MURRAY ST. FIREBUG HITS AGAIN

BY BRUCE PORTER

SHERBROOKE — Murray Street's infamous fire phantom, obviously angered about the slow progress being made in demolishing the two-storey house at Number 160, struck again in the wee hours of this morning.

Firefighters under Capt. Eudore Provost from Stations 4 and 1 arrived at the scene around 2:30 a.m. and found the second floor engulfed in flames. They attacked the flames from the exterior, since the six previous fires in the structure since last October put its solidity in doubt.

The phantom hit the structure four times within a week at the end of April. The suspected arson activities since proprietor Jean Goudreau requested a demolition permit from the city a week ago have not recurred. As of the first of May, the lower storey doors and windows have been covered with plywood and the demolition permit was tacked to the front of the building.

Firemen used numerous hoses and an aerial ladder to battle the blaze as it gutted the attic area of the house. The fire was under control at 4 a.m. and the five trucks left the scene around 6 a.m.

Of the six previous fires since Oct. 28, only the first was termed accidental.

Goudreau said demolition work on the house should begin soon. "He has had to wait for his insurance company to complete its photographic record of the damage the house sustained during the previous fires," he said. Goudreau plans to sell the land after demolition is completed.

Major arctic gas find announced

CALGARY (CP) — A natural gas discovery described as possibly the largest in Canada was announced Tuesday by Panarctic Oils Ltd.

Charles Hetherington, Panarctic president, said the find could add at least 10 per cent to Canada's proven gas reserves, estimated at 73 trillion cubic feet.

"This could well be the biggest gas field in the Arctic Islands," Hetherington told a news conference. He was joined by Bill Hopper, chairman of Petro-Canada, the federal oil company which provides about 80 per cent of Panarctic's financing.

"We're talking in the neighborhood of four to five trillion cubic feet — conceivably double that," said Hopper.

The previous largest discovery in Canada, also made by Panarctic in the Arctic Islands, was at Drake Point where reserves are estimated at 5.5 trillion cubic feet.

The discovery was also announced by Prime Minister Trudeau, who was campaigning Tuesday in Kamloops, B.C., for the May 22 federal election.

ATTACKS CLARK

"This would not have taken place if Joe Clark had been prime minister because he would have abolished Petro-Canada," Trudeau said.

Panarctic and Petro-Canada are two of the companies that will eventually gain a share in the field under an acquisition program of the Arctic Islands Exploration Group which also includes Esso Resources Canada Ltd., Gulf Canada Ltd., Sun Oil Co. Ltd., Phillips Petroleum Canada Ltd. and Global Marine Arctic Ltd.

The discovery is welcome news to sponsors of the Polar Gas Project. The Polar Gas consortium, which includes Panarctic and Petro-Canada, proposes to build a gas pipeline from the Arctic Islands to southern markets along a route that would run west of Hudson Bay.

Hetherington said the new offshore find, about 40 kilometres west of Loughheed Island and some 1,800 kilometres north of Yellowknife, "puts

Election roundup

Davis backs Clark

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis made a surprise appearance at a Joe Clark rally Tuesday night in a show of solidarity designed to bury indications of disagreement in the past couple of days.

Davis introduced the federal Conservative leader to an overflow election crowd of 1,000 as the next prime minister and added "I'm proud of him."

He strongly criticized Prime Minister Trudeau's recently announced proposals to bring the constitution home from Westminster. But, at the same time, he did not say whether he has changed his own policy that in some ways appeared closer to Trudeau's than Clark's.

Davis said of Trudeau Tuesday night: "You know, it indicates to me how far out of touch he's become. He still continues to be obsessed by confrontation and seems unable to build any common thrust towards co-operation."

Prime Minister Trudeau drew attention to the apparent disagreement between the two Tories Sunday night during the nationally-televised election debate when he said Davis favored Trudeau's plan to bring home the constitution as soon as possible.

Clark disagreed that that was the Davis stand.

On Monday Davis issued a carefully-worded statement showing he believes the constitution should be brought home as soon as possible, with or without provincial agreement. He had made a similar statement at the federal-provincial constitutional conference in February.

NDP Leader E. Broadbent says the federal government would be justified in holding its own referendum in Quebec if the question on sovereignty-association put by the provincial government in its referendum is unclear.

But there should be no federal referendum until after the provincial vote, he said Tuesday in a television interview with the French-language service of the CBC.

Broadbent accused Quebec Premier Rene Levesque of trying to suggest there can be "an independent Quebec in a strong and united Canada."

He blamed Prime Minister Trudeau for giving federalism a bad name in Quebec.

In Kamloops, B.C., Trudeau said a consortium largely financed by Petro-Canada found more than three trillion cubic feet of gas off Melville Island.

WOULDN'T HAPPEN

He said if a Conservative government had been in power the gas would not have been discovered because Clark would abolish Petro-Canada.

Clark, who has said a Conservative government would put Petro-Canada into private Canadian hands, rejected Trudeau's remarks in a speech in Kitchener, Ont.

He said Petro-Canada has only a small interest in the consortium. See ROUNDP, Page 2

ROBERT BEULLAC: Law degree comes in useful

SHERBROOKE — The word private detective may bring to mind a Barnaby Rudge or Columbo in a wrinkled trench coat, but the modern day P.I. doesn't lead quite such an exotic business.

Robert Beullac, a very tall (6' 5") studious-looking young man, operates a detective agency in the Montreal area called Metropolis Bureau of Investigation.

Born and educated in Montreal, Beullac, 35, is a graduate of McGill and has a Bachelor of Civil Law. "I am the third generation of lawyers in my family," he explained, "but the first to branch out into private investigation."

The company is licenced, bonded and authorized by the Quebec Department of Justice, and according to Beullac, serves businesses, organizations and individuals across Canada.

"Our business is to gather information, and in the case of working for a criminal lawyer such as Jean Pierre Rancourt, evidence."

Beullac emphasized that the private investigator is at quite a disadvantage in such a case as the Laplante trial, which recently ended in Sherbrooke.

"You must remember," the agent added, "we do not have the manpower, technical equipment or power of compulsion that the police have."

A witness must be persuaded to come forward diplomatically. "The police don't seem to like us very well, and the slightest wrong move on our part can land us in a peck of trouble, as happened here."

Mr. Beullac was stopped by police during the course of his investigation. See DETECTIVE, Page 3

Shefford Rhino candidate Lyse Dumouchel is no chicken on the issues and wants to move the national capital to the Granby Zoo.

Rhinoceros Party: Elections can be fun

By NELSON WYATT

SHEFFORD — The Grits, Tories and others of that ilk may as well toss in the towel — come election day Lyse Dumouchel is going to mop up the floor with them at the polls.

Ms. Dumouchel, a pert brunette sociologist who is currently running as the Rhinoceros Party candidate in Shefford came to this conclusion after viewing a poll released by the local French media recently. Though the poll did not record any reaction to the Rhinos, it did state that a hefty proportion of the region — about 50 per cent — were undecided.

"I want to clarify this," said Dumouchel, in a recent Record interview. "The undecided voters mentioned in the poll are in fact disguised Rhino votes. I'm very pleased with this survey because they say that there was not even one vote for the Rhinos but we know better."

"I'm very pleased to know I will be elected with a majority of 50 per cent."

Ms. Dumouchel, who was among the first group of 15 Rhino candidates announced in the country for the election, felt sure that she would be guaranteed a cabinet post after gaining the seat with such a large majority. Saying that she would prefer a post as Minister of Art or Zoology, Ms. Dumouchel added that prior to the interview she had been campaigning at the Granby Zoo where she had given the local four-legged rhino a banana and shaken hands with the elephant.

Since the Granby Zoo is located in Shefford, it gives the local residents an edge in her campaign and she said that one of the plans that the party intends to pursue "when we are elected" is the transfer of the national capital from Ottawa to the zoo, with Parliament being placed near the rhino cage.

The details of the Rhino campaign in Shefford leave one with no thought that there might be anything shady about it. The kick-off was in Miner Park "across from the Cantine Trudeau", where jugglers, the Rhino Band, unicyclists and artist Andre Brazeau helped Ms. Dumouchel launch her campaign. Brazeau contributed a huge eight-by-eight foot painting that was done at the rally. Following this there was a party in a local pub and, later in the week, an exchange of campaign platforms with Liberal candidate Jean Lapierre. While Lapierre was receptive to some of the Rhino ideas, others weren't.

Telling of a visit to the nationalistic Societe Nationale des Quebecois, where she unveiled the federalist portion of her election platform, Ms. Dumouchel said, "I'm in favor of bilingualism in my program but it is implemented in a program where the country will speak English for six months and French for six months. The Societe seemed very pleased with my program but only with one half of it."

"I don't know which half," she added. She ended her visit to the Societe by distributing a peanut to each person. See RHINOS, Page 2

Carter: Gas shortage 'sapping our strength'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says energy problems are "sapping away the strength of our nation," and residents of the U.S. have been unwilling or too timid to deal with the problem.

Carter's remarks came as some California drivers lined up for 12 blocks to buy gasoline at 99.9 cents a gallon, and New York Gov. Hugh Carey asked motorists to reduce their driving this month by 160 kilometres and ordered state agencies to cut their travelling by five per cent.

Meanwhile, there are indications the government is partially to blame for the gasoline crunch in California, a federal official says. And there were signs of new pressure for a world oil price increase.

These and other energy worries add up to what Carter on Tuesday termed "one of the most serious threats to our nation in peacetime that I have seen."

SIGNS LEGISLATION

Carter was to meet today with California Gov. Edmund Brown who signed a law Tuesday to keep gasoline stations open on weekends in an effort to make an even-odd rationing plan for the most populous state workable.

Brown said state police will enforce his order, but said it will be hard to tell whether a station is closed or out of gasoline. And he said it would be "totally inappropriate" for dealers to close their stations in a four-day protest against federal price controls.

"They misread the temper of the people if they think they can close down with impunity," Brown said.

Six outraged drivers in Los Angeles pummelled two station attendants when the station ran out of fuel. And four persons were injured when an 80-year-old man waiting in a gas line in North Hollywood suffered a seizure and lost control of his car.

SEEKS DELAY

Jim Campbell, an official of the California Service Station Association who spearheaded the protest movement, asked his members Tuesday to postpone the shutdown for 30 days "and listen to what the energy department has to say."

Department officials are considering whether to relax controls on gasoline dealers' markups. Currently, dealers are allowed an average markup of 7.3

cents a gallon — the 1973 rate — plus a three-cent allowance for costs.

Meanwhile, it was reported that Kuwait and Algeria are pressing for an increase in crude oil prices, but a Caracas newspaper said Venezuela does not plan to impose a planned price increase now.

A Federal Trade Commission (FTC) official said that agency is beginning an investigation into whether the three-month loss of Iranian oil caused current gasoline shortages or whether oil companies are "using it as an excuse" to cut supplies.

Empire's envoy queries student deaths

PARIS (AP) — An official of Amnesty International said Tuesday the alleged killing of about 100 schoolchildren in the Central African Empire was part of "a violent repression against a growing popular opposition" to Emperor Bokassa I.

In Rabat, Juan Juba, the empire's ambassador to Morocco, said the allegation that his government killed as many as 100 youngsters, aged eight to 14, last month, for rock-throwing protests against the wearing of school uniforms was unbelievable.

The French division of the London-based human-rights organization, which won the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize for its work on the plight of political prisoners, issued a statement Monday alleging the school children were suffocated, stabbed and beaten to death in April.

In Washington, Hodding Carter, a state department spokesman, said the department has received reports that between seven and 40 youths were killed in the Central African Empire following a roundup in mid-April in Bangui, the capital city.

Juba said he had seen reports about the allegations, but had no word on the matter from his government.

"On the face of it, and speaking only for myself, I find the report utterly unbelievable," he said. "Since the troubles in Bangui in January, everything has been completely peaceful there and as far as I know there have been no protests or demonstrations recently except for a few small strikes."

PROTESTERS KILLED

He was referring to a rock-throwing incident in January in which an estimated 50 university students were killed during protests over the uniform regulations.

Juba said he believed the sources for the Amnesty report may have been part of a "general campaign of denigration" against Bokassa.

In a dispatch late Tuesday from Yaounde, capital of neighboring Cameroon, Agence France Presse quoted travellers from Bangui as saying about 85 school children had died in detention in Bangui as a result of bad treatment.

The travellers were quoted as saying the children were accused of handing out leaflets calling on the country's workers to observe a general strike April 19.

The Central African Empire, landlocked in the heart of Africa, gained independence from France in August, 1960, when it became known as the Central African Republic.

Its first president banned all political parties and was ousted in a coup led by Bokassa in 1966. Bokassa declared himself president and dissolved the parliament. In subsequent years he converted to Islam but renounced the faith to become emperor.

election 79

OTTAWA (CP) — Officials began counting on Tuesday the ballots of 95,000 Canadians who were eligible to vote last week under special rules for next Tuesday's election.

The counting ends this weekend, but the results will not be known until Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel informs local returning officers one hour after their polls close next Tuesday.

Hamel's office was unable to say how heavy the special vote turnout was.

The votes of Canadian public servants, armed forces personnel and their dependents posted abroad are being flown to Ottawa until Friday night. They will be added to the votes of members of the armed forces in Canada who also voted last week.

MONTREAL (CP) — Radio-Canada, the CBC's French-language arm, has flatly rejected charges by Public Works Minister Andre Ouellet of bias in its federal election coverage.

News director Marc Thibault said in a statement Tuesday that Ouellet was either ill-informed or inattentive during television news broadcasts showing scenes from the campaign of Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy. Ouellet accused Radio-Canada Sunday of being "crassly partisan" in its coverage. As an example, he said a Roy rally in Chibougamau, Que., drew only 19 people, but in its report on the rally, Radio-Canada showed film of another event attended by 200 people.

TORONTO (CP) — If the three major political parties' predictions are correct, 18 women will be elected to the House of Commons in the May 22 federal election.

Lynn McDonald, president of the 170-member National Action Committee on the Status of Women, told a news conference Tuesday that her group asked the three parties which women candidates have the best chance of winning.

"All consider as we do that the nine incumbents have good chances of being re-elected," Ms. McDonald said in an interview later.

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is checking the medicare spending of all provinces but Health Minister Monique Beigne plans no new threats of withdrawal of federal funding, a spokesman for her office said Tuesday.

Miss Beigne has threatened that the Liberal federal government will withdraw medical insurance payments to Ontario and New Brunswick if erosion of medicare does not stop.

The spokesman said the threats were the result of an acceleration of routine checks of provincial spending that started in 1977 when the method of federal support for medicare was changed.

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says public funds were used last year to pay part of the cost of a $16,000 "pre-election research project" commissioned by the Liberal Party of Canada when it appeared a federal election would be called for the summer of 1977.

The newspaper quotes Charles King, president of Charles King Consulting Ltd. of Ottawa, as saying the prime minister's office paid $5,000 of the $16,000 cost of a briefing book "that would be a summary of five years of Liberal government" and was expanded to include a campaign handbook for Liberal candidates.

TORONTO (CP) — With the federal election less than a week away, anti-abortion and freedom-of-choice factions promise to heat up efforts to elect candidates who support their views.

So far however, the controversial issue of abortion has been a cool issue in this federal election campaign.

All three major parties report only a smattering of public pressure for abortion to become a crucial subject at the polls May 22, but groups opposing abortion say it is a grassroots concern that can influence votes.

QUEBEC (CP) — Liberal leader Claude Ryan has inscribed his first motion on the order paper of the Quebec national assembly — a move which will have the side effect of allowing him to dodge the constitutional crossfire between now and the federal election May 22.

The newly-elected member for Argenteuil gave written notice Tuesday of a motion urging debate on the province's role in a renewed Canada. Under assembly rules, the motion will not come up for debate until May 23, the day after the federal vote.

The move effectively rules out any other constitutional debate in the meantime, since no other motion dealing with the issue can be received until Ryan's is discussed.

Last week, Ryan and the provincial Liberals were heckled in the assembly when they refused to support a Union Nationale resolution condemning Prime Minister Trudeau's proposal to patriate Canada's constitution without the consent of the provinces.

HALIFAX (CP) — Who won the great television debate? The burgers say it was NDP leader Ed Broadbent.

A burger poll was established at a Halifax watering hole shortly after the May 22 federal election was called and has been attracting attention ever since.

To participate a patron orders a burger with the political affiliation — a Trudeauburger, Clarkburger or Broadbentburger.

Fred Creaser, part owner of the beverage room, said that Monday's sales indicate that Broadbent was the winner in Sunday's debate, and by the largest margin since the poll was started.

MONTREAL (CP) — Two polling officers in the west-end riding of Verdun have been dismissed after a vote allegedly was cast in the name of a dead person at an advance poll and three other cases of illegal voting were reported.

Returning officer Jacques Normandin said the incidents occurred at an advance poll at Manoir Verdun, a home for senior citizens, where a scrutineer, recommended by Liberal organizers, was alleged to have allowed three people to vote even though their names were not on the voting list.

Normandin also dismissed a polling constable after the man accompanied some voters to the polling booth.

Progressive Conservative candidate John Oss, running against Liberal Raymond Savard, said he also wants to know why 150 names were handwritten on the bottom of the Verdun voters' list for the May 22 federal election.

News Briefs

Namibia flareup predicted

OTTAWA (CP) — The Namibia dispute, which involves Canada, may soon flare up in the United Nations again as African states battle South Africa's independence plan for the territory.

Informed observers say they expect African states to again seek UN-approved economic sanctions against South Africa when the General Assembly meets next week.

Much will depend then on whether such countries as Britain will exercise their vetoes in the Security Council to prevent sanctions.

South Africa this week proclaimed an interim government in Namibia, the territory it has administered for more than 50 years. But it has left the door open for further talks on a UN plan for Namibia. Black African states oppose a South African-imposed solution for the territory.

Assassination squad fears voiced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators said Tuesday they cannot rule out the possibility that a death squad of the Peoples Temple cult is stalking U.S. leaders, seeking to carry out the last wishes of Rev. Jim Jones.

The investigators, reporting to the U.S. House of Representatives foreign affairs committee after a six-month investigation of the murder of Representative Leo Ryan in Guyana, said the possibility that cultists have a "death list" marking national leaders for assassination "should not be totally discounted."

Billy Carter denies loan

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Journal says Billy Carter has denied a published accusation that he helped finance the 1976 U.S. presidential campaign of his brother, Jimmy, with $500,000 that had been loaned to the family peanut warehouse.

The accusation is contained in an article written for The Nation magazine by free-lance journalist Peter Peckarsky of Washington, D.C. The article is to appear in the May 19 issue of the magazine, a spokesman for The Nation said Tuesday.

CTC proposes charter change

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission announced proposed changes to air charter rules Tuesday, relaxing restrictions on domestic and international charters.

The commission said it will hold public meetings here beginning July 9 to consider the recommended changes. The amendments would take effect Jan. 1 next year.

The proposals follow Transport Minister Otto Lang's statement last September asking the commission to consider changes to international charter regulations.

Israelis punish town

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — The Israeli military government on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River has ordered stringent punishment for residents of the Arab town of Bir Zeit, near Ramallah, following the latest in a series of clashes with Jewish settlers.

Under an order issued Tuesday, residents of Bir Zeit will not be allowed to go to Jordan via the Jordan River bridges or travel abroad, and will be forbidden to invite relatives from abroad this summer.

Warsaw pact urged to do more

BUDAPEST (AP) — Foreign ministers of the seven Communist-ruled Warsaw pact countries proposed Tuesday that Canada, the U.S. and all European countries meet later this year to work out ways of building confidence between East and West.

Trudeau was irresponsible in making his announcement before the stock market was closed and had broken agreement that any announcements would be made simultaneously by all consortium partners.

Broadbent listened to members of the Swampy Cree reserve at The Pas say that facilities on their reserve have been threatened by Indians angry because the federal government is enforcing the Migratory Birds Convention Act which is in conflict with Indian treaty rights.

Broadbent said he supported the Indians and would take up their case as soon as the election was over.

Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy appealed to voters to elect a bloc of Social Crediters to defend Quebec interests in the Commons.

Roy, ending the day at a dinner in Mont St. Gregoire, 45 kilometres southeast of Montreal, said it was high time Quebecers sent representatives to Ottawa who would no longer be a minority in the caucus of a big national party "where they must always be quiet in the name of presumed national unity."

A solid group of Social Credit members of Parliament, identified exclusively with Quebec, would have all the latitude necessary to force a government to consider the needs and wants of Quebecers, he said.

These members could exert pressure in agriculture, industrial development and constitutional matters, he said, particularly if the Social Credit party holds the balance of power.

The leaders were on their final search for votes with the federal election only a week away.

present.

Ms. Dumouchel said that the bilingualism program is only part of a platform that includes promises in the local, provincial, national, international and cosmic spheres.

Among the ideas put forth are the installation of bilingual rhinos in the country's national parks, an encounter with people from outer space in the Olympic Stadium during the "Starmania" presentation in June, and the release of all the animals in the Granby Zoo, with the rhinos leaving first.

While zoo officials have not expressed any reaction, Ms. Dumouchel said some voters believe the idea is perhaps a bit risky for their liking.

She also said that there is a plan to nationalize the Cuban and Spanish sun, but before this could be undertaken in the Cuban case, a study would have to be completed on the effects of communist solar rays.

The Rhinos also do not intend to remain idle during the upcoming debate on the referendum. The Shefford candidate said the Rhinos will fill the gap left by the pro-referendum committee and the anti-referendum committee with a Maybe Committee. This group she said would not only supply the referendum question but also the answer, already checked off on the ballot when it is distributed.

"The question will be or not to be," confided Ms. Dumouchel, "and the answer will be maybe."

Besides the usual campaigning undertaken by all candidates, Ms. Dumouchel will be performing the death-defying stunt of taking a drink from the polluted Yamaska River, a brew termed a "Yamaska Frappe."

"I will take the drink and report the results two days later," she said.

Asked if she could determine a serious opponent in the Shefford race, Ms. Dumouchel replied, "Gerald Scott is a very handsome candidate. I would give him a peanut if I could."

Asked if she had any profound closing thoughts on the weighty task facing the voters when they enter the polling booths on May 22, Ms. Dumouchel concluded with a cheery, "Have a happy election."

Grafftey: Don't swallow all that Trudeau baloney

MONTREAL (CP) — Progressive Conservative Heward Grafftey, fighting his eighth campaign for the Commons in the rural Quebec riding of Missisquoi, came to the big city Tuesday to preach against the evils of 11 years of Liberal rule.

Painting Prime Minister Trudeau as a turncoat socialist and a man who uses the national unity issue for partisan gain, Grafftey urged urban-dwelling English Quebecers who consider Trudeau the only man who can stop Quebec independence to think again. "We in the Eastern Townships have never swallowed this baloney that there is one indispensable man who can save this union," he told a service club gathering of 200. "I know people in this audience are going to vote for Trudeau anyway. I cry. My heart bleeds."

Grafftey, who has lost only once since he was first elected to the Commons in 1958 and was one of two sitting Conservatives from Quebec at dissolution, accused Trudeau of concentrating on the unity issue because his economic record is a flop.

He recalled Trudeau's days as an "extreme socialist" NDP activist in the early 1960s in Quebec. "Trudeau never knew what work was, so he joined the Liberal party."

Grafftey, who unsuccessfully ran against Joe Clark for the Conservative leadership in 1976, said Clark has united the party "as never before."

Although the stout, hyperactive Grafftey — fondly called the "Gnome from Brome" by constituents and political commentators — is expected to hold his seat, he cautioned:

"I'm not a shoo-in."

Redistribution has added many Liberal-voting francophones to Missisquoi, and the Liberals are counting on 53-year-old housewife Mrs. Gisele Noel to reduce the 7,000-vote majority which Grafftey won in 1974.

DETECTIVE

in Sherbrooke and accused of impersonating a police officer. Although the badge he carries does not mention the word "police" on it and his weapon is licensed, he was stopped by local QPP officers, photographed and fingerprinted, a procedure reserved for persons accused of a criminal act.

"My work covers a wide variety of people," added Beullac. Of course, the company gets involved in marital indiscretions but under Quebec law, circumstantial evidence is all that is necessary in divorce cases.

Surprisingly, over half the company agents are women working in some cases with the men, sometimes alone. Certain assignments can be dangerous, but according to Beullac, he has never been turned down.

Law firms engage Metropol to help gather evidence pertaining to civil court cases. Beullac, with his background in law, shines in this area. Agents recently hired to investigate underground union activities in a large company stumbled on a lucrative car-theft ring and drug-trafficking operation.

Although Beullac claims the work is not as exciting as the television programs for the most part, he admits he carries a gun while he's working.

Beullac has coupled two university degrees, a bachelor of arts and another in criminal law, to form a philosophy on his profession.

"I have nothing to hide from the police," he says, "and I believe competition is important in society. We should all have the same objectives. That objective can be condensed to one noble, though often-maligned concept — justice."

The lanky agent feels the QPP is in part hampered by the large area it has to cover and feels the calibre of the investigative personnel is limited. According to Beullac, police investigators were a little too smug in the Marion case, remarking that evidence-seeking was bungled in their handling of the case. Beullac spent several months working for lawyer Jean-Pierre Rancourt gathering evidence for the defence of Valence in the celebrated case, travelling many thousands of miles through the Eastern Townships in his quest.

"What is happening today is that I find out we are not all equal before the law and these cases (Marion and Laplante) show the good and bad side of our judicial system."

One facet of his private investigator's work covers the investigation of the acquaintances of teenagers. Parents, not knowing what their kids are up to, may want to be reassured and the agency is in a position to tip them off that something is not okay before it becomes a problem. Organized crime is trapping young people who are gullible and affluent, a situation requiring, in many cases, a professional investigative approach and the Metropol Agency has the resources to handle this type of problem.

Because of Beullac's law background, the agency is often hired to prepare briefs, conduct research to bolster defence arguments and in effect, complete all the lawyer's paralogical work.

During the course of investigations, Beullac has crossed paths with criminals wanted on charges unrelated to his case. Fortunately, he has only had to fire his gun as a deterrent, adding "we don't look for confrontation."

Sizing up the lawyer's towering frame, taking into consideration his excellent physical condition and the fact that he is armed and proficient in its use one can only conclude Robert Beullac could hold his own, not only in court, but in the street as well.

Lennoxville police crack down

LENNOXVILLE (NW) — You had better not plan on squealing your tires in Lennoxville this weekend because local police will be out in force with their radar at the ready.

Police Chief Leo Hamel told The Record that the radar enforcement is being used to try and curb the high accident rate the town has been hit with lately. Hamel said that there have been 114 traffic accidents since the beginning of the year, with eight since the beginning of May.

Radar will be posted on St. Francis Road, with operations also carried out on Queen and Belvidere Streets. Police will be extremely vigilant concerning drag racing and reckless driving this weekend.

Hypermarche cuts prices

Effective today, Hypermarche is drastically cutting all fresh meat, poultry and fish prices, the chain has announced.

Under a new price structure, customers will pay, for example, 75 cents per lb. less for boneless round steak, 69 cents per lb. less for sirloin point roast, 59 cents per lb. less for blade roast, 29 cents per lb. less for regular ground beef, 50 cents per lb. less for centre-cut pork chops, 28 cents per lb. less for fresh whole chicken and $1.04 per lb. less for fresh halibut.

The Quebec food chain said the price cuts will affect all fresh meat, poultry and fish prices. A comparison chart of new and old prices will be published in special ads appearing in today's newspapers.

According to Barry Perzow, Hypermarche vice president and general manager, the new prices are not weekly "feature" or "special" prices. They are everyday prices "that make fresh meat, poultry and fish affordable to all once again and within reach of every consumer."

"There has been considerable demand from consumers to find a way to lower the price of these staple commodities around which most meals are planned and on which the major portion of the food dollar is spent," he said. "Accordingly we have struggled with the problem of finding a way to respond to this demand for some time. We believe we have found the way."

Perzow said it was his company's hope that increased volume from consumer support would make it possible to absorb the substantially reduced profit on fresh meat, poultry and fish.

BCS Cadet Inspection Friday

LENNOXVILLE — For the 118th year, the colour and traditions of the annual inspection of the Bishop's College School Cadet Corps No. 2 will be repeated on Friday afternoon, May 18th at 2 p.m. when 200 boys and 100 girls of the Corps will participate in demonstrations of precision drill, first-aid, unarmed combat, gymnastics and musical selections from the school's brass and pipe bands.

The highlight of the afternoon will be the inspection of the Corps by Major-General Richard H. Rohmer, CMM, DFC, OST-J, CD, QC, BA, LLD. Major-General Reserves of the Canadian Armed Forces. MGen Rohmer served as a fighter pilot during WW II earning the Distinguished Flying Cross. In 1946 he served with the RCN Reserve returning to the RCAF to fly Vampire jets in 1950. He retired in 1953 as Wing Commander.

In April 1975, MGen Rohmer was promoted to Brigadier-General and appointed Senior Air Reserve Advisor to the Chief of Defence Staff, and on the 1st of April 1976 was appointed Commander of the newly formed Air Reserve Group. In January 1978 he was promoted to the rank of Major General and received his present appointment.

MGen Rohmer was called to the Bar of Ontario in 1951 and is a member of the Board of Directors of a number of Canadian corporations and organizations. He is also an author of note of political fiction and non-fictional publications of the Canadian north and arctic.

The annual inspection is the culmination of nine months of cadet training during which the students receive instructions in regular cadet subjects with emphasis placed on their application to everyday civilian uses.

The inspection will be held on the BCS playing field, and in the event of inclement weather, will be transferred to the Bishop's University hockey rink.

kill them. All of these revolutions resulted in the establishment of a stronger central government.

Are Canadians capable of showing enough wisdom and lucid thought to protect a political formula, that of federalism under the central authority of a government which can protect the rights of the provinces without weakening its own strength, a strength which has served during the last 112 years to make Canada a great country. Are they capable of doing this with intelligence and in a condition of peace?

The population of Quebec is showing a remarkable maturity in all this. At the same time that it has put into office a nationalistic government which responds to its profound aspirations without forgetting about the aims of independence, it is preparing to vote for the Liberals because they seem to offer the best means of uniting the country.

If, after 20 years, the Conservatives have not been able to grow strong roots in Quebec, it is because they have not been able to convince Quebecers that they clearly defend the rights of Canadians from coast to coast."

Sweetsburg Ward

Robert Cameron, of Burlington, Vt., pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving on the Eastern Townships Autoroute, May 5, when he had consumed .220 mgs. of alcohol. He was fined $220 and costs, in default 30 days.

Judge Genest upheld a Crown motion that no delay be accorded despite objections by defence lawyer Pierre Gibeau. "We can't make any exceptions concerning United States residents," Judge Genest said. He then told the accused he would be given every possible opportunity to communicate with either his family or friends who could arrange to pay his fine to secure his release.

Cameron thanked the judge in fluent French before being lead off to cells.

Quebec, Ottawa sign pulp accord

SHERBROOKE — Ottawa and Quebec recently signed a five-year agreement which allots $150 million in aid to existing pulp and paper companies.

This aid will encourage investments in equipment modernization. The aim is to make these companies more competitive internationally by significant production cost reductions, better environmental protection, and energy conservation.

The amendment was signed, on behalf of the Canadian government, by Marcel Lessard, Minister of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion (DREE), and on behalf of the Quebec government, by Jacques Leonard, Minister of the Quebec Planning and Development Bureau, and Claude Morin, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs. Implementation for Quebec rests with the Ministry of Lands and Forests headed by the Minister Yves Berube.

The forest products industry's basic problem in Quebec is its decreasing ability to compete on foreign markets. Four main signs point to the general industry decline. First, the return on capital in the Canadian pulp and paper industry from 1965 to 1978 was 8.3 per cent compared to 11.1 per cent in the American industry and 11.2 per cent in the whole of the Canadian manufacturing sector. Next, there is a gradual shrinking of its share of American markets, declining from 40 per cent in 1950 to 30 per cent in 1976. In addition, an increase is noted in the difference in cost of making and delivering a ton of newsprint, between Quebec and the southern United States, which went from $16 in 1968 to $52 in 1977.

Finally, the workers, companies and governments have all experienced recent loss of revenue owing to work stoppages and mill closings which in turn result from unfavourable economic circumstances and fluctuations in demand.

KEITH SPICER COMMENTS:

Vote for Clark makes sense despite Levesque's preferences

Saying so is misleading and unfair, but it's eloquently true: Rene Levesque wants Joe Clark as prime minister of Canada.

It's misleading because in a democracy voters should not dismiss a candidate merely because he attracts strange bedfellows.

The classic indecency: a refusal to vote NDP only on grounds that a few communists (whom the NDP despises) do.

Canadians who believe that an 11-year-old Trudeau regime achingly deserves (and needs?) some time at pasture should not be made to feel that voting Tory is treasonable simply because Quebec's secessionist party wants Clark at Canada's helm.

For Clark personally, recalling Levesque's liking for him is as "unfair" as life itself. Has not Joe tried to learn French (it's stilted, but serviceable) and made the right noises about the Official Languages Act and "flexibility" for Quebec?

Yet the blushing fact of PQ preference for Clark remains. Why?

The PQ wants Clark as PM first to sharpen its propaganda. Getting rid of Pierre Trudeau would allow Levesque to claim that English Canada was "anti-French" — a wild but exploitable argument about a people who helped elect the longest-ruling prime minister in the western world. It would hand the PQ a tailor-made image of a "tribalized" Canada split into a French-Liberal Quebec and an English-Conservative "Canada."

In down-to-brass-tracks negotiating, the PQ believes it can manipulate Clark to gain independence. Levesque on honeymoon in Paris told Frenchmen (while saying he was federally neutral) that Clark did not understand Quebec issues very well. Joe's numbingly silly remark last week that Quebec had no right to "vote itself out of Canada" (an invitation to civil war?) confirms this.

Finally, the PQ regards Clark not just as clueless on Quebec, but delightfully weak. Mention him to a pequist organizer and you get a smirk of gleeful anticipation.

No doubt many pequistes claim that Trudeau's "stubbornness" on Quebec (sending in troops in 1970, refusing to hand over federal powers) actually helps the PQ. But because Trudeau has their number and is not a patsy, the secessionists fear him far more than they "love" him.

Until just before the current campaign, the PQ plan was discreetly to put its machine behind the Tory or Creditiste candidate with the better chance of knocking off a Liberal in a given riding.

When countryboy-spellbinder Fabien Roy took over the Creditiste leadership a few weeks ago, the PQ glimpsed a still-better opening to dump Trudeau: by backing a Creditiste revival in enough rural seats to rob Trudeau of the minimum 65 out of 75 seats he needs for a government-forming Quebec base.

Instead of getting Clark in by helping elect more hard-to-sell Tories (now lucky to snag two or three Quebec seats), the PQ is going for the same result by hitching its machine to fire-breathing Fabien: they hope he can grab 15 or 20 seats from Trudeau — probably enough to give Clark a minority government.

So sure is the PQ of this strategy that it has virtually taken over the Creditistes as its own federal wing. Intergovernmental Affairs minister Claude Morin, the PQ's top strategist, has lent Roy key organizers and advisers (several as actual candidates). Levesque has slyly passed the word

"down the pyramid" of his superbly structured party for everybody to get behind the disarrayed disciples of Real Caouette.

Will the new "Credito-pequist" party (as some French newsmen have dubbed it) manage to put Clark in office? The answer may lie in last week's stunning federalist victories by Claude Ryan's Quebec Liberals in the Argenteuil and Jean-Talon byelections.

On one hand, the reassurance these wins gave federalists everywhere in Canada (including Quebec) might make Trudeau look a little less indispensable as Keeper of the Canadian Store.

On the other, the pequistes (including Levesque who campaigned personally in Jean-Talon) took their losses so gracefully that their sneaky backing of Fabien Roy may sicken — or frighten — many more voters into sticking with Trudeau.

The key probably lies in Quebecers' sophistication and sense of balance in politics. More perhaps than any other society in Canada, they see through the conniving and combinations of parties. They tend to back the man who, at any given time, best strikes an equilibrium between their Quebec personality and their Canadian security.

As felt by the educated guts of many Quebecers, a vote for Trudeau is a vote for Trudeau, while a vote for Roy is a vote for Clark is a vote for Levesque. A strong Trudeau facing a strong Levesque keeps the federal-provincial balance, while an untested Clark, in thrall to a PQ rump in Ottawa and facing a still-strong Levesque, destroys the balance.

On this, I'll risk eating crow on May 23: Clark may win the election, but Trudeau will not lose Quebec to 20, or even 15, "Credito-pequistes."

Vote Conservative

On November 16, 1885, Louis Riel was hung for treason at Regina. Prime Minister Sir John A. Macdonald had refused to pardon Riel in the face of explosive English Canadian sentiments in favor of his "swinging". Macdonald decided, for reasons of political expediency, that he would prefer to lose a few seats in Quebec than to have English Canada turn solidly against him. The legacy of Macdonald's decision has been a heavy one for the Canadian democratic process.

Since that time federal politics in this province have been virtually the private preserve of the Liberal Party, with the effect that Canada, federally, has been continually governed by that same party with rare interludes.

In the 83 years since Sir Wilfrid Laurier's victory of 1896 we have had 62 years of Liberal government, 18 years of Conservative government and three years of a coalition during World War I. In the 44 years since McKenzie King's victory of 1935 we have had 38 years of Liberal government and six years of Conservative government under Mr. Diefenbaker.

The secret of the Liberal Party's electoral success has been the solid block of Quebec members that have been returned to the House of Commons in election after election. This is the phenomenon which guaranteed that Robert Stanfield never became Prime Minister of Canada. The Liberal Party became, in the words of one Canadian author, the Government Party.

Power has a tendency to corrupt. Continuous power in the hands of the same people can lead to government which is cynical and insensitive. Politicians in power too long tend to forget that they are accountable to the electorate. The best cure for a cynical politician is a good kick in the seat of the pants by the voter. A term in opposition never hurt any serious politician.

The record of the Trudeau government is dismal. The Report of the Royal Commission of Financial Management and Accountability shows an administrative system which is out of control. Mr. Trudeau has set up a civil service committee to study this report. The Royal Commission itself was set up in response to continual criticism by successive auditors-general. This is typical of our recent political history.

Constant criticism by the Auditor-General. The creation of a Royal Commission to study this criticism. A report confirming the statements of the Auditor-General and now a civil service committee to study this latest report.

In the words of a recent Globe and Mail editorial dealing with the secrecy and deceit of the present government: "It is almost impossible to conceive of a government which could operate so frightening a system in so inept a manner. Yet we have had that government. For 11 years."

In the United States a president is limited by law to two terms of four years. Perhaps we should consider a similar solution.

It is time to move on. The Stanfield-Trudeau years will soon be a part of our history — like the Diefenbaker-Pearson years.

This country is crying out for change. We have to break out of the present deadlocks on so many issues. This involves change. Change involves risk. Risk is frightening.

We hope that the voters of Canada and more particularly those of Quebec will vote for the Progressive Conservatives on May 22nd. It is a risk worth taking.

Some of the remarks made by Mr. Richard McCallum in his review of the Lennoxville Players' production of IOLANTHE were, in my opinion, unfair and uncalled-for.

For your information, the Lennoxville Players are a group of local amateur performers who devote thousands of hours to producing their annual performances. All proceeds from these presentations are donated to the Lennoxville Optimist Club for our various youth projects in and around Lennoxville. For instance, last year's proceeds were used to purchase and install a solar heating system for the community swimming pool. This year's proceeds are to be donated to the Lennoxville Library to assist them to continue to operate and supply suitable books of reference and reading materials for our community.

As can be determined from the above, no one personally benefits financially from the annual presentation of the Lennoxville Players. To the contrary, each member contributes his/her time, efforts and expertise to enable the production to be presented. For your reporter to include in his review various uncomplimentary remarks is, in my opinion, uncalled for. Perhaps Mr. McCallum would consider auditioning for next year's production so that we might have an equal opportunity to display in the local media a summary of his artistic capabilities.

Iolanthe review unfair

Are you as sure?

Editor:

In Tuesday's paper May 8, D.M. Clouston may be right on a couple of points, but she should also get her facts straight. I do agree with the fact that generally speaking, an employer has a right to fire an employee IF they are not satisfied with his or her work; but the fact in this case was that he used the reason that my religion was interfering with my work. I can only believe it was only his own religious prejudice that caused the loss of my job; if not, he would not have called me last week and offered to reinstate me in my job if I gave up this religion.

Everyone knows that an employer cannot show prejudice against an employee because of religious beliefs: by firing or harassment.

So you see, Miss Clouston, I was not dismissed because of unsatisfactory work.

You also remarked about what the spokesman of the Church said in the last paragraph — quote — "some people don't want to know about anything they don't know about". Well, I think that if a few more people would listen to the word of God that the missionaries are trying to teach, or if more would read the Bible to learn God's word, there would be much less trouble and hard times in their lives.

One does not need to join a new religion to study it. If everyone made a small attempt to understand his neighbour's beliefs, we'd all be closer in brotherly love.

I agree with you that Mormonism is a highly complicated religion, and takes a lot of study and understanding to accept it as the only true church. It is not as you said (usually a young person). Please feel free to visit our Church. For example, I am 49 years old and I have searched for about 40 of those years to find what I feel is the truth; the True teachings as it was taught in the time Christ was on this earth. Many people join a Church just to say they "belong" to some religion. These people, I feel, are not true Christians. They are only pretending.

I know in my heart that I have found the Truth I was searching for. I hope you feel as sure of your beliefs??

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Businesswomen being shut out of government contracting

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Women who run their own companies are being given short shrift by the Carter administration on their fight for a fair share of government contracts under the anti-discrimination statutes.

In plain terms, the Small Business Administration is giving women the business figuratively but not literally. Though by law, companies owned by women can qualify as disadvantaged contractors eligible for special consideration in government awards, in practice they are being virtually shut out by the SBA.

The reason is simple: The "black capitalism" programs set up under President Nixon was designed to set aside a certain amount of federal spending for underprivileged contractors. That was in the days before women's equality became a major political issue; blacks and other ethnic minorities were regarded as the only targets of the program, and the SBA has become oriented in that direction.

And black business interests are determined to protect their hard-won turf. "If white women join the minority umbrella, we can just wrap it up and go back to the plantation," one black business lobbyist told us.

Yet the disadvantaged status of female-owned firms is undeniable. According to the last census, women own fewer than 6 percent of the nation's businesses and these account for only 3 percent of all sales.

These statistics make a convincing enough case, but the Civil Rights Commission has also made an official finding that women have been discriminated against in the federal procurement process.

But minority groups — through their political clout and the experience in government contract hunting they have acquired over the years — have succeeded in limiting the access of businesswomen to the federal contract pie set aside for minorities. Today only about 30 of the 2,700 firms in the so-called "8-A" anti-discrimination program are owned by white women.

A recent SBA investigation concluded that the exclusion of women from the set-aside contract money has not always been legal. The investigators' report has been suppressed by SBA officials since it was completed in October.

The investigators found "obvious and deliberate" discrimination against Marilyn Andrusis, a white woman whose 8-A status was revoked because the SBA decided she was not socially disadvantaged. Officials interviewed by the investigators admitted Andrusis was kicked out of the program "simply because she was a woman," a source told us.

The investigators found that similar sex discrimination exists throughout the SBA. They recommended agency-wide reform, as well as administrative action against two of its officials.

But the well-entrenched minority groups have successfully blocked the reform moves. Their allies in the SBA have squelched the report and their representatives have managed to lobby through Congress changes in the law which make 8-A status even more difficult for women to obtain.

Pre-ident Carter's response to the plight of businesswomen was to create an Interagency Task Force on Women. The task force is expected to release an executive order on women's business enterprise within a few weeks. But a rough draft we obtained indicates that the Administration is more concerned with cosmetic changes and high-sounding phrases than in substance.

"All it is, is nice PR," one women's rights advocate told our reporter Rochelle Sharpe. "All I hear is, it's 'nice-to-women' year. Women don't need to be patted on the head... We need money opportunities."

Medical Monopoly? The Federal Trade Commission is checking into a small but influential group of doctors in the lucrative field of plastic surgery to determine if it is engaging in anti-competitive practices. The American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons set up a certification arm in the 1930s called the American Board of Plastic Surgery. According to an internal FTC memo, the society "has sought to exclude competitors by misrepresenting to the public and to hospitals that only Board-certified plastic surgeons are competent to perform plastic surgery."

The FTC investigators have interpreted their findings as a "conspiracy to exclude competitors" on the part of the society.

The society has denied the FTC staff charges and has complained that the agency should be spending its time going after hack plastic surgeons who advertise their services.

The FTC investigators believe that this is a responsibility of the states. They also claim that one of the most notorious hack surgeons "did, in fact, complete the requisite training and was Board-eligible."

The FTC is continuing to study ways to keep the society from exaggerating the importance of its board's accreditation.

Want Ad: This is by way of a want ad for Mabel Hollingsworth of 107 Birch St., Salem, Ark. And for Uncle Sam as well. "Wanted: Someone to mow the Hollingsworth lawn; also, someone in government to show a little common sense in programs for welfare recipients."

Let Mrs. Hollingsworth explain: "My husband and I are elderly, me being 78," she wrote us. "My husband is blind and two years ago had a stroke. Until then, we were able to care for our lawn, having been brought up clean people. Now we cannot get our lawn mowed."

"The people on welfare, and there are many who are able bodied, are afraid of getting cut off welfare should they mow a lawn or do any work that people like us could pay for. We are just a bit above poverty line. We do not receive county aid or state aid. Our medical bills and medicine run never under $60 a month."

"Meantime, our lawn goes to weeds."

Canada Day at Marymount

For the past few weeks Marymount School has undertaken an extra social studies project, the results of which was a visual tribute to our country, Canada. Each class chose a province or a territory as their focus for additional learning. The students did research, brought in materials and were taught songs of their chosen section of Canada.

Displays which had been prepared in the classroom were set up in the cafeteria. Students visited each other's displays on Thursday afternoon and parents were invited to view them on Thursday evening. At that time visitors could also purchase a Canadian snack — cheddar cheese and apple juice.

On Friday morning, which had been termed Canada Day, the students performed the songs they had learned for their teachers and schoolmates.

One of the highlights of the projects was a telegram received from Prime Minister Trudeau who had been invited to the school to participate in the Canada Day activities. Mr. Trudeau congratulated the staff and students on their efforts but extended his regrets that the pressure of campaign activity left him unable to attend.

As learning had been experienced on three levels — research, observation and performance — the project was termed worthwhile by all concerned.

Ann Landers says

Flu bug unwelcome party favor

Dear Ann: Will you please tell those crazy people out there that when someone in the family is sick, they should cancel the party? I don't know of anyone who wouldn't rather miss a party than catch the flu and be house-bound for a solid week.

Both my husband and I are now recovering from six days of total incapacitation. Our daughter had to stay home from work to take care of us. What's more, we weren't the only ones at the party who got the flu. There were two others.

When we walked into the house, the hostess announced apologetically that she was sorry her husband couldn't join us because he was in bed with a miserable case of the flu which he had picked up from his mother who has had the flu. (She lives with them.)

I'm sorry we didn't have the good sense to tell her at the door, "Sorry, we don't need the flu. Please call us when everyone is well." And then leave.

Dear Ann, I hope you will print this letter and carry on your mission of educating people. — Learned The Hard Way

Dear Learned: Here's your letter and I, too, hope it makes an impact on readers everywhere. Any guest in his right mind would not be offended if a party was cancelled because of illness in the house. He would be grateful.

Dear Ann Landers: A while back you printed a letter from a man who complained because his wife undressed in the closet. He said it had been going on for 15 years and he was sick of it. Well, I have been undressing in the closet for longer than that and it has taken me until now to understand the reason.

What opened my eyes was an article I read about nudists. It said they think nothing of nakedness because they have become accustomed to it. No one turns his head to look after a day or two. It stands to reason that anything on display constantly loses its "mystery."

I am so glad I read the article. Now I know why I have been the way I have been for so many years. What do you think? — Getting To Know Me

Dear Getting: I think you are kidding yourself. If you have been undressing in the closet for over 15 years, you have a severe hang-up and it has nothing to do with trying to maintain an aura of mystery.

In this day and age when so many people are coming out of the closet, it would be good for your marriage if you could bring yourself to do the same.

Dear Ann Landers: I learned something today that opened a door to understanding and peace of mind. For years I hated my older sister. Now I know it was not her fault. It was my mother's. She always favored Sis and gave her everything she wanted and many things she didn't want at all. I seemed to get nothing extra — not even a good word. No compliments — just criticism. I grew up thinking Sis was mean and selfish, but now I know that if Mother had been fair to me, I would not have had these feelings.

Now that I am in possession of the real facts, I can love my sister. Will you please print this letter for others who have bad feelings towards their sisters and brothers? Enlightened And Happier

Dear E. and H.: And now if you can forgive your mother, you will have achieved a full victory.

Argonne lab researches radiation

ARGONNE, Ill. (AP) — Ten years ago a radiation testing centre was established in Argonne to study women who had painted glow-in-the-dark dials on watches.

Many of the women were found to have developed blood diseases and suffered decayed jawbones after repeatedly moistening their paint brushes with their tongues.

Today scientists at Argonne National Laboratory are using the centre and those tests to study workers who might have been contaminated in the U.S. nuclear-weapons program.

At the request of the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, scientists at Argonne are checking persons exposed to radiation at more than 100 sites used in the nuclear-weapons program and later abandoned.

The testing facilities are buried beneath 1½ metres of earth and are lined with steel-coated lead to screen out natural radiation in soil.

Persons being tested rest in contour chairs while a gamma ray device measures radiation emitted from their bodies. Their breath and urine also are tested.

Some of the women who painted watch dials with radium, a practice outlawed in 1926, still are brought to the centre periodically for testing.

The Argonne scientists, says physicist Dr. John Rundo said, hope that by studying the women they can help determine the toxicity of plutonium, a potential nuclear fuel of the future.

They also are studying 5,000 former workers at a thorium refinery who were exposed 30 to 40 years ago.

Continued monitoring of persons who absorbed toxic doses of radiation, Rundo said, also helps to inform people of early signs of disease so that steps may be taken.

Thread keeps knotting

By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — Do you know of anything that will keep the thread from tangling and knotting when one is sewing by hand? — LEAH

DEAR LEAH — Try threading your needle with the end that is still on the spool and then cut or break the thread to the desired length. Also, while sewing one can dampen the fingers and run them down the length of the thread. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Never throw away old socks that have good ribbed tops. They are great to use on pajamas the children have outgrown. Sew cut-off tops to the wrists and ankles of such pajamas. Doubled they also work great on the sleeves of school coats. — ELSIE

DEAR POLLY — I have been painting with oil paints for a couple of years and had trouble with paint on my clothes until a fellow painter suggested rubbing mechanic's waterless hand soap on such spots before laundering. This works like a charm even on old spots that have been washed. — M.P.

DEAR POLLY — To avoid dangerous slips and falls on the ladder to your swimming pool apply adhesive backed rubber flowers that are made for bathtubs.

If you spill something on your clothes while eating out ask the waiter for a glass of club soda, dip a napkin in it and then sponge the spot away. — BOBBIE

DEAR POLLY — When making a trip to the laundromat pour powdered detergent in a sock and knot the top. When needed, unknit the top and pour into the washer. When liquid detergent is used, saturate the measured amount into a washcloth and leave the bulky container at home. A washcloth can also be saturated with liquid fabric softener and tossed in the dryer. By dampening the cloth this can be used again. — CAROL

DEAR POLLY — The best thing I have ever used to clean windows beautifully is a solution of one-fourth cup cornstarch in two quarts of warm water. — MRS. R.S.S.

DEAR POLLY — The best thing I have found to use as a funnel when filling salt shakers, etc. is an envelope with a diagonal piece cut off one corner. — RUTH D.

DEAR POLLY — When I returned home after a recent mastectomy I had to keep a drain tube in and carry a small pump around. After catching the tube on drawer pulls and such I put the whole bit in a plastic shopping bag. When working around the house or shopping the handles were slipped over my wrist and both hands were left free. When I sat down the bag was put on the floor beside me so all danger of pulling the tube out was gone. I found the lump in time. — LUCKY ME

Theatre

The most exciting theatrical event this week is BROUE, a series of sketches commissioned by the Montreal company VOYAGEMENTS and authored by eight Quebecois playwrights. Nine skits are linked by one theme and location — a day at the Remparts tavern — giving three actors a chance to breathe life into eighteen colorful characters. Before reaching the stage of le Theatre de l'Atelier, VOYAGEMENTS played to sell-out crowds in Montreal for the play's month-long run. Get a glimpse of life in Quebec's other spiritual institution at the Parc Jacques-Cartier theatre Tuesdays through Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. until June 16th. Call 563-1778 for reservations.

The Jean Duceppe Company is presenting PIEGE A REBOURS, the French version of Ira Levin's DEATH-TRAP at Salle Maurice O'Bready on Saturday, May 19th at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $4.50 and up.

At the Theatre de Vieux Clocher in Magog, you can get into the world of magic with LE GRAND HENRI. Showtime is 8 p.m. and tickets are $3.00.

Music

Malcolm Lowe, violinist, appears at the Petite Salle of the Centre Culturel on Thursday, May 17th at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $3.50.

Live in concert at the Cinema Festival on Friday, May 18th at 8:30 p.m. is Quebec's own PLUME. His WORLD TOUR '79, which began in April, has won over French rock fans, especially after his triumphant appearance at the Festival de Bourges. Following his Sherbrooke concert, Plume and his band are off to the Patriote in Ste-Agathe, then on to a climactic finale at Montreal's Theatre St-Denis. Reserved seats at the Cinema Festival are $5.00 each.

Also on Friday night, at La Vieille Clocher bar is the group MYSTIK. Admission price is $1.00 and shows usually begin at 10 p.m. Upstairs, le Theatre le Vieux Clocher is bringing in France Ricet Barrier to celebrate la fete de Dollard on May 21st. Showtime is 8 p.m. and tickets are $5.00.

A spring ball to be held at the Cafeteria of the College de Sherbrooke on May 19th at 8 p.m. is open to all. Several musical groups, theatrical troupes and clowns will provide entertainment. The $3.00 cover charge will go to benefit La Maison des Femmes.

Exhibitions

PHOTO ET IMAGE continues at the Centre Culturel. The 1900-1950 retrospective in the Art Gallery is over. But you can still enjoy the excellent collection of 150 photos on display in the Grand Hall. Some 53 of Canada's best known photographers have their work on show until May 20th.

Meanwhile at the Muse Beaulne du Chateau Norton (96 Norton St. in Coaticook), an exhibition of paintings by DOMINIQUE LAQUERRE is being held until June 3rd. The collection of 30 oils, watercolors and ink drawings, entitled LA VOIX DES NATURES, features the enigmatic, often ambiguous relationship between people and nature. Each work is accompanied by the artist's verbal supplement. Dominique Laquerre, who is a native of the Bois-Francs region, has been painting since 1970 and has exhibited her works across Quebec. But this is her first incursion into the area of Estrie. You can view her paintings at the Muse Beaulne from Tuesdays to Sundays, 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. and Wednesday nights from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. until June 3rd.

Movies

On May 17th at 9:30 p.m. and May 18th at 7:30 p.m., you can see CRI DE FEMMES in the Kineart Series at the University of Sherbrooke for $1.75. This 1978 Jules Dassin film, starring Melina Mercouri and Ellen Burstyn, uses the myth of Media as a device to reveal the developing relationship of two women.

At the Cinema Festival on Thursday the 17th (7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.) for all you Saturday morning cartoon freaks, BUGS BUNNY, DAFY DUCK, ROADRUNNER, ETC. General admission is $2.00 with a 50-cent reduction for senior citizens and students.

At the Cinema du Carrefour, Franco Zefferelli's THE CHAMP with Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway and Ricky Schroder, is being held over for another week. Management advises you bring your own hankie — they've run out of Kleenex.

Derbyport Drive-In has the following line-up for the week: tonight and tomorrow, SUPERBUG; the 18th and 19th, THE SOUND OF MUSIC; the 20th, IF EVER I SEE YOU AGAIN; and the stretch from Monday, May 21st to Thursday, May 24th inclusive — THE GREAT TRAIN ROBBERY with Sean Connery and Donald Sutherland. The Norton Drive-In's weekend feature is MAGIC, an R-rated chilling drama with Anthony Hopkins, Burgess Meredith and Ann Margret. Cinema Newport's feature for the week is FAST BREAK with Gabe Kaplan (Kotter turned basketball coach).

Television

Highlights for the week include: "Dance in America: The Feld Ballet" in PBS's GREAT PERFORMANCE series on Channel 33 tonight at 9 p.m.; tomorrow's edition of NOVA, an excellent science series on the same channel at 8 p.m. is called, "The New Healers" where non-traditional health care facilities in Tanzania, Guatemala and the U.S. are spotlighted. On Channel 3 at 8 p.m., Friday, the 18th, you can see Bob Hope, Brooke Shields, Marie Osmond and Flip Wilson do their guest spots on THE LEIF GARRETT SPECIAL — a teeny-bopper delight with something for the older folk too. Same night at 9 p.m. on Channel 6, BURTON CUMMINGS WEST features a musical story with Burton's old colleague David Clayton-Thomas, Wilf Carter, Carroll Baker and Chief Dan George. An open-air concert climaxes the show. If you missed it the first time around, now's your chance to catch this novel Canadian production.

Channel 3 has several interesting shows coming up this week. Saturday, May 19th should pull in a crowd of young and old for the CBS 90-minute animated musical special THE HOBBIT, based on J.R.R. Tolkien's book of the same name.

SHIRLEY MACLAINE AT THE LIDO, on Sunday, the 20th, at 10 p.m., offers a rare view of backstage activity at one of Paris's most famous cabarets. Tom Jones, the Lido Girls and a variety of Parisian specialty acts join the fun.

In case you missed some episodes in the B.B.C.'s wonderful UPSTAIRS, DOWNSTAIRS series, CBS is running it again Sunday nights at 11:30 p.m. On the 20th, episode number eight deals with Elizabeth's romance and subsequent marriage.

BLIND AMBITION, starring Martin Sheen as John Dean, will be presented in four consecutive two-hour telecasts (Sunday, May 20th at 8 p.m., Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 9 p.m.). If Sheen's previous impressive record both in fictional and historical T.V.

Mellowest blues you'll find anywhere

SONNY TERRY: The vocal half

By NELLY YOUNG

I've only seen Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee twice in concert, both times in Sherbrooke. The first occasion, last year, I was really geared up for the show, having enjoyed their records for some time. Everyone else who packed the 200-seat Petite Salle that night seemed as ready for a good time as I. Most of us left decidedly disappointed. For one thing, the uncommunicative relationship between Sonny, the blind musician on harmonica, and Brownie, the silken-voiced guitarist, was a shocking discovery. The vibes that night were bad and Brownie's brooding when he could not read his audience well made things worse.

So it was with some apprehension that I approached the 1500-seat Salle Maurice O'Bready for Sonny and Brownie's appearance on Sunday night. But these mixed feelings were perhaps the most suitable preparation.

While the hall was not completely filled, the concert was well-attended, with a larger proportion of anglophones than usual at the Centre Culturel. As soon as the first set got underway, I felt good about the show.

Sonny, blowing on his harp and hooting "Roll you like a rubber ball", had the audience clapping by the second number. The over-enthusiastic clappers at times proved a handicap but the pros took everything in stride. Momentum continued to build. Soon we were joining Sonny in chorus on "Walkin' My Blues Away" and matching "ya" for "ya" on "Bring It On Home To Me". What made me feel even better was Brownie's high-spirited guitar doing a fine back-up for Sonny's numbers. (This instrumental co-operation would be discouraged by Sonny in the second set. It seems he accused Brownie of "sabotaging people's talent", an unwarranted accusation I think.)

Brownie's turn at the mike was well-worth the wait. A rich, resonant voice serenaded us with "I Got No Woman Blues". Retrieving "C.C. Rider" from the rock catalogue, he put down-home blues back into it. Unfortunately the piece was plagued by some disturbing feedback but, as Brownie said, "That's your system that's humming, not me." He proved it too. After a rousing version of "The Blues Had a Baby and They Called It Rock and Roll", he turned off his machine — a faint hum could still be heard. But it didn't bring him down one bit. And the song, a classic musical anthology of early and modern R & B influences, did not lose any of its power. By this time, Sonny, who had been providing some funky harp lines all along, hinted in loudly phrased notes that he wanted attention again. "Go ahead, blow your mind" Brownie said as he fingered his guitar on "Ball In The Jack". But Sonny declined, "Go on, do your thing". So Brownie did. His guitar work was beautiful.

Coming after Brownie's velvet, mellow voice, Sonny's raspy rendition of "Sail Away", unmelodic and mostly spoken, was as much a shocker this year as last. The impact of this Randy Newman composition comes from its ironic contract of the ballad-like arrangement and cynical, tongue-in-cheek lyrics. On their excellent album, SONNY & BROWNIE, the two (with a little help from Arlo Guthrie and friends) are faithful to this interpretation. But, given the predominantly francophone audience, perhaps Sonny's tactics had a better chance of hitting home. Certainly his guttural laugh after a line like "In America every man is free" got an appreciative and sympathetic response. So did the only encore of the night (coming at the end of the first set), "Night and Day", a biographical tune where "Ah was always told seein' is believin'", but ah can't see nothin' so feelin's good enough for me".

As the tension between the two blew wide open in the second set, the quality of the music seemed to improve

HAM TO THE RESCUE!

Cooked ham is a great "rescue" when time comes to prepare the school lunch box, to plan ahead for a meal or to prepare a quick lunch. Cooked ham will enhance the flavour of chicken breast, veal scallop, an omelette or a cheese souffle, a quiche with asparagus, a wild rice salad, a sandwich, a meatloaf or the stuffing of an eggplant. Lean cooked ham has approximately 175 calories per 85g (3 ounces). This is a good source of protein and thiamine, and contains but, on the other hand, ham contains far too much sodium (salt). Here is a salad recipe which can be done ahead of time and kept refrigerated for up to one week.

HAM AND MACARONI SALAD
2 cups coloured pasta • 1/2 cup mayonnaise • 1/2 cup skimmed plain yogurt • 1 tsp. salt • 1 tsp. chopped parsley • 1 lb. cooked ham, sliced • 1/2 lb. provolone cheese, sliced • 1 small onion, chopped • 1/2 cup chopped celery • lettuce.
Cook macaroni, drain. In a bowl combine mayonnaise, yogurt, salt and parsley. Add other ingredients and mix. Cover and refrigerate. Serve over lettuce.

correspondingly. Brownie began appropriately with "Brownie, where you gonna go from here?" It was clear that Sonny's paranoia was not going to affect Brownie's style or spirit that night. He plucked clear, cool notes from his guitar and sang "Good mornin' blues in Sherbrooke-town", giving the audience a special glow. But when Sonny's turn came, Brownie refrained from playing along, unwilling to be falsely accused again. Sonny seemed oblivious. Providing his own accompaniment, he skillfully alternated vocals and harp. He would hold a low note long and effortlessly, then, pausing to warn us, he'd hit a flawless high note, relishing the cheers he evoked.

A fast, melodic boogie, "My Baby Don't Stand No Cheatin'", thrilled the stomping crowd. Less impressive was Sonny's redundant rambling on "Corn Bread and Peas, Black Molasses". But his final number, introduced as "Hootin' Blues" was a show stopper. A variation of a tune he had once played for two years in a Broadway show ("they paid extra for all those hoots"), it's on the SONNY & BROWNIE album as "Sonny's Thing". And it sure was. The acrobatics he performed, leaping back and forth from harmonica to hoots, hees, hos and hahs were breath-taking. He said there were 25 different hoots in the piece and then introduced a spectacular 26th in our honour - a haunting, dual sound that blew us away.

Brownie finished off the night with a strong set, Sonny backing him on a sometimes thrilling harp - "Kansas City", the bittersweet "Life is a Gamble", "The Tortoise and the Hare" with its sincere message "keep on movin' and you'll get somewhere", and his trademark, "Walk On".

Sonny and Brownie have been playing together for almost 40 years. In retrospect, their personal and professional discords are not all that surprising. During this concert, I, like them, learned to take their family quarrels in stride and even with a sense of humour.

When Sonny sang "One monkey don't stop my show", I could laugh at his insecurity. When each would carry on a dialogue with himself rather than feed the other cues ("What's that you say, Brownie?" Brownie sings and then answers his own question), the absurdity struck a comical chord.

In recordings, flanked by talented and admiring musicians such as Arlo Guthrie, John Mayall, Sugar Cane Harris and John Hammond, the tension between the two is relaxed. They reminisce good-naturedly about their years together ("when I met you, you couldn't see and I couldn't run... you walk for me and I'll see for you"). And, yes, they sing together too.

But the tension on the road reaches an insular intensity. The two of them competing for approval from their audience sometimes results in an uneven performance.

Yet it's a dynamic tension resulting in a new performance every time you see them, the dialectic producing some startling music from these old-timers.

Starting off as exponents of South Carolina blues, their scope expanded as they came into contact with some of the great folk and blues artists of all time: Lead-belly, Woody Guthrie, Pete Seeger, Josh White, Lightin' Hopkins, Big Bill Broonzy, Memphis Slim, T-Bone Walker, John Lee Hooker, B.B. King and the lists goes on. It's still a privilege having the opportunity to see them perform live, despite their eccentricities. Each of them acknowledges that "I can't go down that lonesome road all by myself". They left "Sherbrooke-town" together Sunday night in a royal blue Cadillac, on the license plate the words WALK ON fading down the road.

Kate Bush

Kate Bush, the lady who broke onto the music scene in a big way with her single Wuthering Heights and LP the Kick Inside, introduced her remarkable stage show to London audiences recently with five concerts at the Palladium. Instead of opting for the usual artist-at-the-piano format for the concert, Kate has constructed a show that is more theatre than rock concert. Her musicians are on stage but they become part of the scenery that carries Kate through vignettes that surround each song. Aiding her on stage are two dancers and an illusionist and it makes for a captivating evening of music, dance and fantasy. A specially designed wire microphone was attached to her clothing so that she was free to dance and sing at the same time. At 20 years old, Ms. Bush is one of the most promising artists to emerge from Britain in a long time. A sour note hit the English tour when an accident took the life of top rock lighting designer and engineer Bill Duffield who died after falling into a trap door on the opening night.

BROWNIE MCGHEE: Playing along with Guthrie and Mayall

Country Music

By Dave Mulholland

The sixth season of Opryland U.S.A. is now in full swing. The 358-acre amusement park is located nine miles from downtown Nashville.

It's sort of Disneyland without Mickey Mouse. Well, some people feel a few things about the park are Mickey Mouse. Anyway, the one feature you won't get in any other amusement park is the Grand Ole Opry - the live country music radio show which celebrates its 54th anniversary this year.

Opryland has rides, restaurants, natural animal habitats and shows with everything from '50s rock'n'roll to Broadway musicals.

The Opryland public relations department is hyping the new $3 million Roy Acuff Theatre, which features a "Cosmic Laser Explosion" - light rays sweep right through the audience and explode into their targets with a sound and flash that erupts from every point in the theatre in a mind-stunning blast of energy.

I don't know what the big deal is; Opry patrons have been experiencing that for years: every time Porter Wagoner comes on stage.

For detailed information about shows, tickets, etc., write to Charlotte Davidson, Public Relations Manager, Opryland U.S.A., P.O. Box 2138, Nashville, Tennessee, U.S.A. 37214.

The star of the movies Saturday Night Fever and Grease, John Travolta, recently visited Mickey Gilley's club in Pasadena, Texas. The club is the setting for a motion picture entitled Urban Cowboy, and Travolta may play the lead role. The movie script is based upon an Esquire magazine story by Aaron Latham, all about life at Gilley's club, which in the past couple of months has had performances by everyone from Hank Williams Jr. to rhythm'n'blues group Archie Bell & The Drells. Now that's variety!

Bill Anderson's syndicated radio show, Big Country, is currently heard on 85 stations coast to coast. Anderson, voted by his peers in the industry as Top Country D.J. of 1978, writes to say that the show now has a weekly listenership of 612,500 people. The three-hour program features new material, interviews with artists and the nation's top country hits.

The Statler Brothers have added two additional members to their band, and a second touring bus to give everyone a little more elbow room for those long road trips. After winning the Country Music Association's Vocal Group of the Year award for seven consecutive years, the Statlers lost out last year to the Oak Ridge Boys. The Statlers are currently riding the charts with How To Be A Country Star, a song Harold and Don Reid wrote especially for the group's appearance on the CMA award show last October.

The Family Brown will embark upon their first European tour in October. During a four week stint the group will perform in England, Scotland, Ireland, Holland and Germany. The Ottawa-based family band is currently on the charts with The Way I Love You. Carroll Baker and Terry Carisse & Tenderfoot toured Europe during March, and Dick Damron is currently on tour across the pond, as is George Hamilton IV. George will also be doing a 14-week run, beginning June 25, at Blackpool's Winter Gardens Theatre.

A reliable source says Emmylou Harris has cancelled her summer tour because she's pregnant. Her current single is the old Joe Stampley hit, Too Far Gone... Colleen Peterson and her band, C.P. Rail, have just completed a two-month tour. Colleen says she's thinking of moving back to Nashville... Ronnie Prophet's television show, Grand Old Country, has been renewed for a fifth season.

dramas is any indication, this special, based on Dean's best-seller of the same name and his wife's book MO, should be worth following. You'll get the angle of that great American happening, the Watergate affair.

And finally, the fourth dramatic informational special in the Emmy award-winning series, BODY HUMAN, features an exploration of the wonder and mystique of human sexuality from pre-natal infancy to advanced age. "The Body Human: The Sexes", focusing on the intense personal dramas of four real people confronted by different breakdowns in the intricate internal sexual system, will be televised Monday, May 21st at 8 p.m. Happy viewing.

Rangers enjoy California trip

STANSTEAD (DB) — The 1st Three Village Rangers, Misses Lynn Cass, Coreen Goddard, Julie Goodsell and Laurie Boyd with their leader Mrs. David Emslie left Montreal by plane on April 10 for San Gabriel, California, for a ten-day trip.

They visited many lovely places including Huntington Library where they toured the building and walked through the lovely gardens, the Movie Land Wax Museum and Disneyland, where the girls enjoyed themselves for a full day. They also spent time camping at the Joshua Tree campsite in Mojave desert with the Girl Scouts and sleeping under the stars, which they enjoyed very much. While there they visited the Joshua Tree National Monument.

Easter Sunday the girls attended church service and a visit to the San Diego Zoo. The highlight of their trip was touring Grauman's Chinese Theatre, where they saw the stars' foot prints, also the Hollywood Bowl, the stars' homes.

They visited the Universal Studios and saw the process of making films.

On their way to Tijuana, Mexico, they stopped at San Juan Capistrano which was quite an experience for the girls. They brought home many souvenirs.

The Rangers had a wonderful time and would like to thank everyone who helped make this trip possible.

Second Mile Centre News

SAWYERVILLE — The Second Mile Senior Centre held their April meeting at the Logan-MacKinnon home in Birchton. Tentative plans were made to hold their annual White Elephant sale on Sept. 22 in the Sawyerville Community Centre.

There are now ten residents at the Centre. Mrs. Donald Murray of Sherbrooke and Mr. Elton Thompson, who was a resident at the Wales Home for some time, but formerly lived here, are the latest to enter the Home.

The latest news of Mrs. Agnes Scott is that she is to leave the hospital in Florida soon and is hoping to be home before long. This is good news, as her cheerful presence has been sadly missed. Mrs. Ethel Bailey is much improved and will soon be able to return to her duties. Miss Marilyn Bedard has been replacing Mrs. Bailey during her illness. Mrs. Marguerite Vintinner has returned from the hospital in better health.

The Ladies Group from the Baptist Church faithfully entertain the residents every third Wednesday. This is looked forward to and is much enjoyed. On April 25, the Birchton U.C.W. brought in supper. Mrs. Myrtle Murray showed slides of local interest. Mrs. Jessie Coates and Mrs. Elva Glen, Matron, joined the group for supper. Mrs. Coates was pleasantly surprised when her daughter, Mrs. Glen, presented her with a beautiful birthday cake made and decorated by Mrs. Waneta Luce. Happy Birthday was sung and a pleasant time enjoyed by all.

On May 2, three ladies, Mrs. Marguerite Grapes, Mrs. Gwen Robinson and Mrs. Eva Page from Bulwer U.C.W. served supper at the Home.

The concern and interest shown by these groups and the surrounding communities is much appreciated.

DOODLINGS OF A SODBUSTER

It's an old Cockney joke at the expense of those quaint quiet folk who are native of Yorkshire, England.

During a noon-time traffic-jam and close to the station of the then (new) "Electric-tram" in London, a little old lady from Yorkshire became quite intrigued by the third-rail that delivered the speed of the train, and she sought out the Guard on duty and inquired of him to explain, by asking: - "If her t'was to put foot on center-rail would get electric-shock?" "Not likely, ma'am" said the grand uniformed and informed man—who then also volunteered this further information,—"but if someone were t'hold thy hand and these would put t'other hand in mine—and if ye then would also put t'other foot on rail up above—we'd all get shock!"

What has that to do with the present situation?

Well:— When all of the votes have been cast and all errors been corrected we will soon be informed who has been elected, and that is about all the difference it will make — (everyone will know who was elected.) unless:— they who are elected put their hand in thine and ye put t'other hand in mine and I do the same, (and everybody does it)—thus forming a truly "Unity-vine" extending from coast to coast, also entwining all this land or yours and mine, with Happiness being the motive, with Love being the sap of emotion, and Co-operation the locomotion, this country can become the greatest nation ever known;— and let who was elected become History.

There would never be a beautiful sunset, nor sun-rise, if the billions and billions of heavenly-bodies were not systematized and synchronized; Aurora-borealis could never be seen if there were no eyes to see—for sight is—the co-operation of a lens and the reflection of light—plus a "knowing" to realize the sensation.)

So let us all keep both feet firmly on Canadian soil, fearing God—but not fearing sweat and toil—and as soon as the waters in the kettle begin to boil we can (for a moment) hesitate, take a break and all have a cup-of-tea, "Made in Canada."

Dryden, Habs come back for defensive triumph

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Scotty Bowman of Montreal Canadiens had made up his mind: Goaltender Michel Larocque would get his first National Hockey League playoff start since 1974.

Then fate played its hand, and Ken Dryden's day took yet another trying turn Tuesday night.

Larocque was felled by a Doug Risebrough drive off his forehead in the pre-game warmup, and Dryden was called upon to come right back from a substandard two periods in the opener of the Stanley Cup final series against New York Rangers, a 4-1 loss.

"I was starting to question myself," said Dryden of his state of mind after giving up two early goals. But he found himself, shutting out the Rangers for the final 53:39 of Montreal's 6-2 victory that evened the best-of-seven series 1-1 going to New York for the third game Thursday night.

"A lot of goals had been beating me lately, and I was wondering," said Dryden.

"It's difficult to explain. Maybe I'm making the wrong moves in front of the net — I don't know."

"On the first goal, I was trying to keep an eye on (Anders) Hedberg. He disappeared behind a defenceman and, the first thing I knew, the puck was over my shoulder. On the second goal, I think I made the right move, but the puck changed direction."

CROWD MERCILESS

Hedberg and Ron Duguay had given the Rangers a 2-0 lead on three shots at the beleaguered goalie, and a crowd of 17,024 was merciless in its jeers.

But Yvon Lambert, Guy Lafleur and Bob Gainey scored before the period was over for a 3-2 Canadiens lead. Steve Shutt and Jacques Lemaire added second-period goals, and Mark Napier wrapped up the scoring in the third against Rangers goaltender John Davidson.

"It's hard for a goalie to defend himself in a situation like that," said Bowman of the short notice Dryden received. "On the first goal, he was screened. On the second, the puck changed direction at the last second off Brian Engblom."

"I had decided this afternoon to use Larocque, and it's tough for a goalie to start a game well when he's just learned he's got the job."

Dryden, who faced 25 shots, had had a difficult day even before Larocque was scratched. Dryden had fielded numerous questions about a speculative report he might play in the Soviet Union next season.

WILL MAKE TRIP

Larocque was to be kept in hospital for observation overnight and discharged today in time for the trip to New York.

NATIONAL: CARDS NIP EXPOS 1-0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mike Phillips lined a two-out, ninth-inning single to score George Hendrick from third base and give St. Louis Cardinals a 1-0 victory over Montreal Expos on Tuesday night behind John Denny's two-hitter.

Denny, 3-2, faced 33 batters en route to his ninth career shutout. He struck out five and walked four, outduelling Steve Rogers, 3-2, who surrendered eight hits in the National League baseball game.

Ted Simmons led off the Cardinals' ninth with a single, his second hit, and pinch-runner Garry Templeton stole second. He moved to third on Hendricks' bloop single before Tony Scott was intentionally walked to load the bases.

Atlanta Braves wish the gasoline shortage in California was worse than it is.

Dusty Baker missed the Los Angeles Dodgers' team plane to Atlanta because he couldn't find gasoline. He finally found fuel and caught a flight 60 minutes later.

He rejoined the team in Atlanta, and to make up for his tardiness, hit a 10th-inning home run that gave the Dodgers a 5-4 National League baseball victory Tuesday night over the Braves.

The Dodgers got their eighth victory in a row, but it went to reliever Bob Welch, 4-1, not starter Don Sutton, who was seeking his 210th career victory. He is tied with Don Drysdale at 209 for the career lead among all Dodgers pitchers.

Giants 8 Astros 1

Jack Clark and Larry Herndon hit two-run doubles and Phil Nasti pitched a five-hitter for his first major league victory as San Francisco routed Houston.

Mets 3 Pirates 0

Craig Swan scattered six hits, beating the Pirates with ninth-inning relief help from Skip Lockwood. Joel Youngblood supported Swan with a two-run homer in the fourth.

Padres 2 Reds 1

Pinch-hitter Kurt Bevacqua doubled in two runs off reliever Frank Pastore in the top of the ninth to give San Diego the victory over Cincinnati.

Cubs 7 Phillies 1

Barry Foote slammed a bases-loaded homer against his former Philadelphia teammates — the first grand slam of his career — to power the Cubs past the Phillies.

Edmonton 8, Jets 3

Everything right for Oilers

WINNIPEG (CP) —

Winnipeg Jets coach Tom McVie was in a surly mood for reporters Tuesday night after Edmonton Oilers handed his team an 8-3 drubbing in the third game of the World Hockey Association championship finals.

The Jets, who won the first two games of the best-of-seven playoffs in Edmonton, now lead the series 2-1. The fourth game will be played here tonight, with the fifth game set for Friday in Edmonton.

Asked what happened to the Jets, McVie shot back, "If I knew that, I wouldn't have to coach for a living. I could be a trouble shooter for all the teams."

Up in the stands, coach Al Arbour, whose New York Islanders were eliminated from National Hockey League playoffs after winning the regular schedule, must have sympathized with McVie.

"What can you say?" asked Arbour, who was taking in his first game of the WHA series. "Everything was going right for Edmonton."

KEPT UP PRESSURE

For the first time in the series, the Oilers didn't fold under pressure from Jets checkers. Instead, they worked their fast-break game perfectly to keep the heat on Winnipeg goaltender Gary Smith.

Edmonton led 4-2 at the end of the first period but the Jets cut the margin by one in the second.

The Oilers killed off a five-minute spearing penalty to defenceman John Hughes late in the second period and poured in four unanswered goals in the third.

Al Hamilton, Peter Driscoll, Ron Chipperfield, Bill Goldsworthy, Blair MacDonald, Brett Callighen, Bengt-Ake Gustafsson and Dave Hunter scored for the Oilers.

Oilers star Wayne Gretzky had two assists, his first two points of the series.

Morris Lukowich scored two goals and Willy Lindstrom got one for Winnipeg. USED JETS LAPSE

Goldsworthy took advantage of a Winnipeg lapse after Lindstrom's goal to score only eight seconds later and give the Oilers back a two-goal lead.

In the middle of the second period, the Jets contained Edmonton for several minutes and Lukowich's second goal put Winnipeg back in the game. Jets captain Lars-Erik Sjoberg said later he sensed the Oilers were beginning to panic because they had given up one-goal leads in the first two games.

Following a brief scrap between Lukowich and Hunter, Sjoberg skated around to tell his charged-up team-mates not to lose their concentration.

"I didn't want to calm them down too much, I was just trying to direct them," he said after the game.

But the Jets didn't respond and moments later, with Hughes in the penalty box, MacDonald beat Smith but hit the post.

McVie pulled Smith late in the third period to give backup goalie Joe Daley some action. The Winnipeg coach said he was undecided about who would start tonight's game.

Arbour said he was at the game on a general scouting mission. WHA players whose rights are held by the Islanders include Jets goalie Markus Mattson, who didn't dress Tuesday, and Edmonton defenceman Dave Langevin.

AMERICAN ROUNDUP

Things have suddenly turned sour for Mike Marshall. But Tommy John's pitching is as sweet as ever.

Marshall, the Minnesota Twins' relief ace, has been defeated twice by his former Texas team-mates in two games. On Tuesday night, he took the mound in the eighth inning and threw gasoline on a Rangers' rally, yielding a run-scoring double by Jim Sundberg and a two-run single by John Ellis as Texas beat the Twins 9-8.

John, meanwhile, continues to work his magic for New York Yankees. He has won eight games and has yet to lose one. He twirled a seven-inning shutout against Detroit and rode Chris Chambliss's two home runs to an 11-3 romp over the Tigers.

Yankees 11 Tigers 3

John, who finished with five strikeouts and one walk to match his personal high of eight straight victories, had a three-hit shutout going until the eighth inning when the Tigers scored their runs on a walk to Lance Parrish and singles by Aurelio Rodriguez, Ron LeFlore and Lou Whitaker.

Red Sox 3 Orioles 2

Dwight Evans walked, stole second and just beat the throw to the plate on a Jerry Remy's single to left in the 10th inning to propel Boston past the Orioles.

Indians 5 Blue Jays

Shortstop Alfredo Griffin of Toronto threw away Duane Kuiper's bases-loaded grounder in the eighth inning on a potential inning-ending double-play ball, allowing two runs to score as Cleveland beat the Blue Jays.

White Sox 2 A's 1

Ninth-inning singles by Eric Soderholm, Lamar Johnson and Junior Moore off luckless John Henry Johnson gave rookie Ross Baumgarten and the Chicago White Sox their victory over Oakland.

Angels 2 Brewers 1

Ben Ogilvie homered for Milwaukee in the fifth inning, but Bobby Grich tied it for the Angels with a run-scoring double in the seventh. Then Don Baylor beat the Brewers when he led off the bottom of the ninth with a homer off Mike Caldwell.

Royals 7-2 Mariners 4-6

Clint Hurdle broke a tie with a fifth-inning homer and Darrell Porter hit a three-run blast in the sixth to power Kansas City to its opening-game victory over Seattle. In the nightcap, the Mariners came back with four runs in the eighth, the tiebreaker on Ruppert Jones's single and two more on Willie Horton's homer.

short notes...

Weir signs with Als

MONTREAL (CP) — Veteran defensive tackle Glen Weir has agreed to a five-year contract with Montreal Alouettes, Bob Geary, general manager of the Canadian Football League team announced Tuesday.

The 27-year-old Weir, obtained by the Alouettes in a trade with Hamilton Tiger Cats in 1972, has been one of Montreal's defensive pillars since 1975, when he was first named to the CFL all-star team.

Weir's best season came in 1977 when he was an Eastern Conference finalist for the Schenley defensive-player award, losing the honor to middle linebacker Dan Kepley of Edmonton Eskimos.

Umpires agree to pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball umpires are expected to return to work this weekend under terms of an agreement that The Associated Press learned was reached between their union and the two leagues Tuesday.

Details of the agreement ending the dispute that has kept the regular umpires on the sidelines since spring training were presented to a joint meeting of the major leagues in Chicago today. The settlement was expected to be announced officially Thursday.

Both sides have been pressing for an end to the work stoppage and meeting almost daily for the past week. It was a marathon bargaining session that started Monday afternoon and lasted into the early morning hours of Tuesday that apparently signaled the breakthrough of the final issues.

Both the National and American leagues denied that any final settlement had been reached but confirmed that talks were making progress.

"We still have a way to go," said American League president Lee MacPhail. I would prefer not to discuss the issues."

But MacPhail agreed that the atmosphere between the two sides has improved considerably.

"We're a lot closer than when we started," he said. "We were eons apart then. Obviously, we've been trying to get it closed out and it's been a good faith effort on both sides. I'm hopeful, certainly more positive about this than I've been until now."

Manitoba wins five-pin tourney

VICTORIA (CP) — Jim Federenko of Ontario and Edna Joy of Newfoundland held on to win individual titles but left their provincial teams in the dust as the Canadian five-pin bowling championships wrapped up Tuesday.

Federenko finished with 100 points in 14 games to capture the men's open singles event after leading from the start of the three-day competition.

Joy, fending off challenging Debbie Clisby of Manitoba in women's singles, finished with 96 points, 11-2 more than the runner-up.

Federenko's Southern Ontario team, however, placed third overall while Joy's Newfoundland squad was well back in seventh spot.

Manitoba put together the highest team total to grab first place with 53 points. British Columbia was three points back in second, four points ahead of Southern Ontario.

Federenko rolled games of 216, 272, 210 and 310 to cling to his lead in the men's event. Points are awarded for winning matches and high scores to a maximum of 10 points a game.

Doug Kachuk of Saskatchewan finished second followed by B.C.'s Kip Smith in third.

Joy rolled games of 230, 209, 242 and 256 to hold her lead over Clisby. Jane Bachman of B.C. finished third.

Northern Ontario took the team mixed title with 81 points and B.C. was second with 80 points.

Colisee to expand

QUEBEC (CP) — The capacity of the Quebec Colisee will rise to 10,768, an increase of 756 seats, when Quebec Nordiques make their entry into the National Hockey League next fall, city officials said Tuesday.

Expansion of the Colisee will cost $250,000 and is the first phase of a long-term $15-million project which will see the arena's capacity increased to 15,500 seats by 1990.

The added seats are expected to increase the Nordiques' gate revenue by $200,000 next season, although the club still expects a substantial deficit in its first year of NHL operations.

Four World Hockey Association teams — the Nordiques, Winnipeg Jets, Edmonton Oilers and New England Whalers — have accepted terms to enter the NHL next season.

The Nordiques have been at odds with municipal officials for several months over expansion of the Colisee.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque is expected to meet soon with club and municipal authorities to iron out the financial arrangements of the expansion.

Redskins release Kilmer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veteran quarterback Bill Kilmer, who led Washington to its only Super Bowl in 1973, has been released by the Redskins. The 39-year-old, 16-year veteran says he still thinks he can play in the National Football League.

"Hopefully, I would like to play this year if someone sees fit to hire me," said Kilmer, who still had another year to go on the contract he signed last season. "I'm in good shape, my weight's down. I'm doing my exercises and swimming. I'm still interested in playing."

Kilmer, who will be 40 on Sept. 5, was a victim of the Redskins' full-throttle move toward youth.

Last Thursday, the Redskins released linebacker Chris Hanburger, 38, just two months after defensive end Ron McDole, 39. In two years here, coach Jack Pardee and general manager Bobby Beathard have released nine players from the 1973 Super Bowl team.

"I kind of expected it," said Kilmer Tuesday by telephone from his home in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. "I knew they were going on a different program and there wasn't room for me."

Pardee said the team has decided to go with quarterbacks Joe Theismann, who wrested the No. 1 job away from Kilmer a year ago; Kim McQuiken, picked up from Atlanta last season, and Gary Valbuena, a free agent who spent two training camps with Miami when Beathard was there and also played for California Sun in the defunct World Football League.

DECISION DIFFICULT

"It was a very difficult decision to make because of the personal admiration as well as the many great and courageous contributions he has given the Redskins the past eight years," said Pardee of Kilmer, his team-mate on the 1972-73 team that went to the Super Bowl. "He has had a great career and we wish him well."

DON BELL: Jack of all trades masters biography.

Pocketman author Bell in Sutton

By KAY TAYLOR

SUTTON — Author and Townships lover Don Bell will be at The Booknook Saturday, May 19 at 1 p.m. to autograph copies of his book POCKETMAN.

Phyllis Padgham (of Promotions Phyllis) says her first inclination when she sat down to write a press release was to pen a humorous or possibly a trifle zany outline of the book. Three days and a roomful of crumpled paper later, she says she realized using that approach would be a disservice to Bell, Leacock award - winner for SATURDAY NIGHT AT THE BAGEL FACTORY and other Montreal Stories, and his book.

POCKETMAN is based on one of Bell's long time friends, a bearded, wandering Sufi-like personality, Roy McDonald. The book has been eight years in the making, from Don Bell's first encounter with McDonald in the Bistrot on Mountain Street in downtown Montreal, where most of the book is set, until he re-wrote the last page one day prior to the book going to the printers. The author says POCKETMAN might be called a fictive novel. "It began as a magazine piece, then just kept growing until it got completely out of hand. I spent weeks going through Roy's pockets, which held some of the secrets of his mystic, cosmic existence, and part of the book is an inventory of these pockets."

"Roy is an outrageously funny guy, but there is always a tragic underpinning to most of the incidents he lived through. I became his Boswell, in a sense. Every time we'd meet in the Bistrot, which for many years was the favorite watering-hole for denizens of Montreal's sub-culture, I'd take out my notebooks and ballpoint and listen endlessly to Roy and participate in his misadventures. By night's end I'd be completely ragged and worn out, but I'd feel compelled-obsessed - to get it all down."

Bell sees his subject as a modern-day Mulla Nasraddin, the ragged wise-fool of ancient Persia whose cosmic adventures are still used for teaching purposes in the East. "There was something funny, but also quite universal in all Roy's madcap episodes". Bell, in fact, refers to him in POCKETMAN as "The Mulla". McDonald is now back living in his hometown, London, Ontario writing his diary and free-lance dialoguing.

POCKETMAN is light reading — the book to take on a train, a place or to read while reclining on your chaise longue on a warm summer day or on a park bench or a beach.

Published by Dorset Publishing Inc. Toronto, Ontario, Pocketman (hardcover $10.95) was scheduled to be on the bookshelves by May 1.

Don Bell came to love the Townships after being introduced to Sutton and vicinity by Robert Leon. Renting a chalet from the von Glasows, he spent last summer engaged in writing.

Bell was born in Brooklyn, N.Y. on November 17, 1936. At the age of five, his family moved to Montreal's Jeanne Mance Street, near Bernard in the so-called ghetto — the area that spawned Richlers and Layton. When he was 10, Don Bell's family moved to Park Extension, a very mixed ethnic neighborhood where Don's proudest roots are. Apart from participating in organized baseball up to the junior level and hockey, he started writing a weekly column for a local Italo-English newspaper, Le Courrier.

While attending McGill University, Don worked during the summer months at the Montreal Herald as sports, police and features reporter, in that order, until its demise in 1957.

The cliché A jack-of-all-trades can truly be applied to Don Bell. Aside from working out West at the Calgary Albertan as a police and features reporter, he worked overseas in London, England. There for two years, he found employment in restaurants as an espresso coffee machine operator; as a gardener, as a book reader for 20th Century Fox Films and as a reporter for The London Daily Sketch, a gossip tabloid.

On returning to Montreal, he became a news writer for CFCF and CBM radio and then served two years as a news editor for the CBC International Service. From '65 to '66, Bell was on the full-time staff at the Montreal Gazette as a general reporter, education editor and then as TV columnist.

After leaving the Gazette, he experienced tremendous success as a freelance writer and radio interviewer, he also undertook the enormous task of working in the publicity department of Expo '67 (his last regular employment) — specializing in audio-visual presentations, writing hundreds of press releases and a booklet called "Film at Expo '67".

Don was the Montreal stringer for Maclean's, a regular contributor to the Montrealer, (defunct) and Weekend Magazine. He has written for Saturday Night, The Canadian, Parallel (literary magazine), Viewpoint (short stories), En Route (Air Canada's in-flight magazine), The New York Times, Chicago Tribune Magazine and others. Don has also had at least half a dozen radio plays produced at CBC. "The Red Wood", "Way of the Buddha", "The Househunters" and others have been translated and sold abroad. Additionally, he did lengthy documentary programs for CBC on the Argentine writer Jorge Luis Borges and science fiction master Ray Bradbury. They are writers to which Bell feels the closest affinity, along with Damon Runyon and Isaac Bashevis Singer.

He has contributed approximately 60 articles to Weekend Magazine and at least 40 to Perspectives, mostly translations. His main focus has been stories on actual Montreal people, especially unusual cosmic downtown personalities, painters, idlers, big-city hermits, cafeteria philosophers.

"Most of my subjects — or friends — would be considered abnormal by ordinary standards, but I feel a certain affinity towards them. It seems that it's a kind of destiny — or cosmic good-will — that I meet a particular extraordinary person at a certain point in time. My role, I know, is to recognize the significance of the encounter and express it through my writing."

"They are not just singular encounters, though. Most of the so-called 'characters' I write about I keep meeting over a period of time, sometimes years. Then when the time is naturally right — perhaps some transforming event in that person's life, or in mine — I'll sit down and write about them; the story will have a natural, real climax. Usually, there is an alteration of sorts, otherwise there would be no point to the exercise."

"It's more rewarding to write this way rather in the journalistic style of one or two quickie interviews; hopefully the end product is a deeper, more potent story." Bell has four other books in the works:

The follow-up to Pocketman is a collection of non-fiction Montreal stories (untitled as yet) due to be released early 1980. DR. RIPPER AND MR. CREAM based on Don Bell's theory that Jack the Ripper was the sadistic Canadian sawbones, Dr. Thomas Neill Cream, is scheduled to be published in late 1980.

Woodstock: The legacy lives on WHITE LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Although it was music that drew hundreds of thousands of young people to this Catskills hamlet on a steamy August weekend in 1969, they also came to the Woodstock festival to celebrate the spirit of social revolution. But no revolution came.

The Woodstock generation grew up and became the establishment it so opposed, its dream of creating an alternative society now gone.

Like generations before, members of the Woodstock generation have taken up traditional lives. Thanks to women's liberation, more work than in previous ages. And, says the U.S. National Association of Home Builders, they bought a "startling 500,000 houses last year."

It was always a generation of contradictions — of flower children who opposed the Vietnam war and hardhats who waged it — and differences remain among its members, now in their late 20s and 30s.

Most of the Woodstock generation settled in — working, buying, rearing families like almost everyone else. But remnants of their ideals endure.

They have translated the old slogans of peace and love into a greater desire to serve humanity and so fulfil themselves — increasingly at the expense of marriage and children.

Moreover, business executives note a new skepticism among employees and reduced willingness to sacrifice everything for the job.

Along with a continued wish to do your own thing, the Woodstock generation has left as its legacy a more relaxed view of sex and of drugs. But when lots of people took to wearing bell-bottom jeans and smoking marijuana, these symbols of a generation's protest lost their impact as political statements.

"The trappings have given way to a search for real fundamental meanings of existence," says Peter Coyote, who went straight "when the revolution failed to materialize." A member of the Diggers, a group which sprang up to look after the hippies in San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district, he now is chairman of the California Arts Council.

It was opposition to the Vietnam war that galvanized his generation, and once the danger of the draft was gone, so was the urgency for activism.

Glen Elder, a Cornell University sociology professor, says despite the talk of a generation gap, the 1960s youth and their parents were not really so far apart.

When the Woodstock generation massed on the late Max Yasgur's vast and muddy dairy pasture to hear such flawed idols as Janis Joplin and Jimi Hendrix in 1969, the new age was already waning. When a youth was killed at the Altamont music festival in California later that year, it was a last gasp.

By the end of 1970 a near decade of plenty was ending as the Western world slipped toward recession. The Woodstock generation stumbled into adulthood, its dream colliding with new economic realities.

Sociologist Vern Rengtsson of the University of Southern California says, however, that his study of 2,000 individuals from three generations of families has found that the youth movement did in fact, alter the lives of those who were part of it.

One out of four of that group was involved in protest. And members of the generation were twice as likely to have gravitated toward a profession of social service and half as likely as earlier generations to have become lawyers or businessmen.

Dr. Hook

Hardworking band makes good

TORONTO (CP) — They say you can't keep a good man down. The same applies to a good pop band, and Dr. Hook is living proof.

Dr. Hook's story may be frustratingly typical to many groups, but unlike many, Hook has survived — with style.

Originally just another hardworking bar band, Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show was launched to international stardom in the early 1970s with the enormous hits Sylvia's Mother and Cover of the Rolling Stone.

But then the rug was yanked from under them. The group went bankrupt — the result, they say, of extensive and expensive touring during a period of economic instability in the United States. After reaching the top, they were back to playing bars.

But Dr. Hook survived, and began moving upward once more. They celebrated the revitalization in 1975 with an album entitled Bankrupt, and today they are enjoying unprecedented popularity with the album Pleasure and Pain and the singles Sharing the Night Together and When You're In Love With a Beautiful Woman.

How did the seven musicians manage to keep their spirit during the dog days? For starters, they are all good friends — even the road crew stuck with the band after the bankruptcy. Also, the group admits to a passion for performing.

LIKES PEOPLE

But most important, Dr. Hook simply likes people. The band's affable front-line, vocalists Dennis Locorriere and Ray Sawyer, have even been known to give interviews to high school papers.

One reporter hadn't been aware of their easy-going nature prior to the first of several recent meetings with the two singers. As such, he had expected a tense scene when he, Locorriere and Sawyer were refused entrance to a posh restaurant where reservations had been made. Sawyer, contrary to the establishment's policy, was clad in denim.

But, with a shrug and an amiable "no problem," they moved on to a neighboring eatery. Barred again at the door, Sawyer was asked:

"Would you mind removing your hat, sir?"

Now, Sawyer's straw cowboy hat, with the edges curled and a long feather poking up from the brim, is as much a part of him as his weather-beaten face and his black eye patch. To ask him to remove it seems almost like asking him to remove his head.

The reporter waited apprehensively for the protest, which never came. Instead, Sawyer merely grinned and drawled, "Why, surely," while Locorriere barked his infectious laughter.

Nor was any issue made of the fact that Sawyer's lunch, a bowl of carrot soup which he had ordered at the start of the interview, arrived almost 30 minutes later. It had been forgotten amid the flurry of excitement among the restaurant staff after someone recognized the two as rock stars.

SELF LAUGHTER

Sawyer was even allowed to wear his hat. To Confucius, patience was a virtue; to Sawyer and Locorriere it's a natural ingredient of their make-up. And it allows them to laugh at themselves.

"Y'know, they wouldn't let me bring my feather into New Zealand," Sawyer draws through a heavy Alabama accent as he inspects his hat. "They're afraid of mites."

"Good thing I didn't try to bring in my chicken."

Locorriere, whose spontaneous wit is a large part of his energetic, mile-a-minute speech pattern, explains how the band stays happy despite their back-breaking tour schedule of 300 days a year.

"We're the world's biggest You-Had-To-Be-There," he says. "Our strong point is the stage — we're really a performing act. The reason we make records is hopefully to get people into the halls, and then we can more or less lock the doors and let loose."

"The thing that makes it most fun," he adds, "is the people. It's the natural chemistry between them and us. And we never take for granted that the people in, say, Kingston, Ont., are the same sorts as in Toronto. We find something new in everyone."

"We have fun on stage simply because it's the way we approached it from the beginning," Sawyer says. "I decided a long time ago that if it's going to start becoming a job, then I'd quit. I'd go back to Alabama and do a real job, grow peas or somethin'."

Dr. Hook had its origins long before the current unit was formed in New Jersey. Sawyer, who had lost an eye in a car accident about 14 years ago, had been working sporadically with several other musicians in small southern clubs, when one owner told them to get a label "so he could put a sign in the window to let the drunks know someone was playing in there."

Because of Sawyer's eyepatch, a pirate image was suggested. He hit upon Dr. Hook — a loose translation of Captain Hook from Barrie's Peter Pan — and the Medicine Show, after the barkers who used to drum up business with the help of loud bands.

"What we didn't realize at the time was that Captain Hook had two eyes and one arm," Sawyer grins. "No patches."

Both musicians laugh as Locorriere adds in a conspiratorial tone:

"There's a funny story about Ray. He used to have a glass eye but he lost it — in a laundromat of all places. He had it in his pants pocket and forgot about it when he washed them."

"We keep visualizing some woman doing her clothes there and suddenly yelling, 'Frank, Frank, I swear to God your shorts just winked!'"

The band's offbeat humor had them labelled as song satirists in the early years. Locorriere's emotion-laden vocal on their debut hit, Sylvia's Mother, was regarded by many as a spoof on the teen-age heartbreak songs of the 1960s. It wasn't.

But those who were convinced otherwise felt that their belief was confirmed by Hook's second hit, Cover of the Rolling Stone, a rock parody.

Herriot's vet stories

The famous "vet" stories of James Herriot will be seen on CBC-TV beginning Sunday, May 20 at 10 p.m. Title of the series is All Creatures Great and Small. Starring in the first episode are left to right, Robert Hardy, as veterinary surgeon Siegfried Farnon, Christopher Timothy as James Herriot, his assistant, and Paul Luty as Berg Shape. All Creatures Great and Small was originally seen on BBC-TV.

It's the (Snowballing) Supershow

OTTAWA (CP) — The Greatest Little Travelling Supershow for Young People is what it's called, but somewhere in there you could insert the adjective Snowballing.

During May and June, 17 leading performers and performing groups will criss-cross Western Canada and Ontario in a travelling festival marking 1979 as the International Year of the Child.

Later in the year, a smaller but more intensive travelling festival of the same kind is planned for Quebec and the Atlantic provinces.

John Crompton, head of the Canada Council touring office which organized the show, said the program is already snowballing with more local and provincial contributions to the collaborative effort than originally announced.

The number of communities participating has risen to nearly 70 from the original 55.

Groups taking part include The Royal Winnipeg Ballet, Theatre Beyond Words, Entresix Dance Company and the Anna Wyman Dance Theatre. There are clowns, puppeteers, theatre players and musicians of all sorts.

What it's costing the touring office is $230,000, but Crompton said with all the local, provincial and volunteer support, it's really a million-dollar program.

REACH YOUNG

It is limited initially to May and June because it is intended to catch the end-of-school weeks, when young people can be reached while they are still organized in classes.

The Quebec and Atlantic program is being organized around summer festivals, including the Quebec Festival d'Ete, and July festivals in Saint John, N.B., Wolfville, N.S., Charlottetown and St. John's, Nfld.

The Guelph Spring Festival's production of Hansel and Gretel in collaboration with Theatre New Brunswick, which opens next month, will tour the Atlantic provinces in the fall, along with The Lost Fairy Tale from Young People's Theatre in Toronto.

The touring office's money for the festival came from federal government national unity grants, which the office can't expect to have continued next year and which came as a happy bonus when the office has had to limit its priorities for normal touring grants.

Whether the onset of the current election campaign had something to do with making the grants originally — and not repeating them next year when, presumably, there will be no general election in the offing — is something no one is willing to say officially. But suspicions are strong.

Crompton said in an interview the project has two purposes: First, to expose young people to the best of Canadian performers, second, to expose the best of Canadian performers to young audiences.

"I've watched, because I have kids of my own, the kinds of things that are usually put together for kids, and it has become clear to me that a number of companies that don't seem to be able to make it professionally think they can use the children's or youth market as a fall-back. I think this is absolutely wrong."

"If anything, we should be providing the very best that we have and let the young people see it. The competition for their interest is very strong with television and all the other distractions."

Crompton said The Greatest Little, etc., is the biggest project of its kind the touring office has undertaken, and cooperation with the provinces has been excellent.

But Crompton still has his worries about funds to meet the regular demands on the touring office. Because the Canada Council has $2 million less to spend this year than last, when it spent $42 million on the arts, the cuts have been severe in the touring office.

"We've had to put certain brakes on some of the larger companies," Crompton added. "I hope it is only a temporary measure, but even so we will have lost momentum."

The touring office had planned to subsidize a major tour by one of the major symphony orchestras each year, but has had to postpone that for a year or two.

"We've given the highest priority to the people who have to tour in order to survive — the dance and ballet companies, individual performing artists and small chamber groups who must tour because they cannot survive on the audiences in their own communities."

He said his concerns have been eased, in part, by the fact that major industrial corporations seem to be maintaining or increasing their support of the arts.

Broscomb gave her report which was followed by reading the following correspondence: Renewal notice from the S.P.C.A.; b) Thank-you letters from CanSave and the Danville Cercle des Femmes, also inviting the branch to their meeting May 9th. CanSave gave suggestions for ways of supporting them.

Donations will be made towards prizes for students at A.D.S. School and the S.P.C.A.

Mrs. Ernest Frost and Mrs. Andrew Horan will write an essay on Miss Gwen Elliott, a charter member of this branch, now deceased, for the Q.W.I. project, "Pioneer Women".

Mrs. L. Perkins, friendship convener, reported that she had sent a basket of fruit to Mrs. A. Leroux who is ill. Pennies were collected for friendship, fruit and cards, towards the restoration of the Adelaide Hoodless Homestead.

Beautiful handwork done by Mrs. R. Hull, and Mrs. W. Broscomb will be taken to the Q.W.I. convention. They will be taken to the F.W.I.C. convention in Saskatoon later this year. Mrs. Broscomb reported that four members had attended the county convention and gave a full report of it.

The travelling prize brought by Mrs. Frank Bourner was won by Mrs. Frances Hall.

At the close of the meeting all enjoyed a social hour together.

COWANSVILLE — The Cowansville Branch of the W.I. met at the home of Mrs. L. Ball on May 1st, co-hostesses were Mrs. A. Gibson and Mrs. L. Fulford. Fourteen members and one guest answered the roll call. Two guests joined the members at the tea hour.

The President, Mrs. L. Fulford welcomed members and guest.

The meeting was opened by Collect and Salute to the Flag.

Motto, God couldn't do everything so he made grandmothers; roll call, name a grandchild and tell about them.

Minutes of last meeting were read by Mrs. Brown, secretary.

Correspondence was read and discussed. Miss Darbe, treasurer, gave her report.

Mrs. F. Jenne was asked to report on the recent County Convention which was held in Cowansville on April 26. Cowansville Branch was the hostess branch this year.

Luncheon was served to 47 members and guests. Tea and cookies were served at the close of the afternoon meeting.

Mrs. Jenne thanked the members for making salads and desserts, and also for those who helped her serve. A special thanks to A. Bowling of Fordyce Branch for all her help.

Mrs. A. Gibson, 1st Vice-President, welcomed the members and guests who attended the Convention.

Mrs. M. McCutcheon was the delegate from Cowansville Branch, and gave a most interesting account of what took place at the convention. Mrs. Fulford thanked Mrs. McCutcheon for her interesting report.

Mrs. L. Fulford presented Mrs. Reda Lewis with a small gift on behalf of the four branches. Mrs. Lewis has been appointed to the F.W.I.C. Board and will represent our branches at the convention in Saskatoon.

Report of convenors: Education - Mrs. M. McCutcheon read from the Star, where a grade 6 class in a school in Roxboro were teaching themselves. The teacher supervises, but does not take part in the daily work. Pupils help one another and discuss each other's problems. At the end of the week the pupils are tested on what they have learned during the week. So far the experiment has proved to be quite successful.

Home Economics - Mrs. Jenne read from a magazine how Princess Grace makes beautiful collages. Princess Grace started her hobby six years ago. She gathers her own flowers, leaves and so on, presses them and leaves them to dry about 4 to 6 weeks. When they are dry, she places them on cardboard, paper, fabric and wood. She uses a small brush to glue the back of petals. One can also brush on or spray plastic coating for extra lustre. The collages are then immediately put in frames under glass and framed. Princess Grace has exhibited her collages in an art gallery in Paris.

Health and Welfare - Mrs. E. Parsons read an article how since 1948 when the War Amps inaugurated the Key Tag Service, donation sent in return for the little Tags have made it possible for the Amps to finance programs of assistance, not only for its own members and their families and widows, but also since 1963 for Canadians of all ages who become disabled through causes other than war.

At the close of the meeting members enjoyed looking at the articles members had brought, which had belonged to their grandmothers. Many members wore long skirts, blouses, shawls, aprons and jewelry, which was the dress of the period.

Tea was served in the dining room. The table looked lovely with a hand-made lace-cloth, table centre and candles. Mrs. E. Brown and Mrs. R. Phelps poured coffee and tea, respectively.

The W.I. will meet on June 5 at the home of Mrs. McCutcheon in West Brome.

DUNHAM — On May 2nd, the Dunham Branch of the Women's Institute met for a regular meeting. The Pres. Mrs. Barbara Harvey welcomed everyone and the meeting opened by repeating the Mary Stewart Collect and the Salute to the Flag in union. The roll call: Name a favourite vegetable or herb and tell how you use it was answered by nineteen members. The motto: Buried seed grows, buried talent never.

There were no convenors reported given, but seven members attended the annual convention, and Mrs. Martin gave a very interesting report on the day's events.

In the correspondence a letter was received from Mrs. Tector announcing the open house at Camp Garagana on June 24, everyone is welcome.

The members were reminded to send any handicrafts they have, well ahead of the date, for the convention to be held at Macdonald College at the end of May.

Mrs. Pearle Yates has offered to care for the cairn for the summer, and Mrs. Betty Wilkinson will see that some flowers are planted.

A vote of thanks was extended to Miss Jan Wilkinson for the printing of our new programs. The members were reminded that one of our girls at the Dixville Home will be celebrating a birthday on June 11th.

A sum of $31.00 talent money was donated to our funds. Many thanks to two of our members.

There being no other business, the meeting closed by repeating the W.I. Grace in union. The attention of the members was drawn to a table laden with plants, both house and garden, and the proceeds of $51.00 was added to our funds, thanks to the enthusiasm of the members. The new programs were distributed, lunch and a social hour was enjoyed.

KINNEAR'S MILLS — The members of the Kinneare's Mills Women's Institute met on Wednesday evening, May 2nd, at the home of Mrs. Linda Robinson.

The President Mrs. Helen Jamieson opened the meeting by all repeating the Creed and Salute to the Flag.

The Roll Call, "Name a flower from the Bible" was answered by eight members and one guest. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. Linda Robinson.

The Treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Helen Lowry, with a good balance on hand. A thank-you letter was received for the donation of money given towards the upkeep of the Community Hall.

A letter was read from CanSave and also one from Mrs. French. The President hoped that someone would be able to take her place as the Branch Representative to the Convention at Macdonald College, the latter days of May, as she is unable to attend.

Convenors Reports: Agriculture: Mrs. Joy Nugent read a very interesting clipping on the danger of eating unknown berries, and how various plants can be harmful to humans.

Citizenship: Mrs. Helen MacRae read a humorous poem; Education: Mrs. Diane Allan read the main highlights from the St. Pat's Newsletter. Home Economics: In the absence of Mrs. Edna Campbell, this report was given by Mrs. Helen Lowry.

A refrigerator has been purchased for the Community Hall and is expected to be delivered shortly.

The Semi-annual County W.I. meeting to be held on Thursday evening, May 10, at Inverness, and transportation was arranged.

The members agreed that Mrs. Linda Robinson would be in charge of obtaining two gifts for the Gift Store at F.W.I.C. in Saskatchewan. These gifts to be brought to the Semi-annual meeting.

The meeting was closed with the benediction and a delicious lunch served by Linda, followed by a social hour.

Museum Society executive meet

COOKSHIRE — The executive of the Compton County Historical & Museum Society met in the Museum, with the president, J.E. McKercher in the chair, and 13 in attendance.

Business arising from the minutes was dealt with, and plans made for social events of the season.

The official opening of the Museum would be held on Friday evening, May 11th, in the Museum.

On May 26, the Rev. Carl Gustafson will show slides in the Community Centre in Sawyerville, of the Eastern Townships, depicting its history.

On June 23, Professor Robin Burns will be the guest speaker at the meeting to be held in the Community Centre in Sawyerville. During the last week in June, 'Heritage Week', there will be a showing of Vintage Cars at the Museum.

An anticipated cavalcade to the Odonat Museum will be held in August, the date has not been set yet.

On Sept. 8 an Open House will be held at the Museum, from 12 to 5 p.m.

The annual meeting will take place on Sept. 15 with Miss Marion Phelps as guest speaker; her topic will be "A Stage Coach Route in Eastern Canada", and it will be held at the Community Centre in Sawyerville.

It is hoped that a concert will be presented by the children in October.

In June, the History Teachers' Association of Quebec will be visiting the Museum.

Hasty notes and post cards have been ordered, and will be for sale when they are received.

Hired help will be employed for the Museum's work.

There were a few items of correspondence read, and a request for some one to write up the history of Eaton Corner.

The Museum will be open every day from 2-5 p.m. until Oct. 8, with the exception of Tuesdays.

It was stated that a representative from the government Cultural Affairs Department had visited the Museum, and was pleased with the progress of the work done on the building.

The report of the treasurer, Lionel Hurd, showed the receipts, expenditures and bank balance.

Ladies Aid meets

Tickets were passed out to members to sell for the drawing of a quilt.

A card party was planned for Saturday, May 26.

A discussion regarding the annual picnic was held, with definite plans to be made at a later date.

The June meeting will be held on Wednesday afternoon, June 6, at the home of Winnie Paterson.

Articles for auction were brought in by Vera Brock, Rita McGee, Bertha Kendall and Mary Kilshaw. The names of Joan Farquhar and Evelyn Proulx were drawn to bring articles to the June meeting.

A drawing was held on three of the donated articles. Winners were Dot McCourt, Gertrude Watson and Dora McCourt. The remaining articles were auctioned by Mrs. Irene Farquhar and a good amount realized.

At the close of the evening, delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by a few of the ladies.

Canterbury WI holds social evening

The Canterbury Women's Institute members, joined by their husbands and friends, totalling 34 in number, met at Salle Jean Paul at 5:30 p.m. on May 6, to enjoy a banquet of delicious roast beef and all the trimmings, with apple pie a la mode for dessert. The tables looked festive with Welcome place mats and lighted candles in coloured holders. Near the end of the meal our Past County President, Mrs. Helen Groom read a Welcome Poem, written by one of the members.

After this, Mrs. Lyla MacLeod asked the guests to look under their place mats for a bird stamp and Mrs. Germaine MacAuley, Mrs. Gloria Belanger and Mrs. Jewel Coates were the lucky winners; they were given small gifts.

Mrs. Gloria Belanger then asked our three older ladies, namely, Mrs. Mary MacLeod, Mrs. Alice Coates and Mrs. Lill Edwards to come up front and presented each lady with a daintily trimmed gift. Our President, Mrs. Mabel Thompson, asked the following ladies to come forward: Mrs. Grace MacLeod, Mrs. Lyla MacLeod, Mrs. Muriel Mayhew, Mrs. Helen Groom, Mrs. Marion Goodwin and Mrs. Clara Chapman. Mrs. Chapman was presented with a 50-year bar pin and the other ladies with 25-year bar pins. This brings to mind that most of these ladies have been members for 40 years or more. Several ladies brought cameras and took pictures of each group.

Mr. Ted Bennett thanked the Canterbury W.I. members for inviting the gentlemen to this gathering and gave high praise to our W.I. for all its worthy efforts and to the W.I. as a World-Wide Organization. Mr. Kelly MacKenzie thanked Mr. and Mrs. Buckland and helpers for serving such a delicious meal. After a social hour of visiting, this concluded our happy evening.

Your Birthday

May 17, 1979

Large strides are likely to be made this coming year where your work or career is concerned. You may experience some minor roadblocks, but they can be easily surmounted. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take time to size up the consequences before speaking your mind, especially to the boss. Even if you are right, it may not be smart to prove your point. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Before you accept another's words as gospel, analyze carefully what this person says AND his or her basic motives. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If undertaking do-it-yourself projects today, keep your thumb out of the way of the hammer. Large tasks should be left to professionals.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're very generous today with your personal belongings. This is good and proper, but be wary of lending something to another that isn't yours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Family harmony will prevail today where the larger issues are concerned. Should any flareups occur, they will be due to trivial matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Trying to divide your attention today could cause you unnecessary headaches. Keep your priorities in order. Tackle one task at a time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Financial conditions are mixed for you today, but the good will be greater than the bad. Nevertheless, count your pennies wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Directives that you issue to your family today could confuse them, because you may tell them to do one thing and expect them to do another.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Problems which may at first appear unsolvable won't prove that difficult today if you put your splendid imagination to use. The answers you need are there.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Keep an open mind. Go along with the wishes of the majority today. You'll win their approval and save money in the end, as well.

South decides not to make any slam try and is mighty glad when he sees the dummy. There is an almost sure club loser and three potential spade losers. Of course, if East has the spade ace all South's worries are over. He wins the diamond and draws trumps with three leads stopping in dummy. Then he leads a club to his 10; West wins and leads a second diamond. South wins and plays his king of clubs, leads a club to his ace and notes that East still holds a high club.

If clubs had been 3-3, South would be able to discard a spade. If West held the fourth club South could have led dummy's last club and discarded one of his three spades. West would have been caught in an end play.

As it was, South still could do something better than lead a spade to his king. He ruffed dummy's last club and led a low spade from his hand. If West won the trick, South's worries would have been over, but East won and led the queen of spades.

South rises with his king of spades just in case East has underlined the ace, but West produces that fine high card. At this point West is end played. He has no spade left. He must give South a ruff and discard and the contract still makes.

Stanstead County Women's Institute annual meeting

By IVY HATCH
(County Publicity Convener)

NORTH HATLEY — The Hatley Centre Branch of Stanstead County Women's Institute spread the welcome mat on Wednesday, May 9, when they hosted the other four County branches for the annual meeting.

Upon arrival, all were given a cheery word by Mrs. Doris Shaw who sold the luncheon tickets, entering the assembly room, Mrs. P. Wilson clasped each hand in friendship. After the President, Mrs. A. Lord spoke a few words of welcome, because so many had come to the meeting on a summer-like day, when there is so much to be done at home, then Mrs. John Johnston, Hatley Centre Branch president officially welcomed everyone and read a poem "A recipe for a growing boy", which was written by a Townshippier and printed in the Sherbrooke Record.

Mrs. Lord opened the meeting with all repeating the Mary Stewart Creed, the singing of the W.I. Ode, a moment of silence in respect of deceased members, with many thoughts of Mrs. Libby Bennett of North Hatley.

Miss Viola Moranville, secretary, read the minutes of the May 1978 annual and of the January 1979 semi-annual Board meeting.

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. John Johnston, was detailed as to receipts and expenditures, indicating a successful year with monies spent for "Home and Country" to the tune of $1,353.29.

The conveners gave their reports: Mrs. Stanley Whitcomb, Agriculture with Mrs. Janice Soutiere, treasurer for the school fair committee also reporting. The past year has been a busy one in this work, two day school fair, purchasing school fair seeds and distributing them to the school, inspecting gardens and in many other ways. A letter was read from an individual in Dixville noting the gardens in that area are not inspected. This is because there is no W.I. there and although the youngsters come to Ayer's Cliff school, it is difficult to go as far away to do the inspection.

This year the Stanstead County Council did not make the annual grant to the fair, however, it is hoped a committee can change their minds, as this is only one more problem concerning finances. Mrs. Soutiere said there is sufficient money to pay for seeds which will be distributed to the schools within a week. A letter was read from Charles Davis, Chairman of the Fair Steering Committee for the schools. This was a copy to Federal and Provincial officials seeking a grant to assist in financing the costs of the buses that take the youngsters and exhibits to the school fair. Unless some assistance comes from somewhere, there is a possibility that this 1979 fair in September can be the last, which has been going for 62 years.

In the absence of the Educational convener, Mrs. J. Lee Heath, her report was presented by Mrs. Douglas Cooper who noted a Stanstead College Student Aid group formed of local people last year and have since had many projects to assist day students. Donations have been made to schools' noon day lunch programs, books to libraries, Girl Guides and Brownies troops.

Mrs. Archie Moulton, Citizenship, stated that Branches had participated in Veteran day activities, Canada Day, CanSave and UNICEF, when over $800.00 was collected in the county for the latter.

Home Economics, Miss Viola Moranville said all had assisted at Ayer's Cliff fair in several ways, supporting the tea room sale table, entering into the competitions of crafts. Sick and shut-ins had been taken in dinners, and trips arranged.

Mrs. Ivy Hatch, publicity, reported on activities within the Branches. This being The International Year of the Child, several projects and Branch programs have centered around this. All Branches are reporting, and newspapers print reports sent to them which is much appreciated, for this keeps Counties informed of what the other is doing.

Mrs. Douglas Johnston, Welfare and Health, said donations have been made to the Sherbrooke Hospital campaign and petitions circulated were signed to Keep the Sherbrooke Hospital as it is, support to the Cancer Fund by members selling daffodils and purchasing them, thus making a donation, knitting done for CanSave, items donated for the ditty bags, fire victims given aid, clothing and gifts sent to the Homes in Dixville and Austin.

All Branches reported interesting roll calls, speakers, films shown, demonstrations, discussions, work among youth and senior citizens, Mother's Day flowers made and sold by the Beebe Branch, Hatley held a May day fair, Stanstead North, a noon day public dinner, Beebe co-hosted a card party with proceeds going to the Butters' Memorial Center Building fund in Austin. All members contributed one dollar towards the Adelaide Hoodless Home, the birthplace of the founder of W.I. and to the Land Rover project in Lasotho.

Stanstead County W.I. has 115 members, all these reports indicate the interest and work done by them and that they also have a lot of fun together as they live up to the W.I. Motto "For home and Country".

A donation of money was voted to the Sherbrooke Hospital 1979 campaign. Thank you letters were read from Miss Amanda Cunningham for the Dr. C.L. Brown scholarship; from Terry Cooper, recipient of the Estella Holmes scholarship; and a communication from A.C.W.W. concerning a competition of two hand-crafts and a children's song.

The president's remarks were brief as she thanked everyone for their cooperation and encouragement during the past year. Plans were discussed to have the ensuing year's programs printed as last year.

The meeting then recessed for the noon hour and the hosting branch served a delicious chicken 'n biscuits dinner with all the trimmings. The tables were decorated in the W.I. colors of royal blue and gold with daffodils in blue vases adorning the tables and serviettes. On behalf of the visiting members, Mrs. Erwin Taylor voiced appreciation to Hatley Center for their hospitality.

Miss Caron was among the members. She is a Government employee and had come from Rock Forest to judge the J. & P. Coats hand embroidered in Swedish stitches shopping bags and quilts. Later it was announced the bag of Mrs. Ezra Woodard, Beebe Branch, had placed first. Mrs. John Johnston, Hatley Centre, 2nd; and Mrs. Janice Soutiere, 3rd. There are only three prizes given and the two top ones will go to Macdonald for further competition. The quilt to qualify was that of Mrs. A. Lord and this, too, will go to Macdonald.

The afternoon session opened with all singing The Hymn of all Nations. Roll call was answered by ten from Ayer's Cliff; five from Beebe; three from Hatley; 13 from Hatley Centre and 14 from Stanstead North.

Mrs. Lord, speaking for all members spoke a few words of farewell to Mrs. Valarie Baskwill who leaves Stanstead on May 22 to return to her home in England after several months here. She is a member of Stanstead North Branch.

Mrs. Grace Lebaron was in the chair for the election of officers. The slate was presented by the nominations chairman, Mrs. S.J. Whitcomb. Elected and re-elected were President, Mrs. A. Lord; first and second Vice-presidents, Mrs. Erwin Taylor and Mrs. George Peasley; secretary, Miss Viola Moranville; treasurer, Mrs. John Johnston.

Conveners: Agriculture, Mrs. S.J. Whitcomb and Mrs. Doris Gibson; Citizenship, Mrs. K. Little; Education, Mrs. C. Lee Heath; Home Economics, Mrs. R. McClary; Publicity, Mrs. Ivy Hatch; Welfare and Health, Mrs. Douglas Johnston.

Declaring all duly elected with no nominations from the floor, Mrs. Lebaron said "this is the best organization anywhere".

Mrs. Lord resumed the chair. A remembrance was voted to the auditor. Mrs. Lord, speaking for the members thanked Miss Viola Moranville, the retired Home Economics convener of many years for her dedication and service to the County. Mrs. Lord announced she has received the name of Miss Moranville for Q.W.I. Home Economics convener, the nomination to be voted upon at the convention at Macdonald College the end of this month.

All were reminded that the Hatley Branch May fair will be May 19 starting off in the morning and all were invited to support it.

Honorarians were voted to the secretary and treasurer. Stanstead North will have the Quarterly meeting in August, date to be announced. The meeting adjourned and the guest speaker, Mrs. Wendy Williams was introduced by Mrs. R. Vaughan.

Wendy spoke a few years back at a County meeting about the problems of Chockery Man and delighted everyone. This year she spoke of another of Chockery's problems, getting a laying hen to sit to hatch out chickens, which kept everyone laughing; she was urged to give an encore and this was about Dionne, father of the famous quintuplets in Callander, Ont. many years ago.

Mrs. Ivy Hatch, speaking for the assembly, thanked Wendy for her excellent talent and said all hope there will not be as many years pass by, before there is another presentation.

It has its advantages

Tale of a town in two countries

ESTCOURT STATION, Maine (NEA) — When the boundary between Maine and Quebec was set in the 1800s, it was supposed to follow the St. John River. Legend has it, however, that United States officers got the Francophile surveyor drunk and thereby pilfered what became the far northwest corner of this state.

Yet French Canada did not lose out completely. Today the land here above the St. John may legally belong to America, but its heart belongs north of the border. Washington has the control, but Montreal has the influence. For thousands of square miles the look, language and fashion is Quebecois.

And nowhere is the phenomenon more apparent than in Estcourt Station, a community so remote from the American experience that it gets electricity from Quebec, TV from New Brunswick, and mail twice a week. Further north than Nova Scotia, Estcourt Station is, in effect, a town in two countries.

For example, the children here are mostly American, but their development is totally French. The village is too small to have a school of its own, so the kids attend class in Quebec. There they learn about Charles DeGaulle, and Queen Mary, but the name Tom Jefferson may not be mentioned for years on end.

And in most cases the children's parents are content with the situation. In the main they are French Canadian themselves, and though they are U.S. residents they suspect the American way. The first language of their youngsters is French; only a few of the adults can carry conversations in English.

Sometimes the Francophile residents do more than just suspect Americana. They forbid it. A few years ago, when a drive-in movie opened in the Station, French Canadians indicated their displeasure by stopping the electricity flow. The drive-in management got the message; the theater closed.

The Quebecers feel they have a right to such influence. After all, they were here first. Estcourt Station was settled long before the U.S. border was established, and the French have always been the town's dominant factor. At present more than half the 36-person population remains loyal to Canada.

Americans could change the demographic circumstances at any time, of course. But the area is too isolated to be enticing. Estcourt Station is cut off from the rest of Maine by a dangerous and roadless wilderness. The only way to motor to the next U.S. town, 50 miles away, is through the Dominion.

Currently, there are only four Americans in the village, not counting the children who are citizens by birth. One is the customs agent, another is his wife, the third is the postmaster and the fourth, Game Warden Philip Dumond, 47, is the nearest thing to a peace officer for 1,500 square miles.

Fortunately, the peace is easily kept here. Dumond has been a Station resident for 22 years, and can't remember a murder, rape, or even a serious felony. The only time local crime was rampant was during Prohibition. Dumond says the record indicates there was a lot of criminal drinking going on. Much of the drinking took place in an Estcourt Station tavern built square on the international boundary. Patrons could get potted on the Canadian side of the bar, but not the U.S. If someone wandered over the line with a glass in hand, it's said, diligent federal agents were there with handcuffs.

ESTCOURT STATION literally straddles the Maine-Quebec border. Although the village is technically in Maine its children attend Quebec schools and speak French. Residents say belonging to two countries has one plus — both governments generally leave them alone.

Now people in the Station drink with impunity. And law and order prevail. A while back Dumond did receive some threatening mail, letters that indicated he would be shot and killed. But it turned out to be only a neighbor, who didn't like Dumond's dog, and the affair has since been forgotten.

This is not to say everything is idyllic in the village. Its isolation is no protection from the problems of the age. For one thing, the cost of living is alarming. There are no supermarkets in which to look for bargains, thus village goods are among the most expensive in the contiguous United States. Yet the only merchant in town is not prospering. He says he must buy supplies with U.S. dollars, which are worth more than Canadian dollars; but then he must sell at the Canadian value in order to compete with stores across the border. The word is he would like to pack up and move into the Dominion.

There are others here who also talk about moving. They say the jobs that attracted them to the United States are no longer plentiful, or especially rewarding. In fact, times have changed to the point where salaries on the Canadian side, coupled with fine social benefits, may now be greater than in America.

Yet no exodus is imminent. Belonging to two countries has its advantages. And so does not belonging to them. Residents say Estcourt Station is out of Ottawa's reach, and out of Washington's sight, and there is no better place for people to live than where their governments generally leave them alone.

BIRCHTON

When Dr. Yvon Constant, M.D., of the CLSC Staff in Cookshire, arrived at the home of Mrs. Marie Nutbrown, he, with CLSC supporters, Mrs. Elsie Boucher and Mrs. Diane Loiselle, both of Bury, were introduced to the Birchton U.C.W. group by Mrs. J.A. Murray.

First, Dr. Constant explained the purpose of the CLSC in any region, then he and his supporters answered the many and varied questions asked by the Birchton ladies, very interesting and informative. Many are not well enough informed as to the benefits given by the CLSC and all for the asking. Citizens should keep themselves aware of such opportunities.

The doctor emphasized that curative care was a priority, medically, socially, and psychologically, that staff was not enough to do all needed in their area, comprised of Bury, East Angus, Sawyerville, Cookshire, St. Isidore, but if services are used fully, more may be given by the government. The Head Office is at Weedon, but services same to each group.

It is hoped that each 'area' will appoint a representative to a Central Committee to keep people, English and French, informed about the services, and reports show that "one language", English or French services, as that shortens the time, and increases the understanding, that is, everyone gets all in (her) own language for better understanding of the issues at hand.

The staff at Cookshire consists of Dr. Yvon Constant, a social worker, a nurse and a secretary, committee organizer, Mr. Daniel Hains, who work with our local doctors.

The guests were graciously thanked by Mrs. R. Sparkes for their interesting and informative discussions.

The President, Mrs. Arthur Rogers, in the chair, led in the Purpose, after which Mrs. B. Prescott, for worship, chose the subject Pentecost, involving most of those present, in scripture readings, prayers of confession, intercession, supplication, and testimony.

It was reported that more information on our project for "The Year of the Child" will be coming.

The secretary, Mrs. Logan, reported that all seemed to be in readiness for the Garage Sale held May 5.

Notes were written to a former member in Ontario, a card signed for a not-so-well member of many years standing. The standing committees seem to be 'in good standing'.

Upcoming events were dealt with, about which the media will hear more later.

After the Benediction, delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Marie Nutbrown, assisted by Mrs. G. Latewood.

It is worthy of note that the group decided a letter be sent to the MNA, Fernand Grenier urging his opposition to the proposed wider road through Eaton Corner, a real Heritage Village, and urged each person add further individual support, too.

Mrs. O.A. Desruisseaux spent a few days with Mrs. Leon Desruisseaux and the R. Cilles family, in Sherbrooke, thanks to the kindness of Mrs. A. Halsall.

SPRING COURSES BANISH WINTER BLUES IN BEDFORD

You'd think that the long-awaited arrival of spring would send people outdoors in droves, but this year, spring seems to be sending people indoors. The District of Bedford Adult Education Service (AES) is offering 35 different courses in its spring session this year, and it's shaping up to be the biggest season yet. Over a thousand people have taken AES Popular Education courses this year, and registration for the spring term looks better than ever. It seems that taking a spring course is a good remedy to chase away the last traces of winter.

Spring classes have already begun in several courses, but anyone interested can still register. Registration is kept open until class limits are reached, and AES has something for just about everyone. Adult Ed courses are being conducted in Sewing, Sports, Art, Economics, and Ballroom Dancing, to name just a few. Both credit and non-credit courses are offered, and those interested should register as soon as possible. You can register in person at the AES offices in Massey-Vanier High School, or call your regional representative for more details.

COWANSVILLE
People in the Cowansville area can enroll in Beginner or Intermediate Tennis lessons, Keep Fit, Jazz Dance I and Social Dance, and Landscape Art or Economics. Further information is available regarding dates, times, places, and prices by calling Rita Forcier at 263-5838.

MANSONVILLE
Residents of Mansonville

and the surrounding district can take Art, Economics, Typing, or Sports. Classes in Art and Typing have already begun, but there is still room for more students. Sports and Economics are on-going courses and registration can take place at any time. For more information, call Rhonda Price at 243-5980.

KNOWLTON
A number of interesting courses are being given in Knowlton this spring. AES is offering Beginner and Intermediate Tennis, Keeping Fit, Jazz Dance I, Jazz Dance II, Sewing, Book-keeping, and Woodworking. Tennis lessons are conducted at Lions Park court and anyone interested can still register. Complete information on AES courses in Knowlton is available by calling Rhonda Price at 243-5980.

SUTTON
If you live in the Sutton area and you think a little ballroom dancing would brighten up your spring, AES is conducting a 10-week course for a maximum of 12 couples. Classes are held Monday evenings, and the course is designed to teach couples the delightful intricacies of the ballroom dance. Courses in Jazz I and Yoga are also being given in Sutton. Details are available from Inge von Glasow at 538-2906.

Both credit and non-credit courses are offered in the AES spring term, and anyone interested should register as soon as possible. If a class has to be cancelled because of insufficient interest, AES refunds all fees. To register in person, visit the AES offices in Massey-Vanier High School. Complete information on all courses is available by calling AES at 263-3775.

Musical evening great success

SAWYERVILLE — The musical evening sponsored by the Compton County Women's Institute was held on May 4 in the Sawyerville Elementary School. Mrs. Stevenson again acted as Mistress of Ceremonies and welcomed an enthusiastic audience.

The program opened by all singing O Canada, after which a wide variety of musical talent was enjoyed.

First on the program were selections by a trio composed of Rayfield Ross, Real Fortin and Muriel Mayhew, followed by two amusing recitations by Mrs. Daisy Allison. The Batley sisters Tracy and Christine favored us with singing, followed by a dance by the Rand sisters, Lana and Tammy. Mrs. Heatherington accompanied her granddaughter Randi who sang two songs.

We then enjoyed piano duets by the Hall sisters, Beverly and Trudy Tincarre entertained with western songs, accompanied by their brothers, on guitars. Mr. Murray Ward and daughter Paula played several selections on violin and accordion. At this time, there was a short intermission when home-made candy was sold by the Institute ladies. After intermission Mrs. Tincarre entertained with mouth organ selections, accompanied by her son Edmund on guitar.

All enjoyed solos by Debbie Drummond with Sue Parker at the piano and by Merrilee McAulay, accompanied by Mrs. Dawson. Gordon Willard then played several toe-tapping tunes on the mouth organ. Milton Goodwin, looking very dapper in Scottish kilts, rendered several Scottish songs with his wife at the piano.

Mrs. Lavina French read several amusing limericks. Mrs. Scholes accompanied Mrs. Phillips who sang two songs. The Tincarre brothers brought the program to a close with guitar music.

Mrs. Stevenson thanked the entertainers who had given so freely of their talents and the audience for supporting them. God Save the Queen brought a pleasant evening to a close.

Catholic Women's League

RICHMOND — The Catholic Women's League of Richmond held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Lucy Mackinnon in Denison's Mills, with some twenty ladies present.

The newly-elected president, Mrs. Mackinnon is such an avid worker that she kept us spellbound all through the meeting.

This being the "Year of the Child", the Richmond Council of the C.W.L. are working on several projects. Among them one is to sponsor a contest for the primary school students on posters depicting the theme International Year of the Child, and for the secondary students: An essay on the theme: What I think about and care about in to-day's society.

The president also made us aware of the plight of children in Argentina. There is a group of 18 grandmothers who are pleading for our help in trying to locate their missing grandchildren who have been captured by the militia, along with their parents and who haven't been heard of since. The missing children range in age between newborn and two years old. The C.W.L. members are to write a word of encouragement to the individual grandmothers and also put pressure on our Prime Minister to let the Argentinian government know that we expect action in helping those families to be reunited.

Business of the meeting carried on at a good pace and the president and past-president were delegated to attend the Provincial convention in June.

Mrs. Jacques Beaubien, our Past-President, was presented with the P. Pres. brooch and a luncheon was enjoyed by all.

Card Party

WINDSOR — Lower Windsor Ladies Aid held a 500 card party at the Langlois home on Saturday evening, May 5, when cards were played at eleven tables.

Prizes for high score were won by Alice Lester for the ladies and Alberic Montigny for the gents. Second high went to Linda Watson and Dot McCourt (the latter playing in gents place). Consolation prizes went to Rose Oakley and Gertrude Watson (playing in gents place).

J.G. Langlois won the floating prize for the nine of hearts bid and also the special prize for taking the most tricks with the four of spades.

A number of small door prizes were given out. Winners were Hartley Richards, Louise Farquhar, Irene Fredette, Grant Watson, Harold Lester, Mrs. Upton, Irene Farquhar, Joan Farquhar and Vera Brock.

Rita Abran was the lucky winner of the box of groceries. A hand-worked tea cloth was won by Harold Lester.

There will be one more card party, on Saturday, May 26.

Refreshments were served at the close of the evening.

EATON

Milby Women's Institute

The May meeting of the Milby W.I. was held the evening of the 3rd of May at the Club Room in Milby with the Pres., Mrs. Gertie Beattie, in the chair.

The meeting opened in the usual manner, with the Salute to the Flag and the Ode, followed by the Sec'y, Mrs. Wenda Broadhurst, reading the minutes.

Correspondence consisted of letters of thanks for flowers, gifts and cards sent and from CanSave for contributions received.

Mrs. Evelyn Sutor agreed to act as delegate to the annual W.I. Convention at Macdonald College on May 30 and 31, and Mrs. Mildred Cairns at the County meeting, held at Brompton Road on May 9.

The Sec'y was requested to send a letter to the Sawyerville W.I. Branch accepting with thanks, their invitation to attend a meeting of their club on June 6 at 8 p.m. A show of bands observed 10 members planning to attend.

Members were reminded of $1.00 each donation to the Hoodless Home, and of money or food donation to the upcoming Sherbrooke County card party, held May 5 at St. George's Church Hall.

Mrs. Eldora Turner spoke of the generosity of the McFadden Store, Lennoxville, for their donation of one half the cost of the seeds for the School Fair program, for which the W.I. is grateful. All outstanding bills were voted to be paid.

The question was brought up as to how Milby W.I. could best make its contribution to the International Year of the Child. Several suggestions were brought forward but no definite decision arrived at.

Mrs. Roy Sutor, Citizenship, made mention of women's recent participation in politics noting the number who are in the running for election in the upcoming federal election. Women's "Lib" is no longer a myth.

Publicity Convener followed this by this evening's news that Britain had just elected to office her first lady Prime Minister to occupy No. 10 Downing St. in the person of Mrs. Thatcher. Welfare and Health Convenues reported flowers for Easter had been sent to Mrs. Fairbrother, Mrs. Raymond and Mrs. St. Laurent. Mrs. Mae Sarrasin reported she had sent 67 cards during the year, representing much work and care.

Milby W.I. will again this year be in charge of one table at the Flea Market, May 26, at the Huntingville Hall, each member to bring at least two articles - food or "what have you".

Mrs. Mildred Cairns consented to act as County Convener in Agriculture for the coming year.

Work Calendar for May was mits or socks. The roll call was answered by 14 members - each with plants, bulbs, or slips which were auctioned off by Mrs. Sarrasin, bringing in the tidy sum of $17.60 and each going home with a "garden treasure". Meeting then adjourned.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Roy Sutor and Mrs. Ian Kirby.

We were glad to have with us, two guests, one of whom was a lady from Barrow-on-Soar, Leicestershire, England, and member of a large W.I. group, there, 40 in number. This lady, Mrs. Francis Davis, on request, spoke most interestingly of the work carried on by the W.I. in England and Wales - 400 W.I. groups whose operations are similar in many ways to our own.

She was thanked on behalf of the group by Mrs. Broadhurst for her enlightening talk on how W.I. work is done "over there".

Year of the child — Kids describe their world

Here are some samples of poetry written by my levels 4 and 5 children since January, 1979. Since it is The Year of the Child, I hope you might be interested in printing them.

Although we're now a little past the winter season, I'm still enclosing the ones on skiing because they are so good. Those particular ones were written the day following our first cross-country ski class. It was a glorious day with lots of fresh, soft snow. For many of the children it was their first time on skis. Their poems capture beautifully that experience, I feel.

These, and other selections are being entered in a nation wide Poetry Contest with the hope that at least some will be chosen for publication in a Canadian anthology of children's poetry.

Care shown children's future

During International Year of the Child, concerned Canadians are looking for ways to help tomorrow's children grow into healthier, happier adults.

According to the Canadian Mental Health Association, leading experts in children's mental health have agreed on positive steps to be taken now to promote better mental health and to ensure prevention and early detection of mental health problems among the young.

How can we anticipate the mental health problems of tomorrow's children and try to prevent them?

In 1977, a conference of more than 400 mental health professionals approved seven recommendations prepared by a special task force made up of Canada's leading experts in the field.

The seven recommendations from the experts were:

FAMILY IMPACT STUDIES: Many policies of government, businesses and other organizations have a direct influence on family life. We must start reviewing public policies to examine their probable impact on family ties before substantial decisions are made.

NEIGHBOURHOOD NETWORKS: Isolation — lack of contact and support from family and friends — can aggravate mental and emotional problems. We must act now to begin recreating the bonds of community that are being weakened by the increasing isolation of contemporary life.

YOUTH EMPLOYMENT: The sense of hopelessness that accompanies sustained unemployment will have negative social and mental health consequences for both the unemployed and other young people. Truancy, vandalism and juvenile delinquency occur more readily when job prospects are limited in number or in variety.

MINORITY GROUPS: Physical handicaps, language barriers, cultural differences and racial prejudice make emotional support and mental health services harder to obtain for some in our community. We need to involve more minority group members in our health programs and develop ways to guarantee them easier access to mental health services.

UNIVERSAL DEVELOPMENT ASSESSMENT: How often are gifted children and those with potential emotional problems or learning disorders overlooked until too late? We need to ensure an ongoing assessment of the progress of our children so that medical and other attention will be available to those who need special assistance.

UNIVERSAL ACCESSIBILITY TO QUALITY DAY CARE: With both fathers and mothers working in many cases, and with increasing number of single-parent families in Canada, there is a growing need for child care services. If we ignore the changing patterns of Canadian family life, lack of child care during the developmental years will result in a heavy burden of emotional (and financial) problems in the future.

MY DOOR

My favorite door is the classroom door,
A white door, a nice door,
A door that when I go in I feel like I want to work,
It's a door that leads me
Somewhere, somewhere special,
Somewhere that I go every Morning and like it
That's my favorite door,
And I like it.

A MELTING SNOWMAN

I was built in a kid's back yard.
The sun came out.
I felt like a burning candle.
A distintegrating candle.
A wishy-washy candle.
The sun was burning on my head.
I finally melted into water.
I never saw the world again.

SKIING IN THE SNOW

It feels good coming tumbling down hills
Some drifting down, some gliding down
Smashing into trees, get backup
Come down again
It's fun skiing up and down hills
Over mountains, gliding down coming backup
Skiing is a lot of fun.

WINTER IS GONE

Day by day snow is crawling away.
Less smoke is seen from chimneys.
It's time to play!
It's spring! It's spring!
Animals come out of hibernation looking happy.
The whole world is getting prepared for summer.

SPRING

Spring is beautiful
Beautiful flowers are swaying in the wind
Spring is new things
New baby animals are coming, you'll see them
Spring is muddy
Your boots will feel gooey, gooey, gooey.
Spring is the end of hibernation
Bears, Racoons, all sorts of animals will be coming back.
Spring is beautiful.

SKI TIME

I go bang in the snow.
Broke a ski, broke a stick.
Fell down the hill.
Jump in the air.
I think I will hurt myself.
Hard to go up the hill.

SKIING

Falling in the snow, the white, white snow,
Sliding and falling in the white snow
Don't you cry, it's only for fun
Don't break your neck sliding down
Go up and fall
Go down and fall
Don't you get worried you'll be fine.

SKIING IN THE SOFT SNOW

Skiing in the soft snow is like falling on a soft mattress.
It's getting hard chapped lips and cheeks.
It's like falling on one hundred pillows, and little snowflakes falling on my head.
It's falling in the soft snow and getting a cold face.
Down, down into the soft, soft snow.

GOING DOWN A HILL

When you're going down a big hill.
All the wind blows in your face.
To me it stings your face
It is the same when you're skiing or sliding
The wind going in my face is fresh air.
