ANOTHER REICH CRUISER ATTACKED

Reich Demands Four Nations Take Joint Action Immediately

Communique Announcing Two Torpedo Attacks on Cruiser Leipzig Calls on Four Powers to Take Appropriate Measures in Accordance with Agreements—Insurgent Forces Complete Movement for Encircling of Bilbao.

Berlin, June 19.—Chancellor Hitler returned by air from Berchtesgaden today immediately following receipt of news of alleged submarine attacks on the German cruiser Leipzig.

The first attack was made against the Leipzig, her commander reported, north of Oran, Algeria.

Both were said to have been submarine attacks.

(Advices today direct from Oran told of mysterious wreckage on the beach at Saïda and of large areas of heavy oil on the sea offshore after what residents described as the thunder and flashes of firing naval guns last Wednesday, June 16th).

The cruiser commander reported the courses of all the torpedoes were followed by the Leipzig's sound apparatus and that, in the second attack, the missile could be seen across her bows.

"It will now be the business of the four powers to take appropriate measures in accordance with the agreements they have made," the communique added.

"Germany refuses to watch idly the habit of Spanish Bolshevik submarine pirates until they make a hit."

"German Ambassador Joachim Ribbentrop in London brought the matter this morning to the urgent attention of the associated powers." Chancellor Hitler returned by air from Godesberg just after midnight.

The Leipzig is a member in the International Non-Intervention fleet in Spanish waters which also includes French, British and Italian men-of-war.

REBELS TAKE VILLAGES ON FRINGE OF BILBAO

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 19.—Gen. Francisco Franco pushed his insurgent siege lines to the southern edge of Bilbao today by capturing five villages fringing the coveted Basque capital, almost completely locked within the insurgents' grip.

An insurgent communique reported the southern columns under Gen. Fidel Davila, Franco's commander of the Bilbao offensive, crossed the Nervion river at Mitavalles and drove northward to take control of the five villages.

"We dominate the city from a short distance and can see into the deserted streets," the insurgent high command announced, hailing what it called the successful termination of the southern movement to encircle battered Bilbao.

Heavy fighting raged just north of the capital to control the last outlet to Government-held territory. Basque Government reports said the defence legions had stemmed the insurgent advance, but admitted that the insurgents, from some mountain vantage points, could look down into the rich industrial city's streets.

The village of Begona, just outside Bilbao to the north, was the centre of the heaviest warfare, as Basques and insurgents pitted their forces.

Plans To Ease Impoverishing Effect Of Drought On Farmers Under Way

Measures Taken Include Community Pastures, Irrigation Systems, Small Dams and Waterholes—Reduced Freight Rates for Removal of Cattle from Drought Areas.

Ottawa, June 19.—As southwestern Saskatchewan begins another summer on parched soil and under rainless skies measures of a permanent character designed to mitigate the impoverishing effect of drought on the farmers are actively under way.

These measures extend over the whole of the old drought area which takes in parts of Alberta and Manitoba, although it is only the southwest corner of Saskatchewan which is immediately threatened with drought this season.

They include community pastures, irrigation systems, small dams and waterholes. In the waterholes spring surface water will be collected and provide drink for livestock in summer of little or no rain.

Hon. James G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, under whose department the prairie farm rehabilitation organization functions, will make his third trip to the west next week.

Yesterday Mr. Gardiner announced inauguration of the feeder freight policy under which the movement of cattle out of the drought area is assisted. The Gov-

CREATOR OF PETER PAN PASSED AWAY TODAY

SIR JAMES M. BARRIE, creator of the immortal Peter Pan, passed away this morning at the age of seventy-seven years.

The British playwright and novelist, who gave to the world the piquant story of the little boy who wouldn't grow up, was taken to a London nursing home on June 11 suffering from bronchial pneumonia. He had been ill a long time.

Halifax, June 19.—Hector McInnes, president of the Board of Governors of Dalhousie University and vice-president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, died suddenly at his home here today. He was seventy-seven.

ANTHONY EDEN CALLS PARLEY TO CONSIDER GERMANY'S CHARGE

London, June 19.—Foreign Secretary Eden today called in the French, Italian and German ambassadors to consider Germany's charge that the cruiser Leipzig had been attacked by a Spanish Government submarine off Oran, Algeria.

The ambassadors' meeting was called under the terms of the consultation agreement concluded only last Saturday.

DIFFICULTIES OF THREE MONTREAL ISLAND MUNICIPALITIES

Montreal, June 19.—Annual financial statement of the Montreal Metropolitan Commission today showed the twelve solvent municipalities on Montreal Island had been assessed a total of $524,875 to meet 1936 deficits of three aided towns—Pointe aux Trembles, Montreal North and Ville St. Michel.

The Commission administers finances of the three assisted municipalities.

SMALL VILLAGE SUFFERS HEAVY LOSS IN BLAZE

Oldest Church in Canada Threatened During Conflagration that Destroyed Five Buildings in French-Canadian Village of Repentigny.

Repentigny, Que., June 19.—Villagers in this little French-Canadian community counted a $40,000 loss last night as they kept vigil over smouldering ruins of five buildings, swept by fire that threatened destruction of the whole town and its historic spot of interest—Canada's oldest church.

A pump from Montreal, only twenty-five miles from Repentigny, aided volunteer firemen in finally controlling the fire which was thought to have broken out in the dairy owned by Alban Lussier but not before flames caused explosion of a gasoline tank in a nearby garage.

Windows for some distance around were shattered when the tank exploded. Trees also were torn up and a hole ten feet deep was dug in the ground.

There was no one near the tank at the time but part of a brick wall of the Sacristy of the Roman Catholic Church, built in 1676, was blown down.

A volunteer brigade of about seventy-five firemen fought the fire in its early stages but when the church was threatened aid was asked of nearby LeEpiphanie and Montreal. Four volunteer firemen were slightly injured with Joseph Buisson suffering a six-inch gash in his right arm.

Erection Of Comstock Bridge At Cost Of $90,000 Decided

Much-Needed Project Will Be Proceeded with at Once, Minister of Public Works Johnny Bourque Announced this Morning—Dangerous Level Crossing Will Be Eliminated—Minister Says Sherbrooke Will Receive Its Just Share of Government's Highway Construction Programme.

Construction of a new bridge at the Comstock turn on the Sherbrooke-Derby Line highway and elimination of a dangerous railway crossing at a cost of $90,000, will be carried out shortly, it was announced this morning by Col. the Hon. Johnny Bourque, Provincial Minister of Public Works.

Construction of this bridge has been discussed for many months and the Provincial Government has now definitely decided to go ahead with the work. The Minister said that tenders would be invited within a few days.

The bridge now spanning the Massawippi River is a wooden structure and was badly damaged in the spring floods of 1936. Erection of a steel structure has long been advocated, and word that it is to take place will be welcomed by motorists.

The Minister said that plans have also been prepared and approved for elimination of the dangerous level crossing near the bridge and the straightening of the highway. An underpass will be built to overcome the dangerous railway crossing.

Referring to the Quebec Government's extensive road building programme, designed to place 25,000 men at work by the first of next month, Col. Bourque declared that Sherbrooke district would receive its just share.

Under takings in this district will include re-construction of the Sherbrooke-Ascut highway, work upon which is also slated to start in the near future.

The Minister said that a complete list of local projects to be carried out during the summer months would be issued shortly.

London, June 19.—Sir James M. Barrie, creator of the immortal Peter Pan, died today. He was seventy-seven years old.

The British playwright and novelist, who gave to the world the piquant story of the little boy who wouldn't grow up, was taken to a London nursing home on June 11, suffering from bronchial pneumonia. He had been ill a long time.

Death was announced at 1:57 p.m. (E.S.T.). Early this morning, Peter Davies, who as a little boy inspired Barrie to write the story of Peter Pan and his "Never-Never Land," reached the dying author's bedside.

At that time the doctors were announcing Sir James' life was "slowly ebbing away."

Shortly before 8 a.m. Sir James became unconscious. Davies stayed until the end.

Thirty-five years ago Davies and his three brothers were playing in Kensington Gardens when Barrie walked through.

They made him one of their playmates and told him their childish schemes and secrets.

That was Peter Pan of stage and story born.

When the boys' father died, Barrie adopted them. Davies' son, four years old, today's Peter Pan, is Sir James' godchild.

This afternoon a doctor who attended Sir James announced: "Sir James Barrie has passed away. He passed away quietly and peacefully. There was no pain."

That was the way he died, this man whose career in the field of literature and drama was a success almost from its start—so much so that his early works, like "My Lady Nicotine" and "The Little Minister," the latter dramatized to great acclaim, were better known than he who wrote them.

Sir James since 1922 had written but two plays, one of which, "The Boy David," had its premiere in Edinburgh November 11, 1936.

The play, the first performance of which the author missed because he was kept in bed by lumbago, scored a hit both in Scotland and at its London premiere December 14. Elisabeth Bergner, star of the cast, answered a dozen curtain calls.

"The Boy David" followed closely the Old Testament story of David and his conquest of Goliath. Sir James also wrote "The Two Shepherds" in 1936.

Before the presentation of "The Boy David," Sir James' most notable work was "The Two Shepherds."

Violent Clashes Feared As Miners Plan Invasion Of Strike Troubled City

Pennsylvania Governor Declares Martial Law in Johnstown After Bethlehem Steel Refuses to Close Cambria Plant in Order to Avoid Bloodshed—Forty Thousand Mine Workers Plan Sympathy Mass Meeting in Johnstown Tomorrow.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 19.—Governor Earle declared martial law in Johnstown today, at the close of the second week of the strike in the plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company.

The Governor said he had received a telegram from Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, refusing to accede to the Governor's request that the plant in Johnstown be shut down in order to avoid bloodshed. The telegram said:

"To preserve peace and avoid bloodshed, I earnestly request you to close your Johnstown (Pa.) plant pending action of the recently appointed federal mediation board."

"This action on your part will make it unnecessary for me to declare martial law and close your plant."

Shortly before sending the telegram, Governor Earle had received an urgent telephonic plea from the Sheriff of Cambria County in which are located the huge Cambria works of the Bethlehem Corporation—a plant that spruhs for seven miles and which normally employs 15,000 men.

"Send us National Guardsmen," begged Sheriff Boyle. "Forty thousand coal miners are marching on Johnstown tomorrow to attend a mass meeting in sympathy with the striking steel workers of the Bethlehem plant."

REBEL ARMORED CARS ENTERED BILBAO TODAY

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Border, June 19.—Two armored scout cars from the besieging insurgent armies already have entered the streets of Bilbao, border dispatches reported today. Insurgents said they expected the Basque capital to "surrender" at any time.

PREMIER MAY APPEAL DIRECTLY TO SENATE

Blum Expected to Defy Senate Committee and Deal Directly with Whole House in Effort to Win Approval for Financial Proposals.

Paris, June 19.—Friends of Premier Leon Blum said today he probably will defy the Senate Finance Committee and go directly to the whole Senate with his demand for special powers in connection with the country's financial difficulties.

Approved by the Chamber of Deputies, the bill struck a snag in the Senate committee, largely because there was no limitation on the Government's financial power.

The committee asked Finance Minister Vincent Auriol to check a new measure which would check tax evasions and speculation.

Those things were blamed by committee members for the Government's trouble in borrowing funds to meet an expected deficit of $1,760,000,000 in regular and ordinary expenditures for 1937.

Also at Johnstown were heard reports of a plot to dynamite the home of Mayor Daniel Shields, who has been insistent that life and property be protected there.

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, suggested in Washington that the strike mediation board "may have prejudged the case in a damaging degree."

If the opposing sides decline to meet around the same table—an effort will be made to have them gather separately, with the mediation board acting as go-between until settlement can be reached.

There were expressions of doubt that the strike "status quo" could be maintained, as Secretary of Labor Perkins has asked, while the mediation proceedings are in progress.

Representative Vinson (Demo- crat, Kentucky) a member of the committee said the present twenty-five per cent. penalty tax on any transfer of assets designed to reduce tax liability might be increased.

Present tax rates on domestic holding companies might be raised to deter their use for tax avoidance, revenue authorities said. The rates now range from eight to forty-eight per cent. on undistributed net income, and officials said a range from twenty to sixty per cent. might be preferable.

The first burst of publicity on individual taxpayers yesterday placed before the joint Senate-house investigating committee the names of a half dozen persons.

Emory L. Frey, veteran chief of the Treasury's tax investigation unit, said those named had reduced or eliminated federal tax payments through the formation of foreign corporations.

As another method of reaching persons who transfer assets to foreign corporations, officials said they could urge congress to place a "pro-rata tax" on incorporators who live in this country.

If a foreign corporation had

"State police and local authorities are unable to handle such a crowd."

Tomorrow's mass meeting, coming just a week after a similar meeting at Monroe, Mich., at which National Guardsmen were on duty, is to be addressed by leaders in the C. I. O. strike. Johnstown authorities have been apprehensive ever since the strike began last Saturday. There have been several clashes at the picket lines.

Charles M. Schwab, the elderly chairman of Bethlehem's board, is now near Johnstown, personally studying the strike situation.

Bethlehem officials say the Cambria plant is operating in all departments, despite the strike, and that men are returning to work in increasing numbers.

As the federal mediators converged on Cleveland for their first meeting, the air was electric with fresh blasts from both sides.

Republic Steel, in a formal statement, spoke of a "veritable reign of anarchy" and of "C.I.O. intimidation and terrorism."

Strike spokesmen retorted that steel is "whipped," and that steel "cannot stand the light of an exposure."

Also at Johnstown were heard reports of a plot to dynamite the home of Mayor Daniel Shields, who has been insistent that life and property be protected there.

U.S. Treasury Seeks Greater Powers To Curb Activities Of Tax Dodgers

Propose Drastic Increase in Withholding Tax on Foreign Corporations as Evidence Before Committee Indicates Frequent Use of Holding Companies to Avoid Payment.

Washington, June 19.—Treasury officials, digging out new names and evidence for the congressional tax dodging inquiry, suggested today a major loophole might be plugged by increasing the tax on income earned in the United States but shipped abroad.

They suggested an increase in the present ten per cent. "withholding tax" in income received from the United States by non-resident individuals and foreign corporations.

If the "withholding tax" were listed to twenty-five per cent., some authorities said, taxpayers abroad might be given the option of paying this levy or the ordinary American income tax.

This alternative, they declared, probably would lead many to pay the regular income tax rates, placing them on the same basis as citizens who pay standard income taxes.

As another method of reaching persons who transfer assets to foreign corporations, officials said they could urge congress to place a "pro-rata tax" on incorporators who live in this country.

If a foreign corporation had ten stockholders with ten shares of stock each, they explained, each would have to pay a tax on one-tenth of the corporation's income annually.

Declarer Directs Possible Losing Tricks Toward Hand Which Would Do Him Least Harm

By Wm. E. McKenney,
Secretary, American Bridge League.

Often declarer's count of probable tricks, after the opening lead is made and the dummy spread, is affected by the problem as to whether he can dictate which of his opponents shall win a certain losing trick or tricks. Usually this problem is acute when the declarer holds a weakly guarded king, which is in danger of being captured if led through.

The correct solution of the problem, even present at the bridge table, enabled Jack Moore, of New York, in a recent duplicate game at the Gotham Bridge Club, to fulfill a contract which others with the same cards failed to make.

The bidding is self-explanatory. After North's free bid, South, with a hand rather weak in high cards, should bid again, and when the spade raise is given, is justified in trying for game.

Today's Contract Problem

South is playing the hand for three no trump. He can count on four or five diamonds, three clubs, two hearts and one or two spades. When East plays the queen of spades to the first trick, how should declarer plan the development of the hand?

On the opening lead, East played the club three, and Moore rightly permitted West to hold the trick. He could not permit East to gain the lead until trumps were drawn, so that some of his losers might be discarded on dummy's strong diamonds.

One club trick had to be lost and perhaps a spade. To lose two heart tricks, as probably would happen if East gained the lead, would be fatal.

The club suit was continued. South won with the ace, and led a low spade to dummy's king. Spades were returned and the nine finessed. West failed to follow.

Dummy was re-entered with a diamond and another spade finesse permitted the capture of East's four trumps without the loss of a trick.

The play of the nine to the second spade trick was absolutely correct. South could afford to lose a trump trick, if West won it. He could not afford to lose to East and still have a fair chance to make his contract, as West's bid clearly marked the ace and queen of hearts in his hand.

Dummy was re-entered with a diamond and another spade finesse permitted the capture of East's four trumps without the loss of a trick.

SHERBROOKE, SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1937.

And Naomi said unto her daughter-in-law, Blessed be he of the Lord, who hath not left off his kindness to the living and to the dead.—Ruth 2:20.

Tribute To A Worthy Couple.

It is with feelings of thankfulness and pride that the people of Sherbrooke in general join in extending greetings and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Walsh on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Walsh will be married fifty years tomorrow, when their family, friends and admirers will shower them with greetings and pay tribute to a worthy couple whose married life has been an example of abiding love and their contribution to the general good of the community of inestimable value.

Nobly, indeed, has Mr. Walsh played his part as a public-spirited citizen of Sherbrooke during the fifty years of his married life. Beloved and respected by young and old alike, Mr. Walsh counts his friends among all classes and creeds. True to his own beliefs, he can always see the good in others. By his life and example he has encouraged many younger men in life, and is a model to many who are today striving to make as much of their lives as he has of his.

In her noble calling as wife and mother, Mrs. Walsh has stood beside her husband during the passing years ever considerate of his comforts and the welfare of their children.

Together Mr. and Mrs. Walsh have faced the trials and tribulations of life. They have had their share of sorrow and they have enjoyed happiness, but their love for each other has always remained steadfast.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Walsh have their family about them. Their friends are proud to extend greetings and the community is happy to honor a couple who for half a century have faced life's tasks together, ever trusting in God and in each other.

She Wrought Her People Lasting Good.

One hundred years ago tomorrow an eighteen-year-old girl was summoned from her sleep to be informed that she had become the Queen of England.

Thus began the reign of Queen Victoria, who ruled over the British Empire for sixty-three years and whose name has gone down in history as "Victoria the Good."

The story goes that at five o'clock in the morning of Tuesday, June 20th, 1837, two gentlemen of grave and distinguished appearance might have been heard knocking at the door of Kensington Palace. The porter was one who might have heard but did not, at least until the knocking was repeated and a demand made "to see the Queen."

Finally these gentlemen, the Archbishop of Canterbury and Lord Conyngham, the Lord Chamberlain, were ushered into an apartment. The porter was loath to arouse the young Princess. Finally he consented, grumblingly, to rouse Baroness Lehzen, who fluttered downstairs, breathless with excitement and curiosity, and hearing the news flew to the Duchess, Victoria's mother.

Together, the ladies awoke the Princess, "and in a few minutes the door opened," tells Greville, Clerk to the Privy Council, in his celebrated Diary, "and she came in wrapped in a dressing-gown and with slippers on her naked feet. Conyngham dropped on his knee, kissed her hand and spoke in a low voice of the King's death; the Archbishop followed, and the young Queen, with tears in her eyes and her hands clasped, spoke of her aunt, the Queen Dowager, inquired if she were broken with grief, and asked what could be done to comfort her."

Yet a feeling of exaltation mingled with her grief in this the greatest day of her life. There would be no more darned muslin dresses, no more soddings from Mama—she would never sleep again in a bed in Mama's room, for the Queen of England would have a room of her own.

After breakfast, tells Edith Sitwell in her "Victoria of England," a hasty letter must be written to her uncle, Leopold, in Belgium, "and another to her sister, and then, before the big clock in the tower had struck nine o'clock, the Prime Minister, Lord Melbourne—such a handsome and at the same time fatherly man—wearing full court dress sought an audience with his sovereign. "It has long been my intention," she said to him in her lovely youthful voice, "to retain your lordship and the rest of the Ministry at the head of affairs." Lord Melbourne left her presence, and then came the moment to write a letter of condolence to her dear aunt Queen

Adelaide, who had always been so kind to her. This was scarcely finished, when the Duke of Sussex, her uncle, arrived, and would have knelt before the new Queen, but she would not allow it and, putting her arms round him, kissed him warmly. Then came the great, the venerable Duke of Wellington, and all were so respectful, so kind to her; she was no longer the little Princess Drina, she was Alexandrina Victoria, Queen of England."

The Secret Of Serenity.

Grenville Kleiser.

If you knew for a fact that you were to die today, how would you behave? Would you care so much about your food? Wouldn't you be careful to leave a happy memory behind you? Wouldn't you like to think that people would remember that kind word or deed rather than a sharp reprimand or an unjust accusation? Wouldn't you reconcile yourself to anyone with whom you were on bad terms? Wouldn't you be careful to be scrupulously honest, merciful and just?

There is a story told of three old Frenchmen, who were sitting round the fire one winter evening. Two were playing chess; one was thinking. The third suddenly said to the others, "If you knew that the end of the world were coming in half-an-hour, what would you do?"

The first said, "I should go to the church and pray."

The second made no answer. He asked instead, "And what would you do?"

"I should go to see Georges Dubois," said the third, "and make up our quarrel. And what would you do?"

"I should do nothing," replied the second calmly. "I am ready now."

That man had the secret of serenity. For him, each day was complete, a link in a perfect chain which could be broken at any time without damage to its perfection. That should be possible to everyone who knows the meaning and the value of life. People who live so, live in accordance with the Bible precept, creating each day a perfect piece of life, so that they are never found with lamps untrimmed and oil run out.

The beginning of a new day, with its promise of unexplored possibilities, should gladden the heart. A day is well-lived on which you have put a fine resolution into practice, done a useful piece of work, or rendered unselfish service to others.

Today offers you ample opportunity for the use of your best powers. Bend your mind and energies to the task before you. Waste no time over past failures or disappointments. Turn the hours of day to good account.

EDITOR'S NOTE-BOOK

J. C. Campbell, of Windsor, Ont., who was a member of the Record staff when the first issue was run off the press on February 9th, 1897, was a welcome visitor at the Record Office yesterday afternoon. Mr. Campbell is a brother of Firmin Campbell, of this city. He was born, as he described it, on the "hill in the rear of the Record Office." Mr. Campbell was much impressed with the great changes which have taken place in the Record establishment since the early days of the Record and thoroughly enjoyed his tour of inspection and visit with the Record staff.

If you want to hit the mark you have to aim just a bit above it.

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY

From the Files of the Sherbrooke Record.
June 10th, 1907.
Reports from Iron Hill state fields are literally white with wild strawberry blossoms. If there is no frost this will probably be a record-breaker for this luscious fruit.
The old Quaker Church at East Farnham was purchased at auction by William J. Hall for the sum of $100.
A. Hesse, coal contractor for the C.P.R. reported three of his men prostrated with heat.
Citizens of Richmond preparing to fete George W. Hill, the sculptor, in recognition for the success he has achieved in his art.
Marriages: At Iron Hill, Thomas Robinson to Miss Miller, of West Bolton, at Eastman, Naomi Laura Phelps to Mr. George Gillespie, of Battle Creek, Mich.
Deaths reported: Miss Mary Walker, of Fairfax; Alexander Coultas, of Sherbrooke; Mrs. Isidore Dumont, of Cookshire.
Large number of friends from all parts of the Eastern Townships attended closing exercises of St. Andrew College.

FINE FEATHERS.

When someone uses this old phrase—
"Fine feathers—meaning but to praise
The garments others wear, my mind
Is all for feathers that I find
By farm and marsh, by woods and hills:
The peacock with his fan that spills
Its jewels; that iridescent speck,
The humming bird; a mallard's neck
Arched over water in the dawn;
That proud insignia upon
The blackbird's wings; a cardinal's crest
Of flame, and that unequalled vest
The bobolink favors; rainbows about
A pheasant's neck; and sky, without
A cloud, the bluebird always wears;
Gold light the wild canary bears
As if an altar flame took wings;
The cheery glow the robin brings
Upon his breast—On large and small,
On bold and shy, fine feathers all
Beauty for which the mortals long—
And under most of it is song!"

PRESS COMMENTS

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY.

The other day in a telegram to the National Seaways Council President Franklin D. Roosevelt pledged himself to do everything within his power to win early approval for the St. Lawrence Seaway project and the development of hydro-electric energy. This is interesting to Canadians because of the changed opinion which has taken place in the Dominion regarding this enterprise. When it was first proposed in the days before the Great War Canada was not burdened with heavy taxation and the construction of the deep seaway and power plants in association with the United States was not a matter for financial alarm. However, in recent years the opposition of Canada has hardened against the whole enterprise so that there is no reason to believe that any government, federal or provincial, would endorse the scheme. It is no longer needed in Canada for power purposes, the building of large power plants in the Province of Quebec having made available abundant supplies of hydro-electric energy. Neither is it needed for navigation as the present facilities for water transportation are abundant. The present system does not carry by any means the traffic which it is capable of handling. Then, again, the construction of the seaway would be detrimental to the railway interests, which already have tremendous competition. When Canada favored the construction of the project it was vetoed by Congress. Now if by any means President Roosevelt can influence Congress to endorse it, he will find the Dominion strongly opposed.—Brantford Expositor.

GREAT LAKES BUSIEST OF WATERWAYS

The record year for the Great Lakes, measured by the statistics taken at the Soo, was 1929, when the total was 138,574,441 tons. It is predicted the figures for this year will be greater than that high mark. It is a tremendous thing this traffic on the world's greatest inland waterway. It is a commonplace to say that the traffic through the Sault canals is greater than that through Panama or the Suez canals, but in 1929 it was greater than the combined traffic through the other two.

The tonnage of freight received and shipped from Great Lakes ports that year exceeded that of the Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico and Pacific ports of the United States and the gross tonnage of the vessels employed in that traffic was greater than the merchant fleet of Holland and almost equal that of France.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

FIRST-AID MILESTONES

A friend just back from a visit to Germany tells me that when motor along certain country roads there came across several luminous milestones, which he was interested to discover serve as first-aid receptacles. The milestones are hollow, and a touch of a button causes them to open, displaying necessities for dealing with road accidents.—Glasgow Bulletin.

APPROPRIATE!

There is a sort of ironic appropriateness in the fact that a big part of the next war's munitions are being made from "scrap" iron.—Ottawa Citizen.

PARLIAMENT HILL HEARS . . .

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Leslie A. Mutch, who represents Winnipeg South in the House of Commons, tells a good story on himself arising out of his election campaign in 1935.

"Late at night I dropped into a small confectionery to buy a packet of cigarettes," he says. "The shopkeeper was a personal friend, and above the counter was displayed a large and flattering picture of myself."

"The night I entered the proprietor and the one other person in the store had been talking a great deal together, and were in the thick of a political argument."

"When I came in, the customer, a complete stranger to me, pointed to me and said: 'Now I'll bet that fellow's a politician!'"

"I was clear to me that I had the qualifications for the campaign I was engaged in."

"The proprietor turned to the customer. 'Don't you know him? That's the story of the people. I like his picture above the counter.'"

"The slightly inebriated gentleman looked me up and down, then studied the picture at some length," says the member for Winnipeg. "Then he turned again to me and said: 'Is that really your picture?'"

"Expansively, I agreed that it was."

"Well, he said, 'I hope you don't mind me saying so, but if that's really your picture I'd advise you for heaven's sake to distribute a lot more of them and stay at home yourself!'"

"Completely deflated," admits the member, "I turned homeward."

Leslie Mutch describes in entertaining language some of his own background and personality. "At the age of fourteen, in 1911, I participated in my first general election, and when the roll was called I sat down and wept for Canada. I swore then that when I saw a Tory head I would swear it. I'm still trying."

"At nineteen I stood on Parliament Hill, on route overseas, saw the ruins of the old buildings, and promised myself that if I lived I'd be back. Without any definite programme, I've been on the way since. In 1919 I have been active

PROMINENT PEOPLE OF THE EASTERN TOWNSHIPS

W. F. BOWLES, K.C.

When W. F. Bowles, K.C., decided to enter the legal profession he made a choice which has proved to be a most happy and successful one. Today at a comparatively young age he is engaged in the practice of his profession at Cowansville and is achieving outstanding success.

Mr. Bowles is another son of the Eastern Townships who has clung close to the scenes of his childhood, and the knowledge which he acquired in Canadian schools and colleges he is today devoting to the services of his country.

William Francis Bowles was born at Windsor Mills, the son of the late Michael Bowles and the late Charlotte Dearden Bowles. His father for many years owned a large departmental store in Windsor Mills and later was engaged in the same business in Lincoln, N.H., and Boston, Mass. Mr. Bowles' mother came from Richmond. She was the youngest daughter of the late William F. Dearden, for many years roadmaster for the Grand Trunk Railway between Richmond and Quebec.

Mr. Bowles first attended St. Charles Seminary, Sherbrooke, and from 1902 until 1907 was a student at St. Laurent College, Montreal. From 1907 until 1914 he was an under-graduate at St. Joseph's University, Memramcook, N.B., from which institution he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1915.

He then entered the Faculty of Law of McGill University, Montreal, in 1915 being graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Law. He began his legal career at Cowansville, where he has since practised with great success.

Mr. Bowles has acted as attorney for the Department of the Provincial Treasury and for the Quebec Liquor Commission and has represented the Provincial Department of Roads in expropriation cases and at various times served as Crown prosecutor for the District of Bedford.

The Dominion Government has also retained his services in excise and customs cases. On May 1, 1936, he was elected Barrister of the District of Bedford Bar Association, to which position he was re-elected on May 1, 1937.

He was also vice-president of the Cowansville Board of Trade; president of the Missisquoi County Liberal Association; vice-president of the McGill Graduates Society, District of Bedford; a member of the Board of Bar Examiners of the Province of Quebec and from 1933 until 1936 was solicitor at Cowansville for the Canadian Pacific Railway.

In 1931 he was appointed King's Counsel and has acted as solicitor for the Town of Cowansville since 1932. Since May 1, 1921, he has occupied the position of treasurer of the Bar Association.

In September, 1922, Mr. Bowles married Miss Mabel J. Foster, of Cowansville. Mr. and Mrs. Bowles have four children, twin daughters and two sons.

W. F. Bowles is a member of the Montreal Reform Club and is actively associated with all civic and community enterprises in Cowansville. A keen student, Mr. Bowles is interested in all matters of a public nature, politics being one of his chief concerns. During the World War he saw active service with the 1st Canadian Tank Battalion.

An interesting conversationalist, Mr. Bowles is capable of discussing any topic and is well versed on all subjects. He is thoroughly familiar with the French language, much of his legal work being done for French clients.

Broad-minded in his outlook on life, Mr. Bowles is extremely popular with citizens of all races and creeds, and his friendship is sought by all who enjoy one whose association is a pleasure on any occasion.

—J. K. Flaherty.

In every election, never before as a candidate, but always a worker in the field.

"If the depression was an accident, then my being here is an accident. I'm a political 'depression baby'. You remember the 'War Babies'."

Asked about his unfulfilled ambitions, the member replied: "I still long to be able to really enjoy laziness. I can be lazy but it isn't much fun. I should like very much to be an adept French linguist. Without French one is a foreigner in Ottawa. I'd honestly like to do something for poor thousands of people who believed in my sincerity and voted for me. I have no unfulfilled material ambitions—if I can't get what I want, I don't want it."

Concerning his hobbies: "I like my garden; in it I find relaxation. I like company, perhaps because I find people the most interesting subject in the world. I like to travel, because I like to meet new people and the exchange of opinions, or, as is often the case, of expressions which are not really opinions but in so many instances merely ideas."

Regarding his favorite reading: "It is a question of mood. Easier to say what I do not like. I do not like detective or mystery stories. I do not care for problem plays. In season I read some poetry. I like history—I taught it for years. It is the story of the people. I like historical novels, not too far removed from historical facts. There are to my mind only two reasons for reading: the acquiring of factual knowledge and relaxation. Perhaps I should add another, reading to catch the majesty and power of language, and for that, in my mind, the King James version of the Old Testament is beyond compare."

With so many political speculators busy choosing new leaders for the major parties, it is interesting to recall the words with which the late Sir Robert Borden told of his own choice as a leader of the Conservative party in 1901:

"I received intimation that the party members were to meet at Ottawa a few days before the opening of the session to consider the selection of a new leader. Sir George Foster, the most outstanding figure in the party, had been defeated in Saint John by Mr. Blair. Before this meeting I had no idea that the leadership would be offered to me."

"When we met at Ottawa on February 5, 1901, there was much declamatory discussion, and finally, to my amazement, I was proposed as leader. Expressing the astonishment which I naturally felt, as I had been in public life only four years, I told my fellow members that I could not possibly undertake the task."

"The discussion proceeded until a late hour without any result, and we adjourned until the following evening. At the adjourned meeting the proposal that I should be elected began to gather momentum."

"While I was endeavoring to postpone a decision, and, in company with the late W. F. Maclean, was engaged in drafting a proposal for delay, the members became more impatient. They insisted that a decision should be reached then and there. They urged that inability to select a leader at an adjourned meeting would be construed as lamentable weakness."

"Finally, under very strong pressure, I agreed to accept the task for one year and coupled my acceptance with the stipulation that, in the meantime, a committee should be appointed to select a permanent leader of great ability, experience and aptitude, one who would perhaps desire the position from which I shrank. This stipulation was accepted, but was not carried out. As I said later on, the Sons of Seruiah were too strong for me."

St. Paul's Idea Of Service

Acts XXVI, 23: "Whose I am and Whom I serve."

Writing to the Christian community in Rome, the Great Apostle gave free rein to his enthusiasm for the Cause to which he had devoted his life.

"I reckon," he cried, "that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us!"

In another of his letters on this occasion to the Corinthians, he tells all about these sufferings—the scourgings, the stonings, the imprisonments, the journeyings and perils by land and sea, which he had undergone in the course of his missionary labor.

But the apostle is speaking not in self-glorification, but in self-vindication; as he had heard that spurious teachers were masquerading in the City as followers of Christ. And, indeed, so unadorned, and so matter-of-fact is his account of these privations, that he apparently would suggest to his readers that something of the sort must be "reckoned" upon by any man who would undertake to bring to the heathen "the unsearchable riches of Christ."

This characteristically modest understatement of his achievements is one of the marks of the true greatness of the man.

Let us see how this is the case.

What could equal, for economy of detail the bald statement: "Thrice I suffered shipwreck; a day and a night I have been in the deep?" In fact, we are compelled to turn to the account of a friend and fellow-worker of St. Paul, and an eye-witness of all that happened, in order to realize what one of these three shipwrecks—or, more probably, a fourth—really meant!

For St. Luke has not the Apostle's reason for reticence; he has no objection to a moderate display of hero-worship, and so we have in this twenty-seventh chapter of the Acts of the Apostles a most stirring and vivid picture of a storm at sea. Day follows day of ceaseless tempest; neither sun nor stars appear, to guide the vessel on her course; captain and crew abandon all hope; only in the heart of one man can be seen confidence and composure—Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ! His voice rings clear and strong above the tumult of wind and wave, conveying a message from the God he serves, that no lives would be lost, though the ship herself must founder.

And, in the memory of the recorder of this incident, these words stand out: "Whose I am and Whom I serve." Perhaps, as never before, St. Luke recognizes the true greatness of the man whose fortunes he follows.

But, you may ask, wherein does true greatness lie? What makes a man "great"? Many would have us think that wealth contributes greatness, because of the great possibilities of good and evil the mere possession of riches affords; or because of the influence and social eminence it carries with it.

This conception of greatness, which is so characteristic of our age, was exposed as a fallacy by Our Lord, in his story of the gentleman who, embarrassed by supernatural means, refused to pull down his barns and build greater. His case was disposed of by the quiet unanswerable observation: "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things that he possesseth!" We readily admit that wealth may co-exist with greatness, but can in no wise confer it. Certainly, the term "great" does not rise spontaneously to our minds, as we read of the doings of New York's "Four Hundred," or the highly-remunerated favorites of the Cinema or the prize-ring!

Of course, it is not money, but the "love of money," that is the "root of all evil." It is the "love of money" that leads men to "love to the lowest propensities of human nature; it leads to the colossal piracies of fraudulent operators in the stock-market, as well as to the comparatively petty thieveries of the pick-pocket or the burglar."

This tendency on the part of our "advanced" and brilliant age to glorify the material and the temporal at the expense of the unseen and eternal has given us a false sense of values; it has also, incidentally, created a world-atmosphere out of which at any time may emerge the lightning and thunderings of war, and the shipwreck of our civilization. No, wealth and greatness are not necessarily related terms. For more appropriately may we apply the term "great" to the possessor of that incalculable power or quality that we call "genius"—the poet, the artist, the statesman. At any rate, the "gifts" of these favored ones are derived not from what they have, but from what they are. They are not external, but internal "goods."

We see, then, that in the eyes of many people, those may be styled "great" who, in virtue of their position and authority, or by the inborn quality we call "genius," are capable of achieving out-of-the-ordinary things.

This, however, is not the Bible's description of "greatness." Let us now return, for a few moments, to the reeling deck of the little sailing-vessel, driven by the tempestuous wind called "Euroclydon" towards the north-east coast of Malta.

Judged by the standards we have just been considering, the central figure in the story, the Christian missionary, could not be called "great." Certainly not because of any power or influence he could wield. The leading spirits among Jews and Gentiles alike looked on him as a "vain babbling and a settler forth of strange words."

Moreover, he was only a prisoner, and a bond-servant of his Lord. From the world's point of view, the Emperor Nero was a great man, vile though he was in character and life. But Nero only defiles History's pages as a monstrous thing of infamy—we, Paul, the prisoner, was truly "great."

Those remarkable words of his: "Whose I am and Whom I serve," let us into the secret of the grandeur and power of that consecrated life. For, undoubtedly, the man who could really live up to all that these words of our text imply must be a supremely great man; because such greatness as his does not depend on the mere accident of birth, nor even upon "genius," which may be misdirected and perverted to evil uses.

A really great man must be great in the character of his life. It is a matter of "character." Greatness of this sort is not the world's to give, nor within its power to take away. To such a man, of what account were revivings, tumults, strikes, imprisonments, perils by land and sea? In all the discords of this lower world, his soul is attuned to the Divine Harmonies. In the midst of storm he is at peace!

How sorely do we need something of that trustful, invincible spirit in these turbulent and precarious days! Looking out upon our world, we can see nothing but chaos and confusion, social and industrial unrest right at our doors, the natural result, the legitimate fruit of inordinate greed on the one hand, and bitter jealousy on the other.

Across the Atlantic Spain still holds the centre of the stage in a Europe seething with racial animosities and conflicting ideologies. If St. Paul were able to speak to us today, he would probably say: "Men and brethren, the only way to find peace in this world or the next is to make a practical application of the teachings of Jesus Christ, Whose I am and Whom I serve!"

All might yet be well with the world if all men would only realize that they are responsible to an Authority, as to Whose claims on their allegiance there can be no question, and in Whose service alone can they hope to attain their Highest Good. War would then become a thing abhorrent! Strife between capital and labor would cease. Why should a Christian seek to outwit or exploit another Christian? Why should any being worthy the name of "man" desire to cheat and oppress his neighbor? Such things would be simply unthinkable were we all of us loyal soldiers in the one great army, fighting against "principalities and powers of darkness" under the one glorious Banner of the Cross of Christ. We have, then, are, and Whom, whether we choose to admit it or not, it is both our privilege and our duty to serve and obey.

HELD INFORMAL INQUIRY INTO LOCAL MISHAP

Dr. J. A. Allard, of Bromptonville, Disposed of Balcony-Collapse Tragedy at Private Investigation — Declares There Was No Criminal Negligence.

Declaring that his private investigation had failed to uncover any trace of criminal negligence, Dr. J. A. Allard, of Bromptonville, joint-cornor for St. Francis District, explained to the Record this morning why he disposed of the balcony-collapse fatality without holding a formal inquest.

Suzanne Giroux, eighteen months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Giroux was killed Thursday evening when a third-storey balcony on the Mailbox building, corner of St. Edward and Marquette streets, collapsed and she was pitched to the pavement below with her mother and sister, Yolande. Mrs. Giroux and the elder daughter were severely bruised in the fall and taken to the St. Vincent de Paul Hospital. They were allowed to return to their home yesterday afternoon.

There are two coroners for St. Francis District. One is Eugene St. Pierre, attorney, of this city, and the other Dr. J. A. Allard, of Bromptonville.

Eugene St. Pierre learned of the fatality yesterday morning. He immediately communicated with Chief of Police H. O. Camirand and requested that a jury be assigned and witnesses contacted. He planned to open the inquest at two o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The Chief of Police assigned a constable to round up six jurymen and to notify the witnesses.

Preparations were going ahead nicely for the inquest—until a certain witness, namely, Dr. A. A. Mignault, was reached.

"What's this," he said, "a coroner's inquest?" He looked surprised. "Why Dr. Allard held an inquest last evening?"

His surprise was nothing compared with that of the Chief of Police and Coroner St. Pierre.

Dr. Mignault explained that the previous evening he had attended the victims and then notified Dr. Allard.

Dr. Allard has sped to Sherbrooke, held a inquest, exparte (without jurors) and decided that there was no necessity for a formal enquiry.

The Bromptonville physician explained to the Record this morning that upon reaching Sherbrooke he had held a private investigation and had decided there existed no criminal negligence, and that as a consequence no formal inquest should be held.

He has made his report to the Attorney-General's Department at Quebec.

CONTRACT LET FOR STAGE ON FAIR GROUNDS

Davey and Marchant Awarded Contract at $4,500 for Erection of Large Open-Air Theatre, Centenary Headquarters Announced this Morning.

Contract for the erection of the amphitheatre on the Exhibition Grounds, being built for the express purpose of staging the historical pageant during Sherbrooke's Centennial Celebration, was awarded this morning to the construction firm of Davey and Marchant at a cost of $4,500, it was announced at Centenary Headquarters by Organizer Leon Trepanier.

The contract calls for demolition of the ground and erection of an open-air theatre that will be the finest of its kind in the Dominion. It does not include the electric wiring and illumination fixtures.

Work on the stage, scheduled to be completed by July 15, will start immediately. The plans were prepared by Alphonse Belanger, local architect.

It was also announced this morning that Roy Laverdure had been awarded the contract for the making of flags and similar decorations for the city.

COMPTON GIRLS SCHOOL TO HAVE NEW BUILDING

Modern Gymnasium Building and Swimming Pool Will Be Erected at King's Hall — Contract Also Let for Asbestos Job.

King's Hall, Compton, is to have a modern gymnasium building and swimming pool erected in time for the fall term at a cost of approximately $35,000, it was announced this morning.

Contract for the building was let today to the Newton Construction Company, well-known construction firm that has returned to the local building field after an absence of several years.

The building will be 70 by 35 feet, with a standard-sized swimming pool in the basement and an up-to-date gymnasium containing galleries on the second floor. The first storey will be of brick construction and the second of asbestos shingles. Plans also call for a central heating system.

Work is scheduled to start within the next week.

The Newton Construction Company has also been awarded the contract for the erection of a power centre building for the Canadian Johns-Manville Company at Asbestos at a cost of about $20,000.

This will be a single storey structure, 70 by 30 feet.

The sub-contract for the steel work on this project has been awarded to Mackinnon Steel, of this city.

A. G. Sangster and Darel Darcy, two former Sherbrooke residents, who have been with the Newton firm at the Forkville Coal Mine, have returned to Sherbrooke with Mr. Newton, and are at present in charge of the Asbestos construction.

Miss F. MacDonald and Carl Jones, also former Sherbrooke residents, will handle the business of the Forkville Mine during Mr. Newton's absence.

Ayrshire Field Day June 23rd
At the farm of: WM. YOUNG & SON, COMPTON, QUE.
All Dairy Men Invited.

4% milk from an Ayrshire Cow is a real food; it is the ideal milk for human consumption. It gives Vim, Vigor and Vitality to all the family.

Horace J. Hawk, Physician in charge of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. Sanitarium at Winton, N.Y., states: "In stages of tuberculosis there is, not uncommonly, great difficulty in retaining food of any kind and recovery cannot progress without nourishment, the latter being absolutely essential in the treatment of this disease. In most cases of this kind we have found Ayrshire milk entirely acceptable for those suffering from this chronic disease."

This institution is using Ayrshire milk exclusively. The smooth creamy flavor of Ayrshire milk is delicious. The natural soft curd milk from selected Ayrshire cows is so easily digested.

IRISH SCHOOL HELD CLOSING LAST EVENING

Many Parents and Friends of Pupils Attended Closing Exercises at St. Patrick's Academy — Prizes Distributed.

St. Patrick's Academy terminated another successful year last evening when the closing exercises, featured by the distribution of prizes, were held in the school auditorium. An interesting programme, consisting of a three-act play, "Spook Island," and an operetta, "The Pirates of the Good Ship School," was presented by the students and proved delightful entertainment for the large attendance of parents and friends of the pupils.

Rev. Brother Alexis, principal of the Academy, presided over the closing exercises. T. G. Walsh, English-speaking representative on the Sherbrooke Catholic School Commission, represented the Board, and Fern Campbell, one of the founders of the school twenty-six years ago, was present on behalf of the school committee.

Bro. Alexis congratulated the members of the graduating class—six of whom had successfully written their matriculation examinations at the University of Bishop's College—and urged them to always uphold the honor and traditions of the school as they journeyed through life. He referred to the untimely passing of Mrs. D. J. McManus, and to the regrettable absence through illness of J. H. Walsh, chairman of the school board.

Principal Alexis also extended his congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Walsh upon the occasion of their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

He expressed thanks to the members of the school board for their untiring efforts towards the welfare of the Academy and the unfailing interest they ever take in its activities. He also referred to the promotion of J. Kenny Flaherty, a former student of the Academy and past president of the Old Boys' Association, to the position of editor and business manager of the Sherbrooke Record.

Remarks were made by T. G. Walsh and Fern Campbell. Students taking part in the play, "Spook Island," directed by Mrs. F. J. Doherty, were John McManus, Richard Hibbard, John Unsworth, Tom Bonner, Jr., Gerald Daniels, John Southern, John Walsh, Rudolph Lacasse, Conrad Noel and Harry Blue.

DEATHS REPORTED

JOHN B. TOWNE, GLENDALE, ARIZ., FORMERLY OF KINGSEY Kingsley, June 19. — John B. Towne, a native and former resident of this community, passed away at his home in Glendale, Ariz., on Saturday, June 12. Mr. Towne was stricken while at work in his yard and died before his wife could reach him. Funeral services were held from the J. S. Brazil chapel, Rev. Thomas F. Hughes, of Phoenix, Ariz., officiating. Interment was in the Glendale Memorial Park.

The deceased was born in Kingsley sixty-nine years ago and had resided in Montreal and Lennoxville during his life. At one time he was in the employ of the Q.C.R. Newington shops. He left Lennoxville nine years ago for Arizona, where he was a member of the Glendale Episcopal Church and the Fraternal Aid Lodge at the time of his death.

Surviving are his wife, Frances E. Towne; a daughter, Doris, of Los Angeles, Calif.; a son, Gordon, of Kapuskasing, Ont.; a sister, Mrs. James Plamondon, of Sherbrooke, and a brother, Frank Towne, of Ennisville, Man.

VERNON CLELAND SHUFFELT, KNOWLTON Knowlton, June 19. — The community was both shocked and grieved to hear of the tragic death of Vernon Shuffelt on Monday morning, June 7, 1937.

The funeral was held at the United Church, Sutton, on June 11. Rev. Mr. Mitchell, of Knowlton, offered prayers at the home and was assisted by Rev. Mr. Mallalieu at Sutton.

Interment was in Fairmount Cemetery, where he was laid to rest by six friends, namely Messrs. George Westover and Nelson Parth, of East Hill, Spencer Smith and Carl Bennett, of Sutton, Herbert Derby, of Brombe, and Lester Ball, of Knowlton.

The choir rendered two beautiful hymns, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past" and "Lead Kindly Light."

The deceased was born in Dunham, Que., December 5, 1879. At the age of eleven the family moved to Sutton where he lived until six years ago when he came to Knowlton, where he had since resided. On June 5, 1901, he married Patty Aseltine, having two children, The younger, Donald, predeceased him in 1922. He is survived by his widow, one son, Clayton, of Detroit, Mich., two brothers, John and Charles, of Sutton.

The large funeral cortege and beautiful flowers, including some from Farnham, Dunham, Cowansville and Richmond, Vt., were testimony of the esteem of the many friends of the deceased.

Notice is hereby given that tenders will be received by the undersigned, from this date until July 2nd, 1937, at noon, at his office in Lennoxville, for the construction of a bridge in Lennoxville, P.Q., and copies can be obtained from the Department of Public Works, Government Offices, Quebec.

It is understood that the old bridge remains the property of the municipalities interested, which can dispose of it at their pleasure, after the tenders have been opened.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted by the Council.

An accepted cheque, equal to 10% of the total amount of the tender must be sent with each tender.

Given at Lennoxville this 14th June, 1937. LOUIS ROUSSE, Sec.-Treas., Lennoxville, P. Q.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC, City of Sherbrooke.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION SAINT-JEAN-BAPTISTE DAY

In order that the whole population may take part in the celebration of Saint-Jean-Baptiste Day, June 24th next, I hereby proclaim this day, a Civic Holiday and request that all the citizens observe it as such.

I recommend that all employers close their doors on that day in order that all their employees may attend this celebration.

Given at Sherbrooke, this 10th day of June 1937. EMILE RIOUX, Mayor.

Attractions At The Local Theatres

At The Granada

Lavish in spectacle and featuring a galaxy of stars, "Top of the Town," beginning at the Granada Theatre tomorrow, is a musical extravaganza featuring Dora Nolan and George Murphy, two of Broadway's stage favorites.

"Top of the Town," tells the story of a beautiful girl with $50,000, who decides to become the Joan of Arc of night clubs and elevate the entertainment with good-looking George Murphy who is maestro of an exclusive night club.

Sparkling with seven great songs written by the famed musical composers Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson, Hollywood's ace song writers, "Top of the Town," will present musical numbers which will become outstanding. The songs include "Blame It on the Rumba," "Top of the Town," "That Foolish Feeling," "There Are No Two Ways About It," "Jamboree," "Where Are You," "Fireman, Fireman Save My Child."

More than two hundred dancers appear in musical sequences of "Top of the Town," with Hollywood's famous beauties appearing in the chorus line.

"The League of Frightened Men," a Nero Wolfe mystery starring Walter Connolly and Lionel Stander, is the added attraction.

ANITA LOOS' SARATOGA

Illustrated by Vincentini

THE STORY THUS FAR

Beautiful Carol Clayton is engaged to Hartley Madison, young charming and wealthy. She has met him during her two-year stay in England. The trip had been granted her by her indulgent father, Jim Clayton, and her grandfather, Duke. Carol is enthralled with the future that lies before her. Always she has wanted to escape from "horse folks"; from the famous Brookdale Farm in Saratoga that has been the Clayton home for three generations. On the night of her engagement she telephones home. Duke Bradley, a young book-maker, answers the call. Feeling that she has neglected her father, he brutally tells her to come home. Only Duke knows that Jim has a bad heart and is worried about the $75,000 he owes Duke for which he has given him a mortgage on Brookdale as security.

CHAPTER III.

Although they sailed home within two days and on the fastest boat ever built, the voyage seemed almost endless to Carol. She urged Hartley not to cut short his vacation, she would be quite all right, especially as one of her teachers would be on the boat to chaperone her. But he would not hear of being separated from her. Before they left, she had spoken over the phone to her father and his voice reassured her. She said playfully she would like to have him send a radio to her each day, so people would know she was important. Surely, she would say to herself when fear refused to be banished, everything was all right; it was only that horrible upstart of a Duke Bradley who for some reason had wanted to hurt her.

They were to arrive in Saratoga on one of the big race days of the season. Trains were too slow, only a plane would be an antidote to Carol's impatience. When their car stopped at Brookdale, Carol had jumped out almost before it stopped. The door was open and she ran in, only to run out again, her face glowing with happiness.

"They're at the races," she cried. "So Daddy must be all right."

Carol was conscious of the sensation they created when they reached the track. Perhaps she held her head a little higher than usual, perhaps there was a little more of the she believed to be an Oxonian accent when she spoke to old friends who greeted her, perhaps she was a trifle too graciously formal to people she had known all her life. Hartley's distinction, his knowledge that no woman in all the gay crowd was more beautiful or more smartly gowned than she, the excitement of coming back in triumph may have turned her head.

There were raised eyebrows and shrugs of shoulders as they pushed their way through the crowd, and even the most sensitive critic would have had nothing to find fault with when she saw her grandfather.

"You old darling," she said, running to him. "How are you—did you get my message I'd be here—where's Daddy—any of the horses I know running—"

"Humph," said the old man, "you can talk as fast as ever, even if you do some kind of funny. And stop hugging me and introduce this young man. Seems to me we should know each other."

"I have completely lost my head," said Carol, as the two men shook hands.

"Never had any to lose, I'd say," grunted the old man.

"And Rosetta, you darling—Hartley, this is my nurse. How I got along without her these two years I don't know, but when we're married, she's coming with me, aren't you, you bossy old thing."

"I sure is honey," said the beaming Rosetta.

Suddenly Carol cried. "But, Daddy! Isn't he here? Is he in the hospital or—"

"Are you plain lovely," answered her grandfather. "Whatever would he be in a hospital for? He wasn't quite up to scratch a while back—nothing serious—I'd have let you know, if it had been. He's where you might know he'd be, up at the tracks and time we got there, too, if we want to see the Grand Hotel stakes. Do as you like of course—you always have and always will—but I intend to see that race."

Carol had never been more angry in her life. Her rage swept away the relief she felt at her grandfather's words. So—her father had not been really ill. When she met that Duke Bradley—

Then she saw her father and her first thought was, "Oh, he looks so much older—and grayer—and—"

"Daddy," she cried and ran into his outstretched arms. "Oh, darling, darling, was I ever glad to see anyone before in all my life?"

She was so excited she couldn't introduce her father and her fiancé. For one awful moment she thought she was going to weep for joy. She was saved by a gay young voice, saying:

"As self-introductions seem to be in order—Miss Clayton, may I present Duke Bradley?"

Instantly her poised returned. She nodded and flashed a smile which was too brilliant at times.

"Of course," Duke went on, "this is really superfluous—we have introduced ourselves before—do you remember our telephone conversation?"

"How could I ever forget it?" she asked in a voice too sweet.

"And now, Hartley, this is evidently Mr. Bradley; Mr. Bradley, this is Mr. Madison."

"If we're going to see that race," complained the elder Mr. Clayton.

"What's your horse, Daddy?" asked Carol. I want—

"Duke, you old goat!" Fritz screamed, throwing his arms around him.

"I'll be pleased to take your bet," said Duke.

"To know which horse to watch and cheer for," she said, as if she had not heard Duke.

"After the races, Duke counted out a big roll of bills to Jim Clayton."

"See, Jim, just as I said, your luck's changing."

"And the law of averages, eh?" he said teasingly. "Of course I won—Carol brought me luck. A little time and maybe—"

"Maybe what, darling?" asked Carol who had just come up.

"Maybe we'll all go to the clubhouse and have a drink on us to celebrate everything. Finished, Duke?"

"Almost. You two go on; I'll catch up with you."

Carol waited until they were out of Duke's hearing, before she spoke.

"Daddy, how come you're so friendly with that man? He's not our kind."

"If it's Duke you're talking about, honey, you've sized him up wrong—or us. If we're straight, decent, clean, loyal, he is our kind. What makes you think he isn't?"

"He's crude. And egotistical. He evidently has an idea he is handsome."

Jim laughed heartily. "He'd be in a minority of one, if he didn't. You should see how he slays the women, whatever their class, their age or—"

Duke's joining them cut the rest of the sentence. Toward them came a woman, flashily as to clothes, loud as to voice.

"Duke, you old goat!" she screamed, throwing her arms around him.

"Fritz O'Malley," he cried, returning her kiss, before he presented her to the Claytons.

"Duke, guess what? I'm going to marry a cold cream guy with all the money in the world—and he hates horses—but he's a ducky dear and is going to buy me a stable."

"Wonderful, Fritz! Just too wonderful I say. You and Miss Clayton here have a lot in common—she is going to be married, too."

"That rates a kiss, don't it, dearie?" Fritz said, throwing her arms around Carol. "I hope you'll be as happy as I know I'm going to be."

"Thank you," Carol managed to say. "I wish you much happiness, too!"

"You'll join us, won't you, Miss O'Malley?" said Jim Clayton. "I'm staging a little party at the clubhouse."

"Thanks a million, but I have to find my gang—but I'll toddle along with you. A few questions I want to ask Duke here, about horses."

Jim Clayton felt Carol's hand pressing his arm again. Now they could talk again for a moment. There was something he wanted to say to her. He spoke in a low voice full of feeling.

"That was decent of you honey. I know you didn't like it, but that Fritz person didn't and that's what matters."

"It was outrageous," she said. "Oh, that's putting it pretty strong. Of course," chuckling, "I did think for a moment her onslaught would knock you down and that Duke or I would have to rescue you."

"Duke? He loved it. I saw a wide grin on his face."

"Well, it was funny in a way. Listen, Carol, you mustn't take it too seriously. Duke didn't lose your sense of humor over there in London, did you? I've always heard they were shy on humor."

"I don't think common, noisy, cheap people are funny," she said.

"She's not exactly what one would call refined, I admit and I'm glad you are different—just happen to like your type better. But I'd say her heart was both big and warm."

"But, Daddy, you can't be blaming me for not liking to associate with such a person, surely."

"I'm not blaming you for anything, but Carol dear, I'll be more disappointed than I can tell you, if you go high-hat. I wanted you to get away from this gypsy life of ours and you've done it. But I'd rather you'd be like Fritz O'Malley than to be snobbish and unkind or forget that good manners aren't all one needs."

"Daddy, you're precious," she said. "You can scold me whenever you want to, but no one else can."

Suddenly she felt him sway. She looked up in his face and just managed to keep from crying out in terror.

"Sorry," he gasped. "Just a little faint—help me to that chair."

Duke was beside them without being called.

"Here, old man," he said quietly. "Let me help you. Too much excitement for one day and your stomach out of order."

Carol—"Run to the clubhouse and get some bicarbonate and a glass of water. That's all he needs, but he needs it in a hurry."

He lowered Jim into a chair and stood looking down at him. With his lips he motioned to Hartley Madison who had come up, to get a doctor.

"Easy, old man," he said softly, as he fanned Jim with a newspaper he picked up from the ground. "You know bicarb always turns the trick and it will be here in a minute."

"She's swell, that daughter of mine, isn't she," whispered Jim Clayton. "They don't come any better. But—she's so young—so much to learn about life—Duke, if ever she needs help—"

"Of course, Jim," Duke said and his voice sounded casual. "But I won't if you don't keep quiet now. You know you should be absolutely still for a few minutes; then you'll be—"

He looked in his friend's face and stopped. Hartley Madison and the doctor came running toward them. In the distance he could see Carol. Duke looked at the doctor. One glance was enough.

"Madison," said Duke. "Take Carol home. And you'll have to break it gently to Grandfather—Jim and I didn't let him know this might happen any minute. I'll attend to everything."

Tragedy had entered into Carol's life on her very first day back home. Will it change the course of her plans and affect her marriage with Hartley? Don't miss Monday's amazing disclosures.

MORE RUSSIANS ARE CONDEMNED FOR SABOTAGE

Reports from Asiatic Russia Are Not Very Clear About What Has Become of Large Number of Prisoners Rounded Up in Latest Raids.

Moscow, June 19.—An undisclosed number of supposed counter-revolutionary wreckers have been arrested and condemned at Tashkent, in Asiatic Russia, it was disclosed today.

Seven officials of the Middle Asia Railway shops have been convicted on charges of sabotage. Reports also referred to others but were not clear as to the extent of the roundup of alleged saboteurs. Neither were they clear about what had become of the prisoners.

The railway newspaper, Gudok, charged the shops at Tashkent, an important city on the Middle Asia line, were "overcrowded with criminal elements" who succeeded in paralyzing dozens of locomotives by impeding repairs.

An official named Nered, said to be the director in charge of the shops, was held responsible for sabotage even to the extent of shielding known wreckers after they had been exposed.

SURVEY MARKET FOR CANADIAN FARM PRODUCE

Agriculture Department Officials Seek to Co-ordinate Canadian Production with Demand from Old World Countries.

Montreal, June 19.—A delegation of officials of the Dominion Department of Agriculture sailed yesterday for the United Kingdom where it will survey markets for Canadian agricultural products and study market requirements so Canada may be guided in her production policies.

A. M. Shaw, director of the Department's marketing services, headed the party which will follow up the marketing programme arranged by Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, as a result of his visit to the United Kingdom last summer.

Mr. Shaw said investigation will be made of existing market requirements and of prospective markets for Canadian agricultural products in Britain with the objective of providing grades of Canadian farm products with regard to condition and quality suitable for the overseas market.

Demands of consumers in general and in special districts in Great Britain will be particularly investigated by the delegation. Conditions under which beef and dairy cattle, bacon and hams, cheese and butters, fruits, vegetables, dressed poultry, eggs and seed can best be shipped to the British market will come under review, said Mr. Shaw.

In addition to Mr. Shaw, members of the delegation are J. F. Singleton, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner; J. E. Lindner, Glen Williams, Ont.; R. A. Wright, Drinkwater, Sask., president Western Canada Livestock Union, L. W. Pearsall, Assistant Chief Markets Service, livestock branch, and R. M. Scott, chief of Markets Information Service.

The delegation will spend about six weeks in the United Kingdom. Later Mr. Singleton will go to Berlin as Canada's representative to the World's Dairy Congress, being held from August 22 to 28.

60% of Teachers' Ills In the form of nervous breakdown

And is it any wonder when you consider the constant high nervous tension under which the teacher works. Two or three children in the home can bring enough worries, but with classes of forty or fifty to discipline and instruct the strain is enormous.

Much the same percentage applies to business and professional men, especially during the troublous times of recent years.

The result is sleeplessness, irritability, digestive troubles, tired feelings, ill temper and susceptibility to colds and other germ diseases.

The dependable treatment for nervous exhaustion is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. A great many teachers, as well as people in other callings, have learned to trust to this great restorative to bring back health and vigor and the energy necessary for the daily work and the enjoyment of life. Just put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to a test and you will understand why it is so generally used to restore vigor to the nervous system.

Dick Tracy—Men Wanted

CARDS AND RED SOX PROVIDING CHIEF THRILLS

St. Louis and Boston Teams Have Suddenly Become Hottest in Their Respective Leagues—Giants Surrendered National League Leadership to Cubs.

This baseball business gets funnier and funnier. You never know what to expect next.

A club will stagger along for weeks with a pitching staff that's a "cousin" to every other outfit in the league. Then, all of a sudden, from the same set of elbows who floundered around so feebly, the same club will come up with a group of starters who are murder to the opposition.

Take the recent cases of the St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Red Sox for example. They appeared headed for nowhere in a hurry only two weeks ago. The "Gas House Gang," with Dizzy Dean doing most of the heavy duty, had dropped to fourth place. The Red Sox, with Lefty Grove slowing up and Wes Ferrell faltering, were under .500 per cent. and deep in the second division.

Suddenly, both clubs have become the hottest in their respective leagues, all because of the mysterious coming to life of a pitching "big three" on each outfit.

Lon Warneke hit a winning stride and rookie Bob Weiland uncovered a lot of southpaw ability to help Dean. As a result, the Cards have won eleven of their last thirteen starts.

The Red Sox, with Grove returning to form and aided by young Jack Wilson and Buck Newsom, who was received in trade for Ferrell, have taken six of their last seven games. They shot a five to four win over the slipping Cleveland Indians yesterday.

Only two Cards' pitchers have failed to go the route. Dean finished three of four starts, winning three; Warneke went nine innings twice out of three times, winning two, and Weiland went in the post four times and finished on each occasion dropping one.

He maintained his record yesterday with an eight-strikeout performance as the "Gas House Gang" clubbed the Boston Bees by five to two. With that win the pitchers have turned in a record of ninety-four hits allowed fifty-nine strikeouts and thirty-two runs in 104 innings during the Cards' stretch.

The Red Sox flingers stopped the enemy with forty-three hits and twenty-five strikeouts in the six games preceding yesterday's clash. In that engagement Fritz Ostermuller was unable to follow his predecessors, bowing out in the seventh inning, but the Sox came from behind anyway to win.

The Cincinnati Reds drove Carl Hubbell from the hill in less than three innings for a five to three win behind Leo Grissom. This setback sank the Giants to a full game back of the National League leading Cubs whose ninth-inning rally beat the Phillies by eight to seven.

The Pirates whipped Van Mungo

and the Brooklyn Dodgers by six to four. Oral Hildebrand posted a two-hit shutout, pitching the St. Louis Browns to a six to nothing win over Washington. The White Sox-Yankee game was rained out.

NEWARK BOASTS SEVERAL OUTSTANDING ROOKIES

Not only are the Newark Bears running away from all opposition in the International League, but to the chagrin of most of the other clubs they're coming up with some of the top rookies of the season.

Outstanding among the Bruins' youthful crop are Joe Gordon, a flashy second-sacker, who experts say will be in Tony Lazzeri's shoes on the New York Yankees whenever Tony finally slips; Jimmy Gleason, a first-pitcher; Gene Kelleher, a hard-hitting third baseman; Buddy Rosar, a kid backstop with great potentialities; but perhaps the most promising of them all is Atley Donald, the Bears' brilliant right-hander.

Donald, brought up from Binghamton of the New York-Penn League this season, is leading the loop's pitchers with a perfect record of ten victories. He's been battered off the mound several times but in each case the powerful Bruin attack was capable of making up any deficit he left.

Victory No. ten last night was his best performance of the season. The team right-hander blanked the Rochester Red Wings with three hits as the Bears won by two to nothing. He fanned six, walked none and faced only twenty-eight batters to chalk up his second shutout.

Fine hurling was the keynote of the rest of the games played in the circuit. The Buffalo Bisons took both ends of a night bargain bill by four to nothing and four to two from Syracuse behind the veteran Ken Ash and Bob Kline. Jersey City's Giants broke a five-game losing streak with a four to three win over Montreal.

Ash limited the Chiefs to four hits in the seven-inning opener, while "Big Bob" was touched for eight in the windup. The Bisons came through with three-run splurge in the sixth inning of both contests to take care of the offensive support.

Rollie Stiles, the Giants' veteran right-hander, was rapped for ten hits by Royals but was at his best in the pinches.

Threatening weather, held back the Toronto Leafs and Baltimore Orioles from seeing action for the second straight night.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Outstanding players in yesterday's major league games were:

Augie Galan, Cubs: His triple with the bases loaded in the ninth inning beat the Phillies by eight to seven.

Leo Grissom, Reds: Stopped the Giants with five hits for five to three win.

Moore Berg, Red Sox: Hit a double and a single, driving in three runs in five to four victory over the Indians.

Al Todd, Pirates: His triple, double and single and drove in two runs in six to four win over the Dodgers.

Bob Weiland, Cardinals: Fanned eight in stopping the Bees by five to two.

Oral Hildebrand, Browns: Shut out the Senators by six to nothing with two hits.

MATCHING MORPHEUS

THREE HURLERS ARE SIGNED BY LOCAL SQUAD

Addition of a Trio of Pitchers Should Make Sherbrooke One of the Strongest Entries in the Provincial Baseball League.

Determined to field a winning team in the Provincial Baseball League, the Sherbrooke team has signed three new pitchers, Paul Ryan, Ted Mallett and George Giovannangeli.

Drastic changes in the past two weeks have resulted in a brand new infield, a combination that clicked in sparkling style in Thursday's victory over Drummondville, and if the new fingers live up to expectations, Sherbrooke will have a strong, well-balanced squad.

Snapping out of their slump last Sunday when they split a twin bill with Three Rivers, the locals have taken three of the four games played this week, one from the trifluvia and two from Drummondville.

Tomorrow they clash with the loop-leading Granby nine in a double-header, the first game here at two p.m., and the second a night fixture in Granby. Skip Curtis, a pitcher recently released by the Sherbrooke club, has joined the Granby aggregation.

One of the three new hurlers, Paul Ryan, is already here and the other two are expected to be on hand before game time tomorrow.

CHAMPION MAY CHANGE STYLE AGAINST LOUIS

In Last Two Drills Braddock Discarded Left Hand Safety Valve to Charge in and Wage Aggressive Two-Fisted War Against His Five Sparring Partners.

Grand Beach, Mich., June 10.—Just how James J. Braddock proposes to fight Joe Louis in their heavyweight title contest in Comiskey Park, Chicago, next Tuesday night, remained the big mystery of the champion's camp today.

Usually Braddock relies upon a long, straight left to keep his man on the defensive while he wades in and punches away with his favorite weapon—a right-hand belt—but the Irishman's tactics in recent drills indicate he may have other plans in the back of his curly head.

Last Tuesday and again on Thursday, Jim virtually discarded his left hand safety valve to charge in and wage an aggressive two-fisted war against his five sparring partners. Instead of staying mostly on the defensive while seeking openings for his right, the champion has taken the initiative and has carried the fighting to his shock absorbers.

Incidentally, it may be said that in doing so he fared much better than when following the lines of caution he employed to outpoint Max Baer for the title two years ago.

Jimmy has insisted all along he detected weaknesses in the Bomber's attack and defense and this new style of battling may be in line with what he feels is the best plan of strategy for the first defence of his title.

The champ went to work today after a twenty-four hour lay-off during which he took a walk in the woods, played his portable phonograph, read a mystery story and developed one of the finest "edges" of any heavyweight in recent years.

His trainers feel Jimmy is in exactly the right mood to give the account of himself against the hard-hitting Louis next week.

LOUIS CONFIDENT HE WILL WIN IN ONE ROUND

Kenosha, Wis., June 10.—Joe Louis observed the first anniversary of his knockout defeat by Max Schmeling today with the very unwilling prediction that he was confident he could knock James J. Braddock kicking within one round.

"I think I can get Braddock in one round," drawled the Dark Angel. "I feel one hundred per cent. better than I did a year ago. I've learned a lot and punch as hard or harder than ever."

If Louis makes good in his prediction he will smash all records for winning the most coveted and valuable prize for a monetary basis in sport. No man ever has won the crown within three years of campaigning and no man has succeeded in dethroning a champion within three minutes.

Most experts seem convinced Louis will have to polish off Braddock within one to four rounds or not at all. In the few fights Louis has been forced to work overtime, he has appeared listless and slow. Bob Pastor might have scored a victory over the Bomber in their track meet because Joe was tired and missing like a 1936 steam engine from the sixth round.

Up here, where Louis is reaching his peak with perfect timing, the belief is that Braddock, always a shaky starter and a grand finisher, will try to stall and spar over the first four rounds and then open up if he lasts that long. So, trainer Jack Blackburn expects to send the Bomber out swinging.

"Joe's going to watch his defence," said Blackburn, "but he's going to crowd right in. I always said any man can get licked with one good punch and our idea is to have Joe get in the first lick."

CANADIANS ARE FAVORITES FOR ROWING HONORS

Experts Concede Canada Her Best Chance for Victory in Diamond Sculls at Royal Henley Regatta Since Bob Pierce Won Trophy in 1931.

Henley-on-Thames, England, June 10.—With the Royal Henley Regatta drawing close, rowing experts looked over the field for the diamond sculls today and conceded Canada her best chance of victory since Bob Pierce won the trophy in 1931 and took it to his adopted city, Hamilton, Ont.

The two Toronto oarsmen entered—C. A. Campbell, of the Don Rowing Club, and J. E. Coulson, of the Argonaut Rowing Club—can't both win, but the chance of their taking the first two places is considered a possibility.

Only three Canadians have triumphed in the gruelling pull over one mile and 550 yards. Dates of the regatta are June 30, July 1, 2 and 3. "Silent Chuck" Campbell, Canadian and United States singles champion in 1935 who placed fourth last year in the Olympic final, is held to have the edge over his fellow Canucks if he can control temperament and avoid running afoul of race officials.

Coulson is experienced in English rowing, having staged a brilliant campaign there last summer. His successes included the Kingston sculls, the London Cup and the senior sculling title at the Molesey regatta. In the diamond sculls, he jacked caught up with him when he snapped an oarlock in his first heat.

Winner of the famous trophy for the last two years, the Swiss oarsman, E. Ruffli, of the Zurich Rowing Club, is not entered in this year's competition.

Despite the withdrawal of its chief hope, H. L. Warren, through illness, Britain will put a formidable array of contenders on the river. Rated one of the best of the home contingent is P. H. Jackson, of the London Rowing Club.

The pupil of the veteran Eric Phelps and leading German sculler, Georg Von Opel is another entry to be reckoned with. Von Opel has an impressive record but suffered defeat by Warren earlier this year.

Outside the diamond sculls the foreign challenge is scanty. A Tabac Academy eight from the United States will defend the Thames Challenge Cup against a fast fleet of British boats.

The surprise of the entry list is the absence of the Zurich Rowing Club, holders of the Grand Challenge Cup for eight and the Steward's Cup for four without cox.

DEATH REMOVES OLDEST FIGURE FROM DOMINION

John Birch Passed Away Near North Bay After Brief Illness Contracted Shortly Before 114th Birthday.

North Bay, Ont., June 10.—Believed Canada's oldest man, John Birch, one hundred and fourteen years old passed away yesterday at his Nipissing Junction home near here. The Crimean War veteran whose only explanation of his longevity was "I guess they have no room for me in heaven," celebrated his birthday last June 3rd, in his sickbed.

The old man who watched the progress of the Dionne quintuplets, born near his modest farm home, until shortly before death, gradually became weaker and died peacefully, as he had been able to do for several previous milestones in his life.

Death of Birch, a native of Russia, left old-age honors for Nipissing district to Simon Commanda, 110-year old former chief of the Nipissing Indian Reserve. The old Indian is reported recovering from a serious illness and he may now be the oldest living man in the Dominion.

Dr. Allan Roy Daffoe, physician to the quints, attended Birch for his only other serious illness, an influenza attack in 1922. The illness left him deaf but he was in full possession of his other faculties. He accustomed an interviewer by threading a needle on his 112th birthday.

The old man did not look upon his great age as anything out of the ordinary. "God will send for me and I'll be glad to go," he said, but he hoped he would again be able to face photographers' cameras, a usual birthday event, and something he was unable to do as his 114th birthday slipped by.

He often recalled the journey to this country which took six weeks in a risky sail boat when he was "just a kid"—he was forty-three years old although he spoke little Russian, to the end he said his prayers in his native tongue. He swore allegiance to the British flag in Pembroke, Ont., his first Canadian home.

"I met Smith yesterday looking very dismal. He told me he paid $20 for his daughter's education lessons, and now he's sorry he did so."

"Why?"

"That girl now has all her own way, because she can talk him into anything!"

JAILED FRENCH EDITOR SEEKS NOBEL HONORS

Supporters of Royalist Publisher Declare that His Battle Against Application of Sanctions Against Italy Prevented European War.

Paris, June 10.—An imprisoned French Royalist leader has become a candidate for the 1937 Nobel Peace Prize.

Frail, deaf Charles Maurras, serving concurrent sentences of eight and three months for provocation to murder Premier Leon Blum and other French socialists, is scheduled to be released later this month. To celebrate his freedom and rebuke the Government a committee of writers, scholars and professors is booming him for the prize.

Maurras' colleagues nominated him for his editorials in the Royalist newspaper l'Action Francaise.

The editorials which brought about Maurras' imprisonment called his followers to sharpen their kitchen knives for use against the Socialists unless they ceased their sanctions campaign against Italy. Followers of the sixty-nine year old Royalist maintain he prevented a war with Italy.

Maurras was imprisoned October 29, 1936, but remains active in his small, comfortable cell at the Sainte prison. He writes steadily and receives groups of his followers daily.

When his prison term ends, he will return, his associates say, to l'Action Francaise, of which he is a political director with Leon Daudet.

While the paper's evening goal has been coronation of the Duc de Guise, pretender to the Throne, it has turned more directly to the task of fighting the People's Front Government.
