Making their voices heard loud and clear

Several groups protest Charter of Values bill Sunday in Montreal

anthony.abbondanza@tc.tc

Chants of "charter of oppression" were heard loud and clear as nearly 250 people of various ethnicities and backgrounds braved rain and windy conditions to march through the streets of Montreal last Sunday in protest of Bill 60, also known as the Charter of Quebec Values.

Local group Equality Quebec organized the march, which began at Place du Canada at 2 p.m. and ended at Lafontaine Park. Organizer Salman Shabad Saini wasn't disappointed by the low turnout, citing inclement weather.

"Our number one factor that worked against us was weather. People saw the weather and didn't show up. Sometimes this is a good thing to have: Fewer people with stronger characters," he said.

"...I think our dedication sent a clear message to the government."

Eleven organizations endorsed the march, including the Federation CJA and Dawson College's student union.

The protest comes after the PQ government tabled Bill 60 in the national assembly on Nov. 7. Bill 60 includes provisions to prohibit public servants from wearing veils, kippas and turbans in the workplace.

The legislation contains certain elements not included in the original proposal. If passed, Bill 60 would force the aforementioned restrictions on private contractors and publicly subsidized businesses. It also excludes the initially-promised opt-out provision for cities.

"I think all Quebecers are easily being misled by words of ignorance," said Shabad Saini.

Following the announcement of the provincial government's proposed 'Charter of Quebec Values' in September, Shabad Saini, an accountant by trade, became politically active.

"I felt then and there we needed more protests. I wanted to get my voice heard. I felt this was an attack on religion on general. Religion can be a very good thing. It's part of people's lives," he said.

So what's the next step?

Shabad Saini is planning a multi-faith concert for the summer of 2014 as well as a public forum to discuss why the charter is not in public servants' best interest.

francois.lemieux@tc.tc

On Nov. 6, Desjardins Group announced a donation of $1 million to the Jewish General Hospital (JGH) to improve health-care services. This contribution will also help the annual gala of the JGH, a benefit event which, this year, will support the Lady Davis Institute and its cutting-edge research into the causes and potential treatments for the most common illnesses affecting us today.

Several dignitaries were present at the recognition ceremony during which was revealed Desjardins' important contribution including former Québec premier Jean Charest, representatives of the Jewish general Hospital including doctors, elected officers, Desjardins employees and community members.

The mouth that roared

Surviving November

Darkest month of the year also Mental Health Month

In what can only be considered a cruel joke, November is Mental Health Month in Québec. Yes, the darkest month of the year – notable only for its will-it-or-won't-it-snow-at-some-point-before-my-winter-tires-are-on dance I am forced to do every year around this time.

It's not easy – especially if you are prone to seasonal depression – to feel optimistic when it's already dark by 3:50 p.m., but there are ways to do it that don't involve pain, self-inflicted or otherwise, or even by dabbling in self-destructive behaviours that, although you may think they'll make you feel better – eating junk food to excess, drinking too much, staying up too late, gambling or whatever else – will only help you feel even worse.

It's a vicious cycle and it's hard to get out of. The only way to do it, is to foster some good habits. One good habit we try and keep going at home is a meal together as a family. With our kids getting older and their schedule getting more and more jam-packed, it is something we've placed a priority on at home. No matter what we have going on that night, we always take a few minutes to spend 10 to 15 minutes together as a family, discussing and rehashing our day – all in a general reinforcement of the idea that our family life is a priority for my wife and I.

It probably doesn't help that I am particularly prone to seasonal depression and with November being the darkest month of the year, I take every opportunity to soak in as much natural light as humanly possible in an effort to get to my vitamin D quota for the day – and that's something that I have found also improves my mood. Science has shown that getting your body moving during the day and getting fresh air can increase blood flow to the brain, thereby stimulating creativity and helping alleviate stress. The same can be said for exercise. Science shows that a brain that has increased blood flow is more apt to be creative and allow its owner to accomplish more during a day.

Those are two excellent ways to cope with the soul-killing nature of the month of November. It's the one sandwiched in between October – exciting! Halloween! Leaves turning colours! – and December – holidays! Parties! People in jovial, generous moods! Poor November, with its early darkness, cold-to-frosty demeanour, grey skies and general lack of holiday enjoyment sort of makes me wish we were American, in order to take advantage of the month-long 'holiday' season that lasts from their Thanksgiving until Jan. 2 or 3 of the new year.

In fact, importing Thanksgiving another month from October to November could be a great way to give the month a little more meaning and a little more for people to look forward to. That way, we could spend the month deciding what to make, how to give thanks and best of all, how to best prepare the meal that would accompany the holiday.

Contemporary life is not complicated; the more you take care of yourself, the better off everyone will be when it's time to care for someone else. You can't do a job without being confident in your skills – and it's hard enough to get by in today's never-stop-e-mail-texting-facebook-tweeting-you-have-to-be-doing-something-every-second-or-the-world-will-collapse-onto-itself world if you aren't already taking steps to ensure your mental health is at its optimal level.

Take care of your mind, because if you don't – who's going to take care of you?

'Treats and Treasures' in Westmount

Annual arts and crafts bazaar supports fair trade and income-generating projects in Africa

● anthony.abbondanza@tc.tc

About 30 local and international artisans' works will be featured during the Greene Centre's annual 'Treats and Treasures' arts and craft show and sale this Saturday.

What's unique about this bazaar?

The bazaar, which will run from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., supports co-ops that help people help themselves. "It's very festive. We all look forward to this once a year. It's a lot of work but we have a great group of volunteers. We enjoy planning and being there on that day," said Erica Bloom, one of the event's organizers.

One of those co-ops will be the Mama Africa Foundation, which supports fair trade crafters in Africa. The foundation aids women-only co-ops in Zimbabwe help themselves financially.

Both the Bonda Art and Craft Center and the Batsiranai Craft Project provide the foundation artisanal items for sale in North America.

"One hundred per cent of the proceeds go back to them," said Marcia McKenzie of Mama Africa Foundation. "As part of their training, we're trying to get them to sell their products better. They have no concept of prices."

Both the Bonda Arts and Craft Center and Batsiranai Craft Project are self-help groups, trying to sustain themselves. The latter

For $20, the Greene Centre will provide donated handmade ceramic bowls filled with a homemade vegetable soup, accompanied with Irish soda bread.

A raffle, bake sale, and a light lunch will also be available. All proceeds raised from the event will benefit the centre's community programs.

particularly supports mothers with severely disabled children who are often subject to shame.

McKenzie added the goal is to develop these Zimbabwean women's business skills so as to eventually relinquish the latter's dependence on the foundation. "It's better to have people make something to sell than just give money," said McKenzie, who joined the foundation in 2003.

The 'Treats and Treasures' bazaar will also feature an 'Empty Bowl' program, in support of raising awareness for hunger and food issues.

The 29 second-year students of fashion commercialization of LaSalle College obtained valuable experience that will help them in their future careers last Friday as they were held a fashion show at the Jean-Paul Morin Hall of the school. The event allowed the students to work in collaboration with seven known designers.

The event allowed the students to get to know the basics of the industry: how to set up a show, how to do a press release, how to do public relations, how to get sponsors. The show was called 'Capital Chronicles' to reflect the fact that the show featured clothing reminiscent of various fashion hotspots: Milan, Tokyo, Paris, New York and London.

"If you think about Tokyo, the fashion is not the same as in Paris. It's not a typical fashion show where you only see one designer and his whole collection. It was really original and I think the public was entertained because the show was moving, the music changed, the clothes changed, the makeup, the hair and everything changed five times," said the show's head of public relations Anne-Sophie Harvey.

McGill set to host public lecture on hematological cancers Nov. 26.

● anthony.abbondanza@tc.tc

As part of its public symposium series on Cancer, the Rosalind and Morris Goodman Cancer Research Centre will present the "Lymphoma, Leukemia and other Hematological Cancers" lecture Nov 26 at McGill University.

Professors Nicole Beauchemin, Russell Jones, Sarit Assouline, and Nathalie Johnson – all of the department of medicine and oncology – will each discuss differing aspects of leukemia. Beauchemin will moderate the discussion.

The English lecture will take place from 6:30-8:30 p.m. in the Martin Theatre of McGill University' McIntyre Medical Sciences Building, located at 1200 Pine Ave. W., Montreal.

"I think it's an excellent opportunity for patients and the public to learn about lymphoma. It's a chance to learn standard treatments and new treatments coming out and we're fighting to get available to patients in Quebec," said Johnson, who'll focus on the best lymphoma therapies in 2013.

According to the McGill professor, there are two drugs in particular – Bendamustine and Brentuximab – that are available across Canada, except in Quebec.

"We'll look into why we think these are good drugs and why they're not in Quebec. It is a cost issue. But we'll look at what we can do for patients in the interim," said Johnson.

The remaining two lectures will take place on April 29 and May 27.

A bilingual question and answer period will be made available. Admission is free, but registration is required.

Never forget to play

Kaleidoscope Theatre Montreal presents
'None of the Above' Nov. 26-30

Kaleidoscope Theatre Montreal is bringing the fun and games with their new productions, Jenny Lyn Bader's 'None of the Above.'

Set in the sprawling and hectic metropolis of present-day New York City, 'None of the Above' tells the tale of two characters from opposite ends of the spectrum, and that are layered in complexities. Jamie Silver, 17, is in her final year at a high-end private school in the Upper East Side. Her genius is hidden by her appearance of a party-going socialite whose academic success is her last priority. Despite her wealth, Jamie is also a small-time drug dealer on the side. With Jamie's exams fast approaching, her father hires Clark, 22, to help her achieve a good grade on her SATs. While Clark is seemingly a genius, no-nonsense young adult with massive debts, there's more than meets the eye. Clark also possesses a dark past and his own secrets.

"They learn to help each other through their individual struggle," said Trevor Barrette, co-director and founder of Kaleidoscope Theatre Montreal. "They have more in common than they think they do; namely their willingness to play."

Barrette is a Montreal-based actor, director, and playwright, as well as a graduate of John Abbott College's Professional Theatre Program where he received the 2008 Carla Napier Scholarship and the 2011 Pamela Montgomery Award. Barrette founded Kaleidoscope Theatre Montreal in 2011, and has directed both of the company's past productions; Sophocles' 'Antigone' and William Shakespeare's 'The Tempest.' 'None of the Above' marks a depart-ture from the classics that the production company has adapted thus far.

"It's a modern story that everyone can relate to," said Barrette. "It's about the struggle to succeed, and the pressure we exert on ourselves. That pressure makes us do crazy things."

Interestingly, the play also features a unique soundtrack created solely by Montreal musicians. As part of Kaleidoscope Theatre Montreal's mission to work with emerging and young professional artists in the community, and to provide a special Montreal feel to an American play, the theatre production company selected various Montreal artists that reflect the brilliance of the community, including Bent by Elephants, Wind & the Wild, and Shaharah Sinclair.

"We wanted to create the Jamie and Clark mix tape, and let the music tell their story," said Barrette.

An upcoming production from Kaleidoscope Theatre Montreal will be a musical entitled 'To Be' that Barrette wrote himself. The production will be presented in a concert version and include Montreal talent.

"It's a fun, lighthearted play, with a simple message; no matter how much you grow, never forget to play."

Kaleidoscope Theatre Montreal's production of 'None of the Above' will take the stage at MainLine Theatre nov. 26-30. The cost of a ticket is $20 and $15 for students and seniors, as well as $12 for groups. The show commences at 8 p.m.w from Tuesday to Saturday, and Tuesday and Saturday matinees begin at 2 p.m. Tickets for the Nov. 30 matinee are two for the cost of one at the door. For further information and to purchase tickets, visit mainlinetheatre.ca or call 514-849-3378.
