CLERGY RESERVES.—His Majesty having been graciously pleased to erect and constitute a Corporation, consisting of the Bishop of this Diocese and the Clergy of the Church of England holding benefices within this Province, for the superintending, managing and conducting the Reserves made or to be made for the support of a Protestant Clergy within the Province, PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given, that all Leases of such Reserves will in future be granted by the said

Clergy Reserves under Lease or occupying them without title, who are in arrears in the payment of rent for the lots respectively held by them, that the Ministers of the Church of England residing nearest to such lots are severally authorized on the part of the Corporation to receive arrears of Rent, or in cases where such arrears shall be large, to compound for them: such composition is to be subject to the approbation of the Principal and Directors of the Corporation:—
And all persons, so in arrears, are called upon to make payment forthwith accordingly, and to prevent, thereby, the necessity of further proceedings against them.
By order of the Corporation,<

Mr. Robinson said, the Right Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Robinson) laid down very fine moral principles, but he regretted that his subject of importance, the liberal trade, was not in the cabinet. The Wool Tax he considered a most impolitic one, and deplored with too much precipitation.

Mr. Beaumont concurred in the principles laid down by the Lord, Gentleman (Mr. Baring). Much of the evil under which the country now laboured might be traced to her commercial system, and the sooner it was improved the better.

Lord Milner said, he heard the petition read, and the speech by which it was introduced, with great satisfaction. If there was anything which, in the present state of the country, could tend to give solid consolation, it was to hear the true principles of political economy and commerce avowed, and to see those just and fair principles enforced in a petition from the merchants of the City of London. The speech of the President of the Board of Trade, were it not for a little alloy, was calculated to give the same satisfaction.

Mr. Russell contended, the present distresses ought not to be attributed to the resumption of cash-payments. During the time of the Committee, the price of bullion was £4 7s., and the depreciation of currency about 30 or 35 per cent.; and therefore some sacrifice must be made, in coming to the present price of bullion and the present state of currency. He had heard with pleasure the object of a free trade discussed to-night, and it gave him satisfaction that so respectable a body as the Merchants of London have risen to that discussion; but it astonished him to see that those principles laid down so many years since by Adam Smith were only progress. The House must be well aware of the difficulties and obstacles to be met with in return to a former state of things. He agreed with the Noble Lord in the opinion that the House ought seriously to consider the inadequacy of the country to pay the interest of its foreign debt with facility; but he thought nothing more unjust than to let the House revert mostly from the old laws, to the ruin of many persons of large capital, who entered into speculations upon the faith of these laws—but by saying so, he did not mean to argue that such a course was not to be pursued—he did not mean to argue, if they were wrong that they ought not to retrace their steps; such an argument would be an argument for revolution. If they could follow the example of the Bullion Committee, they would say after so many years we will revert to the old system. A Committee might be appointed to see what was desirable to be done, and to give notice to persons now engaged in trade, which might be affected by such alterations. He thought it would be wrong to make an exception in favour of the Corn Laws, unless it could be shown that the growers of corn lay under some peculiar burdens; that case, duties equal to these burdens should be laid on importation. He would be glad to know if such peculiar burdens lay on the growers of corn; but may be said they were affected by other duties and other taxes from the community to all—They might say they were affected by the Poor Laws. He would admit the restrictions, but these should be equal to the increase in the price of corn by the Poor Laws. Another subject was alluded to pressing on the corn-growers, namely, tithes. He thought it tended to raise the price of corn. They must support the poor, but if corn were imported, he thought the tithes derived from it grew in the country would be sufficient for the support of the clergy. He thought no countervailing duties ought to be imposed in that respect. He was sorry for taking up so much of the time of the House at so late a period of the debate.

Mr. Elliker said, with respect to the petition before the House, cordially concurred in all its objects, and he gave full credit to professions of the Right Hon. Gentleman opposite (Mr. Robinson), that the principles of the petition had his concurrence; unfortunately for the Right Hon. Gentleman, the present enormous debt, and the state of our finances, prevented any great extension of the subject. Other things must be done before any extension could be hoped for such alterations. An Hon. Friend of his had mentioned, that a large number of capitalists had withdrawn their capital from that circumstance; but in his (Mr. E.'s) opinion, the gentleman mistook the cause. If a manufactory of the same article was in Lancashire and in Glasgow, and the rate of labour was equally high, the Lancashire manufacturer can apply to the poor rates for part of the wages, while the Glasgow manufacturer has not such a resource. To this circumstance might be ascribed much of the distress in Scotland, because the English manufacturer could undersell him.

Mr. Mackay said, he would allow that we could get the produce of our colonies taken in foreign bottoms for half the freight to English ships; but it ought not to be allowed, as the colonies would contribute to the prosperity of the state.

Mrs. T. Wilson conceived it his duty to agree with the statement of an Hon. Member who had said, that much of the distress owing to the present taxation; but a great part of what was proposed to be done was, in his opinion impossible. His view of the subject, was, that the petition ought to be divided, and subdivided, and each particular grievance set forth and referred to a committee.

The petition was then ordered to lie on the table.

LONDON, May 9.

The Morning Chronicle says—"It was finally determined, in a council held at the King's Palace, on Saturday last, that the oration shall take place on Tuesday the 1st of August; and necessary directions were issued accordingly."

The Park was crowded to an excess on Sunday—French fashions are now running into the grotesque. The lengthened sash and the high ruff remind us of the days of "Good Queen Anne." Tight lacing is still the favorite form for female dress; they fight against the waist with a prodigious sweep downwards. The tight corset now displays a figure in trimmings than the rest of the habit.—Ostrich feathers, flowers, ornament the net, or hat; and they are so numerous as to amount almost to caricature. All the leaders in high life were there, in person. Nothing new in vehicles, except a more than usual production of the gay vis-a-vis. The Marquis of Anglesea and his infant daughters were mounted on their couriers, displaying grace and symmetry. The "Fours-in-hand" are dwindling thing! Most of the leaders drive a cabriolet—"Oh! what fun it is there."

The following account of Edwards is copied from the Morning Advertiser—"Some time before Thistlewood was released from Sliam Gaoil, a meeting of some Radicals took place. Edwards was one of the party, and as the gill filiations were abundant left the society in a state of intoxication. On his road he got into a dispute, and a scuffle ensued; the watchman called, and on his attempting to take him into custody, Edwards took a pistol and fired it at him. He was, however, seized, and next day brought up for examination before a Magistrate. The prisoner had by this time become sensible of the awful nature of his deed. He requested a private audience, and desired to make important disclosures provided they would not recede him for the events of the night before. This was granted, and other means were probably employed to induce the confidant was then conducted to the Home Department Office, and was regularly examined. The plot, real or pretended, consisting first to the City of London during the Smithfield Meeting, was disclosed. Hence the Lord Mayor's declaration on the spot, and the cry of "Fire, fire!" which so often assailed the city Magistrate. Soon after this, his meetings with the Radicals became more frequent. He displayed a comparative state of peace, and entered more deeply in the plans of the Radicals. Thistlewood was then made acquainted with him at Preston's, and connected themselves intimately together. Amongst others, dined with little Waddington, and offered him money to purchase at a shop near Clare-market. The little man wisely declined, and he has since written to Alderman Wood requesting audience for the purpose of giving information on oath on this subject."

The erection of Telegraphs along the coast for the suppression of smuggling has already commenced, and it is expected that the work will be soon completed. They are to extend from Dunstaffnage to the Isle of Sheppey, and to communicate with the seafarers from Jamaica on the approach of suspicious vessels.

A letter from Admiral Sir Horatio Popham, Commander-in-Chief at station, had been long in the hands of the Admiralty, from the Sydney, in so dangerous a state of health, that his life was despaired of. In some of those deaths of the gallant Admiral is unusual, but we hope erroneously.

In the night of the 2nd instant, (two nights after the foul and rainy attempt upon the health of the widowed Duchess of Devonshire, and the life of her unborn offspring.) Blaise Mouchard, a member of the guard, was set upon by a band of assassins, severely wounded by a pistol shot, and robbed of a number of dispatches, of the pass-word of the night, of which he was the bearer. The fact was manifestly the object of the traitorous assassins; but the purpose for which they intended to use it was frustrated by the change of mind of the wounded soldier, who immediately communicated the circumstance to the proper authority, in consequence of which the pass-word was changed.

The Chamber of Deputies was occupied during the early part of Thursday in forming anew the respective Bureaus; and subsequently, for the remainder of that day, and the whole of Friday, discussing the new commercial arrangements which are contemplated in view of the spirit of the exclusive system.

We have received Hamburg Papers to the 24 inst. An article in Stockholm, of the 11th ult., mentions, that corn being so scarce in Scandinavia, the land-owners could not sell without loss, and government had appropriated a large sum to purchase that article for the Crown magazines.

Our Bathurst, we hear, has consented that if the Emigrants themselves find their passage to Quebec, they will, on arriving, receive for each individual of a family ten pounds to settle upon the 100 acres of land. The objection to this plan is insurmountable. It would not greatly remove the difficulties at present presented; for there are many thousands in the West of Scotland who would readily run all chances on the other side of the Atlantic, provided they were once furnished with the means of going across. The chief difficulty is surmounted when the Emigrant is in Canada Now, to remove the objection, we should insist that while there are so many vessels of war in ordinary service in our harbours, and when there is so many men in military service who might not gate these ships, there could be, no great objections to employ them in this work of benevolence. The victualing and tare and wear of the vessels could not be very expensive. If this plan were adopted, the great difficulty would be surmounted, and the ten pounds could be receivable without abatement at Quebec. But it may be said that ten pounds a-head is a large sum, and that the additional expense of the transport of the transport which cannot exceed two pounds a head in a King's ship be deducted from the ten pounds allowed, and then the Emigrant will fall to receive eight pounds at Quebec—a sum sufficient for the supply of all his wants until he be enabled by his industry to support himself.—Gloucester Chronicle.

GLASGOW, May 14.

Since our last, we have heard of seven more of the Radical leaders having been apprehended in this district and committed to prison. In two cases, the civil officers alone executed the warrants, but, in others they had along with them detachments of military.—Courier.

French Newspapers.—The Parisian opposition newspapers present a curious appearance at present; in every column almost you see a hiatus of ten lines or more, wherever the censors have objected to the article. Thus the journals are like fragments of political essays, and the reader is left to fill up twenty blank spaces in every sheet, according to his imagination.

The astronomers in England are quite busy in calculating the eclipse of the Sun, which will take place on the 7th of September next. The eclipse will be visible over an extent of more than 4,000,000 square leagues, a surface nearly equal to a sixth part of the earth, and resembling a kind of oval of about 7,500 leagues in circumference; comprising all Europe, the western part of Asia, all Africa, as far as Mohopora, and a part of North-America. The eclipse will last three hours.

LONDON, May 4.—Iron Boat.—A passage boat of malleable iron, now plies on the Forth and Clyde Canal, in Scotland. It is called the Vulcan, and succeeds to admiration.

The length is 65 feet, beam 15 feet, depth 5 feet; draught of water when launched, 25 inches abaft, and 19 inches forward; when fitted with cabins, keel 57 and 25 inches—when laden with 200 passengers and their baggage, under 48 inches on an even keel. The weight of iron employed was 12 tons 11½ cwt. which is less than a wooden vessel of the same dimensions. The iron is of the kind called scrap.

NEW YORK, June 19.—SIR JAMES KEMPE, the new Governor of Nova Scotia, has arrived at Halifax in the Phaeton frigate.

June 20.—Capt. Hillart, of the fast sailing Brig American, has favored the editors of the Mercantile Advertiser with Barcelona papers to the 6th of May, containing Madrid dates to the 26th April.

The King remained at Madrid, and all was quiet in Spain. The elections of members of the Cortes were going on.

An Extract from a letter dated St. Thomas, 50th May last, to a Merchant in this city.

Sir, I am sorry to inform you that the market at this place is dull beyond any thing heretofore known, no sale scarcely for any one article worth mentioning. The following prices are as near as can be obtained:

Best superfine flour, D5 25; second quality D4 50; rye flour D3; corn meal D18 30; navy bread D5; candles 19 cents; no sales can be effected at the above prices at present.

June 21.—Yellow Fever.—A letter was received yesterday morning from a gentleman in Charleston, stating that two cases of yellow fever had just occurred in that city. It was supposed to have been imported in a vessel from the Havana.

Western navigation.—The Louisiana Advertiser, of the 6th of May, gives the names and destination of twenty-three steam boats then lying in the port of New-Orleans.

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—There never has been a fairer prospect than the present, of a bountiful harvest for the husbandman. The orchards are loaded with teeming fruit. Garden productions are the most prolific and luxurious, and are sold in our markets at very low prices. Strawberries, cherries, cabbages, cauliflower, and the whole tribe of vegetables and fruits are abundant.—Butter, and animal food are equally reasonable.
