Kwasny, Bishop's reach out-of-court agreement

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

The civil court case filed by former football player Kevin Kwasny and Bishop's University, which was scheduled to go to trial Thursday morning at Montreal's Palais de Justice has been settled out of court. An agreement was reached between the two parties and joint press release suggests that the agreement was reached in the last hours.

Kwasny, a former defensive end for the Bishop's Gaiters sued the school for $13.7 million as a result of an injury he sustained during a match on Sept.11 2011 against Concordia University.

The young man's family maintained that he was forced to play with a serious concussion even though he had warned a team official of his condition.

On September 10, 2013, the family filed a lawsuit of $7.5 million claim, which was increased to $9.3 million in 2014, and again recently to $13.7 million.

Details of the last minute settlement have not been released.

October is Women's History Month.

The Lennoxville and District Women's Centre (LDWC), in addition to posting biographies of significant women throughout history on its facebook page, kicked off the month by recognizing Sisters in Spirit Day on Oct.4.

Two red dresses hang from the tree outside the LDWC office and will remain there for the rest of month. Their purpose is to serve as a reminder of the estimated 1,200 missing and murdered indigenous women and girls in Canada.

The REDress campaign was originally started by Saskatchewan Métis artist Jaime Black in 2010 and since the first installation, has taken on a life of its own.

Life and Death

Good Reads

Lennoxville library

Life is filled with difficult conversations we must have with our children. With all the terrible things we hear on the news—from natural disasters to mass murders—being honest about the dark stuff can be really heavy. How do we share truth with them, and answer curious questions while balancing their need to remain pure and un-traumatized? Sometimes we can laugh it off, buck up, and share the difficult truths. Other times we might be paralyzed with fear of saying the wrong thing. One of the tricky subjects we face with our kids, sooner or later, is death. Death is a natural and inevitable part of life. It may be sooner rather than later that a child has to face this complex truth. Somewhere between a squished bug, a flushed goldfish, or any number of Disney Classics, your little one will be introduced to death.

My pre-schooler attended her first funerals during the 3rd year of her life. She had a number of logical and predictable questions which I felt mostly prepared to answer. The second funeral we went to as a family for a well-known parishioner from our church community was open casket. This experience was transformative for Bea as she had an unexpectedly direct visual experience with death. For weeks after the service she talked about it, and it wove into the fabric of her play. The statement which repeated itself over and over was, "When you are old and sick you die and lose your legs". We were amused more than concerned, but it took us a long time to understand the reason why she was saying this. The casket hid the legs, and because she couldn't see them, she thought they were gone. Bea developed her own understanding, based on observation, that one enters the afterlife legless.

Talking about death is a complex and personal matter. The way you choose to describe things would be different for different families with different faith backgrounds. What I think is important is honesty and using clear language. A lot of the ways we choose to talk about death in our culture use euphemisms which can be confusing to little kids. If you talk about Grampa as being "asleep" or "gone to a better place" it can be tricky for a literal-brained child to process. As with every hard conversation we can have with kids, there is lots of wisdom by those who have lived it already, and consequently there are many great books to help open the door on this topic in a gentle and age-appropriate manner. Different situations might warrant a different type of book. The death of a beloved pet or a cherished Grandparent will be different to talk about than a miscarriage or infant death. None of these situations are easy breezy, and it is certainly challenging to think about when you might be feeling sad or grieving a loss yourself.

One of the first books I encountered which delves into this topic in a beautiful and simple way is called "Lifetimes: A Beautiful Way to Explain Death to Children" by Bryan Mellonie. Available in the children's section of the Lennoxville Library, this book aims to normalize the life cycle of all living creatures on earth, including people, without over complicating matters. It is written in clear and simple language and has beautiful illustrations. It is the kind of book which some kids might find a bit boring, as it repeats the same basic text with different types of creature experiencing their natural life-cycle. When I read it with my child, we had not experienced a loss. I took it out of the library as a curiosity rather than a tool, but many reviews online from parents and teachers claim is was vital in opening up a conversation with kids after experiencing a loss.

I am a big fan of the author and illustrator Todd Parr. His wildly colourful books are written on a number of great topics, ranging from family diversity, expressing our feelings, and accepting difference. His book about dealing with death and loss is called "The Goodbye Book" This reflective story shows a fish dealing with all the feelings and events after saying goodbye to another fish. It is a very simple and direct text, with a lot of open-ended conversations built in.

As much as we want to protect our kids from the scary and sad parts of life, they are woven into the rich fabric of our collective stories. The best we can aim to do is help our kids navigate the hard things so that they grow and learn and emerge stronger. And a good snuggle on the couch with storybook will only help on that journey.

Saturday morning at the Amédée-Beaudoin Center in Lennoxville there will be a play put on in French for children aged 5 to 11. Entitled "Réinventer la Bête," this interactive work is designed to foster literacy and a love of reading. If your children are able to understand French, drop by for an interesting time. It will start at 9:30 and finish around 11:00. Admission is free but spaces are limited so please call the library at 819-562-4949 to confirm your presence.

"We want to decentralize (the budget) to the districts," said party leader Hélène Pigot. "What we are proposing is audacious, innovative, and can be implemented immediately upon being elected."

Sherbrooke citoyen proposes participatory budget

By Gordon Lambie

Candidates for the Sherbrooke Citoyen municipal political party gathered in front of city hall on Wednesday morning to announce their plan to implement a participatory budget in Sherbrooke. Under the proposed plan, five per cent of the city's capital budget will be divided among the 14 districts to be reserved for projects coming directly from the populace.

"We want to decentralize (the budget) to the districts," said party leader Hélène Pigot. "What we are proposing is audacious, innovative, and can be implemented immediately upon being elected."

While stating that the exact details of the system still need to be sorted out, Pigot explained that the basic notion is that each district will get a portion of that five per cent of the budget relative to its population, starting from a minimum of $100,000. Starting from an overall estimated amount of $2 million, that means that districts with larger populations will get closer to $150,000 to work with.

Citizens in each district will then be asked to submit ideas of what to do with their area's piece of the pie. The ideas deemed by the council to be the most realistic will then be retained for a vote and the ideas that get the most votes will be developed.

"It's more interesting to us to do this by district rather than for the city as a whole because it mirrors our politics," the party leader said, explaining that while a party could just as easily reserve $2 million for one larger project, distributing those funds throughout the city stands to get more residents involved in the revitalization of their own communities. "Right now the city is so focused on the downtown that when we visit the outer districts in Rock Forest, Lennoxville, or Brompton, we get the impression these places have been abandoned."

Ludovick Nadeau, Sherbrooke Citoyen candidate in the Pin Solitaire district, shared party members consistently hear ideas from citizens about how the city could be improved and argued that putting the power to propose new ideas more directly into the hands of locals stands to increase engagement in municipal affairs.

"The participatory budget will bring people together," Nadeau said, adding that there are interesting pre-existing models of the idea in place in cities around the world.

Both candidates said that they feel that, with some oversight to help guide the development of ideas, the new budget format will produce concrete ideas to move the city forward.

Claude Dostie Jr., communications representative for the party, clarified that under the proposed plan Lennoxville is treated as one district, rather than giving distinct budgets to the borough districts of Fairview and Uplands. Despite that, however, he noted that the smaller districts of Lennoxville and Brompton stand to benefit the most because the divisions have a minimum of $100,000 regardless of population.

Asked about what the five per cent would be taken away from, Pigot said that it remains to be seen exactly how the breakdown will happen. She was confident, however, that the $2 million could easily be drawn from other sources within the capital budget.

The party leader also clarified that it has yet to be decided whether the city as a whole would vote on the ideas in each district or if that would be up to local populations, although she showed a preference for the latter.

"I am inclined to say it will be the district because it is the district's project," the party leader said.

On what would happen if none of the ideas proposed in a given district were deemed feasible, Pigot expressed a hope that funding could be saved from one year to the next. She shared a concern, however, that such a process might be more complicated than it sounds.

SHERBROOKE

A Sherbrooke citizen helped the City's police arrest a 37-year-old man who broke into a Lennoxville residence Wednesday

"On Wednesday morning, a citizen witnessed a break and enter in the borough of Lennoxville," said Sherbrooke Police spokesperson Philippe Dubois. "On Wednesday afternoon, he ran into the man on foot in the city center near Wellington Street. He called us and followed the individual until the police intervened, "he said.

The suspect will appear for breaking and entering, assaulting a peace officer, and possession of cannabis and methamphetamine.

Fall is for exploring

Townships history groups gather for inaugural Heritage Fair

Submitted by Dwane Wilkin, QAHN
EATON CORNER

More than autumn's brilliant hues await discovery this season on the byways and backroads of Quebec's Eastern Townships.

A wide range of historic collections, exhibitions and built-heritage treasures will also be on display as museums and historical societies from across the region gather in the tiny village of Eaton Corner for the first-ever edition of the Eastern Townships Heritage Fair.

The event, jointly sponsored by Townshippers' Association and the Quebec Anglophone Heritage Network (QAHN), takes place on Friday, October 13, from 1 to 4 p.m.

"Think of it as a taste of Townships history and culture," said fair co-organizer and museum curator Heather Darch.

Darch and her colleagues from Missisquoi Museum in Stanbridge East will join members of a dozen or so history and cultural societies to meet area residents, visitors, teachers, and anyone else with an interest in Townships heritage – including leaf-peepers – following a morning discussion with QAHN-member groups about creative ways to finance their work in local communities.

Eaton Corner Museum is hosting the fair in its recently restored Foss House (circa 1820s), part of a unique colonial-era building complex that includes a beautifully preserved former Congregational Church (1841) and the local Academy (1864). Both are striking examples of the American influence on 19th century Townships architecture, and provincially designated historic sites.

Other displays include Knowlton's Brome County Historical Museum; Uplands Cultural and Heritage Centre and the Lennoxville-Ascot Historical Association; Stanstead's Colby-Curtis Museum; Richmond County Historical Society Museum; and the newest addition to the Townships' network of community heritage organizations, the Copp's Ferry Museum in Georgeville.

Author and Townships historian Nick Fonda will be on hand to sign copies of his latest book of stories, Richmond: Now and Then: An Anecdotal History, and local fiddler Terry Howel will furnish the tunes.

Being situated in a part of southern Quebec celebrated for its stunning fall colours is at once a blessing and a curse for small-museum operators in the region, as the seasonal uptick in visitor traffic tends to be driven by a thirst for scenery, rather than historical curiosity.

"We're fortunate to live in a part of the country where local communities still find value in knowing about the past," said Darch, who has worked with QAHN in recent years to help train non-profit groups in fundraising and volunteer-management skills, "but I think most of us would admit that getting people in the door remains our biggest challenge."

Eaton Corner Museum's own permanent exhibit – a conceptually impressive and fresh telling of the area's settlement and agricultural development – will be open to everyone on the day of the fair. Visitors will also find access to a wealth of information on regional and local history, including previews of current and upcoming exhibits taking place at museums throughout the Townships, geneaological resources and even tips for safeguarding family heirlooms and old photos. Something to satisfy everyone, from the curious day-tripper to the die-hard history buff.

A key message that fair sponsors and organizers hope to get across is that local history societies do not exist merely to preserve stuff and stories from the past; they also make it possible for the communities they serve to explore and understand that heritage.

Which is why Darch and her fellow exhibitors hope to hear this question a lot from visitors throughout the afternoon: "How can I get involved?" The answer in most cases will probably be, "Start by taking out a membership."

The Abbott Family established in Lennoxville in 1843:

from merchants and postmasters to a federal Minister

Gérard Coté (LAHMS) and Jean-Marie Dubois (Université de Sherbrooke)

A street opened in 1956 by Arthur Speid on the Uplands estate and was named after a pioneer and influential Lennoxville family.

Ephraim W. Abbott, born in 1822 in Grotton, Vermont, came to settle in Lennoxville in 1843. He first worked as a clerk at the store of his uncle, Charles Brooks (who, in 1855, would become the third Mayor of Ascot Township, and in 1871, the first Mayor of the new Town of Lennoxville). In 1859, Ephraim married Elizabeth L. Harvey (1833-1911) in Barnet, Vermont. They had 8 children, all born in Lennoxville : George Henry (1861-1861), William Harvey (1862-1950), Caroline Chandler (1864-1???), Mary Elizabeth (1865-1???), Margaret Helen (1867-1947), Arthur Strobridge (1869-1???), Lewis Duff (1871-1905) and Maria Isabella (1873-1874). Ephraim became a prosperous general merchant in Lennoxville, being postmaster from 1873 to 1900. The post office was then in his general store on Main Street (which became Queen Street in 1952), next to City Hall (now the office of the Borough of Lennoxville). After the 1874 fire that wiped out part of the downtown area, he rebuilt his store near the corner of Belvidere Road (now College Street). From 1855 to 1865, he was Secretary-Treasurer for the Township of Ascot. From 1871 to 1873, he was first Secretary-Treasurer of the new Town of Lennoxville, and Municipal Councillor from 1874 to 1876. He died in 1900 in Lennoxville and was buried with his wife in Malvern Cemetery.

In 1888, his son William Harvey married Elizabeth R. Oughtred (1866-1951). For a few years, he managed the family business, E. W. Abbott and Sons. For over 60 years, he worked for the post office, and like his father, he was postmaster from 1901 to 1939. He was Secretary-Treasurer of Lennoxville in 1888 and Mayor from 1898 to 1900. He was the president in 1934-1935 of the Lennoxville Curling Club. He died in Lennoxville in 1950 and was buried with his wife in Malvern Cemetery. We do not know anything of their other children except for Margaret Helen who was a spinster that lived with her mother and Lewis Duff who worked in the family business.

Lewis Duff's son, the Honorable Douglas Charles Abbott (1899-1987), grew up in Lennoxville, studied at Bishop's University and married Mary Winnifred Chisholm (1904-1980). From 1916 to 1918, he served overseas with the McGill Siege Battery, in the Royal Flying Corps and finally in the Royal Canadian Air Force. He studied law at McGill University and continued his studies at the Université de Dijon, in France. He joined the Quebec Bar in 1921 and partnered in Montreal with Fleet, Phelan, Fleet & Le Mesurier. In 1940, he was elected as a Liberal member of Parliament for the seat of Saint-Antoine—Westmount. In 1945 and 1946, he was Minister of Defense and, from 1946 to 1954, Minister of Finances and Receiver General. From 1844 to 1973, he was on Bishop's University Board of Governors and was Principal from 1958 to 1968. From 1954 until he retired in 1973, he was a judge on the Supreme Court of Canada. On June 1st, 1963, the Université de Sherbrooke awarded him an honorary law degree. In 1964, Bishop's University Abbott Hall was named after him.

This month is about women

Sisters in Spirit vigils, held across the country on Oct. 4, are part of a campaign founded by the Native Women's Association of Canada, with the same goal.

The two initiatives now go hand in hand, with red dresses often being included in Sisters in Spirit vigils and ceremonies.

One such ceremony took place on Wednesday evening in Windsor at Le Poudrière de Windsor along the banks of the Watopeka River.

The event was organized by the Val-Saint-François Women's Centre.

Attendees were led slowly through a walking trail to the bank of the river where First Nations advocate and activist Samania officiated a ceremony for Sisters in Spirit Day.

Several red dresses lined the path and were hung in the trees surrounding the ceremony.

Samania began by sharing her personal story of surviving abuse, which brought tears to many of the vigil participants.

She then lit sage and offered a cleansing ritual to anyone who wanted.

Samania, accompanied by three other drummers and singers then sang a prayer in honour of Sisters in Spirit. After the song, the participants, who were given lyrics sheets, were asked to sing along as a show of solidarity.

The vigil closed with the lighting of a ceremonial pipe filled with tobacco.

There was silence for several minutes as Samania raised the pipe to the north, south, east and west, which gave participants time to reflect on the purpose of the vigil, to remember and honour the lives of missing and murdered indigenous women and girls.

That time proved overwhelming for Samania, who broke into tears during the moment of reflection.

Several people approached and consoled Samania and stayed by her side as she regained her composure.

She then thanked everyone who attended, and closed the ceremony.

Other significant dates to consider during Women's History Month include International Day of the Girl, dedicated to championing girls' rights around the world.

Oct.18 is Person's Day, marking the 1929 decision by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council of Great Britain to include women in the legal definition of 'persons'.

My Neighbour My Hero

ALICIA DESMORMEAUX- LEVEL 2 ARTS CONCENTRATION STUDENT AT ALEXANDER GALT REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL

Inspired by Gordon Lambie's article (Record Sept. 27) on Dr. Yannick Daoudi's upcoming presentation at the Sherbrooke Cegep, I went to hear my neighbour and my hero the next evening. It turned out to be a most interesting and inspiring evening.

As he spoke only in English to about 200 French-speaking students, I would have expected at least some restlessness among his listeners, but that was not the case. They were attentive, and going by the number who went up to speak to him at the end, they were very interested.

Yannick is an educational consultant who divides his time between taking high risk, non-motorised and usually solo trips to some of the most remote regions of the world (which he follows with down-to-earth humanitarian projects) and, employed by governments or organizations, travelling to many countries to assess the educational systems and to advise on possible changes.

He spoke directly to the students to challenge them to be ready to seize and use opportunities to do some effective altruism. It must be inspiring to 17 and 18 year olds to hear about his crazy trips and then some of the humanitarian projects he has been able to set up in places such as Mongolia, Gambia, Columbia and many more.

Touching lightly on a few of these trips, he gave us a detailed description of a rigorous 1000 km hike across northern Canada (Whitehorse to Norman Wells) he and a friend undertook this past summer. As with all his trips, he had planned this one down to the last protein, carbohydrate, etc, that would sustain him and his friend. Knowing that they wouldn't be able to carry it all, they had sent on a small trailer packed with about half their needs to a small reservation village named Ross River which is about half way along the trail. This was to be waiting for them.

They went as far as they could on bikes, pulling loaded trailers which they dumped when the trail got too narrow. With everything loaded on their backs, eating 6 times a day to maintain their strength, they arrived at Ross River to find an empty trailer. No food. They would not be able to continue. Yannick always emphasizes how many more kind people he has met on his travels than frightening or dangerous ones. So he used a story about Shawn to explain what altruism means to him.

When Shawn understood their predicament, he offered to drive them in his pickup to the nearest town where they could buy food, and then return them to Ross River. By this time they had lost 3 days, and would not be able to make it to Norman Wells on time to meet their plane. So Shawn drove them to the place they would have been had all gone as planned. He asked for nothing in return. This is Yannick's idea of a true altruist. Hiking on from there for up to 10 hours a day, they made it.

The project he talked about, and for which more funds are needed, was the school he founded in Haiti following the earthquake 5 years ago that killed about 200,000 people in Port au Prince. Working with local Haitians, he followed their advice on location, buying of land and materials, finding teachers, and selecting children.

Yannick later told me that they had 3 semi-permanent classrooms built and started with 30 to 40 children. They now have added 3 permanent classrooms, 1 permanent administration office, a playground, a permanent sanitary block with girls', boys' and teachers' sections, as well as a water distribution system (water pump, water tower,etc.), one solar panel and enough batteries for about 2 hours of electricity in the evening, and the foundations as well as the first floor walls for a new 2-story building that will hold 10 classrooms. This year they will have from 80 to 90 students.

This has all been done with 100% of dollars donated.

The building has now come to a halt until they can raise more funds.

This was Yannick's 7th year addressing the Cegep de Sherbrooke students. Since he started this work, he has spoken to about 14,000 people in exactly 100 conferences.

Almost all their volunteers are students (Cegep or university ) from the townships. They are presently meeting to plan fundraising activities. Donors can count on all their dollars being used for on the ground work in Haiti.

More information about the work of the InspirAction foundation is available at:

New Transportation Plan: Really?

Dear Editor;

As a result of the recently published articles on the willingness of the current President of STS to make a new Transport Plan, the Regroupement des usagers du transport adapté de Sherbrooke métropolitain (RUTASM) would like to comment.

First of all, the word "periphery" does not seem to mean the same thing for everyone. In the districts of Brompton and Deauville, whose territories are on the outskirts, there are already minibuses (alas with steps) that cover circuits, with various relay points (CEGEP, Carrefour, etc.).In Fleurimont, to get to the Center Julien-Ducharme, there are taxi-buses, as in other parts of the city. Thus, there are already smaller modes of transport connecting less populated areas in the periphery.

In our opinion, rather than re-doing everything, as was done in 2006, we should re-evaluate the massively-oriented 2006 circuits to learning institutions to review those with empty buses outside school hours, evenings, and weekends, such as Circuit 15 to Blanchard Beach, and Circuit 16 which stops at Ontario Street, despite repeated requests that it go downtown. It would take more big buses during peak hours on Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays, to shopping centers (Carrefour, Quatre-Saisons, etc.), for circuits 3 and 12 and 1, and others. Ridership would increase.

For on-demand transport needs, for areas not yet served on the outskirts, RUTASM has been suggesting to the STS services on demand since 2011, as in Rimouski, Victoriaville, Granby, and Montreal, with taxi services, and appropriate technology.

The comparison of paratransit is not very relevant to us, given the fact that we always have to reserve for all outings, and in advance, at the risk of having to cancel due to unforeseen circumstances.

Transportation in Sherbrooke needs to be redesigned on some unused student routes outside school hours. It needs to add large buses to shopping centers at peak time and with certain reserved lanes near the bus stations, as at Alexandre to Depot for example, this would improve the service, at less cost.

And for the major thoroughfare, King St., uniting the West of Sherbrooke to the East, it would increase goodwill to put a continuous service there, and would help to unite the different territories of our great City, for a better spirit of belonging.

ONE COLUMN, FOUR VOICES

Opening to the Spirit

Today's word: Key

By Revs Mead Baldwin, W. Lynn Dillabough, Lee Ann Hogle, and Carole Martignacco

1) I have a memory of receiving a key to my first apartment when I was 18. I shared the space with my sisters when I began university. There was a feeling of pride about paying rent, having a key, and unlocking the door as I returned from classes. This is a familiar rite of passage. But our family lived in the country and rarely locked the door to our farmhouse. The key was a symbol of adulthood and using it felt good.

The word key is usually used with the word lock. A key is a tool to open something and perhaps uncover a mystery. Perhaps an old chest, when unlocked, contains treasure. Maybe the key to an old storage locker holds adventure, or a piece of our history. Why then sometimes, are we so reluctant to use it.

My parents were both teachers and emphasized that education was the key to our future. Scientific disciplines hold the secrets of the world we live in. Why then are so many reluctant to believe in science? A recent survey found that 43% of Canadians who responded said science was "a matter of opinion". Even worse, 33% said science can't be trusted because it is always subject to change. These science sceptics are burying the knowledge that could unlock our future security. In education, in science, we have been given a valuable key. Let's not be afraid to trust it and learn.

2) As a child I used to have a personal diary that came with a lock and a tiny key. I locked it faithfully after every writing session, thus guaranteeing that my younger brothers would not have access to all my secrets.

I think it was the beginning of setting healthy boundaries between my private life and public one.

With the advent of the modern electronic communication tools of Facebook, Twitter and text-sharing, this notion of privacy is becoming cloudy. I often hear people say, "If I have nothing to hide, why would I care?" As a result we now know when our friend wakes up with a headache and when someone at the office is having relationship problems. Wisdom tells us, however, that some thoughts and feelings do better locked up in a diary.

Words that are broadcast can never be taken back. Words written in haste and in anger may be therapeutic, but they may also undermine a relationship that is worth preserving. Although transparency is a much-lauded quality in the public domain, I would think twice about the kinds of information I share and who I give the key of my diary to.

3) Keys unlock what's closed: doors, chests, yes - and secret passageways, old habits, healing wounds, minds and hearts. I remember being in awe of the school janitor who carried on his belt an enormous ring of clanking keys of all shapes and sizes. If you needed to get into anywhere, you just had to track him down.

Blog posts and courses these days offer the keys to instant success, healthy living, understanding, how to forgive, or love, or find enlightenment. Key - as in "key word" - is marketing lingo for a lot of practical, popular or life-changing wisdom.

A profound insight came to me during a guided meditation about keys. We all sat in a circle around a lit candle, and consented to be led through an exercise in learning to trust intuition, that inner knowing we all have but are often too wary or distracted to consult. First we dropped any notions of what needed to be unlocked. Open to discovery, we closed our eyes and practiced deep breathing. Now follow, we were told, the winding wooded path, cross an open meadow, find the bubbling stream. Take the suspension bridge over a deep ravine. Leaving the bridge, I descended in my mind's eye a steep staircase, each step transparent. Looking down, I imagined falling through to the depths below. The retreat leader then surprised us, "Now before the door, you will be handed a key. Feel its weight; explore its shape in your hand. Don't reach out yet to open the door in front of you. Instead, look for the person who just handed you the key. Spend some time with that person." I knew immediately who that person was, and who I needed to ask for help.

Who holds the keys is as important as finding what's behind the door. Curiously, when I did finally turn the key in the lock, the door, already unlocked, swung open freely before me. Do you know who are the key holders in your life? Perhaps it's you!

4) Many of us have a key to our home hidden in a strategic place: under a particular rock, in the mouth of a ceramic frog, or beneath the flower pot. Many times I have been given instructions about how to get into other peoples' homes when they are away and it is a special privilege to know the secret. It always makes me feel a bit like a spy or a detective when I find the key and let myself in.

Education can be like that, and so can our relationships with people around us. When you pay attention and know where to look, you can gain entry into worlds that, before this, were locked and unknown. The key to education might be research and careful reading. The key to entering the world of another person might be good questions and careful attention.

One relationship that needs no key is the relationship we have with God. Jesus said, "knock and the door will be opened to you". We don't need to pass tests or even to spend the time that it normally takes to be trusted. The poet Rumi tells us that when we take a step toward God, God comes running to us. Although there are many pathways to a deeper knowledge and love of God, such as the study of theology and the spiritual practices of prayer, the first door is opened wide as soon as we ask. No hidden key required!

One word, four voices - now it's your turn to reflect: If there were a "key" to everything, who has it and what would you want to unlock?

Magog Parks Master Plan highlights quality, accessibility

SHERBROOKE

Following a major consultation exercise carried out as part of the review of Magog's Parks and Green Spaces Master Plan, the City unveiled its vision and direction for some 41 parks and green spaces on its territory at a press conference Wednesday.

"Our goals are ambitious, but the Parks and Green Space Master Plan will be our benchmark tool that will allow us to plan, over a 10-year period, the priority investments to be made in consolidating, rationalizing, or developing new parks, preserving green spaces and recreational and sporting infrastructure, said Mayor Vicki-May Hamm.

The approach was designed to be participatory and inclusive, and included, among other things, consultations with the public that involved some 600 people, and meetings with local stakeholders.

To better showcase its rich network of parks and green spaces, the Town of Magog has put an interactive map on its website. By going to ville.magog.qc.ca/parcs, it is now possible to locate parks, to learn about the equipment and services for each and to search by type of activities. Information about schedules, regulations, and booking of sports venues is also available.

YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO TOWNSHIPS CULTURE

Combs one of country's most promising new acts

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE PELLETIER AULIS

Fans first heard of Luke Combs in 2015. After the release of two independent EPs, he released the single 'Hurricane,' which sold 15,000 copies in the first week. Combs teamed up with Sony Music Nashville to take the next step.

'Hurricane' made it to the top of radio chart, moving over half a million copies to date. It's a great accomplishment for a guy from North Carolina who wanted to become a homicide detective before wanting to become a country artist.

On This One's for You, his new album, Combs co-wrote all the songs and his personality shines through from beginning to end. The songs run through every moment of falling for a woman, who then wrecked his world, and finds him on the verge of making a call to an ex, to being overjoyed to have split up and listing all the lucky things that happened after she left.

'Out There' is a great way to start the album as it sets the mood and gives a general idea of what to expect for the rest of the album. Combs does not disappoint, as all the songs are strong.

Once you get past the opening number, his natural twang will draw you in and keep you there. His mixture of southern rock with some tradition works perfectly. Not that the songs are so special, but Combs sells it very well.

His personality takes over, which gives this album credibility and sets it apart from other releases in these modern days of country music. The young man has a strong southern style voice; his music is addictive, haunting, and soulful.

Without a doubt, his distinctive vocals set him apart from the other artists. Compared to his early EP releases, Combs really honed in on his bluesy vocal runs (similar to Stapleton). There's an obvious, audible, and pleasant growth. Combs mentions that he gets inspiration from The Chief, Eric Church, and you can hear the influence in his music. The mix of old country and modern country is just right.

While there's a notable new level of texture on the album, much of the collection still came when Combs was an independent artist working on limited resources. The album easily competes with the other well produced album out there.

His songs are believable and when he sings about 'Honky Tonk Highway' this is exactly where it takes you. Much of the songs rely on familiar country topics, but without coming across as being old and revisited. He is a truly storyteller the way every country singer should be.

Combs takes a little risk by providing his own take on the "wise bartender" storyline on 'Lonely One.' It's a theme that seems hard to tackle considering how many singers tried to do it before and failed.

Other highlights include 'When It Rains It Pours' and 'I Got Away With You.' Combs' current single 'When It Rains It Pours' keeps climbing the charts. It was no surprise for anyone to see an artist do well with one single, but it forces you to acknowledge him when he follows up his first single with another great song.

Good songs delivered by a great voice and produced in a way that (for the most part) lets the best moments shine. This One's For You is sure to establish the newcomer as one of country's most promising new acts.

On the local scene

On Saturday October 7, Bobbi Dee and Stan McKelvey will celebrate their second annual 'Harvest' Country Music Appreciation Jam Series.

The event will include hours of continuous live country music along with an amazing buffet, (buffet included with your admission starting at 4:30 p.m.).

They have a great country music lineup of your favourite local musicians joining The Classic Country Band. They will also have door prizes. This is an event you don't want to miss!

Admission, advanced tickets $12 or $15 at the door. Bobbi Dee and her team have made it a mission to encourage and support local professional musicians and keep the live music alive and well. They are doing a fantastic job. Door proceeds go to the scheduled participating musicians. Because of the rapid success volunteers are greatly needed.

Celine Dion donates Vegas show proceeds as she returns after 'nightmare' shooting

The Canadian Press

Celine Dion delivered an impassioned speech on Tuesday night as she returned to her Las Vegas show two days after a mass shooting in the city.

The Quebec singer stepped in front of the closed curtains before the show got underway and acknowledged that many in the audience might be struggling with whether it was appropriate to attend a concert so soon after the "nightmare" killings.

She said it was a question she asked herself too.

"The reason that I decided to do the show so soon is more than to just sing," Dion said in video footage posted by fans online.

"It is to show love and support for those who are affected."

Dion has long been a staple of the Vegas scene with her various residencies at Caesars Palace over the past 15 years. It raised questions about whether she would decide to forgo some performances after at least 59 people were killed and 527 wounded at a nearby

Late night TV hosts decry Las Vegas killings, gun laws

By Lynn Elber
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Late-night comics decried the Las Vegas mass shooting as a confounding and repetitive American tragedy, with Jimmy Kimmel and Trevor Noah lashing out at politicians who oppose gun control.

"I don't know why our so-called leaders continue to allow this to happen," Kimmel said on his ABC show Monday, the day after the worst shooting in modern U.S. history claimed at least 59 lives.

"Or maybe a better question — why do we continue to let them allow it to happen?" said an emotional Kimmel, who noted that Las Vegas was his hometown.

He slammed Republican congressional leaders Mitch McConnell and Paul Ryan, saying it was good they sent prayers to Las Vegas but "they should be praying to God to forgive them for letting the gun lobby run this country."

Kimmel's show ended on a different tone: Luke Combs, who'd performed at the Las Vegas country music concert that night of the attack, sang "Used to You" to honour the shooting victims.

On Comedy Central, the South African-born Noah said he was dismayed by how many mass shootings he's seen in just two years in America and mocked current GOP legislation aimed at loosening gun rules.

"Just to give you an idea of how far away America is from actual gun control, this week Congress is going to vote on deregulating gun silencers. Because I guess Congress is thinking gun violence is out of control: 'How can we make it quieter?"' Noah said.

"To the people of Las Vegas, I cannot give you thoughts and prayers. I can only say I'm sorry that we live in a world where people would put a gun before your lives," he said.

CBS' James Corden, a native of England, issued his own polite call for gun control.

"Forgive me, because I'm just a foreigner here and some of you may feel I have no place to say this, but how does every other developed country do a better job at preventing these attacks?" he asked.

Stephen Colbert, who regularly targets President Donald Trump, took a different approach Monday.

Agreeing with Trump's labeling of the Las Vegas shooting as an act of "pure evil," Colbert added, "So then, what are we willing to do to combat pure evil? The answer can't be nothing."

The CBS host challenged Trump to go his own way on gun control without heeding his political party's stance.

"You want to make America great again? Do something the last two presidents haven't been able to do. Pass any kind of common-sense gun control legislation, that the vast majority of Americans want," Colbert said.

On TBS, Conan O'Brien said that when he started in late-night more than two decades ago it was "practically unheard of" for hosts to need to address a mass shooting. But things have changed, he said, a point that was driven home when his head writer presented O'Brien's previous remarks on other recent mass shootings to consider for Monday's remarks on Las Vegas.

WWW.TREVORNOAH.COM

Trevor Noah

"When did this become a ritual? And what does it say about us that it has?" O'Brien said.

Acknowledging that he's "not the most political of our comics," O'Brien said he felt compelled to repeat what he said about the 2016 nightclub shooting in Orlando, Florida, in which 49 victims died.

"I don't think it should be so easy for one demented person to kill so many people so quickly. The sounds of those automatic weapons last night are grotesquely out of place in a civilized society," he said.

NBC's Jimmy Fallon told viewers that in the face "of tragedies and acts of terror, we need to remember that good still exists in this world. We're here to entertain you tonight." He then introduced Miley Cyrus and Adam Sandler, who performed Dido's "No Freedom" in honour of the shooting victims.

O.J. Simpson: 'Nothing has changed' during prison stint

The Associated Press

O.J. Simpson says "nothing has changed" in his life during the nine years he spent behind bars.

The former football star and actor made the comment to a reporter for paparazzi outlet Splash News. The reporter approached Simpson while the car he was riding in was refuelling at a gas station. Simpson was wearing the same denim outfit he was pictured in while leaving the Nevada prison on parole Sunday.

Simpson told the reporter he didn't know what freedom felt like because he had been "in a car for the last five hours." He also said that his destination was none of the reporter's business.

Simpson is on parole for a 2008 armed robbery and kidnapping case. He was as acquitted of the 1994 killings of his ex-wife and her friend, but later found liable for their deaths in civil court.

music festival.

Other performers have cancelled shows this week, including pop singer Jennifer Lopez and Cirque du Soleil.

Instead of backing out, Dion began by dedicating the show to the victims, their families and first responders and doctors.

"On Sunday we lost too many beautiful, innocent souls and so many are still suffering, but tonight we are going to let these families know that we are supporting them," she said.

"They are going to need a lot of love. A ton of emotional support as well as a great deal of financial aid."

The singer then announced that proceeds from Tuesday's show would be donated to the shooting victims' families. She then took a deep breath and began the first song of the night.

A bequest to charity has many advantages; talk about it with your legal or financial advisors.

Runners get a clearer picture while wearing the latest in eye care innovation

A Runner's Mind

Christine Blanchette

To get the most out of your running performance, you need to: wear proper gear, eat healthy, get enough sleep and follow a proper running program to suit your fitness level. That takes care of the basics to build a strong body for years to come. Running and most forms of exercising may help maintain overall good eye health but like our bodies, our vision is affected as we age. As we approach 40 years old, it may be a challenge to see our fitness tracker or training watch clearly.

No doubt, it can be a frustrating experience trying to optimize your workout because your vision is reduced causing you to squint because you left your reading glasses at home.

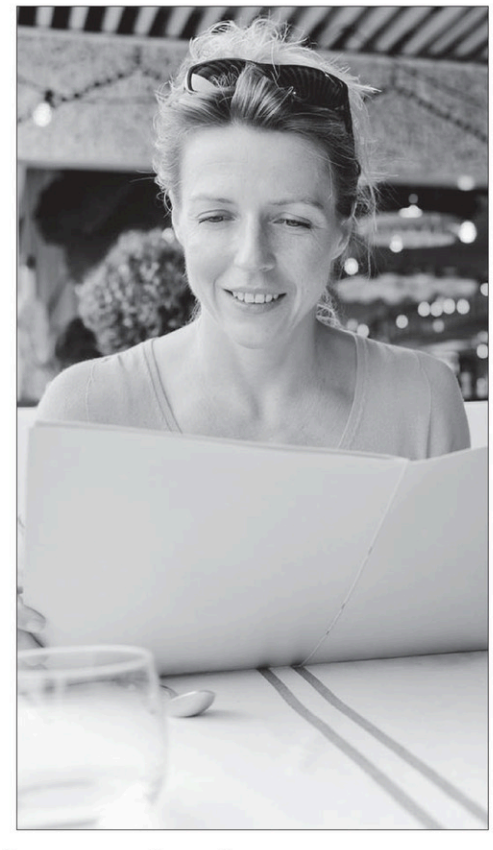

How can you get a clearer picture and see the world through the eyes of the younger person in whose shoes you used to wear?

Wearing reading glasses may help you see clearly however multifocal contact lenses could be a better option for working out, especially when running outdoors in rain or snow. According to the Age of Perception Impact Study, 30 percent of aging Canadians surveyed would rather wear contact lenses than glasses, 16 percent would rather squint than wear reading glasses and about one in five (19 percent) agree that they would or currently avoid wearing reading glasses because they would make them look older.

An eye condition called presbyopia often occurs around the age of 40 due to a gradual loss of the eye's ability to focus on close objects, and affects nearly 1.7 billion people. , The symptoms are eye strain, difficulty seeing in dim light and problems focusing on small objects and/or print found on items such as fitness trackers and smart phones.

With World Sight Day coming up on October 12th, it is a good reminder to get an eye exam, become familiar with presbyopia awareness, and be updated on the latest in eye care technology such as Alcon multifocal contact lenses for the aging eye. A new option has opened up for those who run with a smartphone or fitness tracker. Multifocal contact lenses allow Canadians to see everything near, far and in between. Alcon DAILIES TOTAL1® Multifocal contact lenses replace the glasses you would need to wear to see what is ahead while on a run or view your fitness device.

Running with a watch to keep track of your times is a good indicator of your overall health but if you are struggling to see the watch you may have presbyopia. If you have noticed changes in your vision visit your eye doctor to get a comprehensive eye exam. More information on the Alcon multifocal contact lenses can be found at LoseYourReaders.ca.

Alouettes DB Tevaughn Campbell to join rugby sevens squad after CFL season

By Neil Davidson
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fresh off a history-making World Series season, Canadian rugby sevens coach Damian McGrath has unveiled a 2017-18 roster that sees some crossover from the 15s team and the inclusion of Montreal Alouettes speedster Tevaughn Campbell.

The six-foot 195-pound defensive back will become a carded member of the sevens program in late November after his CFL duties are done. Campbell, 24, got a taste of the sevens game in April when he trained with the team on a trip to Asia.

"He's got that one thing that you can't add to people, which is out-and-out speed," said McGrath. "Also because of the position he plays in the CFL, he's used to moving side-to-side and backwards-to-forwards."

Campbell, traded to Montreal by Saskatchewan in April, set a CFL combine record in 2015 when he was clocked at 4.355 seconds over 40 yards.

Competing for the University of Regina, Campbell won the U Sports 60-metre final in 2016 and was runner-up in 2015 and '17. While a pro athlete, he can compete in track at the university level because it's not the same sport.

"The little bit we saw of him when he came with us to Singapore and Hong Kong gave me hope that we can develop (his game)," McGrath added. "He's got a real desire to make it work as well, which is fantastic.

"We may not see the best of him in the short-term, but in the longer-term he'll be a real addition to the program."

Adam Zaruba could rejoin the squad in January, depending on his NFL fortunes. Cut by the Philadelphia Eagles in September, the six-foot-five 265-pound would-be tight end is still exploring his NFL options.

After a sluggish start _ with three 13th-place finishes in the first four stops _ the Canadian men recovered to finish eighth overall on the World Series. The high point came in Singapore where Canada hoisted the cup, its first-ever win in 140 events on the circuit.

The new season kicks off in Dubai in early December. The 10-event World Series, which stops in Vancouver in March, is augmented by the Commonwealth Games in Australia in April and the showcase World Cup Sevens in San Francisco in July.

Because of the crowded schedule, teams like New Zealand and England are looking to bring separate squads to tournaments to keep their players fresh.

"We haven't got that luxury," said McGrath. "We've got to find a way to keep everybody fit and healthy ... We'll take our best team to everything because we want to win everything."

Veterans Harry Jones, John Moonlight and Nathan Hirayama will share the captaincy with speedster Justin Douglas looking to build on a breakout year. Douglas had 40 tries in 10 tournaments, to rank third behind American Perry Baker (57) and England's Dan Norton (51).

Hard-nosed Mike Fuailefau and Lucas Hammond also made their mark last season. And McGrath points to Matt Mullins as one to watch.

Injuries hurt the Canadian team last season but also helped uncover some depth.

"I'm very happy with the group we've got on paper," said McGrath. "It's a very very strong squad. If everybody stays fit and healthy, it will give me the luxury of having to work hard to pick a team, which is something I didn't have to do last year. It almost picked itself every time."

Veteran Phil Mack has left the sevens programs for the 15s.

Most of the players have been in training since June 25, with two blocks of six-week sessions already completed.

The 21 players centralized in Langford, B.C., feature 16 returnees from last year's squad. The roster has been augmented by the return of Connor Braid and Admir Cejvanovic from the 15s program as well as newcomers Jake Thiel and Andrew Coe.

Braid, Cejvanovic and Coe will split their duties amongst both sevens and 15s program.

After failing to qualify for the Rio Olympics, the men's sevens program lost its Own The Podium funding for the 2017-18 fiscal year. Sport Canada also reduced the number of carded athletes from 24 to 14 but Rugby Canada managed to increase that to 21 by having some players double up with the sevens and 15s teams.

While some developmental players have had to be left out, McGrath chooses to see the positives.

"It always seems to be doom and gloom with Canadian rugby but I've seen anything but," said the English-born coach. "The raw material's there, it's getting a chance to work with (it). There are players in this group and I'm sure further afield who are as good as anywhere else in the world.

"We may not have as many as everybody else but we've certainly got that level of quality. We should be looking at that as a real positive, because we've got some great players here."

Ahead of the World Series, McGrath's team will play in a warmup tournament _ the Silicon Valley Sevens Nov. 4-5 in San Jose.

Today in History

October 6, 2017:

On this date:

In 1520, German reformer Martin Luther published his Prelude on the Babylonian Captivity of the Church, his famous writing which attacked the entire sacramental system of the Catholic Church.

In 1744, James McGill, a merchant who donated land to found McGill University, was born in Scotland.

In 1769, Sir Isaac Brock, hero of the War of 1812, was born.

In 1866, Reginald Aubrey Fessendon, one of the world's foremost inventors of radio technology, was born near East Bolton, Que. He discovered the so-called heterodyne principle, the basis for all modern broadcasting. In 1906, he achieved two-way voice transmission by radio between Machrihanish, Scotland and Brant Rock, Mass. On Christmas Eve 1906, he made the first public broadcast of music and voice. After losing control of his company in 1910, he lived in relative seclusion. He died in 1932.

In 1890, the Mormon church officially abolished polygamy.

In 1891, Charles Stewart Parnell, champion of Irish home rule, died in Brighton, England.

In 1892, English poet Alfred Lord Tennyson, best known for "The Charge of the Light Brigade," died at age 83.

In 1911, the Laurier government resigned after having been in power since 1896.

In 1927, the era of sound motion pictures was ushered in when "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, opened in New York City.

In 1942, Tim Buck and other Canadian Communists won conditional release from internment.

In 1944, Soviet troops invaded Hungary during the Second World War.

In 1948, a delegation from Newfoundland arrived in Ottawa to discuss the terms of union with Canada. Earlier that year, on July 22, Newfoundlanders had voted in a plebiscite to become Canada's 10th province. An agreement consummating the union was signed Dec. 11 and became effective March 31, 1949.

In 1949, U.S. president Harry Truman signed the Mutual Defence Assistance Act for military aid to NATO countries.

In 1959, Russia's rocket "Luna 3" circled the moon.

In 1964, the Confederation Centre of the Arts was officially opened in Charlottetown by Queen Elizabeth.

In 1969, Montreal police and firefighters began a strike that led to widespread rioting, looting, arson and vandalism. Members of both unions were ordered back to work by the Quebec legislature on Oct. 8.

In 1969, the New York Mets won the first-ever National League Championship Series, defeating the Atlanta Braves, 7-4, in Game 3; the Baltimore Orioles won the first-ever American League Championship Series, defeating the Minnesota Twins 11-2 in Game 3.

In 1973, Egypt and Syria launched what became known as the Yom Kippur War by attacking Israel.

In 1979, Pope John Paul II became the first pontiff to visit the White House.

In 1981, Egyptian president Anwar Sadat was assassinated by a group of soldiers who attacked his reviewing stand with hand grenades and automatic gunfire as he watched a military parade.

In 1983, B.C. Opposition Leader Dave Barrett became the first leader of a Canadian political party to be forcibly ejected from a legislature when he was dragged from the house for defying a ruling over government restraint bills.

In 1986, a crippled Soviet nuclear submarine sank in the Atlantic Ocean about 2,000 kilometres east of New York after a fire and explosion aboard the sub three days earlier.

In 1992, the UN Security Council unanimously adopted a resolution establishing its first-ever war-crimes commission to investigate atrocities in the former Yugoslavia, mainly Bosnia-Herzegovina and Croatia.

In 2000, NHL player Marty McSorley was found guilty of assault with a weapon (his hockey stick). He was granted a conditional discharge and was told to use his influence to clean up the game. He was charged in February 2000 after his attack from behind on Vancouver Canucks forward Donald Brashear in the dying seconds of a game won by the Canucks 5-2. Brashear was briefly knocked unconscious by the blow, suffering a Grade 3 concussion.

Also in 2000, Yugoslav strongman Slobodan Milosevic conceded defeat in his country's Sept. 24th presidential election after mass protests by opposition supporters.

In 2001, the largest crowd to watch a hockey game, at the time, saw Michigan St. tie Michigan 3-3 at Spartan Stadium in East Lansing. The game attracted 74,554 people.

In 2003, Jordin Tootoo cracked the Nashville Predators' line-up making him the first player of Inuit descent to play in the NHL.

In 2007, RCMP Const. Christopher John Worden, 30, was shot and killed in Hay River, N.W.T., while responding to a call at a home for police assistance.

In 2008, falling oil prices and investor fears of a global recession pounded the Canadian stock market, dragging the TSX composite index 572 points lower and wiping out more than $100 billion of stock value.

In 2008, Harald zur Hausen of Germany and Francoise Barre-Sinoussi and Luc Montagnier of France, won the Nobel prize for medicine for discovering the viruses that cause cervical cancer and AIDS.

In 2009, Canwest Global Communications Corp., owners of Global Television and the National Post newspaper, filed for creditor protection in a deal with a key group of lenders, as it sought court approval to restructure a mountain of debt.

In 2009, Willard S. Boyle, a scientist born in Amherst, N.S., shared the Nobel Prize in Physics with George E. Smith and Charles Kao for their work in developing the sensor that is widely used in digital cameras.

In 2009, Ontario Health Minister David Caplan resigned one day before the release of a report into spending scandals at the agency tasked with creating electronic health records in the province.

In 2010, Richard Heck, Ei-ichi Negishi and Akira Suzuki won the Nobel Prize in chemistry for finding new ways to bond carbon atoms together, methods now widely used to make medicines and even slimmed-down computer screens.

In 2011, the Nobel Prize in literature was awarded to Tomas Transtromer, a Swedish poet whose surrealistic works about the mysteries of the human mind won him acclaim as one of the most important Scandinavian writers since World War II.

In 2011, Dalton McGuinty became Ontario's first three-term Liberal premier in more than a century but fell one seat short of a majority, resulting in the province's first minority government in 26 years. The Liberals won 53 seats, the Progressive Conservatives 37 and the NDP 17. Voter turnout was a record low 47.6 per cent.

In 2011, a software error that occurred during a routine manoeuvre triggered Telesat's Anik F2 satellite to shut down, causing many Canadians to lose communications for much of the day.

In 2011, Quebec's Congregation of Holy Cross agreed to pay up to $18 million for sexual abuse committed at three different Roman Catholic institutions over a span of five decades. At least 85 people were thought to be eligible for compensation in what lawyers believed was the biggest amount ever awarded in Quebec.

In 2014, Quebecor signed a $316 million-deal to sell Sun Media Corp.'s English-language operations to Postmedia Network Canada Corp. (The Competition Bureau approved the deal in March 2015.)

In 2016, RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson delivered an emotional apology and announced a $100-million settlement of two class-action lawsuits stemming from the harassment allegations from former female officers and employees dating back as long as four decades.

Hatley-Stanstead W.I. September meeting

The Hatley-Stanstead W.I. met on September 7 at the home of Elaine Stone. Joan Lalonde and Elvera Patterson the hostesses served delicious fall sweet breads and tea before the meeting.

The members and our special guest, Dyanne Saanum, Stanstead County President, were welcomed by President Barbara Hewitt.

Before the actual meeting the ladies enjoyed their program time by putting their creative talents to the test by making flower arrangements in a mug. With Barbara's guidance and flowers from members' gardens everyone went home with a beautiful centerpiece.

Roll Call, which was "Name your favourite apple," was answered by nine members. The Macintosh won the race followed by Courtland. The Motto for the month is "Times have changed. Granddad had a farm. Dad had a garden and I have my local grocery and farmer's market."

Elaine Stone read the minutes from the June meeting and Phyllis Dustin presented the Treasurer's Report. Jackie Tilton who has a September birthday paid her birthday dues.

A Thank You was received from the 4H for the donation and muffins given to help out at the Provincial 4H Rally held in July at the fairgrounds.

A motion was made to send a donation to the ACES breakfast program.

Dyanne and Phyllis reported on the Tea Room at the Ayer's Cliff Fair. We thank all who stopped by to support our county effort while attending the Fair.

The branch will participate in the Vessey Fundraiser again this fall. Barbara will be delivering books to the members who would like one. If anyone would like to order please contact one of the branch members.

The branch showed interest in participating in the Ayer's Cliff Christmas Village in December. More discussion will take place at the County meeting in October.

Barbara brought in the articles that were part of the Cercle des Fermieres/Women's Institute class at the Stanstead County Exhibition. Hatley-Stanstead came in third. Barbara was thanked for organizing the entries for the branch.

Being no more business, Scotty Miller closed the meeting and thanked Barbara for arranging the program, to Elaine for the use of her home and to Joan and Elevra for the delicious dessert. Everyone left with their centerpieces and enjoyed the view from Brown's Hill as they made their way back to the village and on to their homes.

Annoying kids on flight

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6, 2017

Dear Annie

Dear Annie: I recently was on a short flight. A young couple and their two children were seated behind me. One was 11 months old; the other was 2 years old. I am a mother of three and grandmother of six; I love kids and don't consider myself a grouch. However, I just like to sit quietly in my seat and read my book and do not really care to socialize with fellow passengers. I realize that young children and infants can be difficult to entertain on flights, and I didn't mind some noise and occasional fussing. But when the 2-year-old kept flipping the tray that was attached to the back of my seat up and down, I became very irritated, not with the child but with the parent who allowed him to do it over and over again. I didn't really want to turn around and be the grouchy old lady complaining. So I endured it for two hours. Am I being unreasonable? Shouldn't parents be a little more mindful of fellow passengers' comfort? I'm hoping parents of young children who fly will read this. — Toddler Turbulence

Dear Toddler Turbulence: Better to bear the 30 seconds of discomfort for speaking up than two hours of discomfort for not. And you can speak up while still being perfectly cordial. Face the parent with a smile. Say hello. Be direct: "Would you please stop him from opening and shutting the tray table? It's shaking my seat." Even if the parent judges you as a "grouchy old lady," I guarantee some other passengers will silently regard you as a hero.

Dear Annie: I just read the letter by "Sad and Over It, With Empty Pockets." I once worked for a student loan services company. I worked with co-signers on loans that were in arrears. I don't know all the details for "Sad's" case, so obviously this may not be applicable to her situation. But if the parents only co-signed the loan, it's possible they are just responsible for a certain percentage of repayment (if it was a federal student loan). If it went through collections, then it may not be. If it was a Direct Plus Loan, then the parent is responsible for the full amount, no matter what agreement they made between themselves.

I think they should call and talk to their loan servicer (and ask for a supervisor) to find out whether they have paid off their portion of the loan. If they have a copy of the promissory note, it should also have all the details on there. — Former Student-Loan Call Center Rep

Dear Former Student-Loan Call Center Rep: I'm printing your letter so it might be of help to "Sad and Over It, With Empty Pockets" and anyone else whose adult child is refusing to repay a loan. Thank you for bringing professional insight to this complex issue.

Panic attacks can derail prospects for normal life

ASK THE DOCTORS
By Robert Ashley, M.D.

Dear Doctor: Could you explain panic attacks? I never knew what people were talking about until a few months ago, while sitting at the computer. I felt as if I had stopped breathing; I thought I was dying. I ended up in the ER, but no problems were found. This has happened several times since, and I want my life back.

Dear Reader: Panic attacks are truly a scary experience, especially if you've never had them before. Many of the symptoms are similar to those of a heart attack, causing people to seek immediate attention in an urgent care department or emergency room. The symptoms, which develop suddenly, can include chest pain, heart palpitations, sweating, nausea, shortness of breath, lightheadedness and, for many, the feeling that they're going to die.

Such attacks are surprisingly common. One-third of people have at least one panic attack during their lifetime. Those who experience recurrent panic attacks not related to generalized anxiety, depression, obsessive-compulsive disorder or post-traumatic stress disorder have what is termed panic disorder. People with panic disorder have a persistent worry about having another panic attack and the consequences of future attacks. That leads them to avoid situations that may induce panic attacks, which, in turn, leads to a profound alteration in quality of life. Panic disorder affects nearly 3 percent of the population, ages 15 to 54.

People with panic disorder often report an increase in stressful life events over the past year and, even more often, within the past month. Genetic factors also play a role. A person who has a first-degree family member with panic disorder is three times more likely to develop the disorder compared to people without such a tie. Further, an identical twin is five times more likely to have anxiety and panic if his or her twin has the disorder.

The symptoms of panic attacks are essentially a normal "fight or flight" response to a very stressful situation, such as an encounter with a lion, tiger or grizzly bear. However, panic attacks occur without the lion, tiger or bear. Some experts hypothesize that panic attacks are abnormal central nervous system responses to even the most mundane stimuli. Such responses arise in the brain's limbic system, which normally processes sensory information into emotional responses, behavior and memory. The hyperresponsiveness to sensory inputs — and even the inputs from one's own thinking — leads to a poor regulation of the autonomic nervous system, which controls heart rate, the contraction of the heart, blood pressure, the gastrointestinal system and sweating. MRI studies have confirmed alterations in the limbic system in people with panic disorder.

Panic attacks can also be precipitated by stimulants such as caffeine, cocaine and amphetamine as well as withdrawal from alcohol, opiates or benzodiazepines like Valium, Ativan and Xanax. Although patients sometimes use benzodiazepines to stop a panic attack, these medications can induce rebound panic when the drug is out of the system, making them a poor treatment option.

Cognitive behavioral therapy shows the greatest sustained benefit in stopping panic attacks, because it can alter the underlying brain responses. Selective serotonin reuptake inhibitor medications also can help.

In summary, starting therapy and possibly medication will be the first steps in getting your life back.

Coaticook Area Senior Citizen's Club

Our first meeting of the new season was September 19. Our President, Shirley Desruisseaux, explained the changes that were decided at our last Committee meeting in August. They are: arrival time 11:30 a.m. followed by the meeting itself only after the noon meal. We will also include the main course for the meal in the published notes from the meeting so members will know in advance what to expect. Another thing we changed is passing around birthday cards for member's signature before giving it to the person having a birthday during the month.

Jokes were read by Shirley and Penny Fowler followed with a text 'A little mixed up'. The drawings were done, Leane Mayhew, Ketha Woodman and Leta Dustin won the Participation and Gerrit Van der Mark, Joan Labrecque, Ernestine Whipple and Reta Mackey won the door prizes.

We had an election to name new members in the Committee, Barbara Bellows was in charge. Both Shirley Desruisseaux and Barbara Bellows were stepping down this year. A review of the actual members was done, Mary Lessard remains as Treasurer and Suzanne Martin as Secretary. Nominations were called for the president and vice-president posts. For Vice-president, Leta Dustin proposed Shirley Desruisseaux who accepted and Joan Baldwin proposed Susan Beaton who declined. Shirley Desruisseaux is our new Vice-president. For President, Suzanne Martin proposed Penny Fowler who accepted and there were no other nominations. Penny Fowler is our new President.

The meeting went on with Shirley saying she would be helping Penny with the transition. She also announced that Barbara and Lance Paxton are in charge of the meal choice. Suggestions were asked. The cake this month was from a store but Ellen Bailey accepted to make the one for October – on a trial basis. The calls to members will be handled by Lydia May and Barbara Paxton.

We lost a few members this summer, Shirley asked for a minute of silence for Wilson May, Joe Cutler, Elaine Green and Elise Mayhew. She also read a prayer.

Penny Fowler gave tips to keep allergies under control. We had a guest speaker who went around the tables and talked to members individually. She is Jade St-Martin, the Outreach worker for the elderly at the Centre d'action bénévole de la MRC de Coaticook. Anyone can contact her at any time at 819-345-0877 or itmav@cabmrccoaticook.org Services are available to 50+; offered on a voluntary basis; available on the territory of the RCM of Coaticook; confidential and free.

Next month the meeting will be October 17 at 11:30 a.m. at the Elie Carrier Center. The main meal being chicken. You will be receiving a telephone call a few days before.

Your Birthday

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6, 2017

Your aim should be to stabilize your life and secure your future, not to jump from one thing to another. Do your best to understand the needs of others and to express what's most important to you in return. Compromise and work as a team player.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — A steady pace will get you where you want to go. If you are erratic or impulsive, you will make mistakes that will set you back. Let wisdom and experience guide you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Walk away from unpredictable situations. Protect your reputation and position. Refuse to let anyone coerce you into making an impulsive move. Know your bottom line before negotiating.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — You'll crave excitement and social activities. Your enthusiasm will give others a boost, and your popularity will result in new opportunities and friendships. Ulterior motives should be reflected upon and excessive behavior curbed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Avoid temptation. Refuse to get caught up in someone else's dream or dilemma. Stay focused on what's important to you, and be reluctant to make a sudden change or hasty decision.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — A smart move will result in an unexpected reward that will change your life. An open mind and an inventive idea will give you a chance to explore new avenues.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — You'll be tempted to make a hasty decision or financial choice that could have serious consequences. Think before you act, and refuse to let your emotions push you to take a risk.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You'll find it difficult to say no to temptation. Unexpected changes will catch you flat-footed. A business trip or meeting looks promising. Moderation is in your best interest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Temptation will lead to bad habits and difficulty living up to your responsibilities and promises. Avoid emotional situations that could affect your position, status or reputation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Keep your emotions out of the equation if you are faced with changes that you aren't certain about. Making a snap decision will lead to greater uncertainty and regret.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Refuse to let anyone take advantage of you. Opt out of any situation that would require you to do all the work. Avoid excessive behavior and hasty decisions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — A change will be in your best interest. A proposition will require you to revive a skill or knowledge you haven't used in a while. Your experience will give you an edge.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Temptation will be your downfall. Don't overspend, overreact or get involved in indulgent behavior. Moderation and common sense will save you from financial and emotional loss.

When the bidding gives the slam away

By Phillip Alder

Jessica Alba said, "My theory is that if you look confident, you can pull off anything — even if you have no clue what you're doing."

That is an interesting theory, if debatable. At the bridge table, though, we are always looking for clues so that we can be confident we are about to make the right play.

In this deal, look at the West hand and the auction. What should West lead against six spades?

At 16 Bridge Base Online tables, five times East opened the bidding with two or three diamonds, despite the unfavorable vulnerability. Then South ended in four spades.

When East passed as dealer, South opened one spade, and North responded two clubs, natural and game-forcing. Then every East except one jumped to three diamonds, and each South rebid four clubs. After that, two control-bids were followed by a jump to six spades.

At those 12 six-spade tables, two Wests led a trump, and five started with a diamond. The other four chose the club ace. Then, surprisingly, three of those Wests shifted to a diamond at trick two! Only at the table where East never bid did West continue with a second club for East to ruff and defeat the slam.

What clue did that West not miss?

When North bid clubs and South raised, surely they had at least a 4-4 fit; and if so, East had at most a singleton.

Should West have doubled six spades?

No! Maybe North or South would have taken the hint and run to six notrump, which was cold.

Your Birthday

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7, 2017

Protect what you have worked so hard to acquire. Update important documents and do your best to lower your overhead and secure your finances. Home improvements should also be geared toward better efficiency and convenience. Plan your actions and execute them responsibly to avoid any setbacks and opposition.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — The past serves as a reminder of what could go wrong if you make an impulsive move. Stay calm and aim to unify and stabilize your life and relationships.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — A personal partnership needs nurturing. Fixing up your surroundings or just spending a relaxing day with a loved one will improve your personal life and ease your stress.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Learn from your mistakes. Be careful when dealing with people who show too much interest in what you are doing. Emotional deception is apparent. Don't reveal personal information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Protect against loss. Focus on your home, assets and possessions. Don't lend or borrow money or belongings. Put your time and effort into building a secure, stable, comfortable and convenient place to live.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Do something creative. It's best not to address emotional issues that could affect your relationship with a loved one. Focus on inner growth and creative endeavors.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — You'll come up with a creative way to make your money go further. Trust in your ability to use your skills and services in unique ways that will help boost your income.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Personal improvements will add to your professionalism. Changing your image or presenting what you have to offer in a slick new way is favored. Invest in yourself and your future.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Learn something new. Engage in seminars, conferences or a group effort that will encourage personal growth and teach you new skills. Short trips will be enlightening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Make professional plans. Consider new ways to use your experience and skills. There is money to be made if you are smart with your investments. Take good care of your health.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Open your doors and host a meeting or group function. Your hospitality will give you the edge you need to get others to see things your way. Romance is on the rise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Keep your emotions and intentions well-hidden. Know exactly what you are going to do before you put your plan into play. Your intelligence and enthusiasm will lead to victory.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Learn from experience when dealing with peers, siblings or a loved one. A physical makeover will boost your self-esteem. A little romance will improve your personal life.

CFUW Sherbrooke & District

CFUW Sherbrooke and District is looking for new members. Please join us on October 11.

We are pleased to present 'Katie Lowry' Program Director with Phelps Helps, a grass roots community organization providing free educational support to elementary and high school students in the Stanstead area.

Since its inception in 2012 with its high school tutoring program, Phelps has grown from a single program to 7 unique programs offered to local students and grown from 7 to 103 participants.

We cordially invite you to come and join us in listening to Katie Lowry talk about the challenges and success in developing the Phelps Helps program. A former graduate of Alexander Galt High School, she obtained a B.A. at Carlton University, Bachelor of Education at University of Ottawa and is currently working full time on developing the Phelps Helps program while running a residence of 70 girls at Stanstead College and caring for her little daughter Elizabeth.

This presentation will be held on Wednesday, October 11 at the Amédée Beaudouin Community Center, 10 Samuel-Gratham Street, Lennoxville (over the fire station behind Town Hall).

Doors will open at 6.30 p.m. for coffee and tea, followed by a short business meeting at 7:15 with the presentation starting at 8 p.m.

Reservations are not necessary. The premises are handicapped accessible.

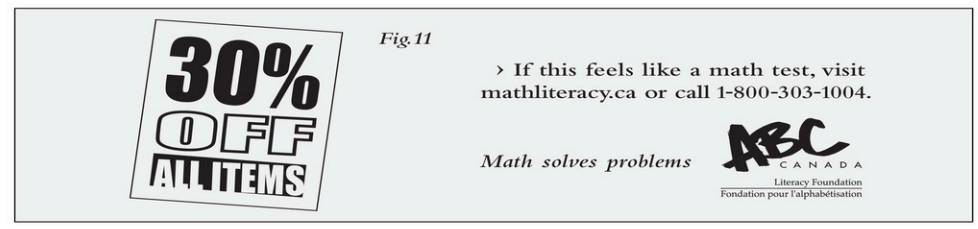

· Are you looking for some volunteer activities?

· Interested in helping to support students and young women?

· Are you searching for interesting workshops and lively discussions?

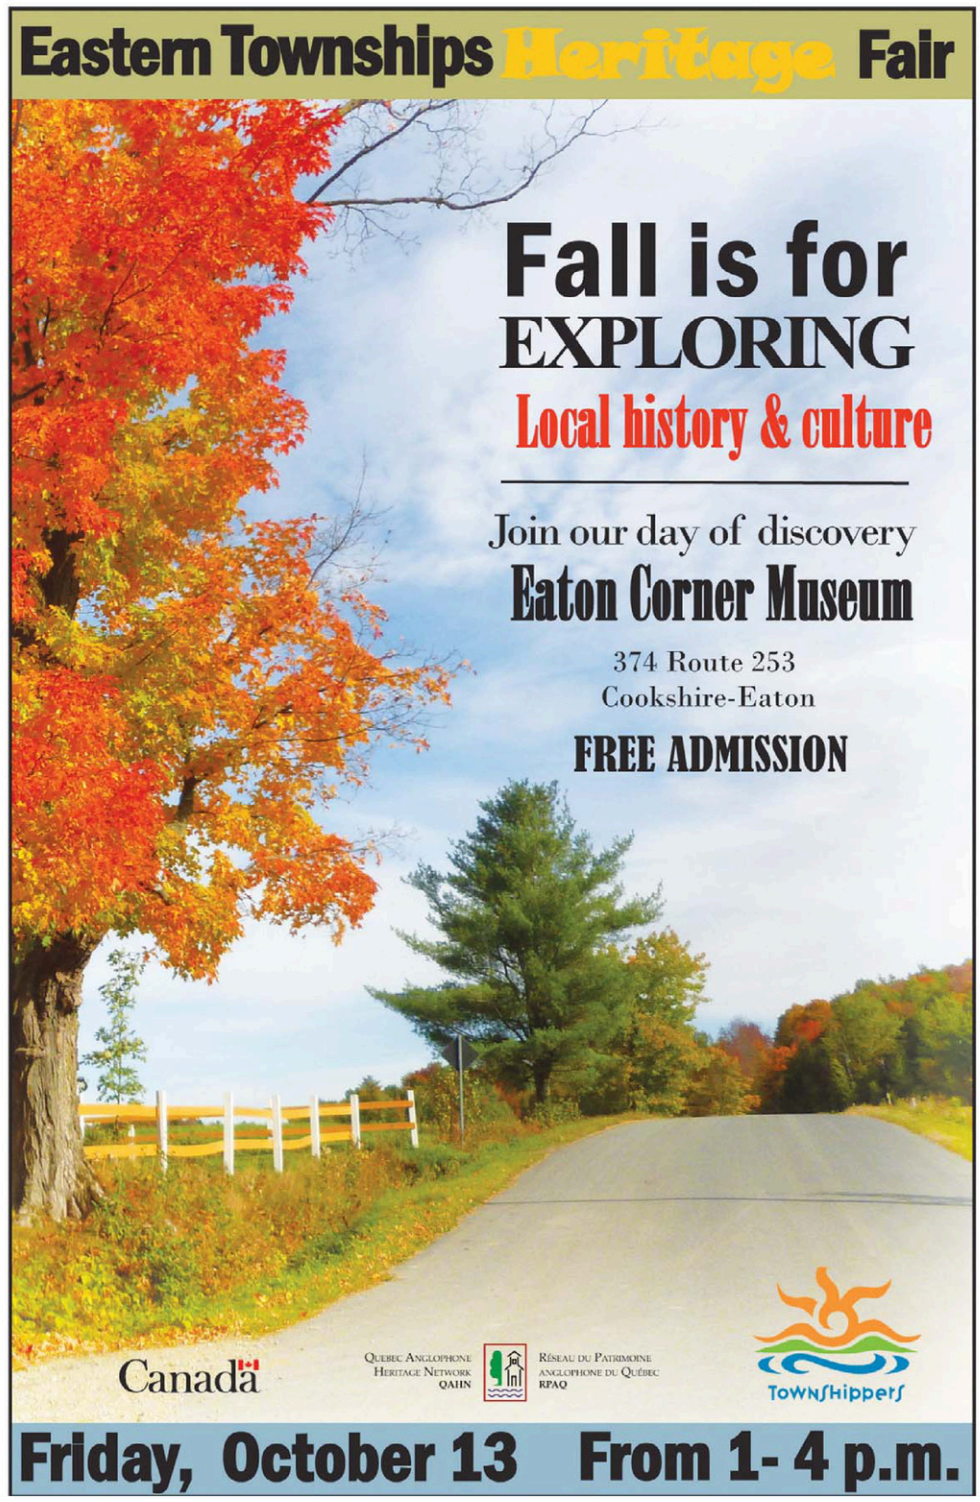

We would be pleased to meet you and explain the Mission and Vision of CFUW Sherbrooke & District.

Feel free to contact us via email at: cfuwsherbrooke@gmail.com
