118 KILLED IN JET AIRLINER CRASH

THIS IS TCA'S GIANT DC-8, THE TYPE OF PLANE THAT CRASHED

Worst aviation disaster in history of Canada

The loss of 118 lives in Friday night's crash of a Trans-Canada Air Lines DC-8 near Ste. Therese, Que., was the worst aviation disaster in Canadian history. The death toll exceeded by 39 the worst previous Canadian air disaster.

That crash was on Aug. 11, 1957, when 79 people—former servicemen, their families and crew members—died when a Maritime Central Airways DC-4 plunged into a remote swamp near Issoudun, Que.

The airliner was under charter to the Imperial Veterans of Toronto. Most of those aboard were from the Toronto area.

The plane headed low up over the St. Lawrence River valley in sunny weather when it ran into an area of thunderstorms.

Previous to that crash, the greatest loss of life came when a TCA North Star airliner carrying 62 persons crashed into Mount Slesse near Chilliwack, B.C., while en route from Vancouver to Calgary Dec. 9, 1956.

PLANE DISAPPEARS
The plane disappeared in a wintry storm over the Cascade Mountain range, 70 miles east of Vancouver, and the wreckage was not found until May 12. (The greatest number of Canadians killed in a plane crash previous to 1956 occurred in the French Alps when 58 listed persons and one unlisted infant were killed when a plane called the Canadian Pilgrim crashed on Mount L'Oubou 30 miles south of Grneble, France.

The party was returning from Rome to Montreal. It had been on a Holy Year pilgrimage.)

Here is a list of Canada's plane disasters since 1950:

1950 — Jan. 26 — 44 killed—United States transport lost over the Yukon en route to Texas.

1951 — July 21 — 38 killed—Canadian Pacific Airline DC-4 lost en route to Anchorage, Alaska from Vancouver, on Korean airlift.

1951 — Oct. 17 — 23 killed—Queen Charlotte Airlines, Nanaimo, B.C.

1952 — Nov. 24 — 12 killed—RCAF, Comox, B.C.

1953 — Jan. 18 — 14 killed—U.S. Army C-54 transport, Stephenville, Nfld.

1953 — March 18 — 23 killed—U.S. RB-36—Smith Sound, Nfld.

1953 — March 18 — 10 killed—U.S. B-29, St. George's Bay, Nfld.

1954 — April 9 — 37 killed—TCA-RCAF collision, Moose Jaw, Sask.

1956 — May 15 — 15 killed—RCAF CF-100 crash into convent, Orleans, Ont.

1956 — Aug. 29 — 15 killed—CPA, Kodiak, Alaska.

1956 — Dec. 9 — 62 killed—TCA crash into Mount Slesse, Chilliwack, B.C.

1957 — Aug. 11 — 79 killed—Maritime Central Airways DC-4 crashes into muskeg at Issoudun, Que.

One TCA stewardess was on fatal flight as a replacement

TORONTO — One of the stewardesses killed Friday night when a Trans-Canada Air Lines jet crashed near Ste. Therese de Blainville, Que., was on the flight as a replacement.

Kathleen Patricia Creighton, 23, on reserve duty, would not have flown unless another stewardess had not been able to make the flight.

Early Friday she was called and sent on a flight to Philadelphia, then to Montreal. She was returning here when the DC-8 crashed.

A native of Veteran, Alta., near Calgary, she became a stewardess about 18 months ago. After graduation from high school she worked as a switchboard operator in Calgary, then was employed by Firestone Tire and Rubber Company of Canada Limited in London, Ont.

John D. Snider, 47, captain of the ill-fated DC-8, was an experienced pilot who gained his early training with the RCAF during the Second World War. He joined TCA in 1944 as a first officer and was promoted to captain two years later. He lived in suburban Etobicoke.

First Officer Harry J. Dyck, 35, of Toronto, was born in Leamington, Ont., and did his early training at clubs. He joined the airline in 1953.

Mr. Dyck was married and it was believed he and his wife had two adopted children.

Second Officer Edward B. Baxter, 29, a native of Toronto, joined TCA as a cashier in 1955 and became a pilot in training in July, 1957.

He subsequently was promoted to second officer.

The purser, James E. Zirnis, 24, of Toronto, was married and his wife recently gave birth to their first child.

Mr. Zirnis graduated from the purser's training program and became a probationary crew member last spring.

Stewardess Lorne Jean Wallington, 21, was a native of Toronto who was raised in Calgary. She returned to Toronto after graduating from the TCA stewardess training course in Montreal in March, 1961.

POLICE EXAMINE CLOTHING AND DEBRIS AT CRASH SCENE

BURNED FOR HOURS — Flaming wreckage in a sea of mud was all that remained of the TCA DC-8 aircraft that crashed shortly after take-off from Montreal with 111 passengers and seven crew members bound for Toronto.

Plunges into muddy field

By RUSSELL PEDEN

STE. THERESE DE BLAINVILLE, Que. — CP — A Trans-Canada Air Lines DC-8 jet plummeted into the ground near this Laurentian foothills community Friday night and carried 118 persons to a fiery death.

It was the worst crash in Canadian aviation history and the second worst single-plane disaster in civilian world flying.

The sleek four-engined giant, pride of the TCA fleet, slammed into a muddy field just minutes after taking off from Montreal International Airport bound for Toronto, less than an hour's flying time away. The flight was TCA's No. 831.

A coroner's inquest into the tragedy was quickly scheduled for 8 a.m. EST in Ste. Therese.

Eyewitnesses could not agree whether the aircraft exploded before crashing or blew up and burst into flames when it hit the ground.

But all agreed there was a tremendous explosion — one man said "it was like an atomic bomb" — and a red ball of fire burst into the air and lit up a wide area.

The plane dug a crater about 30 yards square and at least six feet deep in the mire created by a heavy downpour through most of Friday. The plane took off at 6:28 p.m. and crashed at 6:32 p.m. near this town 20 miles north of Montreal.

WRECKAGE SCATTERED

Wreckage was tossed over a wide area and it wasn't until the scene was made brilliant with floodlights and flares that the full extent of the disaster could be seen.

The wreckage was still burning in the crater early today and officials believed many bodies were still in the crater. In the glare of the floodlights, arms, legs and torsos were seen hanging from trees; clothing was ripped to shreds over a wide area; even school books were found in scattered spots.

Exact spot of the crash was between Highway 11 and an expressway, both leading from Montreal to the Laurentian Mountains resort area, and about three miles north of this community of 12,000 population. The airliner hit the ground about 800 feet from a row of houses lining Highway 11 on both sides.

Apparently the first to reach the scene was Constable Noel Aubertin of the Ste. Therese police who said the crash "sounded like an atomic bomb."

"I thought it was the end of the world," he said. "I don't remember seeing the plane at all, I just heard the loud crash. I ran to the scene . . . and all I could see was a mass of fire."

RAN TO TELEPHONE

"I knew there were no survivors and I ran back to the nearest telephone to call every police force I could think of."

Mrs. Aime Berthiaume, whose house is along Highway 11 near the crash scene, said she was in her kitchen "when I heard a terrible explosion and saw a huge red ball of fire in the air."

"The plane crashed just about right away after that," she said.

But her son Allan, 21, said he heard the "swooshing" sound of the plane as it was flying low.

No ET victims

No Eastern Townships residents were aboard the TCA jet airliner which crashed near Montreal last night bringing death to all 118 occupants, according to an official list issued by airlines officials this morning. Seventeen Quebec residents were included on the passenger list but all were from the Montreal area.

Blast like atom bomb

STE. THERESE DE BLAINVILLE, Que. — (CP) — Constable Noel Aubertin said the crash of a TCA jet passenger plane near this community in the Laurentian foothills sounded like the explosion of an atomic bomb.

A member of the Ste. Therese police force, Aubertin was the first to reach the scene where 111 passengers and seven crew members perished in the crash. "I had stopped my car and I was talking to a little girl and a little boy at about 6:30 p.m. when I heard this immense explosion," he said in an interview.

"It sounded like an atomic bomb. I thought it was the end of the world. My car radio went out of commission and my first reaction was to jump on the two children and shield them."

"I knew there were no survivors and I ran back to the nearest telephone to call every police force I could think of."

Mrs. Laura Lancot who lives not far from the scene of the disaster, said "I heard a vibrating sound like an airplane makes when it is flying low."

East's king forced South's ace and South saw that his only play to make the contract would be to develop three spade tricks. Show Business

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Fellow performers thought it strange when Carl Ballantine gave up one of the most successful acts in show business to become Torpedoman Second Class Lester Gruber in McHale's Navy. "I think it's kind of strange myself," says the elastic-faced comedian. "I'm losing about $2,000 a week."

He gave his reason for joining the ABC comedy that stars Ernest Borgnine: "Theatre business was disappearing and so were night clubs, which I don't like to play anyway because they keep me up too late. There were TV guest shots, but how many times can you play Ed Sullivan (he has 20 times). My biggest pay was from industrial shows, but they don't come along too often."

He joined McHale for better or worse, and he admitted that it has swung both ways. "Somebody said there was no such thing as small roles; only small actors. I think it was Mickey Rooney. Anyway, it ain't true."

Trouble is, he continued, the director works not on the star system, but the rank system. The best stuff goes to the commander (Borgnine), captain (Joe Flynn) and ensign (Tim Conway). "What chance have I got—a torpedoman second class!" Ballantine said.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—You may not give a hoot, but folk music is big business and the coming tycoon may well be handsome Randy Sparks. He's from Leavenworth, Kan., by way of Oakland, Calif., a sharp operator who realizes there's more to the folk field than wearing a goatee and being able to plunk the chords to Foggy, Foggy Dew.

A couple of years ago, Randy was another of the growing horde of hootenanny dispensers. Today he is impresario of the Nw Christy Minstrels, who sell millions of records and can draw $10,000 a night. Warming up in the wings are his new combos, the John

OPENS SALOON
Sparks recently opened a folk-and-beer parlor in nearby Westwood where he will provide a showcase for new acts. He maintains in Encino a house that offers a haven for transient folk musicians. Also a place to rehearse — not without an occasional complaint from the neighbors.

"All this is part of a grand plan," explained Sparks, who is nearing 31. "You see, when I started in the business, there was no place for us to learn our trade. There was no market for folk singing and we had to make our way."

"Now the young singers have the hoots (folk concerts), and they can get an immediate audience. The result is that a lot of folk singers never progress beyond the ability to play 32 bars of chords."

"My idea is to work with singers so they will be able not only to sing folk songs but to really entertain as well."

Mayor's chain of office started unromantically with form letter

By MALCOLM REID
(Record staff reporter)

The City of Sherbrooke came by its mayoral chain of office unromantically—in response to a form letter from the Birmingham goldsmiths Thomas Fattorini.

In January of 1948, Fattorini sent the city council a catalogue of its line of "mayors' chains, mayors' jewels, ex-mayors' badges and presentation caskets."

After deliberation, council, presided over by Mayor Charles Howard, had the city clerk send Fattorini a drawing of the city's then coat of arms—a railroad bridge across a river, with farm cottages on each bank.

Sherbrooke placed an order for a $400 chain incorporating this crest, and joined the handful of Canadian cities—Ottawa, Toronto, New Westminster, St. Boniface—which adorn their chief magistrate in gold for ceremonial occasions.

By 1949, in time for it to be worn by Mayor Alphonse Trudeau, Sherbrooke had its 27-link, gold-plated, enamel-pendant chain of office.

Unlike the chain, for example, of St. Boniface, Man., whose every link is a medalion with a symbolism of its own, the Sherbrooke chain is simple. Its links are blank panels of a rectangular shape, awaiting the names of future chief magistrates who will wear the "collar," as it is called in French.

The only two mayors' names engraved in fine script on the links immediately to the sides of the central one above the pendant, which bears a capital S, are Mayor Trudeau (in office 1948-50) and Mayor Howard (1949-52). Mayor Emile Levesque's 1952-55 term is not yet commemorated in a link.

Even since 1955, Mr. Roger Charest, Mayor Armand Nadeau's secretary, has been taking the chain out of the black velvet case for St. Jean Baptiste Day, Remembrance Day, and the visits of such civic guests as governor-generals.

Since Mayor Nadeau began wearing it, however, the chain has gone heretofore out of date.

The city has had its crest and motto revised by the Montreal heraldist Drouin, and no longer does the city go "Onward" ("En avant," as the city clerk in 1949 ordered it written in French at the bottom of the crest of steam-engine-puffing-across-trestle).

Now the motto is Latin—

MAYOR NADEAU AND CHAIN

"No quid nimis," or "Not too much," an expression of moderation out of keeping with Mayor Nadeau's feeling that the old crest too much represented the market-town Sherbrooke of a century ago, and had to be progressed.

The present crest shows the confluence, shaped like a Y, of the Magog and St. Francis Rivers, with electricity-evoking jets shooting out from a six-pointed star at the junction. In the three sections of the field are two fleurs-de-lys and a rose.

The chain of office of the city of Sherbrooke, in short, is infrequently used—it requires a dark suit to stand out—it is not up to date as a historical record. But it is well cared-for and has its moments of glory.

12-time loser is fined again

A twelve-time offender facing yet another charge of driving while his faculties were impaired by alcohol was fined $150 and received a one year licence suspension from an extremely agitated magistrate.

Admonishing the offender, Jean Paul Cadorette of Ascot, Judge Redmond Hayes said "I hope that this is the last of offence, otherwise the next time I will have no choice but to commit you to jail."

Cadorette pleaded guilty to committing the crime in Deauville November 24 and asked for and was granted 15 days to pay his fine.

Other recent visitors at the same home were Mr. and Mrs. Sidney White and children of Ville LaSalle.

Scouting and Cubbing

By KEN BARTLETT

A member of the Fifth Sherbrooke Troop, Johann Sepp won recognition as a First Class Scout at a regular meeting held last evening. This is a first not only for Scoutmaster John Imbeault, who has been with the Troop for only a year, but also for the group, which has not had a First Class Scout for some time. Other news from the Fifth is a wide game held last weekend in conjunction with the Seventh Sherbrooke Troop, and the passing of a Leaping Wolf Badge by Steven Moore.

COUNCIL MEETING

A number of announcements were made at this week's District Council Meeting held in Bulwer. This year was a record for Apple Day receipts according to chairman Newton Munkittrick. No less than 179 boxes were sold and the highest sales were made by Tenth Sherbrooke.

The second year flight by courtesy of T.C.A. was a big success. The big jet actually flew over Sherbrooke. District Vice-President Les Humphries also stated that 26 cub and seven scout badges had been passed this month. Council Vice-President Ray Thorne gave an interesting report of the meeting of the Provincial Council held recently in Drummondville. Members were also told that nine Pack Leaders attended a basic training course last weekend at Granby.

BADGE WORK

Packs have been busy passing badges this week, and nowhere more so than in Bulwer-Birchton. Akela Douglas Grapes reports that five cubs have passed their Collector's Badge. They are Philip Moore, Leslie Picard, Herbert Halliwell, Barry Dearden and John Laberee.

John Laberee has also passed his Swimmer's Badge and Charles Grapes his Gardener's Badge. Over at the First Sherbrooke Pack there has been star work done. Mark Jervis-Read knows his signalling and, and Bill Nutbrown and John Colton also have satisfied Akela that they can do signalling.

The final suggestion is a few rolls of the photographer's favourite film, or perhaps some unusual type, for example, infrared or a very high speed for available-light pictures.

A subscription to a photo magazine or some interesting book on the subject might be enjoyable.

Whatever equipment you buy, make sure it will fit the camera you intend it to be used in or on. In most cases it can be returned and the adjustment can be made. This takes some of the charm off the gift, however, so if possible, check before buying for a happy Christmas.

Break-in suspects' trial Monday

Two Sherbrooke youths facing charges of breaking and entering with intent to steal appeared in Sherbrooke courts yesterday and were remanded to re-appear next Monday.

Twenty-year-old Lucien Hermann from Sherbrooke appeared before Judge Redmond Hayes and was charged with breaking and entering into the residence of Gontran Guillemette at 1500 Vermont Street recently and making off with over $1,500 in jewellery.

He was ordered to re-appear in three days after Crown Prosecutor Guy Blanchette asked the magistrate for a verbal remand.

The same afternoon another youth, a minor aged 15 whose name is being withheld, was also charged on one count of breaking and entering and ordered to re-appear before Social Welfare Court Judge Roger Bouchard next week.

Sherbrooke municipal police arrested the pair last night and believe that they are largely responsible for many of the break-ins in Sherbrooke recently.

Captain Armand Genest said Friday "They were in possession of enough merchandise to be charged with theft."

Only a few days ago, Sherbrooke police officials, in line with forces throughout the province, made known their intention of tightening up security precautions.

Dealer's reputation is best gadget guide for inexperienced photo-equipment givers

The Christmas gift list, sometimes includes cameras or other accessories. If your list is like this and you are one who never did understand photography or buying one of the many gadgets used, here are a few suggestions.

The first and most important one is do your buying at a reputable photo store or dealer. For instance, I have heard people tell me what a nice camera I had and it happened to be my electronic flash they were looking at. Can you imagine people like this in the hands of an unscrupulous dealer? So if you don't like my other suggestions, please use this one. Buy locally and you can be sure of satisfaction as the dealer will hope to see you again for further purchases. Now to get down to some of the items one might give. If it's the first camera for the receiver, age will play an important part in your decision. In the 12 to 16 year group, a cheap camera will do. From 16 to 21 a medium priced one, and after this their interest will have to be judged. Good pictures can be taken by any of these cameras, as good as the photographer takes them, that is.

Gadget-bags are worth while. This will hold and protect camera and other items while not being used.

Filters are useful to improve cloud effects, and correction of color films. Caution is advised here. Details of camera and lens will have to be given when making this purchase.

World congratulates a great man

Today the free world joins in extending best wishes and congratulations to Sir Winston Churchill, wartime Prime Minister of Great Britain, who is observing the 89th anniversary of his birth.

Few men have become so truly a citizen of the world as Sir Winston. Even in those countries which he has been unable to visit during his long and varied career he has become something of a national hero. He is recognized as the man who led the battle against the domination of Nazi terrorism when the cause of the democracies appeared almost hopeless. His courage and determination led to the rallying of the free world forces and their ultimate triumph. Most countries has taken him as almost one of their own.

By his own good judgment Sir Winston has avoided one of the dangers faced by statesmen and politicians too long in office and high in public esteem. Faced with advancing years and declining health, the British leader bowed out of the scene before these infirmities began to take a noticeable toll. This action was taken at a time when his star was still high and he will go down in history for his accomplishments rather than for some tragic error of judgment that might have resulted had he sought to continue in command to his final days.

A grateful world will wish him further years of comparative health and happiness and a continuation of that activity with which his life has been dominated.

Haydn S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR

Woodlot fuel is good to have

There is something about a well-filled woodshed that means peace of mind. It requires plenty of fuel to keep going in the kitchen range and in the nickel-trimmed base burner.

It is difficult to designate the outstanding prickling factor of temporary socio-economic-cultural order, but high on the list is the fact that men no longer cut, saw, split and stack wood for winter. Gas, electricity, and oil are wonders of the age; but man is meant to work for his comfort in cold weather, and pushing metal levers or pulling a switch is not arduous labor.

It is good to see stacked tiers of solid maple, oak, ash and hickory. It is heartening to see a big pile of knotty chunks for the parlor stove — chunks that will burn slowly during a zero night and leave a bed of glowing coals to start the morning fire quickly. It is good to know there is a generous pile of dry kindling — small diameter pine branches and finely-split gray birch. On a zero morning a forerandomed countryman wants plenty of dry kindling to start the fire in the kitchen range.

There is satisfying fragrance in an earth-floored woodshed — a blended aroma of sawdust, bark, earth and different woods. Each kind of wood has a distinctive fragrance, but in an old woodshed the aromas blend into a nostril-tickling, pleasant smell.

When a man comes in from chores these evenings, he stops a minute with lantern and milkpail on arm, and lets the light of the lantern play over the woodshed fuel. Modern fuel is easily obtained, but it doesn't have the meaning of a woodshed that is filled with the fuel a man has harvested from his woodlot.

Other papers say:

Regrettable but necessary controls

Housewives have suspected for some time that the law of supply and demand hasn't really been regulating sugar prices.

Their suspicion was justified this week by Hon. Mitchell Sharp, the federal minister of trade, who said the government hopes to stabilize Canadian sugar prices by working out an arrangement with Commonwealth suppliers for long-term supply contracts at fixed prices.

Direct government intervention in the affairs of free enterprise is never welcome. But in this case the purpose is to protect consumers from price fluctuations resulting from speculation by investors who have been looking for unjustified gains. The government, therefore, cannot be accused of being unreasonable.

(Calgary Herald)

Mr. Sharp said Canadian sugar prices are related directly to the world sugar price which is set on the London market. The fact that it is speculation and not supply that rules the market is borne out by Mr. Sharp's statement that sugar stocks are higher than normal.

There can be no question of the government's right to stabilize prices of essential commodities for the benefit of producers and consumers. This has already been established in the programs of price supports and subsidies governing the sale of such products as wheat and butter.

Price supports and subsidies won't be involved in this case. The government will simply stabilize prices by arranging a steady supply of sugar at prices fixed in advance. This should prove beneficial to Canadian consumers as well as to producers in Commonwealth countries. It will remove Canadian consumers from the direct influence of the speculation-ridden London market.

It goes without saying that the prices fixed under the proposed supply agreements will not endanger Canada's sugar beet industry in which Alberta producers have such a big stake.

It is regrettable that the government must step in as it plans to do. But when the forces of free enterprise refuse to regulate themselves, they leave no other alternative if the interests of the consumer are to be adequately safeguarded.

McNamara answers defence critics

(Ottawa Journal)

These are days when the U.S. Secretary of Defence, Mr. Robert McNamara must think fondly of those carefree times when he was a "whiz kid" of the Ford Motor Company and living the good life in the college town of Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Life has not exactly turned sour on Mr. McNamara. But gone are the days when he was hailed on every side as the greatest Secretary of Defence in American history. A year ago Mr. McNamara was the man who had ended the inter-service rivalry in the Pentagon. He was the hard-headed executive who had brought efficient business practice to the military services.

Today the very qualities for which he was praised are held against him by a growing body of congressional critics. Now he is too sufficient. His "cost effectiveness" approach to defence spending is said to be short-sighted and unimaginative.

Mr. McNamara has opposed the building of a nuclear aircraft carrier—at a cost, he estimates, of perhaps $160,000,000. He doesn't believe the advantages of nuclear power in surface vessels would be worth the extra expense. His critics say that no one knew that the first atomic submarine would lead to the vast Polaris system. They ask if Mr. McNamara wants to go down in history as the man who blocked the transition to a nuclear-powered surface fleet.

It was undoubtedly to meet some of this criticism that Mr. McNamara offered such a reassuring picture of U.S. military defences in a major speech in New York this week. Mr. McNamara's awesome catalogue of his country's capacity for destruction will perhaps not convince every last Congressman for whom large military spending means contracts back home. But it should assure most Americans—and Russians—that the United States hasn't let down her guard.

Mr. McNamara says he "would not trade our strategic posture for that of the Soviets at any point during the coming decade." After the Defence Secretary's appraisal of U.S. strength (500 operational long-range ballistic missiles, 1,700 by 1964), it is easier to understand why. Whether or not he treats Congressmen as none-too-bright college freshmen, he should be around Washington for some time yet.

The PRAYER FOR TODAY FROM The Upper Room

Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter in law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab; and they came to Bethlehem in the beginning of barley harvest (Ruth 1:22).

PRAYER: Our Father seeing Thy goodness and ample provisions, we pray that our hearts may turn to Thee with love and gratitude. We pray in the name of Christ, our Savior, who is Thy gift and our greatest blessing. Amen.

In Yugoslavia

High-living Reds worry party

BELGRADE—(AP)—Yugoslav Communists are displaying worry over party members who chase "the high life"—in some cases by bribery and corruption.

The matter was first brought into the open by President Tito last year. It came out in even blunter terms recently in Communist, weekly organ of the Yugoslav Communist party. It said:

"One must point to the tendency of certain party members to enrich themselves, to their furious race after money... to live an easy and lavish life, and—bearing in mind our circumstances—an exaggeratedly high life."

"A certain number of Communists frequently secure formally and legally an enormous income which cannot be justified by the work they do. These are grabbing big money, building houses, acquiring undeserved privileges, etc."

"Individual Communists are receiving and giving bribes in certain forms. They are becoming corrupted."

INDICATES SERIOUSNESS

This blast by the party leadership at its own members must stun the average Yugoslav. The decision to wash this dirty linen in public indicated the Reds faced a serious and widespread problem. Just how widespread was not disclosed in the weekly article.

Sororate is a term used to designate all marriages with a wife's sister whether during the lifetime of the first wife or after her death. With remarkable unanimity, aborigines explain sororal polygyny on the grounds that sisters are unlikely to quarrel as co-wives.

Actually it was not the decree of Caesar that set in motion the events that led to the coming of our Lord. Rather, it was the decree of Almighty God. It was the indomitable hope within the human soul that came to fruition in the Advent of our Lord. The hope of Israel was the Messiah, the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul in writing to Timothy calls Christ, our hope. As Christ was to the people of old that hope that would release them from their oppression and bondage. He is now and ever

The coming of Christ to the world—1

The hope of His coming

During the late afternoon of the first Easter Day, two disciples of Jesus rejectedly trudged their weary way from Jerusalem to Emmaus. Suddenly a stranger caught up with them. They did not recognize him as Jesus their Risen Lord. He asked them: "What is it that you are debating as you walk?" Whereupon the disciples related the story of Jesus of Nazareth, and how chief priests and rulers handed him over to be sentenced to death, and crucified him. "But", they continue, "we had been hoping that he was the man to liberate Israel..."

The disciples had hoped that Jesus was the Messiah, the Saviour of the world. Down through the centuries the great seers had hoped for the coming of that ONE who would save them. The manner of his coming and the kind of kingdom he would establish, were not clearly revealed by the seers. One thing, however, was certain: men of penetrating insights and religious convictions had a great hope. Some day the Messiah would come. He would be their leader to guide them into all truth and to save them from all their enemies.

Paganism had its great thinkers. They, however, held out no hope for the people. The theory was that history moved in cycles. It was just a weary routine of repetition of former events. Vanity of vanity, said the preacher, in the Book of Ecclesiastes, all is vanity. And in the same Book it is reported that there is nothing new under the sun.

On the other hand, the prophets, with deep and abiding faith, saw beyond the contemporary events, to a better day. They lived in the hope that some day the long-expected Messiah would come.

The amazing thing for us to realize is, that by the time Christ came to the world, there was any hope at all left. Consider the kind of world into which Jesus was born. Life was dominated by pagan gods. How was it possible for the worshippers of those deities to show mercy and justice and compassion for the helpless, when their gods were so cruel, wicked and ruthless? Mercury was an avowed thief. Mars reeked of blood, Jupiter, the chief deity of the Romans, drove his father into exile. Saturn devoured his own son and Juno was guilty of unparalleled cruelty to her rivals.

In Rome, life was dominated by Caesar Augustus. The wonder is that, amidst the cruelties of the arena, the oppression of the helpless and the inhumanity to man, there was any hope left. We are told that in those days there was not one hospital, or one orphanage, or one place of refuge, anywhere in the Empire. And, of course, as every high school student knows, Caesar Augustus was preceded by a long line of dictators who assassinated their rivals and confiscated property in their greed for wealth and power.

Actually it was not the decree of Caesar that set in motion the events that led to the coming of our Lord. Rather, it was the decree of Almighty God. It was the indomitable hope within the human soul that came to fruition in the Advent of our Lord. The hope of Israel was the Messiah, the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul in writing to Timothy calls Christ, our hope. As Christ was to the people of old that hope that would release them from their oppression and bondage. He is now and ever the same. The amazing thing for us to realize is, that by the time Christ came to the world, there was any hope at all left. Consider the kind of world into which Jesus was born. Life was dominated by pagan gods. How was it possible for the worshippers of those deities to show mercy and justice and compassion for the helpless, when their gods were so cruel, wicked and ruthless? Mercury was an avowed thief. Mars reeked of blood, Jupiter, the chief deity of the Romans, drove his father into exile. Saturn devoured his own son and Juno was guilty of unparalleled cruelty to her rivals.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

(From the Record of Tuesday, November 30, 1943)

The Ladies Aid of the United Church, Granby, held its regular monthly meeting with the president, Mrs. George Shutt, leading the devotions. The report of the nominating committee was given by the convener, Mrs. A. E. Solomon. Appreciative remarks were made to the retiring officers, especially the Hon. Life member, Mrs. Geo. Roberts. Rev. A. Dickenson presented Miss Clara Seavey with a gift in recognition of her many years of service to the choir, she also received a bouquet of mums from little Lorna Ball. Taking part in the program which followed were Mrs. W. R. Bradford, and the boys and girls of the Sunday School. On the refreshment committee were Mrs. M. Bradley, Mrs. K. Thompson, Mrs. G. Steel, Mrs. R. Nickerson, Mrs. W. Wright, Mrs. D. Wilby, Mrs. J. McCurdy and Mrs. G. I. Blake, convener.

TEN YEARS AGO

(From the Record of Monday, November 30, 1953)

A spectacular, two alarm fire, which required the combined efforts of two fire departments to bring under control, last evening destroyed the Coaticook Town Hall, and left a family of seven homeless in an adjoining building. The blaze of undetermined origin, broke out in the basement of the large three-story brick building some time after four p.m. on Sunday. Through the night men continued to pour gallons of water into the ruins, all that remains of the well-known structure this morning is an empty shell.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nov. 30, 1943 . . .

The Battle of Narva was fought by Charles XII of Sweden and the Russians under Peter the Great 263 years ago today—in 1700. Fought in a violent snowstorm, the battle saw the Russian army annihilated, with Charles losing fewer than 2,000 men. However, instead of pursuing the Russians, he turned his attention toward the treacherous Augustus of Poland.

1782—A preliminary peace was signed between the United States and Britain.

1945—Rudolf Hess astounded judges at Nuremberg by admitting he was sane and prepared to face trial as a war criminal. He was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Tito first brought the question of corruption before the public in a speech at Split in May, 1962. Through irregularities in the banking system, he said, "some people, maybe by means of bribery or something else, obtained funds even though they could not guarantee profitability."

"In fact," said Tito, "as a rule whoever went abroad returned with a car. I wonder how this is possible."

TRADITIONAL MARCH

PORTSMOUTH, England (CP)—Following an old naval tradition, 25 Royal Marines are marching 310 miles to Barrow-in-Furness, Lancashire, from this south coast port. They are joining a newly commissioned frigate and expect to be on the road 17 days.

REPORTING

OTTAWA — It's the oldest trick in the world to ask for the moon while secretly willing to settle for much less, and this is what Premier Lesage did this week. It's the psychology of shock.

I think Prime Minister Pearson was shocked. He of course expected that the Quebec premier would want Ottawa to surrender more of the jointly occupied direct tax field to the provinces, and also would want Ottawa to withdraw from many joint federal-provincial programs while continuing to pay for them with no strings grants to the provinces.

This Lesage did, and Mr. Pearson had his reply ready: Ottawa would vacate the direct tax field in proportion to the increased responsibility the provinces would assume in the joint program field. Lesage could have his cake or eat it; not both.

The shock effect of what Lesage had to say was in his brazen demand that the provinces be permitted to usurp to substantial degree some of the most important areas of exclusively federal jurisdiction, where both the constitution and common sense dictate that the central government must exercise sole responsibility.

The provinces "should have their voice in determining tariff structures, transportation and even the monetary policies of Canada", he said. In fact, Mr. Lesage declared expansively, "the provinces should always be consulted by the federal government each time the latter wishes to effect policies which could have a repercussion on the economy of the provinces."

This, dear reader, is a red herring.

No federal prime minister in his right mind would agree to consult 10 provincial governments on whether or not tariffs should be hoisted or lowered, whether the money supply should be increased, whether the CNR should abandon its branch line to West Bumblebee, whether interest rates should be lowered or raised, or whether the dollar should be re-valued. A declaration of war would affect provincial economies: should Jean Lesage have a veto?

This preposterous suggestion, which seems to contemplate a federal government with about the powers of a country council, is certainly intended to draw Ottawa's fire away from Lesage's main objective of getting more money. It's an old dodge, and unlikely to beguile such a master of diplomatic negotiation as Lester Pearson.

But it does confuse the main issue by making it more difficult for Ottawa to determine how far it must go to give Quebec minimum satisfaction without doing serious harm to federal revenues and power.

French-Canadian nationalism is a background factor making it very difficult for Lesage to compromise on his main demands, and equally difficult for Pearson to refuse concessions to Quebec. Fifteen years ago Maurice Duplessis blew his top at a federal-provincial conference here, staked out and went home. It would be much more serious now — if Jean Lesage walked out. He knows it, and Pearson knows it, but the chances of this happening are slight because neither premier can afford it. Lesage appreciates the folly of separatism, even though some of his ministers may not. He knows that to protect his own position and power he must return to Quebec with concrete financial concessions wrung from Ottawa. All else is dross.

News in brief

Glass in grain

WINNIPEG (CP)—A full investigation is planned to determine how ground glass came to contaminate about 3,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat shipped to Russia.

The grain, reported by Russian inspectors to be "littered" with ground glass, is part of Canada's 239,000,000 bushel, $500,000,000 sale to the Soviets.

Canadian officials are aghast that such a situation should or could exist and talks are believed in progress to determine if Canada will have to make restitution for grain rendered unusable.

Vancouver agog

VANCOUVER (CP)—The City of Vancouver, on the eve of Grey Cup day, became one long machine-gun burst of firecrackers and car horns.

It was a scream in the night under a full moon with long lines of youngsters snake-dancing, hammering on guitars and rattling bongo drums.

Statement out

QUEBEC (CP)—Judge Gerard Lacroix ruled Friday that statements Leopold Dion made to police since his arrest last May 27 were inadmissible as evidence in his murder trial. Dion, 43, is charged with capital murder in the strangling of Pierre Marquis, 13, one of four boys killed last spring.

Demands debate

OTTAWA (CP)—New Democratic Leader Douglas, charging that the federal government has "rigged" its equalization payments to curvy favor with certain provinces, called Friday for a full-scale Commons debate on federal-provincial tax-sharing arrangements.

The opportunity may come Monday when Prime Minister Pearson is expected to report to the House on the results of this week's conference with provincial premiers.

118 KILLED

the jet before "it hit the ground and exploded, sending a huge ball of fire into the air."

One of the first to reach the disaster site, Allan said the mud plowed up when the plane crashed fell right back onto it.

This was why it wasn't until someone found a life-jacket with a TCA monogram that it could be said officially the plane was the DC-8.

President Gordon R. McGregor of TCA said it would be difficult to determine the cause of the crash.

Investigators normally can piece together what happened by picking up a limited amount of wreckage, he said, but "I am not cheerful about the possibilities of getting information from these parts because the breakup is so severe."

NO SABOTAGE

Another TCA official said there was no question of sabotage in the disaster nor was there any confirmation of an explosion before the ill-fated plane hit the ground.

At about 1 a.m. today officials at the crash scene discontinued operations for the night, hoping daylight would give them a better chance to recover bodies and wreckage.

At least 300 soldiers were stationed around the still smoldering wreckage to ensure that everything was left intact. A search of houses in the area brought out some pieces of wreckage taken as souvenirs.

CAN'T IDENTIFY
Most bodies were so badly smashed that identification was considered hopeless by one TCA official.

He said that in some similar crashes, relatives had agreed to a mass burial of the victims on the spot.

Work crews had to slog through mud about knee-deep in places. A continuing cold rain fell through the late hours of Friday night and early today.

A bulldozer later cut a path through the scrub to the scene and pumps were put to work drawing water out of the crater.

An unidentified provincial police officer waded into the crater and recovered what appeared to be the aircraft's log book.

TCA officials said early today it was not known whether searchers had salvaged the plane's flight recorder—important in determining exactly what happened before the crash.

Names and home towns of casualties, announced through the night after next of kin were notified, showed that majority of those aboard the plane were from Ontario, most of them from the Toronto area.

Of the first 111 names released, 66 were from Toronto district and 22 from other Ontario centres. Sixteen dead were from around Montreal, five from Western Canada, one from New Brunswick and one from Bombay, India, was given.

At least 13 of the dead were women. The casualty list did not identify any of the victims as children.

Seek stability

OTTAWA (CP)—A temporary adjustment in the financial arrangements among Canada's family of governments has been wrought at the four-day federal-provincial conference which ended Friday.

Ottawa and the 10 provinces will continue their search for a better, more enduring solution at a Quebec City meeting next February or March.

The goal is "flexible permanency," Prime Minister Pearson told a press conference at the close of his first full-scale fiscal talks with provincial premiers since taking office last April.

Johnson was understood to be determined to avoid multiple inquiries that could cloud the facts about the murder of Kennedy in Dallas Nov. 22 and the shooting two days later of the man police charged with killing the president.

Aldershot Chapter I. O. D. E

Maple Mount Home benefits from proceeds of Christmas tea, sale

The November meeting of Aldershot Chapter I.O.D.E. was held at I.O.D.E. House on Tuesday last with the regent, Mrs. S. K. Barnes, presiding.

The treasurer reported that the Christmas Tea had been very successful and also the 25th of the recent drawing. So well-supported were these ventures that the Chapter was able to vote $200 towards children's furniture at the Maplemount Home, Cookshire, a special project of the Chapter. It was also decided to make a donation to the Christmas baskets given annually by the Municipal Chapter to those in need. It was also agreed to send a special box of groceries to one of the Chapter's needy families and also to buy fuel oil for this family.

A donation was made to the Commonwealth Relations fund which brings students from other parts of the Commonwealth to study in Canada.

It was reported that the Chapter's adopted school was most appreciative of the record album sent recently. A letter of thanks was read from the recipient of the Chapter's annual prize given in Grade IX of the High School, and the members agreed to give at least two prizes next year, to be increased to one for each class of Grade IX in the future.

Mrs. William Price, Hospital Library convener, reported that the patients were most enthusiastic about the distribution of books, and looked eagerly for her coming each week.

Mrs. M. P. Lafreniere then showed slides of her trip to Europe and Mrs. H. Durrant and Mrs. M. P. Lafreniere served refreshments.

A short discussion took place between the Municipal Chapter's Party at the Officers Mess of the 53rd Regiment on January 11, at which the Aldershot Chapter is in charge of the decorations.

The Spring Dance, held annually by the Chapter, has been tentatively arranged most appropriately on March 21, at the Sherbrooke Country Club, subject to acceptance by them. Mrs. George Smith was appointed general convener.

The Regent then reminded the members of the forthcoming Christmas Party on December 19. Members may bring guests. A sherry party will be held at 6 p.m. followed by a chicken supper at 7.00 p.m. An exchange of gifts will take place.

The members decided to send a wedding gift to a member about to be married.

Calendars were also sold and 8 placed in the Chapter's adopted school.

The Auction Sale to be held in the Spring was mentioned and the chapter members asked to save household furniture and furnishings for this occasion and to ask their friends to do the same.

Maple Copse I. O. D. E

Services secretary mourned by members of chapter

The death of Mrs. R. C. McFadden, Services secretary and long-time member of Maple Copse Chapter, I.O.D.E., was marked at the November meeting by a minute's silence in memory of one who had, in the words of the Order's prayer, "laboured loyally for the welfare of our Country" and for her community and the Chapter in which she had held various offices, always with conspicuous. Her friendly personality and ready helpfulness will be greatly missed.

At the suggestion of Miss G. Stevens, convener of Empire and World Affairs, the Chapter recorded feelings of shock and distress at the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. A strong, courageous man, he had tried to do his best not only for his own country but for the world.

After the minutes and the treasurer's statement had been read, the Educational secretary, Mrs. A. W. Preston, gave her report. There was discussion regarding the memorial nursing bursary which had been set up, since there now seemed less need for this in the Sherbrooke Hospital. Mrs. Preston presented a motion to rescind the original motion and to offer instead a "Memorial Prize" to the graduating class at the Hospital annually, in the amount of $25, for some aspect of training to be made in consultation with the Director of Nurses. This was approved.

The acting Services secretary, Mrs. M. O. Knutson, reported that the Chapter's quota of knitted articles had not yet been completed but she hoped to receive further donations and would send a parcel to Provincial headquarters at the beginning of January.

Mrs. George Sutherland asked for more "paper-backs" so that she could continue the monthly shipment of books for service libraries in Canadian camps in Germany. Members were reminded that the time had come for gifts to forgotten mental patients. This year members were asked to leave these unwrapped and either take them to Mrs. M. O. Knutson or leave them at Hadlock's store.

In lieu of sending Christmas baskets locally, the chapter has contributed at this time of year to the High School's lunch fund for needy children. It was decided to continue this practice and to increase considerably the amount of the donation.

Mrs. Darcy Bennett, the treasurer, volunteered to organize a bridge marathon, to begin in the New Year. Any one interested was asked to get in touch with Mrs. Bennett as soon as possible to enable her to draw up her schedule.

At the close of the meeting a number of beautiful slides were shown by the Regent, Mrs. J. E. Perry, covering a trip she and her husband had made to Sweden two years ago, the showing, with her interesting travel-talk, was much enjoyed. Hostesses for the refreshments which followed were Mrs. C. G. Skinner and Mrs. P. Staples.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By HUGH DOHERTY

FANFARES FOR BRASS from the French and Italian baroque: Mouret; Fanfares for trumpets, kettledrums, violins and oboes; symphonies for violins, oboes and hunting horns; Vivaldi; Concerto in G major for two trumpets; Concerto in F major for Viola d'amore, two oboes, bassoon and two horns Orchestre de Chambre Jean-Francois Pailard. (DECCA stereo DL 710080) — There is a French word that describes all of this music well — "piquant." Some of it is more "piquant" than the rest. The opening allegro of the Vivaldi concerto for two trumpets, for example, is comprised largely of bantering conversation between two excited trumpets. Now they echo one another, now they chortle in counterpoint to each other, now they agree with each other. In the Mouret work for hunting horns, the great, floating tones of the horns give this tiny work spacious proportions. This is all wonderfully baroque music played at its shining brightest.

BOHEMIAN CARNIVAL: Smetana: The Moldau, Three Dances from The Bartered Bride; Dvorak: Carnival overture, four Slavonic dances; Georges Szell, the Cleveland Orchestra (EPIC stereo BC 1268) — These tuneful pieces all provide lulling enjoyment. We'll know concert ornaments, they require careful treatment if they are not to sound slick and syrupy. The Cleveland Orchestra under Mr. Szell's baton, has the vital fresh approach and buoyant style.

ROMANTIC CONCERTO'S FOR PIANO AND ORCHESTRA: Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra, Ivan Davis, pianist (COLUMBIA stereo MS 6476) — This is for incidental listening only. The approach, on the part of both orchestra and pianist doesn't reach classical proportions, but the most tuneful portions of such favorites as Warsaw Concerto, and concertos by Tchaikovsky, Grieg and Rachmaninoff are pleasant relaxation.

Although Great Britain has not yet decided on the adoption of decimal coinage, it was due to British legislation that this system was adopted in Canada and Newfoundland.

An act was passed in 1857 requiring the Province of Canada (now Ontario and Quebec) to keep public accounting records in dollars and cents and in 1858 the first decimal coinage was issued for Canada by the Royal Mint in London, England.

And in 1863, under the Colonial Act of Great Britain, legislation was passed authorizing gold, silver and copper coins to be struck for Newfoundland, representing dollars and cents.

Accordingly, in 1865, the first Newfoundland coins were issued in gold of $2, silver five, ten and twenty cent pieces, and large cents in copper. Fifty cents pieces for Newfoundland were first issued in 1870.

Newfoundland did not follow Canada's example in changing the five cent silver coins to large nickels but continued to issue small five cent silver pieces at intervals until 1947.

Two of these small silver five cent coins have become very scarce. The 1873 coin with an 'H' mint mark and the 1946 both command very high premiums.

There were 44,260 Newfoundland five cent pieces issued in 1873, most of them without a mint mark, indicating that they were struck at the Royal Mint, but some having an 'H' beneath the date, indicating that they were struck at Heaton's Mint in Birmingham.

It is not known how many 1873H coins were struck, but they are scarcer than the 1946, which had a known mintage of only 2,041.

The 1873H five cent coins is worth from $150 to $750, depending on condition, and the 1946 is worth from $75 to $200.

On the other hand, none of the fifty cent coins is scarce and the supply exceeds the demand. Consequently the fifty cent coins do not command any great premium.

War novel is accurate with suspense, pace

GLIDE PATH by ARTHUR C. CLARKE, 228 pages—Longman's Canada Ltd.—$5.50.

This novel of World War II Air Force operations reminds one in some respects of Nevil Shute's. The story centers on the career of a young R.A.F. "Penguin"—(non-flying)—Officer of the Radio Branch, who is drawn into the comparatively primitive radar operations of the early war years. From there, he is drafted to the development of G. C. D.—ground controlled descent—the system whereby aircraft can be brought in to a landing in bad weather without visual aid on the part of the pilot by a ground staff following his progress on a nest of radar screens.

The author was, in fact, personally concerned with the development of the system during his service, and the events of the novel can be taken as authoritative to the point of reminiscence.

I compare the work with those of Mr. Shute because, while having all the necessary build-ups of suspense, and switches from line-of-duty adventures to those emphatically not, the narrative proceeds at a jog-trot compatible with an easy chair after lunch.

Mr. Clarke is best known for a series of science-fiction novels. His present work is a departure from his usual in being based on what is past history, but was actually science-fiction in 1911. The novel claims that the principle of radar was described accurately by an American inventor named Hugo Gernsback in that year. (Could a name like "Hugo Gernsback" be thought of by anyone but Edgar Rice Burroughs?). Clarke is a graduate in physics and mathematics and was honoured by UNESCO in 1962 for his work in the popularization of science. He makes his home in Ceylon.

I recall last spring attending a meeting at a farm just outside Lennoxville at which a woman mentioned, during the course of our conversation, that her forbears were the original grantees of land on which she still lived. Recounting the generations who had tilled this farm, she was justly proud of their ancestral land.

I was reminded of this conversation recently by the publication of a book entitled THE ANCESTRAL ROOF: Domestic Architecture of Upper Canada (Clarke, Irwin—$10.00). This book, which boasts three co-authors, Marion MacRae, Anthony Adamson and Page Toles, will be of particular interest to residents of Ontario but I think it might also interest Eastern Townships residents if only because their early pioneer experiences and probably their architecture may parallel in many respects, that of this part of Ontario.

One thing is certain, whether or not the early architecture of the Eastern Townships resembles that of Upper Canada in form, it does resemble it in that too little of it is being preserved—either in actual fact or by the photographic or word descriptive immortality which is now being given the Ontario building mentioned in this book.

While last year's publication of THE EASTERN TOWNSHIPS by Charles de Volpi and P. H. Scowen was an excellent beginning in this field of history-preservation, it was limited to prints. I think, and especially after seeing THE ANCESTRAL ROOF, that there is another book to be written on the Townships, this one with photographs of all or some of the old homes still preserved, plus histories of those families who still occupy their forbears original grants. Perhaps a reading of "THE ANCESTRAL ROOF: Domestic Architecture of Upper Canada" will be all that is needed to inspire someone to a comparable book on the "Domestic Architecture of English Lower Canada." With this hope in mind, I commend the book to your attention.

"1,000 for a lyric!" The Canadian Authors Association has announced a competition for a new "All-Canada Lyric" which can be sung to the tune of "THE MAPLE LEAF." It is not necessary that the title be THE MAPLE LEAF—if some more challenging and inspiring idea is presented. The song should have at least three verses and not more than four, with one refrain or chorus. The closing date of the contest is May 24th, 1964 and the judges will be Sir Sir Ernest MacMillan, Dr. Helen Creighton, Dr. George Hardy and Dr. G. Roy Fenwick. Address your entries to MAPLE LEAF SONG CONTEST, 1339 Bathurst St., Toronto.

THE SECOND CAREER, by Wilder Penfield. Little, Brown & Company (Canada) Limited. Pgs. 189. Price $5.00.

Wilder Penfield, the world-famous neurosurgeon, practices what he preaches. As a second career he has achieved distinction as a lecturer and writer. Previously he has written two historical novels, No Other Gods and The Torch.

The Second Career is a collection of addresses (with two exceptions) given by Dr. Penfield, as he says in the Preface, in response to outside requests.

This book, unlike his other works, deals with a wide range of interests and occupations. He describes the conditions that preceded and ushered in the dawn of medicine with specific reference to the Hippocratic writings. There are some very apt and fascinating descriptions of men who undoubtedly exerted personal influence on the author's life — Alan Gregg, professional philanthropist; Sir William Osler, father of modern medicine; Sir Charles Sherrington, physiologist, philosopher, poet; and Ramon y Cajal, master of the Spanish school of neurology. Some of his addresses delivered to University audiences have appropriate references to the University's history, such as McGill, Queen's and Princeton.

One would naturally expect — and indeed does receive — some scientific information in this book, considering the profession and experience of the writer. However, Dr. Penfield has the happy faculty of presenting scientific information in a manner that can be easily understood and appreciated. I found this particularly true in the chapter on the Physiological Basis of the Mind. The account of Luigi Galvani's discovery of electricity by watching the frogs' legs, and his linking it with an understanding of body movements, is simply delightful.

These are human interest stories at their best, centered around renowned people and great institutions. Readers will be interested in the early history of the Montreal General Hospital. It will be a surprise to many to learn of the duel, fought by one of the organizers of the Hospital and a politician, over obtaining the charter.

Dr. Penfield has combined his diverse knowledge as a surgeon, scientist and world-traveller, and produced a book that is more directly concerned with education, history and philosophy than it is with medicine and science. He, himself, has proved the thesis of the first chapter, which is the title of book, THE SECOND CAREER, that it is possible for a man to come at last to a well-earned job rather than a well-earned rest.

Agatha: more stimulating than realism

THE CLOCKS by Agatha Christie—256 pages, Collins, London, $3.50.

After having read a novel by Agatha Christie writing under the name of Margaret Westmacott, it was a pleasure to pick up a book by Agatha Christie writing under her own name and in her own métier where she is superlative. THE CLOCKS is certainly more stimulating to the mind and the imagination than a great many of the so-called realistic novels one reads.

In this mystery Miss Christie writes from two points of view—some chapters in the usual third person style and some in the first person by Colin Lamb, a geologist employed temporarily by national security, a friend of Detective Inspector Hardcastle of Scotland Yard. Colin gets involved in the murder of an apparently unknown man when pretty Sheila Webb runs screaming from the apartment of Miss Pebmarsh and into Colin's arms—and into his heart, too, though she becomes a suspect, as does blind Miss Pebmarsh, her neighbours, and even the personnel of the Cavendish Secretarial Agency where Sheila is employed.

From the moment Sheila enters Miss Pebmarsh's apartment to find four clocks set at 4:13, and a dead man instead of the typing job she expected, THE CLOCKS ticks away at a very good pace, accelerated here and there by moments of extraordinary suspense and by the entrance upon the scene of Hercule Poirot, the dapper little Belgian with the innumerable grey cells. M. Poirot, no longer very young, is brought into the case by Colin Lamb who knows the ingenious detective and wants to see him solve a very difficult murder—by sitting in a chair and exercising his grey cells.

Plot and characters are well developed and among the minor characters is Mrs. Hemming who deserves at least a small solo curtain. Mrs. Hemming, near neighbour to Miss Pebmarsh, is a delightfully insular woman who lives only for her cats. She says of the murdered man; "Oh, I see, he came there to be murdered. How odd." Her peculiar comment is one that sets the little grey cells whirling and is, in part, responsible for the solving of the mystery.

Miss Christie's detective stories are always excellent and THE CLOCKS is one of her best.

Dief and Commonwealth get authors' scrutiny

OTTAWA (CP) — Peter C. Newman author of Renegade in Power: The Diefenbaker Years, defended his book about the former prime minister against criticism that it is shallow and "title-tattle."

Senator M. Gratton O'Leary of Ottawa and former agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton said Mr. Newman lacked appreciation of the difficulties faced by the Diefenbaker government. They said he based his book on anecdotes picked up in Ottawa's cocktail circuit.

Mr. Newman, national editor of Maclean's Magazine, said he interviewed 1,000 persons while working on the book.

"They do not ride the cocktail circuit and neither do I," he said.

Mr. Newman said he wrote the book as a journalist and not as an historian. He also defended his use of the word renegade in the book title. He said he used it to describe Mr. Diefenbaker first as a modern Robin Hood who tried to take from the rich to give to the poor, and secondly as a man who deserted the basic principles of the Conservative party.

The basic party principles were support for the British connection and for free enterprise.

LONDON (CP) — What 12-letter word is loaded with potential good, but causes readers to yawn and turn to the sport pages?

The answer, says a noted Australian leader, is the Commonwealth.

In a book, The Future of the Commonwealth, Lord Casey, formerly Australian external affairs minister Richard Casey, says the Commonwealth is on the way to becoming not much more than a "paper conception with little reality or practical usefulness."

Lord Casey recommends increased personal contact at all levels; more aid from older Commonwealth countries to the younger developing ones; creation of regional Commonwealth universities and technical colleges in Africa and Asia; greater emphasis on the future as contrasted with yearning for the glories of the past.

Collecting

in the

Townships

Stamp collectors were treated to an excellent stamp exhibition last Saturday and the number of exhibits would seem to indicate that interest in the hobby is high in this area. The number of visitors certainly made the great amount of work worth while. There are, of course, many minor changes that could be made at future shows but the overall effort was well managed and laid out.

The spirit of co-operation between the members of different clubs and their friends was high and could be best seen at the morning session when the show was taking shape. In spite of difficulties and changes the work was accomplished.

It does seem that there was much work for a one day showing, however. The lessons learned will serve as a guide for the future. The enthusiastic response from the public will have to serve as the only reward the committee will get and they are surely deserving.

It is hoped that now stamp collectors have seen the stamps of others, and the hobby has had a public showing, that there will be a marked increase in club activities and membership, larger clubs will mean larger shows.

A feature that struck many observers was the showing of stamps that ordinarily do not make their appearance at shows, those stamps that are readily available, and collect, such as many topicals, country collections, covers and related material. The Crown Agents display drew a great deal of attention and the generosity of this agency was much appreciated.

The stampless covers and covers of historical interest are among the most sought after philatelic items in this section of the country. It is well to remember that post offices are closed every year and that once gone the post marks have passed into history. Mackenzie Paige of Windsor has managed to gather a comprehensive showing of early covers from his part of the Townships, and has also obtained picture postcards of early events and places. Incidentally, remember the postmark used to read Windsor Mills.

The covers with post marks are not valuable now but the future will change this. Time has a habit of passing before we really realize the passage of the years. As an example you could examine the situation of covers from the First World War with their censor markings and Field Post Office cancellations. There were thousands of these covers not too long ago. Today they are hard to come by.

There is a group of Canadian stamps that has been neglected in the past and that the use of postage meters in offices will eventually replace entirely.

These are the stamps with perforated initials of private companies. These stamps are usually discarded by collectors and along with precancels are considered to be the black sheep of Canadian philately, but this is not true.

The stamps with the initials "BT" for Bell Telephone, "CNR," and "CPR," do form a part of your Canadian collection. If you have reached the stage where the stamps you need are difficult to obtain and are expensive, then try adding a few of these stamps to your collections. The stamps are usually mounted on the reverse side so that the initials may be readily seen and identified.

The field is large and an early start is recommended so that a good variety may be found. Good luck with these "perkins" and maybe you will try precancels next.

Exquisite and naughty but always discreet

HUSSAR HONEYMOON: By Jerrard Tickell; Musson Book Company, 219 Pages, $3.85

Maughan has written "Impropriety is the soul of wit" and here is a sprightly novel to bear out his observation. A sparkling addition to any bookshelf, Hussar Honeymoon is as gay and effervescent as champagne, as light and subtle as a swiftly stolen kiss. It is written with a background of gypsy violins, the scent of Parma violets and the clicking heels of the dashing Hussars.

I trust it is not with too obvious prejudice that I feel only an Irishman could have created this delightfully naughty situation and then dealt with it with sly and incomparable sophistication.

The actual story deals with two handsome and virile young officers, superb horsemen, recent graduates of a great military academy, each of whom has one consuming ambition — to be accepted as an officer in the famed Hussar regiment known throughout the Austrian and Hungarian Empire as the Leopards.

Their recommendations are excellent, they seem equal in all the necessary accomplishments, yet Colonel Bela has but one vacancy in his regiment. Which one to choose? The thing resolves itself in the form of a contest devised by the regiment's Adjutant, as polished a rascal as ever graced the Hussars. The two young men are presented with a challenge, the coveted position as the prize. They are to leave the Parade Grounds at four o'clock on a designated afternoon and ride thirty kilometres in three hours time; during the same three hours each must consume, at whatever point he selects, three bottles of Imperial Tokay bringing back the corks and each must comply with one further condition and I quote — "During the selfsame three hours of riding and drinking, you will each of you have three love affairs and deliver here six garters, three from each of you."

With such exquisite nonsense Author Tickell is a master. There is a droll tongue-in-cheek quality to this discreet and spirited book that will bring many an involuntary smile from the reader. How these young gentlemen foil their tormentor and emerge each victorious and triumphant makes merry reading.

It is frothy, delightful and unusual. It is written with grace, charm and wit. It is a rare treat and a pure delight.

Thriller for tycoons

THE ARENA by William Haggard, Penguin Crime, 174 pp., 65 cents.

The Arena is a story about Big Business — in capital letters — the world of banking, and of loyalties and disloyalties, public and private, English and international. And it is a story of private vengeance.

A certain deliberate fuzziness about organizations which try to gain control of an ancient and no longer so influential or wealthy English banking concern lends either extra mystery or a slight sense of frustration, depending upon the reader.

But The Arena is an exciting story, and perhaps a frightening one in the light of international struggles for power and national struggles for survival.

Canadians mourn with you

These thoughts are meant but to convey
The sympathy we feel,
In tender and befitting way
Where Death has placed its Seal.
We bow our heads in sadness here
Mere words can ill express,
The depth of grief our hearts contain
For those in dire distress.
We can't assess the tragic loss
Nor influence for good,
John Kennedy spread o'er his Land
-- God knows I wish we could!
Outstanding courage, stamina,
And basic love for Peace;
Examples to his Fellowmen
We trust may get increase.
Amiable, and deeply loved
By thousands, through the Land;
Ah! affable and true to Oath
Were trusts, at his command.
The loss to Nation, and to Home,
So sudden, and profound,
Is hard to grasp and leaves all stunned
Where Freedom does abound.
Those Dirges now a Nation hear
Recall to mind a Man,
Who gave his best to Country's need
As only free men can.
This Canada from coast to coast
Unites with one accord,
In Supplications for repose
Unto our gracious Lord.
-- He is not dead while Spirit lives
Above this earthly sphere,
And those who mourn shall surely feel
His Presence, oh! so near.
God grant his Soul Eternal rest
Among the good, and great;
-- Sincere regrets on killer's part
Before it be too late.
-- When we have spent appointed days
On Life's remorseless tide,
Through Faith we'll meet those gone before
West of the "Great Divide".

Business conference

When the managing director of an independent daily newspaper route runs into a knotty business problem, he sometimes calls on another business executive for advice—good old dad. Chances are pretty fair that dad got his first business experience much the same way. That's how many a successful businessman started. Delivering papers.

Today, some 60,000 Canadian boys operate independent daily newspaper routes. As many of their fathers did before them! It's probably the best business experience a boy can get. He learns the importance of making regular, punctual deliveries. He gets his first taste of competition. He learns how to sell, how to manage money and how to deal with complaints. Goodness knows, he gets them. In short, he learns the basic lessons of business management.

He gets his rewards, too. The money he makes gives him a real sense of accomplishment, and often lays the foundation for a university education. At the same time, he's performing a valuable community service. It's a fact well worth remembering the next time you pick up your daily paper.

TODAY IS GREY CUP DAY IN VANCOUVER

This is the day thousands have been waiting for to find out whether the East or the West has the best football team in Canada. B.C. Lions will represent the West while from the East it will be the Hamilton Tiger-Cats, champions of the Eastern Football Conference.

These teams seem to be well balanced and evenly matched which should make for a great battle but we think the secret of the whole affair will be the condition of the Empire Stadium playing field. The reports have it real muddy.

The officials of the Stadium have gone to a lot of trouble this week in an effort to present a dry field for the boys to show their wares. They reached a decision to erect plywood and tarps three feet above the field from goal line to goal line and then dryers were inserted under the covering. The job, estimated to cost $9,000, will be paid by the Pacific National Exhibition, owners of the grounds.

If the ground is fairly dry it should be real wide open battle as both clubs are capable of throwing the ball. On the ground we figure the Ticats hold a slight edge and have proven they can move the ball on the ground.

The Lions had plenty of trouble in disposing of the Roughriders. The ground was wet and they didn't look as if they had a strong running attack. The Ticats, in knocking over the highly-rated Rough Riders, proved to all they could, and did, have a strong ground attack.

The Ticats are in 'top shape as they have had only two hard games within two weeks whereas the Lions were forced to go all out in knocking over the Roughies. They had three hard games and maybe with the Grey Cup coming so soon will have some walking wounded.

The story of the game will be told with more voices, pictures and words this year than ever before. A total of 210 newsmen will be on hand for the annual classic. Television will carry the game across the country via CBC, CTV and the American Broadcasting Company.

The press box, on the roof of the Stadium 60 feet above the ground, can handle only 150 and the rest will be on the sidelines. If the weather is bad it will be miserable working under these conditions. A little different from Toronto.

Over the season the Lions hold a big edge in passing with 3,100 yards compared to 2,726 for the Ticats. Joe Kapp and company completed 190 out of 356 attempts while Hamilton threw 313 times and ended with 161 completions. In the punting department both teams finished with identical averages of 41.8.

So from the look of things it should be close but we like the Ticats. The condition of the field will play a major factor in the outcome of the game as on a heavy field anything could happen. So there are the facts and now you can make your own game predictions.

The Eastern Townships Amateur Basketball Association has opened activities and President Curtis Bishop is looking for a bigger season than ever. This year six teams are competing in the loop, two more than last year.

Dow Brewery of Sherbrooke is sponsoring one of the new clubs while Magog has entered the other. Molson's Independents, Bishop's Second, Lennoxville Grads and St. Pat's Old Boys complete the circuit. The next game takes place Monday evening when the Lennoxville Grads will be at home to Dow. Game time 8:00 p.m.

Sherbrooke Beavers came up with their best game for some time Thursday evening at the Arena when they pulled a surprise by nailing out the Gauls of St. Hyacinthe 5-3. It was a real upset as the Gauls are riding herd on the pack.

Manager Dube came up with two new players, Gilbert Sawyer and Ronnie Racette. Sawyer is a replacement for Claude Groulx, who will be on the sidelines for at least three weeks with a fractured thumb. Both played with Drummondville earlier in the season.

Sawyer turned in a fine job filling the nets for Groulx and the Beavers gave him some protection which made a big difference. The Beavers are at home to the Rockets tomorrow and they will face a revamped club according to all reports. It should be a hard battle.

See where Doug Harvey journeyed to Quebec to talk things over with Manager Bob Martineau. No details have been released as it was just a matter of discussing terms. Harvey is still of the opinion he can help any NHL club but it may take a lot of convincing to put across.

Our ski readers will no doubt be interested in our new weekly column, "The Ski Whirl" written by Lucile Wheeler Vaughan. It will appear every Friday.

Her first column appeared in yesterday's issue and anyone interested in skiing should read it closely. Mrs. Vaughan gives some very fine and helpful pointers for all skiers. It should help everybody and prevent accidents later on the slopes.

Nine new members were named to the Canadian football hall of fame to bring the hall's total membership to 31. Bob Simpson, Ottawa, Frank "Shag" Shaughnessy, Montreal, late Harry Griffith, CRU, N. Taylor, Regina, late Capt. Percival Molson, Montreal, Eddie Emerson, Ottawa, late Hughie Gall, Toronto, Russ Rehbolz, Winnipeg, and Joe Krol, triple-threat backfielder with Argos. They are well picked and deserve the honors.

Bruce Kidd is favored to win

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Kidd, Canada's 20-year-old distance ace, is favored to dethrone veteran Pete McArdle of New York today in the 66th National AAU cross-country championship.

The University of Toronto student won the event as an 18-year-old at Louisville two years ago but he was competing in the British Empire Games at Perth, Australia, last year when McArdle took honors at Chicago.

Kidd and McArdle head a field of 208, which will run over the hills and dales of Van Cortlandt Park in a test covering 10,000 metres — approximately 6 1/4 miles.

Leading contenders for the individual crown, in addition to Kidd and McArdle, are Vic Zwolak, NCAA champion from Villanova; Larry Furnell of the New York A.C.; Dave Ellis of the Toronto Olympic Club; Chris Williamson, 19-year-old University of New Brunswick,

Home-and-home games feature NHL on weekend, Bruins and Canadiens tangle, Hawks and Rangers clash

Hockey fans who like rooting for the underdog should be able to work up bundles of emotion over National Hockey League action this weekend.

After 57 games the league has practically split itself into two packs, with the growling Chicago Black Hawks, the dogged Montreal Canadiens and the scrappy Toronto Maple Leafs on top and the other three teams licking their wounds on the bottom of the heap.

Although they couldn't have known it at the time, those who drew up this year's schedule set aside this weekend to give the underdogs a chance to prove if they can come up off the floor.

In a full six-game set of home-and-home series today and Sunday, last-place Boston Bruins get two chances against Montreal, Detroit Red Wings go twice against Toronto, and New York Rangers come tooth-to-jowl with Chicago both days.

Today the Hawks will be in New York for an afternoon fight, and tonight the Wings invade Toronto and the Bruins skate onto Montreal Forum ice. Sunday night the combatants are the same but the locations reversed.

SUFFER WOUNDS
All the teams have already felt the painful effects of the scrap. Injuries have cut deeply into the rosters of Detroit, Montreal and Chicago and the others sport assorted cuts, bruises, scrapes and sores.

Most serious injury this week was suffered by Jack McKenzie, left winger on Chicago's first line, who had his spleen removed Friday morning after a Thursday night collision with

Alabama and Auburn battle tops weekend college fixtures as clubs fight for berth in Bowl games

NEW YORK (AP)—The annual head-bashing party between Alabama and Auburn, the 80th meeting between Harvard and Yale and a couple of games on the Pacific coast to complete the lineup for the Rose Bowl are the choice offerings today on the United States college football schedule.

The Rose Bowl has one team picked—Illinois—and is awaiting the outcome of games at Seattle and Los Angeles to pick the other.

Washington, although holding an unimposing 5-4 record, apparently can clinch the west-coast bid with a victory over Washington State because it will have won more games in the Big Six Conference. Southern California, 6-3, can enter a strong bid by whipping its old rival UCLA, at Los Angeles.

The Sugar, Cotton, Orange and Gator bowls, as well as some of the lesser ones, are still shopping for teams.

There is no bowl talk, however, in the Ivy League, with attention centred on the Harvard-Yale classic at New Haven, Conn., and the Dartmouth-Princeton game at Princeton.

Princeton can clinch the Ivy title by beating Dartmouth but a loss would confuse the picture. Harvard can take the crown with a victory over Yale if Princeton bows.

Mike Holt meets Willy Pastrano in exhibition

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Light heavyweight champion Willy Pastrano of Miami Beach, Fla., a 6-1 favorite to beat South Africa's veteran Mike Holt in a non-title bout tonight.

Holt said he has been promised a title bout if he wins. This is the 32-year-old Holt's first fight with a world champion and he is confident that he will win with the help of the city's 6,000-foot altitude.

"No matter how fast Pastrano moves, he can't keep up top pace at Johannesburg's altitude for 10 rounds," said Holt Friday. "That's where I'll beat him."

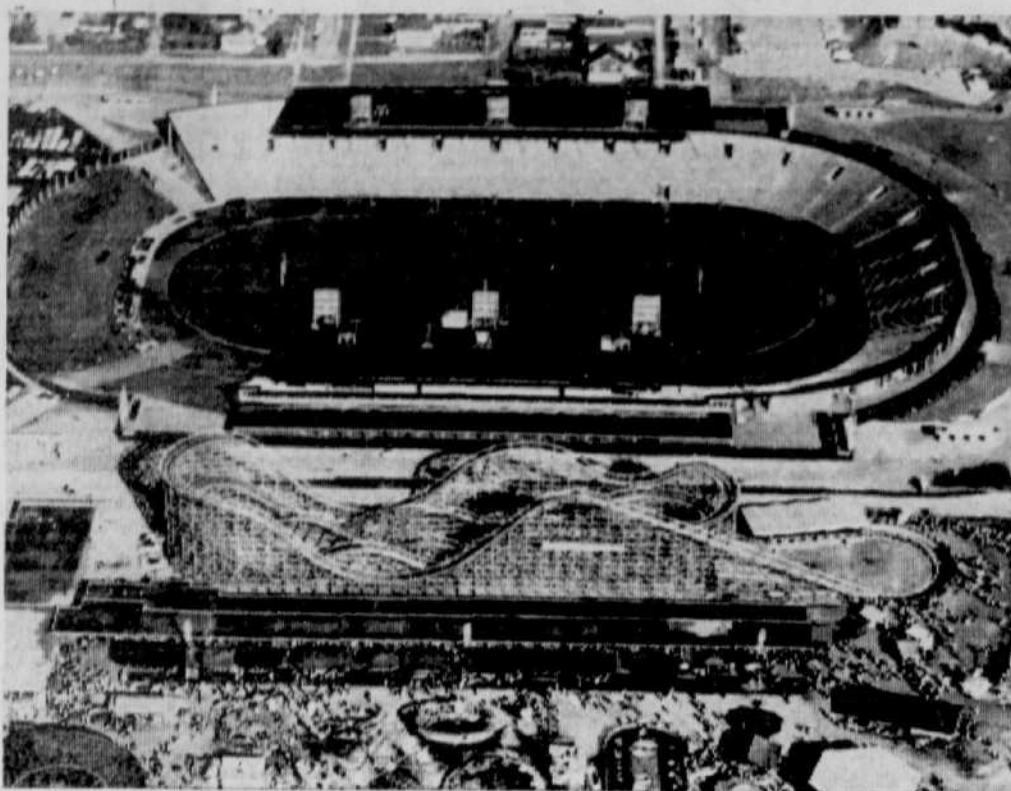

Pastrano, a light hitter, depends on his fast hands and feet to outpoint his rivals.

US players win matches in tennis

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—Three members of the United States Davis Cup team, Dennis Ralston, Frank Froehling and Marty Riessen, won opening tests Friday in the Victorian tennis championships.

A fourth player, Eugene Scott of St. James, N.Y., was beaten by Barry Phillips-Moore of Australia 6-2, 6-4, 9-7.

Ralston, seeking his second Australian tournament triumph, beat Garry Baugh, a Queenslander, in a second-round match 6-1, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3. Froehling easily won over Phillips Robertson, a Melbourne junior 6-3, 6-4, 6-0.

WILL IT BE READY? — Shown above is Vancouver's Empire Stadium, site of the 1963 Grey Cup classic with a seating capacity of 39,000. Workmen have been working steady for the past week in an effort to dry out the field for today's big game. Officials claim it will be ready. (CP Photo)

Beavers set for tough battle with Rockets

Sherbrooke Beavers, who trailed Drummondville by two points, clash with the Rockets at the Arena tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p.m. In the other fixture the two top clubs in the Provincial Hockey League will come together in St. Hyacinthe with the Gauls at home to the Vics of Granby.

The Dussault squad is in the cellar and a win tomorrow would give them a tie with the Rockets for third place in the standing. The Gauls and Granby Vics are deadlocked for first place each with 12 points but the St. Hyacinthe club has a game in hand over the Vics.

Drummondville will be making their second appearance here this year. In the opening game the Rockets ran wild belting the Beavers 8-1 but on their second trip the Dussault squad posted a 5-2 verdict over Bobby Pepin and his Rockets.

Manager Lou Poliquin and Coach Bobby Pepin have since their last appearance here added Claude Evans to their lineup. Evans took over the goaling duties from Gilbert Sawyer and in his first game Tuesday the Rockets dropped a 4-1 verdict to the Granby Vics.

Coach Dussault has added two players to his roster in Ronnie Racette and Gilbert Sawyer. Sawyer was loaned from the Rockets by Manager Poliquin to fill the gap left when Claude Groulx was injured.

Racette is a hard-skating winger who can mix it with anyone in the loop and should help to add more sting to the Beavers' attacking units. The Beavers fresh from their 5-2 win over St. Hyacinthe will be gunning for a victory to close the gap. The Rockets hold a game in hand over the local squad and Sunday's game is a very important one.

The Vics will be seeking amends for the 4-2 setback they received when they visited the Gauls Tuesday, Nov. 19. In the first encounter between them the Vics pulled out with a 4-2 victory in Granby.

Maple Leaf Garden's extension is causing plenty of controversy, project to cost over $2,000,000

TORONTO (CP)—A war of words and politics as lively in its way as any of the customary disturbances of the peace in Maple Leaf Gardens has been raising the dust in the neighborhood of that somewhat hallowed shrine of sport.

The battle of the bulge, as it has come to be known, has to do neither with the Second World War episode of that name nor with a later one concerning the disposal of some 13 pounds of excess meat around the midriff of a goalie named Turk Broda.

The furore concerns plans of the Gardens to bulge out balcony-style over a couple of streets in a busy sector of downtown Toronto to provide 4,000 more seats for fans of the NHL's Maple Leafs, whose stadium's 13,715 seats have been sold out for every game since 1947.

It will take a special law of the Ontario legislature to allow this. Municipal politicians have been clearing the way for it with all the elan and finesse of an Eddie Shack sailing in, despite objections of the City Planning Board.

As is known by every visiting fan who has tried to raise a couple of good duets for Saturday night at the Gardens, this now takes something more potent than a mere act of Parliament. The Gardens management wants to spend $2,000,000 to build a new 4,000-seat balcony over a couple of streets in a busy sector of downtown Toronto to provide 4,000 more seats for fans of the NHL's Maple Leafs, whose stadium's 13,715 seats have been sold out for every game since 1947.

Size, experience and balance rate Ticats 7 to 5 favorites or three points to win, field to be hard VANCOUVER (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats match brawn, finesse and playoff experience against the resourceful, explosive British Columbia Lions today for the Grey Cup.

The 36th East-West final is a test of old-timers against first-timers for the championship of the Canadian Football League.

Televised across North America, the game caps a Grey Cup festival in Vancouver that started slowly this week but hit a roaring stride Thursday night.

Hamilton is the betting favorite here at odds variously quoted as 7 to 5 or three points. A sellout crowd of 36,465 is expected for the 1 p.m. AST 4 p.m. EST kickoff.

The line on the game quivered Friday morning when a rumor flashed through the city that Ticat quarterback Bernie Faloney had sprained an ankle. This was quickly denied by coach Ralph Sazio.

This is the first Grey Cup classic since 1952 in which the host city has watched its own team play and the fourth cup game in Vancouver.

7-7 RECORD
Tiger-Cats have a 7-7 record Grey Cup competition since their first final in 1959, and a 6-5 mark since it became an East-West affair in 1921.

They have represented the East in six of the last seven years and come into this game smarting from four cup losses in 1958-59-61-62.

Lions, slow starters after entering the league in 1954, make their first try for the cup today. Only reserve linebacker Wall Billicki, a former Winnipeg Blue Bomber has ever played in the national final.

Coaches Sazio and Dave Skrien of Lions rate Hamilton's experience highly, and Skrien fears the stimulation so many defeats may have on the Ticats.

His own club will have cheering support of most fans and the considerable advantage of knowing the Empire Stadium field, wrenched into condition this week from a muddy mass.

FIELD LIKELY HARD
Barring rain, and none is predicted until later afternoon, the field will be hard and comparatively fast, indicating a high-scoring game from the potent and remarkably-similar teams.

Crews said Friday morning that rain would make the field extremely slippery and heavy down the middle where there is no grass.

Oswald shooting creates unusual legal situation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack Ruby created a legal situation never seen before when, in full view of millions, he gunned a man to death.

Ruby couldn't claim self-defense. He shot Lee Harvey Oswald, charged with assassinating President Kennedy, in the Dallas City Jail while the handcuffed Oswald was surrounded by police. Nor could he claim it was an accident.

He certainly couldn't try to say he didn't do it. Millions saw him on television as he did it. Other millions saw him do it on endless television re-runs of the scene. Newspapers carried pictures of it from coast to coast.

The U.S. Supreme Court already has said what it thinks of the effect of a local community which sees a man confess on local television to a local crime. But Ruby did more than confess, and it wasn't local.

Since Kennedy and Oswald were both killed in Dallas, the people there could not but be particularly aware of the events. And it would be a poor Dallas citizen who didn't have an interest in the events and what Ruby did.

ALREADY PREJUDGED?
Yet, Ruby will be tried before a jury of Dallas citizens. This raises a question: Can Ruby get a fair trial in the local courts?

gal sense that the people on his jury have not already prejudged him?

And, since millions at home were a witness to his deed, could he in the same sense get a fair trial anywhere in the United States?

Ordinarily, where there are unusually strong local feelings about a crime, or the people there have unusual interest or knowledge of it, the defence lawyer can ask for a change of venue.

This means: Have his trial in some other city where there is not the same local feeling, interest in, and knowledge of, what Ruby did was not limited to Dallas. It was world-wide.

A change in venue in his case would therefore seem senseless since this was not just a local crime played up on local TV. The U.S. Supreme Court stepped into a local case like that earlier this year.

Wilbur Rideau, a Louisiana Negro, was convicted of murder in a 1961 crime in which a bank was robbed, a woman clerk stabbed to death, and three other bank employees were wounded by a lone bandit.

CONFESSED ON TV

Rideau was caught. The sheriff got a confession from him and then, on a local television station, had him repeat the confession in full public view. This TV confession was broadcast three days in a row.

The defence lawyer contended by the television showing Rideau was "allowed to convict himself" before the public in an area from which residents were called as jurors at the trial.

Further, a defence lawyer argued, three of the trial jurors saw the broadcast and two of the jurors were deputy sheriffs.

The state argued the three TV-watching jurors swore they could and would decide the case solely on evidence produced at the trial and that the two deputies had honorary commissions and had no connection with the sheriff's department.

REQUEST DENIED

Rideau's lawyer asked for a change of venue, asking for the trial to be held in another parish (county). The request was denied and, after being found guilty, Rideau was sentenced to death.

June 3, 1961, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the conviction. Justice Potter Stewart, speaking for the court, said Rideau was denied constitutionally guaranteed due process of law when he was refused a change in venue.

"Due process of law in this case required a trial before a jury drawn from a community of people who had not seen or heard Rideau's 'televised' interview."

Where does this leave Ruby? So far there is no indication Ruby's lawyers will seek a change of venue or even try to defend him against a charge of murder as such. What they seem to have in mind is to argue he was temporarily insane when he killed Oswald.

Sports exhibition opens today

SKIING AT WINTER SHOW — The special nylon carpet to be used at the Winter sports show being held at the Belvedere Street Armoury today and tomorrow is seen being used at Montreal by Mario Podorieszsch, who will be one of the ski instructors teaching with the Mt. Orford Ski School this approaching ski season.

Everything that goes with snow will be featured today November 30 and December 1 at the first Winter Sports Exhibition to be held at the Belvedere Street Armoury.

Sponsored by the Hillcrest Ski Club this is the first year that members have attempted to bring together under one roof every type of equipment — and information — that the outdoor winter sportsman could possibly need.

Doors opened last night until 1 a.m. On Saturday doors open at 1 p.m. and stay open until 11 p.m. The same hours apply for Sunday. Tickets may be purchased at the door. Admission is 50 cents adults, 25 cents for children. Door prizes will be offered.

On of the highlights of the three-day exhibition will be a skiing demonstration by top area professional skiers. A special nylon-type ski carpet has been brought from England especially for the demonstration. The ramp is 45 feet long and 13 feet high.

Equipment for such winter sports as skiing, skating, hockey and ski-dooing will be shown by area merchants in specially displayed booths. All equipment on display may be purchased.

Representatives from such well-known ski areas as Hillcrest, Jay Peak, Echo Mountain, Sutton and Magog will have special information booths in the building.

Keeping up a fast pace of activities, nine films on skiing and other outdoor sports will be shown continuously during the exhibition.

Two fashion shows per day have also been planned, featuring the latest in sporting fashions.

On Saturday, a special presentation will be made to Sherbrooke's Mayor Armand Nadeau and alderman Everett Nicol. The mayor and alderman will be presented with the first pair of skis made at a new local factory, Sohler Skis.

In charge of the exhibition is a special Hillcrest Ski Club committee under president Laval Tanguay. Also working with him are Michael LeProhom; Jacques Langevin, Paul Blais, Susan Choquette and Susan Rousseau.
