Music to many young ears

Sherbrooke to host festival for 16th year

By Jake Brennan
SPECIAL TO THE RECORD
SHERBROOKE

If you're in Sherbrooke this weekend and you hear music, it may not just be the birds of spring. Sherbrooke will attract more than its share of song-birds again this year as the Festival des Harmonies et Orchestres Symphoniques du Québec returns.

The birds fly in (or drive, these birds are clever) from some 61 cities and towns all over Quebec, and some from Ontario. But the francophone festival, which this year brings in 222 elementary and secondary school concert bands, stage bands, symphonic orchestras and string ensembles, used to see migrations from French immersion schools further afield, said Jean-Marie Messier, the festival's co-ordinator.

"There were years when we had more people coming from other provinces, but people travel less than they used to, what with various illnesses out there, terrorism in the U.S. and all," he explained.

Still, the francophone counterpart to MusicFest, this year held in Toronto from May 20 to 25, is no slouch. With over 9,000 players and about 20,000 spectators expected, the organizational challenges are many.

"It's enormous," said Messier. "We have to lodge all these people and feed them."

That's been made easier, however, at the Université de Sherbrooke, host site for the 16th consecutive year. Between the U of S and Bishop's University residences, as well as the many hotels in the area, not to mention an excellent concert hall in Maurice O'Bready, the festival has seen fit to book the campus through 2006 for the annual spring convention.

Nominally a band competition, the event's greatest draw is not the prizes, said Jean-François Beaulieu, music director at Montcalm Secondary School in Sherbrooke.

A mousse's creamy decadence is ageless

How long has it been since you last had chocolate mousse? I mean a classic, true chocolate mousse, with no additives or gelatine? One that is so deep in lingering flavours and so creamy it coats your whole mouth in pure chocolate goodness?

Well, if it's been long, wait no more: This classic recipe is foolproof, and the result is nothing short of irresistible. After all, what could be more welcome at a dinner party than a change from that sameness of fruit squares, brownies and cheesecakes?

ALEX'S PANTRY

INGREDIENTS: (FOUR TO SIX PEOPLE)

250 grams bittersweet chocolate
5 cold eggs
30 grams unsalted butter
1 tbsp sugar
4 tbsp water

DIRECTIONS

1. Break the eggs and separate yolks from whites. Set the yolks aside. Beat the whites in a clean bowl, until they form firm peaks. Meanwhile, prepare a bain-marie: Bring some water to a boil in a shallow pan. Break the chocolate into pieces and put them — together with the butter and four tablespoons of water — in a small pot. Set it over the boiling water, as in the photo, and let the chocolate melt, mixing gently to blend the three ingredients.

2. Beat the egg yolks and the sugar until pale and mousse-like. As soon as the chocolate mixture is perfectly smooth and silky (it may take a while for all the little chocolate bumps to melt completely), pour it slowly over the yolk mixture, mixing vigorously. The mixture will quickly thicken.

3. Fold this thick chocolate cream into the egg whites very delicately so that the air bubbles are preserved. Keep mixing very gently until there are no white clusters visible. Pour into a pretty bowl — preferably a crystal one — and let the mousse set in the fridge for at least three hours before serving.

Humble greens perfect for nibbling

Botanist loves her dandelions

By Judy Schultz
CANWEST NEWS SERVICE

Elaine Gordon doesn't care if they are a weed — she loves dandelions. And once the snow disappears, if it ever does, it will be the perfect time to hone your appetite with a tasty plate of nature's free greens.

Elaine is a botanist, involved in many projects, including the Alberta Native Plant Council and the Federation of Alberta Naturalists.

"This is not a meal," says Elaine. "It's just an opportunity to taste."

She doesn't eat wild dandelions herself because she's afraid of weed sprays.

"But last year at the festival we had some dandelions that we knew were clean. We tried dandelion waffles, snacks and tonic. Later we made dandelion salad and a stir-fry — they were excellent."

However, when the plant gets older it's very bitter, tough and stringy.

Just in case you don't know a dandelion from a lily, these are long, toothy-looking leaves, growing in a circular cluster and joined at the base of the stem. For the next week or so, bright yellow flowers will appear on separate hollow stalks that bleed a milky sap.

The leaves and roots are edible, and the blossoms can be used to make wine.

The best leaves for eating are the young, tender ones, harvested before flowering occurs. If you want to try dandelion coffee, dig the roots early in the fall.

Medicinal uses: Dandelion leaf tea is an excellent remedy for premenstrual water retention. Dandelion roots have mild laxative properties and improve digestion.

Dandelion leaf tea: Pour 1 cup (250 mL) of boiling water over 2 teaspoons (10 mL) of dried (or 2 tablespoons/25 mL of fresh) dandelion leaves and steep for 10 minutes in a covered pot. Drink 3 cups (750 mL) daily for as long as you feel bloated.

Dandelion root tea: Simmer 2 teaspoons (10 mL) of dried dandelion root (or 2 tablespoons/25 mL) of fresh) in 1 cup (250 mL) of water for 15 minutes in a covered pot. Drink 1/2 cup (125 mL) 15 minutes before meals to improve digestion.

Fresh dandelion leaves: Eat as you would any bitter green, mixed with milder greens in a salad, or grilled and drizzled with a little balsamic vinegar and olive oil.

Local comedian relives hockey past

By Jamie Zachary

Sherbrooke comedian Will Davis has quickly become a force on the Canadian comedy scene.

After performing at the prestigious Just for Laughs Comedy Festival in Montreal last year, and maintaining a busy schedule of club and corporate gigs across the country over the last three years, Davis is now taking on his biggest challenge to date. The local stand-up comedian has created, produced, hosted and starred in the CBC special Comedy Night in Canada, scheduled to air tonight at 9 p.m.

Davis developed the concept for Comedy Night in Canada just a few years ago. It began as a live two-hour event, playing to sold-out audiences in Vancouver. Yet after CBC taped it for radio broadcast in 2002, the show evolved into a one-hour stand-up special for CBC television.

Recorded in Vancouver, Winnipeg and Halifax, Comedy Night in Canada features an all-star roster of headlining comics, including Mike MacDonald, Brent Butt, Peter Kelamis, Derek Edwards, Shaun Majumder, Irwin Barker and Tim Rykert.

Along with hilarious stand-up comedy, viewers will be taken along for the full hockey experience with "post game" interviews and intermission segments. Included are mock-ups of the familiar Hockey Night in Canada features the Satellite Hot Stove and Coach's Corner with a twist on Ron MacLean and Don Cherry — played with side-splitting accuracy by David Mackay and Kelamis.

"In Quebec, you have to love hockey... c'est la loi," says Davis, who is the sixth of eight kids. "As Canadians, we just can't get enough of hockey. We knew we had to turn to our national broadcaster, CBC, for this TV special — it's just such a great fit."

A true die-hard Hab fan, Davis even made sure that when he left home in Sherbrooke and moved to Montreal, he lived just two blocks from the Forum so he could smell the hot dogs.

"I was even in the parade carrying banners when the Canadiens moved from the Forum to the Molson Centre," he adds.

For more information on the CBC special, visit www.comedynightincanada.com.

Georgeville Troupe presents Blithe Spirit

Staff

The Georgeville Troupe will present Noel Coward's Blithe Spirit at the Georgeville Community Hall starting May 16.

One of Coward's best known comedies, Blithe Spirit tells the story of a husband apparently happily married to his second wife suddenly facing the mischievous ghost of his first wife, who had died (of laughing) seven years ago. Her spirit has been conjured up by Madam Arcati, an eccentric. This will be the 11th play presented by the Troupe. This year, John Dickerson plays the part of the harassed husband opposite his second wife, played by Maureen Cameron.

Sonya Rocke is Envira, the troublesome ghost summoned up by Madam Arcati played by Valerie Pasztor. Other parts are played by Christine Peltzer, John Hoblyn and Kennon Cooke, a newcomer this year. Blithe Spirit will be directed by John Cowans.

All profits after expenses will go to the Community Association of Georgeville.

Blithe Spirit will run from May 16 to 18 (Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m.) Tickets are $7 for adults, $4 for children 12 and under, available at the Georgeville General Store (819-843 2417), by calling 868 1354 or at the door.

SSO season mixes palettes, soloists

By Jake Brennan
SPECIAL TO THE RECORD

The Sherbrooke Symphony Orchestra's 2003-04 concert program has been announced, and promises to be as interesting as it is varied.

This will be the sixth season for musical director Stéphane Laforest, who said he not only chooses his favourite pieces, but more importantly, one's that others will also enjoy.

"When I'm doing a program for the orchestra, I'm always thinking of the crowd and the level of the orchestra," he said. "We have to be able to sell tickets, and to play the music well."

Secondly, "we have to enjoy the music, because if you want to play well you have to like what you're playing."

After several meetings with the programming committee to iron out costs, it looks like Laforest won't be the only one enjoying what is played.

"I'm very proud about this one," he said, alluding to this year's season. "Every program is different, and there are different colours — Spanish, British, French, Russian."

The season's first concert on Sept. 27 includes works by Borodin, Glinka, and Rachmaninoff's Second Piano Concerto featuring Jimmy Brière. The Sherbrooke native recently won an important piano competition at Indiana University with his performance of Ravel's Piano Concerto for Left Hand.

"It's important for us to bring back to Sherbrooke people who have had success somewhere else," said Laforest. "We did that with Robert Langevin, now Jimmy Brière. We would like to get Chantal Juillet, all the big names, because people are proud of them."

The British evening, Nov. 22, features Ralph Vaughan Williams' English Folk Song Suite, Max Bruch's Fantasia Ecossaise with Jing Wang as violin soloist and Elgar's Enigma Variations.

The program for April 3, 2004 includes Berlioz's Symphonie Fantastique, and a piece by Bishop's professor and Juno Award winner Andrew MacDonald.

The Feb. 21 concert is perhaps the most demanding, showcasing Beethoven's Fourth Symphony. The SSO has been working its way through all the German giant's symphonies, playing his eighth this past season.

"Every year I think it's a must, because it's a good repertoire to develop a sound and work with the musicians," explained Laforest.

That same February evening James Sommerville, the newly appointed principal horn of the Boston Symphony, will lead Richard Strauss's Horn Concerto No. 1. Sommerville will also teach at the famed Orford music camp this summer.

The season will conclude April 22 with the Laforest guest conducting the Montreal Symphony through a yet-to-be-determined program.

Festival designed as a forum for musical ideas

ORCHESTRA:

"It's the major event of the year for the students, because they can meet others from other bands from all over Quebec and hear them play," said Beaulieu. "It's a condensation of musical resources, if you like."

That's exactly the festival's mission, now in its 74th year — to facilitate meetings promoting the exchange and diffusion of musical ideas. And where better to do it than at the largest get together for musicians aged 10 to 18 in the country?

But it would be misleading to suggest Beaulieu doesn't have at least one eye on the prize. The art and music specialized Sherbrooke school will field seven ensembles in the competition: Concert bands, stage bands and string orchestras for both Mitchell, the junior half of the school, and Montcalm, the senior half, plus the Mitchell and Montcalm Symphony.

"Every year we manage to leave the festival with a few awards," said the school's music director modestly.

As for this time, "we've prepared as we should, so it should be a good year," he said. "We're very optimistic."

In addition to the all-day Friday and Saturday competitions, the festival has several evening concerts. On Saturday at 8 p.m., Maurice O'Bready Hall plays host to the National Youth Band, comprised of the finest young wind musicians from across the country.

Selected by audition tapes, the band members received the concert music about a month ago, and arrived a week ago to put it all together with conductor Alain Cazes.

Cazes, who teaches conducting at McGill University, directs the school's wind ensemble, as well as playing tuba in Montreal's Metropolitan Orchestra. These credentials were plenty to get him the national honour, performed by someone new each year, including the Sherbrooke Symphony's own Stéphane Laforest in 1997.

"We've got this real belief that we should be exposing our good young Canadian musicians, and we've never had to go to the States yet or England. We have enough in Canada," joked Jim Forde, president of the Canadian Band Association and Manager of the National Youth Band.

With only a brief but concentrated period for preparation, Cazes's task is not easy.

"The main job is really trying to create a team. To get everyone going in the same direction, to produce a sound, work on intonation, types of articulation, phrasing and all the musical elements — to grow together. This is a challenge with musicians who come from all different areas."

He noted, however, that the diversity of the 56 musicians is overcome by their talent and zeal.

"They're extremely co-operative, and they're so interested in making music."

As is tradition, Yamaha Canada will foot the bill for a professional feature soloist to join the National Youth Band. This year, for the third time, it will be Chambly resident Alain Trudel, a trombonist whose slide has taken him around the world.

The Youth Band's program for Saturday evening is varied, including Holst's Second Suite and a wide range of contemporary works.

One, by McGill doctoral student Nik Kambeiz, is so new "the ink is drying on the paper," said Cazes, who sees it as part of his duty to introduce tomorrow's stars to a broader repertoire than they might get in their high schools and universities.

The National Youth Band concert is only one of three taking place Saturday night. Under the festival tent on the University's campus, the Steve's Music Store Pop competition finals will feature a number of student acts in the rock and punk genres, demonstrating the wide range of sounds that can come out of the bell of a wind instrument. Ska band Yelo Molo, with former festival participants Stéphane Bédard and Sébastien Lamer, will headline.

The Granada Theatre will simultaneously host the weekend's finest concert and stage bands. The stage bands, which generally blow jazz, will also be on the bill tonight at the Granada.

On both Saturday (2 p.m.) and Sunday (1 p.m.) a taste of Montreal will arrive in the form of a free tam-jam near the tent on campus.

All spectators 10 and under are free to all events. For the rest, a weekend pass ($26; $15 for just one day) gets you into the ongoing performances around campus Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., and into the shows at the Granada.

Tickets to the tent and National Youth Band concerts are sold separately by calling 819-820-1000. For a complete schedule of events, visit www.festivaldesharmonies.com.

Five questions with Jacqueline Plante

Q & A

By Nancy Nourse
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
SHERBROOKE

Since the 1990's, plastic artist Jacqueline Plante has exhibited both collectively and as a solo artist in Europe, New York, Toronto and Quebec.

After teaching plastic arts in the Abitibi region, she has returned to her roots in the Eastern Townships area. The Record had the opportunity to sit down with Plante at her studio:

The Record: Each of your creations seems to exude a life or personality of its own. Is this your intention?

Plante: "I find nature an endless source of inspiration. The spaces, the lighting, the vegetation and the clouds are already forms of beauty. This natural sense of colour, emotion and rhythm may have something to do with their personality. I just help it along a little."

The Record: Your work uses different techniques of engraving to achieve the desired results. Would you explain the process of 'lithography sans eau' to us?

Plante: "I start by drawing my design on an aluminum plaque with a solution of printers' ink diluted with rubbing alcohol. I rinse this with propane fuel, allowing it to dry before coating the plaque with a gouache-like paste made from silicone caulking and paint thinner. Putting on three coats of this mixture, drying or baking each coat with a paint gun, my creation is now permanent. It is then centered on this manual press, covered with paper and put through the press. I use pencil crayons to add a little colour, but sometimes I prefer to just leave it black and white."

The Record: Collagraphy is also one of the techniques that you use. How is it different from lithography?

Plante: "Collagraphy is also done on aluminum plaques, but the design is etched into it with a sharp instrument. The ink, in its thick form, is applied directly to the plaque, using tiny cardboard or plastic squares. It doesn't really have to be exact as the excess is rubbed off with a piece of rough cheesecloth.

It is important to wipe the plate off as evenly as possible. Excess ink in any one spot will make an ugly splotch when put through the press. The plaque is then placed in the press covered by presoaked paper. The finished product is placed on a flat surface, covered by a clean sheet of heavy paper and left to dry under the weight of several large books."

The Record: Does all your work have to do with aluminum plaques?

Plante: "No, I enjoy working with oil and acrylic paints as well. Some of my pieces are created by covering a solid surface with modelling clay that has been slightly thinned. Just before the surface dries, I etch my design. The rough surface must then be sanded, acrylic-paint is then added to bring out the personality of the design, creating a 3-D effect."

The Record: Why do you think there are not more artists who use the engraving process?

Plante: "Not everyone likes to be up to their elbows in ink. It is a very messy process. The art of 'Lithography sans eau' is not really a very complicated one, but it involves a lot of precision. The surface must be just right, treated in just such a manner and dried for a specific length of time for it to be successful. It took me a year before I was happy with the results. Many others have given up long before that."

N.H. Library hosts summer exhibit

Staff

North Hatley Library's first exhibition of the summer is an intriguing partnership of non-traditional artists as stained-glass artist Kara Springer joins painter Antonia Mitchell in a joint exhibit starting May 18.

Mitchell is an established artist in the Eastern Townships. She has a two-track career as both a portrait painter and a non-representational artist.

Mitchell studied Fine Arts and Illustration at the Art Students League in New York City on a scholarship.

Springer, meanwhile specializes in stained glass both in its traditional form and as three-dimensional flowers that are set in cement to make colourful garden stepping stones.

Springer is a graduate of Sheridan College in Oakville, Ontario, and a Fine Arts grad from St Lawrence College in Kingston, Ont.

A vernissage will be held May 18, 3 to 6 p.m. The exhibit runs until 31 May, and may be visited during Library hours: Tuesday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Wednesday evening from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The North Hatley Library is located at 165 Main St.

The unforgettable American President

By Marc Nadeau
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

In the last couple of years, Theodore Roosevelt, the 26th President of the United States (1901-1908), has attracted renewed attention. Books and articles have been written about this famous politician, reminding a new generation that he built the Panama Canal and brought the U.S. to the level of a world power.

In The American Presidents collection, Louis Auchincloss not only talks about the political pilgrimage of the President, but also about his unique personality.

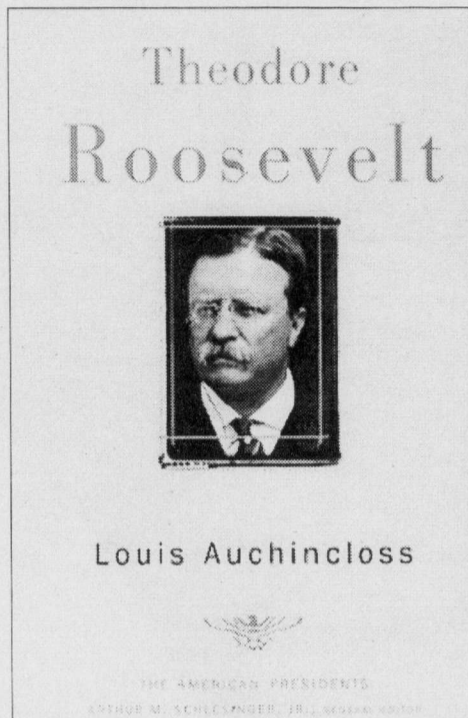

Born of privilege, Roosevelt could have contented himself with a leisurely life, but he chose to fight, challenge and surpass his goals continually. Auchincloss reminds the reader that "Teedie was an asthmatic child." At the age of 12, his father told him he had to work on his body. Young Roosevelt took this recommendation seriously.

"He developed his physique and with it a passion for the active outdoor life, which took him on expeditions to the wilderness where he cultivated the joy of hunting."

When the Spanish-American war over Cuba broke in 1898, Roosevelt left his position as the Navy's Assistant Secretary to fight. In doing so, he came to command a cavalry regiment known as the "Rough Riders," a group to which he would remain attached throughout his life.

Afterwards, Roosevelt was eager to see his sons enlist and fight, during World War I and II. "Did TR feel that his father's failure to serve in the army in the Civil War had placed every Roosevelt under a special obligation to fight?" asks Auchincloss, to which he has now answer.

Later, when WWI broke out, the former President was eager to form a company similar to the "Rough Riders". He was denied this opportunity, however, by President Woodrow Wilson. Auchincloss writes that "TR, voicing his discouragement to Wilson's friend and adviser Colonel House afterward, said: 'After all, I'm only asking to be allowed to die.' House is supposed to have replied: 'Oh? Did you make that quite clear to the President?'"

It is easy to realize that relations between Wilson and Roosevelt were not very fruitful. WWI was frustrating for the former President.

"It was he, TR, who should have been the hero of the script now called for; it was a role for the Rough Rider," notes Auchincloss.

Roosevelt nourished passion, in both ways. While some admired his personality and qualities, others did not appreciate his antics, including J.P. Morgan.

After Roosevelt's departure from the White House, the former President went on a safari, financed by Andrew Carnegie, in Africa. "J.P. Morgan is supposed to have raised his glass at dinner to the toast: 'America expects that every lion will do his duty.'"

Because of the values he upheld, Roosevelt continues to fascinate a century after his term as president.

Dr. Buckman goes with his gut

By Sheldon Goldfarb
FOR CANWEST NEWS SERVICE

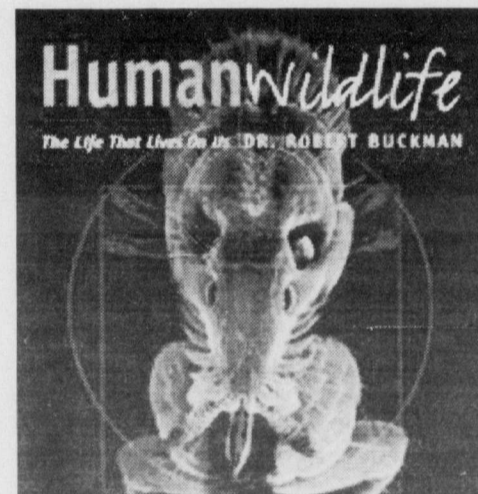

Do tapeworms have rights? Don't laugh. This is the issue that Dr. Robert Buckman discusses to begin his book on the bacteria and other organisms that live in and on the human body.

After much soul-searching, he decides that no, tapeworms don't have rights: At least his right to a healthy intestinal tract overrides the tapeworm's right to install itself in that tract because, although tapeworms may have been around before humans, he owned his intestinal tract first.

One might think this was an issue on which we could simply follow our gut instincts, but Dr. Buckman seems very sensitive to the rights of other species, even species of parasites. He criticizes what he calls the mood of our times, which he says consists of always putting human interests before those of other species.

Dr. Buckman goes on to make some interesting observations about the bugs and worms that live on "Planet Human." He also presents an interesting account of how we learned that bacteria cause ulcers.

Dr. Buckman even raises questions about whether cleanliness is entirely good for us. He notes findings suggesting a little bit of dust is useful because it stimulates our immune systems to work properly.

A further exploration of such issues might be useful. Unfortunately, Dr. Buckman does not conduct such explorations, preferring instead to rush onto the next topic or, even worse, filling space with incredibly lame and distracting jokes.

DISCO D

A Night at the Booty Bar
(Tommy Boy)

Disco D not only compiles and mixes, but also produces his recently released album, entitled A Night at the Booty Bar. After listening to it, however, listener's are also left wondering whether he was also instrumental in deciding the cover design. The title and the rounded bottom in thong underwear on the cover lets everyone know that they are in for a raunchy ride. A crazy and at times annoying mis of late '80s and early '90s hip hop, Disco D fuses it with an odd combination of more contemporary techno beats. The lyrics are explicit, obscene and replete with talk of assorted sexual encounters in colourful language. Princess Superstar, with a reputation of her own, is just one of Disco D's featured guests on an album in which a great number of other participants take part in this mad foray of lust gone wild. A Night at the Booty Bar may have some neat beats, interesting twists and turns, but today's hip fans will not be amused.

VARIOUS ARTISTS

The Rough Guide To Scottish Music
(World Music Network)

And the beat goes on in the ever growing collection of Rough Guides. As with other compilations in the catalogue, this one provides a look into the world of Scottish music, showcasing its history and future. The album is highlighted by the single 'Calypso', which is a fusion of Celtic and Caribbean sounds. For listeners who are not familiar with the current Celtic music scene, names like Capercaillie may not be familiar, so the album includes more recognizable artists like Pipe Sergeant Gordon J. Walker and the Battlefield Band. Emily Smith is haunting with 'Fair Helen Of Kirkconnel', while Deaf Shepherd will have you tapping your toes. In the end, 18 artists are featured on this Rough Guide, together bringing a wide array of fiddling, bagpiping and other instruments used in days of yore.

BLUR

Think Tank
(Parlophone)

It might have all been there in the title, and at first listen, Blur's survival album is indeed a Thinker's project: recherche, downbeat, ambient. Memo to band (runs the thought): beg back guitarist Graham Coxon. And yet, there is a cumulative sense after the second listen that this seemingly meandering album is what was called for. Damon Albarn's groany vocals on tracks Out of Time and Good Song, as well as stoner-funky Brothers and Sisters, suggest a recovery album. The various fragments and downer anthems and even the production twiddling almost suggest Blur's version of Tonight's the Night, an album for under the covers. They're no fools, though - they've included Crazy Beat. With its Donald Duck gimmick vocal and yeahyeahyeah refrain, it's this year's attempted Song 2. And why not? Every other band did a Song 2 (note to reader: The "woo-hoo!" riff you heard at the hockey game).

THE PLANETS
Classical Graffiti
(Dramatico/EMI)

Put out an advert calling for talented musicians at some of the finest music schools, take four beautiful, talented women and men from the UK, Canada, Germany and the U.S., place them together in a contemporary classical ensemble and you'll get The Planets. The unique group interprets pieces from Bach to Bizet and Debussy to Ravel. The premise is interesting: Young artists to have their own voice in the group, but still musically fuse together into one well-rounded package. There is no one clear thread on Classical Graffiti, as they jump from genre to genre with some success. This clever and slick concept album will certainly catch the ears of some, although classical music purists will likely sneer at this noble attempt.

Review

THE STONE ROSES
The Very Best Of

(Silvertone Records/BMG)

Back in the day, 1984 to be specific, the Stone Roses first appeared on the, in

THE VERY BEST OF THE STONE ROSES

Manchester, England scene. The group would go through several changes over the years, but always offered a consistently Indie sound. Now, for fans and Brit Pop listeners alike comes The Very Best Of Stone Roses. The 15-song compilation features early classics like 'Made of Stone' and 'She Bangs The Drums'. Other songs, like 'Ten Story Love Song' and 'Is Waiting For' also helps represent some of their later works.

MARIZA
Fado Curvo

(Times Square Records)

Montreal has had a long-standing love affair with Cape Verde's Cesaria Evora. Her mournful song style, filled with nostalgia and agony and ecstasy, has captured the hearts of all who listen and connect with her humanity. That's why Mariza, from Portugal, is a natural for this city. Mourna, after all, is a direct descendant of Mariza's emotion-drenched fado genre, built on the same depth of feeling and yearning. Not only that, but Mariza has vibrant youth and a voice that melts ice. Fado em Mim, her 2002 debut, was the biggest-selling fado album since Amalia Rodrigues, the goddess of fado who reigned in the first half of the 20th century. This year Mariza was named Best European Artist at the BBC Awards for World Music. Fado Curvo is more than enough extra assurance of her remarkable gifts.

AHMAD JAMAL
In Search of Momentum
(Birdology/Dreyfus Jazz)

Talk about the Big Mo, Ahmad Jamal has got it and much more in this sparkling trio session in a post-bop mode. Jamal brings his time-honed exuberance to the keyboard, from the slightest right-hand filigree to thundering chord clusters and dissonances, but only when appropriate.

He is a master of tension and release and other dramatic effects. In fact, Jamal is a master of all the piano arts - from composing six of the ten tunes and maintaining rhythmic drive to artful sculpting on all of them. He has strong support from his regular sidemen, drummer Idris Muhammad and bassist James Comack. One of the highlights is a plaintive vocal by guest O.C. Smith, who brings emotional depth, Johnny-Hartman style, to Whisperings. Jamal gives plenty of bounce to Monty Alexander's You Can See, while his lifetime of skill turns standards I've Never Been in Love Before and Where Are You into vehicles for complex improv. Jamal is 72, but his playing is bold and ageless.

YEAH YEAH YEAHS
Fever to Tell

(Interscope/Universal)

Oh, fabulous: another band that, if the British press is to be believed, will change your life, make you see God and kill your houseplants with its sheer intensity. Actually, they've got it close this time. Retro without being as obvious as New York brethren the Strokes, Yeah Yeah Yeahs go deeper underground in their mining of cool tunes - deep enough to sound thrillingly original despite tossing everything from MC5 to disco strut into the pot. The first half of Fever to Tell is unrelenting, with Karen O yelping like a coked-up Siouxsie Sioux and all manner of fuzz-drenched guitar cacophony being spat out by Nick Zinner. Maps and a hidden Velvets-ish ballad are striking for their humility in light of the anarchic whirlwinds that came before, ensuring Yeah Yeah Yeahs don't succumb to the cartoon antagonism that could have been their downfall.

Matrix's Moss is one tough cookie

Vancouver native sucks it up for role as Trinity in Reloaded

By Jamie Portman
CANWEST NEWS SERVICE

Forget about the actual filming of a Matrix movie. Vancouver's Carrie-Anne Moss now knows that even the training process can be dangerous.

Even before she left for Australia to begin work on The Matrix Reloaded, she embarked on a gruelling six-week physical regimen to ensure that she could "really, really, really kick some ass" in the role of Trinity, the leather-clad female warrior who is at the forefront of the human race's battle against a machine-dominated universe. But that training session proved short-lived when she broke her knee during the first week.

"I was doing a wire move and I don't even remember which one," she reports. All she knows is that she was in an elevated situation and that she took a fall.

"I had a bad landing and I broke my leg — the upper part of my leg just smashed into my knee."

Instead of seeing a doctor immediately, she went into denial.

"I drove home and put my leg up. My knee was like — huge. I was like — it's fine. I didn't want to accept that I might not be able to train. I got myself amped up to actually go back to work."

So she went to bed and drove to work the next day — at which point she was ordered to see a doctor who reported that Moss was fine and then changed her mind after starting to move the swollen limb around. "I screamed and yelled at her, and she was really nasty!" Moss says critically. Still, the pain was enough to send her to a specialist who finally ordered an X-ray and discovered a fracture.

That meant Moss had to sit out eight weeks of the six-month training period, but she says it was probably helpful. "It made me aware that even in a movie you can hurt yourself, and I needed to know that."

The lesson she learned was to be extra vigilant — not just in preparing for the soaring martial arts battles on the wires which are a hallmark of the Matrix films, but also in coping with the sequences which terrified her most — a tense, 14-minute freeway chase which would require her to hurtle a motorcycle into oncoming traffic.

Unlike costars Keanu Reeves and Laurence Fishburne, Moss hates motorcycles. But she says both these actors were a tower of strength to her in helping her meet the challenge. "They really encouraged me because I have a real fear of them, and they understood and respected my fear. But you know, it's candy to them."

Still, even after doing the scenes, the fear remains.

"It is wonderful to overcome a fear, to actually do something in spite of your fear. My fear is still there. I wouldn't do it again. I don't like motorcycles. I think they are dangerous. I understand loving them and loving the wind in your hair and the freedom and all that, but I prefer a car. I prefer to drive fast in a car."

Trinity is more lethal in the new film. The opening sequence has her crashing spectacularly through a high-rise window and engaging in an aerial shooting battle with a ruthless adversary. She is also sexier — although she she's surprised at the rumours, prevalent on the Internet, that The Matrix's preoccupation with black leather and latex indicates a sado-masochistic subtext.

"You've got a dirty mind," she tells one reporter. "I never thought about that to be honest — I'm kind of naive, I guess."

In the course of the movie, she's also involved in a passionate sexual encounter with Keanu Reeves, reprising his role of Neo, the ex-computer hacker turned saviour of the human race. It took three days to film, and in Moss's view "it was quite tastefully done."

Moss says she strongly relates to Trinity as a character, and admires her faith, strength and her determination to uphold higher personal beliefs.

"I'm a pretty fierce person if I believe in something, if I believe in someone." But she also says there's a tender side to her. "I'll like argue with anyone, yet I'm at the same time completely the opposite and really soft and squishy and emotional and a big crybaby."

Kershaw rebounds with new album

Music

Sammy Kershaw's latest album, I Want My Money Back, is finally out after the country crooner was hit with a bad case of pneumonia.

A lot has happened to Kershaw since his last album, not the least of which included his controversial marriage to singer Lorrie Morgan at the end of 2001. It was reported by the media that this marriage would kill both Kershaw and Morgan's career, but I think that the rumors might have been started by people inside the industry. Most of Kershaw's fans were impatiently waiting for the new album titled I Want My Money Back.

This collection is Kershaw's seventh, and I think it is a perfect comeback for an artist who hasn't been too successful commercially over these past four years. The album is excellent as it offers a wonderful blend of contemporary country, his love for traditional music and his own Cajun roots. The result translates into a string of upbeat songs which will definitely have an impact on radioland.

Kershaw has a brand new recording contract with Koch/Audium Records, and I Want My Money Back is his first release on the new label. Over the past three years, Audium has signed a few notable country artists such as Dwight Yoakam, Daryle Singletary, Ricky Van Shelton and The Oak Ridge Boys.

Producer Richard Landis' first collaboration with Kershaw proves very successful. It is clear when you listen to this album that Landis had a special understanding of Kershaw's talent and emotions, which are well showcased.

Often vocally compared to George Jones, Kershaw has a unique style, but at times you can hear in the artist's voice what an influence Jones has been in his life and for his music. You can also clearly identify his Cajun roots and 'joie de vivre' on many of the up-tempo tunes.

Entertaining always came naturally for Kershaw, who started playing clubs and Honky Tonks when he was only a teenager. He grew up in the Cajun country of Louisiana, the oldest of four children.

Mercury Records signed him in 1990, and shortly after he released his debut album Don't Go Near The Water. It soon became platinum, and with his versatility, charisma and vocal talent he became one of the biggest names in country music through the 1990's.

Since his debut in 1991, Kershaw has remained one of the great country singers. His popularity was thanks to a chain of major hits on the country music charts, such as 'She Don't Know She's Beautiful', 'I Can't Reach Her Anymore', 'National Working Woman's Holiday' and 'Cadillac Style'.

The first single released from I Want My Money Back, the title track, is a cranky fun tune about the high price of everything today. There's a lot of fun numbers on this new collection, also including the airy 'Miss What's Her Name' about a guy who's interested in the new girl in town while she doesn't even notice it.

In the same vein is 'Sunday Morning On Bourbon Street', and the let's have some fun 'Beer, Bait and Ammo' which is an anthem of sort for all the country rednecks.

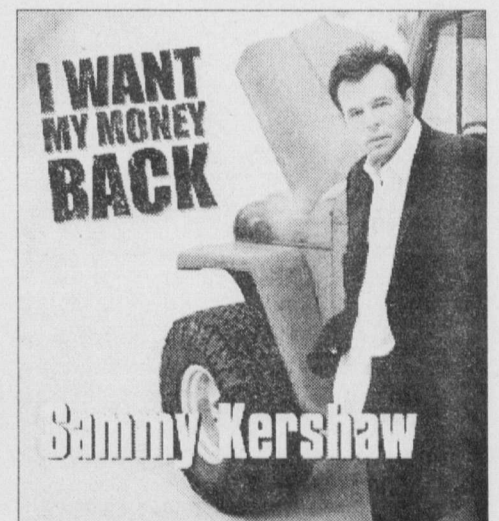

The album also offers a few nostalgic songs such as 'Metropolis', 'Stitches' and the very touching ballad 'The Paper Heart' about those very special feelings that parenthood brings.

'Gone For Good Goodbye' is a sad

number about the aches and pain of seeing someone go. Throughout the album, Kershaw offers very commanding performances that comes from the soul.

The collection offers a good mix of the old and new, the uplifting and the ballads, the joyful and the sad. The results are great, and I don't think that anyone will want their money back.

Even if his career slowed down for a while, I Want My Money Back just might take him right back at the top.
