, and the young man in whose nature it is not to refuse a good thing, accepted the invitation. Six o'clock came and he, with his friend, directed his steps to the Russel House.

He brushed up his hair (what there is of it) and, looking his best, strode pompously into the dining-room. He had not advanced far into that great commissariat department when it struck him that it would be prudent and proper for him to apply his handkerchief to his proboscis. He accordingly ran his hand into his pocket and, with his head aloft, drew forth that pair of diminutive and juvenile unmentionables, holding them delicately by the middle. He gave them a couple of fancy jerks, and then most deliberately, with his eyes fixed upon a young lady, raised them to his nose. He thought they felt kind of rough; he turned down his eyes, when lo! he beheld—well, the reader can better imagine the rest. He was so shocked that he could scarcely eat any dinner, and now he vows that never again will he carry around such things in his pocket.—Free Press.

VELOCIPEDES.

When these two-wheeled creatures came into the United States, they made a great deal of merriment. It was a sort of nine days' wonder, and then rapidly died away. They seem to have gained a foothold in England, and are made "objects of encouragement" at agricultural fairs, as much so as our horse races or plowing matches. A contemporary says of this English success with them:

"In England bicycling has a department assigned to it in such journals as the Field, and is not only practised as a pastime, but turned to good, practical account in taking journeys. Occasionally we read of bicycle riders running a race with the St. Alban's or some other fast stage-coach, and the two-wheeled vehicle generally comes out winner.

"Recently a trial on speed was had to test the question, 'man versus horse.' A race of 20 miles, for £25 a side, was arranged and carried out, the competitors being John Keen of Surbiton, the champion bicycle rider, and Polly, a good pony, belonging to Mr. Cooper of Birmingham. At first, the bicyclist led considerably; towards the middle of the race the pony got ahead; during the 14th mile Keen again took the lead, the pony beginning to be a good deal fagged; and at the close of the 17th mile the pony was led off the course, and the triumphant bicyclist was duly notified by Polly's backers that they did not require him to finish the distance. The pony was well ridden, and everything so managed as to make it a fair competition. Keen's best time was run in 3 minutes 32 seconds, and he made the first 10 miles—half the race—in 37 minutes and 11 seconds."—Chicago Tribune.

A RAILROAD INCIDENT.

From the Rochester (N. Y.) Union.

A few days since we noticed the fact that many of the engineers on the New York Central Railroad were obliged to make three trips per day—given no time to rest, or hardly to eat. Yesterday on the fourth page of the Union were related several instances of interest of railroad-engineering. We have a case of a more rec nt date. Within a month one of the engineers on the Central Railroad, who had been making his three trips per day for several days, and was worn out and exhausted, ran his engine on a turn-table in Buff lo, awaiting the arrival of the express from this city before starting out to take another train to this city. He fell fast asleep—and it must have been refreshing to him. He was suddenly awakened by a yardman, and, in his bewilderment, supposing that the express had passed, he started from the turn-table to collide almost immediately with the express. The only damage done was to property. The engineer was discharged immediately from the service of the Company. Nature demanded its rights—the engineer succumbed; the Railroad Company exercised the prerogative, and threw him out of work.

PURE, FRESH MILK.
THE MOTHER'S BLESSING AND THE CHILD'S HEALTH.

The proprietor of the Grey's Creek Dairy, Cornwall, Ont., having removed one hundred and fifty cows (which have recently calved) to the City of Montreal, where he has erected commodious, well ventilated stables by the canal side, is now ready to deliver, every morning and evening, pure fresh milk in any part of the city, in quantities from one gallon to a hundred gallons, within one hour from the "milking time." The cows are foddered with the best cut hay, moulie and bran, steamed at every meal. No brewers' grains or swill of any kind used. The vessels in which the milk is collected are scrupulously scalded by steam, and thus kept constantly, after use, absolutely clean. These remarks strictly apply to the stables, fodder and dairy at Grey's Creek, from which the milk is sent to Montreal every morning and evening by Express.

The proprietor having over three hundred cows, is prepared to supply, daily, one thousand gallons of milk among the hotel-keepers, hospitals, public institutions, confectioners, milk-vendors, and others consuming large quantities. The proprietor is not only anxious but willing to have every test applied to the milk in order to prove its purity.

CARRATRACA.
OFFICE CARRATRACA SPRING CO., Plantagenet, O.
389 ST. PAUL STREET, Montreal.
Having received last Fall an ample stock of the justly celebrated CARRATRACA WATER, sufficient, as we supposed, to meet the requirements of our customers during the Winter, and finding the demand greater than we expected, we ordered a further supply to be shipped, but owing to the very early closing of navigation on the Ottawa River, we were disappointed in getting the additional quantity.
Our stock, which was large, was entirely consumed by the end of January, by the unprecedented call for it. In future, we shall endeavor to have ALWAYS a sufficient quantity on hand to meet any demand, and hope this explanation will prove entirely satisfactory to all who have been disappointed since, in not being able to get the water.
Upon the opening of navigation we will ship either from the Springs direct, or from our office here, any desired quantity.
