As the visiting Arabs returned to Hatley Acres yesterday, the car leading the procession overshot the gates. The car which was second in line slammed on its brakes but could not avoid plowing into the lead car, just as the third car smashed into the rear end of the second. Above, the passengers of the second car, somewhat dazed by the incident, walk away from their wreck.

'My friends came to visit'

By ANNA FUDAKOWSKA

NORTH HATLEY — "Please excuse the working cups," said the man who has risen from obscurity to an overnight Township legend as an inventor, investor and friend of the world's richest royalty.

Saad Gabr has tea served in regular mugs as he sat discussing business with a British lawyer, Cavaan Taylor. "My Arab friends are from not just Saudi Arabia, you know. They also come from Egypt and Jordan, you know. I have invited them to discuss my studies and because they are my friends. There is nothing mysterious to that, is there? They are here to visit with me and to see how I live. I have answered all the questions, have I not?"

"We possess expertise, markets and money; we don't seek anything from Canada we don't already have," said

Gabr, the official spokesman and host for the Saudi Arabian delegation touring the Eastern Townships since Sunday. It includes Prince Mohammed Al Faisal, the nephew of Saudi Arabia's king, and a retinue of approximately 50 people. The group also includes the University of Jeddah's president, Dr. O. Nasseef and Dr. El Nagar of the Association of Islami Banks.

SHERBROOKE — The man who would supply the entire Arab world with fresh drinking water from icebergs towed from Antarctica was given the royal welcome he merited at a gala civic reception at Domaine Howard last night.

Prince Mohammed Al Faisal, nephew of the king of Saudi Arabia and a possible heir to the throne of the world's richest oil-producing nation, was accompanied by about 30 Saudi businessmen and aides as he was welcomed by Mayor Jacques O'Bready.

The reception included a press conference, called to dispel the aura of mystery surrounding the visit by the prince and his retinue to the Games hiring 'secret'

MONTREAL (CP) — Parisian architect Roger Taillibert was the darboard Tuesday as a provincial government inquiry continued its hearings into the inflated cost of staging the 1976 Summer Olympics.

A city engineer testified Mayor Jean Drapeau once told him to keep it secret that Taillibert had been hired to design the main Olympic facilities in east-end Montreal. It also was revealed a provincial watchdog committee could not get the City of Montreal to reveal terms of the architect's hiring.

Taillibert is said to have demanded between $10 million and $20 million for his work, and his designs have been cited as one reason the Games cost $1.27 billion, 10 times the original estimate made in 1969.

The architect has been paid $4 million, and has been offered an additional $2.8 million by the Quebec government, which took over responsibility for completing the project from the city.

The government says Taillibert never signed a formal contract.

"KEPT SECRET"

Engineer Claude Phaneuf testified that when he and the mayor discussed the man who would design the 70,000-seat stadium and other Games facilities, "it was understood that it was to be kept secret that Taillibert was working on the designs."

Drapeau had asked the 40-year-old engineer, now in private practice, to find a suitable model for an Olympic stadium for Montreal.

Phaneuf visited several European stadiums, and in 1971 recommended the Parc des Princes in Paris, designed by Taillibert. The news that Taillibert would handle the project was not released until almost a year later.

Phaneuf, a onetime head of the city department which looks after sidewalk and playground construction, said that at first he had no mandate to deal with Olympic construction and worked on plans in his spare time.

He testified that after he was officially named to coordinate the planning of Olympic construction he had to draw up cost estimates based solely on figures provided by Taillibert.

Tax wording dropped

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec cabinet appears to have backed off slightly from recent suggestions that the question presented to voters in the promised independence referendum will revolve around provincial taxation powers.

In separate statements Tuesday, Premier Rene Levesque and Bernard Landry, minister of economic development, both emphasized that although tax powers are an important component of political sovereignty, the referendum question will be worded more broadly.

They were commenting on a statement by Camille Laurin, minister of cultural development, who said on the weekend that the only essential element of

Court backs unilingual work rights

HULL, Que. (CP) — The federal government must adhere to Quebec legislation forbidding the firing of an employee because he or she speaks only French, Maurice Vassart, Quebec labor commissioner, ruled Tuesday.

The Quebec legislation applies to all workers, even those living in another province and working in Quebec-based federal buildings, Vassart said.

Quebec law states that no one working in the province can be fired, laid off, demoted or have his or her job status changed solely on the grounds of speaking only French.

The labor commissioner made the ruling after Helene Saumure, a unilingual French security guard, was fired June 12 from a company with a federal government contract because she could not speak English.

Federal government officials immediately went to work to study the possible ramifications of the ruling on their bilingualism policies.

In a move to give the national capital region—both Ottawa and neighboring Hull—a more bilingual flavor the federal government has attempted to place bilingual persons in most jobs where there is contact with the public.

Max Yalden, official languages commissioner, said the ruling should not be a blow to efforts to increase bilingual services.

Unilingual French employees could still be teamed with unilingual English employees. The services would be bilingual although the staff would be unilingual.

Yalden did believe the federal government must study all ramifications of the ruling to see what, if any effect, it will have on its language requirements for Quebec employees.

He also said the ruling raises the question of whether provincial or federal labor laws should apply in such cases.

Vassart ruled that provincial legislation must apply. Vassart had also ruled that Ms. Saumure be compensated for salary lost since her firing. She had been rehired two weeks ago.

Federal Government officials said they are studying the situation and may appeal.

Month's price hike lowest since 1975

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices in August rose by only one-tenth of one per cent, the smallest monthly increase since December, 1975, Statistics Canada reported today.

But the 12-month inflation rate remained at a relatively high 9.4 per cent compared with 9.8 per cent in July, the federal agency's consumer price index indicated.

Lower prices for fresh vegetables and beef were chiefly responsible for a two-per-cent decline in the cost of food consumed at home. Food has been the major factor behind inflation this year.

Statistics Canada said the seasonal availability of local produce was behind a 19.4-per-cent decrease in fresh vegetable prices in the month. Beef prices dropped by 4.3 per cent.

However increases for some other foods such as pork, wieners and canned salmon as well as a two-per-cent rise in restaurant food prices somewhat dampened the impact of the price decreases.

Prices for items other than food rose by seven-tenths of one per cent in August, led by higher costs for gasoline and increased rents.

Other factors behind the increase in the index, which is the most frequently-used inflation yardstick, were higher home-ownership charges, increased telephone rates in Ontario and Quebec, higher car insurance premiums and increased prices for some imported cars.

Despite the decline in food prices for August, food now costs the consumer 17.8 per cent more than a year ago.

Food prices, which account for 27 per cent of the index, have been a major concern for government officials in the last two years as they try to wind down the anti-inflation program. Under the program, most workers are held to raises of six per cent.

Costs to consumers of items excluding food were up 6.2 per cent in the 12-month period ending in August.

When energy cost increases are taken out of the index, prices over all actually declined by one-tenth of one per cent.

The over-all consumer price index, established on a base of 100 in 1971, stood at 177.8 in August, compared with 177.7 in July and 162.5 in August, 1977.

That means that consumer goods and services costing $100 in 1971 would have cost $177.80 in August, $177.70 in July and $162.50 in August, 1977.

The purchasing power of a 1971 dollar was 56 cents in August, compared with 62 cents a year ago.

THE WEATHER

A ridge of high pressure will dominate the weather in all of Quebec today and Thursday. We are forecasting mainly sunny skies for the whole province. However, some cold air is accompanying this ridge and therefore temperatures will be about five degrees below seasonal values even though the sun will shine brightly. There is also a risk of frost in most regions tonight. There will be a slow warming trend Thursday.

Cultural services cuts expected

OTTAWA (CP) — Some services provided by federal government arts and culture agencies will have to be reduced because of budget cuts, Secretary of State John Roberts said in a statement yesterday.

He said the budget cuts for his department and the agencies reporting to Parliament through him total $159.8 million, including the previously announced $71-million reduction in the CBC's planned budget for next fiscal year.

Other major reductions are $34 million expected to be saved by putting a ceiling on the federal government's contribution to provincial language-training programs, and $17.5-million cut from the Public Service Commission.

As directly related to the arts, however, the budget cuts are modest. From the Canada Council's arts program currently estimated at $43.8 million, a reduction of $1.1 million has been ordered.

Roberts said that while the cuts are serious and will curtail some services provided by his department, "I hope that a major portion of these cuts can be offset by increased administrative efficiency."

Lending rate climbs

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce raised its minimum lending rate today in response to the increase announced Monday by the Bank of Canada.

The increase by the Toronto-based bank was ½ of one per cent to 10¼ per cent, effective Wednesday.

The bank said other rates were under review.

Bomb detection...

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Research Council is working on a process of detecting explosives which, if successful, could eliminate lengthy searches by bomb squads, council president W.G. Schneider says in his annual report.

But those involved with the project Monday refused to give any details about the process, which uses electrochemical analysis, for fear terrorists could develop counter measures.

Schneider's report, which highlights research projects carried out by the council, says the method being developed would analyse the air exhausted from an aircraft cabin, for example, and reliably detect quantities of vapors characteristic to explosives.

A spokesman for the transport department, which is also involved in the project, said it is hoped the unit will be ready for testing next year. Similar research had been carried out in a number of countries.

Pain killer restricted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government announced Monday it is placing tighter restrictions on a painkilling drug known as Talwin.

The drug enforcement administration said the prescription drug will be controlled through strict accounting and record-keeping procedures by manufacturers, drug wholesalers and pharmacies, and prescriptions will be limited to five refills within six months.

Maclean's executive editor resigns

TORONTO (CP) — John Gault, executive editor of Maclean's magazine, said Monday he has resigned over a decision by the magazine's publisher to change the cover of Maclean's inaugural weekly issue.

Kevin Doyle, managing editor of the magazine, had said earlier Monday that he had received no resignations, despite published reports that several senior editors and writers had threatened to resign.

Gault said in an interview that the magazine was slated to go on the stands with a cover cartoon of Prime Minister Trudeau.

However, publisher Lloyd Hodgkinson ordered it replaced after he found it grotesque and unflattering, Gault said.

Gault said he felt the cover was changed because it could have proved embarrassing to magazine executives when they present Trudeau with a copy of the inaugural issue.

The cartoon, depicting Trudeau backed into a corner with a rose on the ground in front of him, appears now on an inside page of the magazine and accompanies an article critical of the prime minister's hesitation in calling a federal election this fall.

Gault called the Trudeau cartoon "a superb cover that totally complements the inside story."

He said other Maclean's staffers have been demoralized by the cover switch and have talked privately about resigning, "but it's their decision to make."

Vancouver-area farmers urged to grow vegetables

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chao Fan, China's vice-minister of agriculture and forestry, says Vancouver-area farmers should grow vegetables so that British Columbia consumers don't need to rely on United States imports.

Chao is a senior minister and director-general of the National Bureau of State Farms and is largely responsible for agricultural production in a country where the population is expected to reach 900 million by 1990.

In China agriculture represents one-quarter of the gross national product.

"We think here, in the Vancouver area, you have the climate and soil conditions favorable to vegetable production," Chao said in an interview.

"Based on our own experiences, I feel it is possible to support an urban population with local agriculture."

Chao, who led a 12-member delegation from the People's Republic on a month-long tour of various agricultural and research projects across Canada, said he was impressed by the research work on vegetable production conducted in the Vancouver area.

BETTER APPROACH

He added that, based on what his group and other Chinese delegations learn in touring various countries, China hopes to become more scientific in its farming approach.

Chao said the Chinese are proud of their agricultural advances, which have increased grain production by 150 per cent since 1949 when the late chairman Mao Tse-tung's Communist party proclaimed the People's Republic of China.

"As a result, we are able to use only seven per cent of the world's agricultural land to support 20 per cent of the world's population," Chao said.

He also said the Chinese would like to increase domestic productivity so they relied less on imports.

He cited mechanization, irrigation and use of fertilizers and pesticides as areas where China's agricultural industry could improve.

Chao said his delegation was particularly interested in B.C. livestock artificial insemination methods, since China is attempting to step up its production of meat, with emphasis on beef.

Canadian oil magnate prospers

CALGARY (CP) — Robert Blair and the companies he leads are the big success stories of the Canadian oil industry.

But as an individual, Blair is the antithesis of the oil-tycoon image.

"I am not rich, not even a millionaire," he said in an interview, describing himself as a senior employee who can be fired by the board if he blunders. He puts in plenty of 12-hour days, seven-day weeks.

Since he became president of Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. (AGTL) of Calgary in 1970, Alberta's principal gas-transmission company has experienced a spectacular growth in diversification and earnings.

In 1977, the company reported revenue of $366 million and net income of $57 million—up 30 and 46 per cent, respectively, from 1976—compared with revenue of $47 million and net income of $10 million in 1970.

Under Blair's stewardship, AGTL has established, acquired or invested in two dozen wholly and partially-owned subsidiaries and companies in which it has minority interests, sponsoring some of the most ambitious energy and related projects ever undertaken in Canada.

OWNS HEAVY OIL

These include the Alaska Highway gas pipeline, the Alberta Petrochemical complex and the recent acquisition of a controlling interest in Husky Oil Ltd., which has extensive heavy-oil holdings in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

They also include partnership with Petro-Canada, the national oil company, in developing technology for Arctic gas transportation and proposing a gas pipeline to the Maritimes.

His latest coup was beating out Occidental Petroleum Corp. of Los Angeles and Petro-Canada for control of Husky Oil.

With a $200-million line of credit from banks arranged on a Sunday, he acquired 35 per cent of Husky Oil shares in two days of trading on the stock market. That was enough to give AGTL the principal-shareholder position in Husky Oil.

But his cause celebre was, as a veritable David against Goliath, squeezing out the mighty Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline consortium backed by major U.S.-controlled companies in getting the nod from the Canadian and U.S. governments to build the Canadian section of a gas pipeline from Alaska.

LARGEST PROJECT

The Canadian section of the $10.5-billion Alaska Highway pipeline—the largest civil engineering project ever undertaken—is estimated to cost $4.4 billion. It will be built by Foothills Pipe Lines (Yukon) Ltd., owned equally by AGTL and Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. of Vancouver.

Success hasn't changed Robert Blair much.

He is rather withdrawn—"I am shy in a natural way." A loner in some respects, he likes to retreat to his farm just outside Calgary whenever he can find time from the fastpaced, tough and competitive world of pipelines, petrochemicals and gas marketing.

Blair dresses fashionably and tastefully but is given to wearing cowboy boots, if he feels like it, during formal occasions.

He speaks quietly, choosing his words with care. He speaks with a Scottish burr his mother gave him.

Blair smiles often with boyish charm. He looks more like the boxing champ he was in his youth than a poised businessman, despite his graying and receding hairline—of which he is quite conscious—and a dark moustache.

Marine president denies dredging knowledge

TORONTO (CP) — Gerard Filion testified in his own defence Monday that while he was president of Marine Industries Ltd. he knew almost nothing about the company's dredging division.

He testified that the dredging division was run almost entirely by a company vice-president, Louis DeRome, who died seven years ago.

"I have never seen a dredge in my life," the retired president told an Ontario Supreme Court jury hearing charges that Filion, 10 other men and nine companies defrauded public agencies of more than $4 million by rigging dredging contracts between 1969 and 1975.

Filion, 69, former publisher of the Montreal newspaper Le Devoir, said his role as president of Marine Industries Ltd. was mainly in the area of public relations and financing.

The dredging division was run by DeRome, who had been with the company for about 45 years, Filion said.

"I was the chief, but DeRome was the chief operating officer of dredging," Filion said. "He ran the whole show with only one exception: capital investment and disposal of assets."

Filion is the second of the accused men to testify in his own defence at the trial, now in its sixth week. Last week, Harold McNamara, president of McNamara Corp. Ltd. of Toronto, denied involvement in bid-rigging on any of the seven dredging jobs in the indictment.

Bell warning

OTTAWA (CP) — Gordon Fairweather, the federal human rights commissioner, told Bell Canada officials Monday to examine hiring policies for unintentional discrimination against minorities, women and the handicapped.

Fairweather's commission reported last month that it found evidence of discrimination against women, but not against Jewish applicants, in a contract to develop the Saudi Arabian telephone network.

"Obviously you are not bigots, you are not deliberately denying employment opportunities to minorities, or women or the handicapped," Fairweather said in a news release about his statement to Bell officials.

"But the purity of your motives is not what matters. What really matters is the actual impact of your employment systems and personnel practices."

The release said the sexual discrimination case is expected to be settled through conciliation. The findings were made during an investigation prompted by Liberal MP Herb Gray. Gray laid a complaint that Bell discriminated against Jewish applicants in its telephone project.

Computer confusion

MONTREAL (CP) — Technicians are baffled by a malfunction in The Montreal Stock Exchange's new computer which has prevented the transmission of stock tables to The Canadian Press since early last week, exchange president Robert Demers said Monday.

The new computer system—a pair of Hewlett-Packard 21MX minicomputers installed last Tuesday to replace an eight-year-old RCA computer—is not the main problem, Demers said.

He said the computer has been providing exchange officials with all the information it is supposed to, but once it is used to transmit this information to The Canadian Press, something goes wrong.

He said technicians have so far been unable to pinpoint the problem. "If we knew what the problem was, we would have corrected it overnight."

Demers said, however, that the computer will resume sending trading information to brokers and financial institutions today.

Take a powder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking a powder? That phrase soon may take on new meaning as powdered liquor is introduced to the U.S. market.

"We're looking initially to the outdoorsy market and the fellow who doesn't want to keep large inventories of different kinds of liquor around," said Mike Hill of Global Marketing Inc., the Portland, Ore., firm handling the product.

Known as Sure Shot, the powder, developed in Japan, will be test-marketed as single-serving cans, but Hill said future plans call for foil pouches and larger containers.

Sale of the powdered alcohol was held up for several months while the treasury department decided how to tax it.

Officials finally settled on taxing the mix based on the volume of alcohol, which is in tiny particles suspended in a powder that looks like gelatin dessert mix.

In fact, the first Japanese sales were as a rose wine gelatin.

All that is needed to drink one of the powdered cocktails is to add water.

Taxation cripples mines

TORONTO (CP) — Taxation policies have dealt a crippling blow to the Canadian mining industry in recent years, the chairman of Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. said yesterday.

Ronald Fraser told a conference of provincial mines ministers that the industry has been a battleground in a fiscal jurisdictional dispute between Ottawa and the provinces and neither side is coming to its rescue.

The mining industry is highly cyclical and fiscal policies must recognize this pattern, Fraser said.

"The tax assault on mining profits in the early 1970s has to a great extent crippled the industry financially."

He said the long lead time between the start of an exploration program and the actual production requires a stable tax policy in order to encourage entrepreneurs to make the necessary investment.

They want "reasonable security that their fiscal assumptions will not be turned upside down half way through the project."

"Mining is not an industry that responds to continual fiscal fine tuning."

NOT ROBUST

Fraser said the mining industry's health is generally more sensitive than that of other industries and this has been apparent in Canada in recent years.

"The fall in Canada's mining industry from being the cynosure of mining industries everywhere in the '50s to very nearly a basket case in the '70s is something for which Ottawa and various provincial capitals can claim undisputed credit, just as predecessor governments can claim the credit for having put Canadian mining where it was in the first place."

Fraser took issue with the so-called conservator society which he said imposes artificial limits on development of resources out of consideration for supposed future needs.

He said billions of dollars that might have kept the Canadian industry healthy and growing are going to foreign countries to develop projects far more uneconomic than many which are "languishing" in Canada.

This comes at a time when those foreign countries "are pushing out unneeded metal to depress our markets, often high-grading and gutting deposits in a manner which even the most ruggedly independent miner would recognize as anticonservative."

Text of Fraser's address was released before delivery.

Summer fun?

TRADE PRACTICES — "Spectacular summer fun sale for a limited time only! With the purchase of any used car or truck, with a value of over $1,000, you may purchase a completely mobile Panasonic TV for only one dollar."

Sound like a great deal? That is what a consumer thought when he read the advertisement in the Regina Leader-Post. So he hurried off to Mid-West Motors in the same city and bought a car. With the deal over, he preferred a dollar and asked for his TV set. Then he found the catch. If you dickered, you did not get. The one-dollar TV set was available only if you paid what the company demanded.

And that is when the district manager for marketing Practices in Regina stepped in. When revisions to the Combines Investigations Act came into force in January 1976, rules were spelt out dealing with untrue or misleading advertising and deceptive marketing practices to protect unwary consumers and honest competitors.

One of the areas covered was that of general impression.

The revised provisions, aimed at preventing any misrepresentation about goods or services offered for sale, specified that even if an advertisement was technically accurate, the advertiser could be prosecuted if the general impression was misleading in a material respect.

Investigations were carried out and Mid-West Motors was charged and subsequently found guilty by the Court for running three advertisements all misleading in a material respect.

When the company decided to abandon its appeal against conviction and sentence, the consumer instituted proceedings against Mid-West Motors.

He was able to do this thanks to another section of the Combines Investigation Act. This allows a consumer to seek redress by suing the guilty party for an amount equal to the loss or damage proved to have been suffered, and to use conviction as one proof in a civil suit.

The consumer took his case to the Small claims Court and was successful in his claim for damages amounting to $209 — the retail price of the television set — plus $5. costs. It pays to complain — and it pays to know your rights under the law.

Maple syrup complaints

Late last spring, we heard of a number of complaints voiced by maple syrup producers in the area. Their problems were centered around the government inspection and classification of syrup being sold to local maple product companies.

Before the commercial buyer purchases the produce, it is standard procedure for the syrup to be inspected and graded by government officials at the company warehouse. The price offered by the company is dependent upon this classification.

In one instance related to us, a farmer was told that he had to accept a 'B' grade for his syrup with a penalty for 'buddiness' and thus a price of 30 cents a pound, satisfied or not. The farmer was not satisfied, yet he was not allowed to take his syrup back home with him. Why? Reasons unknown to both the farmer and ourselves.

This is but one isolated case; there may have been more. There were rumors at the end of the season of drums of syrup being 'dumped out' by officials before the producers' very eyes, with no compensation at all going to them.

These examples are in definite contradiction to a statement made by Mr. Eugene Moreau of Quebec Maple Products in Lennoxville (Sherbrooke Record, May 31) in reaction to the Record's May 24 article, "...producers who showed dissatisfaction with the grading of their syrup were given the opportunity to take it elsewhere. One producer did seriously show disapproval this year and took his syrup with him."

Question: Just what is the definition of dissatisfaction? The farmer who was offered the 30 cents a pound, disagreed with both the classification of his syrup and the price. He expressed his dissatisfaction and his desire to take his produce home -- to no avail. Most farmers are quiet, humble folk. Perhaps the producer who did get to take his syrup home was more outspoken, more brazen, and less intimidated by government officials. We are curious to know how one managed to succeed where another did not.

Producers are mystified, and considerably angered; the government inspectors are not being held in the highest of opinions.

With the aim of establishing the facts and clarifying the matter for the benefit of all concerned, producers, government, and private companies, Act IV has written letters to the Quebec Department of Agriculture, the Regie des Marches Agricoles, the Syndicat des Producteurs de Sucre et de Sirop d'Erable, and the two local buyers, Beaudry Maple Products Inc. and Quebec Maple Products Ltd.

We asked such questions as:

- Are there government laws regulating the sale of maple syrup?
- What are the duties of the government inspector?
- What authority does he have?
- How is maple syrup classified?
- On what grounds is syrup judged to be unfit for human or animal consumption?
- In what instances can syrup be seized?
- What is the role of the Syndicat des producteurs de Sucre et de Sirop d'Erable?

Watch for more on this problem in upcoming columns as we get responses and reaction.

Guards block Depot detour

LENNOXVILLE — Rush-hour traffic on Queen St. moved slower than usual for a while yesterday as local motorists tried in vain to take a short-cut home.

For over a week, residents living on the Atto St. side of the St. Francis River had been using Depot St. to sidetrack construction on College St. But Tuesday afternoon, those drivers were quickly informed that this route was now dug up and they would have to go by Sherbrooke or Huntingville to get home. Security guards and municipal police stood firm on their orders and amid cursing and fist-shaking, the motorists sped off to get home via another route.

A trickster also took advantage of the situation to summon the Lennoxville Volunteer Fire Dept. to Bishop's College School. Two fire engines and several firefighters manoeuvred through Sherbrooke traffic around 6:30 p.m. to arrive at the school for a false alarm.

Staff cuts possible

BMP facing $180,000 budget cutback

By TERRY SCOTT
COWANSVILLE — The Brome-Missisquoi Perkins Hospital has become the latest target of provincial government cutbacks for the current operating year. Reliable sources informed The Record the amount of budget-slicing, due to belt-tightening by the ministry of social affairs in hospitals throughout Quebec, could be as much as $180,000 creating a significant dent in the BMP's $8 million annual budget.

Reached at his office yesterday, BMP Director-General Roland Fournier confirmed that the Cowansville institution had indeed received a budget slash but he would not divulge the exact amount.

Hospital directors were advised where the BMP cutbacks will occur at a board meeting Monday night but the director-general preferred to withhold the information from the public until a later date. He would neither confirm nor deny the amount quoted by The Record sources.

"It's happening at every hospital throughout the province," he noted, "and it's not the first time that it's happened here."

Fournier insisted that the measures would not result in a closing down of beds for certain departments as has been the case at some hospitals affected by the austerity program. He added, however, that the BMP would take greater care in the utilization of its beds.

"We're going to be more rational and operate the beds according to the needs of the public," he explained.

Dr. William Barakett, president of the BMP medical board, said the measures "are something that we're going to have to live with, but we don't like it because it's going to mean a reduction in the number of beds."

"There's not much we can do about it but we are going to try to insist that it be a temporary measure."

He pointed out that doctors will now have to be more selective in the people they admit to the hospital. This will likely have its greatest effect upon elderly patients who take up beds at the BMP because they are too sick for nursing homes and whose families no longer can care for them.

Fournier would not say what effect the measures will have in regard to personnel. There has been speculation that such a cutback will result in anywhere from 6 to 10 staff layoffs.

"I'd rather not touch upon that aspect right now," closed Fournier, "since we still have to advise the employees and the union."

He stressed that there would be absolutely no effect in either the quality or quantity of service.

"We have new specialists due to come here in January or February and there's no question of the cutbacks causing a change in those plans."

Asked for his personal reaction to the budget slash, Fournier replied: "My only reaction to the measures is that it's a general thing throughout Quebec. And I'd much rather be at the BMP Hospital than running a hospital in Montreal."

Friends

"They have come at my invitation to speak business with me and to see how I live in this country," said Gabr at his Hatley Acres home. "Is there anything mysterious about having friends come and visit? They are my friends and they happen to be rich. They are here to discuss my plans only."

Egyptian-born Saad Gabr is originally from Morocco and has been a resident of North Hatley for seven years. "I love it here. It is my home and I intend to stay here," he said.

"I originally came here at the invitation of the Canadian government, the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce. I have now completed my studies and am ready to apply what I have found. We are meeting here as good friends and to discuss my plans. We are experts and therefore have expertise," he said with arms outstretched and an imperceptible shrug of his shoulders.

"For the past seven years, I have studied local conditions of Canada. I have studied industry in general, electronics in particular," said Gabr, an audio systems specialist who recently patented a method of cancelling noise feedback.

"I am a consultant engineer and investor. Your government has approached me to encourage production by building new factories, but I have said no. It does not make sense to build new factories while present ones are not working 100 per cent," he said, stressing the need to improve already existing factories in Canada in order to tap potential markets.

town of North Hatley, where the group is visiting Saad Gabr, a longtime friend and business associate.

Sherbrooke Industrial Commissioner Alex Baptist, an associate of Gabr's, hinted at the possibility of the establishment of an electronics plant in Sherbrooke's industrial park to manufacture an audio-feedback reduction system developed by Gabr.

At the reception, Mayor Jacques O'Bready presented the prince with a plaque commemorating the occasion. The prince stated that although it was his first time here, he only wishes to be able to return to such a magnificent region.

Because the religion of Islam forbids the lending of monies, Gabr said that he and his colleagues would combine their efforts as experts and through exportation markets would participate in the economic and industrial development of Canada. He added that maybe precisely this quirk of the Islamic faith would be the

He also said he would be setting up a bank next week to finance industry and that anyone who is interested may simply write to him. Gabr stated that the only Canadian firm with which he has had any business dealings to date is Leigh Instruments, a firm located in Ottawa. Leigh will produce audio equipment for Gabr in its Waterloo, Quebec, plant as well as acting as distributor for Gabr's products in North and South America and Japan. Although Leigh's head office is in Ottawa, it has subsidiaries in the United Kingdom, the United States and Germany. Aside from audio equipment, it manufactures avionics equipment such as flight safety systems, postal systems and shipboard systems.

The entire Arab group is in Montreal today to witness the signing of the agreement between Gabr Associates and Leigh Instruments while the Saudi government officials are present to discuss giving Leigh distribution rights in their country.

Gabr also said he is responsible for the opening of a showroom at 2022 Peel, called Darsaida, which will serve as a permanent exhibit. For the time being, until just before Christmas, it is a private showroom accessible only to his Arab entourage. Items on exhibit are sophisticated electronic audio equipment.

The show, Gabr said, is an example which is related to consumer goods. It consists of sound systems designed, developed and produced in his factory in England and brought over by a private Boeing 707 which landed in Dorval Monday.

"I am interested in exports from Canada to the U.S.A. and to other countries," Gabr stated. As well as an preventative needed to avoid an economic crash — a crash otherwise unavoidable if the Western world continues to demand guarantees which cannot be met. Wild rumors and visions of secret deals brought reporters scrambling to town the day before yesterday. They were looking for legendary men with flowing robes and their limousines, and although they found the houses and hotels the visitors were staying in, no one was within sight to try to seek answers from.

Townpeople said the Arabs were buying up all the land available around North Hatley. Rumors persisted that as soon as a member of the delegation saw a farm or other property he fancied, a price was immediately set. Apparently people were getting a thousand dollars a week for loaning their houses replete with personal effects. There was even a rumor that offers were being made on both Hovey Manor and Hatley Inn. Or what about the story the Arabs had discovered gold in North Hatley?

At Earl's, Gary Drew pondered the Arab question and tried to be helpful. He told reporters of Rolfe Letourneau's role as chauffeur to the prince. The girl working by the shelves said at first she thought it was a funeral, what with limousines in caravans and flowing gear. Then the rumors caught up to her.

At Lebaron's, Dave McCrea didn't even raise his eyes. "Nope, I haven't seen them," Stan MacDonald, however, said Gabr had been in the day before buying a bit more groceries than usual.

Henry Godbout at Hovey Manor knew nothing of the matter but did say the Arabs would have stayed at his hotel, but that it was full and they therefore would not be coming. He mentioned the Hatley Inn, Le Domaine Montjoie and the Ripplecove Inn as possibilities to pursue.

The Hatley Inn was rather empty and owner Donald Languedoc said he had yet to see an Arab, then confided that there were members of the entourage staying at the hotel, but there were no Arabs among them. "I don't know what's happening," he added.

Domaine Montjoie's Robert Nadeau said he didn't know who they were but that two Arabs had stayed at his house. They left at nine, for Cookshire, he said, after a leisurely morning out on the verandah, having a coffee.

Perhaps the one glimpse of the entourage seen by most Hatleyites was a confused cavalcade of Arabs stopped for a while at the mouth of the road to Hatley Acres. A Lincoln driven by one of the members of the group was involved in an accident which bashed in both the front and rear bumpers. Several hours later, the car, with hood and trunk wide open and lights flashing, was still on the highway, awaiting a tow.

Security was heavy; scores of QPF officers kept reporters and the curious at bay and the only way this reporter managed to keep a prearranged interview with host Saad Gabr was through the recognition of Yasser, the 10-year-old son of the man who invited the prince to visit. Green eyes and friendly smile dancing in a lively face, he ran up the hill with one message, down the hill to make sure we were okayed by his father for entry and back up the hill to tell the police.

He told us he really liked Canada, although he was presently attending school in England and he later appeared in his father's office in a suit tailored for him with pilot's wings over the right breast.

Rosenstone brief submitted

By ANNA FUDAKOWSKA
SHERBROOKE — Was it a diagnostic error or simply an administrative one? Was Patricia Rosenstone released due to overcrowding and the need for another bed? Was there indeed a valid follow-up? Why then, were her three children killed one month later?

Confronted by the silence of the public institutions directly involved, the Society for the Protection of Children has submitted a communique to the Quebec

Minister of Social Affairs and the Quebec Minister of Justice asking for answers to the questions raised by the Rosenstone case.

It is due to this silence that the Society has asked itself once more why the Centre de Services Sociaux de l'Estrie released Patricia Rosenstone's children to her prior to having received the CHU's psychiatric report, despite the objections of foster parents. The Society also raised doubts as to the mental condition of the mother upon her release from the CHU immediately before she got her children back.

"My God, are the psychiatrists crazy?" asked lawyer Michel Quintal, yesterday during a press conference held by the Society for the Protection of Children. The group is demanding why Patricia Rosenstone is allowed to walk freely in the streets. Quintal, who is vice-president of the Society, together with its president, Jeanne Pankovitch and animator Denise Morin, termed her temporary freedom 'a monumental farce specifying that the society does not wish to attack Patricia Rosenstone, but to bring under public scrutiny the deficiencies of medical and social service systems which contributed to the deaths of Maya, Joya and Maxwell Rosenstone Jan. 3 this year.

PAC launches court action

MONTREAL (CP) — A group of Montreal businessmen, backed by the Positive Action Committee, will launch a court action contesting sections of Quebec's French language charter dealing with public signs and commercial advertising, a committee official said Tuesday.

Executive director Reford MacDougall said the move results from numerous appeals for legal help from small businessmen to the committee, a mainly English-speaking professional group.

Head-on collision...

SHERBROOKE — A taxi driver and his passenger were injured in a head-on collision around 5 p.m. yesterday opposite 895 Bowen, which sent one of them to hospital.

Wayne Gillam, of Worthington St., and Myrna Baskin of Spring Road in Lennoxville were treated for injuries at Hotel-Dieu Hospital. Gillam for a bruised arm and his passenger for deep cuts and severe bruises.

Fire donations welcome

The parents of a young Fulford couple whose trailer home was destroyed by fire last week are seeking clothing, particularly baby clothing, furniture, dishes, utensils. All donations are welcome. For more information or offers, call Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Sayers, the young mother's parents, at 243-6150.

Pauline Julien, Quebec's reigning chanteuse, will be in town (probably at the Universite de Sherbrooke's Salle Maurice O'Bready) to belt them out Nov. 19. More to come when we hear of it.

Quebec's future: For foreign investors, it's another story

Editor's Note: The following is taken from the Dempsey Canadian Newsletter, a well-read compendium of facts and views about the Canadian investment picture which has considerable circulation among non-Canadian firms doing business here. We didn't get it from the newsletter directly, however - the Quebec Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs sent it out this week on a private wire service, suggesting only that it be credited to Dempsey's. To say the least, it's an optimistic view of Quebec's future; we can see why Quebec approves.

For many months the conversation in the board rooms of major Canadian enterprises headquartered in English-speaking parts of the country, mostly in Ontario, has included expressions of puzzlement that so many of the absolutely top leaders of U.S. business and finance were willing to be 'doing business with that bunch in Quebec,' namely the Parti Quebecois government of Rene Levesque. As far back as January, 1977, when Mr. Levesque addressed the Economic Club of New York and held other private meetings with the Wall Street leadership, those who attended from Toronto and other Canadian cities were quoted as predicting that the market would dry up for Quebec's bonds, that the American business and financial communities would not invest in, and probably withdraw what they already had in, Quebec, and that in general there was no patience for the language legislation nor for most of the other policies of the independence-oriented PQ. The reasons for the present puzzlement are that such blue chip banking firms as Kidder, Peabody have taken assignments from the Quebec government, General Motors has spent $36 million on its auto plant at Ste. Therese and has committed an undisclosed sum to build a new bus manufacturing plant near Montreal, Mead Corporation is pouring $200 million into a new kraft mill north of Quebec City, and such other giants as Bendix, Haley, the Hyatt Hotel chain, and so on, have satisfied themselves that there is money to be made in dealing in Quebec.

Confronted with such facts, more recent board room conversation in English-speaking Canada has been to the effect that perhaps the English-Canadian business community had best study the ramifications of a Quebec economy supported by U.S. investment and a ready access to the U.S. market. The figures vary according to industry and type of business service, but the conclusion is fairly uniform: a major diversion of Quebec patronage from Ontario and other Canadian plants could very seriously affect the profitability of the companies involved. Clearly, hundreds of companies would not be affected for the simple reason that Quebec is not a big factor in their volume now. However, there are some firms where Quebec accounts for as much as 50 per cent of their volume, and many where Quebec accounts for about 25 per cent.

The language issue has never, even in the days of the Bourassa government, been a major headache to the large U.S. companies doing business in Quebec, in part because they have long been accustomed to language obligations in other countries. As in Canada, there can be problems for small firms which lack multi-lingual capabilities. Although (to the considerable irritation of English-speaking Canadians with whom Quebec's policy is to speak French) Quebec's officials will write and speak English to those whom they know to be American.

In any event, several of our U.S. based subscribers have recently travelled in all parts of Canada and have reported to us their amazement at how often, whether in Nova Scotia or British Columbia or someplace in between, English-speaking Canadians would predict that Quebec is doomed, yet, when these subscribers got to Quebec themselves they have found things to be active; they read reports from such leaders as Montreal Board of Trade (and Hilton of Canada) President Reg Groome predicting that things are going to work out well; they would be told that such a firm as Aluminum of Canada is investing more than $200 million into its facilities in Quebec; they observed substantial rises in the prices for real estate; and, in short, they could not substantiate on their own the frightfully gloomy reports they had received elsewhere in Canada.

Such objective Canadian publications as the Financial Times are now warning their English-Canadian readers that they may well lose out to the Americans if they continue to assume Quebec is going down the drain. Such a realization appears to have set in at high corporate levels, but there is a reluctance to admit it. Also, many, many so-called 'average Canadians' still seem to be blind to the facts of the matter.

Rank stupidity

For the third year in a row, College St. has been torn up just when students were heading back to school. This time, there's no excuse except someone's stupidity, and neither the town council nor the provincial ministry of roads are admitting who made the blunder.

Was there any attempt to warn Lennoxville they would have to get used to using an alternate route? No. Was there any attempt to set up a shuttle system whereby buses would meet kids walking over the bridge? No. Was there any attempt to set up an emergency route so emergency vehicles could get through to taxpayers on the other side of the bridge? Not until yesterday. What incredible stupidity!

We don't blame people for threatening to ram the barricades or assault the security folks, but we'd like to see whoever was responsible for this lack of planning on these directing traffic, with a sign around his neck to tell the world who they could thank for the hassle.

JAMES DUFF

Right or privilege?

So Quebec has finally decided to adopt perennial licence plates. It's about time; that annual lineup ordeal is a boring, frustrating situation second only to that of waiting to get those paid-for plates in the mail.

We're also heartened by Quebec's changing attitude toward driving permits in general. It is harder to obtain a permit than it was two years ago, as well it should be.

For a long time in this country, driving was looked upon as a basic right, not as a privilege. A man's car was once as safe from unauthorized police search as his home, and it was only the incredible proliferation of the automobile that made stricter laws necessary.

Without a doubt, the automobile is as enduring a part of Quebec society as the front porch. We cry about the cost of gas and oil, yet we rejoice when we rid ourselves of the old model to go into hock for a newer machine. Deprived of our cars, we fumble our way through life until either we adjust or we go crazy.

Eventually, we can see the day when the keeping of an automobile is no longer a necessity, but a luxury and a privilege. Can we afford the energy drain? Can we afford the incredible roads network necessary for a rapidly-growing population? We don't think so.

In less than a month's time, the 1979 cars hit the market, gleaming creations which will turn some of the mildest people into ravening junkies. Young people working at their first jobs will tie themselves into loan situations which won't even allow them three square meals a day - all so they can cruise Wellington Street Friday nights in some flashy wheels.

Why can we not place more emphasis on mass transit? Oh, yes, we know - it's not reasonable to expect freedom-loving North Americans to give up their mobility for a bunch of smelly trains, buses and subways.

...but is mobility spending an hour on the Champlain Bridge? Is mobility having to hitch lifts from friends when one cannot drive for medical or legal reasons?

We're glad Quebec is cracking the whip. It'll mean more support for alternate forms of transportation, and not by choice. It's rapidly becoming a matter of necessity.

Letters

Editor:

Concerning an article in The Record, Aug. 25, (Soviet coin boycott begins, by Bill Morton), my opinion is if Rev. Simons would look after the spiritual needs of those in his Pastoral Charge, he would find plenty to do without interfering in Russian affairs, something that's none of our business. I have a stack of magazines called the United Church Observer and I have read them from cover to cover, and I don't find that to be their policy. I am not a member of the United Church, but I have the greatest respect for it, and I have found much good reading in the Observer, and would recommend it to all that like good clean reading (not smut or slander).

We can find many things we don't approve of at home, without going to Russia. I knew a fine young man from Leeds, Megantic County, Que., by the name of Herbert Stuart; he and his brother Edgar both enlisted in the army to go overseas the time of the first world war, and Herbert was put before a firing squad and was shot for no other reason but he couldn't face the army.

I hate to mention it, for it makes me sick to think what happened to one I used to know, and don't forget, Rev., it wasn't in Russia that happened. Rev. Simons wasn't around then.

During the Second World War, the Russians were called real good guys when they were helping defeat Germany; had it not been for Russia and England, France might have been wiped off the map of the world. So Rev. Simons, why not give the devil his own if you don't give him any more. You don't have to go to Russia to find criminals; we have their noses stuck in other people's affairs stirring up trouble. If we could just learn to mind our own affairs we would have the best country in the world to live in, but it seems mind-our-own-affairs is out of the question.

What puzzles me is how they get all this information. In one breath they tell us Russia keeps everything secret; in the next they seem to know all that's going on inside Russia's borders. It just doesn't make sense.

Pet neglect

Editor:

When I read Mrs. Davidson's letter in Tuesday's Record, it inspired me to express my mutual feelings on the subject of neglect to animals.

It would be interesting to know how many of your readers take to heart what actually happens at our local S.P.C.A., or even visit the building.

This is such a worthy cause, but it is difficult to give the animals the food and size of enclosure that they need, consequently, many days they are much too overcrowded.

If you have ever stood by a row of crying kittens or watched the staff employed by the shelter as they carry an armful of the not-so-fortunate into a room of no return, only then will you become as concerned as I have.

This is where the public can involve themselves with donations to help feed the homeless until they are either placed or destroyed, or prevent all of these unwanted offspring by neutering your pet.

No one is more aware than myself of the expense of spaying a dog or cat, we own one of each and they have both had the necessary surgery, but which is worse, to spend the required amount of money or going to bed at night with a guilty conscience from leaving a litter of whimpering pups in a cage.

So many times I have heard people say that they can't bear to put their pet through the pain of an operation, but if you think about it, a half hour of anesthesia that will leave the animal as well as its owner more liberated, is a lot kinder than allowing this same pet to give birth to maybe 10 litters during its lifetime, or spend certain weeks of the year confined to a basement.

I am a regular visitor to the Sherbrooke S.P.C.A. and have witnessed such things as old dogs being traded for pups, just because Rover isn't fur anymore.

For heaven's sake, there are veterinary clinics which properly dispose of your pets for a small sum and you can feel assured that the animal that gave you the best years of its life, is resting in peace.

There are no better friends than devoted pets; let's show them some respect.

'Audacious' marriage shatters model military career

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON - Capt. Michael Jelinsky is a model military man, clean-cut and straight-laced, who built an impressive record as an Army officer. But his impeccable career has now been shattered because he had the audacity to marry a female soldier.

The engaging, 27-year-old captain had a reputation as a devoted officer until he incurred the wrath of his commander by falling in love. Two days after he was married, the astonished Jelinsky was relieved of his command.

Jelinsky graduated from West Point in 1973 and spent two years as a lieutenant in the Panama Canal Zone. He was later assigned to Ford Devens, Mass., where he became a logistics specialist in charge of a supply company of 160 soldiers. He took extra college courses during his off-duty hours.

Jelinsky's superiors continually gave him the highest ratings. "An outstanding officer... Has significantly improved the overall logistical operations of the command... Tremendous potential," said one internal evaluation. "He willingly sought responsibilities beyond those associated with his duties... He is in superb physical condition," said another report.

Last summer, Jelinsky met his future wife, Sue-Ann, at a private party. She was a staff sergeant at Fort Devens, a six-year

Army career counselor whom Jelinsky had dealt with only briefly. "It was love at first unofficial sight," Jelinsky recalls. They started dating, but tried to be discreet about it. "I wanted to keep my private life separate from my professional responsibilities," he explained.

The couple decided to tie the knot last February, and Jelinsky broke the news to his base commander, Col. Forrest Rittgers Jr. Instead of congratulating Jelinsky, the angry colonel informed him that he would be relieved of his command. Lacking an official Army policy on fraternization between officers and enlisted women, Rittgers established his own. He would not allow such relations on his base, he declared.

The intimidating Rittgers tried unsuccessfully to get Jelinsky transferred off the base, then told him: "You're going to have a difficult time as long as you stay here." The colonel reportedly added that he looks upon marriages between Army personnel the same way he views racially mixed marriages.

Putting love ahead of discipline, Jelinsky was married in a quiet New Hampshire ceremony that his mother flew across country to attend. But he never got to have a honeymoon. Two days after he took the marriage vow, he was shunted into an obscure job in the base's alcohol and drug abuse center. The job wasn't even listed officially.

The earnest captain, after making an emotional farewell speech to his troops, grit his teeth and tried to adjust. But the harassment continued. His routine request for an off-base apartment was held up after Col. Rittgers opposed it. Then the brass hats threatened to send him to another base for five months without his wife, although they backed off after he threatened to resign.

Jelinsky's marital sin is recorded in bureaucratic language in internal Army reports. "Capt. Jelinsky's personal conduct has been... superb, until such time as he became emotionally and discreetly involved with, and subsequently married, a female enlisted soldier," the report says. "He made one judgmental error... which led to his relief by virtue of fraternization. This irreversible incident mars an otherwise superlative performance."

Col. Rittgers was even harsher in an internal evaluation. "My command policies against fraternization were clearly enunciated... His misconduct was a serious breach of discipline... Once he was unable to conduct his personal life in accordance with the announced policies of this command, it was his duty to report his situation to his commander. To do otherwise was to live a lie."

With nowhere else to go, Jelinsky turned to Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif. "I have recently been subjected to vengeful, arbitrary and unjust treatment... because I married an enlisted woman," the captain wrote. "I have also suffered an adverse efficiency report that will tarnish my otherwise good service record for the rest of my life."

Footnote: An Army spokesman told us there is no official Army policy on marriages between soldiers, although one spouse is not permitted to evaluate the professional performance of the other.

"Each commander sets his own policy on fraternization," he said. The spokesman added that Jelinsky's case is now being reviewed by the Army's inspector general and that he could not comment on the details until the inquiry is completed.

Dodging Planes: The pilots who fly the Air Force's hottest fighter planes are constantly warned to be wary of the danger of mid-air collisions. At some tactical fighter bases, the pilots are given a gentle reminder every time they enter their ready rooms for briefings.

Unit commanders have purchased small, foam rubber airplanes at local hobby shops. These are hung at each aircrew exit so "individuals are required to dodge them on exiting the building." According to an Air Force spokesman, if bumping into the model airplanes saves one real plane in the air, then it is a "cheap investment."

Grosse Ile: Island of dead prompts black memories

GROSSE ILE, Que. (CP) — Thousands of immigrants were buried in the last century in this all-but-forgotten St. Lawrence River island about 30 miles below Quebec City.

"Nobody goes there," a Parks Canada official said of the monument-studded speck in the river that was the site of an immigrant quarantine station from 1832 to 1937.

Undeterred by the lack of visitors, Parks Canada will officially unveil, most likely this month, a plaque put up here in August by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board to commemorate the immigrant quarantine.

Access is possible only by special pass from the veterinary pathology division of the federal agriculture department which has had control of the island since 1957.

Four department employees live here year-round, including the officer responsible, Freddy Masson, who has spent all but three of his 64 years on the island.

Even his relatives, when they come for a day's visit from nearby Montmagny on the south shore of the St. Lawrence, must obtain a pass from Ottawa.

Massons have worked steadily for the various government departments that occupied the islands beginning with Edouard, Freddy's grandfather, who came here in 1864 and spent three years transporting the sick and the dead and hauling wood and coal for the quarantine station.

Edouard's son, Pierre, followed in his footsteps until 1945.

A horse-drawn ambulance they used still stands in perfect shape in a small, dusty brick building once used to fumigate clothing.

BUILT AS DEFENCE

Grosse Ile first became known beyond the surrounding parishes in 1832 when the authorities decided to establish the quarantine station here as a defence against an expected influx of Asiatic cholera.

The population of Quebec City then stood at 32,956. The number of immigrants—the vast majority from England, Ireland and Scotland—examined here in that first hectic summer was 51,146.

While it is known that 3,851 persons died of the cholera in Quebec City that year and another 4,000 in and around Montreal, the records for Grosse Ile were destroyed in a fire in 1878.

"Nobody knows how many had gone into the pits at Grosse Ile," wrote Joseph Schull in his book, Rebellion—The Rising in French Canada 1837-1838.

A second cholera outbreak in 1834 saw 30,935 immigrants examined here, of whom 264 died of various diseases.

Those early episodes, during which English merchants here objected to any suggestion that immigration be curtailed, contributed to the agitation that led to the 1837-38 rebellion.

"Immigration became, to certain wild French-Canadian eyes, an English conspiracy to wipe them off the face of the earth," wrote historian Mason Wade in his book, The French Canadians.

But the worst was yet to come. In 1847, thousands of Irish immigrants, fleeing famine and oppression at home, were buried here after dying of typhus contracted during a sea voyage of indescribable squalor.

Various accounts of the ordeal place the number buried here in the "Black Forty-Seven" at anywhere between 5,000 and 12,000.

In its official report for that year, the Montreal Emigrant Society referred to this otherwise picturesque spot as the "great charnel-house of victimized humanity."

CHILDREN ADOPTED

Hundreds of Irish children who lost their parents at Grosse Ile were adopted by French-Canadian families.

"Nothing in the history of the French-Canadian people does more honor to them than the kindness shown by them to the poor Irish Catholic orphans of 1847 and no member of the Irish race should ever forget this important fact," wrote J. A. Jordan in a commemorative book entitled The Grosse Isle Tragedy, published in 1909.

Also in 1909, the Ancient Order of Hibernians erected a monument to the dead of 1847 on a rocky bluff called Telegraph Hill at the southwestern tip of the island.

Future immigrants sailing by would, on seeing the tall Celtic cross and on being told the story behind it, see in it a symbol of Canada as a land of freedom and brotherly love "where the races live in harmony and where each vies with the other in promoting the great work of national unity," the secretary of state, Charles Murphy, said at the time.

The walls of the death-bound immigrants subsided long ago. From 1920 to 1937, when the quarantine facilities were transferred to Quebec City, there was little traffic through the island, Masson said.

The three cannons installed in 1832 to deter immigrant ships from sailing right by still stand, pointing mutely over the swift waters of Quarantine Passage.

Hard by the inlet called Cholera Bay, a few white wooden crosses lean in the tall grass of the field where the bodies were buried in trenches. To one side, in a shady grove, stands a small marble column erected by the medical staff that served here in 1847.

Most prominent, however, is the Celtic cross of Stanstead granite erected in 1909, visible to the pleasure craft that sail through Quarantine Passage between Grosse Ile and the islands of La Sottise and Ste. Marguerite to the south.

MARKED BY CROSSES

At the opposite end of the narrow, two-mile-long island stands a wooden smallpox hospital built in the waning years of the 19th century and slowly decaying. Beside it lies a small cemetery where individual graves are marked by crosses made of pipes.

The Roman Catholic and Protestant churches, built around the beginning of the century but virtually unused since 1937, stand frozen in time. Behind the locked doors of the Catholic church, the old pews, statues, prayer books, liturgical vessels and priests' vestments are all neatly in place.

Here and there along the island's only road stand buildings erected in the days of the immigrant quarantine—a bakery, staff houses, lodgings for immigrants and ships' officers, a school house, a nurses' residence—now vacant or used for storage.

"It's pretty disfigured now," says Masson, recalling livelier days when he was growing up and "there were a lot of people around to keep up the place."

"It was clean. There were little fences around the houses."

The silence is heavy. "It's a good thing we have television or it would be dead here," Masson reflects.

"Still there's always work to be done."

From 1957 on, the island was used as a quarantine station for livestock imported from continental Europe until demand dropped off two years ago.

Veterinary research, begun in laboratories here by defence department scientists in 1942, was continued after the agriculture department took over the island until part of the labs were destroyed in a fire last fall.

There's a lull in activities now but it's only temporary, says Dr. Julius Frank, director of the veterinary pathology division in Ottawa. The labs will be rebuilt and the quarantine facilities will undoubtedly be used again when demand for imported cattle picks up.

Before the lull, seminars were held here each spring for veterinarians from Canada and abroad.

Apart from the veterinarians, the last visitor came two years ago, says Masson.

He was a "true Irishman" who came all the way from Ireland especially to visit this place where some of his ancestors were buried.

"He was pretty choked up and I can understand it," Masson said.

Ryan: Whistle-stop tactics part of plan

QUEBEC (CP) — Five months ago political newcomer Claude Ryan was elected leader of the Quebec Liberal party after criss-crossing the province in a hard-running campaign.

He is still running, visiting places like Montmagny, Richmond and Shawinigan, as he reshapes the battered Liberal party in preparation for the promised referendum on Quebec's future and the next provincial election.

Ryan, an austere intellectual who edited the influential Montreal daily Le Devoir before he became politically active, is not getting much publicity, but he doesn't seem to mind.

News conferences at inconvenient times and out-of-the-way places for the Montreal and Quebec City press corps have become Ryan's trade mark. He delivered his assessment on Prime Minister Trudeau's proposals for constitutional reform in Trois-Rivieres.

But a reporter who worked for Ryan at Le Devoir says that's his style. While there appears to be little activity within the Liberal party, Ryan is organizing and restructuring the party and he will be ready to do battle when the time comes.

VEIL LIFTED

A weekend meeting of the party's general council gave the first indications of where the party is headed and how he is getting along with Liberal stalwarts.

The party had been adrift and its membership dipped to about 30,000 after its defeat by the Parti Quebecois in November, 1976.

At the weekend meeting—unlike Liberal gatherings in the era of former premier Robert Bourassa, which were run like corporate meetings where members were just asked to approve executive decisions—there were genuine attempts at democratic decision making.

Plans for a door-to-door financing campaign, similar to the annual fund-raising drive of the Parti Quebecois, were outlined along with details of a recruitment with an objective of 1,000 party members for each of Quebec's 110 ridings.

Ryan has taken tighter control of the party purse strings, dismissing former Liberal treasurer Paul Desrochers who was described as the real power behind Bourassa.

Last year Victor Goldbloom, a supporter of Raymond Garneau who opposed Ryan for the leadership, headed the party's financing campaign. This year Ryan-loyalist Therese Lavoie-Roux heads the drive.

SHAKEUP PLANNED

Claude Forget, who Ryan described as the most intellectual member of the Bourassa cabinet, has been designated the party's constitutional critic and a shakeup in the assignments of other caucus members is planned.

While it is clear Ryan is putting people he depends on in positions of trust, he also expressed acceptance of a policy orientation adopted by the Liberals last November.

At the November convention the party took a turn to the right. During the weekend meeting Ryan made it clear he will stick to that orientation criticizing the Parti Quebecois for resorting to "socializing solutions" which he said limit liberties.

In his opening speech to the delegates, Ryan called on the PQ to define "at the earliest convenience" the terms of sovereignty-association.

50th anniversary

MAGOG — A special 50th anniversary service and reception was held at St. Paul's United Church on August 26, 1978, for Ethel and Bill Whittier.

Multi-colored gladioli and mums decorated the chancel where an impressive ceremony was conducted by Rev. Ronald Coughlin and Rev. Carl Gustafson, when the couple renewed their marriage vows of 50 years.

During the service, Miss Susan McLaughlan, a friend of the family sang "More" and Mrs. Lillian Whittier, daughter-in-law, sang "The Wedding Prayer". Wedding music was played by Mrs. Evelyn Cuthbert.

The attendants were Mrs. Linda Saunders and Mrs. Jean Ducharme for their mother and Jack, Ken and Larry Whittier for their father.

Following the ceremony the guests were invited into the Church Hall which was gaily decorated in gold, yellow and white streamers, flowers, golden 50's and a gold money tree, to mark the special occasion.

A delicious cold buffet supper was served by the United Church Women. The head table was centered with a beautiful anniversary cake made and decorated by Mrs. Norma Bailey.

Later in the evening many more relatives and friends came to convey their best wishes to Ethel and Bill. All enjoyed a nostalgic time of slides, dancing, visiting and refreshments.

Jack Whittier, acting as M.C., read letters and telegrams of good wishes to the happy couple. Among these were messages from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Governor General and Mrs. Jules Leger, Mr. Georges Vaillancourt, M.L.A., Mr. Heward Graftey, M.P., and Carl Whittier of Thunder Bay, Ont., a nephew.

Out of town guests were: son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Whittier and family from Vigeville, Alberta; Mrs. Alice Kuhl, Edmonton, Alberta; daughter, Linda Saunders and family from Kelowna, B.C.; others from Auburn, Maine; Perkinsville, Vt., and from many surrounding areas.

A very special thank you is expressed by Ethel and Bill to all who sent their "well wishes", flowers and gifts to the Money Tree. Your kindness and generosity will always be remembered.

Disabled persons treated as sexual neuters

TORONTO (CP) — The sexual revolution sweeping the able-bodied population for almost two decades now is starting to have an impact on the thousands of disabled people in Canada. Anne Graham, a coordinator for the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Ontario, is among experts who say that hundreds of thousands of physically disabled generally are ignored when it comes to sexual concerns. It is a bitter slap to those already faced with permanent physical disabilities through congenital birth defects, accidents or disease, she said. Helen Healy, an occupational therapist with the Ontario Crippled Children's centred on sex. Mrs. Dixon said she now has more self-confidence and is more independent although her illness resulted in a separation from her husband.

Centre, said that while most persons complacently accept sexual identity as males and females from earliest childhood, disabled persons often are treated as sexual neuters, even by their families.

Vatican Council II changes nuns' lives

TORONTO (CP) — When Fran Jordan became a nun there was no way of knowing she would be leaving the convent's shelter to begin work with sex deviates, drug pushers and armed robbers. She is a product of Vatican Council II—a review of the Roman Catholic church which lasted from 1962 to 1965 and drastically changed the lifestyles, attitudes and appearances of both cloistered and active orders of nuns.

Nineteen years after she entered the convent, Sister Fran now works with convicts behind prison bars, has shed her habit for street clothes and shares a high-rise apartment with another young woman.

As one sister put it, the new nun of the 1980s is just an outward expression of changes that have happened within the Roman Catholic church in the last 15 years. And the changes have proved painful for many nuns who could not adjust. Some left the convent for the secular world, others left for marriage and families.

And a member of the Loretto order, who has been a sister for 50 years, says others were lured away by the temptation of money to be had outside the convent. But the transition period appears to be over as new young women are entering the convent and accepting the born-again Roman Catholic faith.

Sister Anne Marie Carey, director of a Toronto detoxification centre, is a typical example of the new-style nun. After 30 years in the convent she has set up house with five other nuns and about 17 men from skid road.

To the down-and-outs, the social misfits she befriends, Sister Anne Marie is not so much a religious figure as a personification of hope.

"In street clothes I feel less conspicuous and it's easier to work," said the sister, who joined the convent 30 years ago. Things were different then. Most sisters in active orders lived in institutions or convents where timetables were strict and the freedom to come and go was almost non-existent.

"We used to get up at 5:15 every morning and follow a very rigid schedule all day," she said.

Now each sister follows her own schedule to suit her work and life.

"We still pray regularly. That is still the most important thing. We wouldn't last without it."

And throughout the transition period, the vows of poverty, chastity and obedience have remained constant.

The vow of chastity makes life easier for Sister Fran, who says she has not felt threatened or frightened by the criminals she deals with in her job as chaplain at the Ontario Correctional Institution in nearby Brampton.

"I always introduce myself as sister so there's no ambiguity I do so for my own integrity because it's something that I feel very strongly about."

Titles such as Mother Superior and Mother have been dropped. Now the head of an order is called Sister like the other members of her community.

Changes in the church also have reached the cloistered nun where there has been a slow opening up between their seclusion and the outside world.

Sister Mary Taylor, superior of the cloistered Precious Blood Sisters in Hamilton recalls when nuns were not allowed to attend a family funeral or to visit a sick relative.

And there may be more changes in the future. Some sisters would like to see women taking on a greater role within the church.

One is Sister Caroline Dawson, director of field education at the faculty of theology in St. Michael's College.

While she has no aspirations to become a priest herself, Sister Caroline feels women should be permitted to become ordained.

"At the moment, women aren't equals with men in the Roman Catholic church. And women as priests would be a real plus because of the particular kinds of things they have to offer."

ANN LANDERS SAYS...

Settle his hash

Dear Ann Landers: What do you say to your children when they suspect you were pregnant before you were married? I am going back 24 years. It seems this piece of ancient history has become a major topic in my daughter-in-law's house.

It all began when my son and his wife were going through some old trunks and found our wedding album. Under the pictures I printed the date of the wedding, June 15, 1954. (We always said it was 1953 and nobody questioned us.) Our eldest son was born in December of that year.

The children have been pumping me ever since and I don't know what to say. Even if John was a seven-month baby it wouldn't quite make the deadline.

I really think it's none of their damn business. I've been a very good mother and just happened to make one mistake. Please give me your views. — Embarrassed

In The Bronx
Dear Em: The last paragraph of your letter is a good answer for anyone who attempts to put you on the spot. I can't see that you owe your children any explanations or apologies. If the subject comes up again, ask your son if he would rather you had an abortion. That should settle his hash.

Dear Ann: When you printed the poem "Your Name," it gave me the motivation to write to you for the very first time. I agree that a son should cherish his father's name, take good care of it and hand it down to his son — unsullied.

But noticeably absent was any mention of daughters. I am a female who married recently and chose to keep my maiden name.

I love and respect my father. I'm proud of his name and did not feel that a ten-minute ceremony was sufficient reason to change my name to my husband's. My father is pleased that I chose to keep this important part of my heritage.

Have you heard from many women who opted to keep their maiden name after marriage? What is the consensus? — Married Miss In Mass.

Dear Mass.: Almost without exception, women who have written to me about keeping their maiden names after marriage have encountered opposition. Their husbands don't like it.

If a woman wishes to be a married Miss, and her husband doesn't object — fine and dandy. But a great many husbands do object.

The situation becomes complicated, however, when children are born. Maybe I'm square, but I believe a mother should be a Mrs. and she and her children should have the same name as the husband and father.

Help for stained slacks

By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — I have a grease stain of some sort on my light blue slacks and wonder if anything will take it out. Also have a pair of red slacks with enamel paint splashed on them and wonder if anything will work on that. — ALYNE

DEAR ALYNE — Turpentine should remove the paint from your red slacks. You might rub lard in the grease spots and then wash in soapy water (if the blue slacks are washable). Always test first. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When traveling space is limited I leave my nightgowns behind and sleep in two half slips instead. One is put on with the elastic waistband under the arm and the other at the waist. This is also cool for summer since the shoulders are left uncovered and there are no straps to break loose. — MARY W.

DEAR POLLY — This is for Mrs. E.S. whose Pet Peeve was that labels are so difficult to remove from products so they can be sent in for refunds. I place the jar or can in a bowl of warm water and leave for about 20 minutes. Labels loosen enough so that they can be slowly pulled off. — S.A.R.

DEAR POLLY — Mrs. E.S. can place a sopping wet cloth over a label she wishes to remove and leave it there until the paper is completely soaked. It will come off in one piece. Let it dry flat and it will be okay to send for a refund. — GERTRUDE

DEAR POLLY — I hope something my mother-in-law did will help other grandmothers. My eight-year-old son is always happy to receive gifts from his grandparents but usually forgets to send them a thank-you letter. His grandmother sends a stamped, self-addressed post card for him to send back immediately and this works. I think this idea would also be good for older children or grandchildren who forget to say a word of thanks to those who thought of them. It only takes a minute to fill up a post card. — NINA

An unsolved mystery

KATHLEEN TYNAN, an English journalist and screenwriter, has transformed mystery writer Agatha Christie's disappearance into "Agatha," an imaginary solution to an authentic mystery.

On December 4, 1926, Mrs. Agatha Mary Clarissa Christie, then 36 years old and already a famous mystery writer, disappeared from her home at Sunningdale, Berkshire, England.

The fact that days and then a week passed without a clue to her whereabouts or, indeed, to whether she was dead or alive, sent every self-respecting reporter lusting after a scoop. Sensational headlines, hefty rewards, preposterous theories cluttered the front pages.

On a miserably cold, damp December morning, some 15,000 volunteers searched for Christie's body near the spot where her car had been abandoned. Their search fruitless, they dragged the nearby Silent Pool, the very pond where one of Agatha's characters had drowned herself. Fortunately, the theory that the mystery writer might have re-enacted one of her own plots proved false.

Finally, a banjo player at the Harrogate Hydropathic Hotel recognized a tall, red-haired guest as Agatha Christie and notified the police. On December 15, 11 days after she vanished, detectives surrounded the hotel and Agatha was reunited with her husband, Col. Archibald Christie.

Col. Christie offered only one lame explanation for this bizarre incident — an incident that was particularly peculiar in light of the fact that the writer disliked publicity and despised scandal. Agatha, he claimed, had been suffering from amnesia.

Christie took her secret to the grave with her in January 1976. The next year, when her posthumously published autobiography appeared, Agatha's fans searched for a clue to her most baffling mystery. All they found was the following circumspect statement: "If one chooses to look back over the journey that has been one's life, is one entitled to ignore those memories that one dislikes? ... I think, perhaps one should take one brief look, and say: 'Yes, this is part of my existence. I must recognize it because it is part of me. But there is no need to dwell on it.'"

Case closed? Not quite. Kathleen Tynan, an English journalist and screenwriter, has transformed this strange interlude into "Agatha," a captivating novel — or, as the author calls it, "an imaginary solution to an authentic mystery." Building on the many facts known about Christie's disappearance, frontation. As her crack crime reporter, Tynan casts a fictitious American, Wally Stanton is a brash, somewhat crass, gossip columnist from Loveland, Colo. On loan from the Hearst Newspapers to the Globe-Enquirer, young Stanton stalks Teresa Neele for days, knowing she's Agatha Christie. He's just waiting for the perfect moment to swoop in for the scoop. While he's waiting, he falls in love with her — a nice twist.

So, for those who can't bear the prospect of a Christie without a Christie, "Agatha" is a suitable substitute. And if you're worried about Christmas, 1980, Tynan has just written a screenplay of "Agatha." The movie version will star Vanessa Redgrave as Agatha and Dustin Hoffman as Wally.

An interesting aside: Tynan mentioned that it was lucky that she'd gotten interested in "The Case of the Missing Novelist" when she did, because most of the witnesses were dead or dying. Col. Christie, who divorced Agatha in 1928 to marry Nancy Neele, died in 1962, so Tynan couldn't talk to him. She did talk to archaeologist Sir Max Malowan, Agatha's husband from 1930 to her death in 1976. He died this August. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Tynan has created a mystery that, in its sheer complexity, rivals many of Agatha's own. While parts are pure fiction, the foundation is fact and the characterizations — particularly of Agatha and her husband Archibald — ring true.

In a recent interview, Tynan admitted, "I was never an Agatha addict. But when Agatha died and some of the old gossip was revived, I got intrigued — hooked really."

And so began the long hours in the British Museum combing old newspapers. And so began the search for people who had been on the scene more than 50 years earlier — cops, reporters, hotel keepers, maids.

Exactly what facts did your research yield? First, Tynan explains, Agatha's marriage to her beloved, dashing Archibald Christie had crumbled to the point of collapse. The Colonel had been badgering his wife for a divorce so he could marry his younger, more conventionally beautiful, mistress.

Agatha, crushed by his infidelity but more in love than ever, begged for a second chance. They had argued on this subject the very morning of Agatha's disappearance. "One of the things that really fascinated me about Agatha," Tynan says, "was her conventional, her absolutely Victorian, view of marriage. Agatha believed that marriage was forever. She was totally unable to deal with — terrified actually — of a breakup. When she left home, she was in a real state of crisis."

But she was totally in control of her senses, Tynan claims. While the police hunted for his wife, and even after she was found, Col. Christie insisted that she was suffering from amnesia. "That's unadulterated rubbish," says Tynan, "though you must understand that at that time it didn't sound so dubious as it does now. After all, amnesia was quite a fashionable disorder."

According to Tynan, the most gaping hole in the Colonel's story, was that it ignored the fact that Agatha had meticulously planned her disappearance. Her motive — conscious or not — was to hurt her husband just as he had hurt her.

Her plan of revenge, which, as you might expect, was quite inventive, included registering at the hotel under the name Teresa Neele — quite a revealing choice of names considering that her husband's mistress was Nancy Neele. Talking to several psychiatrists, Tynan adds, convinced her that a true amnesiac is too desperately busy trying to remember his own name to take on somebody else's.

Col. Christie was frantically trying to blame his wife's disappearance on a nervous condition that resulted from the recent death of her mother. The line he fed ravenous reporters was that this condition had finally erupted into full-fledged amnesia. Obviously the Colonel much preferred having the public believe his wife was suffering from amnesia to having them believe she was suffering from his adultery.

Where the holes in the story were impossible to fill with fact, Tynan filled them with fiction — circumstances and coincidences that would have done Agatha proud.

For example, when Agatha signs the register "Teresa Neele" she knows quite well that staying in another building of the same health spa is Nancy Neele. Thus Tynan sets the scene for a most ingenious con-

Hall of Famer

Lance Alworth rekindles AFL spirit

CANTON, Ohio (NEA) — By the time he was 30, Lance Alworth had made and lost $2 million. By the time he was 32, Alworth was broke and divorced; he owed the government $150,000 and had no visible source of income.

He had decided he no longer wanted to play professional football for the Dallas Cowboys, who were paying him $55,000 a year as a wide receiver. He quit the game, returned to San Diego, where he had achieved his greatest athletic fame and went into real estate sales and development. He didn't have the faintest idea what an escrow was.

Now, at 37, Lance Alworth is virtually out of hock, remarried to a beautiful blonde (with a combined family of five children) and just back from taking a couple of the older boys fishing in Alaska.

He took the trip after he had become the first man from the old American Football League to be inducted into the Professional Football Hall of Fame.

That was something. The old league that was derided as "Mickey Mouse," as "basketball with pads," as inferior — here was one of them in the same pantheon with all the greats who have paraded through the professional sport.

It was a particularly poignant and emotional personal occasion for Lance, too, who still looks more like a well-preserved rock star than a scarred ex-gladiator of the football field.

Lance has squeezed a lot of life into that youngish face.

Charlie Flowers, a glib fullback (who quickly deserted plagues for torts to become a lawyer), took one look at him when he reported to the San Diego Chargers in 1962, saw the baby face, the skinny legs, the crew-cut hair and the doe-like brown eyes, and said, "From now on you're Bambi."

It's a hell of a nickname to have to go through a career with. Lance thanked heaven the other Chargers eventually shortened it to "Bam."

He brought a special, rare talent to the sport that equates him with such receiving greats as Don Hutson and Raymond Berry (Lance was a lot faster).

Don Maynard, who played four seasons longer than Alworth, gained more than the 10,266 yards (almost six miles) picked up by Lance on pass receptions in his 11-year pro career. None surpassed the 19 yards he averaged for each catch.

But the figures just accentuate his ability. Lance had a flair, a spectacular knack for leaping high in a crowd. That made him highly visible whenever he was on the field.

He was just as upwardly mobile off the field, too, with an incredible rise in the fast food franchise business. But he was left hanging by poor advice and business associates who bailed out on him so that all he was left with was his football.

In 1971, the Chargers traded him to the Dallas Cowboys. He scored the first touchdown of Super Bowl VI after that season as the Cowboys corralled Miami 24-3. He played one more season (1972) and then quit.

"I just wasn't comfortable in the Dallas system," he explains. "It was too rigid and didn't give me a chance to use my ability as a pass receiver. I'm not knocking it. It just didn't work for me. I wasn't mentally ready to play any more football. I couldn't prepare myself." So at 32, still physically able, he made the painful adjustment to ex-athlete and, five years later, is thankful that people still remember what he was.

It's quite historic that an AFL graduate — for, despite his two years in Dallas, Lance was purely a product of that league — has finally made it to the shrine in Canton because vestiges of the bitterness that prevailed between the staid NFL and the upstart, money-glutted AFL still remain.

Al Davis, the man who first signed ex-Arkansas star Alworth to a pro contract under the goal posts at the Cotton Bowl in 1962 (although he probably had Lance in his hip pocket a month earlier), presented him officially at the mid-summer enshrinement ceremonies.

Davis delivered a mini-filibuster that old Senator Claghorn would have loved, obviously relishing the chance to show off old scars of the trauma inflicted by pro football's greatest civil war.

Davis is now the chief owner of the Oakland Raiders and still a maverick in NFL circles. If personal popularity isn't a condition, Davis himself ranks as a prime candidate for Canton because he went through the battle as an assistant coach, head coach, general manager, team boss and even, for a brief spell, league commissioner.

After Alworth, there will be others as they become eligible — Jim Otto of Oakland, Bobby Bell of Kansas City, the venerable George Blanda (who spanned both leagues).

But none will savor it more than Lance, who had to fight off the tears of emotion as he described what it meant for him and that fledgling league he gambled with 16 years ago. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

FIRST AID TIP
from
ST. JOHN AMERICAN
Snake Bites

- Calm and reassure the casualty as fear increases the degree of shock
- Lie him down as movement stimulates circulation and spreads poison through the body more quickly
- Flush the wound with soapy water and wash away all venom that is around the wound
- Support the limb and keep it still
- Obtain immediate medical aid
- Kill the snake, if possible for identification
- Start artificial respiration if necessary
- If you think the snake was poisonous, apply a flat constrictive bandage above the bite — that is between it and the heart
- The bandage should be loose enough to insert a finger and should not stop circulation below it
- Keep it on for half an hour then relax it for a half minute
- Ice may be applied to lessen the absorption of poison.

Blier testifies at barn-burning inquiry

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Inspector Bernard Blier testified Thursday that although he accompanied three other Mounties on a barn-burning expedition in 1972, he didn't realize this until some time later. "I did not consciously take part in this incident," Blier told a royal commission. "In light of statements made by colleagues, I believe I was present . . ."

The other three have told the inquiry that the barn, 85 kilometres east of Montreal, was burned to prevent a meeting in May, 1972, of Front de Liberation du Quebec militants and Black

Panthers from the United States. Earlier Tuesday, Constable Richard Daigle testified that he and Sgt. Claude Brodeur failed in a first attempt to set fire to the barn, as Cpl. Bernard Dubuc stood as lookout. A second try destroyed the barn. They have all said that Blier stayed as lookout at their unmarked car, more than a mile from the barn, during the incident. TOLD ABOUT "SNEAK" Blier testified he was asked to come along late that night to watch the car but was simply told by Dubuc that a "sneak"— police jargon for watching without being seen—was planned. He said he didn't ask for details.

After eating en route, Blier said, he became ill and spent much of the night in a stupor. He also said he was preoccupied with the fact that his wife had left him.

A few days later, a morning meeting of RCMP security service officers was held in Montreal that the barn—known as a meeting place for Quebec militants—had burned down, he said. Blier said he knew he had been in the Eastern Townships and he knew the Mounties were interested in the barn.

Charter of human rights 'unreliable'

OTTAWA (CP) — It would be a mistake for Canadians to rely only on the government's new charter of human rights and freedoms to protect their liberties, a constitutional lawyer said Tuesday.

Walter Tarnopolsky, a specialist in human rights law at Toronto's Osgoode Hall, told the joint Senate-Commons committee studying the constitution that the human rights provisions in the government's constitutional reform package will have impact only if they are accompanied by vigorous anti-discrimination programs at all levels of government. A human rights charter should be no substitute for the work of provincial ombudsmen in dealing with individual complaints about unfair treatment by the state, Tarnopolsky said. He called for the promotion of more affirmative action programs for women and other disadvantaged groups. CALLED FOR SUPPORT He also called for better efforts to give native people and racial minorities a chance to catch up with the rest of the population and unfailing government support of the Canadian Human Rights Commission and the 10 provincial human rights commissions.

Tarnopolsky told the committee the best feature of the government's plan to entrench basic human rights in a new constitution is that the courts will probably see it as a sign that the government wishes to give such rights stronger legal backing.

He said he may have mentioned the incident to Mari-Claire Dube, then a reader-analyst for the security service in Montreal. Donald McCleery, the flamboyant staff sergeant who ordered the barn-burning, testifies today.

Coroner steps down

QUEBEC (CP) — The coroner in charge of an inquest into the controversial death of a young prisoner in police cells removed himself from the case Tuesday after questions were raised about his impartiality in the case.

Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard announced that Maurice Lagace had been replaced by a special coroner, Jean-Paul Duquette of Terrebonne. The death of 18-year-old Richard Charest on Aug. 11 in Quebec City police headquarters had already caused considerable controversy. The outspoken chaplain at Orsainville prison, Msgr. Raymond Lavoie, accused police of brutality and questioned the official version that Charest hanged himself. And last week, Coroner Lagace ordered Charest's body exhumed to undergo further examination by pathologists concerning the cause of death. The daily Le Soleil reported Tuesday that Coroner Lagace was the landlord of the building where the victim's family lived and in an editorial said it did not question Lagace's professional integrity or competence, but that it was crucial that an appearance of impartiality be retained in the case.

But he was critical of the wording of the charter, warning that it will contain a number of disturbing weaknesses if enacted unchanged.

News Briefs

Shipjumping feline recovered

HALIFAX (CP) — Seagoing Sydney Topsail, footloose in Halifax on an illegal liberty leave, has turned up. The official mascot of the schooner Bluenose II was reported missing along the Halifax waterfront almost two weeks ago and missed its sailing time when the provincially-owned vessel put out to sea. The schooner, used by the government to promote tourism, returned to port recently from Lunenburg and schoolteacher Rosemary Butler telephoned the ship to report Sydney had been found in a school yard in south Halifax.

Nicaragua: Leftists gaining control

MANAGUA (AP) — Leftist guerrillas fighting to oust President Anastasio Somoza have taken almost complete control of northwestern Nicaragua, including the city of Chinandega, travellers arriving in Managua reported. They said the Sandinista guerrillas set up checkpoints in Esteli, north of Managua, and stopped all traffic on the Pan American Highway.

Lightning kills football coach

WHITMAN, Mass. (AP) — A series of lightning bolts struck a high school's rain-dampened athletic field during football practice Monday, electrocuting an assistant coach and causing minor injuries to 16 other persons. Dennis O'Brien, 29, was pronounced dead at the scene after the lightning struck him and set his clothes on fire on the Whitman-Hanson regional high school field. "It entered the left side of his head and I think his right foot went into a puddle and grounded, then the left foot (grounded)," said Dr. John Angley, a county medical examiner.

Kennedy film shows same story

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gunshot lines computed from a film taken during John Kennedy's assassination in Dallas in 1963 support the official Warren commission's conclusion that a single bullet struck both the president and then Texas Gov. John Connally, a team of photo analysis experts testified Tuesday. Reviewing the roll of film taken by amateur photographer Abraham Zapruder, Calvin McCamy, speaking for a group of 22 photo-analysts, said virtually all the experts agree that the film might show Kennedy and Connally reacting to being hit by a single shot.

Survivor claims hang-gliding record

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Frenchman Stephane Donoyer de Segonzac claimed Tuesday a new world altitude record for hang gliding of 32,720 feet (9,960 metres), set last Saturday in a flight that almost ended in disaster. De Segonzac's glider was attached to the gondola of a hot air balloon for the ascent over the Mojave Desert of California and one of the balloon seams ripped open.

Camp David: Peace no closer

CAMP DAVID, Md. (CP) — Egypt and Israel have shown some flexibility and readiness to compromise at the Camp David summit but this might not be enough to break the impasse in the Middle East talks, U.S. officials said today. The officials remained cautious about the outcome of the talks between President Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, now in their ninth day. "Before the summit, President Carter asked for flexibility and compromise," one official said. "We have had this. But it remains to be seen whether this will be enough."

Nixon hits soft shoulders

NEW YORK (AP) — It was like the old days Tuesday for Richard Nixon. He walked in downtown Manhattan with Secret Service men fore and aft as people gawked, sought autographs or booed. The former United States president even presided over a full-dress news conference at which he was addressed as "Mr. President" and questioned about the state of the world.

French-language cleanup announced

MONTREAL (CP) — The provincial Office de la Langue Francaise announced Tuesday it will set up a $600,000 publicity campaign to promote the use of better French by Quebec francophones and purge anglicisms from the language. Raymond Gosselin, president of the language board, told a news conference that the 22-week publicity campaign will feature television spots and newspaper advertisements. Three television spots, to be directed at English-speaking audiences, feature the campaign slogan: "French in Quebec—It's a plus."

Clark blames Grit policies for money flight

MONTREAL (CP) — Joe Clark says the government's economic policies are responsible for an alarming flight of Canadian money to countries such as the United States, creating jobs for Americans while millions of Canadians are unemployed. The Progressive Conservative leader told a businessmen's lunch here Tuesday that leading Montreal-based companies such as Genstar and Northern Telecom are investing in U.S. companies because they can expect better profits and better tax benefits.

A Conservative government would create investment incentives and adjust the tax system to encourage Canadian money to stay in this country, Clark said.

Clark was in Montreal to speak to the North Montreal Businessmen's Association, a French-speaking organization, and to Conservative workers in the federal riding of Ste. Marie. Introduced as Joey Clark, the Conservative leader spoke almost entirely in French. Conservative candidates and workers were liberally sprinkled in the crowd of about 100, which gave Clark a quiet reception.

Clark renewed his attacks on government economic policy, saying that if the government was a private company "it would be bankrupt."

The tragic reality facing Canada is that the federal budgetary deficit will reach $15 billion this year without any economic incentives able to stimulate growth and reduce the number of unemployed, he said.

Mackasey to run in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Bryce Mackasey, former federal cabinet minister and former member of the Quebec legislature, has indicated he will announce today his intention to seek the Liberal nomination for an Oct. 16 byelection in Ottawa Centre. Commenting on published reports that he already has decided to run in the byelection, one of 15 to be held the same day across Canada, Mackasey said his final decision will not be announced until today.

Agricultural zoning planned

ST. HYACINTHE, Que. (CP) — Quebec government plans to rezone agricultural land met with little opposition from municipal officials at a public meeting Tuesday with Agriculture Minister Jean Garon.

It was the first of a province-wide series of meetings to hear submissions from municipal and farming representatives on the land-zoning policy. Successive provincial governments have pledged to stop a trend which has seen more and more agricultural land taken out of production through sales to non-farmers. Guy Desrosiers, head of St. Hyacinthe's industrial promotion board, denied allegations by Garon that the municipality has embarked in recent years on a savage urban development plan involving the use of good arable land.

Escape artist strikes again

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — Theresa Brewer now holds the dubious distinction of escaping from Okalla, the Lower Mainland correctional centre, eight times—more often than any other prisoner in the institution's history. Prison director Marie Peacock said Monday that Brewer, considered dangerous, sawed through the bars of a metal door Saturday.

Buses, Metro back -- or else

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government bill to get Toronto Transit Commission workers back to work calls for straight-forward arbitration and daily fines of $500 for anyone refusing to comply. The bill, due to be debated when the legislature resumes today, calls for the services of an arbitrator to deal with the 7,000 Amalgamated Transit Union members who walked off the job early Monday.

Land banks may be sold off

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said Tuesday he will talk with provincial housing ministers about selling off federal-provincial land banks put together in recent years as a way of keeping house prices down.

His comments followed a report of a study group on land prices and servicing, released earlier in the day, that concluded that government land banks had not helped moderate house prices during the boom of the mid-1970s.

Biko's brother arrested

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (Reuter) — The brother of late black consciousness leader Steve Biko was arrested by security police Tuesday on the first anniversary of Biko's death, published reports say. The Rand Daily Mail said today that Kaya Biko was one of 14 relatives and friends of Steve Biko detained in the last few days.

Korchnoi meditates

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Soviet defector Viktor Korchnoi went into deep meditation Tuesday before facing defending champion Anatoly Karpov in the 21st game of the world chess championship. The game was adjourned after 42 moves and experts disagreed over who has the edge.

Canadian warns of schools scam

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — A Canadian educationist and businessman, W. Grosvenor, advised Malaysian students seeking admission to private schools in Canada to be on the lookout for bogus institutions. Grosvenor, who worked as adviser in the prime minister's department in Kuala Lumpur from 1974 to 1975, told reporters today he has received at least 40 letters from Malaysian students in Canada saying they have found their private schools to be sub-standard. He said there has been a spate of advertisements inserted by Canadian private schools in Malaysian newspapers on education opportunities in Canada.

Obituary

LILLIAN SARAH LEET of Danville

On Sunday, August 20, 1978, at 2:00 p.m., a funeral service for the late Lillian Sarah Leet was held in Trinity United Church, Danville, with the Reverend Watson Glover officiating. The service opened with the hymn "How Great Thou Art" and included the reading of chosen selections of scripture and a favorite hymn of the deceased. "All The Way My Saviour Leads Me". The friends and relatives then repeated the "Twenty-Third Psalm". Reverend Glover eulogized on Mrs. Leet's knowledge of the scripture and how her favorite hymn comforted her during hardships and sorrows. "In The Garden" was sung by Mrs. Marion Sutherland, Mrs. June Lodge with the Choir joining in the chorus, accompanied by Mr. A. Bishop at the organ.

The bearers were her six grandsons, Christopher Leet, Russell Davidson, Peter Leet, Douglas Davidson, Danny Mosher and David Davidson.

Lillian Gover Leet was born at Hochelaga (Montreal), February 1, 1897, daughter of the late Stanley Lyle Gover and Tabitha Jowett. On February 11, 1924, she was united in marriage to Curtis Arthur Leet of Castellar. This union was blessed with one son, Milton and two daughters, Mavis Mosher and Barbara Davidson. They first resided in Montreal where Curtis was employed as a pharmacist. Due to his ill health, they moved to the old Leet home at Castellar, to farm, where Curtis passed away in November 1952 at the age of 61.

Mrs. Leet's education was limited because of poor eyesight. This however did not deter her from educating herself through reading, especially history. Historical events throughout the world were of special interest to her, as well as the local history of Danville and Castellar. She also took part in aiding the Historical Society of Richmond County in compiling the research on the Leet history. She was a member of the Golden Age Club of Danville, and at one time, an active member of the Women's Institute, and also attended the U.C.W.

Left to mourn are her children, 13 grandchildren, four great-grandchildren, two brothers Charles and Stanley Gover, also a sister Violet Brown, as well as many nieces and nephews. Her youngest sister Rose Asselin predeceased her in 1937.

Following the interment in Danville Protestant Cemetery, a supper was served to family and friends at the Leet homestead by Milton and Evelyn Leet. Out of town mourners were from Mansonville, Rawdon, Toronto, North Bay, Foster, Philipsburg, Montreal, Granby, Richmond, Repentigny and Longueuil.

CBC extends "The National"

By SANDRA HYNDMAN

TORONTO — Last week's three-day launching of CBC's 1978-79 television season was alive with rumors as network watchers speculated on Peter Kent's successor.

One name surfaced again and again as the most likely to take over as The National's newscaster - Knowlton Nash, CBC's highly visible news and current affairs director.

Kent, who was pulled off the air one night recently, following a squabble with CBC brass over political interference in the content of news broadcasts, is leaving late this fall to set up a news bureau in Africa.

The National will be extended to 25 minutes a night starting Sept. 18 on most stations. Five minutes will be added to local newscasts carried on 17 network stations, so there will be 45 minutes of local, national and international news on these stations each weeknight.

In addition to current affairs documentaries once a month, Sunday and Monday night will include specials on the world's children (1979 is proclaimed The Year of the Child, by the UN), and urban growth.

The ACTRA and ANIK award-winning team, which broke new ground in TV investigative reporting in the much-acclaimed Connections, are already at work on a sequel, another special on organized crime.

News magazine continues its weekly probes into the story-behind-the-headlines in Canada and around the world. The same fast-moving news unit that produces News magazine will handle News Specials - keeping Canadian viewers in the picture.

The Watson Report returns to Wednesday nights, with its incisive host Patrick Watson focusing on national and world issues in revealing interviews with the headline-makers of the day.

On Sunday nights, Marketplace, with Joan Watson and the new co-host, Bill Paul, keeps viewers aware of developments, good and otherwise, on the consumer scene.

Ombudsman with Robert Cooper pursues bureaucracy and institutions on behalf of the beleaguered citizen. Man Alive and its host Roy Bonisteel return for a 12th season with thought-provoking programs on moral and spiritual issues of this complex world of the '70's.

A series examining issues surrounding resources and the Canadian economy, Fortunes enters its second season in January on Tuesdays at 10:30 p.m.

The unique CBC-TV Sunday afternoon series on business, finance, Money-makers (of past seasons) becomes Money magazine, with Phil Mathias and Harry Mannis as the on-camera team.

Country Canada brings news and a view of the nation's number-one industry-agriculture - to the attention of rural and urban Canadians on Sunday afternoon at a new time, 1 p.m.

According to Knowlton Nash, the network and its stations now carry 75,000 hours of news and journalistic programs a year on its English and French national, regional and local services.

There's one new face on The Fifth Estate, CBC-TV's weekly magazine of investigative journalism returning Tuesdays at 9:30 p.m. on September 12. Adrienne Clarkson and Eric Mallory are joined this year by Ian Parker (right), a journalist for 20 years who's worked in both private and public broadcasting as producer, editor, news director and on-air reporter.

This is the year of the special...

By SANDRA HYNDMAN

TORONTO — More Canadian prime-time content, that old CBC battle cry, was among several objectives for the 1978-79 season that the network put forward here at last week's three-day press screening of fall shows.

Others included the lengthening of the national news, the introduction of a dubbed French network series and working closely with the National Film Board to bring viewers Canadian films.

Despite a budget cutback of $71 million for the upcoming season, a full-steam-ahead atmosphere permeated the three days.

CBC's director of television programming, Jack Craine, summed up the network's optimism. "We'd be irresponsible if we did not recognize next year's financial forebodings, but this new television schedule has not been set back. We feel it is the best CBC has ever produced and we're not going to let anyone rain on our parade."

Peking Man Mystery (date/time, TBA) is Harry Raskey's latest production and it is an entertaining true-life whodunit, with all the ingredients of the classic mystery-suspense story: a disappearance, a mysterious woman in black exotic locations, a priceless relic.

Who was the Peking man and what happened to him?

Scientists say Peking man was an early ancestor of ours, a collection of bones dating back at least half a million years was unearthed in China in 1926 and authenticated by Dr. Davidson Black of Toronto and of the Peking Union Medical College.

An intriguing tale is woven around the fate of those bones a few years after Dr. Black's death in 1934.

The first installment of The Massey's, a two-part arts and science special, will be aired Sunday, October 22, 10-11 p.m. Part two can be seen Monday, October 23, at 10 p.m. The show traces the history of one of the most illustrious families in Canada from the founding of the dynasty by Daniel Massey, who in the 1830s settled in Upper Canada and started a business repairing and later manufacturing farm equipment. Massey is played by Barry Britton-Foster.

Tyler (Saturday, Sept. 30, 9:30 p.m.), a 90-minute drama special, is the story of a young man in his twenties whose dream is to own and operate the farm on which he was born and raised. But he must raise a $30,000 down payment before he can even expect to borrow the necessary mortgage money. This program reflects the hardships of many modern farmers who are land rich and cash poor. R.H. Thomson plays Tyler.

Wednesdays at 8 p.m. A Gift To Last is a one-hour drama series which debuts October 25.

Gordon Pinsent, who created the series, stars as Edgar Sturgess, who having left the army, now owns and operates a rundown hotel. A Gift To Last is a warm reflection of rural Canadian life in the early 20th century.

Paul Rubinek stars in Love On The Nose (TBA), an entertaining and compassionate portrait of an idealistic young leftist in Montreal in 1939.

While trying to come to grips with love, life and sex, he finds his world complicated by working for a "capitalist parasite" (a bookie), falling in love with a young victim of the system (a prostitute), and having a streak of luck picking winners from Hialeah to Blue Bonnet race tracks. Al Waxman, Paul Soles and Marilyn Lightstone star.

Early in 1978, the Toronto Symphony and guest soloists, contralto Maureen Forrester and pianist Louis Lortie, visited the People's Republic of China, led by the TS's conductor, Andrew Davis. CBC television went with them and the result is an absorbing two-hour film which leads off this season's Musicamera series on October 4. The Toronto Symphony in China is a musical and documentary record of a great cultural and emotional event. Producer-writer Norman Campbell says, "The film is meant to communicate a story, the Chinese people were very gracious and putting this film together was a beautiful experience."

Quarterly Report - The People of This Land, a 90-minute current affairs special, will be aired on Sundays four times this season.

Two documentary units were set up, Quarterly Report on CBC-TV's English network and Tel Quel on the French, working co-operatively to produce programs dealing comprehensively and in depth with the important political, social and economic issues in Canada.

The first documentary will be telecast September 10 and deals with native land claims and the effects of northern development of the Inuit and Indians. In December Quarterly Report takes a look at energy situation in Canada in relation to the widely-predicted crises of the 1980s, specifically covering the development of oil and gas pipelines as well as alternative sources of energy.

Host is Barbara Frum and executive producer is Ray Hazzan.

The Fifth Estate (Tuesdays, 9:30 p.m.) debuts September 12. Joining the award winning team of Adrienne Clarkson and Eric Mallory is veteran-reporter-broadcaster Ian Parker, who comes back after 2½ years absence.

The reporters have been to the north sea, where they found a Canadian is the major mover in offshore oil exploration; to Italy to investigate the business of kidnapping against a background of political uncertainty; and to Geneva to discuss the Canadian labor scene.

Canada After Dark (weeknights, 11:45) debuts September 18. It is a one-hour conversation and entertainment show with host Paul Soles.

"We intend to have some late-night fun, with interesting guests and solid performers," says CBC-TV variety head Jack McAndrew. "Canada After Dark will be built around the considerable talents of Paul Soles, the performer."

"This is a brand new show we're planning, not a revised version of Ninety-Minutes Live," adds Soles. "It's not going to be a copy of anything. We're starting from scratch."

The Albertans (Sundays, 9 p.m.) (a three-part) part action-adventure mini-series, begins January 14. It is set against the background of contemporary developments in Alberta and focusses on the lives of three families.

Fridays at 12:45 a.m. (late-night) starting September 22 is Dallas, a story of money, power and conflict. The marriage of the son and daughter of two feuding families creates the base for a classically dramatic situation set against the supermodern atmosphere of a fabulous city.

The Loto Canada Special (Fridays, 9 p.m.) debuts Sept. 18. Eight one-hour variety and music specials, built around the monthly Loto Canada draws, will offer Canadians an opportunity to enjoy their top entertainers.

Jamais Deux Sans Toi (Fridays, 10 p.m.), or Two's a Crowd, the English version of a half-hour situation comedy produced at CBC-Radio Canada in Montreal and revolving around a seemingly mismatched married couple, Francine and Remy Duval, begins Sept. 22.

The CBC television schedule also includes a further half-hour of Canadian programming each week, continuing the annual process, begun last season, of again replacing a half-hour of American programming in prime time, 8-11 p.m.

For Canada's millions of sports fans, the network has special coverage of national and international events, starting with the Ali-Spinks world heavyweight championship fight (Sept. 15) live from Superdome, New Orleans.

CBC this season continues its tradition of one-hour Sunday night drama with Sidestreet, the popular police series and For The Record - the acclaimed series of contemporary dramas inspired by today's headlines.

Responding to audience interest in science programming, the network will offer for the first time a full session of science - The Nature of Things, then Science Magazine, in a half-hour prime-time slot year-round, early Sunday evenings.

In 1978-79, CBC-TV has four new American shows: Mary, the hour comedy-variety series starring Mary Tyler Moore, W.K.R.P. in Cincinnati, a situation comedy set in a floundering radio station, W.E.B., a drama concerning power struggles behind-the-scenes at a big American TV network, and The Paper Chase, about the pressured lives of law students at a major university.

The Muppets, seen on some local CBC stations in past seasons, goes network this season - Wednesdays at 7:30. This delightful series starring the Muppet creations of Jim Henson, is a production of ITC in Britain.

Late-afternoon Saturdays, Mork and Mindy, a new American sitcom about a young visitor from outer space and his "earthling" friend Mindy, will be aired.

Renewed imports in the 1978-79 prime-time schedule are: Rhoda (moves to Wednesday), Barney Miller (moves to Thursday), Happy Days, Three's Company, MASH, All in The Family (moves to Friday), The Wonderful World of Disney (early Sunday evenings), The Two Ronnies (November start).

WKRP in Cincinnati (top row) Richard Sanders, Gordon Jump, Tim Reid, (middle row) Loni Anderson, Howard Hesseman, Jan Smithers star in the new situation comedy on CBC-TV's new season - Mondays at 8:30 p.m., starting Sept. 18.

From Major League Baseball to CFL ... and Hockey Night in Canada to Curling's four major bonspiels ... there's top sports entertainment for Canadian television viewers throughout the 1978-79 season on CBC television.

When the Toronto Symphony visited the People's Republic of China last winter, conductor Andrew Davis exchanged musical views with Li de-lun, conductor of the Peking Philharmonic. The Toronto Symphony in China leads off the 1978-79 Musicamera season on Wednesday, October 4.

Cookshire Fair results

This year's Cookshire Fair was one of the most successful ever held, with more exhibitors than ever, and the attendance falling just short of last year's record.

The rented booths in the main building reported record sales. The exhibits upstairs in the Main Building were of top quality, and every available space was filled.

There was a very good exhibit of heavy horses and the large exhibit of light horses put on a great show in their new show ring. There was also a very large machinery display.

The presidents and directors of recent years are to be congratulated as Cookshire Fair is growing in every capacity each year.

A good story

A proven kid pleaser

LLOYD ALEXANDER'S "The First Two Lives of Lukas Kasha," is a nimble, multi-leveled fantasy. The author follows the exotic fortunes of Lukas Kasha, who, in submitting to a showman's bid to aid in a magic act, is thrust into another world.

There's nothing like a good story to pique a jaded fiction appetite; if your kids' summer reading diet seems bland, try serving them any or all of these four new offerings.

Danish author Cecil Bodker creates a memorable protagonist in Young Silas of "Silas and the Black Mare." A circus runaway, Silas is a coolly intelligent sort who shows his sharp intelligence and uncanny poise when he agrees to an unscrupulous horse trader's bet: if Silas can ride the trader's shining black mare, the animal is his; if he can't, he must work for the trader for two years without pay.

Not surprisingly, Silas masters the wild mare and leaves the trader helplessly recanting his terms. Later Silas loses the mare to a grasping, greedy farmer, but again ends up retrieving his prize.

In the meantime, Silas must fend for himself in a harsh, hostile environment. Village residents are desperately poor, and, in this vaguely historical Danish setting, children can be sold for the right price. Indeed, Silas himself is a mix of cruelty, gentleness and vulnerability.

Bodker's conception of a lone boy battling a preying world is unflinching yet not despairing. In this bleak setting where mere survival is the reason for being, Bodker casts a ray of light and hope with her ending — Silas finally leaves town with his mare and with a new friend in tow.

In a much lighter but no less thought-provoking vein is Lloyd Alexander's "The First Two Lives of Lukas Kasha." In this nimble, multi-leveled fantasy, the author follows the exotic fortunes of Lukas Kasha, who, in submitting to a showman's bid to aid in a magic act, is thrust into another world.

That land is Abadan, and there Lukas is declared king, a delightful state of affairs to start, but one that grows ever more hazardous as Lukas begins to exercise his royal prerogative. An Pete." For Tommy Bridges, Pete was like a father. The life he and his widowed mother had with Pete in his run-down California beach-front house was special, "like Christmas, something wonderful that came along once in a while."

But then Pete and Mom separate, and now Tommy finds his lean new Hollywood surroundings lonely and depressing. While his mother job hunts or dates a "creep" named Mort, Tommy spends time at a nearby abandoned estate, where he befriends two wanderers — a solitary, abused runaway named Joel and an Indian-looking down-and-out named Little Horse — both worried about the Boulevard crazies who might be out to disrupt their primitive housekeeping.

One night when Mort's oily grand vizier becomes an arch enemy when Lukas decides to investigate the possibilities of Abadan restoring friendly relations with its neighbor — the gem-rich kingdom of Bishangari.

Lukas — a resourceful run away — back to the coast to Pete's cabin and a reunion. A taut conclusion builds as Pete delivers Tommy home in time to see the estate in flames and to push through a fire-guard and rescue Tommy's friends.

The end? Tommy's mother and Pete reconcile, with marriage their aim. It sounds soapy, but it really isn't because Buchen has laid a solid foundation of well-drawn relationships and characters who have dimension. On the whole, this is a gutsy but sensitive portrayal of a boy's yearning for family love.

Helen Cresswell's "Absolute Zero" is a sequel to last year's comic "Ordinary Jack," and the second in what will be a four-part series.

The idiosyncratic personalities of the Bagthorpe family were well-established in "Ordinary Jack." Now Cresswell elaborates on those individual and collective quirks to spark a series of comical traumas that culminate in an audacious replay of Part I's "All Out Furor" — a smoking, noisy dinner table catastrophe.

Send-away contests are the heart of this story. Uncle Parker's "Get tough with sugar puff" slogan wins him and Aunt Celia a Caribbean cruise and the enmity of Mr. Bagthorpe, a professional writer who had also entered the contest. In response, he and his children enter every contest in sight with some humorously ironic results.

Cresswell has a knack for dry comedy and for creating wonderful characters. Part II matches Part I in conception and laughs. Don't miss it.

Aldrich Reunion

HUNTINGVILLE (MD) — On the beautiful day of August 27, the first family reunion of the Aldrich family, was held in the Huntingville Community hall, with approximately eighty people present, ranging from the ages of two, to 77 years of age.

Around 12:30, everyone enjoyed a delicious buffet lunch, consisting of numerous salads, baked beans, hot dishes, rolls, breads, and many sweets, accompanied by punch, tea and coffee.

Boyd and Wayne Aldrich introduced the families and then asked the people to sign the guest book. Thanks was given to everyone who helped make this possible.

Later there was free time to get together and socialize, talking over old times, while the younger ones entertained themselves with sports. Many family pictures were taken at this time also.

Guests were from Middlesex, Mass., Fonda, N.Y., Welland, Ont., Milton, St. Albans, and Swanton, Vt., Gaspé, Stanstead, St. Denis de Brompton, Cookshire, Sherbrooke, Lennoxville and Huntingville, Que.

It is hoped to have another reunion next year.

Celebrates 90th birthday

EAST FARNHAM — Mrs. Theresa Thompson was a much feted person, honoring her 90th birthday, which she observed on August 27, 1978.

To mention some of the celebrations: one at her Senior Citizens Club; a dinner party at the Rodney Jenne camp at Lake Carmi, Vt., an honorable mention at the Collins home; again at the McCullough Cottage at Alburg, Vt., where she was a guest of Mrs. James McCullough and daughter Helen and finally at the Barrand home. Special birthday cakes were provided in each event, along with suitable mementos.

Mrs. Thompson is very active for her years and enjoys being with people and plays a sharp game of 500 when opportunity permits.

A belated birthday wish, Tessie, from us all and may you enjoy many more happy birthdays.

Ladies' Circle meets

SCOTSTOWN — The St. Paul's Presbyterian Ladies Circle was held on Sept. 6 in the church hall.

Mrs. Frank Kratochvil conducted the meeting, which opened with Mrs. Kenneth Smith reading Romans 10, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

There were 11 members answered the roll call. Mrs. Harvey MacRae read the minutes of the June meeting and Mrs. Kelton MacKenzie, the Treasurer's report, both were accepted. Letters of thanks were read, some with donations enclosed and thank-you letters were written to those who had given the donations. $25.00 refund sent for the Student Exchange was received as the Exchange did not take place. $50.00 was voted to the Church Managers and a donation given to the Sherbrooke Hospital. The price of quilting has been raised and two quilts are ready to be done.

It was decided not to have a supper this fall but members will each give a donation of money.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Bill MacAskill for all she does at the manse and church hall.

Mrs. Harvey MacRae received the tea money and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Members all brought their own lunch and gathered around the table for a social hour. Miss Mariette Macleod asked the blessing.

Bishop Festo Kivengere Mission

KNOWLTON (KT) — The Diocese of Montreal Bishop Festo Kivengere Mission taking place September 11 to 17, 1978, is not for church members or anglicans only, but for everyone. In considering attending some of the events, please bring someone else along.

The preacher, Bishop Festo Kivengere comes as a renowned prophet of our times, a preacher of great devotion and much experience. Of special interest is the fact that he, like many others, has had to leave his beloved Uganda because of the continued threats of Idi Amin, who contrived to have Archbishop Luwum murdered last year. Bishop Festo is able to say "I love Idi Amin", the title of his little book suggested as reading in preparation for the Mission. A copy will be found at the back of St. Paul's Church.

Dates and locations the Mission will take place are listed below, but of special note is the Rally at Massey-Vanier High School, Cowansville, on Thursday, September 14 at 8:00 p.m. and also the special service on Sunday, September 17, in l'Eglise Notre-Dame. Notre Dame Church is one of the new church buildings in Montreal and will accommodate the thousands of people who wish to hear Bishop Festo's Word from God and bear witness together to Him who is the Way, The Truth and The Life. A chartered bus will be leaving from Knowlton at 6:15 p.m. to attend this, the closing service. The cost is moderate - $3.00.

There will also be a luncheon with Bishop Festo intended for those unable to attend the Thursday evening service in Cowansville. It will take place in Cowansville on Thursday noon. Please contact the rector for tickets.

A special Youth Mission takes place on Saturday, September 16 at Christ Church Cathedral from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. All young people 13 years old and over are invited. Bring lunch.

On T.V., Bishop Festo was guest on a programme on Channel 12 from 9:30 to 11 a.m. on Monday, September 11th.

Remember the Mission is for each and all - Keep the dates free. Plan to come with others in a chartered bus or car pool. To prepare - use the special prayer and read Galatians 5 and James 2 (texts for Bishop Festo talks).

Mission Prayer: Almighty God, Whose love for us is beyond understanding, Grant the blessings of Your spirit on Bishop Festo, as he leads our diocesan mission, that we may be captured by your love and freed to share our lives in the service of Jesus Christ our Lord.

September 13 - Business People's Meeting - Anglican House, Montreal, 12:30 p.m.; September 13th, St. Barnabas Church, St. Lambert - 8 p.m.

Thursday, September 14 - Massey Vanier High School Auditorium, Cowansville, 8 p.m.

September 15 - Dollard Civic Centre, 8 p.m.

Harbinson Family Reunion held

BIRCHTON (MM) — September 2nd, 1978, dawned with bright sunshine and balmy breezes, a perfect autumn day for the Harbinson Family Reunion to celebrate the 50th Anniversary of the arrival in Canada of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harbinson, from Ireland, with their children Sarah, (Sadie), Thomas, Mae, Bertie (Robert Jr) and Samuel.

Some of the Clan arrived on Thursday, others on Friday, and on Saturday, leaving for their respective homes, if distant, on Sunday.

Breakfast at 9 a.m. on Saturday at the Homestead got the day off to a holiday-spirited start, followed by all sorts of activities, including horseshoe-throwing, ball games, races, frisbee fun, and catching up on all the family news.

Just before the bounteous noon lunch, Thomas, the eldest of the family, presented his mother with a dainty corsage of yellow roses, bearing loving good wishes from all of her Clan.

Early in the afternoon, all went to the Legion Hut in Cookshire, where Thomas, as Clan President, conducted a short business meeting when it was voted to meet again in 1979. He then presented the Chief with a Scotch shawl of the MacAllister plaid, made by the Tartan Crofters of St. John, N.B., as a special gift from her "ain folk", or family. Deeply moved and surprised, the "Lady of the Day" briefly thanked them for the kind thought that prompted the giving of such a treasured shawl and its loving good wishes. This gift she modelled, as "only a clanslady can", amid much camera clicking and bulb flashing.

Grandson-in-law Walter Billson, of Lennoxville, with his usual humour, wit, and coin-digging ability, ably auctioned off the many donated articles, the proceeds of which swelled the treasurer's wallet considerably, as did the drawing for a beautiful wood rug made by Mrs. T.J. Harbinson, the drawing ably handled by Sandra Weston Allen. This work of art will decorate some spot in the Charles Harbinson home in Mississauga, Ont.

The last article on the auction table was a mystery box, which sold well, proved to be empty. The buyer was disappointed until told that there was "more to follow the box", a large box, which was found to contain a plaque, presented to the Clan Mother, by its designer, Ronald Jamieson of Kinross Mills, a plaque bearing the following letters and figures: BIRCHTON — 1925 - 1978.

The plaque had been fashioned with some of the wood on which the Harbinsons took their first steps, as they detained, in their chosen country, Canada, wood from the Birchton Canadian Pacific Station, alas now removed! Following the plaque, the Lady was handed a railroad spike from ties in front of same building. (Pity the wall into which said spike might be driven!). Ronald's parting nail was: "You, Clan Chief, must hang up this plaque at every Reunion of the Harbinsons, henceforth!"

As the recipient, really surprised, accepted the gift, graciously, many more pictures were snapped.

After everyone had, with well-filled plates, arranged himself, or herself, at the long tables, and Grace had been said by Sam, all ate "well, if not too wisely" of the delicious foods.

When all signs of the banquet had disappeared, Charles (Chuck) entertained with the showing of several racks of previous Family Reunions and other family occasions. Such sighs when he announced "that's all for this time!" Interesting and amusing comments were heard. Goodness, how the children have grown! Did I ever look like that? Is that myself, really?

During the day it was noted that everyone was proudly wearing the Canada lapel flag pin received as they were greeted by the Clan president, Thomas Harbinson, not a Shamrock, for they are all Canadians.

Those attending of the House of Thomas (with Lillian) were Michael (with Elsie) and Bobby; of Sadie (with Ronald Jamieson) and Rose Scott Markarian (with Ralph) and Bill Scott with Joan and Chris, Karen; of Robert, Jr. (with Kay), Heather (with Paul Richardson), Andrew, Matthew and Danny; of Mae, Sandra (with Jack Allen) with Andrew, Matt, David; Wayne (with Sharon) with Lisa Zachary; of Sam (with Mary) Gayle, Glenda, Gina; of Charles (with Rosamond), Mary Kate, Ruth; of Ronald (with Gladys), Timothy, Jamie. Guests Mrs. Lyonesse, Tammy Brewer, M. Murray.

Some who faced an early departure next morning on a long trip home left soon after the "pictures", others stayed to chat, sing, and participate in the musicale provided by guitar, and violin of Ralph and Paul, and the accompanying chorus of mixed voices.

ELIMINATE WINTER TIRE CHANGEOVER

Tiempo The All Season Steel Belted Radial

FROM $44

Now you can buy an all season radial tire that gives you the smooth quiet ride of a summer radial and handles winter like a snow tire.

Over 10,000 biting edges give Tiempo traction and pull on snow and ice... without studs! How?

The tread rubber retains flexibility and traction at below freezing temperatures.

Tiempo meets Rubber Manufacturers' Association standards as a snow tire, yet on dry pavement the unique centre 'whisper' rib design suppresses noise for a quiet ride.

Tiempo represents real value. Priced below many other steel belted radial tires, Tiempo provides all the advantages of radials plus all season performance.

There is even a specially designed scuff bar that helps keep Tiempo whitewalls white by absorbing punishment from curb scrapes.

Goodyear Tiempo is a new kind of tire for all seasons. Get a set at your Goodyear Service Store today.

The president, Miss Margaret Kinkead, opened the meeting with the Salute to the Flag and the Mary Stewart Collect. A warm welcome was given to all. The motto was, "The more we learn, the more we find to learn." The roll call, "Name Your Favourite Subject in School and Tell Why," was answered by ten members. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Irene Paige. The minutes from the July meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Myrtle Pitman and approved. Correspondence included the renewal notice for the Canadian Consumers' magazine, which was ordered to be renewed. The branch history for 1977-78 has been sent to Macdonald College to be put on file.

The conveners' reports were as follows: Agriculture convener Dorothy Montgomery asked for three helpers from our branch, and for a loaf of sandwiches for the school fair which took place on Saturday, September 9, at Lennoxville Elementary School. Parents and visitors were welcome to visit the fair from 1:30 p.m. to 3 p.m. The helpers for the school fair were Catherine Tarte, Dorothy Montgomery and Margaret Kinkead. Citizenship convener Margaret Smart was approached by Mrs. Roy Sutor, County convener, for CanSave knitters. Some members offered to knit. Eleven balls of wool were requested for our work. Education convener Kathleen Reid read a news item on misinformation on the metric system which must be corrected. Home Economics conveners Eva Beaton and Phyllis Hazard had several articles turned in on the work calendar. Mrs. Myrtle Pitman was asked to order fifteen copies of the Agriculture Canada publication, "Shopping for Food and Nutrition", which are available to W.I. members from the County branch. There will be no work at the cancer dressing station before October. Sunshine convener, Mrs. Mickie Povey, reported thank-you notes of appreciation from members and friends. veners, Viola Tarte, discussed plans for an activity in the near future. The report of the County meeting held in August at Milby Community Hall was given by Florence Paige. Society holds executive meeting

COOKSHIRE — An executive meeting of the Compton County Historical and Museum Society was held in Eaton in the municipal building, with Mr. J.E. McKercher presiding, and 17 in attendance. Routine business was conducted. Mrs. Callan reported on more storage space which might be available. Final arrangements were made for the Open House which was held on Sunday, Sept. 10 from 12 o'clock noon to 5 p.m. Coffee was available in the old academy across the road for those wishing to bring a picnic lunch. Mr. Lionel Hurd reported on the amount of money needed for further repairs on the Museum. It was stated that all books are to be catalogued in the Museum. One member reported having visited Mr. Lemay's doll collection at Howardene. The annual meeting will be held in the Sawyerville Community Centre on Friday, Sept. 15 at 8 p.m. Mr. Wayerm Laberee will speak on "Pioneer Roads of Compton County", and the annual reports will be given. Mrs. Murray, nomination committee convener, presented the list of directors for the ensuing year, and these will be approved at the annual meeting. The ladies will serve doughnuts and coffee following the annual meeting. The new rules and regulations of the society will be presented at the annual meeting for ratification. Mrs. Muriel Prescott presented the treasurer's report, which showed the receipts and expenditures, leaving a fair balance on hand. There was a recent discovery in the Cookshire Cemetery of the memorial stone for the late Captain John Cook. A picture will be taken of it and a write-up given to the press. It was suggested that we have a membership drive in the fall. Correspondence was read, and arrangements made for this society to be represented at some of the Historical meetings or seminars.

UCW meetings

BIRCHTON — The heavy rains on the evening of Sept. 6 did not prevent a good attendance at the Birchton U.C.W. meeting after the summer recess, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rogers, where, after the President's call to order with the Purpose, Mrs. J.A. Murray, convener of the Worship Committee, chose the theme: "What is a friend?" Most of the group participated in the programme showing how the answer to the question was couched in terms of one's vocation, during which the singing of two hymns, with the hostess at the piano were sung: What a Friend We have in Jesus, and Come Let us sing of a wonderful love. Mrs. Turchyn reminded the ladies that their talent money was to be 'turned in' at the October meeting, "so keep busy at it." Mrs. Rogers reported that she and Mrs. Todd have looked into the collecting of discarded school books for Overseas Outreach, and that Rev. Abrahams had taken over the problem of sending them where needed; a list sent by Dixville Home is to be circulated for the selections of a 'foster child there'. The Treasurer's report showed that some funds need to be added to meet the many demands ahead; calendars were sold at the meeting; Community and Visiting Committee, reported by Mrs. W.O. Todd, showed her summer had been busy; Mrs. Latewood's welfare work is in good order; several bandages are being held over for a month as more are to be knitted; Live-Love material and Mandates are available for reading; also the latest Exchange, and information on East Labrador Parish. Thanks were read from folk remembered during illness; a reminder of the Tea and Sale in aid of the Sawyerville Seniors' Home in Sawyerville was discussed, and help solicited, on September 23. Arrangements are on foot for the Birchton Tea and Sale on Saturday, October 23. It is hoped other groups will avoid this date for their Fund-raising in October, so they may attend this social afternoon, and Birchtonians may be free to be at another's. Notice was given that the Plymouth-Trinity Choir will present a Musical Evening in the Birchton Church the evening of October 1, when all churches in the surrounding areas are invited for the fellowship, in the Church, and in the Hall after the musical, everyone, regardless of colour or creed is cordially invited. Do tell others!

Hazel and Vera McComb, the efficient hostesses. The October meeting, first Wednesday, is to be at the Logan-MacKinnon home. All are invited. SCOTSTOWN — The September meeting of St. Andrew's United Church Women was held at the home of Mrs. W.A. Ladd on Sept. 6. Mrs. F.B. Mayhew conducted the worship service which opened with the singing of "O God, our help in ages past", followed by reading Genesis 2, 7-15 and the meditation on "The first Labor Day". She closed with the Lord's Prayer in unison. Five members and one visitor answered the roll call. Mrs. F.B. Mayhew read the minutes of the June meeting and the treasurer's report, both were accepted. It was moved and seconded and carried that the U.C.W. would pay for the lawn mowing for the month of July and pay for two of the church services to the Student Minister. A letter was read from Beth, Hope and Alex thanking the ladies of St. Andrew's United Church for serving refreshments after the funeral of the late Mrs. Bertie Waters.

The date for the Fall Rally is Sept. 13, to be held in East Angus. Mrs. Ladd read a letter about the Christian Program, 100 Huntley St. Toronto, Ont. being taken off C.F.C.F. Channel 12. She asked members and those interested in having this program returned to the T.V. in November to write to Program Director, C.F.C.F. Channel 12, 405 Ogilvy St. Montreal, Que. It is hoped that enough will write and ask to have this program returned to the air. Plans were made for members to go some day to the Wales Home to visit Mr. and Mrs. Ross MacDonald. The amount of $25.00 which had been sent for the Student Exchange was returned as the Exchange trip for the students had been cancelled. Mrs. Ladd read an article from the Mandate and other material was on display from the United Church Headquarters. It was decided that 10 calendars be ordered this year. Mrs. F.B. Mayhew will have the October meeting and Mrs. C.M. MacRae to conduct the Worship service. Meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction and Mrs. Ladd served delicious refreshments.

Autumn's cider season at the Naeve's...

When the Naeves start pressing apples it's as sure a sign of autumn as the changing leaves. For the past few weekends people have been bringing all sorts and sizes of apples from wild trees or cultivated ones. The Naeve's cider press, located in their Hay Barn on the North Road to Hatley, converts them into delicious apple juice.

Lowell, who does the pressing, says the juice can be frozen, canned, bottled or converted into cider.

The apples go into the top of the cider press where they are ground. After coming out the bottom, the ground apples are placed on trays which are pressed.

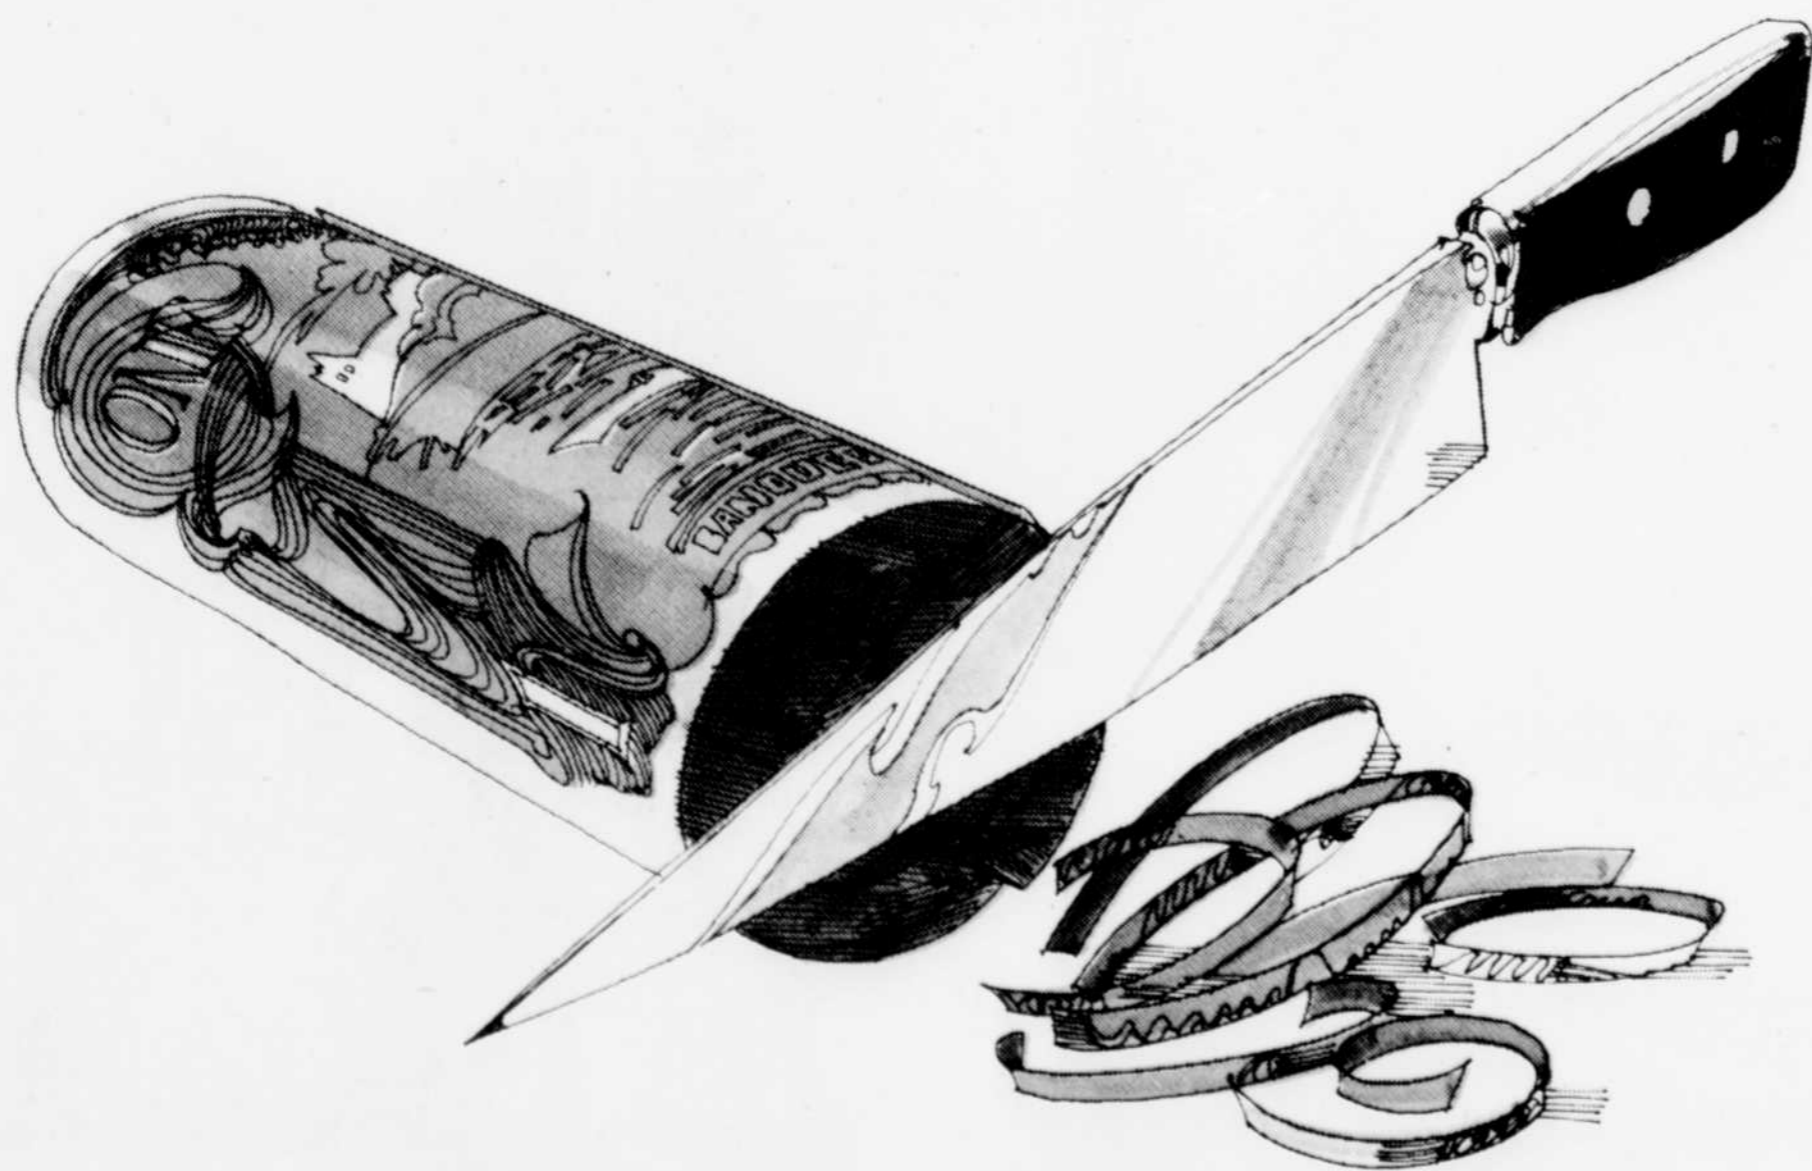

Juice is squeezed out of the apples and poured into buckets.

The juice then is poured from the bucket into bottles and it's ready for tasting.

WI MEETINGS

BROOKBURY — The regular meeting of the Brookbury W.I. was held at the Institute Hall on Sept. 7, at 2 p.m. Those present were welcomed by the President who opened the meeting with all repeating the Ode, Collect for Club Women and Salute to the Flag.

Our motto for September was "Some people live to learn, others live and never learn."

The Roll Call, answered by 12 members. "How important is bilingualism in our society today," was answered in many interesting and informative ways.

Mrs. Sterling Batley, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting and these were adopted as read.

Some discussion followed about our tables and chairs which had been loaned for a wedding in the neighbourhood, and, as some members felt we should not allow these to be taken from our hall, a motion was passed that we not loan our card tables and chairs in the future. Plans were made to buy three or four more tables and chairs as we are often short at some of our card parties.

Mrs. S. Batley gave a report on what has been done concerning water rights to our hall and added that she hoped these would be finalized in the near future.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Osborne Lowe and several small bills ordered paid.

A letter from Mrs. Kilgour, an appeal for funds from the Salvation Army, a news item from A.C.W.W. and several thank-you notes, made up the correspondence which was read by the Secretary.

A sum of money was voted to be sent to the Salvation Army from our branch.

Convenors' reports consisted of the following:

Agriculture - Mrs. S. Joyce told of the many uses of milk and milk products and the great value to our health.

Home Economics - Mrs. R. Coleman read some helpful hints to remember for kitchen use and around the garden.

Welfare & Health - Mrs. D. Clark told that some ways hamburgers are cooked have caused cancer.

Publicity - Mrs. S. Batley told about spending a pleasant afternoon with the Bury W.I. Our members were invited to their August meeting.

Education - Mrs. F. McIntyre will report her items later as she is in charge of the program. Several members reported visits to the homes, also sick and shut-ins during the summer. The sick and flower committee reported sending five boxes of fruit and juices to friends and neighbours who have been ill or in hospital.

A motion was made and carried that we order 50-year W.I. pins and 24-year pins for all our members who are eligible. The secretary was asked to attend to this as soon as possible.

Card Parties are planned for Sept. 15, 22 and 29, to be held at the Brookbury Hall.

The Family Supper which was to have been planned was postponed until the Oct. meeting which will be held on Oct. 3rd at the home of Mrs. Rufus Stevenson in Bishopston.

Due to the late hour when the business was completed, the program on Education to be given by Mrs. Flora McIntyre was left until the next meeting.

Following the adjournment of the meeting by Mrs. L. Weir, delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. C. Lowe and Mrs. O. Lowe.

WATERLOO — On Wed. Sept. 6, the regular monthly meeting of the Waterloo-Warden W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Myrtle Hilliker at South Stukely with Mrs. L. Maynes and Mrs. J. Hogan as co-hostesses.

Mrs. A. Marcotte presided and opened the meeting in the usual manner. Roll call was answered by thirteen members and four visitors who mentioned a prominent person's name which had appeared in the news recently and why.

Minutes, correspondence and financial statement were read and approved.

Pennies for Friendship were collected and the Care package, given by Mrs. Sicard, was won by Mrs. Marcotte.

The Autumn card party was discussed and it was thought best to hold this towards the latter part of October. A decided date will soon be made known.

Notification of the Semi-Annual County meeting had been received. This was to be in Granby on Tues., Sept. 12. Several members planned to attend.

Convenors each read something pertaining to their work.

Following the adjournment of the meeting a silent auction of various articles was held, which netted $15.39 to be added to the general funds.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

The October meeting to be on the 4th at the home of Mrs. W. Copping.

Sher-Lenn Fifty Plus Club

August brought the resumption of the Monday Handicraft meetings, with fresh ideas and plans for the Christmas Bazaar to be held in November. These Monday meetings start in the mid morning with a break for lunch, and continue until mid afternoon. Many members who are not actively participating in craft work enjoy the social part of these weekly informal get-togethers.

Bingo was held on the 2nd of August, and the monthly Whist games were played on the 23rd. The winning table of Whist was captained by Mrs. Vivian Hutchison and the players were Miss Helen McGregor, Mrs. Marguerite Mouldy and Mr. Howard Woolleton. The travelling prize was captured by Mrs. Dan Patton.

Members had a very pleasant trip to Quebec city and Three Rivers on the 8th. Leaving early in the morning for special tours of Quebec, and after supper a boat cruise out of Three Rivers with special entertainment on board, ended a long but most enjoyable day trip.

Art classes resumed the first week of August. With the Art Show and Tea being held the last of October, members are engrossed in many types of oil painting. Miss Carlotta Perkins has most kindly come to several art classes. Her help and suggestions are most welcome and so very instructive. Sometimes water will not look 'just right' or, an expression is just not right, and an artist needs advice!

Members attended the Piggery Theatre, North Hatley, for supper and the play "Loot". It was a lovely summer evening and with a delicious supper, an excellent play, and the thoughtfulness of all the Piggery personnel, August 15th proved to be a refreshing and different programme.

A barbecue was held on the 16th. The day being sunny and warm, it was held on the side lawn of the club headquarters. The 'cooks', Gordon Ranshouan and Gerald Noonan, were kept busy at the barbecue, the hamburgers seemed to melt like ice cream in a hot sun! The hostesses were busy too, a really good hamburger needs all the 'fixins'... and cake for dessert goes quickly too! Following the barbecue a drawing for a Hummel clock was made by Mr. Douglas Armitage and Mrs. Gertrude Montgomery was the fortunate winner.

Through the courtesy of Steinberg Limited members of the Sher-Lenn were presented with tickets to a matinee performance of "18 Wheels", a musical play by John Gray, at Festival Lennoxville on August 3rd. This was a most entertaining play, and the Sher-Lenn is most appreciative for the thoughtfulness of Steinberg Limited in making it possible for so many members to attend.

The new programmes for September, October, November and December are now ready with trips and activities geared to the autumn and winter months.

Seniors visit Wales Home

STANBRIDGE EAST — On August 20, the Stanbridge East Senior Citizens took an enjoyable bus trip to the Wales Home at Richmond, accompanied by Mr. Neil Creller travelling back to his new abode at the Home.

Upon arrival, before leaving the bus, Mr. Earl Bra- ceay, on behalf of the Senior Citizens, presented Mr. Creller with a stand - attached maple floor lamp. Neil, very graciously expressed his thanks for such an appropriate and useful gift.

We were then met at the door by two nurses, who ushered us into a Foyer and after signing the guest book were shown into a large many-windowed reception room, overlooking the beautiful countryside, where we partook of our picnic lunch, the Home, plentifully supplying hot water for tea and coffee.

After lunch, we were escorted in groups in an enjoyable and informative tour of the Home.

We all met at the bus and after farewells and best wishes to Neil, started our trip back, each being much impressed with what we had seen of the Wales Home and of the gracious and painstaking reception we had received.
