California wines have arrived!

I'm not too sure what has come over the Société des Alcools lately, but whatever it is I like it.

Recently the SAQ announced that it would be stocking an increased number of American wines — particularly those from California. This can only be good news for the province's wine drinkers since California produces an amazing variety of wines spanning the entire price and quality spectrum. If the SAQ makes the right choices from the thousands available, it could be an exciting summer.

To make things even better, the gentlemen who control the province's wine taps announced Wednesday that beginning shortly the province's liquor outlets will begin stocking more Australian wine as well.

With few exceptions, the wines from down under do not have the reputation for exceptional quality that California has developed but this may be as much a product of the lack of exposure as anything else. What I do know, for sure, is that it is going to be enjoyable "researching".

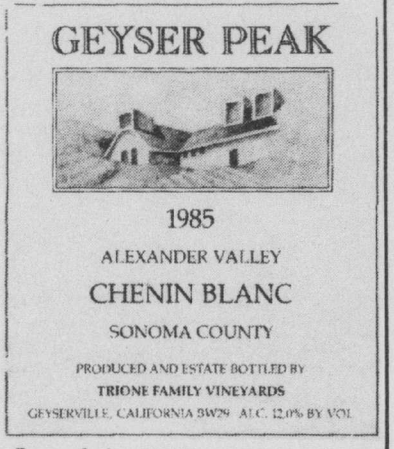

One of the Californian wines presently available is the 1985 Geyser Peak Chenin Blanc from the Alexander Valley of Sonoma County. A splendid white wine with the distinctive Chenin Blanc bouquet of fruit and flowers, this wine is delightful. With its straw-yellow color and fresh taste it is an ideal wine for sipping or for a meal.

Geyser Peak has had a rather dubious history, however. Owned by the brewing giant, Schlitz, it produced largely bulk wines of no redeeming character until it was sold to the Trione family of Sonoma Valley in 1983. If the Chenin Blanc is any indication, the sale was a welcome one.(Price $8.55).

A second recently-available Californian wine is the 1982 Almaden Pinot Noir. According to 1984 statistics, Almaden is the third largest winery in the United States. With sales of more than 13.4 million cases per year it is definitely a giant. Unfortunately, like other mega-wineries, much of its production is focused on the mass market and therefore devoted to 'jug wines' of often middling to poor quality. This particular wine, however, is a varietal made from the same pinot noir grape that produces the finest Burgundies.

A garnet red, the wine is just starting to show its age but a clean, flowery bouquet with a hint of oak and a good, warm, lingering taste makes it well worth trying at $8.95 a bottle. To find a comparable taste in a Burgundy, you would have to pay considerably more.

There are numerous other Californian wines available — many of which I hope to try in the next few weeks — and word is that continued stocking of these wines will depend upon sales so I suggest you try them while you can. Cheers!

Who's who

By TADEUSZ LETARTE

This week's Ingenuity in the Face of Adversity Award goes to Lennoxville resident Bill Gibson who works for theBest Glove company in Coaticook. According to my spies, the lawn mower where Gibson works broke down and our enterprising "straw boss" replaced it with a goat. Unfortunately, Gibson now has to return every Saturday to make sure the goat gets enough to eat. Which makes you wonder what kind of grass the goat eats and perhaps whether or not Gibson really employed a little 'bull' instead.

With all this fuss over cigarette ads, several other unusual sponsorships have been lost in the shuffle. For example, did you know that Rolaids is sponsoring an award for relief pitchers? Or that the Canadian Junior Synchronized Swimming Championships is being sponsored by Tampax? I kid you not! Maybe the makers of Ex-lax would like to sponsor the House of Commons. Or perhaps the Poly-Grip people could sponsor the Senate. The possibilities are endless.

And you think the Office de la Langue Française gets a little nit-picky now and again. Pitty poor little Prune Borneck of Paris, France. A prosecuting attorney there has ruled that the name Prune is not only absurd but illegal! That's right, according to an 1803 law promulgated by Napoleon (now that's absurd) forbids the naming of children with names considered by the state as unseemly. Along with Prune, the government has rejected such appellations as Marjorie, Jade, Vanille, and Cerise. The whole problem started with the revolution when patriotes started naming their children Egalité and Fraternité etc. Some even picked up a socialist theme with Charbon (coal) or Cheval (horse). Anyway, Napoleon said enough was enough and the law was passed. Imagine the problems it would cause in North America. In the field of exotic dancing alone we would lose Candy Bar, Piece de Resistance and the ever popular Chesty Morgan. My God, if this law had been in place in the '60s we would have lost Moon Unit Zappa, Rae Dawn Chong, dozens of Rainbows and a sprinkling of Aldeberons. Even Ima Hogg, daughter of James Hogg Governor of Texas from 1891 to 1985, would have lost her one claim to fame. And what about Noodles Romanoff, a high school friend of wine columnist Tim Belford's, or Lynn Cockshot, apparently an acquaintance of Record staffer Melanie Gruer. Even onetime Sherbrooke resident Dr. Mokthar Bokthar would be in danger. To paraphrase, Pierre Elliot Trudeau, the government has no place in the naming of the nation.

Finally, congratulations to Archduke Brian Baloney and the ten premiers of Canada's provinces — Serbis, Croatia, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Macedonia, Montenegro, Slovenia, Albania, Bulgaria and Quebec — for ensuring our province is now part of Canada. I'm sure you've all noticed the difference already. If not, stay tuned.

Jews still in rural E.T. area

By Jack Branswell

SHERBROOKE — It will be four years ago in August that the only Jewish synagogue in Sherbrooke shut its doors. The reason: during high holiday services (Minyan) a quorum of 10 has to be maintained all day long. With only 10 families in the area at the time the tradition could not be kept up.

The Jewish community has dwindled to five families, most of those being older couples. Claire Heilig and her husband, Daniel are one of those five.

"We are the hub of the Jewish families here, and that doesn't say much," she says "This was once a thriving community of sixty families."

She recalls the days when Wellington street was full of stores owned by Jewish merchants.

Those days are long over, but despite the bleak demographic outlook there are some possibilities for a Jewish renewal in the area. Sherbrooke may be a lost cause, but about 40 Jewish families reamain in the townships.

Some of those families are living in rural areas, which makes contact among the townships Jews that much harder. Marsha Schwartz and her husband Charles, along with two of their four children, live on a farm near Stanstead. They prefer country life over city life.

As a Jew in a rural area Schwartz said she feels like, "an outsider in every way. Society doesn't let you forget who you are. I am not saying that is bad, just that it is a fact."

Schwartz has been doing some work for a conference on Jews living in rural areas. The fifth annual is being held at Lyndon State College in Lyndonville, from June 26 to 28. The conference is directed at helping Jewish familes living in rural areas find solutions to their problems, such as how to raise children in the Jewish tradition in an isolated area.

Schwartz is quick to point out that Jews have traditionally been agrarian people, and that only in the last 60 years have they started urban roots.

Rural Jewish communities are often referred to as the second diaspora, or those who were dispersed. The first diaspora was the dispertion of the Jews after the Babylonian exile in ancient biblical history. While the reference is tongue-in-cheek, it is nontheless how Schwartz feels.

She is American-born, but moved to Canada in 1972 when her husband took a management consulting job in Montreal. They stayed there for six years, until they became fed up with the urban environment.

They did not like the values of the big city, "we chose to be isolated." Schwartz says her and her husband are, "products of the 60s."

That, she wants to make clear, does not make them hippies or conversely yuppies, only people who, "have a distinct sense of what is right and wrong."

Paradoxically moving away from a large Jewish community in Montreal to a widely dispersed one in the Townships has brought the family closer together. "We do more here than we did in Montreal, moving away has made us stronger."

Schwartz is referring to family life, and their religious life. "We have to drive 50 miles to a synagogue — in the States — they (Montrealers) have to drive around the corner, and we go more often."

Schwartz is looking forward to the conference for two reasons: there are some important Jewish experts who will be speaking, and secondly because she believes some form of renewal for jews in the area is possible.

She says a Harvard student is thinking of starting a Moshav, a cooperative farm, in the area. She also knows of a Montreal journalist, Schloime Peril, who is thinking of starting up a newspaper for rural Jews in the area. The farm, according to Schwartz, "could be a very good take-off point for a newspaper." They both could succeed if they work together, she says.

As for the speakers at the conference, Schwartz is looking forward to hearing Chalom Schirman, Israeli Consul-General in Montreal, Lisa Ornstein, a fiddler from Quebec City (another place with a small Jewish population), and Jewish feminist and author, Blu Greenberg.

The conference will also discuss inter-marriage between Jews and non-jews, which is a huge question for all Jews. Schwartz wants to stress that everyone including gentiles are welcome. As for the varing degrees of feeling Jewish Schwartz says everone can fit in at this conference.

"It is a place where people can feel at ease with being as little or as much of a Jew as they are."

"PERFECT! A SHEER JOY!"

Knowlton summer theatre tradition revived at Lakeview

By Charles Bury

KNOWLTON—Summer theatre came back to Brome Lake with a bang this week after an absence of 30 years.

Lac Brome Theatre's presentation of the Bernard Slade play Same Time Next Year was a hit with virtually every member of the small audience on opening night Wednesday.

Now moving from amateur to commercial status as a full-time summer-playhouse company, Lac Brome Theatre has its work cut out for it, both on the stage and off. But with the success of Same Time under difficult start-up conditions, signs point to a long and healthy new career for Emma Stevens and her band of loyal friends.

Emma Stevens... I thought I was in Alaska.

As the Lac Brome Theatre program points out, at one time Knowlton was a hotbed of summer theatre. The Brae Manor Theatre, tucked away in a rebuilt barn on St. Paul's Street, was "Eastern Canada's first summer stock theatre and training school," according to the program notes. The brainchild of a pair of expatriate Americans, Brae Manor seated 200 for performances by cast members who would later take some of the top places in the Canadian theatre world.

Following the deaths of Filmore Sadler and then his wife Madge, Brae Manor closed in 1957 after a run of 41 successful summers. Then, "During the 1950s Knowlton High School produced several extremely-popular theatrical productions," wrote LBT's Danny McAuley.

But after that there wasn't much for theatre buffs in Brome Lake — at least until Emma Stevens came along.

Stevens was born and raised in London, England. There she spent a couple of years in West End theatre productions including There's a Girl in my Soup and Stage Struck.

Then she moved to Canada. Divorce papers in one hand and two children in the other, she turned up one snowy day in Knowlton. "I thought I was in Alaska or somewhere," she recalled with a chuckle Wednesday. To warm things up, before long Stevens had started an amateur theatre group more or less on her own. About seven years ago, Lac Brome Theatre was born.

Starting with an ambitious production of the rock opera Jesus Christ Superstar, LBT has put together a modest but impressive string of hits through the nearly seven years of its existance. Until 1986 the troupe depended on the skills and energy of Stevens' group of enthusiastic amateurs. But last summer she took the plunge back into the professional world, with a Canada Day presentation of Johnny Mangano and several one-shot fall productions at Glen Mountain Lodge.

This summer the plunge is even deeper, with a full season of plays set for Lakeview Hall in Ron Blair's lavishly renovated Lakeview House hotel.

The core of Lac Brome Theatre is still Stevens and her friends. "This is the nucleus of part-time workers," Stevens says. In no particular order, they include music student Danny MacAuley as publicist and cashier, treasurer-business-manager Jean-Charles Rivard, Paul Hébert on lights, Paul Huey as actor-musician-stagehand-setmaker, Roger Lee writing, putting on the music and helping with the program, Dan McLean writing and acting, Jeanne Soule as actress, stagehand ("and also our psychic consultant," Stevens says — "seriously"), and Hazel Horton, "running around and looking after everybody."

In conjunction with Montreal director Jack Langedijk and his Association of Producing Artists, LBT is putting on a total of 36 performances of three plays this summer — Same Time Next Year,, the Broadway smash and TV spinoff The Odd Couple by Superstar playwright (you win, Julie) Neil Simon, and Accidental Death of an Anarchist by Dario Fo.

"I just helped to put the season together," Langedijk said. "These people are working very hard for little or nothing. It brings you back to what theatre is all about again."

"It's fun and not pretentious," he added. "Nobody here is pretentious."

There won't be more pretention, but there should be still more fun, if the dynamic Stevens has her way. "We're planning on continuing our spring and fall amateur productions," she said, "and if everything goes well, we are planning to do a family-type musical around Christmastime."

As if that's not enough, Stevens added, extra performances may be booked this summer to more than fill the troupe's 'spare time'.

"We're contemplating rainy-day matinées."

Lac Brome play a chuckle a minute

KNOWLTON — If the opening-night audience is any indication, Lac Brome Theatre's opening production this summer will be a big success.

Bernard Slade's Same Time Next Year has what it takes, and the modest dramatic company took what it offered and has given it the makings of a hit.

With an average age politely described as 'fifty-plus', but ranging from teenagers to senior citizens and including a youngish reviewer, theatre-goers at Wednesday's show enjoyed a chuckle a minute all night long, with several hearty laughs in each of six neat scenes.

Although the Canadian-born Slade is a master of the one-liner, he underpins this comedy with a mixed but serious message: No matter how complex it may seem from day to day, life keeps on going on. Same Time comes as close to the definitive bedroom farce as seems possible. The only set is an ordinary motel bedroom somewhere in the United States (which doesn't seem to age during the 24-year span of the play), and the only characters are its occupants George and Doris, who escape from their relatively mundane real-life relationships for one Saturday-night-to-Sunday morning a year, during all those two-dozen years.

George, played by British-born 26-year old David Clarke, is a typical twit. An accountant and self-considered intellectual, George is insecure with a heavy dose of bravado, guilt-ridden and hysterical to the point of neurosis. Slade's lines and Clarke's delivery make him funnier than he would be in life, a parody of the real small-time crazy.

Doris, on the other hand, is a well-adjusted homemaker "who never even finished high school." Played by 26-year-old Montrealer Eileen Sproule, Doris is more down to earth (or is it up-front), but somehow fell for crazy George the night before the play started.

Under the seemingly easy-going direction of another Montrealer, Jack Langedijk, both players have been given the artistic room to carry their roles with pride and presence, appealing to the audience as ordinary human beings, faults and all. The scenes are spaced at intervals through the years, and the couple experience a concentrated dose of the aging process as the years go by.

Well-chosen, quick-changed costumes and period music tell the audience what era they are watching, although the early Rolling Stones hit Hey, You, Get off of my Cloud is played in the 1970 scene rather than '65 when it was a hit.

There were a couple of minor technical burps on opening night, but nothing serious enough to spoil the show. The music skipped on a couple of occasions, and Clarke entered the stage once between scenes while stagehand Jean Soule was still changing props.

The mistakes were small and have probably been cleared up by now. They can be blamed on difficult rehearsal conditions. "We only had about 10 rehearsals," Langedijk said in an interview afterwards, "and eight of them were in somebody's living room."

Now that the troupe has moved into Lakeview Hall, it should soon put its troubles behind it. The 125-seat Lakeview is a fine setting for theatre, with surprisingly faithful accoustics elegant trim that's easy on the eye.

Soule, one of the Knowlton volunteers behind the success of Lac Brome Theatre, was a bit of a hit herself, although she's not in the credits as a member of the cast. Wearing a French maid's outfit complete with ruffled blouse on the curtain-free stage, she was being applauded on her own by the fourth prop-change.

And the audience liked the play so much they were even singing along with the intermission music — Rolling Stones and all.

Book gives fascinating insider's view of cola wars

Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

The Other Guy Blinked: How Pepsi Won The Cola Wars by Roger Enrico & Jesse Kornbluth (BANTAM): $22.95, 280 pp.

In the spirit of Lee Iacocca's book about how he pulled Chrysler up by its bootstraps and turned it into a challenging car company and part of the Big Three once again, Roger Enrico's story of the Cola Wars is the inside scoop on the marketing moves behind a number of strategies employed by Pepsi in the past five years.

Enrico goes lightly on his meteoric rise up the corporate ladder — in 1971 he worked with Frito-Lay as its President in Japan, did a stint in Rio de Janeiro as VP of Pepsi in Latin America, became VP of Marketing for Frito-Lay in Dallas, then moved from Senior Vice-President of Pepsi to become President and Chief Executive Officer of the soft drink conglomerate in 1983 — choosing to concentrate on the marketing ploys that Pepsi has had to adopt over the years in going head to head with the gigantic Coke company and its worldwide stranglehold on the refreshment industry.

We learn how the Pepsi Challenge, in which the number two cola took on Coke in the now infamous, and supersaturated campaign to reveal that most average drinkers of colas would prefer Pepsi in (supposedly) unrigged taste tests, began to grow stale and how Enrico and his mates seized upon the rising star of Michael Jackson for their thrust into the New Generation, teen-pleasing marketing strategies.

Enrico's courting of Jackson, with his colleagues knowing absolutely zilch about rock music or teen idols, takes on a comic-opera complexion as the elusive, reclusive, and decidedly oddball (he wants to buy the remains of the Elephant Man?) Jackson proved less than co-operative in the shooting of the now famous commercials for Pepsi.

The by-play between Jackson's entourage and management and their desires for special considerations for their star and the staid, conservative Pepsi exec's reveals just how isolated CEO's can become from the mainstream of American life.

The pursuit of Jackson as corporate symbol leads Enrico's forces into the celebrity wars and the bidding for the services of such luminaries as Lionel Richie, Don Johnson of Miami Vice, Michael J. Fox. Whitney Houston and other singers/actors forms a large part of the narrative of The Other Guy Blinked.

In addition to the behind the scenes wrangling over dollars, seconds of exposure, saturation of commercials and refusal rights over advertising company initial shoots of TV spots, Enrico fills us in about other Pepsi ventures that had maximum effect on the way we refresh ourselves. He discusses the whole complex game that went on in the move from saccharin to Aspartame and how Diet Coke seemed to have the inside edge on the new sweetener; the introduction of the new product line, Slice, is chronicled; the disastrous decision to have Vice Presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro as a spokeswoman for Diet Pepsi shortly after her stunning defeat in the elections is included as a primer on how not to advertise.

The corporate in-fighting, as revealed from Enrico's rather prejudiced point of view, seems to be predicated on the inescapable fact that Pepsi has been number two to the giant Coke for almost 90 years, and with the decision of the leader to introduce "New Coke", Enrico claims the victory his book's title refers to.

In gunfighter terms Coke and Pepsi had stoof toe to toe for the whole of their corporate lives, and then with the innovation of having a one-gloved, pirhouetting singer of disco-rock hawking their drink, Pepsi claims that the other guy blinked. Coke's much discussed move to abandon their formula that ensured their lead in the Cola Wars is discussed at length by Enrico, but Coke's side of the reasoning is only speculated about. The discussions of market shares, percentages of colas versus fruit-based drinks, etc., are about as exciting as reading a balance sheet, but thankfully Enrico keeps this numerology to a minimum.

In this book we are given a fascinating view of the inside moves that ensure that corporate executives such as Pepsi's Roger Enrico maintan a salary scale that keeps them competitive with earners such as Michael Jackson's agent.

RECORD REVIEWS

The Nylons HAPPY TOGETHER (ATTIC-A&M)

The style that they pursue so tunefully is rooted in the 50s, ever to be associated with the wonderful vocal ambience provided by The Platters, The Silhouettes and scads of doo-wop groups, but the Nylons reach back to the 60s for the title track to their latest chord happy album HAPPY TOGETHER.

The Garry Bonner/Alan Gordon tune that led to the short but influential career of The Turtles (with "Happy Together" in March of 1967 they pushed "Penny Lane" by the Beatles out of the number one spot, and continued with "She'd Rather Be With Me" and "Eleanor" as substantial hits, following their debut with a cover of Dylan's "It Ain't Me Babe") is given a lush choral effect by the Nylons, acapella except for some percussion backing. Paul Cooper handles the lead vocals on this and most of the other Nylon songs on this their fourth album, which was produced by L.A. mainstay Val Garay at Record One in the glitter capitol.

The other nine tunes were produced in Toronto at Manta with Bill Henderson, formerly of Chilliwack, sitting at the board and pushing the Nylons along a route that mixes oldies by the Turtles and Sam Cooke ("Chain Gang") and the Nordique's victory song, "Kiss Him Goodbye", with several songs penned by Cooper and the other members of this talented vocal quartet. "Face In The Crowd" comes across as an uptempo R&B song which proves that you don't have to have an address in Michigan to sing strong Motown material; "Grown Man Cry" really lets the four voices of the Nylons strut their stuff on a song written by Claude Morrison, who also takes the lead line; and "A Touch Of Your Hand" is easily the most romantically beautiful of the superb voicings that the Nylons get into on this album that repays each fresh playing with added vocal surprises.

Dan Fogelberg EXILES (CBS-FULL MOON)

Despite his confession that he's always been a rock and roller at heart, Dan Fogelberg's eleventh album will be a disappointment to those who admired his wistful, aching love songs laid against acoustic guitars and intertwined keyboard parts.

Soft rock's loss is, unfortunately, not harder rock's gain, as Fogelberg's EXILES is mediocre at best. Fans of this singer"songwriter may find that this album sinks into obscurity as quickly as his last, in April 1985, did.

HIGH COUNTRY SNOWS did not do the business that THE INNOCENT AGE, with its four hit singles pulled off, and EXILES appears to be nothing very special either. Perhaps it's the material — most of which is inspired by Fogelberg's wading through the morass of divorce proceedings — with its themes of being exiled, lonely in love, hearts in decline, last farewells and such, but mostly it's the fact that most of the tracks just sound like speeded up versions of love songs, with rock instrumentation laid on.

Whatever the reason, Fogelberg's debut in the rock genre is sure to be a discouragement to his further venture into rock, as only the slower, more characteristic tracks are worth the listening to here. "Seeing You Again" is a beautiful ballad, and "The Way It Must Be" recalls the hits like "Longer" and the platinum albums such as SOUVENIRS and CAPTURED ANGEL.

The direction that co-producer Russ Kunkel attempted to take Fogelberg in on EXILES has already been exploited by another of his friends, James Taylor, and perhaps for his next album Dan Fogelberg will revert to form and produce and sing some more of his original if folky material.

VIDEO SCREENING

MOSQUITO COAST (WARNER HOME VIDEO)

If the film made of Mosquito Coast by director Peter Weir doesn't quite work as well as it might, the fault may be that the book by Paul Theroux did not seem to come off just right either.

The story is a timely one, about a half-crazed inventor named Allie Fox (Harrison Ford) who packs up his wife and four kids and says "Goodbye America, and Have a nice day!" and ships out for Central America. Fox is disgusted with the fast food, slipshod workmanship, instant sell-out to Japan, death on the streets mentality that he sees gripping his beloved America. When pre-pubescent teens will knife you for a quarter in Manhattan, it's time Allie Fox takes his twin daughters and two sons, and docile wife to forge a new beginning in the fabled country of Mosquitia somewhere near Panama.

Ford is believable as the manic, invention-happy Allie Fox, and his attempt to carve a place out of the jungle at a dilapidated, deserted town named Geronimo invites all kinds of the problems he thought he had left America to escape.

Religion raises its head in the form of a Jerry Falwell-style fundamentalist who can't even get his biblical quotes accurately attributed to the right book, and Fox's invention of an ice-making machine to show the wonder of civilization to the natives ends in disaster.

Weir's filming uses the beautiful images of long, Amazonian rivers stretching into emerald green rain forests, and the movie has a certain comic charm as we watch Allie Fox's family (with River Phoenix as the narrator, Charlie, the eldest son) rankle into rebellion against their eccentric father's quest for stasis in a changing world. The screenplay has the expected concession to a Hollywood ending, but the film leaves the viewer wishing that it had been something more. Internationally renowned artist exhibits at Orford gallery

By Jack Branswell

There is a line from Thornton Wilder's Our Town that says perhaps only the dead and artists appreciate the beauty of the world. Tobie Steinhouse is very much alive and she falls into the second category.

Steinhouse is a well known Montreal artist who has achieved international stature. Her etchings and paintings are featured in important national and international shows.

Her works are the permanent collection of galleries like the National Art Gallery in Ottawa, several museums in Montreal as well as the Confederation Centre Gallery in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. She can boast that the governor-general, Jeanne Sauvé, has a Steinhouse in her collection.

She has represented Canada in international exhibitions in France, Great Britian, Switerland, Italy, the United States as well as several latin American countries.

Steinhouse is exhibiting some 15 water color paintings and 20 etchings at the Galerie Denise Gallant in Orford, from Saturday until July 5.

ART IS PERSONAL

Steinhouse has a very strong idea about what art is. She does not appreciate artists who paint to sell. "I don't think art can be meaningful unless it is personal." Like any artistic person she feels compelled to create, "It is something you have to do, and you don't stop to think about it."

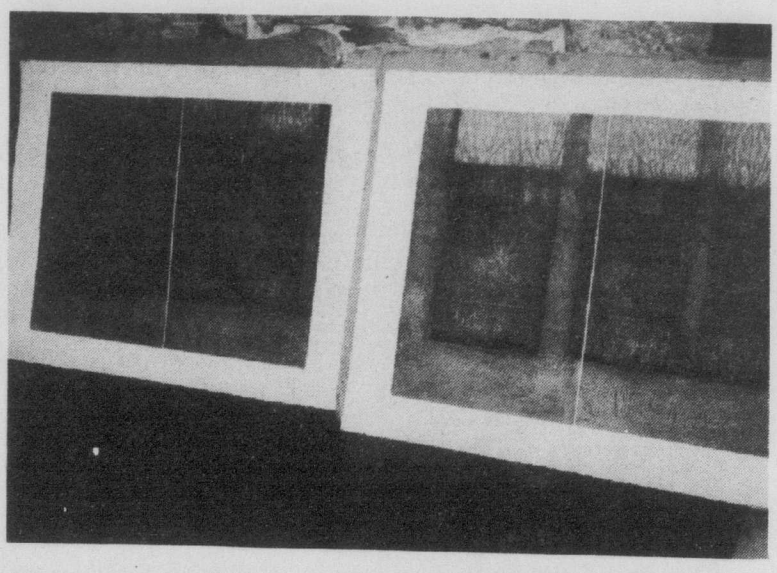

She is not afraid to admit she lives in a dream world. She describes it as, "rêveries, day dreams, reflections, my inspiration comes from contemplation." Steinhouse is an avid poetry reader, she says it helps her to conjure up images to paint.

"Poetry is fast, you don't need to read a novel for it, you can get an image from one line." On a higher artistic plane Steinhouse likes to think that she is, "interpreting things as poetry. I take off from there and make it my own."

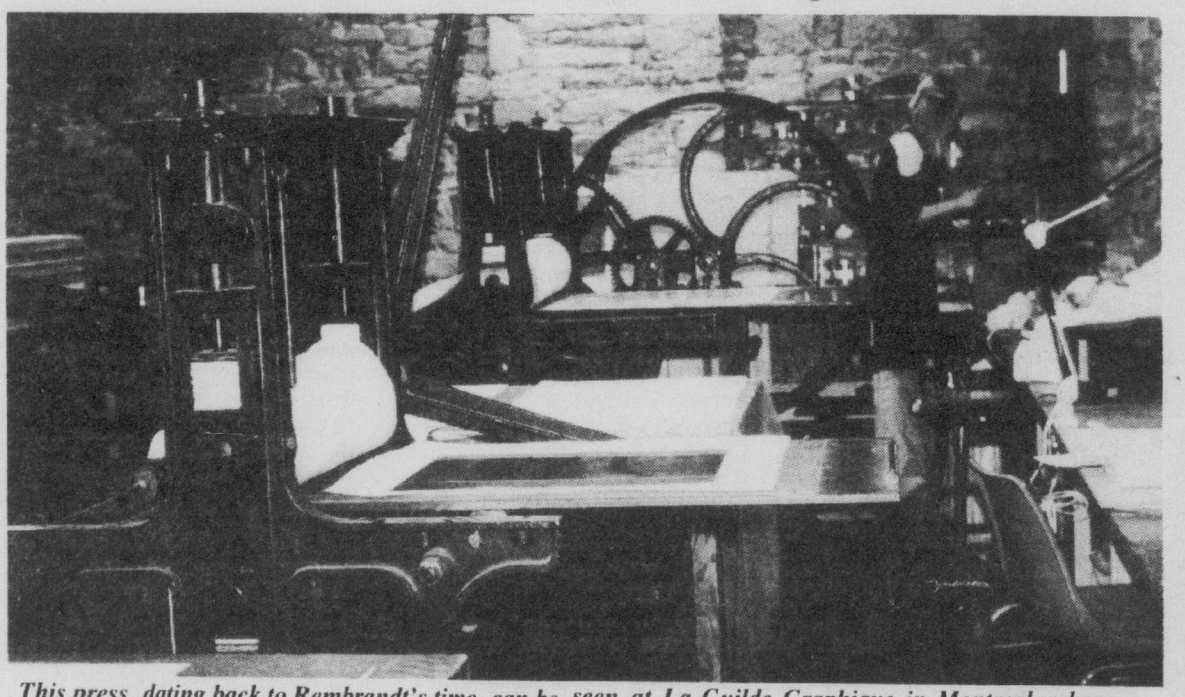

Steinhouse, was asked to come to the townships by Denise Gallant, the owner of the art gallery. Steinhouse came to check out the area and she fell in love with it, so she took up Gallant's offer. Gallant has followed Steinhouse's career for 20 years now, "I like the way she works with light and colors. If I had to describe it in two words it would be color and softness."

NOT TIMID

Gallant quickly added that while the work is soft it is still strong, "It is not timid and that is not easy to attain, but she has done it." Steinhouse has done a lot on the mountains around the Sutton area. This area seems to perfect for her use of light.

Rêveries - Jardins d'été is an etching by Tobie Steinhouse that now forms part of Governor-General Jeanne Sauvé's collection.

This press, dating back to Rembrandt's time, can be seen at La Guilde Graphique in Montreal, where Tobie Steinhouse works.

As Steinhouse looks out the window towards Mount Orford she says, "I like the feeling of space combined with the foreground in this area. I get the feeling of rhythm and rolling hills."

Steinhouse has paid her dues. She got interseted in art very young. She started drawing under the tutorage of Ann Savage, a famous Montreal art teacher.

During World War II she was drawing engineer designs for the Royal Canadian Air Force, which helped develop her interest in the more technical aspects of etchings — they are made on a complex printing press in which the artist can use various techniques to get a desired color or effect.

She lived in Paris for 10 years, studying and working at the famed Atelier 17, she now works out of La Guilde Graphique in Montreal

The work, and especially the environment has taken its toll on her health. The presses and rollers which are used in making the prints are cleaned with nitric acid, which poses a health problem. Steinhouse says she worked for 10 years in a workshop with several other artists with very little ventilation. The fumes from the acid have given her throat troubles, so much so that she is not suppose to go near another workshop.

But for Steinhouse that is like someone cutting off her hands, "I can't keep away. I still go back twice a week."

Summer concerts will keep Canada rocking

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian concert scene promises to be a scorcher well into the fall, with tours set for rock heavyweights Bon Jovi, David Bowie and U2.

Capitol Records confirmed Wednesday that Bowie and supporting act Duran Duran will play in Vancouver on Aug. 15, Winnipeg on Aug. 19, Toronto on Aug. 24; Ottawa on Aug. 28, and Montreal on Aug. 30.

Bon Jovi, whose Slippery When Wet LP has sold more than 9.5 million worldwide, is scheduled for Vancouver on July 2, Calgary on July 7, Toronto on July 12 and Ottawa on July 14.

Newspaper reports said U2, whose Joshua Tree LP has sold 500,000 copies in 10 weeks in Canada, will hit The Forum in Montreal on Oct. 14 and 15, The Colisee in Quebec City on Oct. 16 and Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto on Oct. 18 and 19. Neither the promotor nor the Island Records would confirm the U2's dates.

Emmylou Harris, who helped resurrect pure country music, will play Toronto on July 12, then head south before starting a Canadian tour in Vancouver on Aug. 4.

She'll also play Edmonton on Aug. 6, Calgary on Aug. 7, Saskatoon on Aug. 8, Brandon, Man., on Aug. 10, Winnipeg on Aug. 11, and Thunder Bay, Ont., on Aug. 12.

JOINS BEATLES

Vancouver's Bryan Adams, who headlined the Prince's Trust charity concert in London last Friday and played with former Beatles George Harrison and Ringo Starr, will play as yet unconfirmed dates in Western Canada in the fall. He's set to play Montreal on June 25, Toronto on June 29, and Ottawa on July 1.

Pink Floyd plays The Forum in Montreal on Sept. 12, 13 and 14, and on the CNE stadium in Toronto on Sept. 22, 23 and 24.

Montreal's Corey Hart will start a cross-Canada tour in Lethbridge, Alta., on July 11 that will hit most major Canadian cities before wrapping up in Montreal on Aug. 8.

Luba, also of Montreal, will head west in July while Toronto's Tom Cochrane and Red Rider play Ontario and Eastern Canada.

Other acts to pass through Canada this summer include James Brown, Peter Wolf, Miami Sound Machine, Santana, Kenny Loggins, Stevie Ray Vaughan and Roger Waters.

Twilight trial changes Hollywood moving making

LOS ANGELES — Despite the acquittal of film director John Landis in the Twilight Zone manslaughter case, the high-profile trial has left an indelible mark on the movie industry.

Although most in the business maintain that moviemaking is relatively safe, the death five years ago of actor Vic Morrow and two children on a film set and the scrutiny that has followed has led to more self-policing in the industry.

At the same time, it has spawned a heightened awareness of the need for safety on film sets that industry officials say would have come about no matter what the outcome of the trial.

"Hollywood doesn't really care about verdicts," says one producer. "It responds very much to bad publicity." Adds Mark Locher of the Screen Actors Guild (SAG): "The major impact occurred after the accident. The tragedy made everyone step back and look at what goes on."

In the cap to the 10-month trial, Mr. Landis, associate producer George Folsey Jr., production manager Dan Allingham, special-effects coordinator Paul Stewart, and helicopter pilot Dorcey Wingo were found innocent of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the three deaths in the filming of the movie Twilight Zone in 1982.

The accident was believed to be the first in which young children were killed on a set. Landis was also the only Hollywood director to have been criminally charged for deaths under such circumstances.

The jury's acquittal of all five on all counts caught many inside and outside the industry by surprise, but no one more than Lea Purwin D'Agostino, the prosecutor in the case, who said she was "shocked."

Nevertheless, jurors indicated that no one could have foreseen the crash of the helicopter that caused the deaths, and thus, as one put it: "You don't prosecute for an unforeseeable accident."

For Landis, director of such box-office hits as Trading Places and Animal House, the acquittal means he will be able to get on with his career, though it appeared not to be slowed much by the accident anyway. Since the tragedy five years ago, he has directed four films.

Even so, the talented but sometimes brash director is not out of the woods yet. He still faces civil lawsuits filed by the parents of the two dead children. Moreover, the Directors Guild of America (DGA), of which Landis is a member, is considering whether its safety committee should launch an inquiry of its own.

As for Hollywood, the verdict is expected to have little impact on the way movies are made, but a number of changes have come about already. A joint union-management safety committee - in the works before the accident occurred - has been set up within the industry to promulgate guidelines. SAG has instituted a 24-hour hotline and safety team to deal with emergencies and has encouraged members to use the right of refusal guaranteed in contracts if they believe a scene is unsafe.

At one point during the controversy over the movie deaths, state lawmakers considered imposing tighter regulations on the industry. But the idea was scotched after many in the film community testified that such a move would do more harm than good.

Indeed, many in the business argue Hollywood is essentially a safe place to work. SAG claims accidents involving actors and stunt men have dropped in recent years - from 214 mishaps in 1982 to 66 last year. There have been at least six deaths on film sets in the last three years. "Those of us who are out there everyday are very aware of what is going on, and we do an awful lot to ensure safety," says a TV producer.

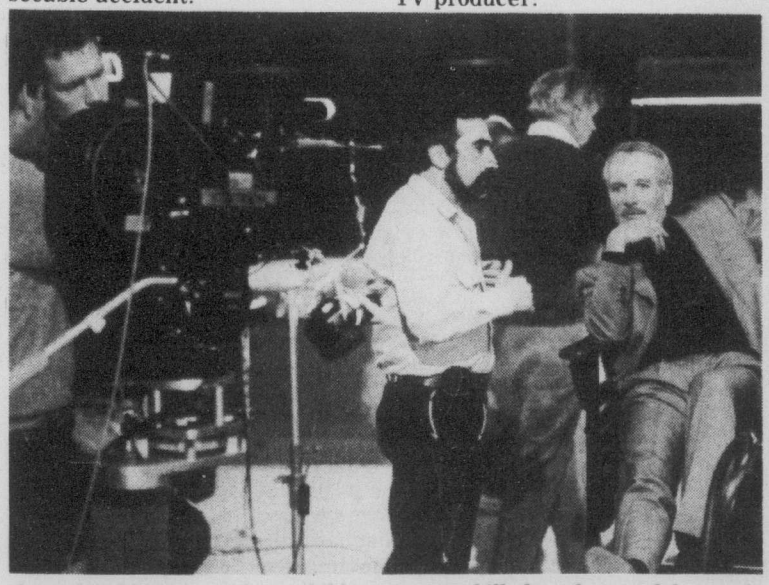

Not everyone is so sanguine, however. Some critics argue that a "code of silence" exists among stunt people that masks the extent of the safety problem.

"It is a problem that has been there, and it is a problem that is growing as Hollywood's appetite for bigger and bigger special effects increases," says Gerald Kroll, a Los Angeles attorney who has represented several people injured on sets in recent years.

While many in the industry agree that special effects have become more elaborate and prevalent, they note that new technologies and greater skills among stunt people have helped offset the risks. All of which is to say the debate over film safety is likely to continue.

"I think ostensibly there will be more caution for a time. But, in effect, if they had the same shot to do again they would find a way to do it," says Saul David, producer of several movies that use a lot of special effects, referring to the Twilight Zone scene.

"If the audience says it wants more death-defying and terrible stunts," he adds, "They (filmmakers) are going to give them more death-defying and terrifying stunts."

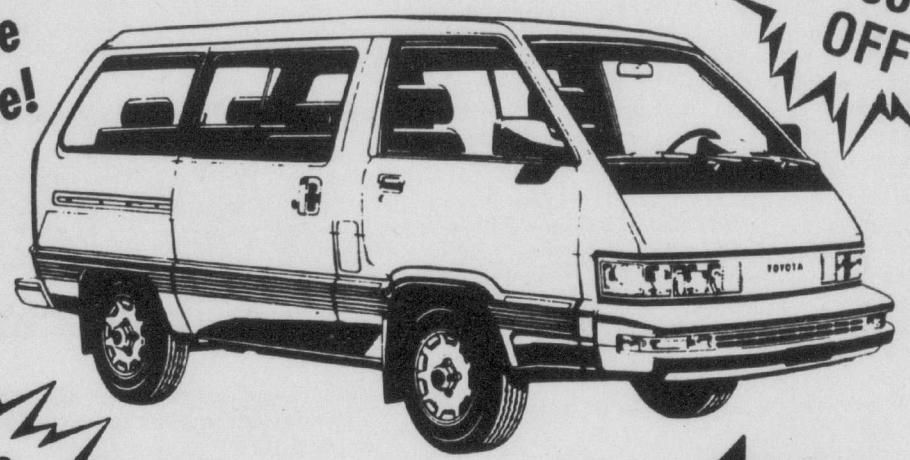

Actor Vic Morrow and two child actors were killed on the set of the movie Twilight Zone. Above is the set from the movie The Color of Money.

WHAT'S ON

Music

By Jack Branswell

Hello music fans I'm Jack Branswell, and welcome to another edition of... (oops sorry, wrong medium). Country Express will bring in the revival of the music scene to Station 88 this weekend with shows on Friday and Saturday from 9:30 to 2:30. For those of you who didn't know that is South Stukely.

Kirk Thornton and the Hoggs will be at the Bar Harbor in Knowlton Friday and Saturday. They play traditional rock & roll. I have never heard the band play but if they play anything like Kirk Thornton parties then Knowlton is in for one hell of a weekend. You see I went to CEGEP with Kirk, but I'll tell you those stories another day.

Country Fever is at the Maples on the weekends for the rest of this month, and showtime is 9:30. Last week a made mistake I called the band leader Steve Hall, when in fact his name is Steve Aulis. I apoligize for any inconvenience. The Good Old Boys will play their good old music at The Hut in Lennoxville until the end of June. They play country and western stuff.

Salle Jean Paul is featuring a religious rock group, naw I 'm just joshing ya. They are really having a jamboree that started yesterday and ends on Sunday. Featured is Dick Curless. The brochure that I received says "From Maine to Nashville Everyone Loves his Country Music." Curless has recored 30 albums, with 22 charted singles. He has appeared in Nashville, at the Grand Ole Opry, as well as at Carnegie Hall. You can call (819)872-3249 for more information.

Jimmy's in Derby line has a definite trend towards aerodynamics going, last week it was Shock Zone, now this week they have a band called Little Wing. Who will it be next week, Jefferson Airplane? In all seriousness folks, the band sounds pretty good. They play there regularly, and Jimmy's super P.R. man Turk Doherty tells me they will play 10 original songs — very danceable — and they will also play Top 40 material. Cover charge is $3(U.S.)

Rambling Fever is at the Domaine RSVP in Sawyerville, on Saturdays for the rest of June.

Rod Bray & the Countrymen will be playing at the Danville legion on Saturday only. Showtime starts at 9:30. I had a nice chat with Rod, uhhh... Mr. Bray on the phone the other day. We both discovered that I went to school with his son. You see it is amazing what you learn when you go to school.

D.J.'s Bar in Burrough's Falls (it sounds like they should have a grill there) will be playing host to Lyndon Sheldon for the rest of this month on the weekends. Tom Mckelvery's Long Shot Country is at the Bretagne Bar Salon on weekends until the end of June, that includes a Sunday afternoon-evening preformance.

The Del Monty in Rock Island will have a band called Fitness on Friday and Saturday. I know absolutely nothing about this band, but you can be prepared to do a lot of hopping around, for obvious reasons.

Turning to more sedate music, but nevertheless entertaining, the Quebec Conservatory of Music, on its second tour will be in Sherbrooke next Tuesday. This is a must! It will be classical music at its best. There are 90 talented young musicians selected for the orchestra. This is seen as practical part of their experience as musicians. The orchestra is directed by the renowned conductor, Raffi Armenian. The concert will be held at Saint-Michel Cathedral starting at 8 p.m.

This Sunday the Festival of Eastern Townships Artists will hold another in its series of Sunday evening concerts. Pianist Cheryl Dutton will preform at 7:30

Exhibitions/Events

Hey have you ever tried naive art? Would you like to? Aw come on go ahead, try it you'll like it. Believe me there is no health warning from the surgeon general. It is not necessarily addictive, and by no means sleep inducing. Okay so I have convinced you. Now here is the scoop: Madame Jeannine Blais (not to be confused with Madame Jeanne Benôit, although rumor has it she makes a dandy pie crust) is opening a naive art gallery in North Hatley. On Sunday the gallery will open with a unique collection, having a destinctive international flavor, according to the gallery's literature. The exhibition will feature the recent works of five internationally known artists: Jean Daigle(Canadian), two Yugoslavians Mihailovic Dragan, and Mitja Rojc, and two artiists from France, Michèle Gabour, and Jean-Paul Nichol. The gallery will be open seven days a week from 10 to 5. For more information call Jeannine Blais at (819)842-2784 or 567-5098.

Montreal native Carole Lafontaine is showing her watercolor painting at the Galerie d'Art de la Caisse populaire de Sherbrooke-Est. This will be on until July 3.

If a voyage into the past is a little more up your alley then the Musée Beaulne in Coaticock is presenting the sculptures of Diane and Nolan de Larochellière. The Power of Make-Believe is a journey into the world of make-believe. To boldly go where no man has gone before. Well not quite. It is a voyage to the middle ages, but you can bring the kids along if you like.

Renowned conductor, Raffi Armenian, will direct the Quebec Conservatory of Music's orchestra when they perform in Sherbrooke on Tuesday.

Native Montrealer Carole Lafontaine is showing her water colors at an exhibition in Sherbrooke.

Marcel Gingras, will be showing recent works in ink, oil, and mixed techniques. He will be showing off (not in a bad way) at the Caisse populaire St-Jean de Bréboeuf on King Street West in Sherbrooke. This runs until the end of the month.

If you are interested in seeing the Leonardo Da Vinci exhibit in Montreal you have a couple of options. On Friday the 19th the travel committee of the Sherbrooke Fine Arts Museum will be making a special trip. For more information call (819) 821-2115 (operators are standing by). The education committee from Arts Sutton will be visiting the exhibit on Tuesday June 23. Deals for transportation, entrance fee, and audio guides are available. If you are interested arrangements can be made by calling (514) 538-2563.

The Galerie d'art du Centre culturel at the University of Sherbrooke will be presenting, until Monday, the recent works of three Quebec artists: Hélène Lord, Aline Martineau, Karen Trask. They will be presenting their sculptures and paintings, along with other art forms, under the title Trilogie. Also at the university is an exhibition of photographs by Canadian Bruce Barr it is there until Monday. A collection of Japanese prints is also at the Galerie d'art du Centre culturel, but it is there until the 23rd of August.

At the Galerie Horace, in Sherbrooke there are two exhibitions, both of which run until the 28th. Jean Bédard is showing his abstact photographs. He uses macro-photography and different color filters to produce an abstract affect. John Francis' sculptures are also there and they show the tension between nature and culture.

Micheline Durocher is exhibiting her works at Arts Sutton for another two weeks. Her show includes a combination of paintings and sculptures. The gallery is open 11 to 5 Saturdays and Sundays.

Tobie Steinhouse, a famous Canadian and international artist, is exhibiting her etchings and paintings at the Galerie Denise Gallant in Orford. Her works are impressive — the Govenor General has a painting of hers — and on top of everything she is very pleasant to talk to.

There is more in the world of painting happening in Lennoxville. Some students from the Lennoxville Elementary School will be showing their paintings on Wednesday and Thursday of next week from 4 to 8 at the St. George's Church hall.

Now here is an event of a different sort, and a little more exclusive. Are you a former playboy bunny? Well then, have I got a scoop for you! Former bunny Linda Shoofey is looking for her friends(bunnies use to travel in packs you see), who used to work at the Montreal Playboy Club in the late 60s. It seems they plan on having a reunion (those wascally wabbits — Elmer Fudd from Bugs Bunny), after 20 years. All former bunnies, are encouraged to contact Linda at (514) 849-9376. Former customers are encouraged to pay a visit also, the event will take place at Zhivago's in Montreal. While all this may sound kind of bizarre to you, there is some history here. Last year the last playboy club in North America closed down. The clubs themselves are sort of a microcosm of the 60s. So if you are interested then hop to it.

WHAT'S ON

Theatre

Lac Brome Theatre opened its doors on Wednesday to its first ever season of professional drama. Same Time Next Year runs from now until June 28. It runs Wednesday to Sunday with the possibility of dinner theatre. The play, starring David Clarke and Eileen Sproule, is a bedroom comedy in which a man and a woman take one night off every year from their separate marriages to be with each other.

The play is directed by Jack Langedyck, who has just recently directed a play at the Centaur Theatre in Montreal. For more information on the play, and ticket reservation call (514)243-6183 between noon and 2:30. That's about it for theatre, more will be happening in a few weeks when The Piggery, and other local theatres open up.

As for dance, well you'll have to do it on your own, because I don't know of any dance related events going on it the area.

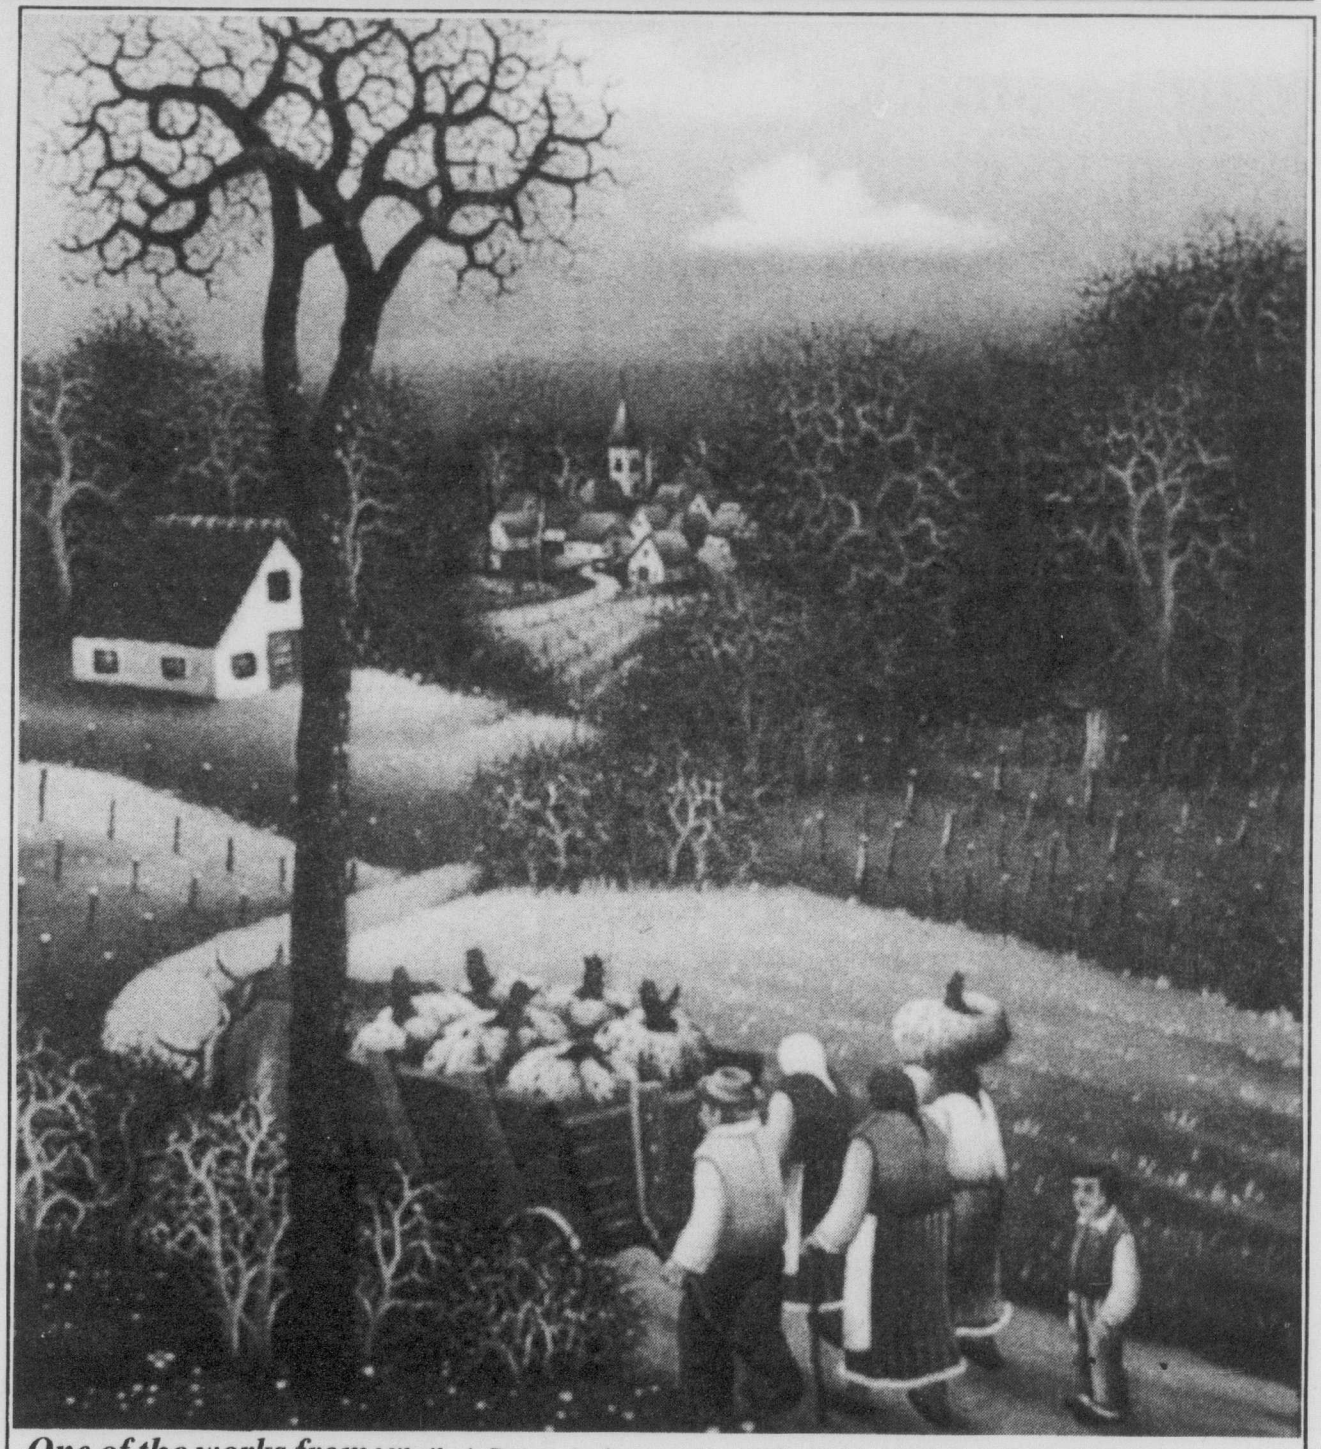

Movies

There is good and bad news for movie fans in the area. The good news is if you wanted to see a movie last week but didn't get the chance, then have no fear because they are still here. The bad news is, of course, that if you have seen them all then there is only one new movie in the region. The Capital Theatre is showing Harry and the Hendersons. It is playing at 6:45 and 9 nightly and for everything you want to know about that film see the review at the bottom of the page.

The Cinémas du Carrefour has the exact same line-up as last week. That means you can see Beverly Hills Cop II at 7 and 9:20 nightly and weekend matinees at 12:10, 2:45, and 4:40. The Untouchables, a film about the fall of Chicago's crime king pin Al Capone, is showing at 7:15 and 9:40 and on the weekend at 12:05, 2:30, and 4:50. If you haven't seen this then you should take it in, but be prepared for lots of violence and blood.

Cinéma Princess in Cowansville continues its double feature of All Nighter at 7:15 and Secret of My Success at 9:05. The former I know little about, but the latter is a good film in which Michael J. Fox plays a small town boy from Kansas who seeks fame and fortune in New York.

Fox's movie is also playing at Merrill's Showplace in Newport at 7 and 9:15 and 1:45 on weekends. B.H. Cop II is also there at 7:20, 9:20, and 2:05 as a weekend matinee. Their last movie, and the first new one in the area, is Predator this stars muscle-man Arnold Schwarzennegar. I don't know anything about the movie except to say if you're the type that likes his movies, then see it. If not, then don't. I do bare tidings of good news for Trekkies. Star Trek: The Voyage Home will be playing at the Maison du Cinéma on Sunday at 1, and from Tuesday to Thursday at 7. This is a must-see even for non-Trekkies, though I always figured everyone was automatically a Trekkie. Maybe you just haven't realized it.

Walt Disney-type movie has a social message too

By Jack Branswell

Everyone has heard about Bigfoot, but few have actually seen the legendary creature. Well the Hendersons have had that illustrious pleasure. The Hendersons are on a unique camping trip — they watch Masterpiece Theatre in their tent — when they run into the fluffy guy. To be more precise their station wagon hits the animal.

After a few moments of deliberation the family decides to take the big guy back home. So they hoist him on top of the wagon, and that is when the fun begins.

You see Harry, the creature's name, is no ordinary Bigfoot, he is a vegetarian, he snores, and he even cries — a perfect Christmas gift for the kids. Harry wreaks havoc on the family's home, and ends up turning the city upside down. It seems no one realizes that Harry is a benevolant Bigfoot.

Harry does have one beef though, he hates to see his follow animals slaughtered by hunters. So Mr. Henderson's (played by John Lithgow) hunting trophies have to go. Harry gives the poor creatures a proper burial in the backyard.

While this is intended to be a fun movie for the kiddies, it also has a social message to it, but do not expect a brilliant statement. This comes in two forms: hunting for pleasure is wrong, and perhaps a deeper one about man's exploitation of animals.

Lithgow decides there is a fortune to be made off Bigfoot. He starts teaching him tricks, but that quickly ends when Harry ends up going through the floor.

The movie has some funny sequences in it, and there are two good suspense moments juxtaposed to make most people in the house scream at least once. The begining and end are particularly well done, and there are some good camera techniques.

The best way to describe this film is as a 'Walt Disney' type. There is a cute, loveable animal, a thrill or two, a few chuckles, and a loose moral somewhere in between all of that. It is corny, there is no doubt about that, but at the same time it kind of reminds you of the movies you use to see as a kid. The kids, and kids at heart, will enjoy this film.

John Lithgow isn't quite sure what he should do with Harry, and the police are nolt much help.

World's smallest city fits on football field

By Christopher Andreae

The Christian Science Monitor

THE HAGUE — "The brochure bids you "Welcome to the Smallest Town in the World."

"Madurodam" - also described as "Holland in a nutshell" - is in the seaside resort of Scheveningen on the outskirts of The Hague. It is a Dutch city entirely in miniature, filled with buildings of all kinds and periods, from the Middle Ages to the present.

With a scale of 1:25, these small buildings make even six-year-olds look like giants. But people of all ages wander around this "city" in a state of childlike wonder, staring and pointing and lost in thought.

No effort has been spared to achieve incredible accuracy in miniaturizing anything from Gothic cathedrals to windmills, from royal residences to railroad stations, and from oil refineries to rows of 17th-century Dutch houses sporting characteristic gables and beautiful brickwork, all squashed together along canals highly reminiscent of that other great Dutch city, Amsterdam.

This city-in-little is a history, geography, and architecture lesson all rolled into one - but it wears its didacticism quite lightly. Above all, it is a tourist attraction boasting over 33 million visitors since it opened in 1952.

If it is the "smallest city" in the world, Madurodam (so called after George Maduro of Willemstad, Curacaco, a young hero of World War II whose parents provided the original capital for the project) is also surely the largest small city in the world. It is set out in an area the size of a football field. If you follow its carefully organized routing - and you won't want to miss any of the 130 points of interest numbered and described in the essential guidebook - you actually walk about two miles.

In the company of a crowd of Dutch weekenders, we studied its meticulously detailed sights inch by inch and were amazed at its ambitiousness.

One of the first buildings encountered is a replica of an elaborate cathedral, Sint Jan Basiliek 's-' Hertogenbosch - the most important medieval church in the Netherlands. It is "on the same plan," we are informed, "as the cathedral of Amiens in France, but with five instead of three aisles." The guidebook (which swings amiably between mock-solemn "Madurodam history" and factual descriptions of the real buildings of which the models are replicas) observes that the St. Jan was built between 1330 and 1550 - taking over 200 years to complete. The miniature copy of it at Madurodam, almost as amazingly, took five years. It, like all the other buildings here, is constructed in wood colored and protected against the weather by paint. Each building is repainted every five years. Since every slate, stone, and brick appears to be present and correct, it is very hard to believe that Madurodam's architecture is made of nothing but wood.

Amazed visitors on every hand look delightedly at the Royal Golden Coach and procession of tiny figures outside the "Binnenhof" (the old administrative center of the Netherlands in the Hague), or peer down at the shoppers milling about under the brightly colored canopies in the "B. Boon-vander Starp Square" (named after the initiator and founder of Madurodam), or discover the "genuine" Dutch street organ and the old-fashioned scissors-grinder at work in front of a row of houses with shop windows displaying minuscule goods. (The organ gives you a tune for a small payment, which, like rest of the $250,000 yearly profit from the city, goes to charity.)

Or visitors watch the trains that wind continually throughout Madurodam at alarming speed, only stopping for signals and at stations; and the planes that taxi magnificently on the tarmac at Schiphol-Madurodam Airport; and the boats and ships moving majestically about the great port.

Then there is the motorway, with its continuous line of traffic; the Royal Dutch Automobile Club Skidding School (watched inevitably by a row of fascinated youngsters intent on learning the skill of getting safely out of a skid even before they have learned to drive).

There is a football (soccer) match under way at the Madurodam Sports Park. And sunbathers lie around on the silver-gold beaches at the Watersports Centre, while other leisure enthusiasts go waterskiing or windsurfing in the blue water nearby. It is a city full of life and incident, all to scale. Even the endlessly pruned trees are in keeping, and the bulbs and annual flowers are chosen for their smallness.

After dark the entire place lights up with some 50,000 little lights - a sight we unfortunately missed, but plan to see next time. It is reportedly spectacular.

This year Madurodam is presenting for the second time nightly hour-long sound-and-light shows. They are to start half an hour after the usual closing times. Audiences of 450 people, each equipped with headphones and a commentary in his or her own language, sit on the "dike" that surrounds the city and listen to stories about many of the buildings. This will start May 1 and continue through the end of September. There are also some special exhibitions this year - one about board games, another about scale models, and a display of Argentine crafts.

Buildings of all kinds line this, the world's smallest city in The Hague.
