SMUTS MAY DIRECT NEW IRISH CONFERENCE

PREMIERS MIGHT DISCUSS IRELAND DURING MEETING

But Chamberlain Says He Would Not Make Suggestion

AMEND ULSTER ACT?

Member of Lords Wants Explanation of Viceroy's Remarks

LONDON, June 18.—(Special Star Cable by Windermere, copyright.) — It is understood that General Smuts has expressed a willingness to bring the Irish question before the Imperial Conference with a view to peace mediation by overseas representatives.

What the British ministers think is pretty plain from the following remarks of Mr. Austen Chamberlain who himself is a member of the conference. He said, today, "I myself would hesitate to make that suggestion lest the invitation to the Dominions to meddle in our domestic affairs would be taken by them as the first step on our part in attempting to meddle in theirs. If they desire to do so they can of course discuss it. We should not hinder them. But I hope they will realize better than some commentators seem to that we have given to both North and South a home rule more generous than has ever been proposed before by Gladstone or anyone else."

After this deliberate ministerial utterance not even General Smuts is likely to raise the question at the conference.

IRISH QUESTION IN LORDS.

Much talk today arises from the Irish incident in the calm air of the House of Lords last night. Lord Donoughmore, Southern Unionist brought to the notice of the House the few chance words of the Irish Viceroy which hitherto have passed unheeded here. At the christening feast of the new Act in Belfast the Viceroy said, "I believe it wants amending now and I shall not be surprised if it is amended in the not far distant future."

Donoughmore proceeded to demand that the Government "state frankly and openly what are the amendments to which the Viceroy referred. It is the duty of the authors of the Act to announce them. You will not get a United Ireland until you get a Southern Parliament while the present financial system remains in the bill." Thereupon the Lord Chancellor signalled Carson and they left the House in conference. The debate will be resumed Tuesday.

The impression given was that the Government had suddenly found the situation required thinking over and they were not prepared to give answer forthwith. It has long been understood that some ministers of the cabinet favor more generous concessions of financial control. If the concessions are announced forthwith conferences might ensue between the elected members of both the Northern and Southern Parliaments.

PREMIERS AND ULSTER OPENING.

Some surprise and much regret has been expressed at the decision that Premier Meighen and other Dominion premiers will not go to Belfast to support the King at the state opening of the Ulster Parliament next week.

James Craig, the Ulster Premier, has agreed with Lloyd George that the presence of the Dominion Premiers at the inauguration of the first Irish parliament would be calculated to create a better atmosphere in which the new Irish autonomy for the South as well as for the North might prosper.

The Star is officially informed that the abstinence of Premier Meighen and the other premiers has no political significance. Lloyd George being unable to go, the other premiers are following his example. Moreover as the conference does not start till Monday, Mr. Meighen is most anxious to complete his attendance at the conference quickly and return to Canada.

The fact, however, remains that the identification of Mr. Meighen and the other premiers with the Ulster Parliament in the present complex Irish situation would inevitably have evoked strong feelings in Dublin and other southern centers.

UNREST IN BELGIAN CONGO IS REPORTED

Travellers Report Negroes Received Paper Inciting Rebellion

PARIS, June 18. — (Associated Press.)—Travellers arriving at Antwerp report that unrest among United States negroes employed by a United States firm in the Belgian Congo is causing disquietude there, according to an Antwerp despatch to the Havas Agency. It is added, however, that the recent armed rebellion is considered virtually at an end.

The negroes, the travellers say, have been receiving a newspaper which incited them to rebellion, and at the village of Keashesa they organized a sort of army equipped with rifles and ammunition.

Canada's Fisheries Worth $49,321,217

OTTAWA, June 18.—(Canadian Press.) — The fisheries production of Canada for the year 1920 reached a value of $49,321,217, according to a return just issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This showed a decrease of $7,000,000 from the previous year. British Columbia's fishing industry accounted for $2,300,000 of the total, and that in Nova Scotia, $12,700,000. Salmon is by far Canada's most important fish, the lobster coming second, and cod, halibut and herring in the order named. Nearly $2,000,000 worth of white fish were marketed.

WAGE REDUCTION MEANS HEAVY CUT IN RYS' PAY ROLL

MEN LEAVE CITY

Take Back to Their Unions Facts Presented to Them Here Yesterday

Faced with a direct statement that their unions were expected to acquiesce in wage reductions aggregating $31,875,000 a year, 110 representatives of Canadian railway employes, who came to Montreal yesterday, are journeying towards their respective homes today to acquaint their unions with the hard facts presented to them by the vice-presidents in charge of operations of the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific railways.

The magnitude of the figures involved is divisable by 150,000—the number of railway employes affected—in order to reach the average in which each individual views the personal effect of the schedules proposed by the Canadian railways. The personal equation, reduced to the individual, in the reduction suggested as effective July 1, is $212.50 a year.

This is arrived at this way: The number of employes of Canadian railways is approximately 150,000. The average wage of Canadian railway workers is approximately, under existing schedules, $1,700 a year. Thus the aggregate wages paid to Canadian railway employes per annum is $255,000,000. The reduction promised for July 1 is one of twelve per cent, or roughly $31,875,000. That figure represents a reduction of approximately $212.50 per year, or $4.18 per week, in the average wage of each individual.

Such were the figures which the labor leaders worked out prior to yesterday's meetings. They were also the figures they had in mind when they declined any public statement prior to leaving the city.

RATES ARE COMING DOWN.

The entire railway situation in Canada is in a morass. This fact was indelibly impressed on the men yesterday. It was shown that even under existing tariffs the Grand Trunk and Canadian National lines last year met a deficit of $40,000,000. Since last year all lines have met one decrease of ten per cent in passenger rates and on July 1 they face a second of the same proportion. They have experienced one five per cent cut in freight tariffs and unless renewed in the meantime under some other act, will next year be called upon to meet a decrease of thirty per cent in eastern freight rates and thirty-five per cent in western.

The situation is all the more interesting in that both the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk operate lines in the United States and men who met the vice-presidents yesterday as delegates of Canadian employes have lately appeared before the Railroad Labor Board at Chicago on behalf of United States employes.

The United States decision has been made.

MILLS STAY CLOSED AS HITCH OCCURS

MANCHESTER, Eng., June 18.—(Associated Press.) Although the Textile Workers' Association, representing all branches of the cotton industry, voted yesterday to accept the employers' offer for a settlement of the cotton strike, a hitch occurred when the spinners' delegates refused to sign the agreement until it had been approved by their members in various districts. Meantime the mills will remain closed.

After the declination of the spinners delegates to sign, the negotiating committee re-assembled and decided to allow the various districts an opportunity to consider the agreement.

The committee then adjourned until June 24. Prior to adjournment it issued a statement saying that the dispute had not been settled, and that the mills would remain closed. The statement added that there seemed, however, hope that an agreement eventually would be reached.

The vote in favor of a resumption of work was 266 against 227, and immediately after it was taken arrangements were started for a resumption of work next Monday.

ENGLAND PLEASED BY DEMOCRATIC BEARING OF PREMIER MEIGHEN

Note That He Sends His Children to National Schools—Plays Golf with Minor Civil Servants —More Reticent Than Smuts or Hughes

LONDON, June 18.—(Special Star Cable by Windermere. Copyright.)—Since Premier Meighen's arrival the corridors of his hotel have been almost lined by journalists eager to extract definite declarations like Smuts, Hughes and Massey have so readily given regarding the Premiers' Conference.

Hitherto Premier Meighen has remained adamant in his refusal to go beyond his parting speech to the Canadian Parliament. These efforts to make Meighen expansive were renewed upon receipt of Premier Oliver's message from Vancouver to Mr. Meighen urging that any renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Treaty must reserve the Canadian right to restrict Japanese immigration.

CANADA AND JAP TREATY.

Mr. Meighen contents himself with the declaration that Canada must view the question from the double standpoint of her neighborliness toward the United States and her position as a halfway house between Great Britain and Britain's ally, Japan.

One hears journalists remark, "Why cannot Meighen be as frank as Smuts, Hughes and Massey. Really informed public opinion is as necessary as the conference itself. Indeed, without it the conference must fail to achieve real unity between the nations of the British commonwealth."

A conclusion to which journals like the Manchester Guardian come in the absence of further declarations by Meighen is that he is unlikely to favor a renewal of the Japanese alliance unless it is proved that some vital British interest will be affected. This opinion, however, will probably prove quite inaccurate. It is far more likely that Meighen will join with Hughes and Smuts in favoring a renewal provided the new arrangement is acceptable to reasonable United States opinion which must largely coincide with reasonable Canadian opinion.

Regarding extensive naval schemes such as Hughes is expected to propose, Mr. Meighen as present sees no reason to depart from his Ottwa declaration that naval defence cannot be dealt with at the present conference, at all events the time has not come to take a definite step in the creation of any supreme naval authority on which each Dominion would be represented. He would, however cordially support, as would also Hughes, Smuts and Massey, a general conference with the United States and Japan on the whole Pacific defence problem.

The latest advices reaching London from Washington indicate the probable early summoning of such a conference by President Harding. It is understood that Harding is greatly helped to this move by the recent declaration of Lord Lee, First Lord of the Admiralty, that in the special case of the United States, Great Britain might even contemplate U.S. equality with Great Britain on the high seas, an equality which Britain would concede to no other power.

AGREEMENT OF 1817.

The Times instances the naval disarmament agreement of 1817 between Britain and the United States regarding the Great Lakes as "a good and venerable precedent." The signatories would pledge themselves to restrict their naval expenditure in any given year over a period of years to an agreed sum. This plan would be so simple that it would appeal directly to the plain man in America and throughout the British Empire.

The Times says: "Were the British Empire to put out the first hand to lift the load from their shoulders it would bring a wider English-speaking agreement within sight."

Mr. Meighen, like the other premiers, is in emphatic agreement with Lloyd George that the present conference cannot discuss the Empire's constitutional problems. All it can do is engage in pourparlers preparatory to a future conference on this subject. Mr. Meighen himself enters the conference with the intention to stick closely to the agenda's four major subject, as explained in his speech of April 25.

EMPIRE COMMUNICATION.

In addition to these four subjects Mr. Winston Churchill is pressing for co-operative decision on the improvement of communications of the Empire, especially cable, wireless and air services.

The other premiers are most anxious not to disperse without far closer coordination for a settlement within the Empire of the large emigration which is inevitable within the next two or three years. The action of the United States in severely rationing British and European immigration makes it imperative that the nations of the British Empire evolve some common migration policy.

The radical journals give a personal touch to their accounts of interviews with Mr. Meighen, noting how he "sends his children to national schools in Ottawa, plays golf with minor civil servants and generally maintains democratic principles which are now fairly common even among English statesmen." The Manchester Guardian adds, "Calvinist by religion, a hominal Conservative, but a realist in politics, he will be a disappointment to the Imperialists who fancy him to be a supporter of grandoise imperialist schemes." On which the Unionists remark "these so-called grandoise imperialist schemes are a pure figment of the imagination."

ANGLO-FRENCH AMITY RESUMED

Conferences Between Curzon and Briand Bring Britain Into Line

ORIENTAL PROBLEM

French Policy in Near East is Approved by Chamber

PARIS, June 18.—(By Hudson Hawley, United News.)—Earl Curzon, British Foreign Minister, arrived in Paris Friday night to confer with Premier Briand, thus marking the resumption of personal relations between England and France for the first time since the disagreement between Briand and Premier Lloyd George over the Upper Silesian question.

It is semi-officially announced that the subject of the conferences between Briand and Curzon is to clear up Franco-British divergencies as to questions in the Near East, and to smooth the way for the coming meeting of the Supreme Council by straightening out the differences regarding Silesia.

Earl Curzon's arrival is viewed with general satisfaction, particularly following Minister Loucheur's conversations with the German minister Rathenau on reconstruction problems.

The conferences with Rathenau are regarded by the French as having pulled England back into line with the realization that France is capable of looking after her own cooking without the aid of British chefs. It is pointed out that Briand's situation is much better than during previous conferences as he is literally playing on his home grounds and has the French experts on various subjects within call.

Curzon's secretary has been in Paris for several days making advance preparations for his chief, and it is understood that the "conversations" will assume quite the importance of a formal conference, since Italy is also to be represented.

Premier Briand used the arrival of the British foreign minister as a pretext for demanding postponement of M. Cachin's interpellations as to the Government's oriental policy in the Chamber Friday.

"The Chamber realizes the importance of current events and the necessity of the Governmental conserving its sang-froid and liberty of action," Briand told the Chamber. "The Government's oriental policy has already received the approbation of a majority in the Chamber. We have no intention of modifying this policy. And M. Cachin may be assured that if he is inspired by a desire to see the Orient pacified that is also the Government's desire. The whole policy tends to that end."

"I am unable to say more at present," Briand concluded. "No debate would permit me to say more."

In response to a question from Cachin Briand declared the Government had no intention of embarking the country on an adventurous policy. Whereupon the Chamber supported Briand in his demand for postponement of the interpellations by a vote of 427 to 116.

BRINGS OIL FROM BAKU TO CANADA

The San Ungo is Loaded With Over Two Million Gallons of Gas

EXPECT PRICE CUT

Shell Company of England is the Consignor—Vessel Now in River

Loaded with two and a quarter million gallons of gasoline, the San Ungo is on her way to Montreal, and when she docks here considerable activity is expected in oil circles. The vessel was reported as having left Sorel shortly after 7 o'clock this morning, and is due to dock here before noon.

The San Ungo's cargo is more than enough to supply the needs of Montreal auto owners for a year. Put in another way it would drive an ordinary car about two thousand times around the world.

The vessel is one of the one hundred and forty-seven chartered by the Shell Company of England, and is consigned to the Shell Company of Canada here. The oil comes from the fields at Baku, which have been the subject of debate in United oil circles for some time by reason of Great Britain's activity there. It is said to be particularly high grade.

Harbor officials are used to having all sorts of cargoes come into port, but they are taking unusual precautions with the San Ungo. To prevent the possibility of danger, her captain has been instructed to dock at a pier about two and a half miles down the river from the other vessels in port.

Men in the trade are not prepared to state what effect so large a consignment will have on the local market, although all expect that there will be a drop, how great they would not say.

Two New York officials of the company are in town to make arrangements for the unloading and disposal of the gas. The San Ungo, they state, will be followed by another vessel in a few weeks' time.

KINGSTON, Ont., June 18. — Reeve Edward Sills, of Loughboro township, was unseated and declared ineligible for municipal honors for two years by Judge Lavell here yesterday when proceedings started by Frank Clark, of Sydenham, an elector of the township, alleging Sills to have been interested in a contract with the township, came before his honor.

REPARATIONS MAY PROVE A BOON TO GERMAN EXPORTER

ALLIED ANXIETY

Britain Recognizes at Last Need for Drastic Action

BERLIN, June 18.—(Special Cable by Sir Philip Gibbs to Montreal Star. Copyright).—In my last despatch I gave some general impressions of life in Berlin tending to show that the German people were regaining rapidly some of their old prosperity which may enable them to pay the enormous indemnities to which they are pledged. If they achieve that, it will be, as I said, the most gigantic adventure ever undertaken by any people and its effects on the rest of the world are not yet to be calculated, for good or for evil.

In England now Mr. Lloyd George, Winston Churchill and other men who helped to prepare the bill of costs against Germany and threatened heavy penalties in case of non-payment, are beginning to get anxious lest Germany by an immense increase in exports, which is her only means of paying, should become industrially supreme in Europe and ruin the trade of her creditors.

This thought is serious at a time when Great Britain has lost fifty per cent of her export trade and when the last trade returns reveal appalling losses during the last three months owing to the coal strike and the general unemployment.

France also is torn between a desire to get reparations out of German industry and the fear of Germany's growing strength. There is a financial and industrial group in France willing to link up with the German trusts for development in Russia, Austria and Hungary. Another group, entirely political, would establish an alliance with Germany to isolate England, but those are mere sky-rockets sent up to distract attention from the actual workings of French diplomacy which is still directed to undermining Germany's chance to become a real power in Europe.

German statesmen are frank in rejecting any kind of French overtures, not believing at all in their sincerity. They regard German possession of Upper Silesia as a matter of life or death to the German hopes of recovery and the French support of the Polish claims is to them intolerable.

NEED FOR SILESIA.

"If we lose Upper Silesia or any considerable part of it," said Gustav Stresseman, leader of the German People's Party which is mainly influenced by Hugo Stinnes, the great industrial autocrat, "we shall not be able to pay the indemnities. There is one of our main sources of raw material for our manufacturers. There are many of our greatest strongholds of industry. Germany capital, German organization and German labor have built up the prosperity of Upper Silesia."

I had a long conversation with this energetic little man who is Germany's cleverest politician, and is sure one day not far distant of being Chancellor. He is a reactionary in the sense of supporting the old tradition of German pride and monarchistic sentiment and he has told me frankly that he has no use for democracy unless it is well disciplined and kept working.

CANADA-W.I. TRADE PACT IS IN EFFECT

Proclamation Published Today—50 Per Cent Preference

OTTAWA, June 18. — (Star Special).—The Canada-West Indies trade agreement goes into effect today. The proclamation enacting this will be published in the Canada Gazette. Canadian products will go into the British colonies of the West Indies which have ratified the agreement at a preference amounting in some cases to fifty per cent, and theirs in turn will come into Canada at a preference.

Much is hoped for under this agreement by the proponents of this plan. Some hope to do away with Canada's dependence on the Southern States for fruits and certain hard woods, and in turn to displace American articles of manufacture now sent into British West Indies by many millions of dollars.

In the fiscal year 1920 Canada exported nearly eleven million dollars' worth of merchandise, twice the amount sent in 1916. Under the impetus of the new agreement it is hoped that this will be greatly exceeded. The imports in 1920 were over twelve million dollars, nearly twice those of 1916. Barbados sent the greater part of these goods. Trinidad and Tobago proved the best customers, but all purchased from Canada. Bermuda refused to ratify the agreement.

BOLSHEVIK ARMIES MARCHING TO JOIN KEMALIST FORCES

One Force at Erzerum and 60,000 Men Close Behind

ITALY NOW ACTS

Battleships Sent to Adalia and Troops are Moved Back

PARIS, June 18. — (Associated Press)—Russian Bolshevik forces sent to the assistanec of the Turkish Nationalists by the Moscow Soviet Government, are at present sixty miles west of Erzerum, former capital of Armenia, says a Reval despatch to the Excelsior.

These forces consist of two divisions of infantry, one division and one brigade of cavalry, eight batteries of field guns, one battery of heavy cannon, several airplanes and the necessary technical units.

The Eleventh Soviet army, numbering 60,000 strong, and commanded by Gen. Levandowski, is said to be following at a short distance.

ITALY SENDS BATLESHIPS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 18. — (Associated Press.)—Two Italian battleships have been sent to Adalia to protect Italy's interests there. Italian troops along the Menderes River, south of Smyrna, are being withdrawn so that the Greeks may not invade the demarcation line between the Greek and Italian zones as they did last year.

BOLSHEVIK WELCOMED RELIEF.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 18.—Dr. E. A. Yarrow, director of Near East relief at Tiflis, stated upon his arrival here yesterday that he had been shown the utmost courtesy by the Bolsheviki who were acting under orders from Moscow. He declared that food conditions in Russia are no worse than they were two years ago.

Other reports from Georgia state that a part of the Eleventh Bolshevik Division went to the city of Kars on board armored trains and participated in a demonstration when Turkish troops evacuated that place.

HOELZ CONFESSES HE IS A MURDERER

But Declares Class to Which Court Belongs are Also

BERLIN, June 18. — (Associated Press.)—Max Hoelz, the Saxon Communist leader charged with murder, high treason and disturbing the public order, at yesterday's session of his trial told the court he was a murderer, but added: "The class to which the court belongs are murderers. I am not making this charge against my judge personally, but he belongs to that class."

Hoelz denied mistreating prisoners, explaining that his soldiers were opposed to the practice. After finding twenty "green" police riddled with machine-gun bullets near Halle, he testified, as a test of whether the Communists were committing atrocities, he stood two prisoners against a wall and ordered a firing squad to kill them. One of the soldiers, he declared, stepped out and said: "Max, we don't do that." Another soldier said: "Give me a hand grenade and I will finish them." Hoelz testified he told the soldiers: "Under no circumstances do you dare do such things."

BELGIUM PROTESTS.

BRUSSELS, June 18. The Minister of Justice in presenting to the Chamber of Deputies today the report of the Belgian representatives on the recent acquittal by the Leipzig court which is trying war criminals, of Max Randohr, a Leipzig student charged with ill treatment and imprisonment of Belgian children at Grammont in 1917, announced that the Minister of Foreign Affairs had telegraphed the Belgian Minister in Berlin immediately to protest the acquittal and the minister at Berlin also was instructed to inform the German Government that Belgium intended to insist upon its right to try accused persons under the terms of the Versailles Peace Treaty.

THE IRISH SITUATION

CRIPPLE SINN FEIN FALL CAMPAIGN BY N.Y. ARMS SEIZURE

UP TO WASHINGTON

Case Analagous with That of Alabama of Civil War

LONDON, June 18.—(United News)—The entire fall military campaign of the Irish Republican Army, for which elaborate plans had been made, has been seriously embarrassed, if not actually frustrated, by the seizure of the machine guns which were taken off the steamship East Side, clearing for Dublin, at Hoboken, N.J., Wednesday night, according to the Irish Office. The campaign depended on the arrival of the arms.

The next move in the exposure of gun-running to Ireland is up to Washington, it is declared at the Irish Office, where analogy is seen between the present Sinn Fein campaign and the famous Alabama case of the Civil War. It is confidently believed that the American Government will take strong action.

QUESTION INVENTOR.

General Thompson, late of the United States army, inventor of the gun, when seen by a correspondent of the United News, refused to comment, saying, "for the present I shall say nothing."

It is understood that W. Morgan, sales manager of the Auto-Ordnance Corporation, said to be the manufacturer of the guns, has been interviewed by Sir Basil Thompson, of Scotland Yard. As to the deal whereby the guns seized in Hoboken got into the possession of the men who put them aboard the East Side, Morgan declared he knew nothing.

The British authorities are taking steps to effect closer co-operation with the United States authorities to tighten up on the rebel services of armament in America, which is said to have been the principal base of supplies.

EAST SIDE AT NORFOLK.

NORFOLK, Va., June 18. — Star special:)—Members of the crew of the steamship East Side, which arrived here yesterday to load a cargo of coal for Dublin, hold four engineer officers responsible for the smuggling aboard the vessel at New York of 495 machine guns seized by the customs authorities.

These engineers came aboard the ship in a body last Saturday, according to the crew. They and the men of their department put aboard the ship the machine guns and ammunition under the guise of engine-room stores, which were discovered next day by the steward, who also reported the contraband to dock officials. Immediately upon the appearance of the customs officials they quit the ship, which came to this port with engineers put aboard at the last minute.

The four engineers who are said to have put the guns in the ship's after 'tween decks, appeared to be English, not Irish, according to men who came in contact with them during their short stay aboard the ship. There is no record of their names aboard the East Side.

Capt. W. J. Johnson, master of the vessel, denied having knowledge of how, by whom, or when the guns were put aboard. He admitted, however, that most of the engine room force had deserted after the discovery of the contraband. He is American born, and denies any interest in the Irish question.

The captain said that a thorough search of the ship had been made by his orders, while she was en route from New York to Norfolk, and that no other smuggled goods had been discovered. He said that if the guns had not been found before the ship left New York, they undoubtedly would have been covered by coal and carried to Ireland.

Federal authorities at this port have taken no steps to detain the ship or crew.

U.S. INVESTIGATION.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Associated Press.)—Assistant United States Attorney, Isaac Gross, last night asserted that circumstances surrounding the discovery of nearly 500 machine guns aboard the steamer East Side, at Hoboken, last Tuesday, indicated that they were intended for use against a friendly nation, and that, therefore their presence was unlawful.

Mr. Gross, by direction of Attorney-General Daugherty, yesterday assumed charge of the investigation now being conducted by three federal agencies into ownership of the munitions aboard the steamer. Reports had reached Government agents that the arms were intended for delivery in Ireland.

Mr. Gross said a careful investigation would be made of all circumstances connected with the discovery, and, if the facts warranted it, they would be put before the proper tribunal.

SINK DEUTSCHLAND IN TARGET PRACTICE

CHERBOURG, France, June 18. The former German super-submarine Deutschland which in 1916 slipped into Baltimore harbor from Germany after daringly running the gauntlet of British and French cruisers standing guard off the Virginia Capes, was sunk by gunfire today during target practice. The submarine had served as a target for a series of submarine attack experiments carried out by the French armored cruiser Gueydon and was sent to the bottom today seven miles off shore. Seaplanes hovered over the scene, taking photographs of the different phases of the attack on the submersible.

FRENCH MINISTER IS ILL.

PARIS, June 18. Paul Doumer, Minister of Finance, is ill, and his physicians have prescribed absolute rest. Lucien Dior, Minister of Commerce, will replace him in discussions that take place in the Chamber of Deputies.

LLOYD GEORGE TO MAKE FINAL OFFER FOR IRISH PEACE

Commons Lobby Hears Influential Delegation Will Negotiate Terms

JAN SMUTS NAMED

Campaign of Terrorism with Steady Death List Continues

LONDON, June 18.—(Star Special). In the House of Commons lobby it is generally understood that Lloyd George will name a delegation to negotiate peace with joint delegations from the North and South of Ireland.

Jan Smuts, Premier of the Union of South Africa; Lord Grey, Lord Derby and Major Barnes are named as the selections of the British Premier for the task.

It is said that the Premier is now preparing a firm offer as a basis for the new negotiations.

POLICE PROVED CAPABLE.

LONDON, June 18.—(Special Cable to The Montreal Star and New York Tribune. Copyright.) — Details of Thursday night's attempt by Sinn Feiners to sever London's railroad connections with the outside world by cutting wires and destroying railroad signal stations, in a concerted attack at 32 different places on all sides of the Metropolis reveal that quick action by the police frustrated seven of the attacks. Five of the signal boxes, had been drenched with oil and fired before the rebels could be interefered with.

Several railroad men were fired on by the Sinn Feiners, but only one was hit and his wound is slight.

At three points the Sinn Feiners clashed with the police. Nine young Irishmen are under arrest in connection with the disorders.

The attacks bore signs of having been carefully planned. The rebels descended on their targets at midnight. The extra police guard that has been maintained in the suburbs since the last wire cutting episode surprised and drove off the incendiaries at several points before they could launch their plans.

Four of the men arrested were taken after the police in Bromley a suburb, had stopped a trolley car in which the gunmen were riding and exchanged shots with them. Two of the men fled as the police entered the car, but were captured later at their homes. All four of the men were between seventeen and twenty-two years of age.

At Dartford, another suburb railroad signal wires were cut by the marauders, but no signal stations were attacked.

The police believe that the Irish Self Determination League has been in communication with the leaders of the Irish Republican army.

NEW PEACE RUMORS CURRENT.

LONDON, June 18.—Adjournment of the debate in the House of Lords Thursday, after weighty arguments by Lord Buxton and Viscount Bryce in favor of amending the Home Rule Act and entering into negotiations with the moderate Sinn Feiners, together with the announcement that the Government would reply on Tuesday, brought out new peace rumors yesterday. Suggestions are also made that advantage should be taken of the presence of the Dominion Premiers in London to make renewed efforts to reach a settlement of the Irish difficulties.

SEVEN OFFICERS KILLED.

DUBLIN, June 18. — (Associated Press.)—The weekly review on the situation in Ireland issued at Dublin Castle yesterday that during the week five policemen were killed and thirty-four wounded, and that two soldiers were killed and one soldier wounded.

The review declares that bombing outrages in crowded streets continue a regular feature of the rebel operations, resulting in casualties to innocent civilians in greater number than to the police or the military.

Continuing, the review asserts that there were 70 raids on the mails and sixty arrests for "outrages and political offenses."

Of 49 trials of civilians by court-martial, 44 resulted in convictions and five in acquittals. Sentences to fifteen years penal servitude were imposed three times on persons charged with the possession of arms and ammunition. The total number of persons interned is given in the review as 3,186.

ATTACK AT RATHCOOLE.

CORK, June 18. — Two auxiliary constables were killed and four wounded Thursday evening in an attack on their lorry by Republicans at Rathcoole, near Banteer, County Cork.

It is officially stated that four land mines were laid on the road near Rathcoole, and that three of them were exploded, wrecking three lorries. After this three hundred civilians attacked the auxiliaries, who numbered twenty five. The fighting continued for hours, but eventually the republicans withdrew.

The official statement says the constabulary scoured the countryside until early this morning. One republican was found dead, but other dead or wounded are believed to have been carried off.

PLANES AIDED TROOPS.

BELFAST, June 18. — Five airplanes participated in the sweep made by 5,000 troops in South Monaghan, which terminated yesterday. Several important captures are reported to have been made. The telephone service has been restored.

A dispatch from Dublin Thursday said Government forces had been making a sweeping round-up in certain areas for several days with the apparent idea of making large captures and sifting them for men who were "wanted." It was added that the operations in Monaghan County had been in progress all this week, that hundreds of arrests had been made but that all those taken into custody, with the exception of about a dozen persons, had been released.

TORONTO SOCIAL NOTES.

TORONTO, Ont., June 18. — The wedding took place at three o'clock on Wednesday afternoon at St. Thomas' Church, St. Catharines, of Dorothy Emily, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Prescott Merritt, to Major Harold Victor Gould, M.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey J. Gould, of Uxbridge. Rev. Archdeacon Perry, of Welland, assisted by the rector, Rev. A. H. Howitt, performed the ceremony. The church was prettily decorated with marguerites, ferns and palms. Peonies and white satin ribbon decorated the guests' pews. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a handsome gown of ivory kitten's ear crepe. The graceful draperies of the skirt were caught with orange blossoms and true lovers' knots. The bodice was of kitten's ear over georgette, embroidered with pearls and crystals. A long court train of brocaded satin, lined with chiffon and edged with a fluting of pink georgette, hung from the shoulders. Her veil of tulle fell from a headdress of orange blossoms and tulle, which framed the face in front, and at the back rose in a small pleating. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses, lily of the valley and pink sweet peas, and wore the bridegroom's gift, a platinum bar pin set with diamonds and sapphires. A very pretty group of attendants preceded the bride. Her cousin, Mrs. Murton Seymour, as matron of honor, wore orchid crepe de chine with overdress of ecru lace and finished with loops of orchid tulle. Her hat, to match, was of tulle with yellow flowers and orchid velvet streamers. Her bouquet was of Ophelia roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Acres, in blue with touches of yellow velvet; Miss Kathleen Reville, of Brantford, in green with rose; Miss Eleanor, Ingersoll, in yellow with touches of orange, and Miss Mavis Soutter, in pink with French blue. The frocks, which were made alike, were of georgette with lace overdress slightly bouffant. The bodices were made with quaint fichus and narrow velvet ribbon encircled the waists. Picture hats of georgette to correspond with the frocks were trimmed with French flowers and long velvet streamers. They carried shepherdess crooks, adorned with summer flowers and huge tulle bows, and silver and enamel vanity cases, the gift of the bridegroom. Little Miss Betty Seymour made a charming little trainbearer in white Swiss organdie and Irish lace made over ruffled pantalets. A poke bonnet, trimmed with pink ribbon, and pink shoes and socks, completed a pretty picture. Lieut.-Col. Carson McCormick, of Toronto, acted as groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. T. R. FRESH AIR FUND

Some of the results of the work of the Fresh Air Fund can be set down in black and white.

It is possible to tabulate the number of mothers given a holiday, with their delighted youngsters; the number of nourishing meals served, the loaves of bread consumed, the pounds of meat, the cups of tea, the gallons of milk.

But it is not possible to tabulate the new joy infused into cheerless lives, the new hopes and aspirations or the physical vigor born of a holiday in the country, the breathing of pure air and all the new delights of the open spaces.

The eye-opening miles of travel through new scenes, the consciousness that Canada is not one great slum, the sight of daises bowing before the soft June wind, the sound of the rippling river, the pounds of human flesh added to under-nourished bodies,—these are some of the things the value of which cannot be set down in the ruled columns of the Fund's ledgers.

But these things count in the building-up of a Canadian Nationhood. Surely every child growing up in this rich country is entitled to all of these. Not every child is getting them, though. In spite of all that is being done there are still hundreds of children in Montreal that are not going to have a holiday this summer—unless YOU help. Will you?

Every week-end train is thronged with happy vacationists. Some will be back again to work on Monday; some will be away a fortnight; some are going away for all summer. What of those left behind? The dusty streets to be their playground, the germ-laden air of backyards of crowded tenements to be their tonic, scanty bites of inferior food to be their meals. Think of them. AND HELP.

Every dollar sent to the Treasurer, Fresh Air Fund, care of the Montreal Star, will be gratefully acknowledged in these columns.

Since the last list was published the Treasurer acknowledges with thanks:

PROTEST AGAINST WAGE REDUCTION

A protest against the reduction in the scale of wages to be paid by the City of Montreal to electrical workers engaged on public works, has been sent by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in the commissioners. In the revised schedule of wages recently issued, to be paid to civic employes, the wages for electrical work were placed at 50 cents per hour as against 75 cents formerly paid. The communication points out that the electricians have not sent in a schedule for the last two years and that in the near future they will be required to sit for an examination before receiving a licence to carry on their work, the entrance fee for which will be five dollars while in addition they will have to pay a yearly fee of $2.

If the work is of such importance as to demand an examination, it is urged, it should be paid for accordingly and 75 cents per hour is put forward as a fair wage in view of the importance of the work. Complaint also is made that the reduction in the case of the electrical workers is greater than that of any other trade, being computed at 33 per cent. and re-consideration of the whole matter is asked for.

WILL BUY FISH WITH PRIZE-MONEY

Outremont Girl Wins Fisheries' Department Essay Competition

"I will buy fish with it, for brain food," said Miss Iva Haisman this morning when asked what she expected to do with the prize of fifty dollars which she has just won for the best essay submitted in the Dominion on "Why Canadians should eat more fish." The prize which was instituted by the Fisheries Department consists of $25 to which Miss Haisman is entitled for coming head in the Province in the competition and $25 for leading the Dominion.

The prize was offered for the first time last year to foster an interest in Canadian fisheries among the younger generation. The contest took place last September, and school children throughout the Dominion between the ages of 8 to 21 were invited to take part. Miss Haisman who is 17 years old is at present in the graduating class of Strathcona Academy, which she has attended school for the last seven years. This is not the first time she has added lustre to the record of the school, for, for the past three years ever since she has been in High School she has led the Province in the Quebec examinations. Miss Haisman expects to matriculate this June, but is undecided yet as to whether she will attend McGill or Toronto University, since her family have recently removed to the Ontario capital. Miss Haisman said that she quoted no statistics in her essay, but she stressed the economic advantage to Canada of the development of the Dominion fishing industry.

This is not the first time Strathcona Academy has carried off the honors for essay competitions. The first and second prizes for the National Commemoration Day Competition, $50 and $25, respectively, were recently won by pupils of the school Ernest Nules and Maldie Dewar.

Miss Haisman was personally congratulated this morning by Ald. E. W. Sayer, a member of the Board who has always taken a keen interest in this branch of the school work. It was due in great measure to the Principal, W. A. Walsh, that the pupils had achieved distinction in this line, said Mr. Sayer.

Most Extensive Flying Pageant Ever Attempted

LONDON, May 30.—(Star Special By Mail from Doris Hemming.)—Invitations keep drifting into the Colonial Office for the Prime Ministers of the Dominions who will find a heavy program of work awaiting them on their arrival. One of the most novel entertainments to which they are bidden is the air pageant being prepared by the Royal Air Force in aid of the R.A.F. war memorial.

The pageant, which will be the most extensive ever held, will include an exhibition of flying with all types of machines by R.A.F. pilots. All the crack squadrons will be represented, and all the aces of the R.A.F. will be there. A sensational feature of the show will be the destruction of a dummy village by bombs, all types of which will be used. Some hundred machines will take part in this raid. There will be an artificial cloud screen produced by the airmen, and exhibitions of incendiary bombing, parachute descents, destruction of a kite balloon, and close-formation flying will be among the features.

VOL. LIII., No. 141. MONTREAL, SATURDAY, JUNE 18, 1921 PRICE TWO CENTS

NOTHING ABLE TO STOP RETURN OF REALTY ACTIVITY

Brig.-Gen. J. G. Ross Gives His Impressions on What Future Will Bring—Prices Will Never Fall Below Those Available Now, He Says

Real estate in and around the City of Montreal is surely, if slowly regaining its place in public favor. This is evident from the increased activity in the various reality offices and from the sales that have taken place during the summer.

The speculative element is, so far, lacking, and it is doubtful if it returns for a year or more. It invariably follows on a public buying wave, started by people who want to own their own homes or by those who invest as a security of future gain. The public is beginning to buy, but not in the number that is expected later in the summer. There would be much more of it, were it not that the cost of building is so high. Every realty dealer can tell of hundreds of enquiries made as to prices and locations, only to decide to put off buying when they learn what it will cost to put up a home. There has been some reductions in wages, however, and when the price of materials comes down to a more normal basis, these purchases will be completed. When they grow in number the speculator comes along, and soon there is a "boom." The last one in Montreal took place only eight or nine years ago, and while the conservative real estate men do not desire any return of these days, they would like to see more buying of the substantial nature.

These impressions were gathered by the reporter from what he has seen and from what various of the agents told him. To get an expert opinion he then went to Brig.-General James G. Ross, C.M.G. General Ross was one of Montreal's best known citizens, even before he played such an important part in the war. He is president of the Ross Realty Company, and head of the well-known firm of P. S. Ross and Sons. He has studied Montreal real estate values for many years, he has seen fortunes made by the judicious investment of a few dollars in realty, and today is as firm a believer as ever in the future of local realty, either as an investment for the man with means or as the start of a home for the one oppressed by ever soaring rents.

SHOULD TAKE MORE INTEREST.

"The citizens of Montreal whose daily routine duties only take them from their homes to their offices and back again, do not realize the rapid growth that the City has made in the past ten or fifteen years, nor the great possibilities that exist for the future," General Ross said in the course of his conversation, "and it would be an object lesson of great value to them if they would only spend a few week-ends in visiting the various outlying districts and study the conditions that exist in them, and the various possibilities of active development within a very short period.

"They would also see a great deal that would make them take a more lively interest in the affairs of their city, and give them the impetus to see that the proper sort of people are elected to govern affairs at the City Hall. They would see in some sections, streets with houses, quite a distance apart, with asphalt roads and sidewalks that would do credit to St. James or McGill streets. On the other hand, they would see other sections, just as populous, and frequently more so, where there are not even sewers, householders having to rely on wells, quarries and cart deliveries for water, and having to put in their own sidewalks or go without them. There is no police protection and frequently the sidewalks laid in the day are stolen during the night. No roads are provided on streets taken over by the city in some districts, which in wet weather are practically impassible. These are not miles out in the country, as one might suppose. They are adjacent to thickly populated districts and when the home owners bought theme, they were promised sewers and other improvements that still remain only a promise.

OTHERS BETTER TREATED.

"It would not be so bad were it not that these people are called upon to pay taxes just the same as if they lived in the heart of the city. Their assessments were evidently made with the idea in mind that they had all the modern improvements. They pay heavily and get nothing in return. Some of the 'streets' would even tax the capabilities of a 'tank.' Compare that state of affairs with what can be seen in other districts, situated originally in a similar way, but now with sewers, asphalt roads, sidewalks and the like, and one can see why the ordinary Montrealer should get out and see the suburbs and take a keener interest in what is taking place there, and then he would understand why Montreal has not attained an enviable reputation as a well planned or a well administered city.

"That is only one phase of the matter, however," General Ross continued, "and perhaps the worst one, but, there is not the slightest hesitation to my mind in declaring, in spite of this disadvantage, that the future of Montreal seems to be boundless. Consider what we were twenty years ago, and look at us now. The city is bound to expand. It can't, of course, be all high-class residential property, but it must grow, and develop according to the requirements of a big city.

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE.

"The larger the city, the quicker it expands, and as the present census will probably disclose a population of about 800,000, it means an annual growth of a good-sized town every year, exclusive of the transient population that is natural to all large commercial centres, and no one doubts the unrivalled situation of the City of Montreal, both for import and export trade and as a manufacturing centre. The next commercial revival will, to my mind, demonstrate to the business men of this continent the superiority of the Province of Quebec and the City of Montreal as a business industrial centre. The statistics regarding the population, shipping possibilities, trade and commerce returns, etc., are so familiar to Montrealers as not to require repeating here.

"Manufacturing industries do not procure twenty-five foot lots, they require large tracts of land one has only to visit the Angus Shops, the Imperial Oil Company's properties, or the Canada Car Company's holdings to realize what will happen to the outskirts of the city when things do get really active and then speculate as to where the land is to come from to supply these requirements. It will not be bought at six or ten cents per foot as it may be purchased in some districts today, but at very much higher prices.

"Montreal is in need of a number of things that absorb land, it wants parks and playgrounds—and plenty of them. If the city fathers cannot provide funds to purchase spaces and areas when land prices are fairly low, then some of our wealthy citizens could well afford to donate sufficient funds to procure these desirable areas which mean so much to the health and happiness of the rising generation. It requires boulevards, driveways and economically laid out thoroughfares and streets, provision for which should be made at once to save endless expense in the future. Had many of the streets been properly opened and made of sufficient width in the early days, the public debt of Montreal would have been very much lower than it is today, and the amusement tax rate fixed on a lower scale.

CONCERNING PRICES.

"And what of land values?" General Ross was asked.

"Prices today in improved properties in the better residential sections is practically higher than before the war and business localities such as St. Catherine of St. James streets, are about what they were when the war put an end to real estate activity," he answered. "That in itself is remarkable, for while the city has grown a great deal in the past seven years, there have been no large buildings, to speak of, erected, nor reasonable residential houses. That is what has caused rents to soar. I will not attempt to predict when the building wave will start up, but nothing can keep it back nor prevent an extensive program for many years to come. When it starts land values will take a jump. Many will recall the way the mounted during the last 'boom.' They have remained at a good level all through the troublesome times we have gone through and when buying starts in earnest they will start off from a high grade.

"Another point that is worth considering is that today there are very few farms left to be subdivided. Conditions now are not like they were ten years ago. Most of the farm lands have been bought up, and are either sub-divided or are being held for future sale. Accordingly there will be no very cheap lots close to the city proper, that were so common a few years ago. Those who are holding land realize the demand must come and one can rest assured that when that day does come, those who have held on so long for the turn of the tide will not conduct any bargain sales.

"Prices today on vacant land are much lower than they will be for many years to come—if ever," General Ross continued. "I cannot imagine anything that would drive them lower than they are now, unless it might be some huge financial disaster that would wipe the Metropolis of Canada off the map. There is no reason to think anything like that is possible, however. During the last half dozen years, some weak holders had to relinquish their holdings. Their land has gone into stronger hands, hands well able to hold on to them, and to wait the turn that will inevitably come, if not this year, then next year or the one after. The main thing is that its coming is as inevitable as death and taxes.

TURNING TO LAND.

"The pessimistic condition of the stock markets, the fall in the price of securities, and the reduction and passing of dividends emphasizes more and more every day the substantial position of Real Estate Investments."

General Ross mentioned a fact not generally known — that there have been inquiries from well-to-do people of the city, with a view to investing their surplus funds in real estate. In this way they hope to reduce the amount payable under the income tax on their investment, and when a resale takes place in three or four years they figure on getting at least a sufficient profit to equal their loss of revenue, but on which they will not be called upon to pay any income tax. Quite a few investments have been made of this nature, and he expects the practice will grow.

In conclusion, General Ross stated that there is every reason to expect a big flow of British and American capital to Montreal in the next few years. One of the main reasons is that the labor market here is more stable than elsewhere.

England, at present, is weathering a severe storm, but she will come out on top, and when things get normal there, they will have a big influence on the development of Canada and particularly of Montreal. United States firms are daily making enquiries as to locations here and a number of them are expected to erect factories for the Canadian trade in the near future. All of which augurs well for the future of Montreal.

DO WE WANT "THE GOLDEN STREAM?"

The New York World closes a review of our recent article on "Repudiation, Annexation or Population" with the following mordant comment:

While the United States feels compelled to limit immigration, Canada not only welcomes it but regards it as necessary, provided only that these immigrants are "tillers of the soil—not cultivators of social unrest." It would be a grimly humorous comment on our 3 per cent. immigration bar if it helped Canada by diverting the golden stream north of the line.

Down in Washington, they are beginning to question the wisdom of their harsh restrictions on immigration. Some of them "believe Canada will be the real beneficiary." A Washington despatch says.

Opponents of the restrictive idea take the view that with the United States shutting the bars the tide of emigration from Europe will be turned heavily toward Canada and desirable parts of South America. They hold that the emigration will mean the rapid development and settlement of practically the whole Canadian northwest, with increase in value of lands and vast enlargement of agricultural production. The expansion of Canadian industries at a rapid rate is also foreseen.

Senator Reed, of Missouri, the Democratic leader, who fought the immigration bill, is one of those who holds that the United States is taking a short-sighted policy, which will make Canada before many years almost another United States, provided Canada welcomes the European immigrant.

Exactly. But the question is:—Will the Canadian Government have the intelligence and courage to take advantage of this unique opportunity?

We have none of us hitherto quite liked to say it; but we have all along known that Canada's great chance to get the enriching stream of European emigration would come on the day that the American nation closed or nearly closed its sea-gates. Europe will continue to emigrate. It always did that even in the fat days of peace; and it will want far more to do it today when war has wasted its substance, curtailed its chances for profitable labor and saddled it with enormous debts. But this increasing and hungrily-eager flood of emigrants will now dash itself futilely against the barred doors of the American Republic. They have become afraid of immigration down there since their country is filled up—they see "red" whenever they look at it—and they are cutting it down to a narrow minimum.

Where is it to go? Certainly it will not stay at home if it can find an outlet. Certainly it will come to North America in preference to any other Continent; for we are the best advertised El Dorado on earth. Advertising—free and otherwise—has been the chief reason why it has sought the United States in the past. Millions of Europeans, who hardly know that Canada is on the map, know all about the fabulous land where gold lies on the streets, where men get rich in a few years, where Hoover lives and raises his millions for charity, where soldiers are paid twenty times as much as they are in Europe, where there is a free horse for everybody—and a push-cart for those who dislike farming.

Today that particular section of El Dorado is closed; and this is our chance to tell them that Canada is a far better country for the harried European to go to than is even this legendary land of Californian gold, Dakotan wheat and money-mad New York. Uncle Sam has given away all his farms. His own sons are seeking a bigger opportunity on the Canadian prairies.

But Canada, lying right alongside the United States, with millions of acres of the richest soil in the world under a climate very like that of the most fertile parts of the American Republic, with a Government quite as free and democratic, has its doors wide-open, holds out a hand of hearty welcome to desirable emigrants, and will help every genuine home-seeker to get started on the road to wealth. That is, this is what we might say to them—not, unfortunately, what we do say to them loud enough for any one to hear.

The overflow of Europe is going somewhere. We can get the bulk of it if we go after it. Why are we not on the job?

Largely because there are a few people who do not want it to come to Canada, while the vast majority of Canadian tax-payers—for whose relief a much larger population is absolutely imperative—are doing nothing about it. As usual, it is the active and vocal minority which rules. This is all the easier because this minority asks inaction—the easiest thing to get from any Government.

But who are these paralyzing minorities? The most important is Labor, which reasons that, the more competition there arrives in the commodity it sells—i.e. skilled labor—the lower will fall the price it can command. We shall not now debate this point. It is our opinion that Labor men of long vision will see quite easily that it is wrong. They have only to note that the high wages paid in the United States would never have been reached if the United States had stayed a sparsely settled country. But let us leave this feature of the case. Let us assume that Labor is right.

Very well then. All we need do to meet it is not to encourage such immigration as falls into the category of skilled Labor, protected in Canada by Unionism. Whether we like it or not, we shall probably have to accept this condition if we are to get cordial Government co-operation with a campaign for augmented immigration.

Then there is the timid minority which fears the radical tendencies of some candidates for admission. Where radicalism is not due to a real lesion in the mind, it is curable. Then it is caused by unjust and cramping conditions of existence. There certainly do exist just such conditions where a man who is not a "radical," in the sense that he wants to cure them, is either a coward, a clod or a toady.

If there are any such conditions in Canada, we should get them out of the way, and not keep immigration out for fear it will fester and rot under their shadow. There are certainly no such conditions in the West. Any honest "radicalism" will be softened into a virile progressivism, and harnessed to the reform of such light grievances as do exist, when exposed to the tonic airs of the open prairie.

We need be afraid of nothing but the insane "Red." He is easily detected, and can be kept out—precisely as we should keep out typhus, small-pox or leprosy. But let us not make the mistake — the mistake our American neighbors are now making, luckily for us—of barring out every alert, inquiring, aggressive mind because it has, perhaps, exploded into passionate condemnation of ancient European tyrannies which our forefathers came to this Continent to escape.

• • •

Meantime, what are we going to do about it?

Sir Henry Drayton intimates that he must soon float some more bonds. That is, he must again borrow more money to pay the interest on what we already owe.

That means that we are still headed toward Repudiation, Annexation or POPULATION. And Population is hammering, clamoring, piteously crying at the door. There are millions of workers in Europe who want nothing so much as to help us to pay our war debts. And there are few things we want or need more.

ANNUAL CONVENTION.

Mrs. John Scott, party organizer to the Women's National Liberal and Conservative organization, will address the annual convention of Compton County W. C. T. U. on Wednesday at Cookshire.

FELL DEAD ON STREET.

Prisgne Cantin, of 463 Fullum street, a married man of about 45 years of age, fell dead yesterday afternoon at five o'clock whilst walking along Ontario street, near Dorion street. The inquest is being held this morning.

NEW CAR SERVICE OPENS ON MONDAY.

The new street car line between Bordeaux and Ahuntsic which, as stated in The Star a few weeks' ago was to open soon, will be ready for traffic on Monday. The line runs from the tramways shop at Ahuntsic to the Canadian Pacific Railway station at Bordeaux. It traverses Kelly, Tillhurst, Daze, Meilleur, McDuff and Poincare streets and Boulevard Gouin.

It is intended to continue the St. Denis car line to Ahuntsic and to establish a regular service between Bordeaux and Montreal North. Material for the construction of this work is retarding the commencement of the job.

CENSUS TAKING NOT YET ENDED

Evasive Roomers Still Cause Much Difficulty to the Enumerators

Although the enumerators are working night and day in their effort to clean up returns on the Island of Montreal, so far as could be learned none of the commissioners have yet completed the work which was to have been finished last Wednesday. One commissioner reported that he and some of his men had been working until one in the morning during the past week, but in spite of their efforts there are still a number of "Slippery lodgers" who have yet to be interviewed, and residents in some sections say that the census man has not yet made his appearance. Many roomers object to giving information when the landlady is anywhere in the vicinity, and the forms which the enumerators leave behind to be filled in are frequently placed in an envelope and elaborately sealed by canny lodgers to prevent her from gratifying her curiosity. For a while one of the commissioners kept a "black list" of disloyal citizens, who refused information and in no uncertain language gave their opinion of the Government. These however have now "come round" he says, since they have been told that the Dominion authorities would deal with the matter. An enumerator said also that he had been refused information by some returned soldiers who objected to the questioning on the ground that the Government already had the information. When the matter was satisfactorily explained to them, they were quite reasonable, and answered the questions put to them without further hesitation.

Family disruptions are a frequent source of worry to the census taker, and one case is told where the religion of several children could not be decided, as one of the parents was a Roman Catholic and the other a Jew, and they could not agree which church their unbaptized offspring should attend. The recording of ages also continues to be an uncertain business, and in one family the mother glibly gave her age as 35 years, while her daughter, she said was 22.

EXPORT TRADE DIRECTORY.

From the 1921-1922 edition of the Export Trade Directory, just issued, it appears that there are now 2,459 export merchants and commission houses in sixteen cities of the United States, and 325 branch offices of foreign concerns buying chiefly or only for their headquarters overseas. A special index of the 2,674 connections of American merchant houses with their buying correspondents in this country, lists of export houses interested in but one commodity and a map of the export district of New York, included to aid out of town manufacturers calling upon New York exporters, are interesting features of this compendium of business information.

ALIBI ADVANCED IN MURDER CASE

Bakai Maintains He Was at Work When Shooting Occurred

VERDICT TODAY

Injured Lad Severely Cross-Examined Yesterday

The presentation of an alibi formed the main line of defense in the trial of Mike Bakai, accused of the murder of Nikola Strypka, at 313 Cadieux street on the evening of April 1st. Dan McAvoy, counsel for the defense, called several witnesses to the stand, all of whom swore that accused was at his work in Walton's cafe, on St. James street, until after 7 o'clock on the night in question, and was not in the neighborhood of the crime when it is alleged by Crown witnesses the victim met his death.

Carried in the arms of his father, little six-year-old Jake Lublinsky, who told the court he was shot in the hip by accused, gave his testimony in a weak, childish voice, and appeared to be still suffering from his injury. The defense objected to his production as a witness by the crown on the ground that he was not of sufficiently mature years to give evidence, but the objection was not maintained. On a Friday night, the little boy said, when questioned by Mr. Lafortune, he saw accused and another man, whom he identified as Soviak, come to his house. They went upstairs looking for "Sam" and he heard loud words and arguments in the upstairs quarters occupied by the Strypka brothers. Shots followed, and the two accused were seen by the boy to run downstairs. The father of the youthful witness caught Soviak and accused is stated to have threatened to shoot unless the elder Lublinsky released his partner. "I saw fire from near the accused," the boy said, "and felt something strike me in the leg."

The lad also also admitted that he had identified Bakai in the hospital. Mr. McAvoy submitted the boy to a severe grilling on his story, and plied him with questions on the assertions he made to the Crown. "How do you know it was Friday?" he asked; "Because it is a day on which we burn candles," the lad remarked, referring to a practice of the Greek church.

Constable Mercier told of arresting accused in a restaurant on St. Lawrence boulevard on April 25. "Me no kill," are the words with which accused is alleged to have addressed the constable before the latter had spoken to him at all.

Theo. Derosco, ex-constable, and Detective Gursky, stated that they had seen accused with others on St. Lawrence street early in the evening of April first. Detective Laroche and Sergt. Young told the court that they had visited the scene of the tragedy on the night in question and had seen the victim stretched dead on a bed in the room. Diversity of opinion prevailed as to the exact size of the cubicle, this varying from 5 feet 6 to 12 feet square.

Mike Soviak, also accused of the murder, denied that he knew Bakai and that he had been with him on the night of the shooting.

A fellow-worker with Bakai said that accused was at work all day on April 1st and had left the cafe at about 7.30. Sam Wennicke, another employe at the restaurant, said that he was with accused until long after seven o'clock.

BAKAI IN THE BOX.

Bakai himself was placed in the witness box and swore that he wore a blue suit and green overcoat at work, and denied knowing Soviak or Strypka. Questioned by the Crown, he denied that he had ever carried any other name. After work on April 1st he went to his room on a lane near Clark street, and met a friend of his in the "Modern" Cafe, on St. Lawrence boulevard. He denied that he had been in the vicinity of the market, where the detectives stated he had been seen, about 8.20 on the night of the shooting.

A cap was produced by the Crown, as one found in accused's room, but witness declared that it was not his.

He admitted serving a sentence of one month here for being drunk while an employee of the Windsor Hotel, but called up "all Montreal to prove that he had always been a good worker while employed by the Ritz, the Windsor and the cafe."

At the conclusion of Bakai's evidence, the defense made a motion for non-suit in view of the contradictions in the evidence, but this was not maintained by the Court, and the case was adjourned until this morning, when the defense and Crown will present their addresses and the jury will deliberate on the evidence. A verdict is expected sometime before noon.

MONTREAL WOMEN HAVE NOT YET TAKEN TO PIPE

Woman is busily engaged in burning up man's monopoly of smoking, and among the cities where women are commencing to smoke almost as much as the men is Montreal. Local dealers report that though there had been a steady increase in the number of women cigarette-users since 1915, an unprecedented rise in the amount of ladies' cigarettes sold here has occurred since last Christmas.

Milady usually waits until a tobacco store is empty except for the clerk, then steps in and asks for several packages of her favorite brand, Russian as a rule, although some prefer Turkish and Egyptian blends. The clerks explain the fact that women buy several packages at one time by saying that by doing so they are saved the trouble of coming in often, and women, according to tobacco-store clerks, are still not quite sure of themselves in this matter of smoking, and are shy of being seen going into a tobacco store.

Dainty white cigarettes are specially made for women smokers, with gold tips, or cork tips, painstakingly blended, delicately perfumed, and expensively wrapped and boxed.

VARIETY OF HOLDERS.

Women are also responsible for a great increase in the number of designs for cigarette holders. They come made from all materials, from bone to solid ivory. The high and low prices paid for them are quite as diverse as the materials. The bone ones come as cheaply as five cents each, but then there are ivory ones, tipped with gold, which set father back twenty shining shekels every time that daughter loses her pet cigarette holder and "just has to get another exactly the same."

An aid to the girl who has trouble in finding out how to "inhale" has also made its appearance in the form of a quill which, when inserted in the mouth-end of a cigarette holder, projects into the mouth for an inch and a half, and with so much quill in one's mouth, and smoke coming through it, is pretty hard to prevent "inhaling."

Fancy cigarette-cases also find a ready sale among women according to dealers, Women's preferences in cigarette-holders are for light, artistic affairs which can, if necessity arises, be camouflaged to look like a change-purse, vanity-case, or something similar.

NOT YET.

Although it is reported from England that the smoking of pipes is gaining popularity among English women, it has not yet reached Montreal. Neither are there to be seen displayed in the windows of local tobacco shops the be-jewelled and gilded pipe of miniature size which have won such popularity in the old country. But some Montreal dealers still have hopes that even the time when this shall be is not far distant. They have already received catalogus from their jobbers, sent out by enterprising London dealers, who evidently foresee a time when in Canada woman shall not only vote and smoke cigarettes, but sit down by the fireside with a pipe in her mouth if she feels like it.

The pipes described in the catalogues run anywhere from $25 apiece to $300, and in a large number of them platinum is used lavishly, and sometimes even diamonds are seen adorning a circlet around the stem of the pipe.

"NOT LADY LIKE."

But the tide of male opinion to be against woman when she starts to lay claim to pleasures that had previously regarded as his exclusive prerogative, and smoking is of these. "It is not right for a girl to smoke," many say, "It isn't ladylike."

Yet only recently in England there was held a contest, entered by some of the highest of society, in which the prize was awarded to the most graceful lady smoker.

NEW BUILDING.

The work of tearing down the building situated at the north-east corner of St. Catherine and Drummond streets, formerly occupied by the American Drug Store, was finished on Thursday night. A new building will replace the old one and it will be occupied as a branch bank by the Merchants Bank of Canada. Purdy and Henderson are the contractors, and the contract to demolish the old building was given to Jos. A. Major, contractor.

TO DECIDE PLAYGROUNDS.

Ald. Thos. O'Connell interviewed Commissioner Ross, yesterday afternoon, regarding the equipping of Haymarket Square as a Public Playground. Mr. Ross stated that the Administrative Commission was considering a report on the subject. He believed they were generally favorable to the proposal, but a final decision will be taken today.

MRS. STILLMAN'S CASE IS STRONGER

Couple Had Lived Together During Discussed Period

IMPORTANT RESULT

Judge Asked to Strike Out Evidence of Buffalo Doctor

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y., June 18.—Attorneys for James A. Stillman strove to prove yesterday the banker's claim that Guy Stillman is illegitimate but before the cross-examination of one of their principal witnesses had closed, it was brought out for the first time that Mr. Stillman and the wife he is suing for divorce lived together under the same roof on two Sundays within the period considered important in establishing the paternity of Mrs. Stillman's 31 months old son.

Her counsel appeared pleased that the proceedings of the day had resulted in making possible the elimination of the entire testimony of Dr. Hugh L. Russell, osteopath of Buffalo. It was he who testified that Mrs. Stillman told him before the birth of Guy Stillman that Fred Beauvais, the guide employed by Mr. Stillman, was the child's father.

STRIKE OUT TESTIMONY.

On the ground that these statements were made by Mrs. Stillman while under treatment and were therefore privileged as between a patient and doctor, her lawyers asked that the entire testimony of the osteopath be stricken out. Referee Gleason took the matter under advisement and promised to give his decision on June 28, when hearings are resumed here.

Mary Olive Gilligan, the nurse who attended Mrs. Stillman at the birth of Guy on November 7, 1918, testified that the banker's wife directed her on that day to telegraph Beauvais a message saying "little Black Bear has arrived." She added that Mrs. Stillman had also asked her at the same time to locate Mr. Stillman and request him to visit her.

DIDN'T SEE NEW-BORN BABE.

The banker, who, the witness said, had not gone to the hospital with his wife on the day before Guy's birth, subsequently called several times, but, so far as the witness could recollect, he never was with the new-born Guy, nor did he ever speak of the baby.

It was learned last night that Mrs. Stillman has told her attorneys that during the summer of 1918 while she and her children were near Grande Anse, Que., where Beauvais was employed at their camp, it was agreed that when the expected infant arrived messages would be sent to all of the children and to the guide. Should the baby be a girl the message would say "White Bear has arrived" and if a boy "Black Bear has arrived."

This, it was understood, the defense expects to establish later in the case.

CROSS-EXAMINE OSTEOPATH.

Dr. Russell was cross-examined. From a diary in which he kept the list of his patients, he read, it was said, the record for January 6, 1918, showing that on that day he had treated Mr. Stillman, his wife, Alexander Stillman and Frankie Beauvais, Fred's nephew, at Mondanne the banker's estate near Pleasantville in the Pecantico Hills. Two lines had been erased from the entry for the day, it was said.

The diary also recorded, it was asserted, that Dr. Russell treated Mr. Stillman and his wife, their son Alexander and Fred Beauvais at Mondanne three weeks later. A line also was erased from this entry. John E. Mack, guardian ad litem for Guy Stillman, asked the witness if the name scratched out had not been that of H. Phelps Clawson of Buffalo. He could not recollect.

The date in question—January 27, 1918—was said to have been the Sunday on which Mr. Clawson later will testify that he was a guest at the Stillman estate and that both husband and wife were there. This is the date which Mrs. Stillman's lawyers have selected, it was said, to make their strongest stand for establishing Guy Stillman's legitimacy.

LIVELY DISCUSSION ON MARRIAGE LAWS

Council of Women Disapproves of Inequality Between the Sexes

WOMEN'S ATTIRE

Commend Pronouncements Against "Extremes" Housing Action Urged

GALGARY, Alb., June 18.—(By Canadian Press).—The election of convenors of the standing committees, selection of Port Arthur as the 1922 convention city; discussion of the marriage laws of the country and criticism of women's attire featured the closing session of the National Council of Women here yesterday.

The report of the standing committee on immigration outlined Canadian immigration legislation since 1828 and reported recent additions to the laws on this subject.

Statistics showing that only five per cent. of those dependent on the community are Canadian born and that immigration from all countries except the United States increased twenty per cent. in 1920, were included in the immigration report.

The report of Mrs. R. C. Edwards on marriage laws and marriage licenses in Canada was the subject of a lively discussion. She outlined briefly the different laws on this subject, existing in the various provinces and quoted figures showing the different age limits for the validity of marriage.

There is a uniform limit of 14 years for boys but the limits for girls vary from 12 years in Quebec to sixteen in British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan require only the consent of the parents to establish the legality of a marriage when the contracting parties are minors.

PROTEST INEQUALITY.

A vigorous protest was registered by many members against the Alberta law which legalizes marriage of the girl of 14 when it is for the purpose of legitimizing her child.

The Council adopted a resolution expressing its disapproval of the inequality between the sexes in respect to the marriage and divorce laws. Some members were especially incensed at the law which permits a man to marry his deceased wife's sister, but which prohibits a woman from marrying her deceased husband's brother.

The Council expressed itself in accord with pronouncements made by some churches in criticism of women's attire of the present day, said to be "extreme."

A resolution was also passed urging concerted action throughout Canada to relieve the "inadequate - housing situation in the larger centres of population."

A resolution proposed by the Owen Sound Local council urging the National Council to consider the case of nurses who have been overseas with a view of securing for them financial help when in special need, was referred to the committee on soldiers' dependents.

A resolution proposed by the Ontario Women Citizens' Association was adopted endorsing the relief and industrial training and reconstruction work undertaken by the Armenia Relief Fund Association of Canada in co-operation with the American Relief Fund of London, England.

The resolution pledges the assistance of the National Council in this work by disseminating information on the subject, by giving time to speakers on the program, and by giving moral and financial support.

EXPLORER PLEASED WITH NEW SCHOONER

WISCASSET, Maine, June 18.—Donald B. MacMillan expressed enthusiasm over the schooner Bowdoin, in which he will start from here, July 10 on his Baffin Land expedition, when the vessel arrived here yesterday after a 25 mile trip up the Sheepscot River from Builder's Yard at East Booth Bay. He was presented with a sextant by residents of this town, with a ship's clock by the local Masonic Lodge and with a doll and set of doll's clothes as a gift for some Eskimo girl by Miss Hortense Burleigh, of Boston.

The Bowdoin will proceed on Sunday to Portland and Boston for supplies and additional equipment.

NEXT N.C.W. SESSION AT PORT ARTHUR

Invitation of West Algoma Official Accepted by Convention

CALGARY, Alb., June 18. — Port Arthur will be the next meeting place of the National Council of Women. This was decided at yesterday's session of the council when the invitation to convene in 1922 at the head of the Lakes was extended to the council by Mrs. A. R. Cole, of the West Algoma Council. Mrs. Cole read a telegram from the mayor of Port Arthur expressing the most cordial desire on the part of that city to entertain Canada's parliament of women next June. Mrs. Slipper, of Edmonton, and Mrs. Murray, of Halifax, spoke in favor of going to Port Arthur, and the invitation was enthusiastically accepted.

It was also urged that the council consider Halifax as the convention city in 1923. It was stated that the first parliamentary recognition the council had received was given to it in Halifax when the delegates were invited to hold one of the first conventions in the parliament buildings. The council's famous suffrage resolution was also passed at another convention held later in the historic Nova Scotia city.

The result of the election of officers reported by the scrutineers was as follows: Convenors of standing committees: citizenship, Dr. Stowe Gullen, Toronto; Conservation of natural resources, Dr. Mary Ellen Smith, Vancouver; Education, Mrs. C. A. Walsh, NewWestminster; Equal moral standard, Dr. Margaret Patterson, Toronto; Fine and applied arts, Mrs. Dignam, Toronto; Household economics, Mrs. J. C. Mackvor, Toronto; Immigration, Mrs. W. Dennis, M.A., Halifax; Laws concerning women and children, Mrs. O. C. Edwards, Macleod; Mental hygiene, Mrs. S. Stead, Halifax; National recreation, Mrs. A. H. Malsinson, St. Catherines; League of Nations, Mrs. S. E. Clement, Brandon; Professions and employments for women, Mrs. Margaret Sears; Public health, Mrs. N. C. Smillie, Ottawa; Suppressing of objectionable reading matter, Mrs. John MacGillivray, Kingston; and Taxation, Mrs. E. M. Murray, Halifax.

CHARGED WITH DEATH OF FOURTH HUSBAND

TWIN FALLS, Idaho, June 18.—Mrs. Lydia Southard, charged with murdering her fourth husband, Edward F. Meyer, sat apparently emotionless throughout the day at a preliminary examination before Probate Judge Duvall Thursday. She seemed oblivious of the gaze of one hundred or more spectators, mostly women, who had crowded into the court.

Witnesses today included Dr. J. F. Coughlin, who attended Meyer in his fatal illness. He testified that Meyer had suffered a relapse almost immediately after a special nurse had been discharged as a matter of economy and Mrs. Southard was left alone in care of the patient.

MINISTERS TO DROP MILITARY TITLES

Much Discussion at Bay of Quinte Conference Ere Decision Reached

WHITBY, Ont., June 18.—It was not without a protest on the part of some of the "civilian" pastors that the Bay of Quinte Conference yesterday acceded to the request of veteran brethren that they should henceforth be addressed as plain "Mister," and that all military titles be eliminated from the minutes and official documents of the conference.

One champion of the ex-service men was Rev. Geo. Ross, of Peterboro, who, after a rousing speech in praise of the heroic service of the veterans, moved that the letters "S.O.S." should appear after their names, indicating "Service Overseas." "Unfortunately, S.O.S. is a signal of distress," said Rev. B. F. Stillman, of Omemee.

The conference roared with merriment. Rev. Mr. Ross, however, rose again and insisted that his suggestion was a good one, but after trying to prove it, he concluded that it might be misunderstood, and suggested that the initials of "Military Service" might be used instead. He could not get a seconder for his motion.

Rev. W. G. Clark, of Trenton, who served as a chaplain at the front, supported the resolution to abolish the titles. He said the highest title to him was that of "Brother," and there was nothing in the nature of disrespect to the men who had served their country in the elimination from the minutes of the little titles that they bore for a time in the service of their country. He believed that these titles were a handicap in some cases. He thought it was best all round that they should blend themselves into the common life of the church and go back to the ordinary titles of brotherhood, which they bore before the war.

The original motion to abolish military titles was carried unanimously.

OPPOSE AMALGAMATION OF SOLDIER BODIES

Ontario G.W.V.A. Against Present Scheme But Urges Unity

TORONTO, June 18.—The Ontario Provincial Command of the G.W.V.A. has gone on record as opposed to the present suggested amalgamation of all the soldier organizations into one body.

In a resolution passed on the question, however, the desire is expressed that the G.W.V.A. Dominion Command may "meet representatives of other veteran organizations as soon as convenient, in order that there may be unity of policy on all matters of mutual interest, in the hope that finally complete union of all ex-service men in Canada may be accomplished."

TEXTILE WORKER DIES OF WOUNDS

Youthful Companion Says Adrien Vezina Stabbed Himself

QUEBEC, June 18.—(By Canadian Press.)—With a knife wound through the heart, Adrien Vezina, aged 16 years, of L'Ange Gardien parish, died in a room of the Dominion Textile mills at Montmorency Falls shortly before noon yesterday, while his cousin, Leopold Tardif, aged 17 years, the only witness of the tragedy, was placed under arrest and is now being held at the headquarters of the provincial police pending the holding of the coroner's inquest today.

The two boys yere working alone in a room, assorting cotton waste, Vezina, the victim, had a knife which he used to cut the waste. The first intimation of the tragedy given to other employees of the factory was when Tardif rushed from the room stating that Vevina had stabbed himself. Vezina was found lying on the floor unconscious with blood flowing from a wound in his left breast. He died within ten minutes, without regaining consciousness.

LABOR FEDERATION SCORES WAGE CUTS BY BIG PACKERS

Convention Pledges Support to Workers in Fight Against Reductions

MOONEY CASE UP

Labor Urged to Continue Working for Release—Lewis Has Backing

DENVER, June 18. — (Associated Press.)—The American Federation of Labor in convention here yesterday unanimously pledged its support to the Packing House Workers of the United States in their fight against further wage reductions.

The "Big Five" packers were condemned for attempting to reduce almost a million workers and all their dependents "to a degrading state of poverty with all its attendant deprivations" and thus cause an "unfortunate condition that because of its far reaching results will also impede the progress of the nation."

The executive council was instructed to "leave nothing undone to aid to the utmost the workers in the packing industry."

After declaring the packers were "again taking advantage of the present period of business depression and unemployment to reduce the wages of workers," the resolution said:

"The workers in the packing industry are threatened with a recurrence of pre-war conditions and an effort is being made to lure them into joining so-called company unions which in reality are for the company only, established, managed and controlled by the packers who hypocritically are proclaiming that they are bringing industrial democracy to the workers, a democracy with a string tied to it."

Copies of the resolution were ordered submitted to President Harding, Secretary of Labor Davis, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Senator Kenyon and other Legislative representatives interested in the packing industry and the packers.

MOONEY CASE UP.

In making an appeal for organized labor to keep up its fight to free Thomas Mooney and Warren K. Billings, convicted in connection with the San Francisco Preparedness Day bomb plot, John Mooney told the convention that these men were kept in prison by a "criminal conspiracy on the part of the State of California."

The speaker, who is a brother of Thomas Mooney, said that the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco had "engineered this conspiracy." He also mentioned two United States Senators, one of whom he accused of having contributed one thousand dollars "in blood money to aid the conspiracy." The other, he said, got ten thousand dollars for coercing a witness in the Mooney case.

Mr. Mooney said that when his brother comes out of prison he will again take his place in the ranks of organized labor as "he believes in only one organized labor movement in the United States—that is the American Federation of Labor."

Interest in whether John Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, would oppose President Samuel Gompers for re-election continued at high pitch yesterday.

Lewis continued to maintain silence but it was learned that he had established headquarters at a local hotel, where representatives of the mine workers from all sections of the country were gathering. Practically all the executive board members of the organization were reported to be in the city.

LEWIS BOOSTERS ACTIVE.

Lewis boomers were active throughout the day canvassing the various delegations, but owing to the strict secrecy being maintained it was impossible to get any accurate estimate as to the probable voting strength that had been mustered by the mine workers' force.

That the mine workers' delegation is split on the candidacy of Lewis was learned tonight when Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois district of mine workers, announced that he would not support the miners' chief. He also declared that two other delegates were against Lewis and would cast their votes against him if he decided to run.

An interesting sidelight on the possible election contest developed with the arrival of J. B. Clinedinst, of Newport News, Va., representing the Virginia State Federation of Labor. He said that he had been sent here by his federation to cast its single vote for Mr. Gompers.

The Virginia federation Clinedinst said originally decided not to send a delegate because of the expense. When newspaper reports reached the organization's officials that Gompers might be opposed, he said, "they instructed me to reach Denver as quickly as possible with the lone vote of Virginia."

The Federation also received a message from the Washington, D.C., Central Labor Council, urging the re-election of President Gompers as a reply to the "outside influences that are attempting to disrupt the labor movement and endeavoring to undermine and destroy its leaders."

Francois Pelletier, who will be appointed director of the Superior Normal School of the Province. Rev. Abbe Genest, former director of the Quebec Seminary, was re-appointed to that position.

The JOHN MURPHY CO. Limited

EX-SERVICE MEN GET TOGETHER

Form Committee to Relieve Distress—Leaders Elected

A gathering of 300 to 400 disabled and incapacitated returned soldiers took place in the New Empire Theatre, Stanley street, last night and formed a committee to enquire into, and endeavor to rectify the present means of obtaining work.

Colonel (Canon) Almond occupied the chair, and on the platform were Colonel MacKenzie Forbes, Canon Scott of Quebec, Canon Shatford, Colonel Lordly and Mr. Legrove, of the Canadian Film Association. E. A. Brice, of the St. George's Society was also present.

The meeting opened with the singing of the National Anthem. Loud applause greeted the announcement that Canon Almond had decided to throw his entire support into the movement.

Canon Almond delivered the first address and in asking those present to state their cases said "In this matter, we want the truth and nothing but the truth." He declared that when overseas he had pledged himself to do all in his power to help the wives and families of those who went to France and gave their all that Canada might retain her position in the world. Free speech was to be the order of the evening, but he wished it to be clearly understood that the gathering was not of a Red or Bolshevik nature but of a truly loyal meeting of clean-blooded Canadians. Repeatedly was the fact emphasized that the appeal put forth was not for sympathy or charity, but that the returned man should be given an honest chance to obtain work suited to his physical ability.

Questioned on the subject, the larger number of those present had not had three meals and many had not eaten once, today. Everyone in the theatre was unemployed, and most of them were married men with families.

"It was a pity," remarked the Canon, "that because a few of the real rotters—found in all walks of life—had let down employers, and much publicity had been given to these cases, the public had formed the idea that the returned soldier was a quitter. Why judge thousands by the action of a few? Why was that awful word "bum" given to such men as had had the courage to face a living hell that the industries of Canada might carry on?"

Extracts were read from a letter from the Federal Government Labor Department a precis of which inferred that it would hardly be possible in the present trade stagnation to discriminate between the returned soldier and the ordinary individual who was out of work.

At this point, Mr. Fred Leese, a returned soldier, took the opportunity of pointing out to the assembly certain facts as to the way England was dealing with the "out-of-works" ex-service man. The ex-soldier was given a chance to attend courses in any line he cared to adopt, Leese said, and on passing an examination he became qualified in his profession on trade. Cases were pointed out in which men who were perfectly willing to work could not accept a job offered them by the labor bureaus because they were charged a $3 fee and at the time they had not that amount of money in their possession. Some present believed that the Canadian Government should deal directly with these men as regards the labor problem. Such positions as mail-carriers, mail-clerks and other Government positions should be given to men who only spoke English—having regard to the fact that there were men in these positions who could only speak French.

Canon Almond took up the threads at this moment and coming right to the point made it quite clear that at the moment the best thing to do was to formulate some plan to alleviate the immediate cases of dire need. He announced that the Montreal Herald had presented him with a cheque for $1,000, to be used for this purpose.

Speeches were also delivered by Canon Scott, Colonel Mackenzie Forbes, Canon Shatford, Colonel Lordly and Mr. Legrove. All the speeches conveyed the feeling that if the public were given the true facts of the case, the returned man need have no fear of not receiving justice. It was pointed out that the present labor troubles and trade depression complicated matters and that things must not be expected to go too smoothly at first.

It was proposed that a committee be formed at once to be called an "Advisory Committee" until such time as General Sir Arthur Currie returned from abroad. On his return General Currie would be asked to become honorary president.

On a showing of hands, Canons Almond and Shatford were unanimously elected as leaders, and Sergt. Amos F. Leese and one other were elected as members of the committee. It was also proposed theat Lady Williams-Taylor be approached to form a Society of Women who would lend a helping hand in the work of alleviating the needs of the moment.

The meeting was conducted in a thoroughly business-like and orderly manner.

JEWISH MEETING SUNDAY.

A large Hebrew demonstration on Fletcher's Field at 5 p.m., on Sunday next will mark the observance of the day as a national holiday by the Jewish residents of Montreal. The demonstration will take the form of a large procession on foot and in decorated automobiles. Banners bearing the amount contributed by each organization to the Foundation Fund to re-establish the Jews in Palestine will be carried. On Tuesday evening, June 21, a mass meeting will be held in the Baron de Hirsch Institute, when reports of the campaign will be read and prizes awarded. The sum of $200,000 towards the objective of $400,000 for this city has already been subscribed, the largest contributors being Sir Mortimer Davis, Mark Workman, Archer Pierce, A. Levin and A. J. Freeman.

UNDERGROUND WIRING

The Administrative Commission yesterday granted a contract to G. M. Gest, Limited, for the construction of the underground system of lighting in district No. 7 at a cost of $161,906.01. This means that the district bounded by St. Lawrence, Notre Dame, McGill and Commissioner streets will soon be rid of the overhead wires and poles. The plans drawn up by the Montreal Electrical Commission have been approved by the Quebec Public Service Commission and work will be put in hand immediately.

"HENRY BURR'S" MOTHER DEAD.

She is survived by her husband, two sons, Harry of New York, a well known tenor who is also widely known to phonograph users under the name of Henry Burr; and Frank, of Boston, and one daughter, Mrs. F. OVERTOOK ALLEGED BOAT THIEVES.

SYDNEY, N.S., June 18.—Two policemen, manfully toiling at the oars, overtook a motor boat when the engine stalled in the middle of the harbor last night and arrested Sick Shepherd and Sam McLeod, its occupants, on a charge of theft of the craft.

Reparations May Prove a Boon to German Exporters

But he is a progressive, according to Stinnes, the autocrat, wire puller who is behind this party in creating an immense, driving, industrial machine by cheap efficient production built up from coal, iron and steel to all branches of manufacture dependent upon these materials, with electrical developments on a gigantic scale for power and with cheap labor to compete with the world's markets.

Herr Stresseman spoke at length about the French policy and his voice took on a deeper note of passion. "The instincts of the German people," he said, "are for peace. Our future is in peace and not war. We would willingly have made friends with France and worked to repair her ruin if her people had been a little generous, even a little courteous after our defeat. But they have done their best and are still doing it, to arose feelings of enmity.

CALLS FRENCH REVENGEFUL.

"In their occupied districts they have been needlessly arrogant. In Duisburg, which they took to enforce the signing of indemnities, they behaved with gross impertinence to the mayor. Those are but pin pricks, but in their policy and in their press they have revealed hatred, a desire to humiliate, and a ruthless injustice outrageous to our honor and dignity, which makes it impossible for the German people to be on friendly terms with them. They are deliberately stirring up a desire for revenge instead to allay the hatred of war."

He told me the French policy was seeking to repair three mistakes to which Napoleon confessed. Napoleon said: "My mistakes were to let Prussia get strong, to let Poland be weak and to misunderstand Russia."

"French diplomacy now," said Herr Stresseman, "is to weaken Prussia, strengthen Poland and dominate Russia by setting up a Czar as a puppet of France. But their policy will fail because there is no tendency in Germany to break away from Prussia despite all the foreign hopes and intrigues, while Poland will always be weak and ready to fall apart because of the inherent instability of the Polish character. As for Russia, French puppets like Denikin and Wrangel failed miserably, and modern France more than Napoleon himself, could not understand the spirit of Russia."

Herr Stresseman went at length into the question of reparations. He held the view that after a few years during which Germany will desperately endeavor to fulfill her pledges, the European people will realize the folly of maintaining such abnormal conditions of world trade and will call another conference to revise the whole Peace Treaty and will develop a scheme for an international economic union by which the interests of all European nations would be secured with a better arrangement than wild, destructive competition with tariff walls and rivalries.

"The war debt of all the nations," he said, "could be wiped out in a few years by a small tax on raw materials like cotton and coal paid by all purchasers and put in a common pool for that purpose."

CAN GERMANY PAY?

In his opinion Germany, with the best will in the world, will be unable to continue the payment of the indemnities for half a century. This will be recognized, he thinks, by the increasing common sense of European peoples. That undoubtedly is the official view of the German Volkspartei, but it is challenged by Dr. Walter Rathenau, Minister of Reconstruction and probably the greatest German economist, who said definitely in the Reichstag, "We can pay," and by Philipp Scheidemann, leader of the Majority Socialists, with whom I had a talk in the company of his friend and adviser, Dr. Helphand, millionaire Socialist.

One thing is now being done in England. Really frightened at last by financial conditions, the British Government has come out for ruthless economies and for the complete abandonment of trade subsidies. Working men will be forced into the labor market in the old dreadful warfare between supply and demand and all employers are determined to beat down wages in the most drastic way.

The trouble between the coal getters and the coal owners is at last being settled by a compromise after a ruinous conflict which discredits both sides, and the cotton and engineering trades are preparing similar action, leaving the same sense of bitterness in the minds of the working men and women who see themselves forced down to a lower standard of life by irresistible powers.

A rapid decrease in the cost of living would soften these blows, but the heavy taxation and lost trade tend to keep prices high. At the moment, as far as I can see and know, the British Governemnt has no clear principles, or policy with which to lead the nation.

There are so many conflicting interests in the Coalition that it is difficult for Lloyd George, apart from the vagaries of his own mind, to steer a straight course. His enemies gather strength. Plots are afoot to dethrone him. Neither his foreign policy nor his home policy, whatever they may be, and nobody knows from one week to another, seem to bring peace abroad or prosperity at home.

Apart altogether from politics, the English people as far as I know them, are getting angry. During the last week or two there has been sudden awakening to new perils abroad — in Asia Minor where the Turks are gathering strength and in Upper Silesia where there is no settlement of justice —and a realization that England must at all costs put her own house in order and balance her books.

And there is always Ireland, as a disgrace and tragedy. When the English people get angry, which isn't often, things begin to happen.

What will happen, I think, is a storm of indignation against politicians who are playing poker with the destiny of their own country.

LOEW'S THEATRE PRICES DOWN

Balcony Seats Drop 45 Per Cent—Orchestra 25 Per Cent

Prices at Loew's theatre will be reduced next week, orchestra seats by 25 per cent, and balcony seats by 45 per cent, Marcus Loew, owner of the Loew chain of theatre, who is in the city for the opening of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" at the Princess theatre, announced today.

The reduced prices will be maintained throughout the summer season at least, Mr. Loew said, and, if possible, will be continued indefinitely. This policy will be carried out in all Loew theatres in cities where condition warrant it.

It was through the co-operation of the employes of the theatre that the drop was possible, he said. When the cost of living went flying skyward, they were given increases of pay without having to ask for them, and now that prices were reduced everywhere, they had voluntarily accepted a decrease in pay.

Speaking of conditions in the theatre business in Montreal, Mr. Loew said that the early summer had knocked the theatres here rather hard, as, during the hot weather, they barely made their expenses, for all that, he said, theatre conditions here are better than in other provinces, probably due to the much lower cost of living in the province of Quebec.

Business conditions are far better at the present time in Canada than in the United States," he said. "In the States, there is no incentive for a man to go into business at all. In going into business he takes a risk, if he succeeds, under the present excess-profits taxation law, he can at most only make a profit of fifteen per cent, while, if he loses, he loses 100 per cent. The game is not worth the chance that must be taken."

The Marcus Loew Company controls the Metro Picture Corporation, and Mr. Loew is following what he claims to be the greatest picture ever produced, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse around the country, at least for the openings. The prices being charged in Montreal, he said are less than half what is being charged at the present time in New York, where the lowest ticket to see the picture costs a dollar. This, he added, is in accordance with the policy of the company in charging as low prices as possible for tickets.

STRUCK DOWN AND KILLED BY CAR

Struck by an automobile at the corner of Demontigny and Panet streets, J. E. Venne, a young lad residing at 1239 Ontario east, received injuries of which he died shortly after being admitted to the General Hospital last night.

The machine, driven by Adolph Steinberg, of 801 St. Catherine street east, who reported the affair to the police at No. 3 station, was going down Panet from north to south, when, at the intersection of Demontigny street, it collided with a bicycle ridden by the boy. The lad was thrown violently to the ground and was immediately looked after by Mr. Steinberg and passers-by who called the ambulance.

On arriving at the hospital it was found that the boy had received fatal internal injuries, and a few minutes after being admitted he died. The body was taken to the Morgue where the inquest is being held this morning.

PARISH PRIEST DEAD.

Rev Arthur Morin, parish priest of the Back River, died last night from heart failure, from which he had been suffering for some time. Born at St. Jacques l'Achigan, in 1861, he attended college at Joliette and later studied for the priesthood in Montreal, being ordained in 1884. He was made parish priest of Back River in 1906. Canon J. A. M. Morin, parish priest of St. Edouard, of Montreal, is a cousin of the deceased cleric.

DALY IS DEAD.

From a fractured skull believed to have been sustained when he fell against the side of a street car at the corner of Jeanne Mance and St. Catherine streets at 8:30 on Tuesday morning, John Daly, 63 years of age, of 259 St. Antoine street, died at the Montreal General Hospital at 3:30 this morning. Daly was working with a gang laying cement on the street.

Flat is Robbed . . . . . While the Owner Watches Neighbor's

The truth of the adage that "Charity begins at home" was a few days ago, impressed upon a young resident of Montreal who, after watching a neighbor's flat to protect it from burglars, who had robbed it on the two previous nights, returned home to find that the burglars had stripped his own flat during his vigil.

The young man occupies a flat on Esplanade Avenue. His landlord, with whom he is on intimate terms, has the apartment immediately above him. The landlord recently moved to his summer home on the lake shore, with an injunction to the young man to "keep an eye" on his flat.

All went well until a few days ago when the housekeeper, coming to clean the landlord's flat, discovered that a number of suits of clothes and other articles were missing, while a window at the rear, looking on to a balcony, had been broken. She told the young man below, who took special precautions to safeguard the landlord's flat. The next morning the housekeeper again reported that the flat had been broken into and that jewellery and silverware had been stolen.

This second burglary caused the young man to decide to watch for the intruder at night, with a revolver in each hand he waited in the darkened flat of the landlord for the burglar. None came, and in the morning, sleepy-eyed and weary, the young man made his way to his own flat below. Here a surprise awaited him. During his absence his own flat had been stripped of everything with the exception of the furniture. Clothes, silverware, jewellery, draperies and pictures had all fallen prey to the burglar who had been busy while the owner had patiently watched and waited to defend his landlord's goods. It was with difficulty that he found sufficient clothes to wear when he discarded his dressing gown.

CANADIAN VICKERS WIN LAWSUIT

By judgment of Mr. Justice Duclos in the Superior Court yesterday afternoon, the action of Jas. McCarthy against Canadian Vickers for $10,000 damages, for alleged injuries received by plaintiff while in the employ of the company defendant, was dismissed with costs.

It was shown that McCarthy had already received from the defendant $949.40, plus $250 for doctors' fees and $324 in wages for light jobs he had performed for the defendant since the accident of which he complained. It was also shown that McCarthy had left this situation because he claimed "it was too easy." Action dismissed, with costs. Cook and Masee appeared for defendant.

MONTREALER WEDS PORT HOPE GIRL

Marriage of H. D. Suckling and Madeline Boulton Pretty Event

PORT HOPE, Ont., June 18 (Star Special).—St. John's Anglican Church was the scene of a pretty wedding yesterday afternoon, when Madeline Rudyerd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Rudyerd Boulton, of this place, was united in marriage to Henry Dean Suckling, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Suckling, of Montreal. The Rev. J. A. Elliott officiated.

The church was prettily decorated and the invited guests were from Montreal, Toronto, Port Hope and other places. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked quite charming in a dress of pale pink organdy with white frills. She wore a pink hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of pink sweetheart roses. Miss Elfrida Boulton, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Lesler Ward and Mrs. Frank Briden, who wore respectively mauve, cream and green organdie dresses, with picture hat to match, and carried bouquets of mauve and pink sweet peas. The groom was attended by Mr. C. L. O'Brien, of Montreal. The ushers were Mr. Lewis Clarke, of this town, and Mr. P. A. Pozer, of Montreal.

The groom's present to the bride was a string of pearls and to the bridesmaids onyx and brilliant bar pins. Following the service at the church a reception was held at the beautiful home of the bride's parents, where refreshments were served and the bride performed the ceremony of cutting the cake. The newly married couple left shortly after six o'clock for Quebec, where they will spend their honeymoon. The bride's travelling costume consisted of a blue tricotene suit with hat to match and was very becoming.

MANDATE QUESTIONS SOON DISPOSED OF

Dr. Da Cunha Urges Allies to Come to Agreement with U.S.

GENEVA, June 18.—Mandates, the first question before the thirteenth meeting of the Council of the League of Nations was disposed of speedily yesterday when the retiring president of the Council, Dr. Gaston Da Cunha, announced he had sent a note to the Allies asking them to come to an agreement with the United States so that the Council might act on proposed terms of the mandates before the next meeting of the Assembly.

Dr. Da Cunha then turned over the presidency to Viscount Ishii of Japan, who, on taking the chair expressed approval of the action of his predecessor. Herbert A. L. Fisher, representing Great Britain, voicing his approval, impressed upon the Council the importance of the earliest possible settlement in the interests of populations in territories under mandate.

Opening the session Dr. Da Cunha declared:

Before handing over the presidency to my successor, I want to state that, having received no reply from the United States to the invitation to send a representative to discuss the terms of the mandates, I thought it advisable to suggest to the principal Allied Powers that it is for them to come to an agreement with the United States Government before the Council can act upon the proposed terms. I accordingly sent them a note asking that an accord be reached before the next meeting of the Assembly. I thought this method might advance final decision, so urgent for the welfare of the territories under mandate. I hope the Council will approve."

There was no further action or comment other than the speeches of approval of Viscount Ishii and Mr. Fisher.

ACQUITTED OF ARSON CHARGE.

HALIFAX, N.S., June 18.—A. E. Muir and C. L. Dauphinee, local garage owner, have been acquitted of a charge of conspiracy to commit arson. The case against Muir and Dauphinee was based on statements made by Alex Roach, who alleged that he had been hired by them to set fire to a garage on Barrington street, owned by Dauphinee. Roach admitted that he had laid information against the men to "get back" at Dauphinee who some time ago had him arrested on a theft charge.

COMPEL DELIVERY OF GERMAN GRAIN

Reichstag Adopts Bill Despite Opposition of Socialist Factions

BERLIN, June 18. —The compulsory delivery of 2,500,000 tons of grain by German producers out of this year's harvest is provided for in a bill adopted by the Reichstag yesterday after a stormy debate. The Bourgeois parties, advocating the measure, were solidly opposed by the three Socialist factions. The latter demanded a national reserve stock of 4,500,000 tons, which would amount to a continuance of the present system of Government control.

The present action is the first step in abolishing official control and rationing of grain, which it is believed here will be discontinued permanently in 1922. The German producers, by virtue of the bill, will be permitted to deposit of their surplus stocks in the open market after having turned in the required total of 2,500,000 tons.

The Socialist organs yesterday severely rebuked the Reichstag for adopting the measure, charging it will automatically result in an increase in the price of bread flour, as the powerful interests in that commodity, now no longer under rigid governmental scrutiny will be permitted to demand prices of their own fixing.

AUCTION COMPANY AWARDED CLAIM

H. Silbert, New York Buyer, Must Pay Heavy Debt

By judgment given yesterday by Mr. Justice Coderre, Harry Silbert, of New York, was condemned in default to pay the Canadian Fur Auction Sales Company, Limited, the sum of $171,027.26. A. and E. Pierce and Company, Limited, called as mis en cause in the case were also ordered not to depart without an order of the court, with any monies which they might have owed to defendant Silbert. The litigation is an aftermath of the fur auction sale which took place here during the week beginning March 22, 1920.

At that time, it was alleged, Silbert bought from plaintiff furs amounting to $203,415.25. Shortly afterwards, according to the proceedings in the case, Silbert became financially embarrassed and failed to pay the price of the furs he had bought, but agreed that plaintiffs should sell them as best they could and that he would pay the difference between the price realized and that which he paid.

Plaintiff sold at private sale and at auction a large quantity of the furs bought by Silbert, except 4 fisher skins, 222 muskrat skins and 120 beaver skins. These, they claimed, they were ready to deliver to plaintiff against the payment of $171,027.26, as representing the value of the skins.

Mr. Justice Coderre granted judgment for the amount as claimed, with costs, reserving to plaintiff the right to take further proceedings.

Weinfield and Company appeared for plaintiff.

SEVERE TEST FOR NEW FIRE ENGINES

The two new pumping engines purchased for the Montreal Fire Department were tested yesterday on the south shore of the Lachine canal at the foot of Seigneur street. Satisfaction with them and belief that they will add considerably to the efficiency of an already famous fire fighting force was expressed to The Star by Chief Joseph Chevalier, head of the Department. Col. F. M. Gaudet, director of Public Safety in Montreal attended the initial test at the canal this morning. He also expressed satisfaction with the new apparatus.

The pumps, under the charge of Chief Engineer Gauthier and Assistant Chief Engineer Forget were placed on the bank of the canal whence the water was drawn into them. This, with the engines working at a pressure of 120 lbs. was ejected through the hoses of the engines and considerably disturbed the tranquil waters in this part of the canal. The 120 lbs. test continued from seven o'clock this morning until one p.m. At that hour the engines were worked at a pressure of 200 lbs. At four p.m. the pressure will be raised to 250 lbs. at which the engines will work until seven p.m.

The roar of the engines and the splash of water in the canal attracted a large crowd to the canal bank this morning, as well as the crew of a ship from Ogdensburg passing through the canal locks at the rear of the Ogilvie's Flour Mills. The engines were supplied to the city by J. H. McCarty and Co. of this city. They are built on the same model as those at present used in the Montreal brigade.

SUCCESSOR TO TRUSTEE DESIRED

Mr. Justice Archer reserved judgment in the Superior Court yesterday on a motion presented by Mrs. L. J. Rivet, Mrs. P. R. DuTremblay and Miss Anna Berthiaume to have the delibera discharged on the action taken some weeks ago by Edouard Berthiaume to have the deed of fiduciary contained in the will of his father annulled, the late the Hon. Treffle Berthiaume, in his lifetime member of the Legislative Council and proprietor of La Presse, in order that the contestation of the action be amended.

Since the taking of the action, Jos. R. Mainville, one of the fiduciaries appointed in the will of the late Mr. Berthiaume died, and it is inferred by the proceedings which took place this morning, that the contestants who are the daughters of Mr. Berthiaume, wish to amend their plea in such a way as to name a successor to Mr. Mainville.

An array of legal talent appeared in the case: W. A. Handfield, K.C., with Aime Geoffrion, K.C., as counsel, appeared for Mesdames Rivet and DuTremblay and Miss Berthiaume; Ernest Pelissier, K.C., with Eugene Lafleur, K.C., as counsel, for Edouard Berthiaume et al., and Rodolphe Monty, K.C., for the fiduciaries appointed by the testator, Zenon Fontaine, K.C., and the late J. R. Mainville.

REFUSES REVISION OF JUDGMENT

Mr. Justice Tellier sitting in Chambers, in the Court of King's Bench (appeal side) yesterday refused the application of Edouard Gascon who sought to have an interlocutory judgment of the Superior Court revised.

The case was that of an injunction granted Amable Clermont, public notary, St. Vincent de Paul, against Edouard Gascon, contractor, of Montreal, restraining the latter from going further with the construction of some houses he contracted to build at St. Vincent de Paul. Clermont alleged that some difficulty occurred between him and Gascon and that they had agreed to submit the difference to a board of arbitration; that notwithstanding this written agreement, Gascon insisted on going on building the houses.

Leopold Saint-Denis appeared for Clermont, and Pelissier and Company for Gascon.

PAY BY INSTALMENTS.

In the Superior Court yesterday Mr. Justice Surveyor condemned Albert Corbell to pay Miss Fiore Pepin the sum of $100 for defamation of character. His Lordship, taking into consideration the fact that defendant is an apprentice druggist just starting on his career, gave him the opportunity to pay the amount he was condemned by instalments during the period of one year from the date of the judgment.

TEARS FAIL TO SOFTEN RECORDER

A pathetic appeal to be treated leniently, accompanied by the shedding of tears, and charges that the evidence against him was all a "frame up" did not soften the sentence of three months hard labor or a fine of $500 given by Recorder Semple to W. F. Brown for having drugs in his possession.

A small blue bottle containing morphine was found in Brown's pocket. Brown said that if a doctor examined the bottle he would find that there was nothing in it but cocoa nut oil, which he used for his hair. A chemist, who was called, stated that he had examined the bottle and had found the bottle contained morphine.

Brown then tried other methods of defense. The bottle did not belong to him, he said. He appealed to the Recorder for mercy, as he stated he would lose his job, but if he was released he would go home and live with his parents and give up all his bad friends. Tears and an utter look of dejection was the last line of defense employed.

CHARGED WITH THEFT OF RAILWAY'S SPOONS

On a charge of theft of silverware from the dining car "Balmoral" of the Canadian Pacific Railway, John Lyon of no fixed abode, appeared in the Enquete Court yesterday judgment will be pronounced on the 23rd inst.

Giving evidence, Walter Mountfield, a C.P.R. detective, stated that at 4 p.m. on June 10 he saw prisoner walking along the main line, near Westmount yard, carrying a parcel under his arm. Mountfield stopped Lyon and asked him what was in the parcel. After some argument prisoner admitted that it contained some "old silver junk" belonging to the C.P.R. Opening the parcel Mountfield found knives, forks and spoons to the value of $170.00. He thereupon arrested Lyon.

W. Gough of the C.P.R. testified to the lock of the dining car being broken and produced the pieces in court. Ald. J. J. Creelman prosecuted for the C.P.R.

W.C.T.U. FLOWER MISSION OPENS

Montreal Central W.C.T.U., flower mission will open for the season from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Wednesday next at 169, Drummond street. Workers are urgently needed to prepare the flowers for distribution. The report for last season shows that over 2,055 bunches of flowers were sent to hospitals and sick and lonely persons, and 11 meetings were held.

Among the hospitals benefitting were the Homeopathic, Prince of Wales, Women's, Grace Dart, and Children's Memorial Hospital, the Royal Edward Institute and Diet Dispensary. Contributors of flowers included the Misses Raynes, Westmount; Mrs. Meikle, Morrisburg; Mrs. Black, Lakeside; Mrs. Farrell, and Miss Fisk, Abbotsford, and the unions of Sutton, Sutton Junction, Knowlton, West Brome, and Huntingdon: Miss Smith took charge of the packing and sending of large weekly boxes of flowers including pansies, which were always sent to the childrens' Memorial Hospital. Valuable help was also given by Mr. and Mrs. Frost, who donated string and wired and stamped 2,000 text cards, and much financial help was also accorded. Another helpful seasan is anticipated.

MOTOR BUSSES TO ST. HELEN FERRY

Project is Submitted by City to Tramways Company

A proposal has been made to the Montreal Tramways Commission by the Administrative Commission that there should be established a motor bus service from the foot of Beaudry street to the St. Helen Island Ferry on Victoria Pier for the convenience of the women and children who will cross to the island during the summer months. At present the nearest transportation line is the Notre Dame street car line, and it is a long way down to the boat for women carrying babies and food.

Mr. Decary stated this morning that there would be a meeting of the Tramway Commission next Wednesday at which the proposal would be discussed, and it was almost certain that the bus service would be established. While there would not be sufficient vehicles to carry all the people who would transfer from the tramcars, the busses could look after the women and children to a great extent, and thus add to the pleasure they derived from their outing to the island.

PICKPOCKETS ARE BUSY ON TRAMS

Pickpockets still continue to operate on the street cars and at street intersections in Montreal. That there is an active gang in town is proved by the number of complaints received by The Star.

A young lady on her way home from work at 5:30 last evening had her purse stolen from her pocket at Place D' Armes Square. In the purse she had about $24 in cash, a rosary, prayer book and several other trinkets.

J. B. Merette, of Yamaska, was passing through Montreal yesterday on his way to the United States. While on a St. Catherine street car $150 was taken from his hip pocket. It was necessary for him to telegraph for money to continue his trip.

George School of 309 Bleury street was waiting for a street car at the corner of St. Lawrence boulevard and St. Catherine street yesterday afternoon. When his car came there was a crowd getting on and off. He noticed a little jostling but did not pay any attention. When he felt for his pocketbook containing $450, it was missing.

ARTILLERYMEN BACK AT GUNDRILL

The 7th. Canadian Siege Battery, under the command of Major T. E. Ryder, which left this city for Petawawa Comp on Wednesday last, will return on Sunday next, it is expected, arriving here on Monday morning. The first day at the camp was spent in short courses in gun drill, gun laying and signalling.

Lieut.-Col. E. G. M. Cape, who is at the camp, expressed his opinion that the Battery stood a good chance in the competitions for various trophies that are being held. Arrangements were made to hold a concert for the men each evening. Officers under Major Ryder are Captain R. A. Fraser, Lieut. A. K. Hugessen and Lieut. Warford. Among the men are a large number of former members of Cape's Battery who are enjoying the opportunity of renewing old acquaintances and recalling overseas days spent together.

THE ACTION OF SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS

By A. D'ARCY CHAPMAN, M.A., M.Ed., F.R.G.S.
(late Headmaster, Macdonald High School.)

There is no one anywhere who on rational grounds would today attempt to defend the school examination as an instrument for determining the true value of a pupil's ability. Yet in spite of this an inadequate ideal still lingers with us and we cling to examinations. An attempt is here made to enter into the life of the pupil in the school of the "old" examination regime and to estimate whether or not his life would be happier if the value of his school work were estimated in the light of modern mental tests and measurements.

So many factors, however, enter into the make-up of the child to bring about that pleasurable feeling of repose which we associate with happiness that the absence or presence of one is sufficient to throw the nicety of equilibrium into chaos, the result of which is that uneasy feeling we know as unhappiness. It is, therefore, quite impossible to determine the issue adequately, for happiness is subjective and cannot be estimated at present by any objective means. Happiness is a symphony of abstract qualities, termed moral qualities. Or these examinations tell us nothing. Industry, it is true, they reward, but work may be done under strong incentive of eagerness for success, or under compulsion or in the absence of temptation and under circumstances when the pupil's zeal may flag. Energy and taste go far to make a man what he is and there examinations fail.

Examinations have a three-fold function:—

First, they act as stimulants. It is true that the stimulus is artificial and as is the action of all drugs, excess in their use eventually brings about stupor. The excitement of examinations is unwholesome, and it is rightfully urged that those who work under such influences not infrequently do nothing worth doing afterwards.

Secondly, the examination serves as a guide. This concerns mainly the teacher and the administrator, and to them is of inestimable value. The "jetsam and flotsam" of knowledge has been brought together, the whole of which has been combined and weighed, then placed in a relative position where it most effectively can aid in leading the recipient to an intelligent grasp of the world as a whole.

Thirdly, the examination obliges the pupil to produce knowledge and encourages him to try it out in terse and lucid style. After all an examination should be considered as a privilege and should not be looked upon as a penalty. It is valuable in forming convenient mile-stones during the process of development and forms a fitting climax at the close of the school career. It sends the young person out into the world with a mace in his hand, the presence of which supports him through all the difficulties of his path, because he has been educated in the sense of being able to know what he is about, since he has a recognized criterion of knowing himself and the world.

CONCERNING HEALTH.

Medical men, whom we should expect to have some sure criteria for judging the effect of the examination system upon the health of the pupil, are not agreed "in toto". Hence the case of the deleterious effects of examinations upon the health is by no means proved. That unfortunate individual catastrophes have resulted from overstrain in connection with examinations which have been laid on a competitive basis must be admitted. But examinations of this kind are by no means general and only concern those who have proved themselves to be of superior intelligence. Further it must be recognized in defence of competitive examinations that up to a very few years ago, the examination was the only objective standard of worth with which no one could quarrel. Supposing there were ten men in for three positions, who would not submit to an examination rather than have such positions granted under a "patronage" system. In such cases the examination is just a piece of machinery for awarding an appointment or a prize.

There is a very great distinction between the competitive examination and the examination used as a means of testing work and as an educational appliance. In practice the two have been confused

As the years have passed, countries have progressed in that they fully recognize the importance of educating their people. They have awakened to the maxim that educated peoples are more conservative and less liable to rebellion than uneducated, whose simple minds are waved and prone to accept the rabid ideas of street-corner orators. So the more progressive of nations compell its children to attend school for at least nine years. Unhappily Quebec is not included among these. All and sundry have been swept into the schools and the schools were, and in many cases are still, ill-prepared machines for their task. Girls with their finer and more delicate susceptibilities have been subjected to the handling which experience has shown to be necessary on the duller and tougher feelings of boys. The result has been that girls have been driven beyond the normal pace for their sex.

NO TIME TO RELAX.

Further national and home life have materially changed from that of a score of years ago. Then, except for the arrival of the daily train which was an event of importance and excitement, there was nothing to ruffle or upset the equilibrium of an otherwise unromantic day. Now the watchwords are hustle and bustle. There is excitement from morn till eve. With our modern ideas of transportation and amusement we cannot relax for the unexpected may come at any time. We are living entirely upon our nerves. With the coming of preventative medicines, zymotic diseases have almost disappeared, but organic and nervous diseases are daily on the increase.

In spite of all this, the machinery of our schools has gone on as of yore. To nerves already jaded with the "trivial round of daily life" comes the school examination as an ogre haunting the age of boyhood and girlhood. More formidable than ever has it become because life is ever making more demands upon us and the school has perforce had to follow suit. Teachers have intentionally it seems surrounded the examination with a halo of superstition. Not only daily in their teaching have they held up the examination as a sort of demi-god, but they have also created a supernatural atmosphere on the examination day itself. Pupils await that day with feelings of mingled excitement and fear.

It is to be wondered at that the examination has by all come to be looked upon as a thing to be dreaded? It is suggested, therefore, that the word itself has come to connote in the human mind a suspicion of witchcraft as belonging to the days of the Inquisition, and that it will ever arouse in the human a feeling of suppressed terror. The examination has no ill effects upon the examinee but it is the anticipation of it that works havoc upon his nerves.

If this statement be true then it is quite inconceivable how any boy or girl can be happy in a school the teachers of whom coerce industry by the reminder that an examination looms ahead.

Without entering into a discussion of the fairness or unfairness of examinations, it is sufficient to point out that no human being can subjectively estimate and measure the true worth of another. The protest already referred to shows the futility and variability of human judgment. Apart from the inadequacy of a few questions as a means of estimating the specific knowledge of an individual, there is always the insuperable task of weighing that which he writes. Human judges are fallible. Not only do people vary in their judgments from day to day but investigations show that the degree of variability in judging among teachers themselves is alarmingly high.

Added, therefore, to the terrors already mentioned is the knowledge, which is quite apparent to the pupil, that the examination is unfair and he undertakes it hoping that his "lucky star" will come to his aid. It is the first suspicion of partiality which slowly accumulates as clouds do from the west until the rosiest of days is overcast and burdened with the fretful tumult of the elements. The peace of the schoolroom is challenged.

EVEN TEACHERS UNSTRUNG.

Unfortunately in Canada the examination is seen today in its very worst form. In the Provinces of Quebec papers for each grade are set and marked numerically by the Department of Public Instruction. Yearly promotion through the grades depends upon success in this examination. During May and June the teachers themselves become over anxious and sleepless at nights. Their irritability during the day is vented upon the nerves already at breaking point of their small charges. So many information subjects must be kept in the head at once that the pupil is constantly harassed by the fear that he is forgetting something, while the teacher is equally unstrung in her endeavour to get more in.

Such a procedure is all the more aggravated because climatic conditions of North America, east of the Rockies, are of such extremes that man's physical and mental strength become — unless much care and rest be taken — seriously impaired. It is here maintained that the children in America are, as a result of their climatic environment, of a more nervous and highly strung temperament than, for instance, the children of England. Teachers who have taught in both lands cannot fail but notice a greater degree of tenseness in the American than in the English schools.

Further apart from any reasons pertaining to health, those of us whose business is education, are fully cognisant of the injustice of examinations and the lock-step manner of proceeding through the grades.

By means of general intelligence tests extended over a great number of schools, sound criteria has been reached showing the nature of the differences between pupils. It has been shown that about 2% of our children on matter how long they live, will never develop beyond the level of the normal child of 11 or 12 years of age. These children can be made to work up to, but not beyond the school grade corresponding to their mental age. Thus if a boy's mental age be found to be 10 years, he will never be able to pass the present syllabus of lessons for Grade V.

MANY LEAVE DISCOURAGED.

Surely this is a maxim of importance in removing the major causes of children's unhappiness when living under an examination regime. It sorts out the laggards, for we now know that no child however willing and industrious he may be, can work beyond his mental limitations. And these limitations the schoolmaster can discover. No longer is the "duffer" goaded to increased effort, no longer must he be subjected to the bitterness of successive failures, but he is grouped with others of a similar mental age, his ambition is fostered, self-confidence and courage are built up and the habit of success obtains in firm foundation. The main cause of class room friction is removed. The pupil's reports are satisfactory, he is happy and his parents are pleased.

Mental surveys of High School pupils have been made, and of those whose mental capacity is below that of normal, it is found that 50% leave before the second year. Broken in spirit, imbued with sinister thoughts, some have buried themselves in the "blind alley jobs" of the world; others with renewed hope of better success, have sought entry into another school, only again to be disappointed.

Seeing, therefore, that from 15% to 30% are incapable of success in school subjects, it is not so very difficult a matter to make some adjustment in the school Course of Study whereby these may receive the inheritance due to them and may enter upon life with that optimistic spirit which grow when the right kind of diet is given it. The school is not an institution which caters only to the intellectual aristocracy, but all and sundry should find in it "food" adapted to their needs and powers. It is not the function of the modern school to pass judgment upon its inhabitants, weighing one against the other, finding this satisfactory and that unsatisfactory, according to the amount of "acquired knowledge" contained in the "mental tank." No normal boy or girl can fail in school, but the school itself fails by its giving indigestible food.

Then the cunning little person,—who, by his glibness of speech, willingness to conform to convention, his facile readiness to please, is able to conceal his difficulties from his teachers,—is forced by these mental tests to stand out in his true colours. Impersonal, scientific method of selection is not so easily misled, and the insidious custom—which ruins the morale of a class—of opinions and prejudices entangling the pupil in a clouded web of misconception and hypocrisy—both laudatory and derogatory—thickening as he passes from grade to grade, can no longer continue its autocratic sway.

It is by no means suggested that examinations can be put aside, for these "new fangled tests" are only a new kind of school examination. Indeed unless extreme care is taken in their administration, there is the possibility that "ripe knowledge" which is an accumulation of experiences, might perchance give way to a "display of wits." Persons of similar type with corresponding intelligence are found in all social grades, the only difference between them being that some are better "read" than others. Some have stored up associations and experiences of all kinds; these they are able to draw upon and are able to enlist their aid in solving the difficulties of life. It is the old story of the ten virgins—

"They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them."

The clever boy should not be hurried, but he should have fuller and richer experiences to fill adequately the "mental tank" with which Nature has endowed him.

Scales and mental tests play their part. How happy is the pupil who is able to measure his progress day by day in the mechanical features of school work! How delighted he is to keep his own record! How joyous is he in the knowledge that the rules are fair! He is flushed and buoyed up in the healthy strain of competing with his own past performances.

Summing the matter up, it is seen that by means of tests, a child's mental make-up can be "diagnosed" and a "prescription" to his taste and requirement can be given. To determine the extent to which mental endowment has been cultivated the "examination of old" is so far the best measure known; but it must be shorn of its terror and paraphernalia. Knowing the pitfalls surrounding the examination, it is possible to guard against them and the examination can become a true and honourable measure of a person's mental calibre. But it should not be abused. Let it be a privilege granted to him who wishes to prove to the world at large that he knows the world and is master of some definite area of the field of knowledge.

Surely there is no one, who, having pondered the issue carefully over in his mind, cannot but acquiesce in the statement that the life of the child, when the school measures not only the child but itself objectively, must be happier, richer, fuller, surer, more open, and more straightforward than when success depends upon a fallible human judge in the guise of a written examination.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH UNION

General Assemblies Approve Plans by Enormous Majorities

POSTMEN'S SUNDAY

Can Glasgow Be So Bolshevistic as Edinburgh Paints Her?

GLASGOW, June 4.—(Star Special by Mail.)—The General Assemblies of the Established and United Free Churches of Scotland have approved, by overwhelming majorities, the new plans for the union of the two denominations. In the first Assembly there were only 14 votes against approval, and in the second only 60. This means that the two churches are as one in their support of the special Act which Parliament is being asked to pass to legalize their union. This act makes elaborate provision for dealing fairly with the position of each body, and each church thinks that its rights are thoroughly safeguarded. The minorities claim that in each case a certain amount of liberty is being given away, but the minorities are so small that Parliament is certain to ignore them, and to give the churches the powers for which they ask. After the Bill becomes law, the minorities will not be able—as the Free Church minority did when that body joined with the United Presbyterians — to make any claim to material properties, and so there should be no future trouble with the legal and property affairs of the great big new denomination.

What everybody seems to be avoiding is the fact that there is, underneath it all, a principle for which many people in Scotland — the old United Presbyterian Church in particular—held out for many generations —the principle of voluntaryism. These people believed that the State should have nothing whatever to do with the church. That was the rock bottom principle of United Presbyterianism, and the United Presbyterians form a large proportion of the United Free Church, which is now to join up with the Established Church, which is a real State church. The question now is, apart altogether from endowments, and funds and buildings, what are those who are voluntarists on principle going to do about it? They will not surely try to set up another little Presbyterian sect, without any funds or any buildings, and profess to be the one true Presbyterian Church of Scotland. But, if not, how can they go over to a State church, which officially acknowledges the temporal headship of the King, and has his representative as its figurehead all through its Assembly sittings? It will be very interesting to see what will happen, but really the general public do not seem to be minding very much. There are so many other things to think about.

A LIVING STIPEND.

So many other things even in connection with the churches. There is, for example a living wage for ministers. The General Assembly of the Established Church has been discussing this subject. A special committee of the Assembly has been trying to raise the salaries of all ministers—and there are still far too many—whose means of living are too small. The committee dealt with 43 cases during the past twelve months, and in all these cases the salaries were raised to £340, at a total cost of £78,000—this sum being obtained partly from the funds of the special committee, partly from that well-known church of Scotland fund, the Baird Trust, and very largely by local contributions in the different parishes. The committee reported to the Assembly that they were not wanting to make ministers rich, but they did wish to abolish poverty in the manses of Scotland, and to ensure all the ministers a living wage. There is not much danger of any ministers becoming rich in these days on £340 a year. Lord Balfour of Burleigh told the Assembly this when he said that, in view of the increase in the cost of living, £340 a year was not enough, and that men who took up this particular line of life should not have to make any appeals for a sufficient income. It was the duty of the church to see that they had enough.

SUNDAY MAIL DELIVERIES.

There are a good many among us who think that the new Postmaster-General, Mr. Kellaway, has done a good thing in stopping all Sunday deliveries of letters. The practice of delivering letters on Sunday is not general all over the country, but it is followed in a good many places. Glasgow has no Sunday delivery, and neither, for that matter, has London. There are many cities and towns in the English provinces, however, and also throughout Scotland, which get their letters on Sunday very much the same as on any other day, and these are angry with the Postmaster-General for his new method of cutting down expenditure. But, on the other hand, he has the support of the big body of Sabbath defenders, who see in him a good man trying to do his little bit in bringing the country back to the ways of virtue and old-time goodness. In Manchester his plan is called "an utterly unthinkable and intolerable reversion to a state of primeval savagery." We in Glasgow laugh at that, and at the discovery that we have been living all those years in that state of primeval savagery. We have been, and still are, quite content to so live, and cannot see what other places have got to make such a row about. We don't want our letters on Sundays. We want one quiet day each week.

POOR OLD GLASGOW!

Goodness knows, we need it, for if we are to believe all that is said about us elsewhere, we must be a terrible people. This brings us back once more—with a sort of apology—to the Church Assemblies. An Edinburgh man, speaking at the Church of Scotland Assembly, said Bolshevist and Anarchist opinions were rampant at present. And where did they find the worst forms of these things, and of atheism? They found them in Glasgow. So there we are again. It is always Glasgow. The workmen of Glasgow and the Clyde are always more discontented, and more ready to come out on strike, and turn the industrial and social world upside down, than are those of any other part of the country. There are revolutionaries in Glasgow, ever so many of them, all ready at a moment's notice to throw over King and Parliament and set up any Lenins and Trotskys that may happen to come to the top in the upheaval that will follow. The Edinburgh speaker thinks the best way to combat this sort of thing is to have an efficient ministry. Perhaps, but we who live in Glasgow are not so easily scared as the folk of Edinburgh may think. Glasgow, for its size, is no more infected with evil doctrines than other places, but there is a small number of extremists in it, who are always screaming. We know them and don't mind them, but Edinburgh takes them very seriously. That is one way in which we and Edinburgh differ.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES.

We differ also in other ways. For example, Edinburgh has a fine boulevard in the form of Prince's street, with a line of splendid buildings on the one side, the beautiful gardens on the other, and the old Castle forming a picturesque background. We, on the other hand, have no great show street. But we shall have something of the kind by and bye. We must have it, if only to get upside down with Edinburgh. Some years ago there were great plans for a magnificent highway from the west end of Glasgow away down through Dumbartonshire to the Clyde, near Old Kilpatrick, and for another highway from the south side of the city through Renfrewshire. Both plans looked splendid on paper, but they would have cost lots of money, and so we have not heard much about them for a while. Now there are proposals for "boulevards"—that looks much better than "highways"—in the east end of the city, at some places where the corporation are making new roads and building new houses. These would not cost so much, and they might serve for a time — for the East End. But the West End must have its great highways some day, and along these tree-bordered roads its swift motor cars will rush from city to country, and strangers will come and see all these things and will understand the greatness of Glasgow. Also, Edinburgh will have to hide its diminished head, and say less about its gardens and its palaces.

A JUDGE'S TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR THE NEWLY-WEDS

NEW ORLEANS, June 18.—(By Mail).—To the young men and young women who will become husbands and wives this June, Andrew H. Wilson, Judge of the Juvenile Court, whose years of experience in dealing with domestic problems enable him to judge accurately the troubles these newly-married couples will face, offers commandments for the insuring of connubial harmony.

TO HER!

1.—In the womanly way, accept thou thy mate. Wiser than man's judgment is the method of thy choice, and to us ofttimes insolvable. Choose well and wisely. It means the world to thee, for thou art woman.

2.—As God's light comes to thee, so mayest thou see and understand. In thought and meditation prepare thyself for the immortal sphere which is all thine own, the wonderful realm of Wife and Mother.

3.—Approach the bower of matrimony timidly, modestly, yet unafraid, and the evanescent light of thy soul Trust him that claims thee; love and honor him; and, as God ordains, be to him an affectionate, loyal helpmate.

4.—Into thy new life bring the strength and beauty of thy character and the evanescent light of thy soul, and all the wonderful attributes that are thine and everywoman's.

5.—Cause to stand forth always in thy home and life the glorious sunshine of true religion and honest living, that thee and thine might be happy.

6.—In thy home strive always for the real joy of life, by kindness and sympathy, and let charity and love for neighbor be thy guide and inspiration.

7.—In all things be patient; in trials be not rash; to thy helpmate be considerate. Under all circumstances be wise and gentle, and all will be well.

7.—It is a great privilege to be satisfied with life, and so it is given to all Women. Try, try always to be satisfied as circumstances provide.

9.—Be true to thyself always openly before God and thy conscience as Everywoman should be. To thine own be loyal and sweet and gentle-tempered and watchful until God do us part.

10.—And as thou startest on the pathway of matrimony, under the warm June sunshine, amidst the beauty of its flowers, so live that you may be proud of wifely honors, and some day treasure deeply the Holy Name of Mother!

TO HIM!

1.—Seek and use thy deepest wisdom, but let thy heart guide thy judgment that thy choice of mate may profit thee all thy days.

2.—Go thou cautiously and thoughtfully into matrimony, but with faith and hope and courage, with truth ever in thy mind.

3.—Before thou shalt take this step, cast out all selfishness. See clearly thy way and hers. Pray that it may lead to happiness and content, and strive ever onward to that consummation.

4.—When she comes to thee in wedlock, be thy self Pure and Honest and True. Let Holy Religion bless thy nuptials. Before God and her be thou as open as the sunshine.

5.—Remember thou that the holiness and sweetness of Religion will be as the blessing of God to thee and thine; that His presence is indispensable for the welfare of thy home.

6.—Let thy home be the abiding place of gentle thought and pleasing conduct, of domestic peace and mutual consideration. Let all thy inspirations be for better and brighter things always.

7.—Ever strive as a real helpmate for honorable success in worldly things, with honest and square dealings as thy constant companions, that peaceful contentment and material plenty may be with thee and thine. In all thy worldly dealings be square and honest to all mankind.

8.—As the years pass by forget not the ambitions and traditions of thy Youth. In good sense and thoughtful judgment and unselfish consideration, avoid the pitfalls and temptations of the world.

8.—Be satisfied with thine own and envy not the possessions of others. Sufficient unto thee thy life as thou makest it and what thou hast.

10.—Be true always to thy better self. Endeavor always to find the best in life, even as thy Mother taught thee.

ROTARY MEMBERS FOR WORLD PEACE

Will Have Clubs Memorialize Their Governments

EDINBURGH, Scotland, June 18.—(By Clyde Beals, Written for The United Press.)—Universal peace has been promoted by the International Rotary convention here, according to American delegates preparing to leave Edinburgh yesterday.

All delegates were pledged to have their clubs memorialize their governments for the calling of an international disarmament congress.

Three United States Rotarians were elected vice-presidents of the International Association in the concluding session of the convention yesterday after a vote by ballot. Ralph W. Cummings of Lancaster, Pa., was elected first vice-president with 749 votes; "Billy" Coppelick of Council Bluffs, Iowa, second-vice president with 528 votes, and H. J. Luther Stark of Orange, Tex., third vice-president with 520 votes.

Many presentations were made at the final session. T. G. Sloan of London presented the overseas delegates with specially bound copies of John Richard Green's "History of the English People," and the Earl of Leicester presented the women among the delegations with scarves of Nottingham lace. The New England delegates subscribed 500 pounds for a cot in the Edinburgh Children's Hospital.

The trophy for the club with the best travelling record was secured by Longmont, Colorado. Wichita, Kas., was second and Worcester, Mass., third, while San Francisco secured the women's attendance trophy. The international gold trophy was won by the United Kingdom.

MUST NOT MARRY DIVORCED PEOPLE

NELSON, B. C., June16. — The sixteenth annual synod of the Kootenay Diocese yesterday passed an amended canon under which clergy in this diocese will be forbidden to "officiate" at the marriage of a divorced person whose wife or husband is still alive. The previous reading of the canon was construed by some clergy to merely debar them from reading the Anglican marriage service in such cases.

LAST MINUTE REPRIEVE.

CHICAGO, June 18.—(United Press) —Carl Wanderer, convicted of slaying his girl wife and a "ragged stranger" he hired to stage a fake hold-up, was saved from the noose Friday by eleventh hour action of the Supreme Court. Wanderer, who was to be hanged today was granted a reprieve pending a sanity hearing. Gene Geary, "immune slayer" was also saved. He will be given a sanity hearing also.

FLOOD OF LETTERS FAVORABLE TO SIMS

Doubtful if Any Severe Action Will Be Taken Against Admiral

WASHINGTON, June 18. — (By Canadian Press).—A new factor has entered the lists on behalf of Admiral Sims and as a result belief grows here that he will either not be punished for his famous "jackass" speech, when he returns, or merely be given a formal reprimand which will be lenient.

Great numbers of letters are pouring into Congress from different States; the greater number of which are reported by Congressmen to be favorable to Sims. Some letters from the middle west are even declaring for Sims for President in 1924. This flood of letters will make it difficult, it is believed here for Secretary Denby to take any severe action.

BRITISH REVENUE SHARPLY REDUCED

Stagnation of Trade—Not All in Favor of Putting Off Payments to U.S.

LONDON, June 18. — (Special Star Cable. Copyright) — The fact that the national revenue is being sharply reduced by the stagnation of trade lends keen interest to the suggestion reflected by Reginald McKenna, chairman of the London Joint City and Midland Bank and Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Asquith Cabinet, that the United States may postpone for another fifteen years the interest payments on the war debt due by Great Britain to the United States Government.

Opinion here differs on the wisdom of accepting any such proposal. Many businessmen strongly advocate meeting all liabilities boldly instead of increasing the country's debt abroad. On the other hand, it is admitted here that taxation has about reached its effective limit.

It is evident that the peremptory rejection by the coal miners of the mine-owners terms cannot but increase the trade stagnation referred to above.

This development was totally unexpected in political and business circles, all the figures as they come to hand showing huge majorities in favor of such rejection. This necessitates a revision of recent opinions regarding an impending trade revival, for it is certain that trade cannot revive healthily on imported coal.

McGILL REUNION PROGRAM READY

Representatives of Larger Universities Will Be Invited

ACCOMMODATION

Large Hall Will Be Obtained for Convention

The revision of the tentative program announced some time ago for the McGill Centennial Reunion, to be held from October 12 to October 15 next, has now been completed, and, though a few minor changes may be made, the main items have definitely been decided upon. The students have evinced a great interest in the plans and the senior classes of the various faculties have offered their services in clerical work connected with the system of registration which will be established, in order that a complete record of all present may be available at any moment and each graduate may find without difficulty the whereabouts of his or her former classmates. The various functions will be arranged with regard to the natural desire of graduates to meet old friends and all unnecessary formalities will be eliminated.

Representatives of all the larger universities on this continent will be invited to attend the reunion as the guests of McGill University. Among them will be a number of professors from women's colleges which have taken an interest in the activities of the women students of McGill. Accommodation at city hotels has been reserved for all graduates requesting it and those resident in Montreal have been most generous in offering accommodation in their own homes. As the Graduates' Society has many expenses to bear in connection with the reunion it has been decided that an entrance fee will be charged to the football match arranged for Saturday afternoon, October 15, while the class dinners which will be got up under the direction of the class executives will also be held at the expense of those attending them. Otherwise the various functions will be open to all present at the reunion. . . . .

PROGRAM.

The program is as follows: Wednesday, October 12 — Morning, registration. Afternoon, general reception and garden party on the campus with pageant. Evening, entertainment by the students, the nature of which will be announced later.

Thursday, October 13 — Morning, medical clinics, science demonstrations, addresses in Arts and Theology. 11.30 a.m., annual meeting of the Graduates' Society in one of the large city theatres. Afternoon, convocation for the conferring of honorary degrees on distinguished graduates and others, to be held on the campus if the weather permits. Evening, faculty and class dinners.

Friday, October 14 — Morning, clinics, demonstrations, addresses and class meetings. Afternoon, University sports on the Percival Molson Stadium on Pine avenue, at which special features will be introduced. Evening, class and miscellaneous dinners and dancing at the McGill Union and the Royal Victoria College and in the Medical Building, if the additional space is required.

Saturday, October 15—Morning: trip to Macdonald College, Faculty addresses and other functions. Toronto—McGill Intercollegiate football match on the stadium, with parade of graduates according to classes at half-time. A large section of the stadium will be specially reserved for those attending the reunion. Evening: Fraternity and other dinners.

Sunday morning, October 16:—Church service, yet to be arranged.

TRIP AROUND HARBOUR

One of the functions for Science graduates will be a trip around the harbor on the tug, Sir Hugh Allen. The women graduates are planning among their special function a luncheon and dinner to be held in the Royal Victoria College. The class functions are yet to be definetly arranged. Accommodation has been reserved for all classes whose secretaries have communicated with the executive in Montreal: 'A number of classes which have but few representatives at the reunion will probably join in holding dinners and other functions and accomodations will be arranged for them during the week or so preceding the reunion.

As a result of the large number expected from the west the Montreal committee has announced that there are good prospects of securing a number of special cars to bring them to Montreal. Should it happen to rain on the first day of the reunion, the pageant will be presented indoors while the garden party will probably take the form of a reception in a number of the university buildings. On the afternoon reserved for the special convocation, since the assembly hall of the Royal Victoria College, the largest possed by the university, will be too small to admit all the graduates, accommodation will be secured elsewhere for the ceremony.

FELL FROM BALCONY.

Falling to the street from a balcony on the third floor at her home while playing at 11 o'clock yesterday, the eighteen months old daughter of G. Dodgings, of 82 De Villiers street, St. Gabriel Ward, was seriously injured. At the Western hospital, it is believed that her skull is fractured.

CHILD WELFARE PAMPHLET OUT

A pamphlet, "Child Health Studies in Montreal and the Province of Quebec," which contains the findings of the Child Welfare Association in its work during the past year, with the addition of numerous excerpts from writings of child welfare experts and others interested in such work, has been issued in an effort to put before the public the statistics and vital facts with regard to the child life of the province and to solicit general aid in improving conditions.

Statistics regarding the infant mortality rate per 1,000 babies born in 1919, shows it to be in Montreal, among French-Canadians, 198.8; among Jewish-Canadians, 58.2; among English-Canadians, 115.4 and among foreign nationalities, 214.4, giving a total average rate for the city of 177.5. Statistics of infant mortality by wards of the city are also given with a comparative table of density of population per acre in each district. A comparison of the number of babies under one year of age who die per thousand born shows La Taque with 303 to be the highest in this province Westmount has 215, Quebec City 213, Montreal 178, and Outremont 134, a record which does not compare favorably with that of centres elsewhere in Canada and in the United States. Canada's rate of 115 is considerably higher than that of the United States with 87; Great Britain with 78; Australia with 59 and New Zealand with 48.

Tables recording the investigations of Association in the Travelling Clinic expedition in the Eastern Townships last summer give some idea of the condition of the children in the various districts visited. A survey of conditions in a rural school with suggestions as to improvements concludes the pamphlet while some idea of the accomplishments of the Association during the past year is given in the references made to various pieces of work which it had undertaken.

Y. W. C. A. PROGRAM.

The Y. W. C. A. Senior Girls' summer program will include tennis and swimming, gymnasium games, roof parties, outings, and picnics. Senior Club groups are ensuring that a number of children who cannot easily reach the mountain are taken for afternoon picnics. The Senior Camp will be officered during the summer by Miss M. C. Jamieson, Miss Hazel McAdam and Miss May Best, with the assistance of the camp nurse and sports officer. The Girls' Council will arrange for cross-country hikes, camp fire suppers and singsongs, outdoor dramatic sketches, inside stunts and musical programs, land and water sports.

TO SELL DRINKS.

During the band concert to be given in Westmount Park on Monday evening ice cream and soft drinks will be offered for sale by the Westmount Victorian Order of Nurses on behalf of the funds of the order.

BABY FIRKS.

"Life Despaired Of."

38, De Burgh Street,
Cardiff, South Wales. 30/3/20.
Gentlemen,

I have much pleasure in forwarding a photo of my son. He was so small at birth and such a weakling that his life was despaired of. He was tried with several of the widely advertised foods but rapidly went almost to a skeleton, limp and hardly any life in him. In a very few days after trying him with Virol an immediate change for the better was apparent, and he is now a plump, happy, strong child without a blemish, and is always taken to be quite a year old.

He is a splendid example of the truth of the claims you advertise for "Virol." Please make any use you like of this testimonial.

Yours very sincerely,
(Sgd.) Mrs. F. FIRKS.

Virol is used in large quantities in more than 2,000 Hospitals and Infant Clinics. It is invaluable for the expectant and nursing mother herself, whilst for children it supplies those vital principles that are destroyed in the sterilising of milk; it is also a bone and tissue building food of immense value. Virol babies have firm flesh, strong bones and good colour.

SATURDAY, JUNE 18, 1921.

THE WEEK-DAY CHURCH.

THE biographers of Premier Lloyd George lay stress on the strict Sabbatarianism of his early training. They record that he was brought up by a relative who demanded of his charge the fulfillment of the decalogue to the strictest letter and held strong views on Hell, damnation and original sin. These influences of his boyhood years have left an indelible mark on his character and they have been a potent factor in moulding his course of action throughout his career.

These influences and their reflexes on his character must, therefore, be taken into account when the Premier speaks on matters of church discipline and church practice. As Prime Minister he speaks from his head with an eye to political effect and in words that are tinged with experience and tradition. As a regular worshipper in the church of his boyhood he speaks from the heart.

It is important to recognize this distinction in reading the speech made by Mr. Lloyd George to the General Assembly of the Calvanistic Methodists of Wales. As if to emphasize the difference between Premier and Lay Reader Mr. Lloyd George speaks to the assembly in Welsh, the tongue which he must seldom hear save when he is among his own people and in his own place of worship.

At the assembly the Premier is reported to have declared that the "great controversies of the future would rage around the relations of Capital and Labor and how to create and how to distribute wealth. Once they introduced the debate upon these into the churches they would inevitably divide and destroy the churches for the greater purposes for which they ought to exist." What those greater purposes are the Premier does not seem to have told his hearers, but it is a fair inference from his remarks that it would be unwise to discuss the great economic and social questions of the day in the churches, lest rivalries and antagonisms should arise within the fold, creating dissension and schism.

The idea is not a new one. There are thousands of people who would say Amen to such a faith and the view has developed with increasing force in the recent centuries. Yet, to many laymen, in this doctrine seems to lie the chief weakness of Christianity today. The church to millions of people, of many different creeds, is a thing apart from the ordinary everyday life of the individual. It is a Sunday Church, and not a Monday Church.

There has been much criticism directed against the Christian Church in recent years because of its failure to give the nation a lead during times of crisis. In the days of the great Hebrew prophets and in the days of the primitive Christian Church there was no such separation. Going to war, the levying of tribute and big schemes of migration and colonization were the concern of the leaders of the people—the priests of the Lord. In Messianic times civil and family disputes were brought before the Rabbis for adjudication, and the questions of the day were discussed in the Temple.

Many persons hold the strongest conviction that the Church today is neglecting her tremendous responsibility of giving a lead to the nations of the world on the chief economic and industrial questions of the day. If, as Mr. Lloyd George says, the great controversies of the future will rage around Labor and Capital and the distribution of wealth, then it is high time that the Church prove her usefulness and take her rightful place as the leading spiritual power in the world.

Whatever concerns the daily life of the people should be the concern of the Churches and the greater the question and the more widespread their influence the greater the responsibility of the Church.

The nation demands leadership from the Churches of today, and not seclusion.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

OF recent years a growing interest has been evinced by prominent business organizations, trades and labor bodies, and various societies, in efficient government for the city. This interest in the very nature of things must in the end bear satisfactory fruit.

In very convincing words the chairman of the Administrative Commission recently declared that the whole problem of efficient government in the future was bound up in the calibre of the men who would present themselves for election to the City Council.

The wisdom of this is obvious. There has been too much bemoaning of our ills and too little desire among capable men to serve. On October 17 thirty-five aldermen from as many wards must be elected to govern the city for two years. This will be a testing time. Every effort must be made to bring out disinterested and capable candidates. If this is not done it is a foregone conclusion that we shall drift back to old and discredited conditions.

Ward heelers, manipulators, professional office-seekers, expropriation sharks, friends of money lenders and others, have won out at elections in the past, because of apathy on the part of electors, and unconcern of those really fitted to seek office. These are facts and must be faced.

Until the appointment of the Administrative Commission Montreal's reputation for unsatisfactory government had spread far and wide—to its detriment commercially and otherwise. Fortunately, the future is still before the electors. Surely they will see to it that selfish interests do not grasp the reins again.

STIRRING UP THE NEST.

BY the stirring up of the nest we are reminded that we are strangers and pilgrims here, and also of other valuable things we were like to have forgotten. Such is the parable of the eagle's nest: "As an eagle stirreth up her nest, and fluttereth over her young, and spreadeth abroad her wings, and beareth them on her wings." The time has come for the eaglets to fly, but they will not. The nest is so soft that the mother's shrill call is sounded in vain. Then she stirreth up the nest, and finally it is loosed from the ledge so the young birds must either fly or fall. Then it is that the mother bird darts beneath their untried wings and bears them on her strong pinions till they have strength enough to fly again.

There is a manly and heroic way to look at suffering. "We glory in tribulation," says Paul, because, rightly understood, it works to certain ends that are quite worth while travelling any road to achieve. On the road by which Paul travelled he is confronted by thousands of brutal antagonisms. Every turn is marked by pain and sacrifice. As today, so then, the evil of life was stirred up to the surface until it seemed to cover everything with its sinister coloring. What an extraordinary pilgrimage was his! Everywhere a stirring up of the nest! Damascus—"They watched him day and night to kill him." Lystra—"The people having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead." Antioch—"They raised persecution against Paul and Barnabus and expelled them out of their coast." And so from Philippi, where he was cast into a dungeon, to Ephesus, where he fought with beasts, goes on the most extraordinary experience in the whole range of human story. Along a road marked with red dashes of pain and sacrifice all the way to Rome, he drags about a body heavily weighted with physical infirmity. Once he refers to it as an earthen vessel, fragile, easily chipped, easily shivered and broken. Again he borrows an image from his own trade, and refers to his body as a light tent, so very tenuous in its structure that even the slightest movement of the wind can carry it away. For a generation and a half he continued on the same hard road, possessed by the spirit of dauntless courage—"Knowing nothing of the things which shall befall me, save that the Holy Ghost witnessed in every city that bonds and imprisonments await me."

Is it possible to capture his secret? On a pilgrimage as high and difficult can we march with a similar mood and spirit? In describing how he was able to accomplish it he says: "I was apprehended by Jesus." The word he uses is vivid and picturesque. He was gripped with the seizure of complete possession, as the hand of a robber would fall upon a traveller on a lonely road. But the robber gave much more than he took away. He was made free and again enslaved. In his picturesque style he described it: "The love of Christ put me into bonds." In this spirit he walks the troubled road, knocking at every door, stirring up every nest, as free and yet as bound, sharing the unsearchable riches of the Master and yet in debt to everybody.

Trouble called forth the most varied and copious energies and his transforming experience enabled him to walk down a conqueror on the crowded road. Faced by the mystery of suffering, Heine said "Life is an age-long riddle only fools expect to solve." But Paul found that the chiselling of Pain perfected character. Ore is cast into the refiner's pot that the silver may gleam. The grapes are crushed that the wine of life may flow. Faith can illumine every problem. There are always landmarks that remain when the storm wind blows. And faith in the midst of a storm is not similar to credulity in the midst of a fog. The man who truly feels the dark evil of the world will the more earnestly and seriously seek and avail himself of the one remedy for it.

There is an old poem of Theocritus in which a wandering traveller on a desolate coast comes upon a grave in the sand with a slab above it on which is written:

"A shipwrecked sailor buried on this coast
Bids you set sail.
Many a gallant ship the day that we were lost
Weathered the gale."

One tells of a fabled island whose shores are washed by silver and turquoise seas, whose air is filled with the fragrance of flowers, and with the song of birds. But the island is not inhabited. It has no harbor. High and dangerous cliffs girt it round and made impossible the landing of a vessel. One day a great tidal wave rolls in from the sea and a mighty earthquake shakes the island. A great gash is cut in the island's side, into which the waves rush and form a bay. The storm has given the island a harbor. The name of the island is "Heart," and the name of the storm is "Sorrow." "Before I was afflicted, I went astray, but now have I kept thy word."

THE WORLD'S PRESS

A Case in Point.

Albany Journal: Those who chatter about world disarmament conveniently disregard the fact that thus far it has been impossible even to disarm Upper Silesia.

What Is Comfort?

Detroit Free Press: John Wanamaker's remarks that people should keep only enough to live comfortably, raises a question as vexatious as Pilate's. What is comfort?

"That's Where the Money Goes."

London Morning Post: Let it be remembered, as one example of criminal waste alone, that there is being spent in doles and grants-in-aid alone a sum equal to the whole annual expenditure before the war.

Purpose in Love.

London Times' Literary Supplement: Water runs down hill, but love runs up hill, and the hill is there and always will be there for love to climb. The effective love of man to man, of man for the world, must be perpetually maintained by him against an opposing medium and be created out of conflicting elements.

Time to End the Vendetta.

London Observer: The world's affairs must be determined by the main weight of world-opinion. For a thousand years the Corsican vendetta between the Teuton and the Gaul has led both in turn to disaster. The British point of view is that this greatest blood-feud of all history must not be forever the origin of repeated and extending catastrophes to the whole world, nor the perpetuated curse of all mankind.

Peasant Russia.

The London Nation: It is the fate of Russia to become a peasant society. The will of the Bolsheviks, who have struggled against nature and economics with a resolution and a resource which makes the record of these three years a monument to human energy—this iron will has at last surrendered to necessity. No minority however resolute can by mere political dictation force peasant individualism into Socialist forms of production.

Smoker, Spare That Tree.

Boston Globe: A match thrown carelessly, a cigarette flipped into dry leaves, a camp fire left burning—any of these may furnish the spark that sets the flames sweeping over the forest floor. The young growth is ruined, the older trees are left standing scarred with shriveled leaves, the soil is ash-covered and impoverished, and nature's hundred years of work is destroyed. A moment of thoughtlessness means hundreds of acres of black devastation.

Wanted—A Business Man.

London Daily Mail: There is a limit to the taxpayer's patience. It is monstrous that this absurd institution should go on muddling the simplest "spot-cash" business in the country and covering up its incompetence by imposing heavier taxation year by year. Not until there is a drastic reorganization of the headquarters administration of the Post Office will the public get efficient communications at reasonable rates. Let the public insist on getting what it needs. The first step is a business head for the Post Office.

The Divine Sarah

New York Sun: To survive one's epoch is only a disadvantage to a person whose attainments are limited by time and surroundings. Sarah Bernhardt has become, throughout the world, a figure less definitely French and feminine and histrionic than symbolic and international and suggestive of life as represented in art. She is no less a delightful human being because she is also the "Divine Sarah"; her quality is protean in her own person. Years come and years go, new fashions rise, thrones tumble down, tomorrow becomes today, but Sarah Bernhardt returns again like the vernal equinox; it is impossible to imagine the world of art without her; she is an integral part of the whole scheme of things, and her bodily manifestation in France is only a token of the love the gods bear to the immortal sense of art which is indigeneous in that pleasant land.

Steps Towards Rehabilitation.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: The abrogation by the Labor Board of the rules and working conditions established by the Government when in control of the railroads will enable economies in labor outlay amounting, according to their own statement, to some $300,000,000. The amazing injustices and absurdities of these rules, as they worked out in application, were enough in themselves to make railroad management a discouraging occupation. But these are on their way into the past and with their departure will come not only a great saving, but a rapid increase of individual efficiency among the railroad workers. These two decisions have, we think, advanced the transportation of the country very far toward restoration. And now will come the question of the revision of rates, which cannot be left out of the consideration. The shippers' turn will come next.

Conservation in Feminine Fashions.

Boston Transcript: There is, perhaps, cause for congratulation over what the world has escaped because the idea of the fashion engineers were not put into effect in the days of the crinoline and the bustle. Had men governed by technical minds become the arbiters of fashion in the mid-Victorian era, the girl of today might have been debarred from leading that active life which is a standardised and most efficient method of preventing waste of health. America might still be the land in which croquet was familiar and tennis was unknown, because the styles when the grandmothers were young permitted the languid pursuit of the one and prevented participation in the other. And all this time, instead of the conservation of dress goods, there would have been reckless waste. Much valuable material was needed for the construction of frills and furbelows in the age of criminals.

An Unpublished Speech.

New York Times: The Hon. Edmund Burke O'Hara, rising to a question of privilege, said: "Mr. Speaker: The attitude of Irish-Americans has been grievously misrepresented. It is not true that they have seized upon the unfortunate speech of Admiral Sims in order to show that they hold their allegiance to Ireland above that to America. They have no wish to defy public opinion or to seek to intimidate Congress. The charge that they would set themselves up as a dictatorial and terrorizing minority in American politics is false. They are American citizens before they are Irishmen, and they desire that the policy of the Government of the United States as respects Ireland shall be only that which wisdom, dignity and safety may indicate." Our readers will look in vain in the Congressional Record for this speech. It was not really delivered in the House of Representatives. But wouldn't it be a good thing for the Irish cause if it had been?

The Discoverer.

Youth is crying in the streets,
Crying to the crowds he meets:

None has ever loved as he,
Flamed or won so gloriously!

None so laughed at prison bars,
Stormed the sun and spilled the stars!

Not a gray soul of them knows
How a heaven buds and grows!

Youth is crying in the streets
To the quiet folk he meets.

M. E. Crocker in The New Republic.

ABSURDITIES

Why do we laugh when we see a man running after his hat and yet keep a most solemn countenance when we see a man searching for a golf ball? A hat is a useful article and its sudden loss worthy of our utmost efforts towards recovery, while the pursuit of a diminutive ball by staid business men is surely a monstrous absurdity. We have never seen a man leaning over the rails at the Country Club at Dixie or elsewhere, convulsed with merriment, chuckling at such ludicrous seriousness, though strangers will nod to one another in the street with anything from a merry twinkle to a broad grin when some unfortunate man is doing a highly sensible thing in trying to recover his headgear.

The most unexpected and the most trivial thing will tickle us beyond measure. Even in Homer's day we read that "inextinguishable laughter arose among the blessed gods when they saw Hephaestus limping through the halls," while the most successful moving picture comedian of the age first won his way into the heart of the world with a splay-foot walk, a scrubby moustache and a whimsical hat. That he was a clever comedian was probably a necessary factor but the appearance of the feet, the upper lip and the hat was sufficient to ensure an uproarious welcome.

In any modern theatrical performance laughter is provoked by equally trivial causes. The whimsical extravagances of Dickens appeals to the few, but the custard pie comedian is for the multitude. Goldsmith speaks truly of "the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind," but there are many grades of vacancy, for between the vacuity of stupidity and the virgin emptiness of the child mind there is a great gulf fixed. The trained ear can detect the difference in a moment. The loud laugh of the vapid mind ends in a note of boredom and only among children is there the joy of clear ringing, sustained and spontaneous mirth. Indeed the laughter of children is often the most enjoyable part of a movie performance to the discerning. To the child a fat policeman or a man with a flaming, bulbous nose is really funny, to play a trick on a teacher is the very cream of jokes, to see authority turned to ridicule, the prince of jests. For to the youngsters the policeman, the washed face, the teacher, and authority, are phases of an ever present tyranny of custom whose overthrow is the very climax of comic revenge. So their laughter springs from pure delight and their joy is so unmistakable that none who hear it can resist its infectious delight.

* * *

So blessed a thing is natural laughter that to hear it burst forth in full spontaneity, innocent of satire and without raillery or mocking tone is music for the gods. A comedian will almost ashamedly drone out a joke that is hoary with age, to be met with a chilling and depressing silence. Suddenly a youngster sees the sparkle, and the sheen that we in our disdain had scoffed at on account of its antiquity, and a silver laugh ripples over the audience until it catches an echoing answer in a hundred hearts and in scores of throats.

The gift of unfailing laughter is the gift of eternal youth. Both are tarnished by the superior wisdom of advancing years, which is sheer foolishness. —W.

LEGAL QUERIES

CAN DEMAND BONUS.

Q.—A limited company decided to place a portion of its profits each year to a fund, from which a bonus is awarded certain employes yearly; employe is notified he has been awarded a certain sum and cheque is enclosed for one-fifth of amount, balance to be paid in four annual payments with interest at 6 per cent; no mention made or anything inferred that to receive balance employe must continue in firm's service; after several years' service an employe gives necessary legal notice to leave his employment, and asks for balance of his bonus; firm refused to pay this claiming that employe must remain in their service to receive balance; seeing that no employe was notified of this condition, can person in question legally claim balance due either in a lump sum or in yearly amounts as would have been paid had he remained with firm?—Box 222, Que.

A.—If there was no understanding that the person was to remain in the company's employ, then he has a right to demand the bonus.

COLLECTOR ROBBED.

Q.—If a man, employed as collector by firm or company without written agreement, is assailed and robbed of money collected, is he responsible and obliged to remit to firm amount taken from him?—Inquirer, Que.

A.—In this case the man employed as collector was the agent of the company, the amount he had collected belonged to the company, not to him, and consequently, when he was robbed, he was simply robbed in his capacity as the company's agent, thus in strict law, it was the company itself that was robbed by force majeure, the agent is therefore not responsible.

EXORBITANT CHARGE.

Q.—Recently I bought a property with mortgage on it, which I paid off by cheque, when due; I got no receipt or documents of any kind in return for my cheque; a few days ago I received account from notary for $18; am I liable to pay what appears to me a very exorbitant amount for discharging an indebtedness incurred by someone else?—C. J., W. D., Montreal.

A.—It would be necessary to know exactly what the account is for, before giving an opinion. Why not call and see the notary and go into the matter with him.

SALE AND LEASE.

Q.—I keep a store and lease is made out for three years; property is sold but landlord states in notarial agreement sale that my lease is exempt for three years. Is this sufficient or should I have lease registered in order to be sure to make it good for three years?—H. M., Montreal.

A.—If there is a clause in the lease by which the new purchaser agrees to allow you to continue the possession of the property for this time, then that lease is valid. But should this purchaser resell the property your lease would require to be registered, in order to protect you against the new purchaser unless, of course, there might be some excepting clause again in the new lease.

FROM THE EDITOR'S MAIL

CLEAN-UP WEEK NEEDED.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star.

Sir,—May I add one more to the tales of woe that have been appearing in your columns regarding the much-abused "Toonerville Trolley". Being one of those who perennially pursue cars or trains from St. Lambert to Montreal and back, (I am so constantly running after these means of transit that I have lost pounds off my weight and years off my life and have almost forgotten how to walk properly) I should be glad if some one with an astute mind could fathom the reasoning whereby at night we have a forty-minute service, with two cars following each other closely, instead of a twenty-minute service with a single car? That is beyond the comprehension of a mere woman, and one who has only been resident on the South Shore for a year and a half.

Also, why is the station at the Montreal end of the M. and S.C.R. so dirty that any self-respecting pig on looking in would turn up its nose a little higher and trot hastily away? Are the residents of the South Shore considered "less than dust?" There may be good excuses for a forty-minute two-car service, but there is no excuse for dirt. The average patron of the aforesaid line would fresse, roast or drown outside the station rather than go in, were it not that the street itself is in just as bad a condition. We all know that charing is a lost art and that the charwoman is as extinct as the dodo, but why not try a street-sweeper or a vacuum cleaner once a year at least?

With apologies for trespassing on your time to so great length.

"TOMBOY TAYLOR."

MR. BANG KEEPS HIS TEMPER.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star.

Sir,—My best regards to the Powerful Katrinka who seeks to haul me over the coals because the Toonerville Trolley has "worn my goat." Katrinka will understand what that means, I'm sure.

Outside of her personal pleasantries, Katrinka brings up nothing that we didn't know before. We all know, for example, that there is but one track across the Victoria Bridge, and we all know that the canal bridge is sometimes open when the cars come through Mill street. Victoria Bridge we have with us always. The annoyance of the Mill street bridge comes along only through the season of navigation. There is never any delay on that account from about the end of November until along about the middle of April. That's that.

We all know, moreover, that a cable will break occasionally and that the cars sometimes run off the track and that sometimes the power goes off, and most of us who use the Toonerville Trolley with any degree of regularity know that these things happen quite frequently. If the water in our homes went off; if the electric light went off and if the telephone system broke down with anything like the frequency that the Toonerville does—why, I imagine there'd be the deuce and all to pay.

The Powerful Katrinka is more fortunate than many of her sisters. She does not have to use the cars every day of the week. If she had the joy of waiting in the stuffy room at the McGill street terminus while one of the cabins is being repaired, or while one of the cars is being set back on the track again, and if she had to fight her way into a car and then have to stand most—or all—of the way to St. Lambert—as dozens of business women who come into the city have to do every day of the week, why, I fancy she would feel a little stronger about it.

And more than that, I'm afraid Katrinka has a little "drag" somewhere. I can't imagine the Toonerville Trolley waiting a hundred yards past the right stopping place for anyone who hadn't. So perhaps Powerful Katrinka is a little bit biased by favors shown her which aren't shown to dozens of stenographers and business girls who can't quite make the grade some slippery morning.

Katrinka, I am sorry to say, attributes to me some things which I did not say or do. I never, for example, said that the conductors and motormen weren't very decent sort of men. Some of them I have known well enough to call by their first names for a great many years. But unfortunately for them, they do not run the line. They cannot, as Powerful Katrinka truthfully remarks, be blamed if they find it hard to suffer fools gladly or accept blame for what is obviously not their business.

That's the rub. It isn't their business if the cables break and the cars run off the track or if the cars are late or overcrowded. They do their best to run their end of the show.

They aren't responsible. The question arises, who is?

Tell us, please, Katrinka, for I'm quite sure you can if you will.

THE TERRIBLE-TEMPERED MISTER BANG.

CHURCH UNION.

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star.

Sir,—I have been a subscriber to the Daily Star for thirty years and have seldom felt it necessary to question any of its statements; but in a recent editorial dealing with the action of the General Assembly on "Church Union," there is a sentence which, I think, is misleading. It is this: "A new era now opens for the Protestant Churches of Canada; that while leaving room for intellectual and other differences, and allowing the several communions with their different traditions to work along their own lines and according to their own individual genius, it will at the same time do away with competing sects, and that the vexing problems of overlapping will be solved through a closer co-operation on the part of the different Churches. Your editorial is correct and timely when it says that "A new era now opens for the Protestant Churches of Canada," even if its next sentence is somewhat misleading. J. KEIR FRASER.

IN THE WORLD OF BOOKS

READING AS RECREATION

WITH the coming of full Summer there comes also the time of recreation, —the period which, in our present queer social system, is supposed to provide the average individual with ample opportunity to rewind a run-down system, restore flagging energies, renew exhausted mental capacity, and generally replace every element of activity, bodily and mental, that has gone out of him or her during the previous twelve months. If daily life were lived on a more stable basis, it is to be presumed that people would stand in need of no further rest than that laid down in the tablets Moses brought with him from Sinai. But things being as they are, two or three weeks of holidays in the summer time may be taken as an essential institution of the world's work.

There are as many ways of spending your holidays as there are of re-arranging the alphabet. Some are for sport; some for walking; some for driving; some for travel; some for writing; some for loafing; some for reading. It is to these last, and to the very large class who generally elect to include some measure of reading in their holidays, that I venture to address myself here.

* * *

The choice of reading for a summer vacation is a thing that may not be dictated. Most people are content either to let their bookseller select their books or else to pick at random from a counter, taking a chance on this book or that because its title tickles their fancy. It may be permitted to point out, however, that they would be far better advised to look over some literary supplement and ascertain what books are attracting the largest measure of critical attention. In this way they would at least avoid the risk of buying something not worth wasting time over.

* * *

Moreover, it is always a matter for consideration whether the books to be read on a holiday shall be books to be thrown aside after the holiday is over, or books that will be kept in the bookcase and treasured in days to come.

Here again the matter of choice is one that cannot be dictated. But it is always a joyful thing to realise that you have read, during your days of idleness, something that you feel you want to read again.

* * *

Light fiction, of course, constitutes the major portion of summer reading. This is inevitable. But even in light fiction there is such a thing as discrimination. The output of novels every year is enormous. One is led to wonder how any publisher can stand the pace. Yet, out of every year's toil, there are few stories that will endure the strain of a season's test. How can the public choose those that will find a place in the elect?

It may be a choice of author, of title, of location, of subject. The same carelessness, the same haphazard method, obtains. If the summer holiday-maker would only bestow upon his reading one-tenth the attention he devotes to his shirts, what a difference it would make to his holiday!

* * *

Ladies and gentlemen of the holiday-time! Just a word in your ear. If you want to read something, try and make sure that you get something worth reading. If you want to retain what you have read, endeavor to read that which is worth retaining.

Whatever you do, DON'T read the rubbish that looks cheap.

S. MORGAN-POWELL.

Dodo Redivivus At Fifty-Four; Mr. Benson's Experiment

"Dodo Wonders——" by E. F. Benson; McClelland and Stewart, Toronto.

Most people will remember "Dodo." When that diverting novel first appeared, it created a sensation which it is impossible for those who read it today—if anybody does—to comprehend. It was popularly supposed to be a rather intimate portrait, drawn with considerable freedom but at the same time no small regard for accuracy, of a prominent figure in the London society of the period. It remained for a good many years a landmark in flippant fiction. Now Mr. Benson, who has been far afield since he first created Dodo, has seen fit to revive that irresponsible, frivolous personality at the mature age of fifty-four, just at the outbreak of the war. Whether it was a wise thing to do may be a matter for individual judgment. It is certain, however, that whether he has been wise or no, Mr. Benson has certainly been uncannily clever. Dodo at fifty-four is in many respects the Dodo of three decades back, her spirit unbroken, her huge appetite for nonsense unrestricted, her capacity for extracting the utmost out of life unaffected by the passage of the years.

* * *

It is rather good fun to meet Dodo again, to listen to her cleverly nonsensical chatter, to laugh with her at life's trivial things. Her relations with her husband are on a basis of firm friendship, and she has a fine affection for her little son David, who fully reciprocates it. For the rest, she is still Lady Chesterford, the irresistible, incorrigible, and insouciant. Really, the book is good reading, for it comes like a breath of romance from the years gone by, and however much you may have scorned both book and heroine then, you find that the lady has taken on a certain grace of conscience with the years that makes her much more human and less unresponsive to emotional notes.

* * *

Mr. Benson writes as freely and as fluently now as he did then. Indeed, one needs the sobering atmosphere of wartime England to realise completely that Dodo has grown up in some respects. One could have wished that the book did not end where it does, but perhaps Mr. Benson has not finished with Dodo yet. She had many friends as well as enemies, it will be recalled.

Wells Does Not Exactly Admire Belloc's Attack

Says Mr. H. G. Wells, in the course of his twelve-thousand-word apology for the faults in his "Outline of History" in the Yale Review for July:—

"Mr. Belloc's manner towards me is rather amusing. I am a journalist and writer of books, some novels, some books on public questions. I am a university graduate of respectability rather than distinction in biological science. Mr. Belloc is a journalist and writer of books, some novels, some books on public questions, and a university graduate of respectability rather than distinction—I believe, in modern history. He is a younger man than myself, and by that measure less experienced in life and affairs. But for some unfathomable reason he writes as if he were a monstrously wise old historian and I were a bright little boy who had gone to the wrong authorities instead of coming to him before I wrote my little essay. He is lucky not to have adopted this attitude towards me thirty years ago, because then I should have put him across my knees and established a truer relationship in the simple way boys have."

Mr. Wells may have some foundations for his comment, but when a popular author finds it necessary to write a twelve-thousand-word explanation of two volumes, one may be pardoned for wondering if Mr. Belloc's criticism has not gone nearer the mark than Mr. Wells really enjoyed.

A Reader's Protest

The Editor, Montreal Daily Star.

Sir, In The Star of June 11, under the heading "Books Worth Reading," there is a review of a book called "The Green Bough." The reviewer is S. Morgan-Powell, who is well-known to readers of The Star for the clean and vigorous way in which he expresses his opinions. In the present instance, however, many of his readers must have been asking whether he was trying to make game of them.

The heroine of the book is Mary Throgmorton, and about her, in Mr. Morgan-Powell's words, "there clings a simplicity, a nobility, a heroism that cannot find expression in mere words." The outstanding facts in her career, as far as we can gather from the review, are that in her mature years she gave birth to an illegitimate son, and, when he was grown up and wanted to go to the war, she allowed him to go. The only thing that would seem to distinguish her from most other mothers was that her offspring was illegitimate, and I do not think that consideration by itself is sufficient ground for the enthusiasm of the reviewer.

From the particulars given, my conclusion would be that instead of being a "Book Worth Reading," the book is trash, and Mary Throgmorton is a silly goose. Yours truly,

A. A.

[It is obvious, from A. A.'s closing paragraph, that he has not read "The Green Bough," but in drawing conclusions from the review which he criticises. Perhaps if he read the book he might change his opinion—of the book. —Lit. Ed., Star.]

"Lightfoot the Deer," A Thornton Burgess "Green Forest" Tale

"Lightfoot the Deer," by Thornton W. Burgess; McClelland and Stuart, Toronto.

Books for children are growing more and more attractive. Writers with a genius for comprehending the wondering mind of childhood are devoting themselves exclusively to meeting the requirements of the young. Among them none is more popular on this continent than Thornton W. Burgess, whose "Bed-Time" stories have smoothed many a harassed mother's path.

Mr. Burgess writes con amore for children. He has the happy faculty of telling a story simply and yet without any suggestion of writing down to childish minds. Indeed, his stories are often found very interesting by grown-up folk who read them.

Especially happy is he when writing about the animal world. Every living thing in forest or field is his friend, and he talks about animals with that sympathetic touch that connotes a passionate love for them.

In the first of his "Green Forest" series, entitled "Lightfoot the Deer," he has given children a story of the adventures of a young deer in the forest which will not only delight them but which will also prove instructive. He conveys information of the habits of animals in so ingenuous a manner that nobody suspects he is instructing them. This is a book which anybody can read with pleasure. It deals in a charming manner with one of the most beautiful of all occupants of the forest, and it ought to form part of every child's library. The more books of this kind we have, the better. They are admirable from every point of view.

GEMS OF NEW VERSE

"THE GHOST'S COMPLAINT."

Down the road I spied the weed,
And the head was gone to seed.
I ran to blow it into air.
Suddenly, from out the heart
Sighed a ghost complaining there—
"I am bound in a world that is old and round
And cannot die,
Though it wave perpetually,
Hoaryheaded world and round
That debars me from the sky.
In a solid ball inbound
Captive evermore I cry."
Then I pulled the stem and blew.
Out upon the wind he flew.

From "Horizons," by Violet Ethel White.

Real Thriller is Latest Story from Sax Rohmer's Pen

"Bat-Wing," by Sax Rohmer; McClelland and Stewart, Toronto.

For those who enjoy their fiction soaked in sensations, let me commend Sax Rohmer's latest story, entitled "Bat-Wing." It is positively creepy. It creates an atmosphere of the uncanny about the reader, and it moves from stage to stage of weirdness and impending horror to a final denouement which is as cleverly contrived as it is wholly unexpected.

The Voodoo worship of the West Indian negro is the basis for the story, which is one of considerable ingenuity as to plot. The author succeeds at the very outset in suggesting grim mystery, and he manages to sustain this suggestion with unusual force. Atmospherically, indeed, his work is excellent. Judged on the ground of plausibility, it may not stand the test in the opinion of those who always judge a novel by their own estimate of its approximation to possibility in real life, but those who take the broader view that the living world holds infinitely more mysterious things than the world of imagination will most likely succeed in extracting considerable enjoyment out of the perusal of this tale.

It is essentially a holiday story, and it is of the type that causes the nervous reader to glance around apprehensively now and then, and lock the door before going to bed. That is nothing in its disfavor, however. A writer who sets out to be sensational is only half successful if he cannot scare somebody into feeling the atmosphere he endeavors to create.

MARGARET CURRIE'S CHATS

MARKETING MANUSCRIPT

Miss Anita Gabrielle Lavack, a clever Montreal writer, who has been most successful in selling her short stories and photo-plays to American editors and producers, has been good enough to write something about her working and selling methods for this page. Miss Lavack knows whereof she speaks and we may consider ourselves fortunate to have the benefit of her experience.

MARGARET CURRIE.

The first step in selling a short story reads like the famous cooking recipe: "First catch your hare!" Before selling a short story, a salable piece of work must be produced. A salable short story is one:

1st—That has plot,—form.
2nd—One that is interesting.
3rd—It must be timely.
4th—It must be well-motivated, plausible.
5th—It should have the flavor of personality.
6th—It must have a good beginning.
7th — It must have a satisfactory ending.
8th—It must have a good title.

Plot—Item No. 1. This is the thing that differentiates the story that editors welcome from such less salable forms as the sketch, the narrative, the essay. The narration of a series of more or less detached events, such as the incidents of journey, of a day's adventures, or of a life, is not a short story. Plot, the mainspring of the short story, has been well defined as "a series of events connected by the law of cause and effect; the causated development which shows step by step the logical, inevitable climax of the working out of a given set of conditions." The short story, which Washington Irving, with many other writers, claimed is a more difficult form of composition than the novel, has crystallized into a literary form quite as sharply defined as is that of the sonnet.

Every technically correct short story consists of five parts:

The Introduction, which, if the story is to sell, must awaken interest at once;

The Index, in which the complicating incident, i.e. obstacle, must rise swiftly to the Apex;

The Apex, which is the turning point, the exciting moment, the main crisis;

The Reflex; in which the probable outcome is hinted at, side by side with an alternative outcome to prevent the reader's feeling too much confidence and thereby losing interest;

Lastly, the Climax, the adjustment of situation, the logical outcome of all that has proceeded, the definite end of all suspense.

Interest—Item No. 2: The second essential of the short story which sells—the most important quality of all, the one which will make the editor overlook all other shortcomings, is—Interest. Someone has said: "Before mailing your story, stop and consider: Will the readers of the magazine I'm addressing be so interested that for fear of missing my next story they will renew their subscriptions at once? Unless you can answer yes without perjuring yourself, rewrite the story." And someone else adds: "Be sure your story is so interesting that a tired mss. reader with scratchy eyelids and a stiff neck will gladly stay past the lunch hour to finish reading it."

We have to ask ourselves then how is this vital quality to be obtained. Not, as so many believe, by straining after the wildly original in plot. There are only a certain limited number of plots anyway, and these have been used over and over since the beginning of time. The Cinderella plot, the Ugly Duckling story, the ancient complication of the man and woman who, joined in holy matrimony for some reason other than love, end in each other's arms, are all, if retold with any freshness and charm, certain winners.

There are two ways in which to make a story interesting. One is through the careful use of suspense—that quality which makes the mystery story perpetually fascinating. The other is by writing the story around interesting characters. Indeed, with interesting characters, anything but the merest hint of a plot may be omitted, and the story still be salable. The American Magazine is always ready to examine stories of this type, and to buy them if the effect of the story is in accordance with their optimistic policy. It is said that "the chief fault with the stories of unskilled beginners is their hopeless lack of visualization in characterization. All their characters look alike and talk alike. They are not individualized and therefore do not ring true. They have the story-type stamp of mediocrity about them and are palpably artificial."

Timeliness—The third factor in the access of a short story is its timeliness. There are styles in stories as well as in frocks. Dialect stories were once in demand; dialect is now the editor's bete noir. Romantic fiction had its day; it too is dead. Day before yesterday the sex story crowded all others from the pages of even quite conservative magazines—as one writer expressed it at the time: "It has struck six o'clock in America." That phase too is in eclipse. Yesterday was the day of the occult story, the story with a spiritualistic tone; today they are not given a reading in editorial sanctums. The business story is at present the one, other things being equal, which is surest of acceptance. There are, however, three types of story whose appeal is perennial, ever-fresh, ever desired of editors. These are the love story, the mystery story, the humorous story.

There is another side of the timeliness question; what are called "seasonal" stories—stories of Christmas, of St. Valentine's Day, of Easter, of Thanksgiving, — stand a very good chance of acceptance if they are sent in at the proper time—magazines are made up so far ahead of their appearance on the news-stands, that the shrewd writer submits such stories at least six months before the holiday.

In this connection I'd like to emphasize that no writer can succeed in selling more than an occasional story, and that by chance, without constant study of the magazines. One must know what is being bought in order to sell. At one time I would have thought this quite unnecessary advice, but two of my aspiring writer-friends have said to me: "I never read magazines myself. I don't care for them." Yet they were both anxious to make a business of writing for the magazines.

Plausibility: The next essential toward the success of the short story is its plausibility. Frederic Bird said, in an essay on "Fact in Fiction":

"When anybody's work impresses you as beyond the bonds of life, of nature, of possibility, or reasonable probability—it matters not what the author's talent, we have little use for it. Imaginary persons must think and feel and talk and act as such persons would in real life."

Godsmith's comment regarding the sonorous Dr. Johnson is appropriate here:

"If little fishes are made to talk, they should talk like little fishes, not like whales."

Bound up with this quality is the question of motive. Step by step as we write a story, we should ask ourselves: "Is this action plausible? Is it logically motivated? Is the motive not only logical but sufficiently strong to cause the results which follow?" There is nothing so irritating to the thoughtful reader as to find in a story that events seem to happen merely because the author made them happen so; instead of following inevitably because of conditions precedent—conditions either of character, of situation, or of previous action.

Personality: The fifth concomitant of the salable short story is the indefinable flavor of personality. This is the quality which Ainslee's former editor, Robert Rudd Whiting, since deceased, said he most desired for Ainslee stories. It is the same quality which most appeals to the editor of Collier's. "Charm" he calls it—that charm of Barrie's "Maggie" in "What Every Woman Knows." "If you have it," you remember, "you need not have much else. If you have not got it, nothing else will do."

The good beginning: Having these five essentials of the successful story, the next thing is to construct a good beginning. Long-winded introductions stamp a story as hopelessly out of date. Irvin Cobb, in the Saturday Evening Post, manages to get away with a couple of columns of gentle meandering—but there is only one Irvin Cobb. Kipling's opening in "Without Benefit of Clergy"—"But suppose it is a girl"—is the approved model of the present day. "Put a punch in the opening line!" "Drop the reader square in the middle of the action"—this is the advice one meets constantly in books on technique and writers' magazines. At any rate, if the opening paragraph does not catch the eye, excite interest, promise something worth while to come, there is little likelihood of the editor's reading further. "One does not need to drink an entire bottle of milk to know that it is sour!" the editor of the Outlook pathetically defends himself when accused of not reading every word of each mss. submitted for his consideration.

The good ending: If the opening of the story promises well the editor next turns to the last page and studies the conclusion—hence the necessity of having an ending arresting enough to prevent the mss's immediately finding its way into that "stamped, addressed, return envelope" which we do so hate to see come back to us. If the writer can so interest the editor in the beginning and ending of his story that he is led to give it further consideration—if he can once induce the editor to lean back and read the story from the first page to the last, the chances are very favorable toward acceptance.

The ending must be logical, satisfying; it need not necessarily be a "happy ending." Out of twenty stories in O'Brien's "The Best Short Stories of 1920," six have happy endings, seven have tragic endings, and seven satisfactory—that is logical—endings. The point to note is that editors have not, as most people believe, an unbreakable rule in favor of the happy ending—if the story itself is worth while.

The last—certainly not the least—factor in the successful marketing of a short story is its title. The importance of a good title can scarcely be over-estimated. It must attract the reader, promise him something worth while in the persual of the story—but before it can attract the reader it must first have made its appeal to the editor. The former editor of Lippincott's says:

"There is something positively hypnotic in a fetching title. I have seen an editor, jaded by the reading of many mss., freshen like a spent hound at the sight of water, merely by coming across an interesting title .....he knows that the title of a single story may influence thousands of readers, pro and con."

Someone else has said:

"A title that piques curiosity or suggests excitement or emotion has all the advantage of a pretty girl over a plain one; it is given an instantaneous chance to prove itself worth while."

A good title—one that is brief, specific, fresh, sonorous, one that suggest, yet baffles, may, therefore, be a very great asset toward the success of the short story.

Having written a story possessing in a greater or less degree all these essentials of saleability, there is still something left for the writer to do before the mss. is sent out to meet its fate. That is to see that its appearance is made so attractive by clean and careful typing, wide margins, an absence of inky erasures and corrections that the tired mss. reader will, with a sigh of relief, choose it for perusal from the hundreds of mss. received each day by most magazines. I was surprised to learn from one editor how rare—and how welcome — was the immaculate mss. "The story's the thing; it doesn't matter about the look of the mss. if you have a story to sell," one writer objected. Quite true, the story is the thing; but why handicap the story by not giving it a fair chance?

One thing I learned through experience first, then through correspondence with editors—mss. typewritten with single-spacing, no matter how neat otherwise, is returned without being read by most magazines.

Having completed the story, and dressed it as attractively as possible, there are two courses open to the author. He may either send it to a literary agent, or he may try to market it himself. Save in the exceptional case, the advantages of a literary agent—the fact that he can keep a closer eye on the market, bargain for a better price, and save the writer the repeated contemplation of rejection slips—is counterbalanced by the disadvantages—that your story will be submitted as one of a batch of mss., that there is a preliminary reading fee to be paid in most cases, and a sizable commission if the story is sold, and that there are many unreliable, even dishonest, agents.

But if we prefer to sell our short stories ourselves, we must make a systematic and thorough study of the field. We must examine each story we read to see just what quality made the editor buy it. We must watch carefully the story trend, and cultivate a prophetic instinct as to what tomorrow's vogue in friction is to be. We must be able to distinguish between a story fitted to the Century and one suited to the Saturday Evening Post. It sounds absurd to say that it is a waste of postage to try to sell the editor of the Youth's Companion the story which the super-sophisticated Messrs. Menchen and Nathan of the Smart set will greet with delight, but the editors assure us that they are constantly meeting with just such thoughtlessness—or lack of ability to discriminate. One editor says that 50 per cent. of the mss. submitted to editors is entirely outside the scope of the magazine to which it is addressed.

There are two books which are of inestimable value to a writer in placing mss.—they are "1001 Places to Sell Mss.", published by the Editor Company, Ridgewood, N.J., and "Where and How to Sell Mss.", published by the Home Correspondence School, Springfield, Mass.

There remains for consideration the rejection slip. Everyone gets them; as one writer says: "They are merely the scenery on the road to success." Ignore them, and send the story out once more. Stories are sold sometimes to better markets than the one originally planned for—on the fifteenth, the twenty-third—I even read of one story sold on its eighty-first trip out. Disappointed we may be—but there is no reason to feel discouragement at the sight of the printed rejection slip. An editor cannot possibly write personally to the hundreds of contributors who submit mss. to him; and even well-known established writers are continually receiving them. To the truly-persevering, they are merely incentives to try again. An ingenious mind can even find a use for them, as did Mr. Remington Underwood, the not-too-successful writer.

"You must be doing well," said his friend Jones, meeting him in front of his house. "You seem to be always busy, and you look prosperous."

"So I am, Jones," answered Mr. Underwood. "Come into my basement with me, and I'll show you the secret of my prosperity."

They descended in to the basement and found there a ragman weighing three big bags of rejection slips.

"My stories all come back," confessed Underwood triumphantly, "and I get 8 cents a pound for the rejection slips, that come with them."

This, of course, is not much of a joke, but its author sent it to "Life." "Life" sent it back with about twenty printed rejection slips inclosed by a rubber band. On the top slip was written:

FASHIONS FOR TODAY

The flaring chapeau shown in today's sketch is trimmed with tin flowers! Yes, actually tin, of very light weight and pliable texture, shaped into gorgeous two-tone tulips, and attached to the hat by fine wires.

That the use of tin flowers will not be a widespread vogue during the present season seems rather certain, as the supply is rather limited, but they are effective, and think how desirable for wear on a little hat that is to be used on a long motoring trip! Neither wind nor weather affects them, and when dusty or soiled they need only be wiped off with a damp cloth.

The frock sketched, a slip over the head model, may be developed in wash silk, gingham, linen or in one of the popular heavy silk crepes. The dress is cut on straight lines, and the piping in contrasting color helps to simulate a panel front which does not actually exist. The frock blouses a little at either side where the sash belt holds it in to the figure. This side blouse, by the way, is a feature of many of the new suit coats now being brought out for early fall.

According to present indications, next season's suit coats will vary in length from the Eton jacket to models that reach within a few inches of the skirt hem. An attempt is being made to launch a modified directoire silhouette, but the majority of both suits and frocks will follow straight from-the-shoulder lines.

Skirts are to be of comfortable width, but without very much flare, if any, and the length, as usual, is to be left to the individual woman. Paris now commends the long skirt, but women on this side have become so fond of the rather short skirts that they are likely to continue to defy would-be dress reformers and place their seal of approval upon skirts that are quite abbreviated as to length.

Pianos for Your Country Home

Montreal citizens have begun their annual exodus to their country homes. We would call their careful attention to the published list of Willis Pianos both new and second hand. A HUSBAND TO MARCIA

By CAROLYN BEECHER

CHAPTER VII.

Naturally after that first real quarrel John and Marcia had the delight of making up. Strangely, the first quarrel always appears to end in a closer relationship with most people. John humbly begged for forgiveness, and Marcia granted it after what she thought a proper time. Then she promised not to be unreasonable in her demands, which was as far as John dared push her, so anxious was he to be friends once more. However, John was gathering a certain bitterness to himself. This bitterness was especially against the social arbiters who were the bosom companions of his wife, who belonged to the same clubs that Marcia did, and who often advised her.

"A lot of hens and geese cackling and quacking together over a bridge table and ruining a man's home!" he grumbled — but always to himself. Never to Marcia. No, indeed! He was too much in love for that.

There are few people nowdays who have not, at least once, succumbed to the romance of motoring. Men, and women, too, have mortgaged their homes as well as their appetites for the sake of owning a car—the size of their homes and their appetites the deciding factor as to whether they buy a flivver or a limousine.

So now Marcia had succumbed to the romance, the thrill. Bob French had bought his wife a car. She was learning how to run it.

"Even women whose husbands are nothing but clerks have cars. I should think you would have one," Nell French had said to Marcia, which speech Marcia had immediately retailed to John — With embellishments.

"You see, people know you are clever, that you have a profession and in a way are your own boss, even if you are with a big company, and——"

"You mean I am hired by a large company. That isn't being my own boss by a long shot," John Aldrich interrupted, trying to shut off what intuition and a knowledge of Marcia told him was coming.

"Well a position like yours is different from being a clerk," Marcia insisted. The lure of the motor car had gripped her. John saw, stiffened for the conflict, inwardly quaking.

"But I haven't anything to mortgage to buy a car," he said. "They say that is what the clerks do."

"Nonsense! Don't be silly, John just because you know how! Nell went with me to price a small car. Of course I wouldn't expect you to get me a large car, just as first, because then we would have to have a chauffeur. But I can get a nice little car, coupe body, that on a pinch can carry four—three comfortably. We can make a small payment down, the rest in instalments. The motor car business has fallen off so badly that Bob French says they are willing to make concessions to sell cars now."

"Did French tell you that all other business has fallen off, also? I'll bet he didn't!"

"They will teach me to run it for nothing," Marcia continued, a gleam in her eyes—a storm signal.

"Kind of them, I'm sure. It gives their idle men something to occupy them, keeps them from committing suicide."

"Now, John Aldrich, I think it is just plain wicked for you to talk like that when they were all so nice to me!" Tears were in her voice, would soon flow from her eyes.

"I can't afford a car, Marcia. I thought you knew it. I have explained often enough that we are living to the extent of my income, even stretching it to make it cover our expenses. I wonder what would happen if I should be ill." John Aldrich had often had this thought. Several times during the year he had saved a little, only to use it to meet some fresh demand of Marcia's.

But when an irresistible force meets an immovable body something is sure to happen. And Marcia being the irresistible force, the something happened to the immovable body, represented by John Aldrich.

"You see, it is just what I need," Marcia said to John. Her ingratiating smile embraced the salesman. The immovable body had been gently propelled to the salesrooms of that particular car Marcia Aldrich had set her heart upon owning.

"Well, I don't believe I care to buy a car just at present," John said to the salesman.

"Madame is so pleased it would be a pity to let this particular one get away from her. She——"

Marcia interrupted:

"The color and the upholstering suit me exactly, are so becoming. You must take it, John! Mr. Borden," indicating the suave salesman at her elbow, "has made wonderful terms to me."

There is no use in boring you by repeating more of the conversation. Suffice it is say, as you have long since guessed, Marcia got the car. John paid the first instalment and, while all the way home Marcia raved over its beauty, John figured how he was to pay the bills, monthly bills, soon due, when he had taken all his available cash to pay that first instalment.

HOME ECONOMICS

By Mrs. ELIZABETH KENT

GARDEN FURNITURE.

Even in a tiny garden one may have a cosy place to sit, where a hammock may swing under the green shelter of a tree or a child's swing may hang from a stout cross bar, and a garden bench, a rustic chair or two and a table tempt the housewife to take her bit of hand sewing, her book in the leisure hour, or her neighbor's friendly visit, out of the house entirely. There is more rest in the green grass and the open sky than in a sun porch or verandah, and a garden nook will do more for a woman than any in or about the house.

Garden furniture should be, however, of a sort than can be left out in the dew and rain. For if a woman must have the care of dragging in heavy things at every threat of a shower all summer, and every night, it becomes much more trouble than it is worth.

A clever device for sheltering garden furniture from either sun or rain is to have hugh umbrellas made of pretty striped canvas, such as drivers on delivery wagons used to have, and have them supported on iron rods above the bench, chair or table. They are gay, and a real shelter; they will last three or four seasons, and the frames much longer.

Rustic furniture is pretty and with a cushion or two may be made very comfortable. Willow, and painted iron furniture are the popular garden favorites just now, with weather proof pads and cushions of duck. They come in graceful, comfortable shapes, and in some cases very quaintly devised combinations of chair and table or hooded chairs. Swings and hammocks; swung on iron frames with pads and cushions of waterproof duck, may be had, or hammocks of plain white canvas can be made attractive with bright cushions.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

PUZZLES

By SAM LOYD

Answer to Puzzling Pews. — From the pew No. 60 to Pew No. 82, there were 22 pews, or one entire row, since 60 and 82 were opposite. No. 60 was the tenth pew in the row and the thirty-second pews of the centre rows. Therefore there must have been 28 pews in the left wing—14 pews to each row. Altogether there were 88 pews in the centre rows and 56 pews in the wings—all accomodating 504 persons.

Table Talk.—The Census Man, on his quest for statistics, leaned over Farmer Smith's fence and remarked: "How many children have you?"

"Plenty," answered Smith, "and not only that, but I find that the little feeders eat just as much as the big ones. Since the last twins joined the mess table a barrel of pork runs out three days sooner. I figure that if we had four more food consumers, the pork barrel would empty in four days' less time than it now takes."

It is assumed from the farmer's remarks that father, mother and each of the children consumes a like quantity of pork.

Now, who can tell the Census Man how many children there are in the Smith family?

A Puzzle in the Air.—An interesting question arose the other day at Aviation Field, when three aeroplanes started on a ten-mile race. We were asked to figure out in how many ways the race might terminate, considering all possibilities. Can you tell?

WIGGLE DRAWING.

Here is something new for the boys and girls to try—a wiggle drawing. The idea is to see what kind of a picture you can draw using the above line in some part of it. Just try it. You will be surprised to find what fun it is to see how many things you can draw. The wiggly line was specially drawn for our page by a Star artist. Pictures may be sent to Aunt Jane, and the drawing judged to be the best will be published.

A BIRD CONVENTION.

Out at the zoo, I was attracted by an unusual fluttering and screaming in the aviary and discovered that our feathered friends were holding some sort of powwow or convention in an old tree. My sketch gives an impressionistic picture of the assemblage from which may be had an accurate count of the delegates present. How many can you discover?

THE MEADOW.

Ragnhild Tait, a pupil of the Montreal High School for Girls, who is only eight years of age, wrote this charming little poem, after some poems were read and talked about for a few minutes by her teacher:

Among the meadow flowers,
And through the bushy bowers,
The blackbirds sing away,
And bees buzz all the day.

The meadow I do love,
And the big blue sky above,
The buttercups and daisies too,
They do not hide like violets do.

What bird is rude? The mocking bird.

Aunt Jane's Mail

Dear Boys and Girls:

Molly Morgan asks why it always rains for a Sunday-School picnic. For the same reason Molly, I expect, that it thaws or there is a big snow storm when there is to be a skating masquerade.

I am sorry that Jean Cummings did not give her address, but I am printing yours, Molly, with your letter, and if Jean sees it she will no doubt, write to you.

Don's you like the Puzzle Picture this week? You will be surprised to find how many birds are hidden in the tree. It is full of them.

Wishing you all success in your examinations.

Aunt Jane

My Very Dear Aunt Jane:— This is certainly a small world after all. This remark, as you no doubt know, is not very original, but I'm sure it will be said often. All this chatter is a sequel to what I saw in your page on Saturday last, namely Jean Cumming's letter.

I, like Jean, lost her address and I surely would enjoy getting a letter from her again. If only to get the French stamps. Won't you send me her address please? Speaking of French, isn't it remarkable that even the kiddies speak it? They are such tiny mortals to speak such a difficult language! Perhaps Jean will explain the whys and wherefores of all the questions one wishes to ask about Paris and Parisiana. There are heaps of questions I would like to ask you Aunt Jane, so that I can answer similar questions put to me by a very small boy friend. I will just give you one as a sample:—"Why does it always rain on a Sunday School picnic? Is it because they are not good little girls and boys?"

I hope Aune Jane I will soon have Jean's address and once again be enjoying her really delightful letters.

Peter Pringle

Peter Pringle cannot read,
Peter Pringle cannot write;
But Peter Pringle he can eat,
And that is Peter's chief delight.

For breakfast he has mush and milk,
With apples, maybe, on the sly;
His luncheon it is just the same,
With odds and ends of cake and pie.
Peter Pringle plays no games,
Peter Pringle has no toys,
Peter Pringle cannot talk;
But he can make a lot of noise.
Peter Pringle cannot read,
But Peter doesn't care a fig,
As long as he can eat and eat,

CYCLONIC EFFECT.

"No," was the reply. "That's just Joe Miller's well, a cyclone turned her inside out."

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

HEROIC FRANCE ONCE MORE.

No more we wear a troubled frown
What time, in fashion columns reading,
That blouses still are coming down
And skirts as rapidly receding.
No more we view, with furrowed brow
Clarissa, Mabel, Bess and Gwenny,
And wonder, in a year from now
What raiment they will wear, if any!

It looked to us, for quite a while,
As if an act of legislature
Would be required to keep the style
From getting too blamed close to nature.
"We know," we said, "the modistes claim
That modern modes are chic and clever,
Though rather brief, but just the same,
This thing cannot go on forever!"

But as with low, embarrassed cries,
We voice our awful agitation,
The Paris mannikins arise
To meet and save the situation.
Like France's army, they have turned,
Their snapping eyes give notice, mutely,
That style, as far as they're concerned
Has gone the limit, absolutely!

Penuin and Worth may rage and roar,
But neither noise nor bluff will scare 'em,
If frocks are shortened any more
These models simply will not wear 'em.
The brave, heroic little band
The rule of reason has asserted,
And by their firm and gallant stand
A hideous crisis is averted.

NOT WORTH IT.

What we're wondering is why a youth that could answer all those Edison questions would take a job in a phonograph factory at fifteen dollars a week.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS

CHATTERER TELLS WRONG STORY.

It was nothing new for Chatterer the Red Squirrel, to tell a wrong story. Indeed, Chatterer has told so many wrong stories that no one believes him even when he tells the truth, which, of course, is a dreadful state of affairs. He is a great mischiefmaker, and never so happy as when he has started trouble among his neighbors in the Green Forest. But, like a great many other wrongdoers, he likes to appear honest and truthful, and when any one suggests that he isn't he grows very angry and pretends to feel very much injured. So, this time, when Drummer the Woodpecker accused him of having stolen an egg from Drummer's nest in an old apple tree, Chatterer flew into such a rage at the very idea of Drummer suspecting him that Drummer actually began to think that it might be that he was mistaken.

Drummer the Woodpecker Accused Him of Having Stolen an Egg.

Just as soon as Chatterer saw that Drummer was beginning to think he might be mistaken Chatterer made up a story in which there wasn't one bit of truth, but which he meant should set Drummer to watching some one else. "This will give me a chance to steal the rest of the eggs while someone else is blamed for it," he thought to himself. You see, he really had stolen that first egg. So he told Drummer that he had been running along the old stone wall that morning when he just happened to look up in the old apple tree where Drummer's nest was, and who should be seen just pulling his head out of the doorway but Sammy Jay? Sammy had something white in his mouth, and while Chatterer couldn't be sure about it he thought it was an egg. Now that Drummer said that one had been stolen he was sure that Sammy Jay must be the thief.

Now Drummer knew perfectly well that Sammy Jay steals eggs every chance he gets, and it so happened that he had himself caught a glimpse of Sammy's sky-blue coat in the old orchard that very morning. So he was all the more ready to believe Chatterer in spite of the fact that he knew him to be every bit as bad a thief as Sammy Jay. He looked very sharply at Chatterer, but Chatterer looked so innocent as he sat with his hands folded across his white waistcoat that Drummer begged pardon for accusing him, and then told him of the dreadful things he would do to Sammy Jay if he ever caught him around his nest again.

Now Chatterer had told this wrong story about Sammy Jay because Sammy happened to be the first one he thought of. Now as he scampered back to the Green Forest he chuckled to himself, for he saw that his wrong story might make trouble for Sammy Jay. He hoped it would. He never did love Sammy Jay and now if he could make trouble for Sammy nothing would please him more. Instead of feeling sorry for having told a wrong story, an untruth, he was glad of it.

"I'll get all those eggs of Drummer's and Sammy Jay will get the blame," he chuckled. "Now I must think of some way to get Sammy Jay to visit the old orchard tomorrow morning so that Drummer the Woodpecker will be sure to see him hanging around."

And so from telling one wrong story Chatterer was already planning to tell another. It's always that way.

One little deed you know is wrong,
One little story not quite true,
And soon another follows it
Because it's easier to do.

Torrington ELECTRIC VACUUM CLEANER

Place a TORRINGTON, bag removed, on a rug where a motor-driven brush cleaner has "cleaned" and see the dust fly.

AN electric cleaner motor, used both to create suction and drive a brush does neither job properly. Suction, necessary to get the deep, imbedded dirt, is sacrificed for power to operate the brush with a whirling beating action that increases the danger of damage to the rug.

All of TORRINGTON'S power is used to produce strong suction that removes every particle of the introdden dirt and fabric-cutting grit.

That is why TORRINGTON attachments are really effective in forty household uses and why the TORRINGTON is not only a rug cleaner but an all around house cleaner.

The big, full-tufted carpet-sweeper brush removes all the surface litter, lint, hair and threads.

And it does it without injury to the rug.

DEMPSEY CRUSHES HUSKY NEGRO IN SMART WORK-OUT

Battling Ghee Long Waited to Get Crack at Heavyweight King, but Met Real Waterloo — Champion Went into Hard Fighting

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., June 18.—(By Igoe)—Battling Ghee, a dusky husky from Memphis, Tenn., crawled into the air port open air arena here yesterday and met personally, Jacic Dempsey the world's heavyweight champion, the Dempsey right, the Dempsey left, and—the floor. Three times did Bee Ghee pay the canvas floor his respects.

Bee is a big fellow weighing 185 pounds, and he has waited patiently, with or without misgivings for eight days to get his crack or two at a real live heavyweight king. His chance came like the crash of doom, for when he had done his bit as a sparring partner two of his teeth were tottering in his head like the old wooden rocker in the parlor. Also blood streaked down from the right side of his mouth. All of Bee Ghee's misfortunes were crowded into two rounds of boxing.

Ghe was pounded unmercifully. He flicked the heavyweight badly four or five times when he was suddenly called upon to sample that dreadful left hook, the one that turned Jess Willard through the air at Toledo like a giant pinwheel. Ghee stands up under punishment better than the former champion.

DEMPSEY ENJOYED MILL.

The first left hook did not drop him and the good reason was that Dempsey leaped forward and propped him up to prevent his falling. Ghee braced and went back gamely for more.

They whaled away as if they were fighting for the title, and Dempsey seemed to enjoy this, it was so much like the real thing.

Then came a right-hander, travelling for a distance of five or six inches and down went Bee b'gosh. He landed like some great sea crab that had been dropped from nowhere—on all fours. He was a sad, sad looking Memphis man when he got up, but he did it with all the courage of a Roman gladiator. He fought back as best he could and he can fight too, but Dempsey, now in the full fury of his smashing swing, crowned him without any pity. A left hook to the jaw and Bee Ghee of Memphis, was straightened out on the floor flatter than a Turkish rug.

There are no such things as rest chairs in this training camp, but Barney and Ted straightened Bee Ghee up against a ring post and ironed him out well enough for the second round with the champion. They went at it again gloves flying in a beautiful rat-a-pat. Ghee landed several lefts on the king's head, now so safely tucked away in the head gear.

ENDED MIXER'S DAY.

The crowd roared in approval, but then above the roar came the jolt that ended the day so far as the Memphis mixer was concerned.

A left and right seemed to spear head and body at the same moment, and Ghee pitched forward as limp as a rag doll. Dempsey caught him with his big right arm just as he was about to hit the platform. Blood ran down his chin as they brought him to his corner. They ripped the headgear off and the Memphis man tottered out of the arena feeling his uppers and lowers.

Jack Renault, the big Canadian, was the first to face Dempsey, but, but comparing his portion to Bee Ghee's he got off very lightly. As a matter of fact Renault took back along a fine pace never slowing up enough to allow Dempsey to hit him. Dempsey boxed him for the footwork that was in it. Larry Williams got a drubbing, but at no time did Dempsey attempt to let fly at him, like he did at the Memphis lad.

GREAT FEATURES OF CALEDONIAN GAMES, JUNE 25

The committee in charge of the Caledonian Games, which will be held at the Dominion Park on Saturday, 25th inst., wish to announce that Event No. 20 of the official program provides for a race for the Highland Cadet Battalion. The race will be 220 yards in full dress. In past years this race has been very popular and always brought forward a very large entry. Three medals will be given for this very popular event. This race will be worth while watching and will encourage the young cadets to do their best.

Another very popular race is Event No. 31, one mile race for junior harriers. A large entry is expected for this event and the society has decided to offer three medals to stimulate the boys under 18 years and make this race one of the feature events of this year's games.

SOCCER GOSSIP

BY CRAIG CAMPBELL

The great event in the soccer world today is the semi-final for the Connaught Cup (local series).

The most talked-of team in Montreal for many a day, Grenadier Guards, will meet Calvin on the Hadley street ground, Cote St. Paul. The Guards' victory over Sons of Scotland is of such recent date, and all Calvin was present, that it is unnecessary to either instruct Guards or warn Calvin. Both teams know all about the situation. But this much can be said, that the Grenadier Guards, in taking on successively, Verdun City, Lyalls and Sons of Scotland in each case an overtime game, have established a record. Calvin will make their fourth senior opponents. Will it be fourth victims? Well, that is entirely a matter for Calvins' generosity. We'll see what we'll see. Notre Dame cars to Hadley street connect with the ground.

Lachine will play at home, even if on a public park, so C.P.R. need not expect to divide any 500 dollar gate. When Lachine can defeat Royal Highlanders, with only nine men, scribes that in their puny way attempt to pick winners would, at first glance, give Lachine a victory that could be written on the scrolls of fame. However, Lachine's victory was two weeks ago, and an all good footballers know, two weeks is a long time. C.P.R. will undoubtedly look upon Lachine as top-notchers, and if they know their business treat them as if they were playing against the All Scots. C.P.R. may resent instructions, but they must be mighty careful.

Four first, three second, and three third division games are down for play, to say nothing of 15 junior fixtures.

Dick, of Vickers, has been transferred to Belceil.

The Bell Telephone Association team beat the Grenadier Guards ("C" Company) team by two goals to nothing in a well contested game.

There was clever football by both sides, the outstanding features being play of Smith, fullback; Day, centre-half, and Bridson, centre forward, of the Telephone team.

Thursday's game at Alexandria Park, between Almy's and the Grand Trunk team, resulted in a score of 3 to 2 in favor of Almy's. It was a very good match, well worth seeing, additional goals being missed by a few inches only.

Through this result we maintain second place in the Mid-Week Soccer League.

Players representing the Guaranteed Pure Milk Company were defeated by 3 to 0 last night by Goodwin's soccer team which won the championship of the first half of the schedule of the Mid-week Football League. The game was played at McGill Stadium and was the attraction for a good attendance. The Goodwin's team has gone through the season without defeat, winning all of their seven scheduled games. The goals were scored by Grossmith, Leity and Carlon.

After their game with Thistle this afternoon in the Quebec Cup tie, Tetreaultville will hold a fair at the corner of Sherbrooke and Des Ormeaux streets, and a great success is anticipated. Friends are urgently needed for the Tetreaultville organization, as they are running two teams, and this costs money.

Today's Fourth Division games are:—Buffaloes vs. Dragoons.
Harts Battery vs. Northern Electric.
R. & M. R. vs. Tetreaultville II.
Machine Gun Co., vs. Corinthians II.

Owing to Secretary Bayne, of the Junior Association leaving on a month's holidays the Assistant Secretary Charles H. Jones, 611 Hibernia Road, will look after all matters and secretaries of various leagues are asked to send everything to Mr. Jones until August 1st then send them to Secy. Bayne. Mr. Jones' telephone number is Victoria 1638.

Owing to the final of the Connaught Cup being played on June 25th, all games in the Junior Association are cancelled.

Also all games on July 9th, being the game between All Canada vs. Scotland, are also cancelled. The League Board will fix up the dates.

Entries for the Junior Charity Cup may be sent in now. First round to be played on July 9th. Entrance fee $2.00.

Belceil are endeavoring to strengthen their team with view to obtain promotion to the First Division. A short while back they were after Wourters of Grand Trunks, but last evening they put through the transfer form of Dick, of Canadian Vickers, who is considered the best inside right in the city.

SAM MACDONALD ASKS PERTINENT QUESTION OF P.Q.F.A. ABOUT SCOTTISH MATCH GATE SCANDAL

The following question has been written and signed for publication in the Star by a prominent Sons of Scotland man as the result of the decision of President Neil Hepburn of the Province of Quebec Football Association to hold the investigation into rumors about the handling of the crowd at the big Scottish-All Montreal game May 24th in private:

THE DEMAND

"Who were the P. Q. F. A. protecting by holding their meeting in secret concerning the charges which have been levelled about the Montreal vs Scotland match? My name has been mentioned. If I have no objection to the fullest inquiry and publicity, who should offer any objection?"

WESTMOUNT MAYOR WILL THROW FIRST BALL AT ATWATER

Dr. Haldimand, One of Montreal's Veteran and Most Enthusiastic Fans, Will Catch for the Mayor This Afternoon

Mayor P. W. McLagan of Westmount will open the Atwater Park Baseball League officially this afternoon at 2 o'clock sharp by throwing the first ball, with Dr. A. W. Haldimand catching, before the commencement of the double header, between Athletics vs. St. Arsene and Crescent vs. Indians. Two games have been played in the newly formed baseball league and the brand of ball has been very good, and as soon as the players get used to the surroundings some hotly contested games will be in evidence. These teams will be at full strength. Strange to note, the ball seemed very lively at the Atwater diamond in two games. Three home runs have been made and five three-base hits. The games on Tuesday and Thursday evenings have been well attended. The fans seem satisfied and encourage any good plays. They seem to like heavy hitting, and this may be on the bill if the scores are close, for the heavy hitting order of the teams are possessed of some sluggers. Another feature at the games is the gradually increased attendance of the lady fanettes, and the youngsters asking their parents about the finer points of the game. That there will be a tremendous crowd out this afternoon is evidenced by the many enquiries that have been made. The grounds are in perfect condition. The stands have been put in excellent shape. The plays will be fast and the teams will go through their work in good style. The batteries have not been definitely announced, but will be chosen in the warm-up process. The players will be announced individually when they take their place at the plate. There is no racing in Montreal over the week-end and it will seem like old times journeying out at Atwater park as of yore to see a ball game.

WEIGHT GIANTS AT DAGGER POINT. LATOUR'S CLAIM

Wilfred Latour is jealous of his reputation as a lifter of heavy weights, and takes exception to Cabana's claim of having beaten him in tests of muscular prowess by lifting 3,562 pounds on his back, and other feats.

In a statement to The Star the other day he made an open offer to wager $500 that Cabana never had lifted, could not and never would lift 3,562 lbs. on his back "Louis Cyr fashion." He was furthermore ready to take up once more the same competitive feats as formed the basis of the match of May 17 last, in any public hall where spectators would be admitted gratis, for a wager of $500 or for honor. He was willing to deposit an accepted cheque for $500 as guarantee of good faith, and fixed June 25 as the closing date for acceptance of the challenge.

SWIMMING RACES OPEN HERE TODAY

The Montreal Swimming Club opens its summer season, of weekly handicaps, at St. Helens Island this afternoon. Like in past years the M. S. C. officials have arranged that swimmers from outside clubs will get as much of the program as its own members. With this end in view it will be noted that the following events show that both the feature races are open to swimmers of all clubs:—

100 yards, Senior speed open.
50 yards, Junior " open.
100 yards, Backstroke, Senior Club.
50 yards, Backstroke, Junior Club.

Many of the members, and visitors, are spending Saturday and also the following day at the club quarters instead of taking long trips to the country over the week-ends. The executive report that things are booming at the famous island club and they look forward to a record season. The handicaps will be run off each Saturday afternoon and the rumor is current that the popular treasurer has a score of wild ducks in training for the weekly hunts.

ROSS HAD ANOTHER WIN AT CONNAUGHT

OTTAWA, June 17.—(Star Special.)—Great sport was provided again on the second day of the Connaught Park Jockey Club's spring program. Ideal weather again graced the popular Ottawa race meet, and over five thousand people thronged their way to the grounds. Their Excellencies the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire were unable to be present, but members of their staff were on the lawn, and as on the opening day, society turned out in grand style to witness the sport. Commander Ross, president of the Montreal Jockey Club, was up for the occasion, and among the visitors was W. P. Fraser, secretary of the Ontario Jockey Club, and of the Canadian Racing Associations. Hon. W. S. Fielding, Sir Henry Drayton, Hon. Edgar Rhodes, and many other well-known Parliamentarians.

Commander Ross continued his great success, and put over his third winner of the meeting when Truro, a chestnut filly, captured the opening dash at five furlongs, for maiden two-year-olds. Claver had the mount on Truro, and though he shot off poorly, he made up fast time, and led at the stretch by a half-length. He was challenged on the drive to the wire, but had plenty left, and managed to stall off Fast Trail, which finished second, with Billy Dunn third. Truro paid $4.95 straight.

Grand weather favored the Connaught Park Jockey Club for the third day's sport of the spring meeting and all records went by the board at the local track Friday afternoon. The racing was very good and there were the usual exciting finishes.

The feature was the Whirlwind Handicap for three-year-olds and up at six furlongs, for a purse of $1,000 and it resulted in a win for Commander J. K. L. Ross Sailing B. Judge Ellsworth finished second and Ikey T. third. Claver Rode the winner and turned in another fine performance. It was the fourth win of the week for Commander Ross whose horses have not yet been beaten during the present meet at Connaught Park.

Jockey Walls carried off the riding honors with two wins to his credit to bring successful on Sweet Patutie in the first and Brisk in the last race.

CARPENTIER'S WORK HELD UP BY RAIN; ACTIVE TIME TODAY

Challenger Has Five Mile Walk, but Spends Rest of Day Decorating Room and Enjoying Music and Solitaire

MANHASSET, June 18.—(By Georges Carpentier. Copyright by United Feature Syndicate).—I forgot there was to be a Dempsey fight yesterday. It rained and I did no work, not even the usual morning stunt in Sherry Park. Letters came from France with two new pictures of my baby daughter Jacqueline, and I spent the morning arranging these in my little "home corner" and replying to the letters from my wife. I have a little corner of my bedroom which is sacred to my family affairs and nothing about fighting gets in there. I have four or five photographs of my wife and fully a dozen of Jacqueline.

With the exception of Jim Corbett no one came to the farm at all and I was able to get through a lot of solitaire and a rainy day at our farm is always amusing for we have to do a lot of kidding amongst ourselves to keep off a boredome. A polyglot household; I speak a little English and Captain Mallot and his brother and Gus Wilson speak French and English equally well. We speak a sort of half and half "veux-tu que je sasse quelque chose" "sure Mike." The burnish question is not will I beat Dempsey but which of us can get all fifty-two cards out of Canfield.

In the afternoon I went out to the barn for a while to watch Joey Gans and Journee complete their training for their fights on Monday night. I wish I could go and watch them that night but Gus Wilson says I will be in bed long before the bell rings for the first round. Today rain or shine I am down for some real work boxing with my sparring partner in a private workout.

MORE RIGID RULES.

MANHASSET, N.Y., June 18.—Still more rigid rules were laid down yesterday in the camp of Georges Carpentier. Trainer Gus Wilson announced that certain hours for work and play had been set aside and that no member of the camp would be permitted to leave his place without special permission. These restrictions, he said, were considered necessary in view of the fact that the challenger would do a great deal of training in secret during the rest of the training period. All members of the party will keep the same hours, from Georges to the cook.

In the morning Georges walked five miles before a heavy rain set in and spent about half an hour in the afternoon in the gymnasium, and then amused himself with his phonograph. He has a good ear for music and after hearing a piece several times whistles the air during his morning stroll.

HAD NO VISITORS.

There were no visitors all day. Carpentier remarked that it was the first real rest he has had in three weeks.

Charles Ledoux, the French bantamweight, will arrive at the camp next week and will start working with Georges immediately, trainer Wilson said. Other sparring partners are to arrive Monday.

Manager Descamps has received word that his aged mother, who was taken prisoner in 1914 by the Germans and remained in a German prison camp throughout the war, had died as a result of her experiences. He cabled to France ordering a heavy blanket of flowers to be placed on her grave.

ROWING CREWS AT LACHINE IN PRACTICE FOR 2ND

Lachine Rowing Club crews are working out twice daily as the residents along the lake shore well know, as the familiar calling of the coaches and the coxswains through their megaphones helps many of the late sleepers to realize that it is time to get up. The "Eights," both heavy and lightweights, are rounding into shape and all eyes dates are being given a fair chance of making the crews for their first regatta, which is at Ottawa on July 2nd—where they will meet some fast crews of Ottawa and Brockville, and possibly Toronto. The makeup of the crews will be announced shortly and many new men will appear for their first season in rowing. Gerald Smart's crew eventually won the spring trial fouroars and was made up of Gerald Smart, stroke, F. White, J. White and Barlett, who won from Grant Smart's four, after a series of row offs, which were closely contested. Pewters were awarded the winners. To help defray the club's expenses to Ottawa on July 1st and 2nd, it was decided to hold a subscription dance in the Club house on Friday evening, June 24th, and it is hoped that the members and supporters will turn out in large numbers to make this dance an exceptional success.

Gill Tennis Club, commencing Saturday, June 25 — Entries close Wednesday, June 22, at 8 p.m.

1. — Men's handicap (preliminary round) — Open to all comers.

2. — Intermediate singles (preliminary rounds) — Open to all players eligible to compete in the intermediate series of the P.Q.L.T.A. and who have never won this event.

New Leaders of Mercantile League

American Railway Express baseball team assumed the leadership of the Mercantile League, by defeating Swift Canadian Company, in a fast and exciting game, played on Fletcher's Field, by the score of 5-4.

The game proved to be a pitchers' battle between Lumquin and Wilson and was undecided up till the last inning when the Expressmen opened up. A rally, aided by Mike Phelan's heavy hitting, managed to take the long end of the score.

The feature of the day's play was the defeat of Grier, the Mount Royal crack by Beaupre, of Outremont, who was drawn against him in the afternoon, in three sets, Grier winning the first set by 6-4, but dropping the next two and match by the same score. Laframbroise had an easy time in the morning from Hinfret, of the Quebec club easily in straight sets.

The Montreal players captured five out of eight games in the morning, Beaupre, Dunlop, Brown, Laframbroise and Beaupre winning their games, while the only man to lose was Pitcher, who bowed before Boisvert, of Quebec to the tune of 6—1, 6—2.

The ladies, however, were not so successful. Miss J. Galley, of Outremont, losing to Miss Baillargeon of Quebec, 6—3, 6—4, while Mrs. Christie, of Mount Royal lost to Mrs. Handsomebody in a keenly contested game, 6—3, 6—1.

YACHT RACES AT DORVAL FOR TODAY

Only one of the three scheduled evening races for Class "B" boats, under the auspices of the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, was sailed last night in a light southwest wind, hardly sufficient to carry the yachts along.

The race was over the yacht club course at Dorval, and the boats finished—Beaver, first; Red Patch, second; Oneto, third; Vega, fourth, and Wolvin yacht, fifth. The second race, which was to have been over a triangular course, was abandoned, due to there not being sufficient breeze. The races were sailed under L. R. Thomson as officer of the day.

The third and final series of races for the J. M. McIntyre Trophy will be sailed this afternoon. The program will comprise a series of short races over the course at Pointe Claire. Six boats will start for the trophy, Vega, Beaver, Oneto, Red Patch, Zohra and Wolvin boat. Besides these, the Samoset, Coquette, Emerald and Blue Mouse will also start.

The club launch will leave Dorval at 2:30, and will be available for members and their friends, who care to follow the races. It has been decided that the launch will leave on time, and the start of the races will be made on her arrival at Pointe Claire. F. P. Sherwood will be officer of the day.

GREY SOCKS WON.

In a fast game of baseball in the East End the Grey Socks defeated the Monast Circle by the score of 27 to 4. The game was featured by heavy hitting and few errors. The Grey Socks would like to play any baseball club having players between 16 and 19 years of age. Address all communications to W. Kind, 201 Wurtle street, city.

BETTING EVEN ON INTERNATIONAL POLO MATCHES

LONDON, June 18.—By Charles M. McCann, United Press Staff Correspondent).—Awaiting the shock of combat on the polo field, Americans and British players and ponies rested yesterday. While the players and their grooms went over the equipment, testing straps, polishing metal and examining horseshoes, the new Hurlingham field was being dressed in its best for the great crowds which will see the first match tomorrow.

Captain Devereaux Milburn, of the Americans, was suffering a slight ailment, but it was believed he will be able to take his position today. The other Americans and their ponies were in the best of condition. Major Vivian Lockett, captain of the British team, proclaimed his men ready for the conflict.

Despite poor transportation and the expense of entering the grounds, the crowds promised to be large enough to tax the new stands. Additional attractions were to be the royal family, King Alfonso of Spain, and a score of representatives of European nobility.

Great preparations for the matches have been made by the committee in charge. Massed bands in gorgeous uniforms will add to the color of the scenes as 10,000 spectators pack themselves into stands, already flying American and British flags and brilliant streamers.

The international contests date back to 1886, when a Hurlingham team visited America.

England won the cup that year. The Americans were unsuccessful in 1909 and 1902, but in 1909 Harry Payne Whitney Big Four carried the cup to the United States. After an unsuccessful invasion in 1911, the British lifted the cup in 1914.

The betting today was even.

MIXED FOURSOMES THE BILL OF FARE ON KANAWAKI LINKS

Great Activity Marks the Different Golf Courses of the Island of Montreal This Fine Weather—What is Doing Today

Mixed foursomes were the order of the dat at Kanawaki yesterday. The premier prize was won by Mrs. Somerset and F. L. Wilkinson with a net 78,—jolly fine golf! And the second prize was annexed by Mrs. Veysey and F. M. McRobie who returned a net 80½.

Kanawaki is some course. You have got to hoof it, on an average, 400 yards to the pole. Why, it is some 6,300 yards in length at full stretch. It is not so well bunkered as it might be, but that important detail is under review. The intention is to make Kanawaki a real championship course of the old country type. They are to make a St. Andrew's of it.

The Kanawaki course has some beautiful "par" holes. These same holes are good bogey holes, but the old "Colonel" is not recognized as he ought to be even at Kanaki, which is not as it ought to be. The tenth hole has been wonderfully improved by simply raising of the back of the green, and it was certainly good golf architecture to introduce these two bunkers at the 12th, which hug the green so very affectionately. The minus man, however, won't like to hear the depressing news that this fall, more bunkers of a pronounced type are in contemplation.

The golf yesterday was not such as to induce the employment of superlatives, but some of the ladies lacked distance. They wanted distance. For instance, in partnership with the President of the M.A.A. a rattling good 44 was recorded for the first nine,, and then they required 55 to come in which was distinctly bad.

They renewed acquaintance with too many hazards all from the same cause.

The details of the games yesterday are as follows;

Mrs. Somerset and F. L. Wilkinson 78 net (first prize).

Mrs. Veysey and F. McRobie 80½ net.

Mrs. Porteous and J. D. Balle, 83.

Mrs. Saunders and C. M. Rudel 88.

Miss Strachan and G. M. McSweeney 83½.

Mrs. Porritt and E. L. Gnaedinger 83½.

Mrs. Annable and F. W. Gilday 84.

Mrs. McSweeney and James Buchanan 85.

Mrs. Carmen and C. C. Kippen 87½.

They got the first hole in par and then "blew up."

Mrs. MacKenzie and E. M. Wilson 88.

Mrs. A. Dick and W. B. Somerset 89.

Mrs. Gnaedinger and R. S. Weir 89.

Mrs. Watts and E. Alexander 90.

Mrs. H. G. Jones and E. W. Travers 90½.

Mrs. Thompson and W. P. Hodges 91.

Mrs. Chisholm and A. J. Veysey 91½.

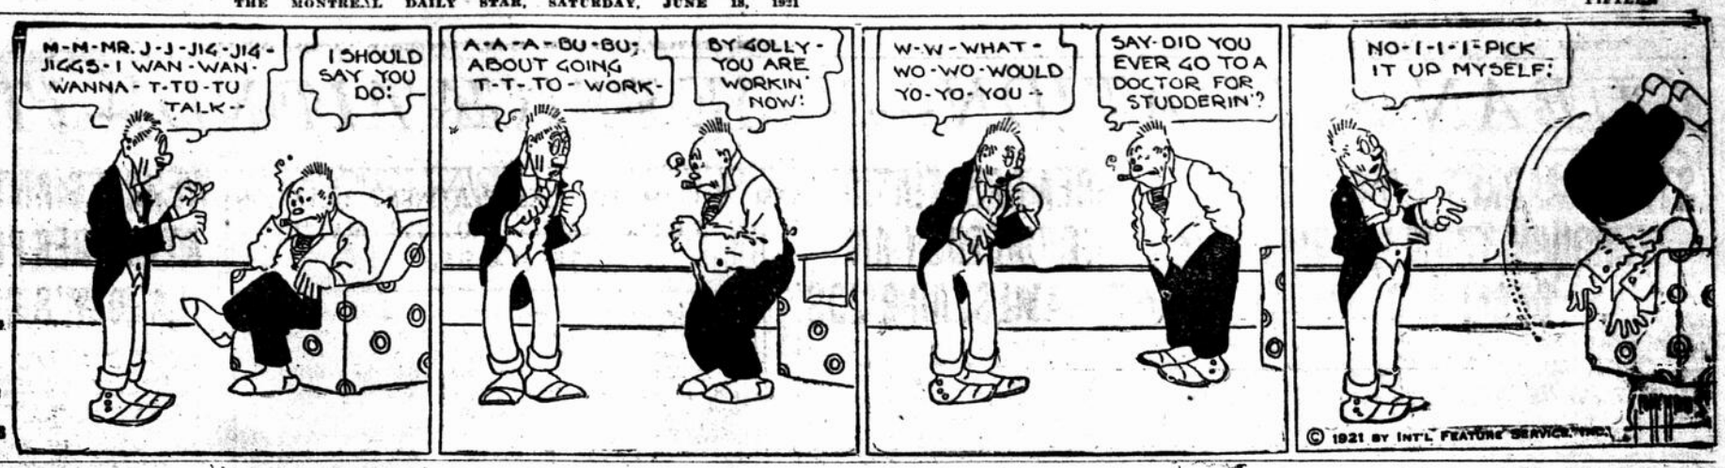
Mrs. S. C. Jones and W. O. Smith 92.

Mrs. Macnell and W. G. Thomson 94½.

Miss Campbell and A. R. Carben 96.

Mrs. Wm. McLuckee and Geo. Dawson 97.

It was a refreshingly keen contest throughout.—CHARLES MILNE.



"UNO'S" GOLF GOSSIP

I spent quite a time yesterday with a prominent golfing authority in Montreal. Discussion of the prospects for the professional championships on 24th June provoked the assertion that one winner will either be Charlie Murray of George Ayton, who, of course, is brother to the famous Laurence. If Ayton should win, how would it do to make some reference to the "St. Lawrence," and then George would be "one up" on his more illustrious brother.

The Amateur Championships also came under review. I was listening. C. H. Grier, W. McLuckie, Syd. Morgan, T. B. Reith, or G. H. Turpin will annex the honor, so I was informed.

The Country Club would dearly love to see Abe Mitchell or George Duncan annexing the open championship. Little wonder. The eyes of the whole country will be on the country course when they come here.

The people here who do not know George Duncan's style of play will be amazed when they see him. He doesn't even seem to look where he is playing. Without doubt he is the speediest golfer of all time.

Last time I saw Duncan was at Killermont course, Glasgow. You would have got a laugh if you had heard Ted Ray and George discussing the reaching of the last green. Ray "carried" the wide spreading tree defying the green. It was a phenomenal performance.

Harold Hilton was the most careless Amateur Open Champion the world has known. He told me once that he had often fallen asleep smoking cigarette. I don't think anyone has ever seen Hilton without a "cig" between his lips. Anybody in Canada?

How would it do for some enterprising photographer to "get" Ted Ray without a pipe in his mouth. He smokes a great deal of tobacco of the "full strength" variety.

When Ray is playing, he never thinks of removing that pipe. Speaks volumes, doesn't it, for the way he swings his club. Could you do it? Try it carelessly.

The world's open champion asked me to find out where his erstwhile Aberdeen opponent Jim Donaldson was. I learned yesterday from Mr. Dewar that Donaldson is in Chicago. He might have bade the world "talk" golf. Jim keeps at it all the same.

When George Duncan comes here, it would be a kindness not to press him to eat. He has a most sensitive stomach, and he requires to study it. Now then, ye ladies! "Please do have another cake" will have to be cut out.

To my friend "C.H." whom I am sorry I do not know, I would suggest your getting a "baffie." The more I see of the courses here, the more I see the need for that club.

I was asked a question yesterday if strength does not enter into golf, how about Abe Mitchell compared with George Duncan? To this I would say that the additional yards which Mitchell gets over Duncan occasionally has nothing whatever to do with strength.

It will be argued I know, to the contrary.

Glad, sir, to reply to your query. The most useful iron club to my mind is the MID IRON. You can almost do anything with it.

I want to say this about the golf courses in Montreal. Why are the bunkers not really bunkers? Laying out courses for ladies to play on is not golf planning.

Strange thing is that when you get a course with real bunkers, not those picturesque affairs which are calculated to adorn the landscape, the ladies WILL insist upon playing over it. You golfing architects, please fly over to St. Andrews and see a bunker.

Why it is that you do not recognize "Colonel Bogey" here?

To my utter amazement I met yesterday afternoon a friendly disposed person who had never "met" Colonel Bogey! ! ! We have all got to meet him here. He simply has to be recognized. Golf is not really golf in the pleasureable sense without him. Cut out anything and everything that is not strictly golf. I think you understand what I mean. Stick to the R. and A. rules and regulations. Let who will start a new game of their own.

The fee on "the other side" for a caddie in the Ben Sayers-Crawford sense is not more than 50 cents. Big Crawford, who weighed 200 lbs. and a few ounces looked after wee Ben like a father. He had more influence over the North Berwick professional than the great John Brown had over Queen Victoria.

No player, by the way, has ever played more with nobility than Ben Sayers. His golf clubs are longer than himself. That is how he counterbalances his lack of inches.

GOLF NOTES

The All Montreal vs. Dixie match arranged for Monday, 19th at Kanawaki will not be played. Kanawaki, however, has arranged to play representatives from Beaconsfield County Club and Whitlock.

No sooner does the new Rosemount Golf Club get its course in playing shape than a stroke handicap competition is begun. The play began last evening and will continue over the week-end in order to get a line on the brand of golf put forward by the members to date.

On Monday evening the club, which is only in a semi-organized state at the present time will hold a special meeting to actually get matters straightened out. The meeting will be held at the course and the full list of officers as well as future plans will be announced. Any information in regard to this golf club may be obtained by writing J. S. Grant, 2426 20th avenue.

Today's feature at Kanawaki is a pewter competition which will be divided into three classes, A, B and C. Much interest is being shown in all the special fixtures at the Kanawaki Club this season and a large number of members are expected on hand over the week-end, even if it is only to watch the play.

WHITLOCK PLAYS TOO.

Play for the Darling Cup will go on at the Whitlock Golf Club at Hudson Heights today. This club has been running off several competitions of late and if the play in tomorrow's fixture is as good as the other play recorded, it ought to be well worth watching.

Qualifying rounds in the Palmer shield competition and President's prize, which have been going on for some time will be cleaned off the slate today it is expected.

TORONTO June 18.—Geo. Cumming, of the Toronto Golf C'ub, won the professional championship of the Toronto and District Golf Association at the Scarboro Golf Club yesterday with a score of 149 for 36 holes. In the morning round he took 76, while in the afternoon he went out in 35 and came home in 38, making his total for the 36 holes 149.

Percy Barrett of Weston, who took second place on the first 18 holes yesterday morning with a 77, took 39 going out yesterday afternoon and 38 coming in, making his total score 154. He made the last hole in two.

TORONTO, Ont., June 17.—(Star Special)—At 7.30 o'clock this morning the Toronto and District Golf Association Championships commence over the course of the Scarboro Club. The entry this year is far larger than ever bfore, including players from all the clubs in this city and district, not overlooking the Humber Valley and Glen Stewart municipal courses. The latter are represented by unexpectedly strong teams, one composed of old country players and the other of Canadian-born.

Owing to the enormous entry the afternoon round will consist only of those turning in scores of 85 net or under in the morning round. Players must be at the tee at the hour indicated here in after or be subject to disqualification.

Yesterday on the Scarboro Golf Club course, where the Toronto and District Association annual tournament opens today, Robert Scott of the Weston Golf Club, made the fifth hole in one. The length of the Scarboro fifth is 163 yards.

FONTAINBLEU, June 18.—(United News.)—The United States now faces the possibility of seeing its woman's golf championship title cross the Atlantic to England. Miss Cecil Leitch, British and French champion, who already has one victory over Miss Alexa Stirling to her credit announced Friday that she intends to go to the United States with her sister, Edith, and participate in the American championship in October.

Miss Leitch and Miss Stirling have arranged for a friendly match at Addington England, on July 27.

Playing her usual strong game Miss Leitch easily won the French championship Friday when she defeated Miss Joyce Wethered, also of England in the finals, six up and five to go.

Two Methodist preachers, one white and the other colored, served rural charges in Mississippi which were conterminous. The negro received a considerably larger salary than his white brother, who asked him if it was not his custom to expel his members who failed to pay "No, boss," he replied, "we would not like to put the gospel on a money basis. We gets them to subscribe, and if they don't pay we turns them out for lying."—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

WORLD'S GREAT TO PLAY GOLF AT OLD ST. ANDREW'S

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, June 18 (United Press).—The cream of the amateur and professional golf talent of the world, Americans, Canadians, Frenchmen, Australians, Spaniards and Englishmen, lords, generals, members of Parliament, gardeners, champions and ex-champions will participate in the medal play of the Open Championship Tournament on the world's most renowned golf links here beginning Monday.

The elimination contests of 36 holes will be played over the new course Monday and Tuesday, and the final of 72 holes will be played over the famous old championship course Wednesday and Thursday.

There are about 20 Americans who are expected to start, including the amateurs, Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, Fownes and Hunter, participants in the American disaster at Hoylante. Kirkwood, of Australia, is highly regarded for the open because of his showing in the professional tournament at Gleneagles.

Jim Barnes, Walter Hagen and Jock Hutchinson, American professionals, also are favored. Cyril Tolley, last year's English amateur champion, and Bobby Jones both are expected to play in better form than they have showed thus far in competition this season.

Hutchinson holds the record over the Eden course, over which the medal play will range, his figure being 70, as follows, for 18 holes:

Out—4 3 3 4 5 4 3 4 4; In—4 3 3 4 3 5 3 4 5.

A wire from Paris, where Chick Evans has been visiting, says that owing to a slight but painful injury Evans probably will not play.

I WILL BEAR UP, NO MATTER WHO WINS

By RING W. LARDNER

GREAT NECK, N.Y., June 18. — Well friends it is just 2 yrs. ago today when I paid my first visit to the Willard and Dempsey training quarters at Toledo and looked the boys over and give it as my opinion that Jessie would win, and wile I may of loose a few hairs since that time, still my judgment is just as good now as it was then and no wonder they has been a public clamor for me to come out of retirement for a couple wks. and join the corpse of experts that is writeing about the biggest international sporting event which has took place in this country since the heart rendering race for the Lipton cup between the 2 stationery wash tubs. I refer to the comeing Dempsey-Carpentier fiasco at Jersey City which one of my friends has aptly termed "the title bout."

In response to the gen. demand which would not take "No" for a answer, I have undertook to write from 12 to 14 articles in regards to the affair includeing visits to the training camps of both beneficiarys, reports on the condition of same and interviews with the 2 boxers in their native tongue, and finely to set beside the ring side the day of the spat an tell my readers who win, which I have decided this time to wait till they are through fighting before I make up my mind.

As this is my first article and as I will half to write one every day for the next 2 wks. I may as well exclaim to the reader at the start that I some times write in a light vain and make up figures of speech to express my meanings, like for inst. if I should say it looked like Dempsey would kiss the canvas why that don't mean that I expect him to walk up to some famous painting and give it a honeyed smack on the mush, but it would mean like I expected Carpentier to knock him down on the flr. of the ring which is generally always made of canvas unlest Beckett is 1 of the principles and then they pave his side of it with a feather mattress and charge him by the wk.

In the same way I am libel to not always refer to the 2 fighters by their real names but am libel to give them catch nicknames like at Toledo I called Willard the Big Fellow and the name stuck to him like Dempsey's glove.

So do n't be surprised if I should say "the Champ" meaning Dempsey or refer to Carpentier as "the Frenchman," and the sooner my readers gets familiar with these little tricks of verbage, why it will make the articles almost as enjoyable to read them as it is to write them which I can't think of nothing I would rather do except play "Going to Jerusalem."

In this article it might not come amiss to state that the writer is neutral in regards to who wins as I haven't nothing vs. neither of the boys only that they both like dancing, but a man can't help from admireing a Adonis like the handsome young co-la-la and as for Dempsey I took a likeing to him the first time I seen him which was in the Morrison Hotel in Chi, and we met in a kind of a rm. where they was a lot of men standing on 1 ft. looking in a mirror till they finely all begin looking at me so I asked them what did they want and Dempsey was the only one that didn't want nothing.

They's some people that is pulling for Jack so as the title will stay in the U.S. but as far as that is conserned why it says in the record books that the world's fly weight champion is Jimmy Wilde, an Englishman, but even knowing that, I can still go to the theatre once in a wile and enjoy the show.

It's just a question of mind control. Like for inst., when Johnson beat Burns they was a lot of birds that squawked and said we must hunt around for a white hope as life was unbearable wile a colored man held the title, but I just set my teeth and said I wouldn't think about it at all and the result was that I spent some of the happiest days of my life dureing the time Johnson was champion. So if Carpentier should win and take the title back to France I will try and loose myself in my kiddies.

Other folks is pulling for Georges on acct. of him being in the war wile Dempsey sent regrets, but you must remember that they pulled it off right in Carpentier's home town and even if he hadn't of enlisted the noise would of probably kept him awake and further and more if Jack had of went with the Marines he wouldn't of been takeing as many chances as rideing around San Francisco in a taxicab, and last but not lease, I know some of the boys that has been picking on Dempsey that had to be dragged over there themselfs wile still others stayed right here and kept me company, but on the other hand Georges deserves a whole lot of credit for his record as a aviator and took such a interest in his work that even when they had give him his hon. discharge he ran over to England and learned Beckett the nose dive.

Both boys is great specimens of humanity when it comes to strength and physic and both comes of fighting stock. Georges is full blooded wile Jack is Scotch and Irish with a strain of Indian which ain't nothing to hold against a man provided he don't try and write love letters.

It will be one of the few heavyweight bouts in ring annuals when the both rivals is such young men though of course Jack was even younger yet when he win the championship but his oppt. in that fight was pretty near 40, even when it started.

In my next article I will have something to say about the man's records and how the both of them compare with the other one and etc. and maybe also a few wds. about myself.

PRO. BOXING

Joe Barrett, manager for Johnny Gill, who is weighted down with the onerous title of welterweight champion of Pennsylvania, thinks it about time local boxing fans were given a chance to watch his fighting machine—of whom he seems particularly proud—in action in this city. Joe writes that he is all ready to bring the said Gill here if only some of the boxing promoters will wake up and drop him a line. To think that Montreal has waited so long for such a marvel as Joe tells about. Of late local fistic fans haven's seen anyone better than Jack Dempsey, Harry Greb and a few others of such poor calibre.

FREE SURGICAL SERVICE FOR THE BALL PLAYERS

Doctors of the Western Hospital will look after any injury sustained by local ball players, absolutely gratis during the season, it was reported by managers of the said teams.

This arrangement was made after the opening game in the leagues schedule, when six doctors of the hospital attended and were struck with the article of ball shown and the fine condition of the grounds. They said they would be glad to look after the ball players if they could have the use of the grounds on the evening the league was not using them. This was agreed to by the league managers, who were only too delighted to come to such an arrangement.

A CONUNDRUM.

"Father," said a little boy thoughtfully, as he watched his parent collect his notes and arrange the slides for a parish entertainment, "why is it that when you spend your holiday in the Holy Land you always give a lantern lecture on it? You never do when you have been to Paris!"—London Morning Post.

LEADERSHIP IN CITY LEAGUE IS AT STAKE

Athletics and St. Henri are tied for first place, with Indians and Crescents tied for second place, one game behind the leaders. That same sensational ball will be seen in the double headers tomorrow afternoon is evidence the teams are nearly all at full strength. The games scheduled are as follows:—

At National Grounds—Indians vs. Lachine; St. Henry vs. Royal Can.

At Shamrock Grounds—Crescents vs. St. Arnese: Metropole vs. Athletics.

The first game at National grounds will be a close one, and it is not known who will win. Indians are in a slight slump at present, and are not hitting in the pinches, while Lachine are hitting hard, but are not playing airtight fielding. Royals may spring a surprise on St. Henri. The former stayed a wonderful rally against Athletics last week and only lost out by the odd run. St. Arsene and Crescents should prove a thriller. Both teams at present are hitting the ball hard. It will be a pitcher's battle all the way, with the team getting the breaks winning. Metropole, providing their pitching staff holds out against the Athletics, may win, as they are very fast on the bases, good fielders, and can come through in the pinch.

Probable Line-up of Teams:

Royal Ave., down Park Ave. to Sherbrooke, west to Atwater to Dorchester; east to Union Ave to Sherbrooke, east to St. Denis St. to Mt. Royal Ave to finish.

Training Stunts of the Big Fighters at Loew's

"The Fight of the Age," an official film showing Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier in action at their respective training camps, will be shown exclusively at Loew's Theatre during the entire week of June 20th. This film has been authorized by the promoters of the big fight and has just been released. An intimate insight into the training stunts of both champions is given, and the picture affords Montreal fight fans a good opportunity to size up the combatants.

McGill Coach for Kanawana Camp

Mr. Van Wagner, the popular McGill track and field coach, to whom is due so much of the credit for the success of the recent Inter-scholastic meet, has just been secured by the Montreal Y.M.C.A., to coach the boys at Kamp Kanawana, the Y.M.C.A. Boys' Camp, in the Laurentians, this summer. Mr. Van Wagner is an old Y.M.C.A. man, having secured his training at the Y.M.C.A. College, Springfield, Mass., and has always maintained a keen interest in the work of the Association, particularly those phases which have to do with the training of boys. He is not only a crack coach, but during his college career was successful in hanging up several college records.

The fact that he is to remain in camp throughout the entire season, from the end of June until the end of August, will provide an excellent opportunity for the boys to secure intensive training in every branch of field and track work, and there can be no doubt that the result will be a stronger group of junior athletes to represent the Y.M.C.A. in meets during the fall and winter season.

The fact that Mr. Van Wagner is an expert life saver, and has had several summers' experience in teaching life-saving methods, makes him a very valuable addition to the camp staff in this regard as well.

A. L. Robert's Bull Terrier bitch, Quality Queen, which got best of breed at the Ladies' Kennel Club, and also got winner at the Quebec show, now only takes one point for her championship.

CUBAN SITUATION---N. Y. BANK AIDED---STOCKS DEPRESSED

STOCK MARKET NOW PASSING THROUGH TROUBLESOME TIME; DECLINING VALUES RESULT

Further price losses have resulted from the past week's trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. The period has shown that the worries of the stock market are not over yet, and until the outlook for the economic world has cleared very measurably and industry has once again settled down into a normal position, financial markets will reflect unsettlement and nervousness.

During the week the situation in Wall Street has been closely followed here. While the local stock market has not been in full sympathy with the large board the declines there have been unsettling. There are a great many influences which are at present working against financial markets and the situation abroad cannot be minimized.

In summing up the situation of the world as it impressed him at the moment one financial man says the world must be looked at from a community basis, and that Canadians must realize that while conditions in this country are measurable better than in most others, their duties to the rest of the world are not to be shirked. If Canada is to remain economically sound she must assume her share of the world burden.

The Riordon Company outlook still remains a matter of worry to the Street. While the big shareholders meeting was followed with a great deal of interest, it did not have the effect of immediately altering the situation for the company. According to one of the officials connected with the rehabilitation of the enterprise, however, the meeting did have the effect of placing before the shareholders the full facts relating to the company and bringing directly to their attention what they must do if their investments are to mean anything. He says that since the meeting there has been a better respons from shareholders in regard to the new issue of bonds and that subscriptions, while still coming in slowly, are showing some acceleration. Ot may be some little time, however, before a definite result can be predicted. Meantime the situation for the company is viewed as hopeful.

There is some talk in stock market circles of the probable passing or reduction of dividends on one or two common stocks, but nothing definite is forthcoming in this connection. The dividend record of the Montreal stock list has been a good one over the past few years, and if there are some further rate reductions and some passings, it would not be surprising. The situation is in some of the other markets, particularly in New York, is far more uncertain in respect of dividends than it is here.

The table which follows gives the range of leading local securities during the past week of trading and up to the close on Friday night.

DEMORALIZATION OF MARKET DUE TO BEAR RAIDS

NEW YORK, June 18. (By Walter B. Brown, Editor New York Commercial. Written for the United News)— By far the most important feature of the past week has been the demoralization of the stock market. This has resulted not from any changes for the worse in the general business situation or from any radical political developments. On the contrary, it has been the outcome of one of the most daring and successful bear raids in the history of the New York Stock Exchange. These raiders, whose identity is whispered, but who are not as yet publicly known, found the market in a vulnerable position first, through lack of outside support, and second, because those who might be expected to support it in such an emergency have been largely engaged in more legitimate financial operations than mere stock jobbing and have had to allow the market to take care of itself.

The result has been a contraction in security values running into the hundreds of millions and possibly beyond the billion mark. The fortunes of many innocent investors have been altered and the effect upon the lives and destinies of people everywhere has been widespread.

One effect of these operations has been distinctly noticable, and that is an impairment of business confidence just at a time when it was beginning to reassert itself. Perhaps those who have been conducting those raids have not thought of these things, from the moral standpoint at least, or if they have, it has been in a detached, impersonal way as part of the game. The full story has not been written as yet, and may not ever be known, but as it appears on the surface, it is a record of cold-blooded manipulation that brings back to mind Thomas W. Lawson's description of what he called "Frenzied finance."

The stock selected as the instrument for these operations was Mexican Petroleum. Just why, is not yet quite clear. Even this was a daring proposition for the floating supply of this stock is presumably less than 100,000 shares, and is figured down as low as 60,000. Yet day after day the transactions have exceeded this total.

The final settlement has not yet been reached, but there is every probability of still more interesting developments to come. Among the subsequent happenings has been a raid upon tobaccos and allied stocks, which could not be explained on any logical basis. If the gossip of the Street is to be relied upon, this was in the nature of a punishment for those who are prominently identified with these interests for having the temerity to come to the aid of the oil people.

Next it was stated the equipment shares were to be raided as an attack upon another group of capitalists, and the raid followed according to schedule. There have been wild swings in values, even of stocks of concerns that have already readjusted their business to new conditions and were in sound financial position.

And while all this has been happening in the stock market the general business situation has been steadily improving. Banking conditions have improved to such an extent that both the New York and Dallas Federal Reserve Banks have found it expedient to reduce their rediscount rates to a six per cent basis for all classes of paper. This brings it back to the rate prevailing on June 1, 1920, and has preceded any readjustment in the rate of the Bank of England, which it has been our custom to follow. There has been no reason why the American bank should not take the initiative, as our reserve ratio is now far in excess of our most conservative requirements.

There has been a great amount of pressure brought to bear upon the Federal Reserve Board for a reduction in the re-discount rate, and the readjustment made during the week has undoubtedly been largely influenced by that pressure, and has been calculated to have its effect upon the general business morale.

It is possible, of course, to find unfavorable symptoms in many directions, but the passing of dividends and reorganization of financial operations connected with the large industries do not represent new developments. They are merely confirmations of what has already been known and reflections of the depressed state of business through which we have passed. On the other hand, reports from the middle west, and from many other sections of the country, tell of a more hopeful outlook and a renewal of courage and confidence.

The crop situation is satisfactory and new crops are beginning to move. This will increase from now on, putting money once more to circulation and thawing out some of the frozen loans which have so completely stagnated business during the past few months. We are about entering upon the third quarter of the year which, according to forecasts on the part of those best able to judge, should see the revival of business really under way. So far, these prognostications have been verified. The first quarter of the present year was expected to show a continuation of the unsettled conditions which marked the close of 1920. It was, in fact, the slack water between the ebb and the flood tides. The second quarter now closing has shown the turn of the tide even though the movement at times has been hardly perceptible. Now the third quarter is expected to give real evidence of the turn, while the fourth quarter should see recovery well under way. It is, of course, possible that new factors may be introduced to alter this program to some extent, but they can only delay it.

The tariff bill, for instance, which should have been reported out of committee by this time, has been delayed, but the fact that it is not yet reported is a favorable rather than an unfavorable feature. It indicates more careful preparation, while the administrative features of the bill which have already been tentatively announced indicate that there is to be some elasticity allowed for it, so it will be possible for us to bargain with those countries with whom it is to our interest to show consideration. It has been feared that it was the intention of Congress to erect an impenetrable tariff wall which would have the effect of not only keeping out, but of keeping imports in. There is to be sure, some apprehension that the taxation measure may be delayed beyond this year, but this is not altogether likely. It is given as one excuse for the bear raid on the stock market, so that the losses already established can be allowed to remain as a basis for reduced taxation or until the new revenue bill shows them to be unnecessary.

Many observers are inclined to place the blame for the slow recovery in industry upon the unwillingness of labor to accept deflation. It is true the labor leaders are making a stout resistance, but that is what is expected of them if they are to earn their huge salaries. They may say all they please in regard to the wickedness of capital and the downtrodden condition of the toilers, but they cannot alter economic facts. Labor has got to be deflated. It may be delayed by such tactics, but it cannot be resisted indefinitely.

The unemployed cannot be counted upon to retain their enthusiasm for a wage scale in which they are unable to participate. There is still as much truth as ever in the old saying that half a loaf is better than no bread. Those who are out of employment will not be so likely to quibble over wage schedules if they are presented with an opportunity to earn any money at all. Production costs have got to be kept to a point that will yield invested capital a return, and invested capital cannot secure this return unless the product is to be sold at a level within the reach of the consumer. These are basic facts, and will have to be met both by labor and capital.

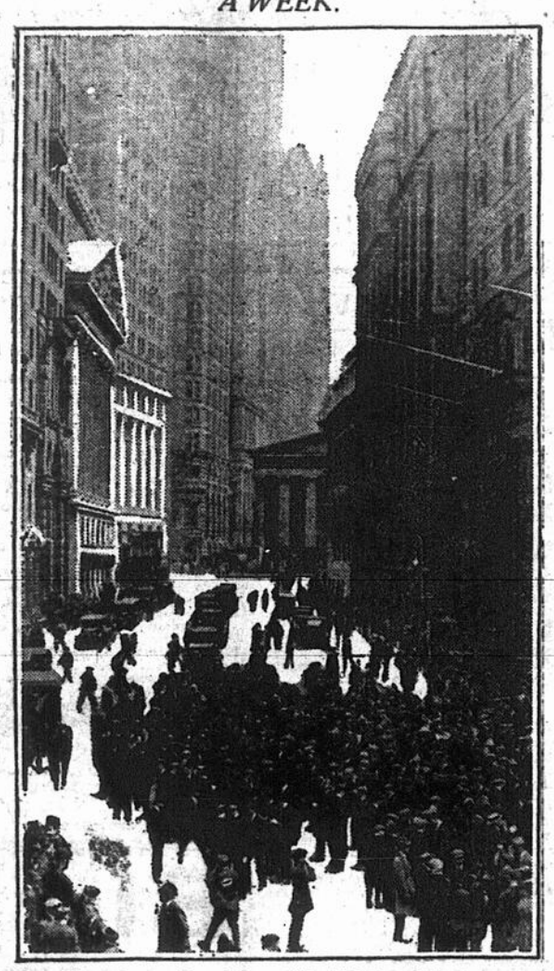
The railroad situation is also showing signs of improvement. During the week ending May 21 there were more than 768,000 cars loaded with revenue freight representing a continuous increase each week since the last of March, although considerably less than the corresponding period of the preceding year. It is noteworthy that the increase from week to week has affected all groups of commodities except coal, and even this is improving in some sections. For the week ending May 23 there was a decrease in idle cars of 27,600, 26,000 of which were coal cars.

There is also a noticeable increase in grain shipments in the west and southwest. It is expected that the requirements for grain shipment will start some activity among the railway equipment companies, as a great many of the idle cars were badly out of repair and their lay-off gave the railroad companies a breathing spell.

Stock market developments in the immediate future will be watched with interest even by those not already directly concerned in such operations as having a distinct bearing on the general business situation.

California's net oil production in the last calendar year increased 3,208,807 barrels over that for 1919, according to figures compiled for taxation purposes by the State Mining Bureau there. The figures show that 103,194,734 barrels of oil and more than 37,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas were produced in 1920 from an area of 94,567 proved acres. Since the passage of the Federal land leasing bill last February about 200,000 acres of Government land have been filed upon by more than 200 persons or companies under prospecting permits, according to R. E. Collum, State oil and gas inspector.

CURB MARKET GOING INDOORS IN A WEEK.



The curb market on Broad Street, New York, will be no more after June 27. The curb brokers' association will move into its new building then. For 35 years thousands of dollars have changed hands daily on this curb.

HOLLINGER MAY ADD TO REDUCTION PLANT

TIMMINS, June 18.—(Star Special)— Discussion is current on the street in connection with a further possible increase in the reduction plant on the Hollinger Consolidated. An average of from 3,200 to 3,300 tons daily has been achieved, and an increase of another 600 tons daily is considered reasonable to look forward to perhaps during the coming year. The crushing equipment at the Hollinger is adequate to handle between 4,000 and 4,500 tons daily, and with the addition of another ball mill the increase mentioned could be taken care of.

The optimism of J. S. Bache, president of the Dome Mines as well as Mr. De Pencier, general manager of the mine, is a feature which illustrates the strong position into which this big mine is developing.

Another factor of importance is the plan of the E. J. Lonyear interest to drill the sand plains west of Porcupine for the purpose of determining the nature of the underlying rock formation and the possibility of the occurrence of westerly continuations of the bold orebodies which are being developed in the Hollinger-McIntyre, Porcupine Crown-Schumacher and Porcupine V.N.T. section of the Porcupine field.

COBALT, June 18.—(Star Special)— There are many distinguished guests in Cobalt this week, comprising members and associates of the Ontario Mining Associations, one of the most powerful of industrial organizations in the Dominion. The silver mining field, while having suffered from the adverse market for the metal and the high cost of producing silver, is seen to be re-entering what promises to be another prosperous period of production.

There are still some closed down mines, but it is significent to note that the four leading mines are producing at full capacity. Costs are declining and the general situation seems to be approaching a condition under which some of the smaller producers will be able to re-open on a profitable basis.

SYDNEY WOOL SALES

LONDON, June 18. — (Special Star Cable).—Reports from Sydney say that the wool auctions sale has closed with 45,000 bales sold at auction and privately. There has been a good demand for all descriptions, except for the best quality of merinos. The coarse crossbreds were weaker.

"SILVER LINING" TO MARKET BLOW, N. Y. BELIEVES

While the securities markets have undergone some rather drastic liquidation, as well as a sizable amount of short seling, and the average individual during the past four weeks has become accustomed to the appearance of bad news each day, there is believed to be basis for the expectation that a "silver lining" is back of the present clouds of depression. This is the opinion of some of the most conservative and influential bankers of the Wall Street communitw, says Financial America.

There probably has not been a time in years when so many unfavorable rumors were afloat in the Street as at present. Some have had real basis, but in the main the exaggeration of the seriousness of this, that, or the other situation, brought up for discussion, has been appalling. The casual manner in which the names of institutions and firms has been mentioned in brokerage circles as "being in trouble," has been amazing, and has gone a long way toward creating a much greater feeling of unrest than the actual facts warrant.

Whe none confronts the great air of mystery that many of the supposidly well informed now maintain, it is about time for those sufficiently interested to seek first-hand information relative to the trpe conditions obtain. Present difficulties are not in the banking world. The new York banks today are sound and liquid. Nor is it a stock market difficulty. The fact that stocks have declined sharply does not indicate that thede is serious trouble in this respect, this being reflected in present aesy money rates.

It is purely the commercial and general business situation that is now and has been gradually bringing about the depressed condition of the securities markets, coupled with the aggressiveness of those who always are so unscrupulous as to attack "spots" that appear the most vulnerable.

It is no secret in well informed circles that there are millions of dollars tied up in so-called "frozen credits," not only here, but in all sections of the country and the world. It is not a secret that the banks are not going to endeavor to force payment of these loans until the clouds of depression have passed away. This is the most important factor in the situation.

The remedy, in the opinion of some of the leading bankers of Wall Street, will be found in the restoration of thrift. Because of the feeling of apprehension on the part of many, it is believed that the turning point in the right direction is not far away.a

Unquestionably the unsettling element in the Street was brought about in large measure by the developments incident to the Mercantile Bank of the Americas. This institution transacts a diversified business of banking all over the world and with the development of business depression because so heavily involved as to necessitate co-operation on the part of local as well as out-of-town bankers and banks in eliminating what might have been a serious situation. Happily, however, $55,000,000 was provided through a $20,000,000 assessment on its stockholders, and the creation of a $35,000,000 revolving credit participated in by a group of bankers headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. This naturally resulted in losses to the stockholders of the Mercantile Bank, but the totals mentioned in Wall Street circles as having been sustained are stated to be preposterous. A committee now has charge of the direction of affairs of the Mercantile institution and those best posted entertain every confidence that in due season the bank will emerge from present difficulties with minimum losses. The fact that the banks of the country are measuring the credit situation with a new yardstick and in conformity with newly created conditions is accepted with satisfaction in the financial community.

Livestock Raisers To Be Helped by Loan

CHICAGO, June 18.—(United Press)— Many live stock raisers of the country had been saved from possible bankruptcy today, following the formation of a $50,000,000 pool to help them out of financial difficulties. Details of the pool were being worked out today in conference of the leading bankers of Chicago.

According to the present plans, the operation of the pool will be directed by a practical banker and banks all over the country will be given the opportunity to contribute. Leading bankers met here today to frame the preliminaries of the pool. George Meyer, jr., managing director of the War Finance Corporation, and John R. Mitchell, member of the Federal Reserve Board, are here representing Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. Necessity of aiding live stock raisers arose when it became almost impossible for them to borrow money at their banks, because of the financial stringency.

CUBAN BURDENS AT PEAK; HELP BEING WITHHELD

"Cuba's burdens are at the peak," says the president of a well-known sugar company to The Wall Street Journal. "She has managed to shoulder them and is bearing up, although it is a difficult process under present conditions. Cuba needs aid from America, and, as he best customer deserves aid, but it has not been given. Such treatment seems hardly just.

"The peak has been reached because of low prices of sugar. Selling price of Cubans is now below cost of production. We paid the colonos or cane farmers for their cane on the basis of $0348 sugar prices recently. After we had manufactured the sugar from the cane we found the market such that there is difficulty in selling it even at a ruinous loss. Sugar at $0300 is a drug on the market.

"Such conditions cannot continue. This year the Cuban crop will run to 3,500,000 tons or more, but next year unless prices rise there will be a drastic curtailment. You cannot run a business long at a loss. Were the Cuban crop withdrawn from the American market next year the ruling price here would be closer to 30 cents than 3 cents.

"Cuba is not selling much sugar now, for there is practically no market. Many buyers are holding off, hoping for even lower prices, while others are using up sugar delivered on contracts entered into before the Cuban Sugar Commission existed. But sugar prices cannot go much lower. The grinding season is practically over and the sugar stocks are stored. Banks and the sugar companies are keeping their sugar holdings, waiting for the improvement in conditions. Most of the "distress sugars" have been sold, the stocks of those who must liquidate immediately. Other owners will not sell at the present losses unless absolutely forced to.

"Cuba could be helped by nothing so greatly as by American aid. Although she has so far struggled along without it, except through certain foreign banks having branches there, no concerted action has been taken either by the Government here or by New York bankers.

"There is talk of a loan of $100,000,000 by bankers here in Cuba. It has been talked of for some time, but nothing came of it. Cuba could use such funds to great advantage, and were it in the form of a credit or bonds guaranteed by the Cuban Government would greatly relieve the tightened money situation.

"This loan, with a revision of the banking system, and a revival of the demand for sugar, is the immediate need for the rebuilding of the island. The banking system should be modeled as much as possible after the Federal Reserve system of this country, and should be empowered to issue notes. The United States should approve such a plan and assist its operation. Its place in the re-establishing of Cuba on a firm basis, thus helping one of the best markets for American exports, is too important to be passed over."

NEW YORK, June 18. — Yesterday a petition to close the New York Stock Exchange on Saturday, July 2, preceding the fourth of July, was started on the floor of the Exchange and met ready response. A similar petition already is in circulation on the floor of the New York Cotton Exchange.

BANK HEAD SAYS ECONOMY SUREST CURE OF WORRY

At the annual meeting of the shareholders of La Banque Nationale covering the fiscal year ended April 30, last, the president of the institution R. Audette presented an address report dealing with the bank's year and the financial situation in general.

Mr. Audette stated that in the economical reconstruction which the war has imposed best results in overcoming difficulties is through economy. The report continues:—

"We will never preach enough this economical virtue. From the practice of this economy, money, as deposit, finds its way into banks and is distributed in loans to commerce, industry and agriculture, stimulating all the energies of the nation. It is generally admitted that, in this province, our principal source of riches is agriculture; the bank gives a special attention to its wants and we have to congratulate ourselves on the results. Agriculture in our province has, as a corollary and a source of considerable revenue, the working of our forests, the commerce of pulpwood and saw lumber. This contributes for a large part to the wealth of our farmers, who find in it employment in winter, the sale of their surplus of wood which they have on their land and the disposal of their products for the lumber camp during winter "chantiers." But lumber industry, as all other industries, feels now and has, for some months past, felt a considerable depression. Happily for us and our customers, we had, for a year past, decreased our advances in this line and only a few of them have stock unsold and diminished in value; the least recovery in building and manufacture will stimulate the sales and clear them.

"We believe that the year now on will be commercially and industrially a difficult one, that the readjustment already commenced will reach its maximum, this year, and not without causing liquidations, more or less injurious. Prudence is more necessary than ever. The provident ones, who during the years of plenty through which we have just passed, have economized, will be well recompensed for having followed such a line of conduct: they will be in a position to bear the decrease in the value of their stock and the other losses which times as those we go through carry them.

"During the year, the difference of exchange in favor of the United States has been very high, an average of 12 per cent to 15 per cent. It is over $100,000,000 paid to the United States in complete loss, which we would not have paid, if the balance of trade between the two countries had been even. The means to be taken to have this state of things cease have been repeated everywhere and they are still the same: more production to sell everywhere, specially in the United States, to buy the least possible from them, only what is absolutely wanted, and to buy, in preference, Canadian goods. There is still, we believe, more to do, that is, to buy what is not produced here from European countries, where exchange is in our favor. We believe, if our commercial men and industrials would inform themselves more, they would find in those European countries a large part of the goods wanted and at better conditions than they obtain in United States.

"The General Manager has made, this year, what could not be made during the war; a complete inspection of our Paris branch. He was happy to find the good administration which prevailed and the satisfactory increase that the branch brings every year to the development of the Bank.

"The year has been a fructuous one and, if you compare the statement of last year with the one of this year, you will see considerable progress has been made. Our assets, of $68,675,400 last year, are now at $75,052,900 an increase of $6,377,500. Deposits are at $57,167,700, an increase of $8,707,500 over last year. There is an increase on nearly all the items of the statement. The profit and loss account shows that our profits have been of $544,945, a small diminution on last year's result. The disposal that we we have made of those profits will have, no doubt, your approval. We have been enabled to pay, for the first time, our annual dividend on a 12 per cent basis, add to our reserve fund $100,000 and make the other appropriations which have just been read.

"The necessity of enlarging our premises at Quebec being more and more felt and pressing, caused by the increase of our business, we could not any longer delay the repairs and additions to be made to our building; we hope that, in the course of the year, we will have suitable offices for ourselves and offices for rent enough to have this property not an expense, but productive of a revenue. The bank premises account of the bank increases every year. It is a necessary increase which we cannot prevent; our branches, which increase in number every year, compel us to buy or build. We put all our ability in the buying or building of these properties, so that the cost will not be too high and the amount shown in our statement will not be more than could be realized. Every year, we apply a reasonable amount for depreciation, as shown by our Profit and Loss account."

ATLANTIC SUGAR HAS CHANGED FISCAL YEAR

A circular has been issued to the shareholders of the Atlantic Sugar Refineries, Limited, telling them of a change effected in the fiscal year of the company. Heretofore the company year has been ended on April 30. Under the new by-law the year will be extended to conform with the calendar year and will end on December 31, next. This means that the company will continue the period to be reported on until the end of this calendar year when a financial statement will be issued covering the period from May 1, 1920 to December 31, 1921, or 20 months in all.

Mr. McGibbon, commenting on the change told The Star that the move is one that has long been contemplated as it will bring the company year into conformity with the sugar crop year, the old crop finishing in November and the new crop coming in November.

As regards the company and its operations Mr. McGibbon stated that the expensive raws which the company had on hand when the big slump in the sugar market came have been fully written down, and these stocks will be run off in a short time now which will enable the company to re-enter the market.

The refinery at St. Johns is working at full capacity of twelve hundred thousand pounds a day. The company has been particularly fortunate in building up an export business which is proving most attractive.

Between May 1 and June 1 some 30,000,000 pounds of sugar were shipped to the export market in England.

The circular reviews the big slump in the sugar market and says that arrangements for financing the company over the period of price adjustment have been successfully consummated, while bank loans have been materially reduced. The world sugar market is still abnormal as the result of the sugar crisis in Cuba. In reference to a financial statement the circular points out that great difficulty would be experienced in presenting any figures at this time, and that such would be misleading, being necessarily largest estimated. Domestic business is still below normal. The plant has been fully maintained.

GRAIN SEEDING COMPLETE

FREDERICTON, N.B., June 18.—The New Brunswick Department of Agriculture's semi-monthly crop report follows: A summary of the reports of crop correspondents reporting to the department on June 15th, affirms that seeding and planting is now complete. The acreage in crop is fully equal to that of last year. Grains have suffered somewhat from lack of rain, as well as the pastures, clover and hay meadows, particularly in the northern part of the province. Recent rains have proved beneficial. Milk production is above the average for this season in the counties of King's, Westmoreland, Albert and Kent, though only normal in other counties. Labor appears plentiful, with wages $35 to $45 per month with board.

EXPERIMENTAL POULTRY FARMS PROVE SUCCESS

The Experimental Farms of the Dominion are doing some excellent work in poultry breeding. After four or five years, birds and strains have been produced of exceedingly high productive capacity. At Kentville, N.S., eleven breeding pens contain birds that in their pullet year laid an average of 197 eggs, the highest bird laying 270 eggs in 52 weeks. At this station a Barred Rock pullet laid 104 eggs in 104 days. In sections where a few years ago ten or a dozen eggs a year from a hen were a rarity, there are now hundreds that run from 153 to 250. In the Eastern Townships, Que., 266 eggs have been reached and from 150 to 200 is a common record.

In the Prairie Provinces the Experimental Farms have reached high record. At Indian Head, Sask., last year 105 pullets had an average of 163.7 eggs, the highest being 202. At Lethbridge, Alta., the average production has increased two or three times over what it was nine or ten years ago. New Brunswick has a similar tale to tell, one hen at Fredericton reaching 256 eggs in a year. British Columbia, however, takes the palm. At the Agassiz Experimental Farm, 200 eggs are common and from 250 to 270 are not rare. At the Vancouver Island station 200 pullets gave an average of 195.97, 82 going above 200.

The high production of 300 eggs in a year has been reached for one pullet. Hens that cannot lay 200 in a twelve month are not wanted and no cockerel is retained unless his mother laid 250 eggs in her pullet year. It should be noted that high class breeding stocks and eggs are available to the public from the Experimental Farms. This opportunity is being well taken advantage of, the demand for pedigree cockerels, through which the best egg laying results are obtained, far exceeding the supply.

Laurentian Power's New Bond Offering

Nesbitt, Thompson & Co., investment bankers, are making a public offering of $1,00,000 Laurentian Power Co., Limited 6 per cent first and refunding mortage bonds, due January 1st 1936. The capitalization of the company is as follows

	Authorized.	Issued.
Common Stock	$2,000,000	$2,000,000
7% Cumulative Preferred Stock	350,000	350,000
6% Bonds due 1936	2,000,000	1,400,000

Of the $1,400,000 bonds outstanding $400,000 are held in escrow to retire a like amount of underlying 5% bonds due 1931. The remaining bonds in the treasury can only be issued to the extent of 66 2-3% of the cost of additional capital expenditure, and then only if the net earnings for the preceding year are at least one and one half times the interest on bonds outstanding and to be issued.

The company's earnings from one contract alone—according to report of Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co.—for their year ending 1921, amount to over $172,000 or twice the bond interest.

The valuation of the property is conservatively fixed at $2,400,000 or $1,000,000 more or twice the bond interest.

The issue price is 88½ and accrued interest to yield 7¼% principal and interest payable in New York funds.

The record of Canadian hydro-electric bonds has been particularly good and the investor is turning to this type of security, owing to the fact that their earnings have not been effected by the period of defiation which industry in this country is experiencing today.

The business of a Power Company has not the problems of transportation or labor to contend with; nor have they any inventories to be marked down, and their business is on a cash basis. These are features which are rather interesting to the investor under present conditions.

Reductions of 22 cents a hundred pounds on transcontinental freight rates on oranges and 18½ cents on lemon, by November 1 have been promised by the Southern Pacific Company, the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe, and the Los Angeles and Salt Lake railroads to citrus fruit shippers if they abandon plans for further development of water transportation facilities, it is reported here.

Technical Rally is Due in Wall Street

In commenting on the New York market situation, W. W. Price, of E. and C. Randolph, says:—

"Industrial averages, now nearly even with December's lows, dispel illusions of quick returning prosperity. Mex. Pete, has recently furnished most of the excitement, but those who point out this stock as a prime cause of wide liquidation not only would multiply the possible importance of Mexican Pete's actions, but forget how independent a mover it can be. Prices of oil, sugar, steel, autos, shipping, and now of tobacco stocks plainly discount further general business unsettlement.

"Although it is by no means certain that security liquidation is at an end, a technical rally is, of course, possible at any time, with the more speculative issues enjoying the quickest rebound. That a rally has not already come proves that liquidation has been both genuine and urgent. The conservative trader will probably have time to average on promising present commitments, and to pick up others he will wish to hold for the long pull. Continued readjustment to line up various classes of securities in the order of their future values is promised for some time to come. Even if stocks could be expected to advance pretty much together, the market would probably not exhibit a sustained important advance after such a decline as it has been through without a preceding period of backing, filling and slow accumulation."

NO ORGANIZED SELLING OF WHEAT IN FRANCE

PARIS, via Wireless, June 18. — No co-operative or organized selling of wheat and other grain exists in France, it was disclosed today, in connection with dispatches sent to the Chicago Tribune telling of the agricultural and commercial methods of France.

Before the war wheat prices were regulated by the Chicago and Antwerp quotations. During the war the Government fixed the price and handled all imports, prohibiting private importations. The new Government decree provides for free foreign trading and importation of wheat after August 1. Since importation was prohibited, the farmers have been selling grain to the flour mill brokers who visit the farms, buying grain direct at the best bargain they could make, and shipping it to the mills. Part of the harvest was sold by farmers driving to the nearest town, showing samples around the commercial exchange, and selling at the best offers. This grain also goes to the flour mills, of course.

Andre Vilgrain, formerly Under-Secretary of State for Revictualment, under Clemenceau's regime, who bought for the Government during the war—chiefly Australian and American wheat—has been arrested charged with grafting in wheat purchase contracts and with buying up all the mills in France. The importance of owning the mills is because the mills regulate prices.

Western Grain Crops Make Good Progress

Merchants Bank Western Crop Report says:—During the past week sufficient rain has fallen in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and nothern half of Alberta and growing conditions have been ideal. The southern half of Alberta from a point about half way between Edmonton and Calgary needs rain.

While the growing crop in this territory has not deteriorated to any great extent as yet, a continuance of present conditions will result in injury. On the whole, the crop has made excellent progress since the last report. Grasshoppers are hatching out in large numbers in all the southern half of the three Prairie Provinces but the farmers are well organized and, with the assistance of the Departments of Agriculture and the local municipalities in supplying poison material, are actively engaged in combatting the pest. No material damage to date is reported.

Formers are not actively engaged in summer following operations and in breaking new land. Feed is plentiful in the pastures and at a result livestock is in good condition.

TRADE REVIVAL CHIEF OBSTACLE LACK OF DEMAND

MINNEAPOLIS, June 18. — "The time has come to 'cash' the present, instead of 'discounting the future,' as the American people have been doing for some time past," said Francis H. Sisson, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Co., of New York, in an address, here before the American Institute of Banking.

"For more than a year the American people have been discounting the future," said Mr. Sissons. "The time has arrived when they should begin to 'cash' the present. There is ample evidence to indicate that many of the readjustments which we have undergone in the last 12 months have practically been completed, and, although there will inevitably be further readjustment in other directions, we are rapidly succeeding in laying a foundation for the revival of business on a sane, sound and stable basis.

"We are witnessing the repetition of a familiar experience in the accumulation of bank reserves co-incident with retarded business activity. Such conditions ordinarily preceede a period of declining interest rates, which in turn tend to stimulate borrowings for productive purposes This reaction is not altogether automatic, however, for the cost of borrowed money is but one of sevefal elements in the general cost of producing goods. A downward trend of commodity prices and wages may wholly offset the stimulating effect of cheapened money, with receding interest rates accompanied for a time by further depression in business. Accordingly, it should not be expected that the decline in interest rates which has been recorded will suffice of itself to relieve business of the depression through which is now passing. And it is better that the liquidation should be thorough than that a premature, partial revival, which could not be sustained, should engender false hopes respecting an immediate return of general prosperity.

"Finally, let us not forget that a bank rate cannot create capital and credit. Only productivity and saving can do so.

"Notwithstanding that there is still considerable 'frozen' credit in this country, the principal economic problem is not the credit situation, although many, especially in agricultural districts, appear to think so. The chief obstacle to a general revival of business is the difficulty of developing an adequate demand for goods.

"Many buyers seem to be pursuing a hand-to-mouth purchasing policy in the hope that prices generally will recede to the pre-war level. Apparently they fail to understand that it is of little consequence at what level prices a re stabilized—so long as they are stabilized, which is the important object. And stabilization will come when there is proper adjustment of various commodity prices one to another and between costs of production and distribution of commodities and their prices to consumers.

"That which would help this country most of all at present would be a national movement to buy not 'until it hurts,' but until it helps."

Government Reports On Oil and Coal Areas

The summary report of the Geological Survey ,1920, Part B, contains descriptions of the geological formations and of the structural conditions existing on Mackenzie river, north of Norman, and on the north shore of Great Slave lake. This includes the area in which the oil was struck in 1920. The report also contains notes on boring operations in Alberta and Saskatchewan and on the geological features met in the different localities. The results of investigations in the coal fields of the Upper Elk River Valley, British Columbia, and a consideration of the lower seams of the Souris coal field of southeastern Saskatchewan are presented. The report is accompanied by geological maps and sections. A copy may be had from the Director, Geological Survey, Ottawa.

Spot Coffee Demand Better; Prices Firm

NEW YORK, June 18.—In reviewing the coffee situation E. & C. Randolph says: The markets have been irregular; the spot demand for actual coffee has been better and prices show an advance for nearly every kind; the Brazil markets have also displayed continued strength, especially the speculative movement on their exchanges. Most of the week, the future market in New York was firmer and higher, but has since lost its gain. Receipts in Brazil continue large and cannot now be expected to fall off, as the reports are that the Bragil crops are early and that the present receipts are quite largely of new crop. The present crop is turning out very much in excess of the estimates which for Rio and Santos were 16,000,000 bags while receipts are now over 13,000,000 bags with a half month still to be counted, and will probably reach 13¾ million bags for Rio and Santos. As mentioned last week, the estimates for the coming Brazil crop for 1919-22 are from 9¾ to 11 million bags and we are inclined to believe these expectations will turn out nearly correct.

Trading on the New York Coffee Exchange has been fairly active, and with an increased interest displayed. The outsiders however are not much in evidence and are missed, and probably in part explain why our market has not given a better response to the firm and advancing future markets in Brazil. Our future market is much below a replacing basis and the indications now point to a gradual advance and purchases on reactions should prove profitable. Today the market closed fairly steady at from 23 to 28 points decline from last Tuesday's close. For the week the Santos future market shows changes equal to 29 advance to 11 points decline and the Rio futures an advance of from 9 to 32 points. Both the Brazil markets are at about their highest prices. Today our future market turned weak caused by profit taking and lower firm offers from Santos. A reaction in Brazil would be natural after their excessive advance but our response has been so limited that a decided decline cannot be expected.

PULPWOOD CONSUMPTION

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Pulpwood consumption of United States in 1920 exceeded greatest previous record, in 1919, by 636,000 cords, or nearly 12 per cent, according to a preliminary estimate based on statistics of 253 known pulpwood establishments to Forest Service of Department of Agriculture. These consumed 6,114,072 cords of pulpwood at average cost of $19.03, totalling $116,493,720.

At least 18 per cent of wood used was imported. Nearly 7 per cent more domestic spruce was consumer than ever before, and imports of this species are steadily increasing; so also are imports of poplar, but use of domestic poplar has fallen off 42 per cent since 1916.

Wood pulp production: 1920, production tons, 3,821,704 valuation total, $275,941,213; per ton valuation, $72.20. For 1918: 3,313,861; $174,570,645; $52.68. 1917: 3,509,939; $150,902,280; $43.33.

The 1920 production exceeds 1918 by 15 per cent. Sulphite pulp produced exceeded mechanical in 1920 by less than 2,000 tons. Ratio of imports to domestic production of wood pulp increased nearly 6 per cent between 1918 and 1920.

High prices paid for pulpwood and for labor in 1920 are reflected in soaring valuation of pulp, which increased $19.52 per ton or 37 per cent, in two years.

OIL RUMORS ABSURD

MEXICO CITY, June 18.—Reports of the depletion of Mexican oil fields were described as "absurd and unfounded," last night by the Treasury and Commerce and Industry Departments of the Mexican Government. They made public figures showing that since 1901 production of oil in Mexico has constantly increased, and stated that it was estimated the total output for the present year would be more than 200,000,000 barrels. The total amount of crude petroleum on hand in Mexico at the end of 1920 was estimated at 8,826,639 barrels. The production for the first five months of the present year was given as follows: January, 16,268,020; February, 15,063,864; March, 17,841,867; April, 18,614,790; May approximately 19,000,000.

CUT AUTOMOBILE PRICES AT WRONG TIME IS OPINION

The "New York Commercial" says that automobile cuts have been made at the wrong time of the season, according to the opinion of the dealers. The majority reported fair business prior to the general reductions, and the general belief is that the reductions should not have been made in the face of a rising market, but during the month of July, when there is little business, even in the best of times.

Both the Dodge and Chandler agencies reported that their sales prior to the price reductions were rapidly approaching normal, and other agencies made similar statements. They all, however, looked for a heavy slump beginning the latter part of this month and extending through July. It is the belief that the effect of the reductions will have worked out by that time and that the usual depression will prevail. However, the reductions may possibly cause the opening of the fall season, which begins in August, a week or two earlier.

A sudden flurry following the reductions has been reported by the various dealers, but its continuance is not looked for. A. G. Southworth, of the Buick agency, explained that "the price reductions are bringing out the early fall buyers who have been expecting these cuts and holding off until they did come. On the whole, the reductions will create no new market or add new buyers to the market, other than those who have already been sold on the car proposition."

An especially noticeable factor in the present market is that few cars are being bought for cash. The majority of sales are being made on a time basis, in many instances the notes being payable within ten months. On all the time payment systems a third of the purchase price is paid in cash, and the balance in notes on the company or on a finance company. These are discounted at the bank by the dealer and the slight additional charge is borne by the purchaser.

One of the noticeable features in connection with the price reductions on automobiles is that none of the manufacturers has in any way cheapened parts of cars, or reduced the costs of extras.

BANK OF FRANCE REPORT

Leaving to the credit of Profit and Loss a balance of		$ 35,456.92

The year has been a fructuous one and, if you compare the statement of last year with the one of this year, you will see considerable progress has been made. Our assets, of $68,675,600 last year, are now at $75,052,900 an increase of $6,377,500. Deposits are at $57,167,700, an increase of $8,707,500 over last year. There is an increase on nearly all the items of the statement. The Profit and Loss account shows that our profits have been of $544,945, a small diminution on last year's result. The dividend that we have made out of the profits will have, no doubt, your approval. We have been enabled to pay, for the first time, our annual dividend on a 12% basis, add to our reserve fund $100,000 and make the other appropriations which have just been read.

The necessity of enlarging our premises at Quebec being more and more felt and pressing, caused by the increase of our business, we could not any longer delay the repairs and additions to be made to our building; we hope that, in the course of the year, we will have suitable offices for ourselves and offices for rent enough to have this property not an expense, but productive of a revenue. The bank premises account of the bank increases every year. It is a necessary increase which we cannot prevent; our branches, which increase in number every year, compel us to buy or build. We put all our ability in the buying or building of these properties, so that the cost will not be too high and the amount shown in our statement will not be more than could be realized. Every year, we apply a reasonable amount for depreciation, as shown by our Profit and Loss account.

During the year, we have made a great loss by the death of one of our directors, Mr. the commander Victor Châteauvert, whose long and faithful services have been so useful to the Bank; his integrity, his experience, his good judgment made him a valuable director and his social qualities endeared him the more. We had chosen, to replace him, Mr. Adjutor Rivard, who would have been a precious counsellor for the Bank and whose passage amongst us, though short, has allowed us to judge how great was our loss when he was called to the Bench as Judge of the Court of Appeals of the Province of Quebec, which entailed his resignation as a Bank director. To replace him, we called upon one of the largest shareholders of the Bank, Mr. A. B Dupuis, whose value as a man of experience and of good counsel we knew, having had him as director before, during long years.

You will be called upon to approve, by resolutions, subscriptions in favor of Laval University and in favor of the College de Ste-Anne-de-la-Pocatière, one for $50,000 and the other for $10,000, payable in five equal, annual instalments. Your directors, in voting these subscriptions, believed that it was their duty towards the institution and the public to contribute to those good works of education and instruction, so as to maintain and increase in this part of our province the knowledge and the intellectual strength of our fellow-citizens, being convinced that advantage will accrue even from a financial and commercial point of view, if our fellow-citizens are put in a position to compete on an equal footing with those of the other parts of the province. We are the only banking institution having is head-office in Quebec and having nearly all its shareholders in this part of the Province. We are, more than all the other institutions, interested in its progress. Those institutions which we are helping are, amongst all others, the most deserving and at the same time the most beneficial and necessary.

In the economical reconstruction which the war has imposed upon us, of all the means suggested to arrive at the best results, none is more efficacious and we may say the only one which is entirely so, is economy: the most solid basis on which can repose our economical construction. We will never preach enough this economical virtue, which, in a way makes, the others flourish and from which flows a people's prosperity. From the practice of this economy, money, as deposit, finds its way into banks and is distributed in loans to commerce, industry and agriculture, stimulating all the energies of the nation. It is generally admitted that, in this province, our principal source of riches is agriculture; the Bank gives a special attention to its wants and we have to congratulate ourselves on the results. Our farmers, and we cannot cease to repeat it, find in our Bank all the reasonable help wanted for their progress and the growth of their farms. Agriculture in our province has, as a corollary and a source of considerable revenue, the working of our forests, the commerce of pulp-wood and saw lumber. This contributes for a large part to the wealth of our farmers, who find in it employment in winter, the sale of their surplus of wood which they have on their land and the disposal of their products for the lumber camp during winter "chantiers." But lumber industry, as all other industries, feels now and has, for some months past, felt a considerable depression. Happily for us and our customers, we had, for a year past, decreased our advances in this line and only a few of them have stock unsold and diminished in value; the least recovery in building and manufacture will stimulate the sales and clear them.

We believe that the year now on will be commercially and industrially a difficult one, that the readjustment already commenced will reach its maximum, this year, and not without causing liquidations, more or less injurious. Prudence is more necessary than ever. The provident ones, who during the years of plenty through which we have just passed, have economized, will be well recompensed for having followed such a line of conduct: they will lie in a position to bear the decrease in the value of their stock and the other losses which times as those we go through carry with them.

During the year, the difference of exchange in favor of the United States has been very high, an average of 12% to 15%. It is over $100,000,000 paid to the United States in complete loss, which we would not have paid, if the balance of trade between the two countries had been even. The means to be taken to have this state of things cease have been repeated everywhere and they are still the same: more production to sell everywhere, specially in the United States, to buy the least possible from them, only what is absolutely wanted, and to buy, in preference, Canadian goods. There is still, we believe once to do, that is, to buy what is not produced here from European countries where exchange is in our favor. We believe, if our commercial men and industrials would inform themselves more, they would find in those European countries a large part of the goods wanted and at better conditions than they obtain in United States.

The General Manager has made, this year, what could not be made during the war, a complete inspection of our Paris branch. He was happy to find the good administration which prevailed in the satisfactory manner that the branch brings every year to the development of the Bank.

We express with pleasure to our employees, our appreciation of their good will and their zeal in the service of the institution.

R. AUDETTE, President. N. LAVOIE, General Manager.

In accordance with sub-sections 19 and 20 of Section 56 of the Bank Act, 1913, and as auditor for La Banque Nationale, I have the honor to submit the following report:

I have compared the above balance sheet with the books and vouchers kept at the Head-Office of La Banque Nationale and with the certified returns from the different branches to April 30th, 1921; I have checked the cash and verified the securities and other valuables at the Head-Office and at four of the principal branches of the Bank; and, after having obtained all the necessary information and explanations, I certify that in my opinion, this balance sheet represents a true and correct view of the state of the Bank's affairs up to April 30th, 1921.

I have, in addition to the above mentioned, during the current year, checked and verified the cash and securities at different branches and Head-Office of the Bank and found them to be in agreement with the entries on the books of the Bank relating thereto.

I may also mention that the different officials of the Bank have given me, to my satisfaction, all the required informations concerning the Bank's affairs and transactions which have come under my notice, and I consider them within the power of the B

POISON MERCHANT IN KABER MURDER

Woman Charged with Murder Said to Supply Deadly Medicine

CLEVELAND, O., June 17—(Associated Press) — Country Prosecutor Stanton continued today his investigation of alleged activities of Mrs. Erminia Colavito, under indictment for first degree murder in the death of Daniel F. Kaber, in dispensing "medicine" similar to that which she is alleged to have admitted she sold to Mrs. Eva Katherine Kaber, widow of the dead man, and which Mrs. Kaber is said to have administered to her husband to "cure him" of alleged bad habits.

A woman whose name Prosecutor Stanton refused to divulge, late last night identified Mrs. Colavito as the woman who dispensed "medicine" to her six-year-old sister four years ago, following which the child died.

Mrs. Colavito admitted giving the child the "medicine" the prosecutor said, but denied that it caused her death. The woman told Mr. Stanton, she said, that the child suffered an attack of convulsions upon taking the first dose, and died within a week.

The city chemist, upon completion of the final analysis of "medicine" Mrs. Colavito is alleged to have sold Pasquale Julian to "cure" his brother, declared that it contained poison.

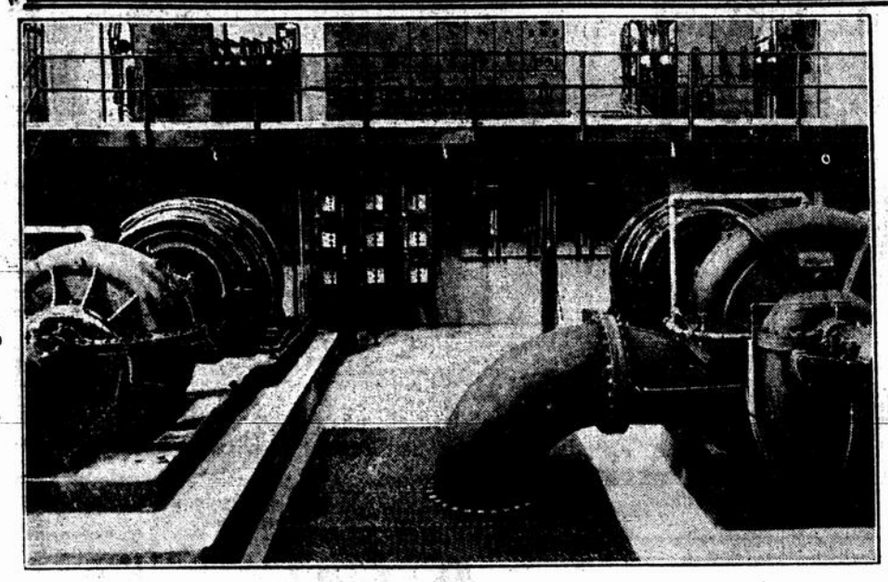
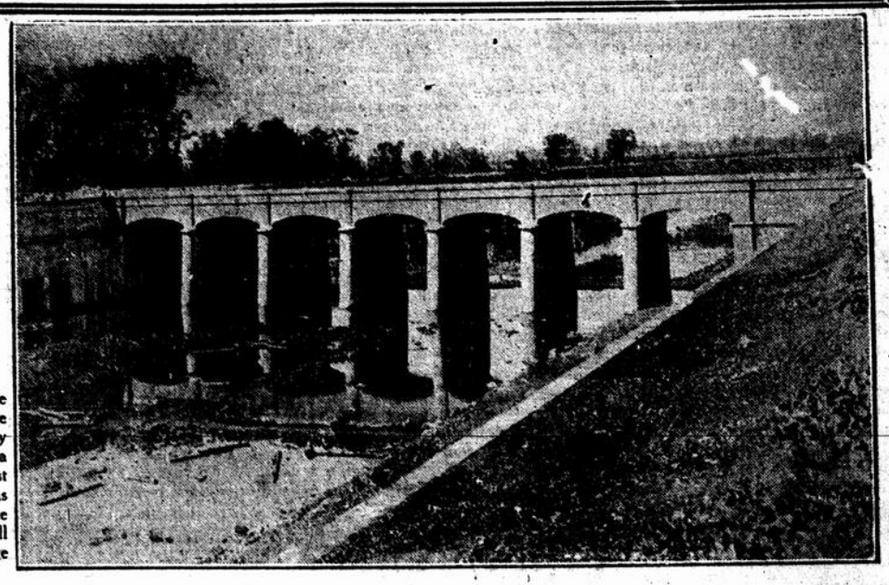
CITY AT LAST GETS RETURN ON MILLIONS SPENT ON AQUEDUCT



The left hand picture shows two of the electric pumps which have taken the place of the eight steam pumps at the Pumping Station. On the left is the DeLaval pump, and on the right the Worthington, each driven by Westinghouse Motors. Each pumps better than 32,000,000 gallons a day. The centre picture shows where some of the millions spent in past years went. The concrete retaining wall should be a smooth curve—it has been pushed out at all angles, in some cases as much as ten feet. The Montreal Water Board is having these embankments cut back and the wall thrown down as a protection to them. On the right is the Crawford bridge and dam, midway between the St. Lawrence and the pumping station.



Those who turn on taps in their residences, and get an abundance of fresh water, have little idea of the gigantic plant that has to be kept operating day and night in order to provide the necessary supply. If they did they would show some appreciation of the men who are making possible the continuity of a supply as free from harmful bacteria as science can make it.

Some years ago the idea was conceived of digging a big ditch from the St. Lawrence river below the Lachine rapids, to carry the water to the pumping station at Atwater avenue. The old canal, which had been supplanted by an iron conduit, was taken for the line of the new aqueduct, large tracts of land were purchased, and the work commenced. Two, three, five, seven millions of dollars were taken from the civic treasury and spent, and the citizens at the end of the period had nothing to show for it except a huge ditch, a portion of which had concrete retaining walls that did not retain, but which had been pushed three, five, and even ten feet out into the bed of the aqueduct. There was no inlet, and no outlet for the water, and citizens felt that their millions had been thrown away. Wonderful power developments were promised, but all that resulted from the many contracts let were law suits and costly arbitrations.

This was the state of things when the Administrative Commission came into control of civic affairs, and fortunately for the citizens they realized the necessity of something being done to prevent the millions that had been spent becoming a complete loss and set about a study of the whole situation. They saw what the body of ratepaying engineers had suggested as a solution, and compared it with what experts from across the border had declared was the minimum possible expenditure. They decided to form the Montreal Water Board, composed of A. E. Doucet, Director of Public Works, as chairman, Walter J. Francis and Co., and the firm of R. S. and W. S. Lea. This Board made a complete survey of what had been done, and then prepared their plans to complete the work in such a manner that at a minimum expenditure the water supply of Montreal would be assured for ever—as long as the St. Lawrence River flows.

WHAT VISITORS SAW.

The progress that the Water Board have made during a year of work was seen recently, when a score of citizens, comprising members of the Water Board, the Administrative Commission, Chief Engineer Chas. J. DesBaillets, Supt. Theriot, of the Waterworks Department, Dr. S. Boucher, and representatives of the press, made a tour of inspection from the inlet to the distribution mains at the pumping station.

Commencing at LaSalle Bridge — that structure which was started during the war period, was to have cost $200,000, and which costing over a million dollars had been undertaken and dropped by two contractors and eventually finished by the city — the visitors saw the three great iron gates, which will hold back the floodwaters of the St. Lawrence, but which are so counterbalanced that one man can easily raise them.

On the inland side of the bridge are evidences of the faulty work of the past. The foot-thick concrete retaining wall which had been built on a nice curve has been pushed out at all angles—the only remedy was to break off the slabs about ten feet down. This was done with dynamite sticks placed in holes two feet apart. The whole fifty foot strips of reinforced concrete were then bent backwards and now form a protection for the banks.

On either side of the big ditch at the southern end steam shovels and drags were at work cutting off the top burden of the banks, so as to relieve the pressure on the remaining walls and constructing earth embankments lined with stone protection. The contractor for this work is G. L. Campbell, and the cost is put at $125,780.

Further down are the Latour and Knox bridges, solidly-built concrete structures which will eventually take a reinforced concrete super-structure. This year, however, there will be only a timber superstructure suitable for light traffic. The piers are already above the water line, so that the change can be made without trouble.

Along the southern side of the big ditch, which is 160 feet wide at the top and 120 feet at its base, and allows for a depth of over twenty-two feet of water, Doheny, Quinlan & Robertson are building the remainder of the gravity wall to the Crawford Dam, at a cost of $151,850. They have already completed two thousand feet and have another 4,000 feet to do before the water can be let into the western part of the aqueduct. This firm also built the two bridges at a cost of $43,800.

THE TURNING POINT.

The Crawford dam and bridge is a most imposing structure. Here it is that British Columbia pine logs, 16 inches square will be let down through slots in the paving of the bridge and form an effective barrier to the water, turning it through two large inlet chambers into the lateral conduit until such time as the whole of the aqueduct is completed. With the water in the western portion of the aqueduct, and turned into the lateral conduit at Crawford dam, the city supply will be assured up to this point, and as there is a greater head of water at this poin tthan in the conduit, and much less friction, the quantity of water flowing through the conduit will be appreciably increased, and the loss of force reduced by half. This dam and bridge was built by the Atlas Construction Co. at a cost of $130,000. The whole of the western section will be completed by the end of August and the water turned in from the St. Lawrence then for all time.

Below the Crawford bridge there has not been much done as yet. The Atlas Construction Co. has the contract for the sum of $491,000, and during the next year they will slope back the banks, and put in the necessary stone protection, to preserve the enbankments. A reinforced concrete bridge is to be built on the Verdun asylum property while the piers for a heavy traffic bridge will be erected at Monk Boulevard, although the superstructures will not be added until later on. Piers for the Woodland bridge, and the Church street bridge approach will also be constructed before the water is let into the eastern section of the aqueduct, while the gatehouse at the filtration plant is at present being enlarged to take care of the maximum flow of water.

At the waterworks the old machine shop has been demolished, and the Water Board staff are constructing a spillway to regulate the water in the aqueduct, while the old wheel house—relic of the ancient days when the water was pumped to the higher levels by water wheels—is being prepared for installation, in later years, of a small power plant which will aid in keeping the quantity of power consumed below the peak load on which the city has contracted with the Montreal Light Heat and Power Co. at $25 per horse power per annum. The plant proposed is for from two to three thousand horsepower.

SAVE $500,000.

Perhaps the greatest change and improvement made by the Water Board, so far as actual present benefits are concerned, is in the pumping station itself. In the place of eight steam pumps, requiring a dozen or more boilers to keep them going, each pumping about 12,000,000 gallons a day, liable to drops in pressure through bad coal or indifferent firing, liable also to go out of commission through strikes by stokers, coal passers, oilers or engineers, there are two compact electric pumps whirring merrily around through the agency of Westinghouse motors, each pumping more than 32,000,000 gallons of water a day. Instead of a hundred men being engaged at one thing or another to pump the city's water supply, and the place filled with smoke and vapor, there are half a dozen able and span electrical engineers, working in two men shifts of eight hours each, in a spotlessly clean pump room looking after the whole works, which include a third electric pump in an adjoining room pumping from 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 gallons a day. Instead of burning 200 tons of coal a day and employing over a hundred men, the city is consuming 4,600 horsepower of electric current a year, employing six men, and saving the ratepayers no less than $500,000 every year—truly a wonderful transformation. The two large pumps were supplied by the Co., while the smaller pump was purchased from Allis Chalmers, the latter being driven by a General Electric motor.

Later on the 30,000,000 gallons steam pump, which was such a great help during the waterworks strike, is to be converted into an electric pump, and then the city will have four electric pumps with a capacity of more than 105,000,000 gallons a day at its service, more than sufficient to supply its wants for many years to come. A new pumping station will be built later on near the filtration plant to which these electric pumps will be transferred and room provided for seven more, so with the aqueduct full, a twelve-unit pumping station and an enlarged filtration plant, the water supply of the whole Island of Montreal could easily be ensured. The switching equipment was purchased from the Canadian General Electric Co. and the whole works was installed under the direction and on the planes of the Water Board. The plans for the new pumping station will be ready in a month, and the plans for the enlarged filtration plant are also under way.

The visitors spent an interesting time in the filtration plant watching the mechanical and natural sand filters being operated, and any citizen has only to be at the station when the sand beds are being cleaned—every three hours—to see the enormous quantity of vegetable matters that is filtered from the seventy-odd million gallons of water the city consumes every twenty-four hours.

The next big task of the Water Board is to modernise the system of distribution and provide adequate reservoirs, but as this will cost about fifteen millions of dollars, that is a matter for the future new administration to authorize the Water Board to undertake, although everything possible is being got ready now.

HAS NEW JAPANESE INDUSTRY MADE COSTLY PEARLS MERE DROSS?

When is a pearl not a pearl—that is, considered as gem? What is a pearl, anyway? Much excitement among pearl owners and dealers has been caused by the reiteration of these queries as the result of sensational statements made in London by both those who deny that the production of pearls by culture (and therefore presumably in any desired quantity) of the highest possible quality has been achieved in Japan. These statements have caused almost a panic in the foreign pearl market.

The American market is less dismayed. Dr. George F. Nunz, probably the world's greatest gem expert, of Tiffany's, and the Bureau of Fisheries, have denied that the pearls produced by the Japanse culture process compare with genuine or "natural" pearls and the Jewelers' Circular, most important of American jewelers' trade weeklies, has given assurances that the intentionally produced pearls differ from those always known as genuine, although for generations it has been known that all pearls are the result of the introduction of a foreign substance under the shell of the pearl oyster. This discovery was made more than sixty years ago.

In the opinion of some American experts the present excitement is due to clever propaganda work by the Japanese house of Mikimoto. It seems to be the belief of some that this firm wishes to establish a market for its cheap and intentionally artificially produced pearls and is therefore striving to give them a standing of absolute equality with the pearls which ever have been known as "natural" although, in fact, all pearls are "unnatural," that it, due to the presence of the foreign substance under the oyster shell.

The following article from one of The Star's special correspondents in England tells the whole story as it is known in London, and is accompanied by the only photograph so far obtained for publication of the workers in the new Japanese industry of "pearl culture."

By ARTHUR DRYSDALE.

LONDON, June 18. — Are you the owner of a stunning pearl necklace that is your most prized possession and that you think will tide you over a bad time, should a bad time ever come?

Have you visions of realizing a small fortune from it should you decide to sell?

Are you, Madame, if madame you be, happy because your "rope" of pearls is the finest jewelry in your own and makes all the other women envious of you?

Don't be too sure! It is possible that the gems for which your hubby paid thousands of dollars are really only worth the present price of a pair of shoes or a bottle of "medicinal" whisky.

If so, it may be the fault of a quiet little Japanese merchant named Kokichi Mikimoto, who has thrown a bombshell into the European pearl market through exploiting his discovery of making oysters produce "pearls" by forced labor in double quick time.

"The Great Pearl Mystery," as it is called here, has caused one of the major sensations of the year in London and Paris.

It vies with the latest news from Germany, the newest phase of the Sinn Fein campaign, the most startling disclosures of the Divorce Courts and the last word in crime for first place in the limelight.

The arrival of these Japanese pearls in Europe has produced a panic among merchants in gems and has sent the titled owners of priceless ropes of pearls post haste to the experts to have them examined.

Some startling facts are forthcoming as to the way in which the experts are said to have been deceived and it is stated that leading pawnbrokers in the two capitals are consumed with anxiety lest some of their customers, chiefly women of fashion, will not redeem the pearls pledged with them.

A dealer in London who recently bought a $150,000 necklace could not get an offer of more than $10,000 for it a day or two ago while another was wholly unable to dispose of a rope worth $75,000.

The discovery that these "culture pearls" were being put on the London markets was made, so he claims, by Will Abraham, who is one of the best known merchants in precious stones in Hatton Garden, the London centre of this trade.

He bought for close on $50,000 a bunch of these Japanese products, which, he says, were sold to him as real gems. It was not until some days after that he found they were not the genuine article. They were returned to the dealer from whom they came and the deal was declared off.

The dealer who sold them had acted in perfectly good faith as the pearls had been offered to him as the real thing and as such he had bought them.

Immediately the London newspapers published the story of the "mystery" there were unusual scenes in the West End where the principal jewellers have their shops.

An early visitor to one of these establishments drove up in a magnifi cent automobile, rushed inside, asked to see the manager and exclaimed excitedly:

"My pearls, please examine them at once and let me know if they are right."

She then produced a heavy pearl necklace from her coronetted jewel case and handed it to the manager. Anxiously she awaited the expert verdict. After a careful inspection, the expert handed the necklace back to her, and said:

"As far as I can tell you, your ladyship, after thirty years' experience, the pearls are quite genuine."

Reassured, but evidently still not quite happy in her mind, the aristocratic owner of the necklace left the shop.

Two other well-known society women, alarmed by the statements made about the possible slump in the value of these gems, went into a jeweler's and offered to exchange their pearl jewels a necklace, scarf pin, two rings and a brooch for similar articles enriched with diamonds.

Another woman who took a magnificent necklace for examination had a nasty jar, for the expert, after a close scrutiny, was obliged to break the news to her that the gems were of no value, being merely imitations.

Presumably some member of her family had, at some time or other, when pressed for cash pawned the real heirloom and substituted for it an imitation so like the original that only an expert could tell the difference.

In the trade, too, there have been some unpleasant surprises. One case is reported of a merchant who bought pearls for $45,000 only to find that the gems were all artificially created pearls and worth no more than some $1,000 to $1,500.

Four of the most important London dealers spent $75,000 on "culture pearls" recently and have been obliged to put them on one side lest they should get mixed with the genuine.

This is the Japanese merchant Kokichi Mikimoto whose "Culture" pearls have created a panic in the pearl markets of Paris and London. They are produced by placing an irritant in the oyster which is thus stimulated to work. So far no test has been found which can distinguish between these and the normal pearl.

And in Paris an ingenious thief has managed to get away with a necklace worth eighty thousand dollars which he examined with others, afterwards postponing purchase on the plea that his wife was afraid of getting "culture pearls."

The most puzzling part of the situation is the difficulty of testing the gems. One expert declares that the only way is to cut them open. The real pearl is the same all through but the "cultured" has a core at the centre. The remedy is sufficiently heroic to be wholly disregarded.

Some merchants declare that they can always distinguish between the two but this is open to grave doubt as on being tested two experts both chose "culture pearls" for the true natural kind and in one case mistook a true pearl for a "culture."

HEART OF THE MYSTERY.

As the heart of the mystery lies in the heart of the pearl it has naturally been suggested that the best test is the X-ray. But so far this method of determining the true ancestry of the gem has not proved helpful. Under the searching light of the X-ray the two kinds of pearl look the same. There is nothing in their photographs to distinguish them.

The result is that many women are now discarding the pearl and to quote one dealer, "the market has been queered."

The owners of historic jewels, of course, need have no fear as their ropes of pearls have a record which takes them back long before the time when the "culture" came into existence.

Among the most famous pearls in the world are those in possession of Queen Mary, Queen Alexandra, and the Duchesses of Portland, Marlborough and Sutherland.

But here's the rub. What woman will wear pearls when any one can get for a mere song ornaments that in every outward appearance resemble the necklace that could not be repeated for a hundred thousand dollars?

A "cultured" necklace costs at present about one hundred times less than the real thing. It places pearls within the reach of every woman. Indeed a cartoonist in one of the London papers suggests that pearls will soon be sold on costers' barrows at twelve cents a pint!

This is only a joke of course but the immediate effect of the new invasion is that pearls are a drug on the market.

That they will continue to be so is unlikely for the pearl has been steadily rising in value for the last century and as soon as a satisfactory test has been found the genuine article will again be in demand at probably even higher prices than before.

It may come as a shock to the average woman, whose greatest pride is to adorn herself with pearls, that what she is wearing is merely "a pathological growth in a lowly mollusc formed in most cases round the larva of a repulsive parasite."

This is what Sir A. M. Shipley, master of Christ's College, Cambridge, says and he knows.

"It is not clear to me," he remarks, "why an intrusive body which gets into the oyster by the aid of man should be 'cultured' and the intrusive body which gets in by tapeworms or flukes should be 'uncultured.' Why one pearl differs from another in glory I cannot attempt to explain. There is probably some difference in the molecular arrangement of the arragonite."

CALLS PEARLS "REPELLANT."

He does not understand why women continue to decorate their persons with jewels "of so repellant" an origin but he admits that even he wears a pearl tie-pin.

The professor objects to the definition of the diamond, pearl and precious stone trade section of the London Chamber of Commerce which, after the committee had sat for hours behind closed doors discussing the pearl bombshell—a meeting at which there were at least four millionaires present—issued a manifesto announcing that "on account of the insertion of foreign matter placed in the oyster from which a 'cultured' pearl is produced, it would be false representation to sell them as pearls."

This is the decision both of the British and French trade.

It is not charged against the Japanese firm which produces the variety of pearl now to be known as 'cultured' that they have tried to deceive the merchants. As a matter of fact it has been established that they have in all cases sold their product under a proper description and that the deception that has so upset the trade is due rather to other and unscrupulous agents who mixed the 'cultured' with the real article.

The manner in which the discovery was made and the way in which the oysters are forced to produce gems at the will of their owner is full of interest.

"Mikimoto first realized," a member of the firm told me "that the pearl fisheries of Japan were being rapidly depleted, and attempted to restore the supply by cultivating the oyster. He exhibited some living specimens of the pearl oyster in the aquarium of the Third National Industrial Exhibition of Tokyo in 1890.

SCHEME SUGGESTED.

"It was here that he made the acquaintance of Dr. Mitsukuri, Professor of Zoology in the Imperial University of Tokyo, who first suggested to him the possibility of cultivating pearl oysters and of making them produce pearls by the use of proper stimuli.

Mikimoto's home was in Toba in the province of Shima, one of the localities in Japan long famous for large yields of pearls. Being deeply interested in the subject, directly after his return there he began experimenting on his newly acquired idea.

"At first it seemed almost like pursuing a fleeting shadow, and his friends laughed at him 'for throwing his money into the sea.' Nevertheless he persisted, trying all sorts of experiments in this direction. And after long, hard and weary years of experiments he discovered a way of producing the gem by applying science to the little shellfish, and success at last crowned his efforts.

"It was in 1898 when the first trial crop was put out, and even at the present time it may be claimed that the Mikimoto pearl culture farm is the only one in the world which undertakes the extensive cultivation of the precious mollusc and produces 'cultured pearls on a commercial scale.

"About a dozen miles south of the famous Shrine of Ise is the sheltered Bay of Agu long noted for the best quality of pearls. It is a remarkably quiet body of water some dozen miles in length and six miles in breadth, with an average depth of eight to ten fathoms. Somewhat towards the north of the bay is the small island of Tatoku, the centre of Mikimoto's enterprise.

FIFTY MILES OF PEARL FARM.

"The sea bottom around the island was at first leased and the area was increased from time to time until finally, as at present, the farm in the bay of Agu alone reaches to the extension of fifty nautical miles on the coast line."

A boatload of women divers on one of the Pearl Farms of Mikimotos in Japan, where the "Culture" Pearls come from. These women are famous for their skill.

"Other branch farms of more or less similar areas as the Bay of Agu have been later established in the Bays of Gokasho and Hasama in the Province of Ise, the Omura Bay of Kiushiu and the Ishigaki Island of Okinawa, bringing the total area of the farms up to more than ten thousand acres.

"The pearl oyster cultivated on these grounds belongs to the species Margaritifera martensi, or true pearl oyster, abundant in these localities and found more or less in all Japanese waters. They closely resemble the Indian species found near the Gulf af Manaar. This species is rather small in size, usually from two and a half to four inches in diameter, and the shell is very thin. The inner surface of the shell is lined with nacre of an iridescent silvery white.

"These oysters are usually found at a depth not exceeding ten fathoms and are anchored to rocks, stones, stems of algae, etc., by a thread of byssus which the animal secretes. Their life seems to be almost limited to twelve or thirteen years and an oyster of fifteen years has been very seldom discovered.

Every year during the months of July and August small pieces of rock and stone are placed where the oysters larvae are most abundantly found. Soon small oyster spats appear attached to them.

As this takes place in the shallow waters where, if the oysters were left for the winter they would die from chill, they are after this stage removed, together with the stones to which they are attached, to deeper waters.

HERE IS HOW IT IS DONE.

"When they reach their third year they are taken out of the sea and undergo an operation which leads to the pearl formation. This consists chiefly in introducing into them small pearls or round pieces of nacre which are to serve as the nuclei of the pearls themselves.

"The shells are then put back into the sea and carefully laid down on the bed with an average of an oyster to every square foot. They are left there undisturbed for at least four more years.

"At the end of that period it will be found that the animal has invested the nucleus with many layers of nacre and, in fact, produced a pearl.

"Pearl culture seems to be very simple but in reality it is by no means an easy task. Large mortality among the pearl oysters from various causes, the ejection of the inserted nuclei, the depredations of the oyster's enemies, uncertainties attendant upon long years of waiting, are only some of the drawbacks which beset the industry.

"A large part of the submarine work in the oyster culture industry in Japan is done by women divers or sea girls as they are called here. This is common in the Bay of Agu and in many other Japanese localities. There has been a belief from time immemorial that women can work better and stay longer under water than men. The women divers of Ise have often been mentioned in classic literature.

"These sea girls are dressed in tight, thin, white garments. Their hair is twisted into a hard knob and diving glasses are worn. They dive without any apparatus and stay under water from sixty to eighty seconds at each diving."

CUTTING THEIR CLOTH

OFFSETTING ridiculous press agent stories that the motion-picture industry is earning two hundred per cent. come additional authentic statements of the conditions of acute distress both in Los Angeles and New York among screen employes. Even with several big theatres combatting the stage hands' demands for higher wages by abandoning their legitimate policy and putting in pictures, the relief only extends as far as the shelves of the producers, who are thus enabled to utilize some of the big pile of films they had set aside as so much money thrown away.

The existing state of affairs is of course the natural reaction after a period of insensate inflation, during which a few greedy individuals gobbled up all the loose cash there was. The investors are still looking for their interest, in the great majority of cases. Now the industry finds itself face to face with an overstocked market and a general demand on the part of the public for cheaper entertainment.

I have pointed out on previous occasions that Montreal cannot expect to escape from the effects of these general conditions. The first concrete evidence of this is to be found in the fact that Loew's Theatre here has decided to cut its prices of admission twenty-five per cent. Loew's is a popular house with a big seating capacity. It represents a capital investment of upwards of one million dollars, and it has found this policy of price-cutting advisable, in order to tide over the present unsatisfactory conditions. The public is thus given its first opportunity of availing itself of reduced rates.

It remains to be seen whether other houses will follow suit now, or wait a little, to see which way the wind will turn. Sooner or later, however, it is evident, they will be compelled, by the sheer weight of public opinion, to scale their charges according to the willingness of the theatre-goer to pay.

* * *

During the war the cost of entertainment soared in common with the cost of beef and boot-laces. Now it must inevitably follow the downward trend of the cost of living. This is logical, and no arguments on the part of exhibitors or producers that their profits will be reduced thereby are likely to weigh with the public. The profits made in the past have been enormous. The time has come when the man in the street thinks he ought to be accorded some consideration, and that consideration he obviously intends to ensure.

Note to Correspondents

All communications addressed to the Dramatic Editor must contain the real name and address of the writer, in pledge of good faith. Anonymity will be strictly preserved when requested. No notice whatever will be taken of anonymous letters, which are the weapons of the coward. No exception whatever will be made to this rule.

SONG PUBLISHING.

D. J. R.—Always an interested reader of your Answers to Correspondents column in The Star, I beg of you to supply me with some information. I have on hand several good comedy songs, which I consider quite as good as many now in sheet music form and on sale, and I am desirous of trying to place them with a view to publication. Your comments on song-exploiting concerns, which I have read, are fully justified, as I can prove from personal experience; hence my desire for information from you. The songs mentioned are words only, which, of course, I intend to copyright; but do you think that concerns like Leo Feist or J. K. Remick would consider song poems sent to them without music? Would you kindly also tell me the charge for copyright certificates for the same in Washington and Ottawa?

Ans.—Both the firms you mention are open to consider song MSS., and I know of several instances in which they have accepted lyrics to be set to music. They are reliable firms in this connection. The cost of copyright both in Washington and at Ottawa is $1. Send two copies to each case to the Copyright Department. In any event, the firm publishing the song would copyright it.

WAKE UP!

"Honest InJun."—I have read in various papers that it is the ambition of every girl to become a movie star, that the salaries paid to stars are enormous—as high as $10,000 a week, in some cases, I am told—and I've also seen it stated that movie stars are made for life. What do you think about this?

Ans.—I wouldn't rate the intelligence of any intelligent girl so low. As to salaries, they have always been grossly exaggerated by the motion picture press agents. There have been a few instances in which high salaries were paid to freak performers, and in still fewer cases where screen artists have earned very large sums,—for instance, Mary Pickford, Mary Miles Minter, Douglas Fairbanks, Chaplin and Pauline Frederick. In the majority of cases, however, the salaries are nothing to boast about, and, especially today, are in many instances lower than those paid on the legitimate stage. For every screen artist earning more than $200 a week today, there are a hundred getting infinitely less,—and their work is not all the year round, either. As for screen stars being made for life, that day has passed. The star, in fact, is passing,—a very excellent thing to note, because it will mean better pictures. This nonsense about a producer "creating" a "star" overnight is too stupid for words.

CURIOUS PEOPLE ANSWERED.

"Musicus."—Q.—Why do orchestras play in theatres when plays are being presented which do not call for music?—A.—To exercise the orchestra and provide an outlet for the theatre's profits.

* * *

Art.—Q.—Can you please tell me if it is true that Hall Caine was once an actor?—A.—Never on the stage, but often in real life, I believe.

* * *

"Mentor."—Q.—Why don't you go after the low-down dance dives in this city?—A.—Because I am not paid to do police work, and the police are.

* * *

"Ollie."—Q.—I've been told that Mary Pickford is a Montreal girl. Is that right?—A.—No. She was born in Toronto. That is the only thing Toronto and every other branch of feminine attire will be presented for inspection. A number of exclusive models will be employed for the express purpose of displaying the exhibits, and special pictorial settings have been arranged by the management. The firm of Holt, Renfrew and Co. are supplying the models, and every effort has been made to ensure that this feature shall be as complete and attractive as careful lighting, posing and appropriate backgrounds can make it.

The feature picture for the week will be a big dramatic production of "The Girl in the Taxi," with the Carter de Havens in the principal roles, and a distinguished cast. "The Girl in the Taxi" was a big success on the legitimate stage, both in New York and on the road, and in its picture form all the attractive and dramatic features of the original have been carefully preserved, and in some instances improved upon. The customary news film, which is of exceptional interest at the New Allen; a special scenic, which will provide astonishment; and other attractions yet to be announced, will also be found on the bill. The New Allen Concert Orchestra will play as an overture, "Capriccio Itiliano."

A wholesome railroad atmosphere, way up in the Rocky Mountains, a charming romance between a construction engineer, who is a man's man all through, and the daughter of the president of the road—these are the features of "The Love Special," which will be the main attraction at the Capitol theatre tomorrow, and for the whole of next week. The chief roles are taken by Wallace Reid and Agnes Ayres, who secured much fame in "Forbidden Fruit" and "The Furnace," while Theodore Roberts, the master character-actor, also plays a prominent part. The comedy for the week brings back the Toonerville Trolley pictures, which are so popular. It is "The Skipper's Fire Brigade," and is a sure mirth-provoker from start to finish. The barcarolle, from "Tales of Hoffman" will be sung by Miss Lillian Wilson and Miss Lenore Ivy, while Mlle. Jesse Roggi will dance the Valse Grazioso. The organ selection by D. Kenneth Widenor will be the popular "Somewhere a Voice is Calling." The scenic tours and news review will be up-to-date as usual, and the Symphony Orchestra, under J. B. Hudson, will play the overture "Masaniello" (Auber.)

* * *

Mary Miles Minter, whose charm on the screen never seems to pall, will be seen at Loew's next week in "The Little Clown," a dainty story that exactly fits her chic personality. It is adapted from the play of the same name by Avery Hopwood, and is a story of a little chorus girl and the son of wealthy parents, who fall in love at first sight. The first official pictures of Georges Carpentier and Jack Dempsey training for their fight on July 2nd will also be shown. The vaudeville end of the bill features Jack Gregory & Co. in "Novelty Land." Other acts include, Jack Murphy and Josephine Lachmar in "The Laugh Trust," Martha Russell & Co., in "Thy Neighbour's Wife," Bartlett, Smith, and Sherry, musicians, in "Melodies and Humor," and The Gipsy Trio, in "Eight Miles in Eight Minutes."

* * *

The first free attraction of the season at Dominion Park will take place next week, when Lieut. Hitchcock will be seen every evening in his sensational feat of walking on the water. Lieut. Hitchcock in his water-walking, defies the laws of nature. His feat has been shown to millions of people through the medium of the various pictorial moving picture reviews. He will also be seen in his "fire walk" on the water. At the end of this performance he will give a demonstration of war bomb throwing. He will be assisted by Mlle. Patricia in all these feats. Their performance will take place every evening on the lake of the chutes. On June 28, for one week, The Canadian Grenadier Guards' Band, under the direction of Mr. J. J. Gagnier, will be heard. The management announce that on Tuesday evening, June 28, they will give for the first time in the Park, a fancy dress carnival, and four prizes will be given for the most original costume.

Coming Attractions

TOMORROW night there will be shown at the Princess theatre, for the first time in Canada, what is in all probability the greatest achievement ever accomplished for the silver screen,—the picture version of the famous noval by Vincente Blasco Ibanez, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." No film since the inception of the silent drama has caused a deeper impression, and certainly none has involved such a colossal outlay in time, personnel, and cash. The cosmopolitan appeal of the novel is unparalleled in recent times, and the picturized version is said by eminent critics to reflect Ibanez' tremendous dramatic feeling and profound psychological analysis in a manner as remarkable as it is impressive. The picture has proved to be nothing short of a sensation in the great populous centres of the United States, to which its exhibition has been limited up to date. The most prominent dramatic critics have discussed it by the column, and it has brought forth emphatic demonstrations of approval by a large number of eminent publicists and leading public men.

In this connection particularly it is interesting to learn how the clergy have re-acted to the psychology of the picture version of "The Four Horsemen." Prominent clergymen in all cities where this film has been seen have expressed their approval of the production and of the reverent way in which the story has been treated. Among others, the Right Rev. William McCormich, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral in Los Angeles took "The Four Horsemen" as his text for the first of his Holy Week sermons, characterizing it as "the greatest picture of all times." He advised his congregation, following the close of Holy Week, to see the picture because, he declared, "it has a message for every one of you."

The closing bill for The Orpheum Players will be Rol Cooper Megrue's popular comedy, "Tea for Three." This delightful entertainment is built around a comedy version of the everlasting triangle, in which the three protagonists entangle themselves with increasingly hilarious results. It is rich in humor of a compelling kind, and from the outset it tickles the fancy of the average audience, and keeps them laughing. It has proved a big success in London, in New York, and through Canada, and it ought to be an excellent vehicle for the Orpheum Players' closing show.

* * *

No feature announced for any motion picture theatre in Montreal this season can excel in attractiveness that which will be the main attraction at the New Allen all next week, beginning tomorrow. It will take the form of an up-to-the-minute Summer Fashion Review, in which the very latest modes and models for furs, costumes, dresses put over Montreal in connection with the movies.

* * *

"Triple X."—Q.—Is it true that you can get drinks at bars adjoining theatres in London?—A.—Yes. It is a very convenient plan, and it works very well.

* * *

"Ubi Jam."—Q.—I'd like to know who told you that Chaplin was a vulgar actor?—A.—No need for anybody to tell me. I've seen him on the screen in his vulgar films. I have two normal eyes with which I see what there is to be seen.

* * *

"Old-Timer."—Q.—May I trespass on your courtesy to inform me if it is true that Sarah Bernhardt is coming to America again?—A.—I do not think so. She ought to have retired years ago.

* * *

"Imps From School."—Q.—Would it be all right for us to go and see "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse"?—A.—Quite right. The censors have taken nothing out which would render the film improper for girls like yourselves to see.—S. M. P.

What You Can See Next Week in Films

ANOTHER double bill of merit will be presented at the Imperial all next week, when Bert Lytell and Viola Dana will appear on the screen. "The Misleading Lady" is a screen version of the play by Charles Goddard and Paul Dicket which enjoyed much success on the legitimate stage. Bert Lytell has the dashing role of Jack Craigen, the confirmed woman-hater whose first appearance in effete New York after a stay in South Africa brings with it his complete surrender to beautiful Helen Steele. Only after he has made his avowal does Craigen learn that she made him propose to prove her fitness for a leading part at a millionaire's theatre. Infuriated by such treatment, Craigen abducts her to his hunting lodge and proceeds to a brusque wooing, which begins with the lady chained, and ends in a breathless episode in which he wins against the claims of Helen's fiance.

In "Cinderella's Twin," Viola Dana has the leading role of the little queen of the kitchen who accidentally finds herself gazing on the Prince Charming of her day dream. The scullery maid is whisked into a dazzling party by a gang of notorious jewel thieves, as their catspaw. She drops a slipper containing the key to a safe and brings on the catastrophe.

Coster and Clements, vocal duo, have been detained for another week and will render selections at three and nine o'clock daily.

* * *

The question—"Should a woman obey her husband?"—has been debated for many a generation. In the story of "Her Lord and Master," by Martha Morton, which in a delightful screen form and with Alice Joyce, will be one of the big features at Allen's Westmount theatre tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday, it is told that the wife did obey her husband in all instances but one, but through that instance there came a clash. On the same days will be shown a screen version of C. Wadsworth Camp's novel, "The Abandoned Rome," under the screen title of "Love Without Question," with Olive Tell. On Wednesday and Thursday "The Oath," with Mariam Cooper, will be the feature.

* * *

The "little mother" is always a beautiful figure—and often a pathetic one, when poverty and a sense of duty combine to inspire an elder sister of still in her teens to the performance of such a task. The little mother is to be beautifully depicted in "The Mother Heart," which will be the feature attraction at the Strand for three days, commencing tomorrow. "The Mother Heart" is a story dedicated to the struggles of a young girl—played by Shirley Mason—to mother a small family, her own mother having passed away at the outset of the tale, and her father being unjustly sent to prison for an attempt to secure food for his impoverished little family. Other attractions on the bill include June Caprice and George S. Seitz in "The Sky Ranger," a comedy, and shorter subjects.

* * *

What should prove to be the most popular bill yet presented at the Papineau will be offered tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday, when five exceptionally attractive features will be shown — "Blind Wives," and Buck Jones in "Just Pals." "Blind Wives" is a screen version of "My Lady's Dress," an internationally successful play. One scene is located in New York, another in France, a third in Russia, and one in the slums or "sweatshop" district. The play itself has all the material essential for a big motion picture, and the theme has an unusual feminine appeal. All women are interested in milady's dress.

* * *

A double program will be shown at the Holman tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday. The first feature will be "The Great White Trail," with Doris Kenyon, a picture of love that finds its culmination in the white wastes of the Arctic. In the development of the story the action travels from the man-made splendors of the city to the God-made magnificence of the great white trail of the Klondyke. The second feature is "The Jucklins' Vengeance," with Monte Blue. It is from the novel by Opie Read, and concerns some Southern country folks after the Civil War. There are two beautiful romances and the story contains suspense, mystery and appeal.

* * *

The supreme test of true love is the subject of Clara Kimball Young's latest photoplay, "Straight from Paris," which will be the principal feature at the Regent tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday. As the plain, unartificial Lucette Grenier, a French milliner, the role taken by Miss Young, we are introduced to a succession of circumstances that soon lead to the crisis of the story. In her unadorned beauty, Lucette cannot help attracting the attentions of aristocratic members of society. In the web of a romance which she cannot control, the shop-girl hides her identity for fear of the scorn that her wealthy admirers might shower upon her. The inevitable discovery is made, however, and here "Straight from Paris" reaches its climax.

* * *

It will be welcome news to the movie public to hear that the management of the New Grand Theatre has decided to offer the public a reduction of admission prices. Starting tomorrow and for all next week, the program includes Alice Calhoun, in "The Charming Deceiver," a Larry Semon comedy, and other attractions. There is a touch of realism about "The Charming Deceiver" which is very attractive. A mere rehearsal of the plot does not give an adequate description of the realism shown in the visualization. The synopsis makes the picture somewhat commonplace; the visualization makes it remarkably unusual. This is partly due to the personality of Alice Calhoun, partly to the able support of her company, and partly to the care and skill used in directing.

* * *

There will be an exceptionally good program at the Maisonneuve next week. On Monday and Tuesday a big double bill will be shown, featuring Mary Pickford in her latest picture, "Through the Back Door," and Owen Moore, in "A Divorce of Convenience," a comedy, and a review. On Wednesday and Thursday, "Isobel" or "The Trail's End," will be shown. This is a Canadian drama featuring Jean Novak and Louise Peters. Ruth Roland, in "The Avenging Arrow," and a special comedy will also be seen. On Friday and Saturday William S. Hart will be shown in his latest film, "The Testing Block," with "The Son of Tarzan," No. 10, and a special Christie comedy, "Don't Blame Starke."

* * *

Bill Hart is some scrapper, as everybody knows, and markedly so, in his newest picture, "The Testing Block," which comes to the Belmont theatre for a three-day showing, starting tomorrow. A straying minstrel band, with a lovely girl who plays the violin, winds through the trails of the California Sierras in the days of gold. Mr. Hart is chief of the bandit gang. They force the players to entertain them in the heart of the redwood forest. The half-savage outlaws are avid in their desire to capture the girl and "Sierra" Bill (Mr. Hart) forces them to fight him, one by one, for the right to claim her. He beats them all and then, himself half-crazed, seeks the girl and forces her to marry him. That is the beginning of a story of human tragedy. A Mack Sennett comedy and another feature will complete the program.

TO REMOVE TEA STAINS.

Q.—Could you please tell me how to remove black tea stains out of a white Organdie dress? I have tried pouring boiling water over the stains, but without success?—Pontiac.

A.—To remove the tea stain, soak the part of the garment affected in cold water, then squeeze dry, and rub with the yolk of an egg and gasoline, then wash with pure soap and lukewarm water. If the stain does not entirely disappear, place garment, while wet, on the grass in the sun to bleach.

"CUT OFF WITH A SHILLING."

Q.—Why do we so often read that this and that relative had been cut off in a will with "only a shilling"? Why leave anything if that was all the legatee was to get?—Curious.

A.—A testator omitted to mention in his will a son or other heir who would naturally be there, it might be held that he did so inadvertently and the Court be asked to include the disinherited heir at law in the distribution of the estate. To avoid the presumption imagible it became necessary to leave the disinherited son a trivial amount, which is expressed in the phrase "Cut him off with a shilling."

DOMINION REVENUE, ETC.

Q.—Will you kindly publish answers to the following questions: 1. What was the total revenue of the Dominion for the last fiscal year? 2. What was the total revenue of the Province of Ontario for the last fiscal year, outside of any subsidy or grant from the Dominion Government? 3. Ordinary revenue for Ontario, $19,914,772. 3. You will have to get the civic figures from the City Hall. 4. Estimated population of the Dominion, about 9,000,000; Ontario, 2,838,000; Ottawa, 110,708.

TO RESTORE FADED MIRRORS.

Q.—Could you tell me of any solution that could be used at home to restore faded mirrors?—F. E. D.

A.—To restore a faded mirror, it is necessary to re-silver the back of the glass. As it requires a good deal of experience to do this satisfactorily you had better send the mirror to be done by somebody who is accustomed to this kind of work.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Q.—What is "Memorial Day" in the United States?—G.G.C.

A.—Memorial Day, May 30, is a legal holiday in most of the States of the Union. It originally was set apart as a day on which to do honor to those who fought on either side in the Civil War, but has been extended to include the dead of the Spanish-American and European wars.

INCOME TAX, ETC.

Q.—Is there a law by which the Government or State gets so much per cent of what a man is worth?—A Subscriber.

Q.—During lifetime under the federal income tax law and at death under the various succession duties' acts of the provinces. These laws are too long and too technical to summarize here. You will find the information you want on this question in the Canadian Almanac.

SUN'S DISTANCE FROM EARTH.

Q.—How far is the earth from the sun?—E.

A.—The mean distance from the centre of the earth to the centre of the sun is 93,000,000 miles. To get some idea of this inconceivable distance an illustration may help. Alfred Tennyson, the great poet was born in 1809. Let us suppose that an express train could be constructed which could make long runs, keeping up the speed of 60 miles per hour, day and night, without stopping. If Tennyson had started for the sun on such a train at the time of his birth, his journey would not yet be ended, for the body would not reach the sun until the year 1984.

HOW TO MAKE CHARCOAL.

Q.—Please give me some information about making charcoal, what kind of wood is used and how they burn it?—A Reader.

A.—The following instructions are given in The Scientific American Cyclopaedia of Formulas: To make charcoal readily, on a small scale, place small pieces of wood in a clay pot, cover it with wet clay and heat in an ordinary fire for about an hour; thus all the volatile matter is driven off, and, on cooling, the charcoal will be found in the crucible. On a large scale, charcoal is made by burning wood in large heaps or piles, covered with earth or clay, or in ovens or kilns to which only a limited supply of air is allowed access. Any kind of wood may be used, but the hardwoods, such as oak, beech and fir, produce a denser and denser charcoal. Charcoal is also produced by heating in iron retorts, the volatile products, such as wood tar, creosote and acetic or pyroligneous acid, being condensed in receivers and utilized.

SWIMMING OF CHANNEL.

Q.—To settle an argument: Has Miss Kellerman ever succeeded in swimming the English Channel? If so, in what year?—A Constant Reader.

A.—Miss Kellerman made an unsuccessful attempt to swim the English Channel on August 24, 1905.

THREE KINGDOMS SIFTED.

Q.—Where can I find the phrase to the effect that three kingdoms were sifted to find grain (people) to plant in America?—G.

A.—In "The Courtship of Miles Standish," Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807-1882), the American poet, has the following: "God has sifted three kingdoms to find the wheat for this planting." In an election sermon preached at Boston, April 29, 1669, William Stoughton said: "God sifted a whole nation that he might send choice grain over into this wilderness."

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING.

Q.—Why does thunder follow lightning?—A Young Reader.

A.—Thunder follows lightning because the electric discharge, as it breaks its way through the atmosphere, instantaneously heats the air in its path. This sudden heating causes a violent expansion of the air along the path of the lightning flash and a violent compression of the cool air farther away. This process starts a great air wave, which is the thunder. When a lightning flash occurs nearby, the sharp cracking reports come from its branches and the heavy crash comes from the trunk of the flash.

FORMATION OF ROCKS.

Q.—To settle an argument: Do rocks grow?—E. K.

A.—Rocks are gradually formed. They have all degrees of consolidation, from incoherent deposits to the densest masses, and range in size from the thinner veins or layers to enormous bodies many cubic miles in volume. Most rocks, originally soft, have become hard and compact by losing their moisture, and being subjected to pressure. As a rule a rock is not a bed of some simple mineral. In most cases there are crystals cemented together by an imperfectly crystalline or amorphous matter, or there is a mixture of angular and rounded grains, also bound together by mineral matter.

J. MURRAY GIBBON.

Q.—Please give me some details about J. Murray Gibbon? Where does he reside, what books has he written, etc.?—J. R.

A.—John Murray Gibbon is head of the publicity department of the Canadian Pacific Railway and resides in Montreal. He has achieved success as a novelist, his books, including "Drift and Spars," "Drama Afar" and "The Conquering Hero." Mr. Gibbon was born in Ceylon 47 years ago, his father, Sir William Duff Gibbon, a Scotsman, being a prosperous tea planter in that island. He received his early education in Scotland, graduating at Aberdeen University in 1894 as a Master of Arts. Later he entered at Christ Church, Oxford. Going abroad he attended the German University of Gottingen for a time, and then studied art in the Latin Quarter of Paris. Following this, he became editor of Black and White in London. Then he entered the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway and was attached to the London office. About eight years ago he came to Canada as head of the publicity department of the company. In March, 1921, Mr. Gibbon was elected president of the newly formed Canadian Authors' Association, at the two days' convention held in Montreal recently.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL STUDY.

Q.—Could you give me the names of some books that tell of things that are being found in old buried cities and places in Palestine or Italy?—F. E. D.

A.—Write to Professor G. M. Wheeler, general secretary, Archaeological Institute of America, Columbia University, New York.

WHERE IT NEVER RAINS.

Q.—In what part of the world, if any, does it never rain?—J.G.M.

A.—People have not been in one place long enough to know for a certainty where it never rains. Some natives of the Sahara Desert, however, have expressed amazement when they heard that water came from the skies. Rain has been reported in regions close to the poles, but neither of the discoverers of the North and South Poles was there any length of time.

THE BATTLE OF SEMPACH.

Q.—Please give a few details of the famous Battle of Sempach, in which the Swiss defeated the Austrians.—Mrs. A.

A.—Sempach is a small Swiss town, situated on Lake Sempach, about nine miles north-west of Lucerne. It was the scene of a celebrated battle in which the Swiss completely defeated a much larger force of Austrians, on July 9, 1386. Historians estimate that the Austrians, who were under command of Leopold, Duke of Austria, numbered 4,000, while the Swiss force only numbered about 1,500.

"DIED IN HARNESS."

Q.—It is often said of a busy man who has passed away that "he died in harness." What is the origin of this expression.

A.—In the Second Book of Maccabees (Apocrapha), chapter 15, verse 28, these words are to be found: "Nicanor lay dead in his harness." In the Douay Bible the words are: "Nicanor was slain in his armor." Harness was originally the defensive armor of a warrior, including the trappings of his horse. The First Book of Kings, Chapter 22, verse 34, we read: "And a certain man drew a bow at a venture and smote the King of Israel between the joints of the harness." To die in harness, therefore, meant, to die in battle or in action.

MESOPOTAMIA'S FUTURE.

Q.—Please give some facts concerning Mesopotamia and the possibilities of its development. Also, are the rivers Euphrates and Tigris capable of being developed to supply water power or storage for irrigation?—M.

A.—Mesopotamia was conquered by British and Indian troops during the Great War. The town of Basra was occupied on November 20, 1914, and Baghdad, the capital, on March 11, 1917. By the Treaty with Turkey, August 10, 1920, Mesopotamia is recognized as an independent state, to be placed under a mandatory power. The Supreme Council has allotted the mandate to Great Britain. The country has an area of 143,250 square miles and a population, according to the census of 1920, of 2,848,282. Under British direction highly important development work is in progress, including the expansion of railways and telegraphs, standardization of weights and measures, health service, education, and to secure the maintenance of law and order. Commerce is progressing; it is hoped that the country, owing to scientific irrigation, will produce cotton in profusion; and the date industry is developing. Irrigation dams have been and are being constructed on the Euphrates and the Tigris. Under a stable and progressive government, Mesopotamia will have a prosperous future, authorities assure us.

WHAT HIPPOPHAGY IS.

Q.—Will you please explain what hippophagy is.—John.

A.—Hippophagy is the act or the practice of eating horseflesh. One who eats horseflesh is a hippophagist.

THE GREATEST VIRTUE.

Q.—Please allow me to advance the following question: "What is the greatest virtue or attribute that is possible for a human being to possess?"—C. R.

A.—That is a big question to advance, but, in brief, perhaps the best thing each and all can do in this life is to follow the advice of Thomas Carlyle: Be yourself an honest man, and then you will be sure of one thing at least, and that is that there is one scoundrel less in the universe!

ORIGIN OF THE INDIAN.

A.—To enlighten a discussion among friends will you kindly inform them where the Indians originated?—M.

A.—No one knows where the Indian came from, or how long he has inhabited the continent. By most scientists he is believed to be descended from the tribes of Central and North-eastern Asia, for the two resemble each other in nearly every physical character. The generally accepted theory is that the natives of America crossed Asia at Behring Strait, or farther south by a passage which has now disappeared.

RICHEST AMERICANS.

Q.—Who are the richest people in the United States—the biggest multi-millionaires?—Curious.

A.—An investigation of millionaires by a New York newspaper correspondent includes the following as among the richest Americans: John D. Rockefeller, George F. Baker, William Rockefeller, Henry Ford, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, the Wideners, George Eastman, James R. Duke, Pierre S. Dupont, Julius Rosenwald, Vincent Astor, Edward H. R. Green, J. Ogden Armour, the Vanderbilts, Thomas Fortune Ryan, Daniel Guggenheim, the Harknesses, Louis F. Swift, Charles M. Schwab, Cyrus H. McCormick, J. P. Morgan, the Bradys, E. T. Stotesbury, the Pratts, the Dodge estate, Andrew W. Mellon.

ADMIRAL JOHN BYNG.

Q.—Who was Admiral John Byng, who was shot at Portsmouth, England, in 1757? Any relation to the coming new Governor-General? — Martin.

A.—John Byng (1704-1757) was the fourth son of George Byng, first Lord Torrington, and entered the Royal Navy in 1718. He became lieutenant in 1723, a captain in 1727, a rear-admiral in 1745, a vice-admiral in 1747, and an admiral in 1755. In 1756, the Seven Years' War commenced. The Island of Minorca, the key to the Mediterranean, which had been ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Utrecht, was attacked by the French. Admiral Byng was despatched to its relief. In an action fought with the French, Admiral Byng held aloof, while his second in command, Admiral West, was engaged, and on the following day sailed away to Gibraltar and left Minorca to its fate. His failure to save the stronghold caused a savage outburst of wrath in Britain. He was brought home, tried by court-martial, and though acquitted of cowardice, was considered to be shot for not having done his best. He was shot at Portsmouth on March 14, 1757. He met death with courage and resignation. Viscount Byng of Vimy, Canada's new Governor-General, is a son of the second Earl of Strafford. The first Earl of Strafford (of the present line) was Field Marshal the Right Hon. Sir John Byng, G.C.B., a grandson of the first Lord Torrington. He was created a baron in 1835 and an earl in 1847.

HAS AN INVENTION.

Q.—I have an invention and want to get it patented. Please tell me where to get it patented, and how to go about it. Also how to go about selling it to the manufacturer.—R. S.

Q.—The best thing to do is to go and consult a good patent attorney.

AFGHANISTAN-BALUCHISTAN.

Q.—Are Afghanistan and Baluchistan under British influence?—F. G. G.

A.—Afghanistan is an independent country, but for forty-one years past in has been a faithful ally of Great Britain. It is important as a buffer state between British India and Russia. Baluchistan, lying south of Afghanistan, is ruled by the Khan of Kelat, who receives an annual subsidy of 100,000 rupees from the Indian Government, to whom, in 1903, he granted a perpetual lease of certain border lands and passes for an additional annual payment.

LAW OF GRAVITATION.

Q.—Who discovered the law of gravitation?—B.G.W.

A.—The discoverer was the illustrious English mathematician and natural philosopher, Sir Isaac Newton (1642-1727)). The law of universal gravitation was completely elaborated by 1685, and in its discovery Newton owed a great deal to the previous researches of Copernicus (1473-1543) and Kepler (1571-1630). Sir Isaac Newton was a star of the first magnitude in the world of science. He was the greatest mathematician, and researches along the lines of astronomy, physics and some of the other sciences entitle him to a front rank in these fields. The law of universal gravitation explains how bodies attract one another; why bodies attract one another is still one of the riddles of the universe.

THE KU KLUX KLAN.

Q.—What is the "Ku Klux Klan" and what are its objects? Are its members bound by a secret oath? Are they recognized by the United States Government? Are they allowed to hang a man? Have they secret trials?—Inquirer

A.—The Ku Klux Klan was the name of a secret oath-bound association of Southern whites united for self-protection and to oppose the reconstruction measures of the United States Congress, 1865-1876. The name is generally applied not only to the order of Ku Klux Klan, but to other similar societies that existed at the same time, such as the Knights of the White Camelia; the White Brotherhood; the White League; the Invisible Empire; the Pale Faces, the constitutional Union Guards; the Black Cavalry; the White Rose; the '76 Association, and hundreds of other societies that sprang up in the South after the Civil War. The movement arose among the participants in sympathies with the War of the Secession, and its members did everything in their power to prevent negroes or northerners from gaining ascendency in the South. Armed to the teeth, they rode out masked at night to spread their reign of terror. They perpetrated many outrages by whipping, banishing, or murdering persons obnoxious to them, and by burning their property when they had any. Such acts of violence continued with more or less frequency for more than ten years after the war. The organization was finally broken up by the military forces of the United States in 1871, after the passage of the Enforcement Act, which was popularly known as the Ku Klux Act. The result of the whole movement, whose membership at one time spread over nearly all the States of the South, was more or less successful revolution against the reconstruction policy and an overthrow of the State governments based on negro suffrage.

A GREAT TREE.

Q.—Please tell me if it is true there was at the World's Fair in Chicago, in 1892, the stump of a tree measuring 52 feet in diameter, that was used as a dancing floor?—T. P.

A.—That is to be doubted. According to the best authorities, the sequoia, or giant tree of California, in some instances attains a height of more than 300 feet, and a diameter exceeding 30 feet.

OLD AGE PENSION.

Q.—I am 68 years of age, born in London, England, of English parents, and until August 1920 had lived all my life in England; in August, 1920, I came to Canada on a visit to a daughter who was very ill. I own a small house in England, let to a weekly tenant; I am paying rates and taxes. Have I forfeited my claim to the old age pension by coming to Canada?—Anxious One.

A.—No; your claim to an old age pension is as good as over it was. Under the Old Age Pensions Acts of 1908 and 1911, further amended by the Act of 1919, state pensions are payable to every man and woman over the age of 70, whose income does not exceed £49 17s. 6d. per annum, and who has for the last twenty years before receiving the pension been a British subject, and for twelve of those twenty years a resident in the United Kingdom.

RALPH CONNOR.

Q.—Is Ralph Connor a Canadian author? If so, where is he now? Please give a few particulars of him.—Reader.

A.—Ralph Connor is the pen name of the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Gordon, minister of St. Stephen's Presbyterian Church, Winnipeg, Man. He is a son of the Rev. Daniel Gordon, who came to Canada from Scotland in the "forties," of the 19th century, and his wife, Mary Esterbrook, who was born at Indian Lands, Glengarry County, Ont., September 13, 1860. He was educated at local schools, St. Mary's High School, Toronto University, Knox College, Toronto, and Edinburgh University. He was ordained in 1890, and for three years served as a missionary to the miners and lumbermen in the Rocky Mountains. He then spent a year in Great Britain as representative of Canadian Western Missions for the Presbyterian Church. Since 1894 he has been minister of St. Stephen's Presbyterian Church in Winnipeg. He went overseas in 1915 as chaplain of the 43rd Battalion, Cameron Highlanders of Canada, with the rank of captain; was made senior chaplain of Canadian forces in Britain, with rank of major; and proceeded to France in 1916 as senior chaplain of the 9th Brigade. He was attached to the British mission to the United States, 1917-18. In 1920 he was appointed chairman of the Joint Council of Industry for Manitoba. On June 1, 1921, he was elected Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada; a Doctor of Divinity of Knox College, Toronto; and a Doctor of Laws of Queen's University, Kingston. His published works include: "Beyond the Marshes," "Black Rock," "The Sky Pilot," "Quill Pen," "The Man from the Glengarry," "Glengarry School Days," "Breaking the Record," "The Prospector," "The Pilot of Swan Creek," "Gwen," "The Doctor of Crow's Nest," "The Life of Dr. James Robertson," "The Foreigner," "The Angel and the Star," "Corporal Gwynn," "Glengarry Days," "The Recall of Love," "Corporal Cameron," "The Patrol of Sun Dance Trail," "The Major," "Canada and the Fight for Freedom," "The Sky Pilot in No Man's Land."

"FABIAN POLICY."

Q.—What is meant by a "Fabian policy"? Why the word "Fabian"?—Perplexed.

A.—The term a "Fabian policy" means one of delay or dilatory tactics from the Roman General, Quintus Fabius Maximus, who, according to tradition, tried to defeat Hannibal by marches, counter marches and skirmishes without a pitched battle. By this means Fabius acquired an addition to his name of Cunctator, the delayer. He died as long ago as 203 B.C.

ROBERT BURNS.

Q.—Can you furnish me with the record of the life of "Robbie" Burns, the Scottish poet? Was he ever married, and did he die in poverty? Is it true that he was most susceptible to the charms of the ladies?—A Regular Reader.

A.—"We must either speak lovingly of Robert Burns," says Professor Edward Engel, "or else be silent about him. It is said (with wondrous sagacity!) that he had a few human weaknesses; that he kissed more pretty girls than he should; and that, in his exuberant enjoyment of life (or, it may be, to drown the thought of the bitter experience of that life), he often drank a glass more than was good for him." He that is without sin among us, let him first cast a stone at him! Robert Burns was born at Alloway, near the town of Ayr, January 25, 1759. His father, William Burns, or Burness, though very poor, gave him a solid education, and the boy eagerly read all the books he could find. But the life was hard, and at the age of 15 Burns was working as his father's head laborer on their farm. The father died in 1784, brought to straits through the failure of a lawsuit. Burns, with his brother Gilbert, struggled on bravely, but with poor success. During the next two years many of his best poems were written, as "The Cotter's Saturday Night," "Holy Willie's Prayer," "Address to the Deil," "The Mouse," "The Daisy," "The Twa Dogs" and others. In 1786, having published a small volume to gain passage money for Jamaica, an invitation to Edinburgh made him famous. But he gained, for even, nothing more than appointment of exciseman in 1789, with which he settled at Dumfries in 1791. This post was worth £70 a year. In 1788 he had married Jean Armour—the "Bonnie Jean" of his songs—whom he would have married earlier but for the opposition of her father. Like other bold spirits of his time, he was accused of sympathy with the French Revolution; and it is a fact that in the spring of 1792, he sent to the French Assembly two guns that had passed into his hands, by purchase from a captured smuggler. Two of his best lyrics, "A Man's a Man for a' That" and "Scots Wha Hae," written 1792-95, show that the fiery heat of the great upheaval had reached him. Nevertheless, when a French invasion of Britain was threatened, he joined the Dumfries Volunteers. His poetry was the outcome of his genius. His scathing satire of hypocrisy, the wild humor of "Tam o' Shanter" and "The Jolly Beggars," and the burning passion of his love songs, will live as long as the language endures. "He did more than give Scotland songs to sing and rhymes to read," says W. E. Henley, "he showed that laughter and the joy of life need be no crimes, and that freedom of thought and sentiment and action is worth the search of him that will stretch forth his hand to take it. It will be found in the long-run that he lied for truth—the truth which maketh free; so that the Scotland he loved so well and took such pride in boasting, would scarcely know herself, were she is, had he not been." Burns died in hard straits, at Dumfries, July 21, 1796, leaving his "Bonnie Jean" and four children.

OUR LONDON LETTER

LONDON, May 27. — (Special Star Correspondence by Doris Hemming).—Sir James Barrie has come to be a great playwright and the announcement of his new play has created a little sensation in the world of drama and art. Where the accomplishments of his brethren of letters are announced in the press on their completion, Sir James has reached a point in his career where an eager public declines to wait until the last act has been written, and the Royal family drives out in state to applaud the opening scene.

No little stir was caused at the opening of the new theatre of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art this afternoon, when the Prince of Wales and members of his household arrived to attend the performance of the first act of "Shall We Join the Ladies?" given by one of the most notable casts that has ever been called together even in this famous stage centre.

It was a great day for the understudies of London, for scarce a theatre of first rank but offered its star in honor of the occasion. Sir James was absent, detained at his home by a bereavement in his family. Sir Squire Bancroft was also missing owing to the death of Lady Bancroft.

As the curtain rose a group of thirteen of London's most popular actors were discovered sitting about a sumptuously appointed table at the close of the evening meal. There was Sir Johnson Forbes-Robertson and next him Lady Tree, Charles H. Hawtrey and Cyril Maude, representing their generation and school of art. Fay Compton and Leon Quartermaine, to whom Barrie entrusted his role of Mary Rose and her husband, played the parts of a young engaged couple. Gerald du Maurier found himself relegated to the part of the butler, with plenty to do but nothing to say. They were all there, Sybil Thorndike, Lillah McCarthy, Nelson Keys, Madge Titheradge, Irene Vanbrugh, Marie Lohr and Hilda Trevelyan, names to conjure with in London, but of personages not to be tempted overseas.

Sir James has started to write a blood-curdling detective story, of which the ending is still in the lap of the gods. The host announces to his guests that one of their number has murdered his brother, that they have been bidden to his house party because they, and they only, entered his brother's yacht on the night of the tragedy. In his own inimitable fashion Barrie works up the sense of horror, destroying eeriness as quickly as he creates it, by dashes of brilliant wit.

Shivers alternated with laughter as the audience watched the masterly character-drawing of the thirteen members of the dinner party. Suspicion is thrown like a wayward feather from one member to another until the ladies retire. As the gentlemen follow slinking through a ghostly doorway, an unearthly yell is heard, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson draws back convulsed with terror and then darts forward—the curtain falls. The rest of the play has yet to be written! So far as it goes, the first act is considered by the critics to be one of the most perfect pieces of dramatic work that has appeared for some time.

* * *

For a man who sits up late at night and worries over the copyright of his doings, writings and sayings, George Bernard Shaw does manage to figure considerably in the press. G. B. S. has his fee for an interview, and the fee is $5,000, I happen to know because I asked him. However, this is nothing to his fee of £10,000 for the privilege of putting his name on a movie bill!

According to a statement which Mr. Shaw himself made at the Authors' Society this week, a "lunatic" American moving picture producer offered him ten thousand pounds if he would consent to allow his writings to be thrown upon the screen for the "educational delectation of the American movie public—service to humanity and other things."

But to quote the great man himself: "To please myself, I worked the scheme out on paper. I took one of my shorter plays, and made a rough guess at a suitable length for a film extract, and divided this into the total number of words.

"I forget the exact quotient, but I remember that the wording of the play would still be reeling for at least three years before the end was in sight.

"I believe I get these ten thousand pound offers about three times a week."

* * *

How the man hates himself! But one must admit his plays at the Hampstead theatre are the only dramatic venture paying its way in London just now! By the bye, G. B. S. has written a new book which he calls "Back to Methuselah," and according to the rare details that have slipped underneath the copyright fence, it is quite as Shavian as the last, if not more so.

* * *

London is about to lose one of its best known institutions, for this is the last week but one of "Chu Chin Chow," which completes its 2,200th performance on June 9. Mrs. Oscar Asche (Miss Lily Brayton) sails for Madeira for a holiday on the following day.

* * *

The story of "Chu Chin Chow" is one of the romances of the modern stage. Its production cost less than £5,000, and it has brought fortunes to a number of people. Its success was never in doubt from the first. It is understood that the arrangement with the executors of the late Sir Herbert Tree was that the production should not be withdrawn until for two consecutive weeks the receipts fell below a certain figure. Even at the worst periods of the war that figure was never reached, and had it not been for the coal dispute there is little doubt that "Chu Chin Chow" would have run well into the autumn. Some time ago it was announced that Messrs. Grossmith and Laurillard had acquired an interest in His Majesty's Theatre, but that it would not mature until the end of "Chu Chin Chow" or the expiration of seven years, which ever event should come first.

* * *

Oscar Asche's next venture will be "Mecca," which will be brought from the United States to run at His Majesty's next autumn. There is already a discussion over the name, as certain sections of this cosmopolitan public strongly object.

BENEFIT FOR A. S. BYRON, COMEDIAN OF THE ORPHEUM PLAYERS.

His many friends and admirers here will learn with keen pleasure that it has been arranged to give a benefit performance of "Seeing Through" at the Orpheum Theatre tomorrow (Sunday) night, to Arthur Byron, the genial and popular comedian of The Orpheum Players, who is now in hospital, recovering from a severe illness. Arthur Byron, by his bonhomie, his irrepressible cheerfulness, his unfailing sportsmanship, and his sincerity, has won for himself a wide circle of friends during his stay in Montreal, and his work on the stage has been characterized by a vim and a fine sense of comedy that have gone far to ensure the success of the productions in which he has appeared. Mr. William Naughton, until recently leading man at the Orpheum, will come to Montreal for this special performance, and a capacity house is anticipated. Mr. Byron has deserved well of the theatre-goers in this city. S. M. P.

Camera Men Risk Their Lives to Be First with Pictures

The speed and dispatch with which motion pictures of news events can be taken and handled was clearly shown in the case of the disastrous floods in Colorado last week. These pictures were taken under extraordinary difficulties, at repeated risks to the camera men's lives. The latter braved the dangerous task without fear, and succeeded in getting the first pictures, which are being shown in the leading theatres throughout the country.

The films were rushed by aeroplane to Chicago from the devastated city of Pueblo, wrecked by a cloudburst, which caused the sudden overflow of the banks of the Arkansas and Fountain Rivers, and overwhelmed the city, causing the greatest disaster since the days of the Johnstown flood, thirty years ago.

Reaching Chicago, the negatives were immediately developed and printed and rushed via express to Montreal, where they arrived last Saturday, within three days of the receipt of the first definite news of the disaster.

On reaching Montreal, six other prints were immediately made from the one shipped, and dispatched via express to St. John, Toronto, Calgary, Winnipeg and Vancouver, covering every district in Canada.

The pictures shipped to Chicago were accompanied by a brief note from the camera man, who wrote:—

"Had to go through h—— to get there and back. Took troop train as soon as they decided to send one, but had to build bridges, hike and wade rivers."

The Allen, Capitol and Imperial theatres showed the first pictures of the floods on Sunday last, hardly three days after the first facts had come over the news wires.

SCENE FROM "THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE"

The above is a characteristic scene from Blasco Vicente Ibanez' story, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," as shown on the screen. At The Princess Theatre all next week.

Latest News of the New York Theatres

NEW YORK, June 18—(Special to The Star From Our Own Correspondent.)—The Shuberts requested Winter Garden patrons to remain seated until the last curtain had fallen on "The Whirl of New York." In this case there was hardly any need for the request. The show is good enough to hold everybody until the last gag has been uttered. It is somewhat of a novel experiment, this Whirl. It was originally intended as a revival of "The Belle of New York." The very doubtful success of other revivals—such as the costly resurrection of Floradora—evidently caused the Shuberts to think again. The result is a half-and-half compound of The Belle and up-to-date vaudeville and revue ingredients, the whole making a highly enjoyable entertainment suitable for warm weather.

The plot of the old-timer occasionally protrudes and occasionally a familiar tune is heard, but apart from that it is a typical Winter Garden revue, quite a bit better than those that have gone before. The list of reinforcements of book-writers, song-writers and stagers is a long one, but the number of cooks didn't spoil the broth. And the costuming and general staging are lavishly done. There are some pretty girls to look upon. So are the damsels who trip gayly along the runway. The Winter Garden chorus seem to be the only thing left that isn't feeling business depression.

Dorothy Ward, Florence Brasfield and Nancy Gibbs win the most honors. And they're all fresh from long and successful engagements, but they seem to have found another Joan T. Morris in this new show, for while Lew Fields is the star after the Actors' Equity fashion, Miss Morris is the Broadway favorite. It is no joke to call her that. Those who saw her in Louis Mann's last production know why. That's his fault. Those who missed it got Louis worked in as a lunatic and it's a sin. Probably the fact that Mann didn't join the cast until the last minute accounts for it.

But even the Descent of Mann doesn't take away from the enjoyment of "The Whirl" as a whole. It's a breezy, entertaining concoction and should be put on the revised Gilbertian list of things that should not be missed.

There's another Whirl on Broadway, too—known as the "Broadway Whirl." Apparently this is the Whirl era. The "Broadway Whirl" is housed at the Times Square theatre, and will likely be there for the length of the summer. It is chiefly notable because it brings back Richard Carle, who, despite the prohibition joke, tickles one's funnybone without mercy. Charles Winninger, Blanch Ring, Jay Gould and Winona Winter contribute largely to the success of the meeting, but it is the roof-garden features that carry this Whirl along, viz.—the dancing, the clothes and the chorus.

George M. Cohan has decided to close down "The Tavern," in which he is acting the Vagabond "better than any other actor could," as he says himself. He is also shutting down several road shows, including "The Meanest Man in the World" and "Mary," and hints that even "The O'Brien Girl," which is having great success in Boston may be withdrawn.

All in keeping with his announcement that rather than yield to the closed shop in the theatre, he would quit the producing game. Broadway is wondering whether Cohan actually means to leave the game flat, or whether he will set the stage and then suddenly find a way to come back with his colors flying.

Bulwer-Lytton's famous novel, "The Last Days of Pompeii," is about to be filmed by George H. Kern. Barbara Bedford will play the blind girl, while others in the cast include William Conklin and Raymond Cannon. A staff is to be sent to Hawaii to film the volcanic eruption.

According to a recent census conducted by the George Loane Tucker Company there are 19,908 film theatres in the United States. Ohio leads the list with 1,772; Pennsylvania has 1,749 and New York State has 1,615. California, where most of the pictures are produced, has only 679 movie houses. They know something about making — and faking—pictures in California.

A novel turn is given to the plot of "A Sportsman's Wife," by the marriage of the heroine to the villain of the piece. This Broadwest film, which has been produced by Walter West, is regarded as one of his finest racing films. The turf interest is of secondary importance, and divorce figures prominently in the film, which is founded on an original story. Violet Hopson plays the title role, with Gregory Scott opposite her, and Olive Brook as the villain. Adeline Hayden Coffin appears as the mother.

Nobel Johnson, the villain in "The Serenade," nearly got mobbed into the hospital the other day by a troup of energetic Mexican women who were novices at movie acting. The women were hired for a set reproducing a Mexican street scene. Few of them understood English. When the director signed to them to maul the villain they threw him down and jumped on him, five score strong. Miriam Cooper, the heroine in the picture, rushed in and tipped off the extras by a few pulls and yanks to the fact that it wasn't necessary to kill the villain to make a good picture, Johnson was cut and bruised in the encounter.

"It used to be fashionable," says the New York Tribune, "to sneer at the movies. Where is the person who now can look down on motion pictures when they have been embraced by such men as Sir James M. Barrie, Sir Gilbert Parker, Joseph Conrad, Arnold Bennett, Elinor Glyn . . . ."

Well, well! I wonder what the fair Elinor will say to that. She will probably be inclined to disagree, as is her privilege.

GRADES ARE TEST OF DRIVER'S SKILL

Should Be Studied by Those Who Plan to Tour

SECOND SPEED

Drive Slowly on Sandy Roads to Keep Out of Ditch

With touring the order of the day, many Montreal automobilits will venture from the familiar roads over which they drive every day to strange territory, where topographical conditions such as they perhaps never before encountered will enter into their driving problems. For this reason, many car owners are looking for some pointers not as carefully considered by the ordinary driver as they should be in the handling of a motor car on the road.

The inexperienced (or possibly he might better be called the less experienced) automobilist encountered his first difficulties when touring through hilly country.

Before starting on any trip on which unfamiliar grades are to be negotiated, it is wise for the driver to learn how to shift the gears on a steep hill. More than that, the driver should learn how to stop entirely at the stiffest section while ascending a reasonably heavy grade and then on up.

All motorists know how to shift from first to second and then to third, but in shifting from a higher to a lower gear, the amateur will be sure to have trouble unless he gives the subject some study.

ON SECOND SPEED.

In shifting from high to second speed on a grade which is just a little too steep for high speed, for instance, do not allow the car to come too near to a stop before trying to make the shift. Otherwise it will be necessary to go back at first speed. But as soon as the engine begins to labor, push the clutch down only about half as far as required to shift from a lower to higher speed. With the clutch thus semi-disengaged, slip the gears through quickly from third to second, then let the clutch re-engage, at the same time giving the engine more gas so as to keep the car under motion. Most cars will go right on up the hill on this second speed without trouble.

If it is necessary to go back to first speed, usually the car has to come to a stop and then it is necessary to hold on the brake to keep the car from backing down. With the brake on, use the hand throttle and let the clutch up carefully, until it begins to engage. Release the brakes just as the clutch takes hold so the engine will not have to start the car with the brake on.

At the same time be careful not to release the brake too soon or the car will start back.

DOWN HILL.

In going down long hills, accidents always happen through the failure of the brakes when they get overheated. To prevent this it is better to slow down or even come to a stop at the top of the hill; if it be exceptionally steep, put the gears in low and run down with the gears in this speed with the clutch engaged. The engine will then hold the car back with little extra help from the brakes. If the hill is a long one, but not exceptionally steep, shift into second and switch off the ignition, you will find that the engine will hold the car back nicely. It is true, of course, that you can allow the car to run considerably faster in second speed than in first. But this, on the other hand, gives the driver less control of the car if the grade is heavy.

In ascending steep grades it is sometimes necessary, due either to low gasoline or lack of engine power to run the car up the hill backwards; the reverse gear in many cars is a little lower than the low speed forward. It must be done slowly, of course, and a watchful eye kept for oncoming cars. This, of course, takes time, but it is often better than to detour around on some road where hills equally bad may be encountered.

DRIVE SLOWLY.

In driving over very sandy roads, care must be taken because the car is apt to skid or jump out of the sand rut and go over into the ditch, before it can be brought under control. One of the best rules to follow when driving over sand or dirt roads which are deeply rutted is to drive slowly at all times. Speed is likely to bring on a mishap at the most unexpected moment.

In ascending grades, always keep to the extreme right. This should be done always, of course, but on grades cars coming down usually travel at speed and the driver takes a little more road room. It will be found safer also if there is a turn on the grade.

BACKING GUIDE.

A notch in the steering wheel will help a driver back into a tight place without doing damage. With the front wheels directed straight ahead, the notch is cut in the steering wheel directly in front of the driver. It will tell the motorist just how his car is backing.

Washing Motor Car is a Real Art if Properly Done

There's a knack in washing a car properly.

Some motorists have little conception of the principles involved in keeping a car in good shape.

The best time to fix up a car and put it in spick and span shape is just as soon as it has returned from a trip.

Warm water tends to dry the mud and bake it into the finish of the car. So unless the mud is taken off at once, the finish of the car is in danger of being permanently impaired.

First soak the mud and dust down with a hose. Don't spray it on, but let a gentle stream fall on the body of the car. The larger the stream and the less the pressure the better job it will turn out to be.

Begin at the top and work downward. Then you don't cover the same ground twice.

If this treatment fails to remove all the mud, use a soft sponge and slop on the water in generous quantities.

After the mud has been washed off, the grease spots that remain may be taken care of with a chamois skin and pure linseed oil soap. To preserve the finish the soap must be rinsed off at once.

Intersecting Car Tracks—a test of Tire Endurance

The edge of steel—the tread-cutting menace that faces the city motorist on almost every street—the steel edge of the car track—makes a tire test that cannot be exceeded for rigor by any of the spicy varieties of tire experience. The "Cross Tread" Gutta Percha Tire—cord or fabric—has a carcass strength that defies the knocks and blows that would be sudden death for a weaker tire.

Remember, when choosing a tire, that it is the built-in strength of a carefully-made and rigidly-inspected and thoroughly-approved standard tire that gives you the service you pay for and have a right to expect.

MOTORISTS BEWARE OF SPEED LIMIT

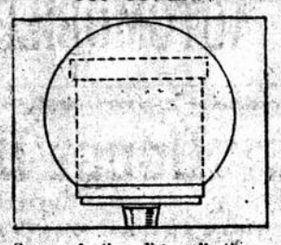
T. C. Kirby of the Montreal Motorists League advises members of the League that police officers are very active in the village of Lacolle. Motorists are warned not to exceed the legal speed of sixteen miles per hour while driving through that village. Mr. Kirby states that he has settled during the past week 106 summons of members of the League for speeding through it.

Another very active spot is the village of Lanoraie on the Montreal, Quebec highway.

CLUTCH LUBRICATION

One of the most commonly neglected parts of the car, so far as lubrication goes, is the clutch operating mechanism. In the case of disk clutches running in oil, the lubrication of the thrust collar and the lever operating it is automatic. But with clutches that do not operate in a bath of oil, the thrust collar and lever require oiling by hand. The service of these parts is exacting and frequent lubrication of the ball thrust bearing and of the end of the lever, which actuates it, is necessary. Furthermore this bearing of the clutch operating linkage should be frequently lubricated.

CUP COVER.



Some of the dirt collecting on grease cups finds its way into the oil and eventually gets to the bearings. To keep this out, enlarge the hole in a small hollow rubber ball and slip the ball over the cup. It will retain a tight grip at the bottom so that no dust can enter.

MAT RESTORER.

Rubber matting that has been in use for some time and is beginning to look the worse for wear may be restored to respectability by painting it with lead-colored paint. This gives a varnish surface that is not only oilproof but is easily cleaned with a cloth.

HIGH—FOR RUSSIA.

It cost an English correspondent five million rubles to buy a battered automobile in Russia. He sold it, when he left the country, for six million. But what he actually made in real Canadian money was about $50.

MUFFLER PAINT.

It is difficult to find a satisfactory paint for the exhaust pipe and muffler because of the heat of those parts. Here is a highly recommended muffler paint: Boiled linseed oil, 1-5 pound; Japan varnish, 1-5 pound; turpentine, 2-5 pound; lamp black, 1½ ounces; powdered graphite, 1½ ounces; powdered oxide of manganese, ⅝ ounce. Mix the linseed oil and varnish well together, then add in order, stirring all the time, the lamp black, the graphite and the powdered manganese. As the mixture thickens thin it down with turpentine until the quantity mentioned has been used. This mixture should be used as soon as it is mixed, as it dries quickly. Every time the brush is dipped in it should be stirred. It is well to paint the muffler while it is hot, after having cleaned it thoroughly.

PRESERVE TIRES

How to Make Paint for Coating Spare Casings

Tire paint will make the old tires look like new, will preserve them and add snap to the appearance of the car.

Spare tires especially live longer if covered with the paint. A good paint may be made in the following manner:

Mix five pounds of whiting and one quart of rubber cement in one quart of gasoline. A slight amount of lamp black may be added to give the paint a gray or dark tint.

While applying the paint, fill the cuts and abrasions with it, so as to keep them from working deeper into the tire.

The paint may be applied to both the inside and outside of the tire.

LEAGUE LOBBIES FOR ROAD REPAIRS

The officials of the Montreal Motorists League have been busy lobbying with the members of the city council to have the paving appropriations passed at the next meeting for the repaving of Sherbrooke street west. The amounts were appropriated by the Commissioners but held up by the alderman at their last meeting.

Owing to the very bad state of the roadway between Bleury and Peel sts., strong representations have been made by the directors of the League to have this seen to at once and it is hoped that this will be passed at the next council meeting.

WANTS GOOD ROADS.

Active organized agitation is now being carried on by the officials of the Montreal Motorists League for immediate action to be taken by the interested councils on the repairs of the following bad pieces of roadway: Lake Shore in front of Macdonald College, Bout d'Isle road from Point aux Trembles, Sherbrooke street west between Bleury and Peel sts., Riverside road along through Sault au Recollet, St. Rose cement highway, Longueuil and St. Lambert, cement highway, Gouin Boulevard, St. Joseph street, Lachine widening.

HOW ABOUT FINGER PRINT?

Every motor vehicle driver in Chicago is required to carry a card bearing his signature, his photograph, the number of his car and his qutlifications. Violators of this order are subject to fines of from $10 to $200.

OPERATION OF CHOKE.

The time to pull the choke out is when stopping the engine rather than starting. The engine will start more readily if this is done.

FIRESTONE TIRE PRICES.

Prices for Firestone tires are now on the level that would be in effect if their Canadian factory were actually in operation. When the Firestone Company entered Canada they expected to be producing a Canadian made tire this summer. Unavoidable delays have retarded construction so that this was not possible. About two million dollars have already been invested in the Canadian plant and construction is being pushed as rapidly as possible. However, the company has decided to place their prices on the same level as if their Canadian plant were operating.

A tablespoonful of fine graphite to a gallon of oil in the crankcase, will assist lubrication, improve compression and keep the engine cooler.

The driver sits back comfortably in his seat, all his attention concentrated on driving over the wet road, both hands free for emergencies and a generous arc of the windshield always as clear as crystal for perfect vision.

CADILLAC

It is a pleasure to observe the joy with which new owners discover, one after another, the qualities which render the Cadillac unique and unrivalled—their intense satisfaction, in particular, with its never-lessening dependability.

The dependability which owners of the present Cadillac admire most—which gives them, they insist, an entirely new joy in motoring—is an old Cadillac quality raised to a new eminence.

The Cadillac does grow more dependable and more delightful in degree as the years go by, so new owners as well as old are warranted in their deep satisfaction.

MUSIC.

A most deserving institution will benefit through the proceeds of a song recital to be given in the St. Denis theatre on Monday evening next by Miss Vera Curtis, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Miss Curtis, who is a concert singer of note, will be assisted on this occasion by Karel Havlicek, violinist, and Willis Alling as accompanist. The program is an unusually attractive one, and includes several numbers with a cosmopolitan appeal, as will be seen from the following:—"Nymphs and Shepherds," Purcell; "Songs My Mother Taught Me," Dvorak; "Holiday," Curran—Miss Curtis. "Fantaisie Caprice," Vieuxtemps—Mr. Havlicek. Aria from Manon Lescaut, "In Quelle Trine Morbide," Puccini; Aria from Gianni Schicchi, "O Mio Babbino," Puccini—Miss Curtis. "Ave Maria," Schubert-Wilhelmy; "Les Cherubins," Couperin; "Rondo Papageno," Ernst—Mr. Havlicek. "Night Wind," Farley; "All For You," Martin; "Lassie O' Mine," Walt; "Tally Ho," Leoni—Miss Curtis. "By the Waters of Minnetonka," Lieurance; "Spring Song," Weil; with violin obligato — Miss Curtis and Mr. Havlicek.

Reservations can be made at the box office of the theatre any time.

The Fletcher method and piano school closed this week for the season with a series of seven recitals, the last of which was given by Miss Jean Robins and Miss Vernon Ross, who played the following program in a very creditable manner:—

Sonata Op. 27 No. 2, Beethoven (1st and 2nd movements)—Miss Jean Robins. Prelude in B Minor, Mendelssohn—Miss Vernon Ross. "Pastorale," Ladoff—Miss Jean Robins. Toccatta in C Minor, C. V. Stanford—Miss Vernon Ross. Minuet, Paderewski—Miss Jean Robins. "Polichinelle," Rachmaninoff — Miss Vernon Ross. Scene de Ballet, Coleridge-Taylor—Miss Jean Robins.

Those taking part earlier in the series included Margaret Russel, Caro Molson, Elizabeth Sims, Joan McMaster, Malcolm McKenzie, Naomi Lyman, Betty Robertson, Betty Duff, Peggy Yuile, Margaret Rawlings, Isabel Barclay, Flora Magill, Mary Goodfellow, Pat Fegen, Betty Butler, Florence Smith, Margaret Bryson, Stephen Lyman, Helen Thompson, Betty Webster, Dorothy Napier, Grace Rowley, Blossom Harding, Phyllis Baker, Annie Bruce, Ben Lyman and Jack Thompson.

A special London cable to The Star says Miss Mary Garden and G. M. Spangler, of the Chicago Opera Company, who came to London to investigate the possibilities of a season for their company at Covent Garden, regard the outlook for this experiment as uncertain, but not without hope. British music lovers would welcome the Chicago singers with enthusiasm, and public-spirited men and women of all parties and creeds would do likewise, but certain exigencies connected with the dates of existing arrangements and other matters constitute a difficulty more or less stubborn. However, Mr. Spangler thinks that every obstacle may be overcome. "We greatly desire to arrange this season," he says. "Naturally all singers like to appear in the world Metropolis. But such considerations are relatively slight. We have in mind the larger interests of opera as such, and the still more important cause of international good will."

Music in Russia Described by Pole Now Touring Canada

Paul Kochanski, the Polish violinist, now touring Canada and the United States, and until recently a professor in the Conservatory at Petrograd, has this to say of musical conditions in Russia:

"There is a great deal of music there, but its quality leaves much to be desired. There are still symphony orchestras, but they never rehearse. They don't want to, so they just don't. They may come together for an hour or so the day of the concert and go through a concerto with the artist, but when you arrive to play at the concert you will find different men from those with whom one rehearsed. This, you can see, is not conducive to good playing.

"In Kieff I played 149 times in 10 months. I used to be notified that I was to play next day at such-and-such a place, and I was told what to play. I had no choice, the Government jealously guarding all artistic talent. I was not paid for playing. We were simply given our food. You can see how glad I was to get out of Russia."

Beethoven Sayings in Relation to Music

"Art. Who can say that he fathoms it? Who is capable of discussing this great goddess?"

"Every day that we spend without learning something is a day lost."

"Handel is the unequalled master of all masters. Go, turn to him and learn, with few means, how to produce such great effects."

"True art endures for ever."

"I have had the temerity to introduce here and there a dissonant interval, sometimes striking it without preparation, sometimes leaving it abruptly. I hope this is no high treason. Too great caution is much the same as timidity."

"Music should strike fire from a man's soul."

Little Bits About Music and Musicians

Heifetz's adoption of the steel E string for his violin has led to a decided boom in strings of this material. So far, however, writes a correspondent, Heifetz is the only leading player who has forsaken gut for steel.

A Chinese legend states that China had musical machines 2,000 years ago. Ancient Egypt, says another legend, likewise shared the honor which we moderns failed in until a few years ago.

The dream of every phonograph owner is to possess a music machine that requires no attention. The nearest approach to this is a new machine invented by an American, which automatically change records, and plays any number of them up to ten or a dozen without attention. This invention is not an appliance only, it is a complete new phonograph, similar to other standard machines in appearance.

The general style of Egyptian music is not easily understood or imitated by Europeans, but when they have become somewhat familiar with the national idiom, the more refined forms of vocal and instrumental works become very pleasing.

UNUSUAL LEGAL POINT IN COBALT

COLBALT, June 18.—The point as to whether property owned by a private individual, but occupied by the Government, is assessable was raised before the local court of revision Thursday when a local lawyer, on behalf of W. A. Hansfield, of Montreal, appealed against an assessment of $10,000 on the portion of a block occupied by the Cobalt Post Office. It is the first time in the history of the town that an attempt had been made to assess the post office. It will be settled at an adjourned meeting.

Life and Character Reading.

JUNE 18.

The sign of Gemini under which this birthdate falls gives this person a changeable character. Sometimes restless, sometimes unreasonably jealous. This person should be early in life taught the great power of mind to conquer the lower nature. The child born on this date needs great spiritual help and teaching.

The tendency to overjudge, and to judge by fine appearance only and to be led away by a show of things rather than the real worth, is one which should be overcome. Love of praise is strong and the nature being generous and warm hearted, will often give lavishly where it is little deserved.

The governing planet is Mercury which gives talent and artistic ability in drawing and music.

CURRENT REAL ESTATE NEWS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

MUCH RED TAPE AND FORMALITY

Would-Be Home-Builder is Worried by Building By-Laws

NO ONE KNEW

Or No One Would Tell Him How to Proceed

"If some one would publish a pamphlet entitled "How to Build a House in Montreal," or something like that, and giving details of all the formalities that have to be gone through before one can get busy putting bricks and mortar together, I believe it would do a lot to smooth the path and encourage building." Thus spoke the would-be home-builder whose experiences have been told to Star readers during the past couple of weeks, when asked how the house was progressing.

After having pushed his investigations as regards cost of building, how to buy material and where to get work done, etc., sufficiently far to feel justified in going ahead with the job, he had set about obtaining a permit from the city authorities, and here again he found all was not plain sailing.

He had satisfied himself that his plans conformed to the city's requirements. He had attranged with his contractor for the laying of foundations, and then hied himself to the Permit Office to obtain the necessary authority. His brief adventure there, told in his own words, was as follows:—

"A most courteous employe received me there, handed me out a huge blue form to be filled in, and told me I could at the same time pass round to the other end of the office and pay my five dollars to have my "lines and levels" marked out. My land had already been marked out by a surveyor, but that was not sufficient for the city. They must mark the building line themselves, and must get five dollars for doing it. I might be glad I was not building on a corner, otherwise it would cost me ten.

MUST WAIT TEN DAYS.

"I cheerfully handed out the necessary bill, giving the necessary particulars regarding my land. 'What do I do next?' I then enquired. 'You can go home now and wait patiently till our people have been up to your lot and put the stakes in,' was the reply. 'How long will that take?' 'Ten days at least. Perhaps more. We are badly understaffed in the surveyors' office.' So I had no alternative but to go back and see my contractor and postpone starting operations for another fortnight. I don't know if any other delays are awaiting me when I go back there.

"The most annoying bit of it to me is that I could have had the work done months ago, if any one of the multitude of contractors, architects, plasterers, plumbers, bricklayers, real estate men and amateur counsellors who have volunteered advice galore had thought to mention that I had to have the city mark out lines and levels in advance. Not one architect told me he had quite forgotten that this had to be done, and several contracting people frankly confessed they did not know.

BY-LAWS INTRICATE.

"It may have been silly of me not to know, but when men who live by building houses don't know, there is some excuse for me. It is probably not altogether the builders' fault they don't know. They tell me the building by-laws of Montreal constitute such a ponderous volume that no one outside the City Attorney's Office knows all about it. I have to build a two-storey house for instance, because the by-laws require it. But down two streets and round a corner from my lot a one storey establishment has just been completed. The by-law that affects me, only extends to the end of the second street, and round the corner there is no restriction.

"Perhaps that is why some contractors give such high quotations. They happen to know more than the average man about these building by-laws, and charge for what they know as well as for what they do.

"At any rate, the issue of a pamphlet clearing up these irritating little difficulties and explaining how and in what order these formalities have to be performed would do more to encourage those of us who want to own our own homes than a whole lot of town planning lectures and meetings and such like.

"The one bright spot in it all is the work of the employes at the City Hall. I have found them, on every occasion I have been there, courtesy and efficiency itself, always ready to explain how I have to proceed, never even smiling at my horrible ignorance and taking endless pains to help me and others like me, who had occasion to do business there. It is certainly not their fault that they are short-handed in some services, and hampered with a mass of confusing red tape, and they certainly do all they can to smooth out the path for anyone who goes to them for help."

BUILDERS EXCHANGE NEW HOME.

The new 10 storey Beaver Building, on the site of the old St. Andrew's Church, Beaver Hall Hill, which will centralise under one roof all the building industries of Montreal, and give display space for manufacturers' agents. It will cost two million dollars and give employment on an average to 200 men. Construction will begin in August and will be completed in April, 1922.

BEAVER BUILDING WILL BE COMMENCED IN AUGUST AND READY APRIL 1922

Erection of the new 10-story building on the site of the old St. Andrew's Church, which will be the future home of the Builders' Exchange and kindred industries, and which will be appropriately named the Beaver Building, "after the first builder," at the same time conveying its distinctly Canadian origin, will be commenced towards the end of August and will be ready for occupation by April 17, 1922. Demolition of the church on the site will be undertaken during July. The total cost of the new premises and the site is about two million dollars, and the project, it is estimated, will give employment on an average to some 200 men.

The option on the property was formally transferred to the new Beaver Building Company, Ltd., at a meeting of the directors held on Wednesday, presided over by K. D. Church, president of the Builders' Exchange, at which reports of the preliminary work done in connection with the scheme were approved and adopted. The fact that the work is to be proceeded with almost at once shows that contractors and builders consider that now is the time to build, and conditions will not be more favorable as the season advances. Mr. Trotter of the Builders' Exchange, told The Star. The company were anxious to push the work forward to relieve the present situation and to prevent their best mechanics leaving the city.

Under the scheme of financing every tenant of the building will be a joint proprietor, as for every foot of office space occupied, he will take up five dollars worth of stock. For instance, a firm having an office of 200 feet will take up $1,000 worth of stock, and he will pay rent at the rate of one dollar and a half per foot per month. Thus each tenant-owner will be able to estimate right away his fixed charges per year and will stand in no fear of soaring rent and insecure tenure. The floor space available is 15,000 feet per floor or a total of 150,000 feet.

UNIQUE PROPOSAL.

In connection with the ownership of the building, a unique proposal has been made, that a subsidiary company be formed within the parent company which would control either a floor or half a floor, the space to be entirely devoted to the interests of manufacturers agents. In this section would be provided a common telephone, stenographical and clerical service, while suitable display space would be arranged for goods in which these agents were interested. A special advantage of this section is that it would provide a central depot for agents travelling from city to city, at which their mail would be delivered and dealt with, together with other business matters. Already this idea has been taken up with enthusiasm, and a committee has been formed to bring it to a successful conclusion. Certain corridors of the building will be devoted to exhibits, somewhat after the manner adopted by the C.P.R., and these will bear the manufacturing agents' cards, so that persons wishing to do business will have data immediately and quickly available.

DEMOLITION LET OUT.

It is understood that the work of demolition and erection is being let out to various trades contractors, with a view to spreading the work among the building trades' own men. In that way, it is figured, the greatest relief will be afforded to unemployment in the city. The construction of the building will be of the latest type, fireproof masonry, reinforced with steel, while the exterior walls will be of stone up to the second storey and above the main cornice, while the intermediate walls will be of brick. A special feature in the lighting arrangements. A wide space is being left along the left side of the building instead of resorting to any sort of court or area for light. This ensures the best of light and is equivalent to full street space on all four sides. The orientation of the building is such that every office receives its portion of direct sunlight, morning and afternoon, and there will be no dark offices. The main entrance will be on Belmont street at the upper level, and another entrance will be on the corner of Lagauchetiere and Beaver Hall Hill. A battery of four elevators will be installed.

The commercial value of having all branches of the building industry centralised under one building is recognised by the fact that among the applications for floor space in the new Beaver Building is an English manufacturer of artistic brass and other metal goods, who desires an office and ample exhibition space. The inquirer is a director of Harcourt, Ltd., Birmingham, one of the leading brass founders, a director of Birmingham Small Arms Company and of the English Vickers Co.

The Builders' Exchange have moved their offices from Drummond Building to 10 Belmont street, adjacent to the scene of operations, in order to keep in direct touch with the work and for the convenience of those carrying it out.

PURCHASE SITE UPTOWN.

The Northeastern Lunch Company have just acquired from the Belgo-Canadian Real Estate Company property situated at 459 and 471 Phillips Square, for $130,000. While it is quite possible that this property may ultimately be used for the establishment of a new lunch counter, it was stated at that firm's offices this morning that they had no intention of using the site immediately. It was purchased purely with the idea of having a site available for extensions whenever it might be needed.

CONTRACT AWARDED.

The Administrative Commission has just awarded the contract for construction of underground conduits for electric wires in District 1 to G. M. Gest, Ltd., for $161,908.91. This district lies between St. Lawrence, Notre Dame, McGill and Commissioners streets. The plans for these underground conduits prepared by the electrical department of the city have been approved by the Public Service Commission.

FRENCH BUILDERS SEEK MEMBERS

An active membership campaign is now being carried on by La Chambre de Construction of Montreal, an association of master-builders, builders and contractors, recently established on the same lines as the Montreal Builders' Exchange, and the Sherbrooke and Quebec Chambres des Construction. At a meeting held last night in the Builders' Exchange, at which A. J. Gratton presided, twenty active members joined the Association. The officers are: A. Gratton, president; J. St. Pierre, vice-president; A. Plamondon, secretary-treasurer, and they will represent the new organization at a conference of the Chambres de Construction of Quebec, Sherbrooke and Montreal to be held here on June 27. At this meeting the basis will be laid for a provincial association of contractors, such as already exists in Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and which will guard the interests of general contractors in federal and provincial legislation. The local association solicits the membership of all French and Canadian employers, who are interested in the progress of construction in the city, and in the passage of legislation which neither hinders building nor renders it expensive or unhygienic.

CEMENT BUILDING.

Excavation work on the site of the new Canada Cement building proceeding steadily for three days, and normal progress is being made. The George A. Fuller Company, contractors for the Canada Cement Company, is now starting to let out the contracts for the various trades, which will commence work on the building once the foundation is laid.

OUTREMONT MAKES REAL ESTATE DEAL

The successful conclusion of a real estate venture by Outremont City Council was revealed at an informal meeting of that body this week. The meeting was necessarily informal, there being no quorum to transact official business. The deal in question concerned land north of Cote St. Catherine Road, which the Council bought some years ago and improved, but in spite of its many attractions, were unable to find purchasers for the lots.

In 1919 the Council decided to build on these lots themselves, and accordingly erected twelve cottages at prices ranging from $12,400 to $19,500. In a comparatively short time they had succeeded in finding purchasers for all their cottages, at prices which cover the cost of building, plus $1 a foot for the land. They have thus disposed, up to date, of $43,600 worth of land, which before building they had found unsaleable, and have substantially increased the population. Incidentally, since this was done, the remaining lots owned by the city have started to attract purchasers, and one or two have already changed hands.

OPEN EVENINGS

SHERBROOKE MARCIL TRUST CO. ST JAMES ST MONTREAL BOULEVARD

Last week a large meeting of prominent citizens met at the Board of Trade, and unanimously resolved to take immediate steps to open up to traffic without further delay a magnificent thoroughfare from the present terminus of Sherbrooke Street at Montreal West right through the Lakeshore District, as far as Ste. Anne's, to be known as Sherbrooke Boulevard.

This Boulevard will be 200 feet wide, and about 20 miles long, as it will eventually cross the whole Island of Montreal. It will be one of the finest Avenues in America, and in fact, in the world.

The Federal Government has subsidized the Company which has undertaken the immediate construction of the long looked for bridge between Ste. Anne's and Isle Perrot, and another between Isle Perrot and Vaudreuil. The piers for the bridges are to be built for the fall, and the bridges completed and open to traffic for next spring. They will be the connecting link between the Mainland and the West End of the Island of Montreal and the natural extension of the projected Sherbrooke Boulevard.

In view of the above hard facts, no sane person will now dare to pretend that the realization of a Sherbrooke Boulevard crossing the whole Island of Montreal, is only a dream.

For the above reasons, the lots that will front on, as well as those that will be adjacent to this Boulevard are eagerly bought by shrewd and experienced real estate dealers, investors, and the public in general, who are not slow to appreciate a real opportunity to make money, such as the one now offering.

We control the sale of thousands of lots in Notre Dame de Grace and in the famous Marcil Lakeshore Garden sub-divisions at Dixie, Dorval, Strathmore and Lakeside, through the centre of which this magnificent roadway will run.

Notwithstanding the unprecedented demand now existing for these lots, we are still selling them at last year's prices, which are much lower than prices asked for adjacent and less valuable properties. They average about 15 cents a foot, and as low as 8 cents a foot, the average price per lot being about $200, with some as low as $150, payable 10% cash, and $5.00 a month or more. These prices however are subject to increase any time without notice, so if you have been considering the purchase of a Home site or building lots for safe investment and large profits in the near future, don't hesitate any longer.

While this great sale lasts, we build houses at cost for homeseekers, on our own properties, or advance them the money to do so on payment of 10% down, and the balance in monthly instalments, the same as rent, with privilege of making prepayments or paying off in full at any time, without notice.

Branch offices on each property open Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, in charge of courteous representatives who will be pleased to show you around, without any obligation whatsoever on your part. Or else, mail the attached coupon immediately, and receive full particulars by return mail.

Why not secure that Safety Deposit Box NOW, in our modern Fire and Burglar Proof vault, and be relieved of all anxiety in connection with your valuable papers, etc. We have them from $5. a year up, or less than two cents a day. They are better and cheaper than any form of insurance.

COMMERCIAL REAL ESTATE OFF COLOR

Real estate conditions as far as commercial properties are concerned are very inactive owing to depression of business, buyers preferring to wait until financial conditions improve, was the general report this week. The position with regard to residential property is much the same, it is stated, though many buyers may be compelled to build in the fall, as there is practically nothing to rent, and much house building is anticipated about that time. Considerable activity along these lines is being experienced in Back River district, where quite a number of purchasers of vacant lots are erecting six roomed cottages, the low price of the land off-setting any increased cost of construction in this type of house.

BUILDING PERMITS

A large number of new building permits have been granted at the City Hall during the present week, but no record is available yet owing to the inspectors being engaged in preparing their monthly reports. The department states, however, that the building industry that showed such good progress at the beginning of the month is being maintained. Among the permits given for alterations during the week are the following: J. M. Aird, St. Urbain street, house, $9,000; L. Rudner, St. James west, house, $1,500; J. McDonald, Clanranald street, house, $5,000; Asana Biscuit Co., Dalorimier avenue, house, $2,000; J. E. Lafontaine, DeVilliers street; D. Bourbonnais, Prud'homme ave.; Rosa Lapmer, St. Denis, and H. Robert and J. E. Forrest, Notre Dame east, each doing alterations costing $1,000 to their houses. F. H. Wilson has a permit to alter a house on McGregor street, costing $45,000, and the City and District Savings Bank to its property on St. James west, in St. Henry ward, costing $2,275.

Real Estate Murders

Montreal has had two recent experiences of "murdering" real estate and its values. These have been so glaring that we cannot allow the matter to go unnoticed.

WHEN You have a case in Law, you consult a Lawyer of the Montreal Bar; when you want a Notarial Deed made out, you consult a Notary of the City of Montreal; when you have a case to be tried it is heard in the Court House in Montreal, and not in a foreign land;

CONSEQUENTLY when you wish to buy or sell Real Estate you should consult a Member of the Montreal Real Estate Board, which is a Branch Association of The Montreal Board of Trade;

BECAUSE each and every Member is not only a Tax Payer in the City and Province, but is qualified to look after your interests without the aid of a Woolworth store or any outside interference;

THEREFORE in order that you may know the names of the Members of The Montreal Real Estate Board, we give you a list of same herewith:—

QUEBEC IS MECCA FOR U.S. TOURISTS

Beautiful Roads for Motoring from New York City to Montreal

The fine, well kept stone highway the entire distance from New York to Montreal is making the Adirondack-Montreal-Quebec tour one of the most novel, attractive and delightful panoramic automobile trips in the world. All a motorist has to do to make the journey one long, grand outing is to keep to the perfect New York State and King Edward Highways and he will journey through the most fascinating and ever alluring section of the Adirondack Mountains right into Montreal and thence to quaint old Quebec.

The trip replete with pleasant surprises and memory markers. The well kept N. Y. State highway skirts forests and streams, rivers and lakes, wilderness and metropolis. From start to finish it is brimful of pleasure, as well as instruction and novel experiences. Extremes seem to meet at almost every turn. From the rush and turmoil of city life, with its brick and mortar confines, to the supreme delight and freedom of the great outdoors gives one a taste of the newer and better life, while at the journey's end the automobilist is captivated by the proverbial hospitality of Quebec.

One has only to drive along the beautiful highways of Quebec, to look at its monuments raised in honor of the country's pioneers and men of note—Champlain, Cartier, Maisonneuve, de Salaberry, Wolfe and so on—to see the hundreds of wayside shrines that dot the highways and byways throughout the countryside, and the fine churches that rear their stately spires in every parish, to realize that the French Canadians draw their inspiration to progress from higher things than the events of the moment.

The King Edward highway, which has its nothern terminus in Montreal, links up with the Adirondacks, the White and Green Mountains and the well known routes in New York and the New England States, while the new Montreal-Quebec highway, which runs for much of its distance along the north shore of the St. Lawrence, forms an ideal means of travel between the metropolis and the capital. All along the main highway the visitor is in touch with civilization, for the villages, with their quaint thatched houses and barns, seem to stretch for miles, and every farmhouse is in itself a "welcome" sign to the tourist to bid him pause and refresh himself in body and mind.

From Quebec city the motorist can easily make many enjoyable trips. He can run down to Montmorency Falls, alongside of which is Kent House, once the residence of royalty, or go on to Ste. Anne de Beaupre, famous for its churches and shrines, its Scala Sancta and its monasteries, a quiet little town to which thousands of tourists wend their way every year.

Detailed description of the different routes that may be used to reach Quebec and full information may be obtained from the Tourists' Bureau of Montreal, 909 New Birks' Building, Montreal, Canada. For Adirondack booklet and information apply to Geo. W. Ryan, Secretary Adirondack Resorts Association, Plattsburgh, N.Y.

BRITISH WORKMEN IN DISTRESS IN U.S.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 18.—Scores of workmen, recently arrived in this country are applying to the United States immigration authorities here for deportation to their home countries. They say they have been unable to find employment and unless they are sent home they will become charges on the countries in western Pennsylvania where they reside.

W. W. Sibray, immigration inspector in charge of the Pittsburgh district, said today that many of these men were from Great Britain, good workmen who came here when the mills were in full operation, and had no difficulty in obtaining employment. Since the depression set in they have been out of work. He said that under the law he was unable to aid them in any way.

CAPE BRETON STOPS IMMIGRATION.

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., June 17.—Of the 96 passengers arriving on the steamer Kyle this morning from Newfoundland, 45 are being sent back tonight. This is due to strict enforcement of the immigration laws, rendered necessary by an overstocked labor market at present in Cape Breton. Large numbers coming lately from the ancient colony have been obliged to return to secure employment.

OPTIMISTIC REPORT OF CANADIAN WHEAT

U.S. Agriculture Department Gives Dominion High Place

WASHINGTON, June 18 (By Canadian Press). — In its summary of foreign crop prospects up to June 16 the United States Department of Agriculture gives an optimistic statement as to Canadian wheat. It says:

"In the prairie provinces of Canada, where over 90 per cent of the wheat crop of Canada is grown, climatic conditions have been unusually favorable to spring seeding, which has been much earlier this year than last, when scarcely any sowing was accomplished before May.

"Omitting the three Atlantic provinces, the proportion of spring wheat sown in the remaining six provinces is 32 per cent, as against 12 per cent last year. While it is far too early in the season to say at all precisely what the final results are likely to be, some unofficial reports are estimating the Canadian wheat area as high as 1,200,000 acres more than last year, with a promise of 18 bushels per acre, while the total is placed at approximately 320,000,000 bushels."

DEATH SENTENCE FOR LODER, P.E.I., MURDERER

Summerside Man Shaken When the Date of Hanging Pronounced

PICTOU, N.S., June 18 (By Canadian Press).—George E. Loder, of Summerside, P.E.I. was sentenced to be hanged on August 31 for the murder of Daniel Barry, of Pictou, by Mr. Justice Russell, at the criminal trial sittings of the Supreme Court here yesterday. Loder was evidently shaken when the judge pronounced sentence. His face was haggard and his eyes were red from lack of sleep. Asked if he had anything to say, he replied in a shaky voice barely audible to those at the entrance of the crowded courtroom that he had not.

The murder of Daniel Barry took place on the night of December 30 last. Loder was arrested some time later at Summerside, P.E.I., where he made a confession of the crime.

SEAMEN ARE SENTENCED.

PORTLAND, Maine, June 18. — Seven men indicted for the murder of James Walker, negro seaman on the schooner Mary F. Barrett, in the harbor here on May 21, pleaded guilty to manslaughter yesterday. They were sentenced to the state prisons for terms ranging from 2 to 11 years.

TO AUDIT BOOKS OF DEPARTMENTS

Alleged Irregularities to Be Probed—Many Arrests Made

OTTAWA, June 18.—(By Canadian Press.)—An independent audit of the books of those departments which are involved in irregularities whereby the Government has been defrauded out of thousands of dollars in exchange, has been decided on, and G. T. Clarkson, of the firm of Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth, Toronto, has been engaged to make the audit. This announcement was made by Sir George Foster, acting Prime Minister, at the close of a Cabinet sitting yesterday afternoon. It is understood that the auditor will start work on the books of the Militia and other departments next week.

At the present time certain officials of the Militia Department are under arrest charged with assisting in the frauds whereby the Government is said to have lost an appreciable sum of money. In some quarters the amount lost is said to less than ten thousand dollars, but the auditors will arrive at the exact situation. Ernest A. Robinson and Arthur E. Hill, of Ottawa, who were charged with obtaining money from the Department of Militia and Defence with intent to defraud, were acquitted by a jury some few days ago.

BERLIN FEARFUL ANGLO-SAXONS OUT FOR WORLD POWER

Harding's Plan for British Friendship Arouses Much Comment

PRE-WAR ACCORD

Say World Hegemony Passing Into Hands of Britain and United States

BERLIN, June 18 (Special Cable to Montreal Star and Phila. Ledger. Copyright.) Reports from Washington and London that President Harding is working on a policy of understanding and co-operation with Great Britain in international affairs attract great attention in the German press and from public opinion. The newspapers display the dispatches prominently and under such headlines as "Anglo-Saxon alliance," "British-American entente for world domination," etc.

The conservative papers take the report as text for serving up again the war-time arguments of an insidious pre-war accord between Great Britain and America to overwhelm Germany and attribute the suggested entente designs against France and Japan.

ANGLO-SAXON STATES LEAD.

Conservative and Liberal papers unite in voicing the opinion that world hegemony is passing, or already has passed, into the hands of Anglo-Saxon powers.

The Vossische Zeitung, which long has been a consistent advocate of the so-called continental policy of alignment of continental European powers, including Germany and France, against Great Britain and America, assumes that the Washington report is a semi-official announcement of American conditions for the creation of a system of Anglo-Saxon hegemony for submission at the impending Imperial Conference in London, notably the naval demands which the British Empire must satisfy in order to guarantee the predominance of the white race in the Pacific ocean.

WOULD CURB FRANCE.

The Vossiche Zeitung also interprets the reported aim of the Entente to restore order in the world as meaning pressure to end spedily the numerous conflicts in Europe and Asia Minor which now are clouding the international map, and declares the statesmen of Washington and London evidently intend to make the degree of security which they guarantee France dependent upon French readiness to accept an Anglo-Saxon solution of European and Asiatic problems.

The Lokal Anzeiger thinks the proposed entente would curb France effectively and that Germany therefore has no objection to an alliance which will enable England to discontinue paying France for support in international affairs by concessions at Germany's expense.

The extreme reactionary Deutsch Zeitung discusses the matter from a military angle and argues that the new policy is due to the realization by England and America that military conflict between the two powers would be bound to be inconclusive both on land and sea, that warfare merely would give the outside powers an opportunity to profit at their expense.

ANNIVERSARY MASS.

HOOLAHAN—Mrs. Hoolahan and family wish to thank their relatives and kind friends; also G. Gilmour Co., for their kind sympathy; also spiritual and floral offerings during their recent sad bereavement.

QUARTERMAN—A requiem High Mass will be sung in St. Michael's Church on Monday, June 20, at 8 a.m., for the repose of the soul of Sydney F. Quarterman, who passed away June 17, 1920.—R. I. P.

FIVE BILLION LOSS IN WAR TRANSPORT OF UNITED STATES

Sale of Vessels on Board's Hands Showed Net Less Than Billion

LOSS ON RAILROADS

Final Cost Should Aggregate Two and Half Billions

WASHINGTON, June 18—(By John Gleishner, United News).— The Government's venture in transportation—land and sea,—will entail a total loss of nearly five billion dollars, it is now clear.

The new Shipping Board, in conference with President Harding, Friday was instructed to charge off as loss the enormous war costs which have been carried on the books, and start afresh with its assets measured on a definite basis. This means that probably two and a half billions, invested in ships, must be regarded as a pure war expenditure on which no recovery can be expected.

The Shipping Board and its subsidiary organization, the Emergency Fleet Corporation, represent a combined investment of approximately $3,850,000,000, figuring the appropriations of Congress from the time the shipbuilding program began until now. To show for this the Government possesses some 1,500 vessels, of nearly 11,000,000 deadweight tons, of uncertain value. It is figured that sale of these vessels will net less than a billion; one authoritative estimate was $750,000,000. If the latter figure is correct, the loss would be $2,600,000,000 but other assets of the Board may scale this down to a limited extent.

TOTAL LOSS MOUNTING.

The total loss to the Government as a result of railroad operation is mounting as settlements with the roads are made and other claims are adjusted. Information put before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee indicates that the final cost from all sources will aggregate nearly two and a half billions. The accurate total will not be available for years, for settlements have been made with only about fifty of more than 500 principal railroads, and literally thousands of cases involving the Government are pending or will be filed in courts.

Direct operating loss during the period of federal control was $900,000,000; claims arising out of operation will total $500,000,000. The latter are for personnel injured, fire losses, overcharges, settlements with the short line roads and marine companies, and similar claims. One forest fire in Minnesota alone has caused 5,000 cases to be brought against the Government, and it is expected will cost from $25,000,000 to $40,000,000.

SHOULD REDUCE TOTAL.

To this should be added $600,000,000 which the Government lost because it guaranteed the income of the roads during the first six months of private operation. Then, in addition, claims for deterioration and lack of maintenance under federal control now in process of settlement aggregate $1,250,000,000.

The total is $3,030,000,000. The actual loss, however, will not be this great. Claims for maintenance probably will be settled for fifty cents on the dollar and the Government has some counter claims against the roads.

MAY SEEK RE-ELECTION.

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., June 18.—It is persistently reported here that Hon. George Langley, defeated Minister of Municipal Affairs in the Martin Government, will seek re-election in Cumberland, a defeated election seat.

HEAVY SENTENCE FOR AUTO THEFT.

WINNIPEG, Sask., June 18.—The first sentence here under the recent amendments to the Criminal Code, which calls for imprisonment without option of fine upon conviction for automobile stealing, was imposed yesterday by Sir Hugh John Macdonald, when George Allen received a two year sentence. Allen had previous convictions of theft of autos against him.

UNITE EX-SERVICE MEN.

OTTAWA, June 18.—Prompt support for the idea of forming a Canadian Legion of War Veterans by uniting all organizations of ex-service men in the Dominion has come from the Westboro branch of the G.W.V.A., which at a meeting last night unanimously passed a resolution endorsing whole-heartedly the plan of a group of Toronto veterans' leaders for such a movement.

CANADIAN GENERAL TALKS OF RUSSIA

Her Problem Now Not Unlike That of Canada's Early Days

LONDON, May 27.—(Star Special. By Mail from Doris Hemming.)—The reconstruction of Russia presents a problem akin to the development of Canada in the early days after Confederation, said Major-General Alex. McDougall of Ottawa, when interviewed by your correspondent this morning, on his return from Latvia and Lithuania. If anything the Russian problem is simpler and a stage further advanced, for Canada was obliged first to build her railways and then to bring in people to develop the country and create trade.

In the case of Russia the railway lines are laid, and the population is already there. The potential wealth of the country is incalculable. It is only rolling stock and a credit system that is lacking, and these must be built up if Russia is to take her place in the commerce of the world.

That Russia is a vital factor in the reconstruction of Europe, General McDougall is firmly convinced. On her prosperity depends not only the young republics on her borders, but the whole of Eastern and Central Europe. She can continue to be self-supporting so far as the bare necessities of food and clothing are concerned, but it is obviously to the interest of Canada and Great Britain, as international traders, to raise the Russian standard of living from its present low level, and by so doing create a demand for their goods.

General McDougall, like all other Canadians who are in touch with Russia at the present time, regards the revolution as un fait accompli, and considers the situation on its merits. The Russian peasants were bound to be liberated from their serfdom eventually, and it is fortunate for the future of the country that they are a hard working, tractable, sensible people, excellent material upon which to build up a new state.

Their leaders are also remarkable men. Lenin in particular is an extraordinary character. In General McDougall's opinion, he and his associates are the only group in Russia today who are capable of leading Russia out of the dark chaos of revolution back into the daylight of normal life.

The General holds a high opinion of Mr. Krassin's business ability. A Siberian by birth, he has had long experience in railroading and engineering. He is a man who has personally held important executive positions before the revolution, and he, therefore, looks upon international trade matters with much the same sane judgment as does the average Canadian captain of industry.

The crux of the whole situation is the lack of a credit system to facilitate trade relations between Canada and Russia, says General McDougall. Just as in the old days in Canada, agricultural machinery and seed had to be advanced to the farmer to be paid for out of the proceeds of the crop, so today individual firms, if they wish to trade with Russia, must be ready to supply the peasant with the means of production on credit.

Some system of credit will have to be evolved before trade can be developed to any extent, the banks or the government or both giving the exporter a certain amount of assistance. Exactly on what lines this credit fabric can be built up is hard to predict, as the solution of the problem is one to be determined by the great financial houses. It is one which the Canadian banks with their past experience ought to be more in a position to advise upon than perhaps any other such institutions elsewhere.

General McDougall is well pleased with the progress of his own business in Russia. The Soviet method of leasing timber limits differs in detail, but not in principle, from the system in force between the Canadian Government and the pulp companies. Where the Canadian Government leases the "stumpage" at a fixed sum per acreage, the Soviets demand a percentage of the output. At the end of five years the net result is very much the same, and one method is quite as practical as the other.

"Personally I am not an advocate of communism," said General McDougall in conclusion. "I look upon it merely as a phase in the gradual reconstruction of Russia."

CALGARY, June 18.—Members of the National Council of Women, yesterday afternoon went on record as favoring the appointment of women to the Senate in Canada. The resolution was adopted with but one dissenting vote.

ARBITRATION'S END IS FORECASTED

Board Allows Letter of Sir A. W. Smithers to Be Filed

The approaching end of the Grand Trunk arbitration was indicated yesterday in a remark by W. N. Tilley, K.C., that "the weather is getting warmer, and it is a good thing we are not sitting in July." The session was taken up with the consideration of further masses of figures and statements.

"We would have been all through now if it had not been for the disposition of my learned friend to debate this morning," remarked Pierce Butler, Government counsel, referring to F. H. Phippen, K.C., for the G. T. R., who was demurring at length at the admission of certain evidence by the Board of Arbitration. Mr. Phippen's objection was upheld, but Mr. Butler, explaining that he wanted a date recorded, finally won. This occurred during a re-examination of J. P. Newell, consulting engineer, whose unbroken ranks of figures still held the field.

H. A. Lovett, K.C., for the Crown, then unsuccessfully endeavored to file documents which the chairman ruled out as not being evidence.

"I would like to make an attempt to get some documents filed," said W. N. Tilley, K.C., for the Crown, and this time success fell to the Crown. Mr. Tilley then read a letter from Sir Alfred W. Smithers, chairman of the English directors, to Sir Robert Borden, then Premier of Canada, in which Sir Alfred wrote of the "inexpressibly bitter disappointment of the board and myself to have to think of giving up the G.T.R. Railway . . . but circumstances (of the war) over which we have no control are too strong for us to withstand."

J. B. McLaren, general auditor of the G. T. R., gave tables of revenues earned in 1920 and what would have been earned had 1921 rates been in force.

The difficulties and problems of Grand Trunk accounts were further delved into at the afternoon session by Mr. Tilley when he continued the cross-examination of Mr. McLaren. Mr. Tilley led witness through sheets of annual accounts, in quest of hidden reserves, deferred maintenance and other things as illusory as a will 'o the wisp, and as hard to follow. But Mr. McLaren was complimented by counsel on having produced, not all that was asked for, but still a vast amount of information in a very short time. His examination occupied the greater part of the afternoon.

A fifteen minute argument by counsel then followed, on the admissibility of evidence offered for the Crown. It was agreed by Eugene Lafleur, K.C., for the G. T. R., that it might be read, subject to certain reservations, to which Mr. Tilley agreed.

Why the "Queen" is the Best Preserving Jar on the Market

Some of the advantages may be explained by demonstration only, but we claim that the "KOLD PROSSO CLASPS" with which these jars are equipped are——Best for either process.

—Adjustable — hold lid tightly down or allow it to be elevated to permit escape of steam.
—Can't crack covers—no top wire.
—Easy to handle. Unnecessary to touch jar at all, either when sealing or carrying.
—Have flat covers—a great feature this, because it stands perfectly level when turned upside down.
—Never get loose — yet easy to open.
