We call attention to the buildings advertised to-day for sale, by Mr. Honey. These buildings are well known to be among the most substantial residences; if not the most substantial in the city, and there can be no doubt that their situation must make them always eligible for first class dwelling houses.

The numbers who voted yesterday for the Municipal Election were 324, making the total 3276.

On Monday last, Messrs. James S. Hunter, Myron H. Sanborn, Joseph Reigner, Alexander Talmah, Charles Blair, Joseph Aussen, P. G. Beaudry, Jacques H. Aubertin, and Gustave D. Brault, were admitted to the practice of the Notarial profession in Lower Canada.

ERRATUM—In our notice to correspondents, on Tuesday last, for "coming emigrants," read "coming emigrants."

JENNY LIND NOT MARRIED—There is reason to believe that the announcement of the marriage of the Swedish nightingale is premature. At all events, it is quite certain that the last order transmitted to Montreal by the great songstress, for a supply of Plantagenet Water, was signed, as usual, "J. Lind." This, to say the least, is strong presumptive evidence against the alleged fact. The Plantagenet Water Depot is in the Place d'Armes, where orders must be left.

he stands astupified, resigned. The fly then walks up to him, looks him hard in the face, and, presently, putting forth some apparatus which stands him in the place of a finger and thumb quickly takes the cock roach by the nose, and, holding it in the middle of its long, slender legs, bringing him there, he commences a thorough examination of the neighborhood, beating the ground with his legs, and turning him round and round, leading him he walts, returns to the cockroach, and leads him on a little farther, when the same examination is gone through, sometimes for hours, until the whole wall has been examined. Clinks there are in plenty, but they do not suit him; he has taken the measure of the victim's build, and means to lodge him commodiously. Presently a suitable hole is found, and the fly, moving his leg back, gently pulls the cockroach after him into his last home. What horrors are perpetrated in this dark recess can be more than surmised. The object, undoubtedly, is to strengthen his as yet weak joints. No doubt the poor cockroach is forced to work hard, not only to crawl, but to dig, and to dig in a desperate manner, for which his succulent and motherly frame is peculiarly well adapted. During the violent vibration, his legs are supplied with food, until the eggs which he is impregnated, being hatched, he is able to turn out in the world, and to crawl on his bowels, their receptacle. It is in vain to startle the creature, or to frighten him, for he has during the scene above described, we urge to you, been made invulnerable. He is now a cock of the stock is disregarded; he seems dead to all hints; nay, more him to another world, and he is left to his fate. of the opportunity to wage it. His firm resolution upon this, that martial success is necessary to the consolidation of his power, and that the surest means of obtaining a hold of the French people, and more especially of the French army, is to give employment to the troops. The idea of this to Louis Napoleon. It was his first thought after his escape from England. His first suggestion he made to M. Thiers, when he was in London, in 1845. Thiers, in obedience to the opinion of his friends, and in the opposition of the Assembly, he then proposed that he abandoned it. His well known idea is one of the peculiar characteristics of Louis Napoleon, that he never abandons a wish or an idea which he thinks will contribute to his interests. Since his election as President, he has had but many instances of this fact; his least and most notorious is the confiscation of the Italian possessions. There is hardly a tradition in France which he has not endeavored to resurrect—from the continental blockade and Rhine frontier, to the invasion of England. I have said that Louis Napoleon is a man of the President's whole idea is with respect to the crisis of England; that he has consulted generally the plans of the Bolognese, the Venetians, received reports on the feasibility of the passage of the Channel, &c. There is not a man in France who does not believe that the success of the invasion is an affair that is not only noticable, but which will be attempted.

There are, however, many reasons necessary. There are, unhappily, too many weak feelings of the French nation to be easily aroused. It would be an excuse for war. The friends of the Emperor would be very far from imagining that the French people would be so easily persuaded for the defeat at Waterloo, and for the deduced. After the woman had fired one shot, he took effect in her victim's side, she would repeat the fire, when she was prevented. Afterwards he was married to the girl, and his business prospects in Maryland were good. A son, George, was born, weighing about 200 lbs. and being a very fine specimen of a man. Edgewood Newton, supposed to contain about $300,000 of the richest kind, is represented to be a fishing country, gold being found in a large number of places. The quartz mines at Spruce is said to be the richest in the State.

Another excellent exists at Dowslingville in consequence of the discoveries of new mines of bearing quartz in that vicinity. $35 different have been turned up within ten days, from which it is said to be exceedingly rich.

LOCKPORT OF A PART OF THE COAST OF AFRICA.

BRITAIN'S power announces the establishment of an effective blockade by the British squadron of Commodore Bruce of that part of the west-coast of Africa in the night of the 20th inst. and the last and 44th degrees of longitude east of Greenwich, badgered excepted. At first sight, it might be supposed to be the long range of the Cape of Good Hope, but the blockade extends beyond the territories of that sable potentate.

old gentleman, by the name of Barton, residing at Millbury, in the State of Rhode Island, died at his residence in 1762, and was buried in the church-yard of the Baptist Church, in consequence of his allegiance to the British Government. At the time of his death he was a member of the commission. He died a subject and an officer of the Queen.
