PBS show takes a chilling look at the Lennon killing

By Bill Anderson

LOS ANGELES (CP)—The Man Who Shot John Lennon, a PBS documentary to be shown Feb. 9, is not only a chilling trip into the mind of a killer but a fascinating look at the modern phenomenon of the celebrity stalker.

Mark David Chapman, as most people will remember, fatally shot the former Beatle outside Lennon's New York apartment building in 1980.

But what many people may not recall is that in addition to a gun, Chapman was carrying a copy of J.D. Salinger's novel The Catcher in the Rye.

For psychologists who later interviewed Chapman, this incongruous fact helped open the door to Chapman's disturbed state of mind.

It also confirmed a pattern of behavior that has become familiar to security consultants like Los Angeles-based Gavin de Becker.

De Becker, head of a firm that provides protection for celebrities, explains in the program that Lennon's assassination was more than the purely fateful act of a madman.

Chapman's reason for killing Lennon was tied to his fixation with Salinger's novel, in which fictional teenager Holden Caulfield rails against the "phoniness" of the adult world.

By killing Lennon—whom Chapman considered "one of the biggest phoney's of our time"—the assassin hoped to expose what he saw as the hoax of the '60s social revolution, as well as trigger worldwide readership of The Catcher in the Rye.

The actual comments made by Chapman, now serving a sentence of 20 years to life, are played in the documentary from audio tapes belonging to the psychologists who examined him. They range from morbid reconstructions of the actual shooting to explanations of the tangled motive behind the murder.

"He looked at me," Chapman says. "I tell you the man was going to be dead in less than five minutes and he looked at me."

"My head started saying 'Do it, do it, do it, do it ..."

"I don't remember taking aim, although I must have. I just pulled the trigger steadily five times. The guy had five bullets in him. Big hunks came out of him, they had to."

After police seized Chapman, they found an inscription in his copy of the novel: "To Holden Caulfield from Holden Caulfield. This is my statement."

Later, Chapman told authorities: "Unless you know me and know the book, you can't understand it. I am The Catcher in the Rye of this generation."

However, de Becker said in an interview that one can place too much emphasis on the explanations of the mentally ill. "Assassins talk a lot," he says, "and if you let them talk long enough they will say anything."

The important thing is to see the larger pattern of common traits that identify a celebrity stalker, and thus possibly prevent an attack.

"We look for people claiming a shared destiny with the star," says de Becker, "as well as people who claim to have some present relationship with the star, those who claim they are acting under a higher authority, such as God, and those who claim some universally important reason for their ties to the star."

Is it history or social chit-chat?

LENNOXVILLE — History? Ugh.

If that's your reaction to the past, then this is a book for you.

If you're one of those people who's been turned off of Canadian history by one too many fact-filled, boring, 20 lb text on the political history of 17th century Canada, then take heart.

Ten Rings on the Oak (Bishop's University, 327 pp., $20) is about as text-bookish as the script to Upstairs, Downstairs.

Written by past Bishop's professor Donald Masters and wife Marjorie Masters, the book chronicles the lives of the founding families of the university, back when the school was about all there was in Lennoxville and Quebec was still Lower Canada.

LONG HOURS

Anna Grant, a Special Collection Librarian and the book's editor, says the book is the product of long hours pouring over personal letters and photo archives. Grant edited the manuscript and chose the photographs of the people and places described in the book.

Ten Rings grew out of Master's earlier books and articles on the Nicolls family and the university's early years. But it reads more like a diary than a history.

The book uses the Lennoxville school and the social whirl of Quebec City as a mere backdrop to a family that sounds startlingly modern.

Masters quotes freely from the correspondence between Harriet and Jasper Nicolls, the first principal of Bishop's, and Harriet's family in Quebec City. The result is a detailed picture of wealthy English family life in colonies spanning the years from her marriage in 1847 until 1856.

The letters ring of daily concerns, parties, politics, with a healthy dose of wit and exaggeration to make them lively reading. To read them is to peek through the parlor windows at people who seem to have lived only yesterday.

SOCIAL BUTTERFLY

Especially entertaining is Kate,

Much of this is done through reading the star's fan mail—both the obvious "threat material" and the more convoluted entreaties.

"Some people write every day to their star," says de Becker. "One of my clients receives 40,000 letters a year."

"Presumably if there is a Merv Griffin out there, there is a mentally ill person obsessed with him—though not as many as, say, with Madonna."

SONG SEDUCES

Indeed, de Becker says study of the phenomenon—including the pursuit of Canadian singer Anne Murray by a Saskatchewan farmer—indicates that the most likely targets of celebrity fixation are female TV actresses and pop musicians, especially those performing seduction-fantasy material.

"If you say 'I want your touch, come and see me,' the person says 'Well, here I am.'"

De Becker says television has played a major role in all this, because it creates an illusion of intimacy between star and audience. In addition, its coverage of the daily lives of celebrities makes the frenzied behavior of their most adoring fans and groupies seem somehow normal and acceptable.

But de Becker does not see television as a primary cause of violent attacks on stars. Rather, television's constant glamorization of fame and wealth plants the seeds of dissatisfaction in everyone—especially the mentally ill.

"Some people think television is a window on the world, but it is a closed window," he says. "Through it, we see all the opportunity and riches most of us will never attain."

contents of the box most disgusting, so much so that we had to turn out the men while Georgy and I, with our sleeves tucked up to our elbows, sat down to a regular process of excoriation, wiped the peeper from the biscuits and gingerbread, rescued the unhappy oranges from the interior of the veal pie etc, etc."

The family may have been concerned with rug sizes and dress patterns, but even in Lennoxville the outside world intruded. An excerpt of a letter from Mrs. Mountain to her daughter in 1848 shows how some things never change:

"Mrs., or rather, Aunt Armine, is at Umballa, with the rest of the camp ladies. It is in the Sikh territory which is under British protection while the Sikhs are fighting against us in the Punjab next door..."

CONCERNS ECHOED

Closer to home, Harriet's father, Bishop Mountain had concerns that his descendants echo today. At the time, the British population was shrinking as fast as the French were looking for new territory to farm. In 1848, Louis Papineau was leading the movement. Religion, and not language, were the issue, but the concern is all too familiar in 1988:

"To speak now in a different vein, I trust in God that the schemes of Messrs. O'Reilly and Co., in which the name of Mr. Papineau now figures, to swamp the Protestant interest altogether in the townships and to overwhelm us in the only corner of Lower Canada where we have anything like a prepondering interest, will be defeated. Yet who can say what may not be permitted to happen? What wonderful times we live in, and what auguries appear to offer themselves on all sides, of a great impending crisis in the world?"

Fortunately, Bishop Mountain wouldn't live to see the fruit of such attitudes.

Ten Rings on the Oak is available at the Bishop's University bookstore.

Anna Grant ... 'Letters paint a poignant picture.'

Harriet's younger sister, a born flirt and a woman ahead of her time. Her letters, like teenage telephone marathons, describes the ups and downs of being a social butterfly. Kate's account of a trip to Montmorency Falls, near Quebec, is particularly wry. The party had packed a picnic lunch:

"But when we opened the tin box to get some luncheon, oh terrible! Everything in the box had taken a sociable disposition and had paid a visit to all their neighbors. This with the hot sun beating down on the tin box had made the whole

Techies: Unsung heroes a critical part of theatre magic

The first law of theatre: The show must go on.

By Jack Branswell

LENNOXVILLE — The lighting booth... the final frontier. These are the voyages of the Starship Improvise. It's three-day mission: to seek out new lighting schemes. To boldly go where no techie has gone before.

This weekend the third annual Bishop's University drama festival hits the stage at Centennial Theatre. When it's all over the actors will have received their accolades and maybe even bouquets.

But the average theatre-goer — as well as the average critic — rarely sees what goes on behind the scenes.

While the actors take their curtain calls and bow graciously, the technicians, make-up people, floor managers, stage hands, lighting crew and a myriad of others sit back, watch and heave a sigh of relief.

Rare is the critic who praises the technical qualities in a play. When they give out Academy Awards do you think it is by accident that awards such as best technical production are given out first? Would you sit through the ceremony if the best picture were announced first?

HECTIC SCHEDULE

Wednesday night as the drama students were in the midst of their final dress rehearsal Michael C. Boisvert, the festival's sound technician, lighting programmer, and the man in charge of computer operations, took a few minutes out of his hectic schedule to talk with The Record.

Technicians guide spotlights, they don't get to stand in them. Is never getting recognized frustrating for techies? "It is something that people working as technicians come to expect," Boisvert says.

"My satisfaction is seeing a show going well from a technical standpoint," he adds.

the technical aspects of shows are noticed, Boisvert says. The first is when a major screw-up occurs. The second is when the effect — lighting, sound, sets etc. — is outstanding. Because of this "technicians tend to be self-critical," he says.

The festival contains seven different acts, which amounts to a nightmarish set-up for the technical crew. Boisvert, who worked at the Piggery Theatre last summer, explains that for a normal play at Centennial Theatre about a 100 different lighting instruments would be set up. This festival required 140.

PLACED CAREFULLY

Each of the 40 lights has to be carefully placed and tested. On top of this all the lights have to be coordinated so they can fit into the festival's master lighting plan.

This adds up to lots of work. Boisvert said the technical crew had been working 18-hour days for the last three days leading up to the show. Not everyone is there the whole time but it still amounts to the old Chinese proverb: Many hands make lights work.

Wednesday night the work seemed to be paying off. From the lighting booth at the back end of the theatre, the rehearsal was running smoothly. As techies talked into head sets — "stand by to cue 35" — Boisvert and technical director Michael Medland finally had time to get a glimpse of the acts from the audience's vantage point.

As for the plays themselves there is an interesting line-up of comedy and melodrama as well as a vaudeville-style act called It's a Dog's Life and a series of sketches on Life in Vermont. The latter is directed by Brad Moss. The former is done by Simon Maxwell.

Other plays include James McLure's Laundry and Bourbon. This is a warm play about three Texas women talking about their men. It is chock-full of "colorful metaphors." It is directed by Brad Moss and stars Marya Piffer, Alison Maxwell, and Melissa Dodd. The one-act play has a quick tempo to it. It is funny, sad, and charming all at the same time.

The Big Black Box by Cleve Haulbold is an intriguing skit about greed and over-extending oneself. It stars Rob McFaul, as a pompous commuter and Jay Rosenfeld, as ... well the box.

Set Crew Chief Howie White poses in front of his hardware.

Other plays include Bishop's theatre professor George Rideou's own Gild on the Lily. This stars Bona Duncan, Alex Bulmer — a stand out in last fall's presentation of En Pièces Détachées — Hamilton Shippee, Heather Stevenson, Andrew Gibbs and Gabriela Andrews.

The Orphan's Dowry, directed by Joanne Van Allen is a melodrama. The quest is to get the pearl out of the oyster. The actors in this are Randi Robinson, Nathaniel Hautcoeur, Laura Thomson, and Don Munro.

Tennessee Williams' This Property is Condemned, directed by Caitlin Hume, and starring Joanne Van Allen and Rob Howard rounds out the festival schedule.

Special mention needs to be given to three students — Brad Moss, Joanne Van Allen, and Simon Maxwell — who have taken on the dual responsibilities of acting and directing in the festival.

The third annual Bishop's Theatre Festival is playing at the Centennial Theatre in Lennoxville on Friday and Saturday. Show time is 8 p.m. Ticket prices are $3 for students and $4 for non-students. The list of plays are in the adjoining article.

Here comes 'the white answer to the Pointer Sisters'

By Joe Edwards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — They call themselves Ethel and the Shameless Hussies, and their back-up band is named Nice Young Men From Decent Homes.

This wacky trio sings tunes with outrageous titles such as I Thought He Was Mr. Right Until He Left and Fred Ain't Dead (He's Just a Little Flat).

They wear gaudy costumes, decking themselves in a blizzard of scarves, hats, leotards, earrings, lingerie, exotic cowboy boots, sunglasses and animal print blouses.

"The boots are hard to find," says Blanche Hickey, one-third of the campy threesome. Ethel Beaverton and Bunny O'Hare round out the group, wrapping up work on its first album.

The brazen Hickey, whose real name is Valerie Hunt, plays an egomaniacal sexpot in the comedy routines the three perform on stage when not singing.

The bold O'Hare, really Becki Fogle, is the dippy one with a high-pitched voice. She always chews bubble gum, preferably flavored with zucchini.

The daring Ethel, also known as Kacey Jones, describes herself as "a well-balanced brunette." She tends to be the straight one among the three, but confesses, "I get my share of barbs."

Formed two years ago, the group sings music Ethel calls "country-pop-swing" and does comedy spots rated from G to R.

CALLS IT FUN

"Our music is fun female songs that are aggressive and tongue-in-cheek," Ethel says. "We're the white answer to the Pointer Sisters on the country music side."

In fact, one song they perform is the Pointers' Fairytale.

They also sing early rock 'n' roll hits such as My Boyfriend's Back, Chain Chain Chain and Don't Say Nothin' Bad About My Baby.

They also do the Andrews Sisters' In the Mood and the McGuire Sisters' Sincerely.

A less serious song is One Night Stan, which Ethel says is about "a jerk (Stan) who gets it in the end."

The trio's name is taken from Ray Stevens' old hit, The Streak, in which a woman named Ethel saw a naked runner and her outraged husband declared: "Ethel, you shameless hussy!"

The three, all in their late 20s, hope to do some concerts with Stevens this year. "He's been encouraging and he gets a kick out of us," Ethel says.

They've already performed with Ronnie Milsap and Sawyer Brown and have appeared frequently on The Nashville Network on cable TV.

At their personal appearances, the audience sometimes gets playful with them.

"They try to 'out-hussy' us," says the undaunted Blanche, formerly of Salt Lake City. "They get real shameless sometimes."

The trio, though, threaten to retaliate by placing this bumper sticker on offenders' cars: "Truckers Are Gutless Punks."

JOINS IN FUN

The nightclubs also join the fun, creating drinks such as "the shameless shooter" and "the fuzzy hussie."

"We try to appeal to both men and women," says Ethel, formerly of Los Angeles. "The women seem to really get a kick out of the act."

"They come from their computer data job and have a great time."

Among their props are several inflatable play guitars, often color-coordinated in red, pink, white and black to match their colorful costumes.

The trio started doing comedy to set up their songs and because they didn't have enough tunes to fill the time, according to Ethel.

They get their outlandish outfits from Frederick's of Hollywood, thrift shops and boutiques, Bunny says.

Blanche, ever the fashion plate, adds: "Jeans wouldn't cut it." Bunny, formerly of Saddlebrook, N.J., and Albuquerque, N.M., was going to take one of the band members home to meet her mother until she found out his background. "He's from the Show Me state," she said in mock disgust.

Allen wins second round in look-alike ad battle

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Woody Allen has won another round in his battle to stop people who look like him from profiting on his carefully cultivated schlemiel, or loser, image.

Judge Constance Baker Motley of Manhattan Federal Court ruled in Allen's favor on Tuesday against a Long Island-based clothing chain that used a picture of Allen's look-alike in a 1986 advertisement in a local newspaper.

Motley said the ad "evoked the schlemiel persona Allen cultivated up through his appearance in Annie Hall" and that the defendants violated Allen's rights under federal trademark laws.

Allen sued Men's World and its advertising agency Ribaud and Schaefer for using a picture of his look-alike in an ad that said Men's World Made Me a Sex Symbol.

Below the caption was a picture of Phil Boroff, Allen's look-alike wearing his familiar large glasses and blowing a clarinet.

Underneath the picture, the copy read: "My great body and sheer animal magnetism can only take me so far — even in Hollywood. That's why I use my brains and shop at Men's World. Now, I look so good that I have to turn the ladies away. And to think they use to laugh at me — before Men's World made me a sex symbol!"

Allen, an enthusiastic clarinetist, won an earlier court battle over the same ad in a suit against Buroff and his employer, Ron Smith Celebrity Look-A-Like.

Motley issued an order similar to the one she filed in 1986 barring the defendants from using pictures of Allen's look-alike in an ad again.

Pop historian Berton's memoirs shed light on North

Starting Out: 1920-1947 by Pierre Berton (McClelland & Stewart): $29.95, 343 pp.

For many Canadians, Pierre Berton's vision of the history of their country, through books such as The Last Spike, Klondike and Flames Across The Border, has been clearly expressed in these slices of pop culture that often read like extended pieces of magazine journalism. It will come as no surprise to them, upon reading Berton's memoir, to learn that the boy who grew up in Dawson City, Yukon would go on to learn the rudiments of his profession at student newspapers, and later, major dailies in Vancouver.

Berton came by his love of Canada's North quite honestly, having been raised there for the first 11 years of his interesting life. His penchant for scribbling appears to have been a family inheritance, in that his mother, Laura Beatrice Berton, was an habitual writer of short stories, although they were never published. Later in life her I Married The Klondike made it into print and gained Pierre's mother a certain amount of notoriety. But the story of how Berton's parents forged a life in the hostile north comprises the first section of Starting Out, and his memories of Dawson City, all formulated before he reached the age of eleven, offer a rare glimpse of the Land of the Midnight Sun and how its environmental harshness shaped the lives of the inhabitants.

The contrast between Canada's North and what they called "the Outside" (the equivalent of the down-easterner's characterization of those they deem to be "from away") is clearly detailed when Berton's parents transported Pierre and his younger sister Lucy to Toronto, or as it was called in 1931, Hogtown. What began as a visit, with Pierre's father on leave from his job in the Yukon, turned into a permanent removal from the North, as the Berton family settled in Victoria. Their residence in this city from 1932 until 1939 allows Berton to depict the cultural background to a boy's living his teenage years against the deprivation of the Great Depression. Pierre's reading material, the radio shows that were as important in binding families together in the living room as the readings by father in Dickens's London, and the adventures that took children to the movies, will strike rich chords in those readers who came through the Dirty Thirties in Canada.

What follows is a rapid survey of Berton's associations with the University of British Columbia student newspaper, The Ubysey, and his graduation to the ranks of the professionals as he wrote for the Vancouver News-Herald and Sun. The antics of the news gatherers and their activities in Vancouver are well documented by Berton, perhaps to the point of supersaturation. The reader is somewhat relieved when Berton's story takes him into the ranks at the outbreak of the Second World War. His chequered army career forms the bulk of the latter pages of his memoir, marked as it was by interminable training stints and embarkation leaves that were continually being granted without the expected shipping out to Europe.

Berton feels a nagging guilt about his inability to get into action in the war, but on his mustering out he returns to his journalism with vigour. His debunking of the Headless Valley myths, which involved the Bermuda-Triangle-like powers of a northern valley reputed to contain tropical vegetation and to have accounted for the deaths of 13 men, led to one of Berton's journalism coups. As the first volume of Pierre Berton's autobiography closes he has just been recruited by a man named Scott Young of Maclean's magazine, and is set to move to Toronto. Readers who are fascinated by the life story of Canada's pop historian, who throughout his memoir refers to himself as a "Famous Celebrity", will have to await patiently the publication of the continuing Pierre Berton saga, when the years following 1947 will offer forth additional personal tidbits.

RECORD REVIEW

George Michael FAITH (CBS-COLUMBIA)

Call it state-of-the-art dance music, and set aside the controversial "I Want Your Sex" track, but the title track from ex-Whamer George Michael's chart-leading new album has a few moments of interesting music-making. "Faith" has a catchy guitar line from Hugh Burns and Michael himself multi-tracks the backing vocals on the song that kicks off this set. "Father Figure", which begins with a riff from a Beatle track, a George Har-ison melody at that, contains some blue-eyed soul that is not quite as blatant a rip-off of the Michael Jackson Songbook as is the following cut, "I Want Your Sex". Why George Michael would want to sound like the moonwalking collector of cadavers is anybody's guess, but the extended song is surely the low point of this album. Those who persevere through the "Monogamy Mix", as it is laughably labelled, will get to a track called "One More Try", which is a fine, soul-felt ballad. The balance of George Michael's blockbuster album is expected fare, nothing really jumping off the grooves.

Aretha Franklin I NEVER LOVED A MAN THE WAY I LOVE YOU (ATLANTIC-WEA)

From the ridiculous to the sublime, Lady Soul's retrospective of great hits is one of those Atlantic Records collections that reach back in time to compile the most influential recordings of top artists. Aretha's album contains liner notes by Atlantic mogul Jerry Wexler, explaining how songs like "Respect" and "Dr. Feelgood" and "Do Right Woman-Do Right Man" were recorded in the space of five days. Aretha sat at the piano and belted out these soul classics to the accompaniment of her own remarkable piano playing. The rhythm tracks, horns and vocal answers were layered on later, after the side-men had rushed into the control room to marvel at the tones and clarity of this exceptional artist. These eleven soul songs could be compared in the power of their influence to Elvis's Sun Sessions, because of the impact that Aretha had on the Motown sound in the sixties—and all soul music, or ersatz soul that followed. George Michael and Prince should be sure to pick up a copy of this indispensable album!

VIDEO SCREENINGS

84 CHARING CROSS ROAD (RCA/COLUMBIA VIDEO)

The epistolary form of the novel, in which action is forwarded simply by the printing of letters written from character to character has been in and out of vogue since the 18th century. To adapt a novel of this genre into film form would appear to be a rather chancey gamble. But with actors of the rare talents displayed by Anne Bancroft and Anthony Hopkins in 84 CHARING CROSS ROAD, director David Jones must have known he was on very solid ground. This story, based on a book by the principal character, Helene Hanff (Bancroft), involves the warm relationship that grew over a period of some twenty years, between a New York bibliophile and a clerk at a Charing Cross Road bookseller's shop known as P.P. Marks & Co., in London, England. When Helene Hanff begins her witty, bookish exchange of letters with Frank P. Doel of Marks & Co., she was driven to seek an overseas supplier of books because of the wretched state of the book trade in her native New York. As the film progresses we see that Hanff has an eclectic taste in reading material, ranging from the collected sermons of John Donne to the diaries of Samuel Pepys. As she inquires about the availability of certain texts, Hanff takes an interest in the clerks and secretaries at the London shop, learning about their families and the state of post-War London. Her care-packages of basic staples such as canned ham and fresh or powdered eggs are sent at holiday times of the year, endearing her to the Londoners for her generosity and thoughtfulness. Hopkins is superb as the taciturn Frank Doel, delighting in the outspoken character of his correspondent, as she rails against cheap editions from the American firm Modern Library. Bancroft's gutsy performance as Helene Hanff is as touching as it is remarkable, given the limitations of the structure of this film. In the tradition of THE DRESSER or ROOM WITH A VIEW, 84 CHARING CROSS ROAD is a rare piece of film-making that reveals how different are the backgrounds of British actors, steeped in stagecraft, from their American counterparts whose inspiration comes from the artificiality of soap-opera. Culture clips hit French commuters in the metro

By Barbara Bright

PARIS (Reuter) — Tired commuters in the Paris underground can get a few minutes' relaxation with an unusual diversion peculiar to France — a Marcel Proust video.

As pictures flash by of an elegant era of seaside vacations and candlelit dinner parties, office workers, shoppers and students can experience something similar to Proust's memories.

Proust, the turn-of-the-century novelist whose subtle, sensual novels made him one of France's most talked-about writers, is best known for his 15-volume Remembrance of Things Past.

He is the subject of writer-producer Gonzague Saint Bris' latest "cultural clip," a mix of video graphics and art that over the past year has introduced highbrow subjects to the masses.

The cultural clips are shown — along with news, theatre and film trailers, and job listings — on television screens alongside the platforms at the subway stations.

"The idea ... is to do culture without making it boring," Saint Bris said in an interview. "We're the teasers, the previews."

Saint Bris believes master artists of the past can attract a broader audience if their works are exploited with modern communications techniques.

Metro riders, at least until the next train arrives, are the perfect captive audience.

'LITTLE DEEPER'

"A few years ago people talked about culture in the streets," said Saint Bris. "I said let's go a little deeper."

He believes the video clip will inspire a wider audience to read Proust's works. "Proust himself predicted he would be read in the Metro," Saint Bris said.

The clip is also an eight-minute retort to Proust contemporary Anatole France, who said of the writer's long-winded 3,000 pages: "Life is too short and Proust is too long."

The video was released just as Proust's writings enter the public domain, with several new editions and translations appearing on the market.

Saint Bris, 40, a writer, musician and filmmaker, has done three earlier cultural clips, on Leonardo da Vinci, Jean Cocteau and Edouard Monet. All, like the Proust production, were sponsored by the private sector.

The luggage maker Louis Vuitton paid for Proust — The Short Memory. The sponsors receive prominently displayed credits at the end of the clips.

"There's a boom in culture now," says Saint Bris. "Everybody wants to be culturally richer. Without culture, communications is savagery."

Downchild get acts together after extended layoff

By Tim O'Connor

TORONTO (CP) — It's not uncommon for people to feel moved by music, but at a recent performance by Downchild more than a few folks felt a lump in their throats.

Music industry types and well-wishers had packed a Toronto bar to celebrate the release of the blues band's new album, It's Been So Long, the group's 10th LP in its 20-year existence.

As the eight-man band took the stage to perform, the cheering had a bittersweet edge — the record is the band's first since it was struck by tragedy.

In 1982, Downchild leader and founder Donnie Walsh was living with the group's pianist Jane Vasey. Her leukemia had been detected in 1977.

"I was on stage in Niagara Falls, (Ont.) and she'd gone into the hospital for more treatment," Walsh said. "Someone came up to me in the middle of a song and said 'Stop the band, there's a phone call for you.'"

"Then I knew. The hospital told me she'd gone."

After recording hits like Flip

Flop and Fly, inspiring the Blues Brothers, and earning a reputation across North America as a premier blues act, the group sputtered to a halt.

Singer Tony Flaim went solo.

three years ago. McKenna, whom Walsh compares with legend Elmore James, played with McKenna Mendelson Mainline in the early '70s.

Flaim rejoined a year later and

'It's been so long since I felt like clapping my hands. But I just can't help it when I hear a good band.'

Walsh ran fishing charters on Lake Ontario.

SPARK MISSING

The band eventually drifted back together and played sporadically, but the spark was gone. Walsh, the group's songwriter, couldn't put pen to paper.

When Vasey's death was brought up in an interview, Walsh fell silent. Flaim jumped in.

"It's hard to do something positive when something like that happens," said the big-voiced Flaim, whose neck is thicker than most people's thighs.

"How do you go around ... and say 'Hey guys, I wrote a good tune.' Like, who cares?"

Slide guitarist Mike McKenna gave the group some of its old spark back when he joined about

"the last piece in the puzzle" was the addition of Gene Taylor about four months ago, Walsh said.

Taylor, from Texas, is one of North America's top boogie woogie piano players, having worked with T-Bone Walker and the Blasters.

"As the band started becoming a band again," Flaim said, "I noticed the the songs started to come to Donny again."

'How do you go around... and say 'Hey guys, I wrote a good tune! Like, who cares?'

NEW CONTRACT

All it took was a one-minute meeting to set up a deal with Edmonton label Stony Plain. The album was recorded in late 1987 in Toronto with Walsh handling production.

"You know that expression, 'Boy, we shudda?' Well, there isn't any of that on this record," Walsh said with conviction.

It's a boogie-fest from start to finish. The horns gives it big-band sparkle, McKenna's guitar adds muscle and Walsh contributes some of the best blues harmonica this side of Chicago.

Walsh said it's the best Downchild album yet, mainly because he let the players have plenty of say in the studio. That's surprising considering Walsh's reputation as an iron-fisted leader.

Nearly 70 musicians have trooped through Downchild through the years. Walsh has turfed out many for unreliability, including his brother Richard.

But Walsh said most of those musicians couldn't play his brand of blues.

"The reason I started the band was because I liked the style of blues I heard on records, and nobody was playing it," said Walsh, noting he drew his inspiration from artists like Muddy Waters and Lowell Fulson.

INSPIRES ACKROYD

It was Walsh who inspired comic and friend Dan Ackroyd to create the Blues Brothers.

Ackroyd, a big Downchild fan, developed the duo on the Saturday Night Live TV program with the late John Belushi. Their album, Briefcase Full of Blues, sold more than three million copies in 1980 and Walsh's tune Almost became a hit worldwide.

But Downchild was unable to capitalize on the Blues Brothers success because a U.S. tour was poorly organized.

Now, with an accomplished new record and a hot band, Walsh is confidently preparing for a Canadian tour. As Downchild fans watch the group in action, there's little doubt they'll find themselves agreeing with two lines from one song on the album:

"It's been so long since I felt like clapping my hands. But I just can't help it when I hear a real good band."

'Trust me' says Sledge it is a very 'funnnnn-eeee' series

By Jerry Buck

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Rasche is in his second year as that outrageous detective Sledge Hammer, but it seems few people knew it.

The reason is that for most of this season his ABC comedy show was opposite NBC's The Cosby Show on Thursday nights. A nudist beauty contest would go unnoticed in that slot.

A few weeks ago ABC moved Sledge Hammer back to Friday nights, opposite NBC's Miami Vice and CBS's Dallas. That's the same spot where it went unnoticed in that slot.

This show may not be for everybody, but in the immortal words of Sledge himself: Trust me. This show is funny! Make that funnnnn-eeee!

Sledge Hammer is a big lug who, like Fearless Fosdick, shoots first and thinks later. He talks to his gun and takes it to bed with him.

Nothing is sacred on Sledge Hammer.

It has parodied Max Headroom, Play Misty for Me, horror films, and Elvis Presley impersonators. It has poked fun at such macho figures as Clint Eastwood, Charles Bronson and Sylvester Stallone.

"I think one of the reasons the show's in a marginal position in the ratings is that it takes a long time to get it," Rasche says. "Sledge thinks guns are great, that women are bimbos."

"It's a satire."

"It has all the cliches of the cop show. I think the show is at its best when it isn't real but is played as a stylized spoof of what other people do.

"In every police show you have to explain the crime. In an episode spoofing Vertigo we did it while he was kissing a woman."

Rasche, a one-time member of Chicago's Second City, plays Sledge with a myopic vision. He always creates chaos on his way to a solution of the crime.

But Sledge is blind to it all, like a big dog waiting to be patted after trashing the living room during some spirited play.

He's been known to shoot jaywalkers and once blew up a whole building to get a rooftop sniper.

"This is not about a family," Rasche says. "We don't have any cute pets. It's a spoof. Style is an abstraction. When you play with that, people have to get it. Oh! They're doing a parody of the old prison movies. They're doing hit-chcock."

On the show, Sledge has been slandering his ex-wife for the last two years.

She recently appeared and was played by his real-life wife, Heather Lupton. Toronto-born Anne-Marie Martin stars regularly in the series as Rasche's sidekick Detective Doreau.

By coincidence, Sledge Hammer now follows the new ABC comedy The Thorns, which is produced by Mike Nichols.

"Mike Nichols is the reason I got into show business," Rasche says. "He had earned a master's degree in English, had studied abroad, taught college English for a year and was going to enter divinity school when he decided to follow his muse."

"I had all of Mike Nichols' routines with Elaine May down cold," Rasche says.

He was so nervous when he enrolled in a Second City workshop that he paid a friend's tuition to go through it with him.

He soon overcame his nervousness and from 1972-74 appeared at Second City Cabaret with Bill Murray, Harold Ramis, Betty Thomas, Canada's John Candy and others.

"One of the reasons I took the series was that I couldn't find a play," he says. "This show seemed like it had a good chance."

"I've played a lot of heavies, so this was a chance to say something about violent shows. It seemed like an opportunity to say something."

"There seemed to be a real idea behind it. It was an opportunity to do a real spoof."

Cats ends run in Montreal leaving good memories for cast

MONTREAL (CP) — Cats is gone after 19 weeks, leaving only a Memory for those who saw it.

For those who didn't, the road-show company, including some from the Montreal cast, will hit Ottawa and Western Canada for a 17-week run this summer.

The Andrew Lloyd Webber musical, based on the Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats by T. S. Eliot, was a sellout and a show stopper when it opened in London nearly seven years ago.

And, in Canada, more than 1.5 million people have seen it since the Toronto opening on March 14, 1985.

The figures are now in on the Montreal run — and they're both surprising and disappointing.

Surprising for the number of tickets sold — 190,000 at $45 each with a gross of more than $8 million; disappointing because the show, the most ambitious English-language production ever mounted here, could only play to 62 per cent of the house at the St-Denis Theatre.

For the cast, the Montreal run is now history. Some are leaving permanently but others will go on the road.

Lorena Cingolani, who started in Toronto on opening night, has called it quits for Cats but will be auditioning for the touring company of Les Miserables this spring.

"It's going to be very painful to leave," she says. "I doubt if I'll ever have an experience like this again."

"Worse," says Cingolani, who played Rumpelstiltskin, "this could be the last time I'll ever get to lick a person's ear in public."

For the moment at least, there are other things to think of.

"It's time to move on, to start a life with my husband," says Cingolani. "But I still have mixed feelings about leaving the show. The cast and crew have become my family. We're emotionally dependent on each other."

As well, she says, there's only so much a body can take.

"I've been suffering from a slew of stress injuries of late and, since my role is so physical, I just don't think my body could have been able to sustain the punishment."

Stephen Foster, 23, also an original member of the cast, has had his share of injuries and he, too, has dropped out.

"Let's see," he says, clutching an ice bag. "I've broken a foot, a finger, and lots of little things I can't remember. But that's the nature of this business."

EYES WELL UP

Barbara Fulton, the 29-year-old Nova Scotian who as Grizabella brought the house down every night when she sang Memory, remembers that even her eyes welled up with the music. "But it's also tough to make the song sound fresh nightly."

When she first heard Barbra Streisand sing it six years ago, she never imagined it would become her song as well.

Fulton hasn't decided yet whether to join the summer cast. Nor have David Malek of Montreal or Jimmie Earl Perry of New Jersey.

Malek, who has a film assignment coming up in Toronto, has played six different roles in the show "and playing in front of a hometown crowd has been a dream come true."

Notes

Bishop's University is the focus of the wild and wonderful — as usual — this week. The happy-go-lucky campus has brought English Theatre back to the area in no uncertain terms. The drama students' festival started Thursday night and runs through to Saturday night. I did not get a chance to see all of the plays and skits, but what I saw I enjoyed. They are a talented bunch of people.

A wide variety of comedy and melodrama is the order of the night in this the third annual festival. Showtime is 8 p.m. By the way, a spontaneous ovation for the technical crew would not be frowned upon. See the article on page three; you'll get the idea.

This next piece of information comes from Bishop's University again. The Northern Pikes are booked in the Bish Pub for Feb. 20. They are the Canadian pop rock group that sings such hits as Teenland, The Things I do For Money...

Well, for $5 dollars for students and $7 for the rest of us, The Northern Pikes will sing. The rest has to be negotiated.

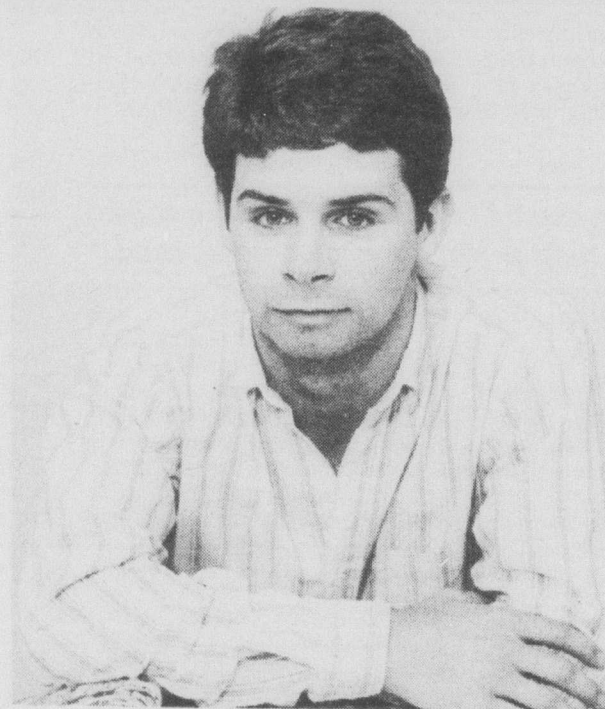

Music

Apologies... apologies...apologies. Bar Bretagne, and the Good Ole Boys were left out of this column for the past two weeks. I had been off this beat for a month and returned last week, and well, you know how transition weeks go.

This week they headline the column. The Good Ole Boys are playing at the Bar Bretagne this week and for the rest of the month. They perform on Friday and Saturday nights, as well as Sundays from 4 to 8.

In Lennoxville The Lakeshore Rockers are playing the F.L. Hideaway this weekend. I know this to be true because I heard it on K900. However, I am not so sure of the hours because my car stalled. The last time this band was around it was a lot of fun. They play some pretty upbeat music.

Uptown plays at the Georgian Hotel again this weekend. Ricky Hodge, Lloyd Perkins, what's his name... ah Art Rublee and Bob Drew bring their country rock music to this late night drinking establishment.

With this onslaught of snow we have had in the last few days the Cedarwood Lodge in Jay, Vermont — i.e. the ski hill — may be a perfect place to listen to some apres ski music. Mike Goodsell, from the Stanstead area, plays there every weekend from 9 to 1.

The Hut in Lennoxville is featuring one of my favorite Townshippers, Rod Bray, this weekend. Although I have never met the man he just seems so jovial on the blower, that he must be a decent guy. But those of you going to see him and The Countrymen already know that. I am told that people who frequent The Hut have asked for Bray to come back. Well folks, now you have him, so love him to death. Showtime is from 9 to 1. As usual everyone is welcome.

Little Wing brings its Top 40 dance music to Jimmy's in Derby Line, Vermont.

Tom Wheeler is playing alone for the next two weekends. But don't worry about him because he'll soon be playing with Georgia Country. Wheeler is playing at the Sawyer-ville Hotel (Crete's). Meanwhile Gatean Beaulieu is playing at La Ronde in Rock Forest Friday to Sunday.

Country Fever, that is Steve Aulis and Jessie's band, is at the Auberge Saguenay in Cookshire. They perform on Friday and Saturday.

Exhibitions/Events

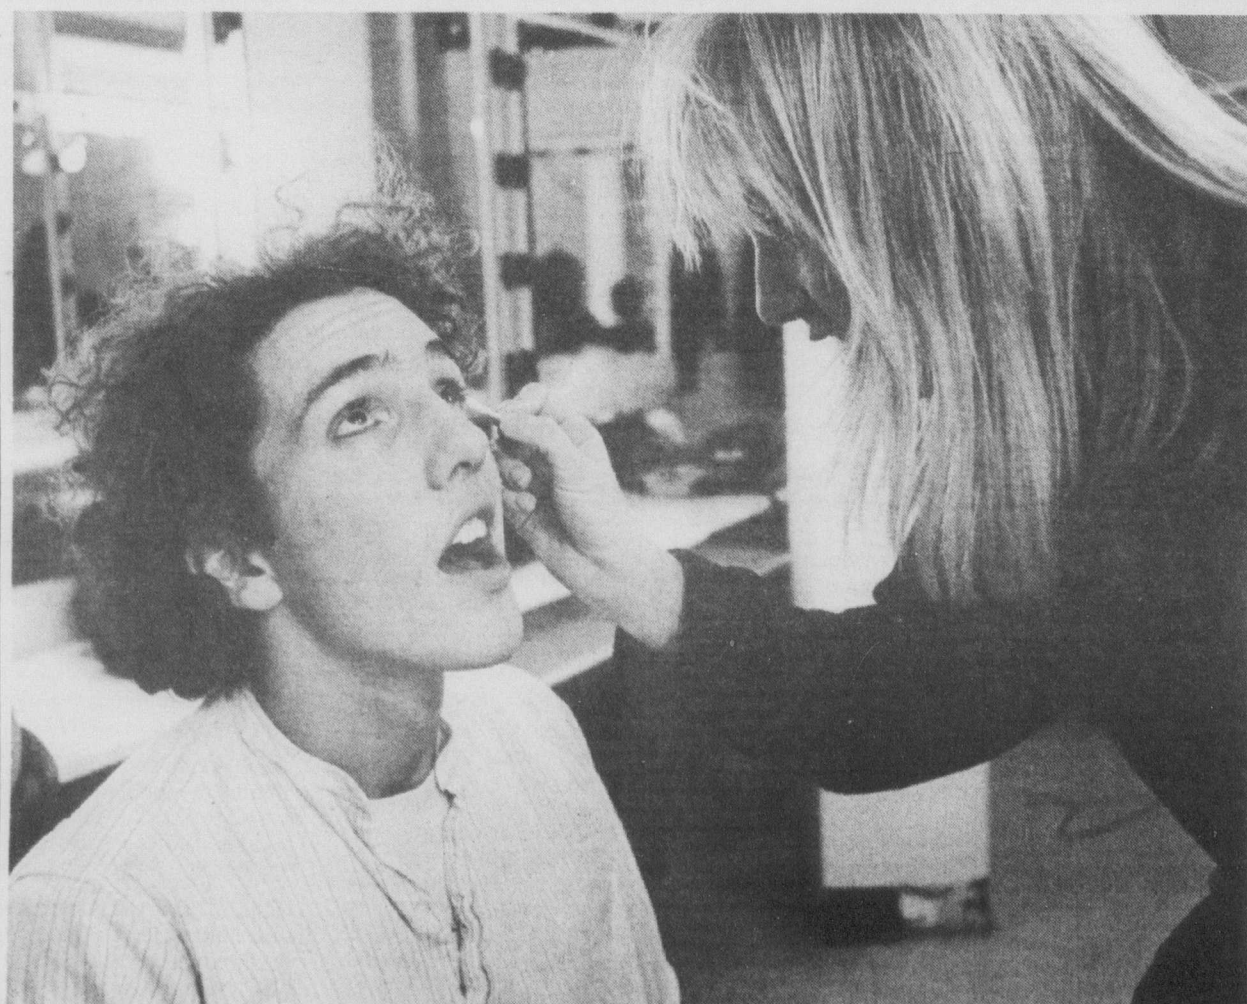

If you can't make it to the Quebec Winter Carnival, don't feel bad. The Island Pond Chamber of Commerce is putting on its own winter carnival this weekend. You'll probably bump into Bonhomme Carnaval or one of his clones wherever you go. Friday night the fun kicks off at 7 with a variety show at the town hall. At 9 all you snowmobilers can get in on the activity when the torch-light parade fun begins. This of course is a torch-light snowmobile parade — fun for the whole family.

On Saturday boomball starts at 8 and various sports continue throughout the day. Dancing is the order of the night starting at 9. And then more fun on Sunday...

For something on the more comical side the Knowlton Pub has its bi-weekly comedy night called The Comedy Nest's Road Show. There is a $15 roast beef supper special which includes admission price. Otherwise it is $4 I think. You can get more information by dialing (514) 243-6862.

This Sunday the city of Sherbrooke is putting on an Extraordineige — pretty funny eh? The whole population is invited to play in the snow and what have you at Victoria Park from 1 to 4. Hey, it sounds like fun. Besides, free hot chocolate will be served.

The local branch of the Children's Wish Foundation will be at St. Patrick's Church Hall at 1:30 Sunday to explain the goals of their organization. A video presentation along with Rob Howard and Caitlin Hume go through the make-up process together. The two are part of a talented line-up in Bishop's theatre festival this weekend. See Notes.

WHAT'S ON

commentary is the order of the afternoon. The foundation grants wishes to terminally ill children.

Turning to the world of exhibitions, Bishop's University seems to be the hottest venue with its fine arts faculty show. Everyone from David Sorensen to Paul Lindell to Ophra Benazon are exhibiting his or her works. The interesting part is that the art ranges from photographs to fabric art. Sounds like a very worthwhile exhibition.

David Morgan's studio in Lennoxville is exhibiting Richard Davis' material.

Movies

Yes Virginia, there are English movies. For weeks English-speaking Townships movie-goers have been forgotten. There were no movies in English in the Townships and seeing an English film meant driving to Montreal (the mainland) or to beautiful downtown Newport, Vermont.

But fear not. There is a God in movie distributing heaven who looked down upon these poor souls and said, "Let's give them a movie without English sub-titles." Thanks.

Wall Street is probably the best bet this week. The Captiol in Sherbrooke brings Platoon star Charlie Sheen to the big screen in this (apparently) true-to-life story of a young stock broker on Wall Street. Michael Douglas and Daryl Hannah also star. Wall Street plays Saturday and Sunday at 2, 4:35, 7:10 and 9:45 p.m. and weekdays at 7 and 9:20 p.m.

If you're not into financial wheeling and dealing then maybe you're in the mood for comedy or action. Cowansville's Cinema Princess has Overboard with Goldie Hawn and Kurt Russell for starters. Hawn, whom you may remember from Private Benjamin, plays a wealthy millionairesse who falls overboard and gets amnesia. She bumps into Kurt Russell and his kids and well... hilarious antics follow.

Cinema Princess also has the latest 007 movie The Living Daylights with Timothy Dalton as James Bond. This is Dalton's first Bond movie after Sean Connery and Roger Moore threw in their respective towels. The plot is truly Bond: if you've seen one, you probably know what to expect from the rest. Showtimes were not available so give the Princess a ring at (514) 263-1933.

Eddie Murphy gets Raw at the Carrefour in Sherbrooke. This flic sounds a lot like Delirious, Murphy's stand-up comedy movie. Raw is Murphy on stage doing his shtick and it's uncensored and uncut so that means it's probably not for the little ones. K900 has the premiere and lots of free tickets to give away so be listening and that way you may not have to pay to see this one. Showtimes are Friday at 7:30 and 9:30 and Saturday and Sunday at 1:30, 3:30, 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30 p.m.

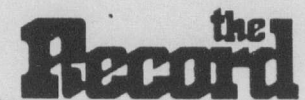

Merrill's Showplace in Newport, Vermont wasn't responding to it's ringing phone. Give them a call yourself and see what's up at (802)334-6830.

As Siskel and Ebert say, see you at the movies.

Donald Côté is showing his watercolors at the Galerie d'Art de la Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke East until Feb. 26.

Travel

An Arctic vacation is slightly off 'the beaten track'

By Felicity Munn
The Canadian Press

Cold weather, travel by dogsled, spending maybe 20 minutes at the North Pole after paying thousands of dollars for the privilege ...

The Arctic is definitely not the most popular holiday destination on Earth.

But there are a number of guided tours to the Far North that may appeal to those curious about the area, bored with baking on a beach down south, or ready for an offbeat — and off the beaten track — kind of holiday.

This year's batch of tours — most are in the summer — includes a visit to the North Pole, kayaking in the fiords of Greenland, hiking in the fiords of Ellesmere Island, canoeing in the Northwest Territories and dogsledding across the sea ice off Baffin Island.

Prices range from $1,200 per person for two weeks of hiking around Baffin Island to roughly $10,000 for an eight-day North Pole tour out of Edmonton.

The cost covers food, accommodation, guides, transportation, equipment — everything except travellers' clothing.

So what do you get for your money on, say, a trip to the North Pole?

LOOKS TO 100TH

Special Odysseys, based in Medina, Wash., has been taking groups of no more than 14 people to the Pole once a year for 10 years and expects to put its 100th client there in April.

Travellers fly to Resolute Bay from Edmonton and on to Eureka, a weather station at the 80th parallel, for a night, then board a Twin Otter for the flight across some 1,000 kilometres of polar ice-cap to the Pole.

How long they actually spend at the Pole depends on the weather.

Last year, the group was there for about 40 minutes, says tour operator Skip Voorhees. "It was pretty warm — somewhere around 25 below (Fahrenheit), but there was a bright sun."

Tour members spend the rest of the week based in the Inuit settlement of Grise Fiord on the south coast of Ellesmere Island, where they go for snowmobile rides with Inuit guides up the face of a 700-metre glacier and ride sleds across the ice at the mouth of the fiord.

They can sleep in igloos, but that's optional. Otherwise, accommodation is in a building with showers down the hall.

PRICE LOWER

Ecosummer Expeditions of Vancouver offers a similar trip for about $6,500 at the end of April; the package does not include the cost of travel to Resolute Bay, which partly accounts for the lower price compared with Special Odysseys' $10,000 trip.

Various other tours are available, mainly from operators specializing in so-called adventure travel.

Black Feather Wilderness Adventures of Toronto, for instance, has been taking tourists to the North for the past decade. This summer it offers two-week hiking trips to Baffin Island and Ellesmere Island, canoeing expeditions on the Nahanni River, N.W.T., and kayaking in the fiords of Greenland.

Black Feather limits its groups to a maximum of 10, with two guides. "It's really important in a fragile environment to have small groups," says spokesman Wendy Grater.

Travellers sleep in tents, Grater says. Temperatures usually range from a high of 10 to 15 C and a low near freezing.

OFFERS TRIPS

Special Odysseys has week-long dogsled trips off Baffin Island, a June wildlife trip to Pond Inlet, N.W.T., and, in August, a 13-day wildlife tour.

Ecosummer, another veteran operator of northern trips, offers two-week hiking or kayaking trips to both Ellesmere Island and Baffin Island; as well, it has photographic and art expeditions to Ellesmere, one of them accompanied by artist Toni Onley.

Ecosummer also has a couple of trips to the Antarctic: for $6,800 out of Punta Arenas at the bottom of Chile, it runs a week-long kayaking expedition to the Antarctic peninsula each January, and in November it has a 12-day climbing-skiing trip, for $21,000, in the Ellsworth mountain range.

Next January, it's planning a two-week art workshop trip to the Antarctic with Onley and a separate photo expedition there with photographer Freeman Patterson; each will cost $7,850 out of Punta Arenas.

If given enough notice, the operators can also provide private tours for groups requiring their own itineraries.

And if money is no object, you might consider a visit to the South Pole — for $25,000 US per person for an eight-day trip. Voorhees of Special Odysseys organized a January trip for 19 people to the South Pole. He plans another in November.

CTV: Eyes for the XV Winter Olympics

Four years ago at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, marchers and flag-bearers at the closing ceremonies of the XIV Winter Olympics cast their eyes westward toward Calgary in the traditional salute in the direction of the next host country of the Winter Games.

Finally for Calgary, the building, primping and waiting is over, the Olympic torch has been passed and for the next two weeks the games of the XV Winter Olympics will dominate the sports pages. CTV will provide more than 114 hours of exclusive live coverage.

CTV will also provide TV coverage for more than 2000 broadcasters representing more than 50 countries and an estimated 1.5 billion viewers who will utilize CTV's international feed, and transmit it home for their own commentary.

Veteran sports producer/director Ed Mercel is the man behind the scenes who will be at the controls of the Olympics. CTV national news anchor Lloyd Robertson, CTV sports anchor Dan Matheson and Canada AM News anchor Terrilyn Joe will head the commentary team.

Anchor Lloyd Robertson (top) and commentator Dan Matheson will be featured in CTV's broadcasts from Calgary.
