EDUCATION.

MRS. STURTON continues to receive a limited number of Young Ladies to Board and Baccate, in addition to her daily Pupils. The course of instruction comprises English, including Composition, Astronomy, Botany, &c.; French by a Professor; Italian and Latin; Music, Drawing and Painting. The French, Italian and Drawing Classes are open to ladies desiring to pursue any of these branches of study exclusively.

MRS. STURTON undertakes to finish the education of those entrusted to her care; having been for many years the principal of a first class School in England.

The advantages offered in this School for the acquisition of French are very great, as the "polite language" is spoken exclusively by the members of the family. As the chief object of this School is to enable young Ladies to perfect themselves in the use of French, no pains are spared for their thorough and rapid advancement. Being aware also that many, while devoting themselves to this branch, are desirous of not neglecting other ornamental ones, the services of competent Teachers have been secured for Music, Drawing and Painting.

50 St. Maurice Stoves, assorted sizes, single and double.
For sale by JOHN PATTERSON.
Sept. 17, 1858.

The case of this Defendant stands upon very different grounds. He resigned his office of Attorney General on the 29th July. On the 6th August he accepted the office of Postmaster General, (for which, no doubt, he was admirably qualified), and on the same day and within a few hours, he tried that office, and returned to his old office of Attorney General. He was charged with an infraction of the statute, by reason of his having sat and voted in the Assembly after he had accepted of the Postmaster-Generalship, and also by reason of his having sat and voted therein, after his subsequent acceptance of the Attorney-Generalship. His liability on the first charge must be determined by the record as submitted to the Court for judgment. There is nothing in the mere act of acceptance of the first office, (weighing it at the moment of the acceptance), which impeaches the bona fides of that act, and the pleadings did not charge it to have been made fraudulently or collusively. But his resignation of that office, and his acceptance on the same day, and almost in the same breath, of the office of Attorney General, causes the mind to revert back to the moment of his acceptance of the office of Postmaster General, and has a most significant bearing upon the good or bad faith of that act. It was not charged, however, that the acceptance of the first office was fraudulent, nor that the pretended "holding" of that office for a few hours was also fraudulent; and the Court, moreover, could not decide that matter of fact, having no violent presumption in its favor, without the intervention of a jury. It is for this reason, probably, that the Court could not, or rather would not, draw any distinction between the case of Vankoughnet for a single infraction of the statute, and the double infraction case of Macdonald. It can be seen, from the reasons assigned by Chief Justice Draper, which certainly savour more of judicial subtilty than true logic, considerable stress is laid upon the meaning of the word "when," as employed in the 7th section of the act, and the Court, in its decision, are passing over the fact of the

by the verdict of a jury, the defendants would assuredly have been mulcted in the penalties and that their acts and doings will be characterized as disgraceful in men standing in the position of advisers of the Sovereign and representatives of the people, and also a most daring violation of the inalienable rights of British subjects.

THE BURNS' FESTIVAL.

The Centenary Burns' Festival is over—it has become a fait accompli—and we must congratulate the Committee of Management on the very able manner in which they performed their many and laborious duties, the great success which has crowned their exertions, and the universal expressions of satisfaction elicited from all who had the pleasure of enjoying the benefit of their admirable arrangements. The getting up of this festival has been marked by an earnest enthusiasm unparalleled, we believe in any public movement which has hitherto taken place in our ancient city. The workings of political Committees sink into insignificance when compared with the exertions of that which took upon itself the arrangements in connection with this demonstration, and no excitement or enthusiasm got up for partizan purposes was ever carried out with such unflinching zeal and earnestness as characterized the Burns' Committee; and at a time when wherever a Scottish foot presses the soil of this habitable globe, or a Scottish heart beats on the surface of its oceans, Scotchmen strive to do their best to give due honor to the name and fame of Burns—a name and fame dear to every heart which beats in union with all that is high and ennobling, living and kindly in human nature the Scotchmen of Quebec ought to feel proud that the work fell into such able hands, and executed in a manner redounding so much to the honor of the "Mighty Minstrel," and of the city, resulting as it did in an avation such as Quebec never before witnessed. Every thing was auspicious in connection with the affair. Yesterday, Nature herself seemed determined to do honor to the birth-day of him who has so truly been called her favorite bard, and the sun shone down upon the earth with a geniality more resembling a day in a Scottish spring than one in a Canadian January; the evening was delightfully mild, and the consequent enjoyment was doubly enhanced.

The appearance of the Music Hall was very brilliant; indeed, it was remarked by many, experienced in those things, that the hall never before had been so tastefully decorated. The galleries round the hall were hung with tartan arranged in tasteful festoons; upon the walls at the back of the galleries were displayed banners on which were emblazoned the Royal Arms of Scotland, Scotland's patron saint, St. Andrew, the national emblem, the Thistle, the Red Cross of St. George, the flags of Green Erin, and in the centre, bearing the stage, was a tastefully arranged bouquet of standards composed of the British, American, and French ensigns, while, jutting out from the galleries into the body of the hall the colors of Canadian Militia regiments—once dating as far back as 1775—drooped gracefully from their sloped staves. Below, on each side of the entrance doors were representations of the cottage in which Burns was born—one being an exterior, the other an interior view of "the humble cot." The back of the stage was ornamented by an oil painting, some twelve feet long by seven broad, most appropriately framed by festooned Union Jacks. This painting represented the scene embodied in the poet's own words:—"The modest Gerardus of my country found me, as the prophetic bard Elijah had Elisha, at the plough and drew her inspiring mantle over me." This was most excellently executed, and drew forth many commendatory remarks from those well qualified to give an opinion on the subject; and who expressed much surprise when informed that it was the production of a self-taught artist, Mr. Charles Smeaton, son of our respected townsman Mr. Alex. Smeaton, and that the canvas for the painting had only been purchased on Saturday last; proving that hard workmanship does not necessarily mean slow workmanship. It struck us that the art in this case assumed the form of a tribute from one natural genius to another. On the right of the stage was a most characteristically got up automatic life-size figure of the bard, and on the left a tasteful imitation of a Scotchman's thistle. The effect of the whole decoration was unique; the principal feature which marked them being that they were not alone; and for this successful result the decoration Committee, under the superintendence of Capt. Roove, deserve great credit.

At about 8 o'clock the company began to pour in, and at 8 1/2 the Hall presented a most brilliant spectacle—such an assemblage of "honest men and honest ladies," as would have delighted the eye of Scotia's Bard to rest upon. At that time, and after the splendid performance of the overture by Mannings by the 59th Band the President of the Committee of management, the Hon. F. W. PAINES, Q. C., stepped to the front of the stage, upon which were the various gentlemen who had kindly consented to deliver addresses, and the members of the Committee. The Honorable gentleman stated, that having had the honor of being appointed chairman of the Committee to get up a festival in honor of that great, sublime, and brilliant poet Robert Burns, the duty devolved upon him to open the proceedings in connection then with. He felt highly gratified at being the person chosen to inaugurate such a demonstration in honor of such a man, but that gratification would have been doubly enhanced had he felt that he was capable of addressing the brilliant assembly he saw before him in a manner calculated to do justice to the occasion. Aware that he was not so qualified, he trusted the audience would kindly permit him without further remark, to introduce those gentlemen who had kindly consented to assist us in celebrating the Centenary of our National Bard; and he would therefore call upon W STEWART SMITH Esq., L.L.D., to address them.

DR. SMITH, the worthy Rector of our High School, stood forth and was received with a perfect burst of applause. He then read the following address on "The Genius and Poetry of Burns," with a warmth of feeling a heart whole devotion to his subject, and an evident and natural appreciation of the beauties of the great Poet, which drew forth at the conclusion of almost every sentence the most unbounded demonstrations of approbation:—

FRIENDS AND FELLOW COUNTRYMEN.—We may well exchange congratulations on the Festival enjoyments of this day.

To Scotchmen—and to their descendants it is a peculiar jubilee, to celebrate activity of soul—the prerogative of spirit—and the grandeur of intellect.

Throughout a civilized world, from Britain to Vancouver's isle,—and Australian and Indian climes—wherever the sons of Scotia are to be found—and where are they not to be found?—all from the castellated abode to the humblest hut, are bowing down in wonder, and at my sister's workmanship of the poet's heart; in pity, at the insurmountable darkness of his destiny; and in love, over the melting, refining, and purifying influences embodied in his immortal verse.

In every region, the most eminent intellects are endeavoring to record the votes of tens of thousands—in favor of the most eminent British poet, and one of the most eminent British men of the age in which he lived. This distinguished "Man" has won the admiration, alike of the profoundest thinkers and the shallowest of the vulgar;—and, a higher achievement than this by the gifts of his genius, he has gratified common minds by recalling their own conceptions, filling their own imaginations, and subduing to a deeper loveliness—the earnest creature of their narrow horizon.

Now, when I call to mind, that a Bingham, a Brewster, and an Aytoun—a Bryant, a Beecher, an Everett, and a Longfellow—and a galaxy of other brilliant and gifted men of world-wide fame—are engaged, this day, in celebrating the Centenary of Burns, and the higher achievement than this by the gifts of his genius, he has gratified common minds by recalling their own conceptions, filling their own imaginations, and subduing to a deeper loveliness—the earnest creature of their narrow horizon.

by presching to them in their native tongue that genius, creative art, intellectual capabilities and many feelings, are the common inheritance of every human being; and that from the many, rather than from the few, the great power given to the world through study, force, and passage through those countless worlds that swarm with life; yea, to soar to the footstool of him who upholds other systems and other suns.

What are all the pretentious bucklers, with their gilded crests and their armorial bearings, and trashy officialdom to invest themselves with—and which our tears of love for Burns could drown, one and all of them, whose memories, the vestal fire of the poet's genius is fast reducing to ashes—unless haply they be vantage-grounds for the glare of that ethereal flame, which in their noblest and proudest ignorance, they sought to quench?

What, I ask, are all these—from monumental marble to Old Light bigotry and the blood-hounds of political espionage, to the lasting monuments of rogues which have been passed, and will continue to be passed upon our great universal poet, who is commanding universal homage—and linking together, in sympathetic union, high and low, rich and poor, the man of transcendent genius with his brother of the humblest natural endowments?

When any man is scathed as a martyr, and his goodness, the thoughts, emotions, and actions of his own heart, and founded on his own personal experiences, we allow the claim to be established—even when he speaks about himself, we subscribed to the egotistic charters.

Burns speaks of himself. He was compelled to speak, from so many remarkable circumstances of his life. His wonderful genius, too, compelled him thus to speak. Men listened to the personal egotisms, because they recognized the special features of his immortal verse.

Self-praise with Burns is real commendation, seeing he evoked all his powers to prove himself worthy of such personal eulogy.

His the true Virginian, intemperate polit, et cetera, his minor poems are marked with—“deep calling unto deep?”—his, genius admiring and commending genius.

He found the materials of his sweetest strains in the poverty, and drudgery, and difficulty of Fate's rude hand, as it swept over the rugged, rocky, and barren wastes of nature—

But O! what harmony and music were elicited from these discordant strings! I were exhibited the noblest forms of intellectual life. Then did passion and fulness of heart speak those golden words of guidance, endurance, which conquer under adversity—

Then too, it was—that by his lyric lays he remade Scotia sacred ground; and hallowed the dreary wastes and glens of Coila, by his immortal strains of “bonny banks and braes,” and “changing a purer purple than the opening gowan’s and hawthorn blossoms” of every lonely dell.

The sincerity and independence of his own heart, the want of every mental phrase that would admit resemblance of affectation; the luxury of his own sense of greatness, his withering scorn of hypocrisy and cant, have found an equally sincere and honest response in the hearts of his admiring countrymen.

These virtues and talents in the many nature of Burns are accompanied by the most brilliant genius, the venders and delights of which remain graven on the Scottish heart as with a pencil of lightning. They have tended to diffuse that honesty, uprightness, and correct trust of mental activity, which are the only truly heroic barriers of the people's liberty and honor.

For as face answers to face, so does the heart of man to man—despite greatness and meanness, and the one hand, and toil-worn serfdom on the other.

In the earnestness of his philanthropic apostleship, and in the sentiments which he vigorously inculcated, whether through contagious merriment, caricatures of the scorn of satire, the ardour of patriotism, or the gaiety of boon companionship; by his teaching the rational dignity and worth of manhood, the justly supreme value of personal independence, and of those high feelings which follow the human heart.

Two or three immortal lines he has comprehended the very essence and the whole of social philosophy; and by one fell swoop has demolished every delusive dinopinion. It cannot be too frequently repeated—

Is there for honest poverty
That hangs his head, and a's that—
The coward slave, we pass him by,
We dare be true, tho' all the world array
For a' that; and a's that,
Our toils obscure and a's that;
The rank is but the guinea stamp,
The man's the gowd for a's that.

A prince can make a belted knight
A marquis, duke and a's that;
But honest men, tho' born to die,
Good faith, will win a's that;
For a's that and a's that,
Their dignities and a's that,
The pith o' sense and pride,
Are higher than a's that.

O how glorious and eternal, that watchword of self-respecting and self-sustaining humanity—
“A man's a man for a's that.”

In his darkest and most desponding hour, Burns never, for a moment, forgot the majesty and truth of the man, nor the sincerity and truth which constitute the “noblest work of God!”

Patentees of whatever grade, were, in his eyes, merely robed pageants, if, in heart and soul, and sentiment, they possessed not the independent mind of an honest man—

“Though hundreds worship at their word,
I never, I never, coo for a's that!”

I have noticed the conceded, the chartered privilege of the very name of Burns, almost imperceptibly, yet how finely, shadow forth his eloquent poem of the “Vision.” I refer you to the concluding stanzas, and only bring under your notice:

To give my counsels all in one,
Thy tongue I pray will careful run,
Preserve the dignity man
With soul erect;
And trust the universal plan
Will all protect.

The following personal encomium tells a tale so direct and so plain, and is so replete with the Horatian truth, which every scholar knows, as he repeats.

calculated to be heard in such a room as the Music Hall; and the consequence was that, when the audience found they could not hear him, a horn of conversation arose which prevented us from getting any part of the addresses, save some few disjointed and unconnected sentences, the beauty and erudition displayed in which rendered still more deep the regret that it was utterly out of our power to give even a faint idea of its many excellencies.

After Mr. Andrew's address, songs were sung by Mr. Dickinson, succeeded by the Campbells are comin', "on the Bagpipes, by Mr. Nicoll, in the true "Garb of old Gael." The Band followed with the "Caledonian Quadrilles," and the Hon. Mr. Primrose then called upon W. H. Kerr Esquire, Advocate, to address the audience.

Mr. Kerr spoke for a very short time, but what he did say was well said, and received with much approbation. He commenced by adverting to the occasion which had brought them together, that evening, and trusted that the audience would give him credit for appreciating as highly as anyone the wondrous genius and talent of Robert Burns. He then referred to Canada, and speaking in this said, have we not a country where all the beauties of soil and dale, of mountain and river as the country which gave birth to Burns—have we not laws which gave every justice alike to the rich and to the poor—and have we not a constitution for our government similar to that which gives its far greater unity to Great Britain? It may be urged that our country is in its infancy, but I am inclined to think that the same vigorous will, ere long, astonish the nations of the Old World. Can that country be said to have no history which, one hundred years ago, furnished the death of Wolfe and Montcalm and the heroic episodes in the wars between Great Britain and France. It may be urged that we have no literature of our own—no poet to give to Canada a fame peculiarly its own—no deep philosophers—no great historians. That each of these things the case is an undisputed fact, but we need not point to great writers who adorned the language which we ourselves speak in whose veins flowed blood drawn from the same national fount as that of our forefathers; and we need not claim as our inheritance, attaching to the name of Burns, the flows in our veins, a right of property in all the glories of his names which grace the page of Great Britain's history? From our ancestors we inherited our country, our laws, and that form of constitutional government under which we enjoy so many blessings, and for the sustenance of which we are willing to great women, but that can be done by men. From the same ancestors also we inherit the name and fame of her sons of genius in every department where genius delights to expand her vivifying powers. They whom we inherit the name of Burns. Strange power! the name of Burns, alone, during the lifetime, rises like a phantom from the ashes of the body, and commands reverence and tribute from the world—and thus the Ayrshire peasant, one, one hundred years ago, was born into this world of suffering and sin, and temptation—whose grave was bedewed with the tears of a nation who in solemn mockery had awarded to him, living, a petty office in the excise—now commands more veneration and respect than any of the most distinguished statesmen of the present age, their part upon the stage of life. Homage to memory, pure and undefeigned is now offered up to his memory than was ever paid to any living emperor. He would not trassress upon the time of his audience, but he thought that he was doing so, by stating that he did not intend there to represent Scotland, but the descendants of Scotchmen, and in their name claim their inheritance in Burns, and their tribute to festoon his grave with their garlands of immortality.

Mr. Kerr sat down amid long continued applause and music followed Mr. Kerr's address; and then dancing commenced, and the refreshment tables were thrown open to the company.

During the delivery of the addresses, &c., Mr. DUNBAR, the Secretary of the Committee, was busily employed in the supper room, receiving and answering telegraphic communications from several parties, by means of a connecting wire which had most kindly and liberally been brought into that room for the occasion by Mr. Cassie, manager of the Montreal Telegraph Company. The following are copies of the messages exchanged; and as the audience could not join in the reciprocal interchange of sentiment, several members of the committee did what was required at the moment to be:

FROM MONTREAL, NO. 1.
"Burns, the true Port of pathos and humor his writings embody truth, sincerity, eloquence and honesty—he will ever live in the hearts of the human race."

TO MONTREAL.
"Burns. Scotia, with exulting tear, honors her son, and his admirers in Britain and America unite in paying deep and sincere homage to him the noblest of Scotchmen, the noblest of Britons—that's gone away."

"Burns' Monteal's hearty responds to thee. Thee are our country's noblest persons absent. At our meeting, and everything goes with great enthusiasm. FROM HAMILTON, NO. 1.
"The Burns' Club of Hamilton greets you cordially and requests to thank them in Scotland."

FROM HAMILTON, NO. 2.
"The Hon. Adam Ferrie, of Hamilton, a gentleman who was intimate with Burns, is living among us. Should said acquaintance be forgot."

FROM NEW YORK.
"We have selected the following toast and mottoes to be drank to over America at 10 o'clock precisely on the 25th inst."
"Kindrad associations throughout the world may they preserve the songs and disseminate the sentiments of Burns till man to man war's or shall trippers bear a that."

FROM BOSTON.
"The Burns' club of Boston will gladly meet the wish of their brethren in Quebec, and as an acknowledgment."

"Burns—his songs unite the world in common brotherhood, may their influence never decay."

FROM DETROIT.
"Burns, the genial and patriotic Poet of Freedom, who by the devotion of his genius to his country and countrymen best illustrated the power to serve humanity."

To all those sentiments, the Quebec Committee repeated that which we have already seen as being sent to Montreal.

The number of persons present in the Music Hall, last evening, was variously calculated at from 1000 to 1200; and we are highly delighted to be enabled to state that not one disagreeable incident occurred to mar the full and perfect enjoyment of the evening.

After 12 o'clock the upper room was thrown open, and it was really enticing to see the piles of good things heaped on and under the tables. Some idea of the style in which Messrs. Grace and Wheeler furnished the eatables, &c., may be gleaned from the following bill of fare at the

Indeed, every thing was highly creditable to the parties furnishing these essential comforts. The band of the 39th Regt. exerted themselves with their usual skill and alacrity, leaving nothing to be desired. About four o'clock this morning the party broke up; and at a meeting of the Committee held at that time a vote of thanks was passed to Duncan Macpherson Esq., President of St. Andrew's Society and to James Dunbar Esq., Secretary of the Committee, for the very active and zealous exertions made by those gentlemen on the occasion of getting up the Centenary Burns' Festival in Quebec.

VISITOR FROM PERSIA.—We notice by the Montreal papers, that the Rev. Dr. Perkins, from Persia, has arrived there, on the invitation of the Religious Society, whose anniversary are being held there this week. Dr. Perkins visited America fifteen years since with the Nestorian Bishop, and will be known to many of our readers as the author of several works. The Nestorian Persian Flower, &c. He is one of the most respected of the missionaries of the American Board of Missions. We are glad to perceive by the Montreal Pilot that the Rev. Dr. intends visiting this city, previous to leaving Canada.

A CENTENARY.—Thomas Galbraith died in Salecote, Ayrshire, Scotland, on the 3rd December ultimo. He was born in the same vicinity, four months before the Poet Burns.

SCHOOLS FOR SALE.—The New York Herald says—Among the shipping intelligence in another column, will be found the departure of the Jacob Bell, Captain Charles P. Low, one of Messrs. A. A. Low & Bros. This vessel carries out six young men of education, as apprentices to the sea, viz.—Messrs. H. Sewell (late of Quebec) and Westervelt, of Staten Island; Whitney, of South Danvers, Mass.; Monroe, of Jersey City; Meade and Raleigh, of New York. Captain Low has found it to his advantage to take such young men, to provide them with a separate room on board, and to take some pains to teach them their trade. Only last week we noted the arrival of the N. B. Palmer, in eighty-three days from Shanghai; when she was fifty days out her captain fell ill, and never left his berth till his arrival here; the ship was navigated by one of Captain Low's proteges, Mr. Frisby, who, as we have stated, made one of the fastest voyages on record. A large crowd assembled to see the Jacob Bell sail, and loud and hearty were the shouts of God speed as two powerful tugs hauled her from her moorings.

A TELEGRAPH OPERATOR CONVICTED OF MURDER AT TORONTO.—On Friday, James Fleming, a telegraph operator, who was proved to have been engaged in the old International line, the Montreal line and recently on the Grand Trunk, and who had borne a first rate character, was convicted of the murder of one Thomas Madigan, who was stabbed with a dirk. The jury recommended the prisoner to mercy on account of a scuffle that had taken place between him and the deceased.

LATER FROM HAYTI.
We have just received the first official bulletin from the army of the Haytian Emperor. It gives a day of the movements of the army from December 28th to January 3d, but contains little worthy of repetition.
On the 30th, a small French boat, manned by four men, and bringing M. Clecia to Gonaïves, was seized, and the arrested persons detained until evening and then allowed to continue its course.
On the 31st of January, the Emperor inspected the ramparts constructed during the night, and was subsequently told that the insurgents who occupied a position on the River, Mont-Rois had fled, leaving their ammunition.
The Imperial troops then occupied the evacuated position. The most perfect order reigned, and the army exhibits no signs of disaffection.
This bulletin of course treats the revolution, of which we have heretofore had only the insurgents accounts, from the Souloque point of view, as a mere temporary riot, not endangering the stability of the empire.—New York Courier.

paration will not fail to effectually remove dyspepsia or indigestion, bilious affections, Headache, Heartburn, Acidity of the Stomach, Constipation, Gout, Rheumatism, Loss of Appetite,

Affections of the Liver, &amp;c., &amp;c.

TARRANT'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF

CUBERS AND COPALIA.

Sanctioned by popular opinion and the high authority of the most distinguished of the medical faculty; it offers to the afflicted a remedy whose success has in every instance supported its deserved reputation. Being convenient and agreeable in its use, experience has proved that it retains in every climate its desirable and truly valuable character. It is in the form of a paste, is tasteless, and does not impair the digestion. It is prepared with the greatest possible care, upon well tested principles. To persons following the sea, or going long voyages, this preparation possesses qualities far surpassing any other—neat and portable in its form, speedy and efficacious in its operation, successful both in the earliest and worst stages of the several diseases, whilst the usual and nauseous taste and unpleasant odor of copalia is wholly avoided in this preparation.

Prepared and sold, Wholesale and Retail, by

JOHN A. TARRANT, Successor to James Tarrant, 278 Greenwich, corner of Warren Street,

New York; and for sale by the principal Drug gists in the United States, British Provinces,

Canada, and South America.

few advantages not enjoyed by any other medicine for the cure of sexual diseases; and which merit

a high and honorable position, and which merit highly popular, and a disinterested long sought for in the medical world. It needs no recommendation or change of diet. In its approved form, it is a paste, it is of a pleasant taste, and causes no unpleasant sensation to the patient.

It has acquired the utmost fame in almost every part of Europe, it has been examined, approved and sanctioned by the faculty of medicine, and recommended by the most eminent of the profession, prepared by J. B. Tarrant, Chemist, London,
