No Mystery

The Sherwin-Williams Paints are not patent paints, nor chemical paints, but pure white lead and zinc and oil and drier and color and nothing else. These make honest paints that cover most and best, and wear longest.

There is a reason why these are the best paints. This reason is not a secret nor a mystery. It is because by hard study, hard work and patient improvement for thirty years we have made the best paints that can be made.

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINTS

The prejudice which many sensible people have against ready-mixed paints is due to the number of inferior mixtures sold in cans. No one doubts to-day that paint can be made with the latest scientific appliances better than can be mixed from the raw materials by hand-work and guess-work. The moral is plain. Buy ready-mixed paints in which you have absolute confidence. The paints with the best reputation. The Sherwin-Williams Paints. Send for booklet "Paint Points." Free.

DON'T.

DON'T imagine that because I am buying nearly a ton of Raspberries every day that I have no time or goods for my regular customers.

DON'T think that I cannot sell goods of the same quality as cheap as any other merchant as that would be a grave mistake. I buy for cash.

DON'T send your money away when it is needed and will do more good at home, and you make nothing by it.

DON'T imagine that this store is open to-day and closed to-morrow, as I am here at the pleasure of my friends the public.

DON'T think that I am not going fishing by and bye and would like you to come on while business can be done under my personal supervision.

Word has been received that Principal Adams of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, and who went to England early in the summer, has taken a turn for the worse and his condition is causing considerable anxiety to his friends.

The celebrations of the Jewish New Year begin to-night and will continue for a couple of days. Several of the members of that faith belonging to Sherbrooke have gone to Montreal to take part in the rejoicings there.

A rather serious disturbance took place on Saturday afternoon opposite the Albion Hotel, between several of Sherbrooke toughs and outsiders, in which the latter came out second best. The police have the matter in hand.

The police raided a disorderly house on Saturday night on St. Paul Street, Little Canada. The occupant was allowed to go on her promising to appear Monday morning, but she failed to appear, and it is thought that she has left for parts unknown.

One of the greatest events of the autumn season is the announced enlargement of that truly great newspaper the "Family Herald" and "Weekly Star," of Montreal. The enlargement makes the Family Herald a paper equal to a book of 384 pages each week, making 52 such books in the year. The Family Herald and Weekly Star is simply carrying everything before it, the circulation jumping by leaps and bounds. Its circulation is without doubt most marvellous, and as far as we can see, every one says it deserves it.

CAUGHT AT RICHMOND.

On Thursday afternoon several complaints were made by several people attending the Richmond Fair, Richmond, that their pockets had been picked. A sharp look out was maintained by the police with the result that two young men who were acting in a suspicious manner, were watched and one of them was detected picking a lady's pocket. Constable Sam Taylor was on hand and had them both arrested. One of the two men threw away a purse, which he had in his hand, which was afterwards recovered and returned to the owner. Both men were brought to the Sherbrooke jail on Saturday morning.

The men who give their names as Jas. Wells and Hugh Randall, come from Montreal.

L. Benoit's Death Was Accidental

VERDICT RETURNED BY JURY

The adjourned inquest into the cause of death of L. Benoit, an employee of the Sherbrooke Gas & Water Co., who was killed a week ago by an electric shock while fixing a lamp on London Street, was resumed at 10 o'clock on Monday. Coroner Palletier presided. Miss May MacLeod, who arrived on the scene of the accident just immediately after the occurrence was examined and the jury afterwards adjourned to the residence of Mr. R. J. Roy, who told substantially the same story as has already appeared in these columns.

The jury afterwards returned the following verdict:

"We members of the jury after having heard the evidence given at the inquest relative to the death of Louis Benoit, say that said Louis Benoit met his death the 28th day of August, at about 8 a. m., on London street, by grasping a wire, called a cable wire, Simeon Roy, the companion of the said Benoit having accidentally brought the said cable wire in contact with the wire charged with electricity. That Roy instantly received a shock and called Benoit to his help, who, in trying to save the life of his companion, seized the wire himself and received a shock which caused instant death. We further find that the cause of Benoit's death was purely accidental and not otherwise. We recommend that the cable wire windlass be placed at not less than seven feet from the ground, and that all possible precaution be taken to prevent contact of the cable and live wires."

Don't forget that sample glass of soda water at Milford's.

SLATER SHOE EXHIBIT

During the Exhibition I am putting on a special display of "SLATER SHOES" in the process of construction.

Visitors to the Exhibition are cordially welcomed to see this and I shall take pleasure in explaining shoe manufacture by the famous Goodyear Welt Slater Method.

Strength in the hidden parts has ever been the keynote of the "Slater Shoe" and the public will have an opportunity of seeing these hidden parts and satisfying themselves as to their durability and strength.

No less than 18 stages are shown, from the leather to the finished shoe with the name and price of the makers stamped on sole. This stamp is a guarantee of good faith, an insurance of shoe value in fit, wear and finish.

There is also a display of "The Slater Shoe" in all its twelve foot-fitting shape, six widths, reliable leathers and fashionable colors.

See this and you will be able to judge which of the shapes will fit your foot in comfort and comeliness.

An instructive quarter of an hour can be spent in taking a look at this exhibit of Canada's Standard Shoe for men and boys.

WORLD'S WHEAT SUPPLY. Vienna, Sept. 1.—The Hungarian Ministry of Agriculture has just issued its annual estimates for the world's harvest. This points to a considerable deficiency. While the stocks remaining from last year are much smaller than was generally supposed, the wheat yield is 110,000,000 hectolitres below last year's yield, and about 34,000,000 short of the entire world's demand. The estimated yield of rye is 50,000,000 less than that of last year; of barley, 25,000,000 less, and of oats, 35,000,000 less. The total deficiency in all cereals is about 97,000,000 hectolitres.

The customs duties collected at the port of Montreal for the month of August reached $902,346.04 against $704,710.59 for the same month in 1898; a increase of $193,236.05. A rumor is current in Cape Town that Sir Alfred Milner may dismiss the South African Government. Messrs H. A. Wilder & Co., furniture manufacturers, of Montreal, are negotiating with Coaticook with a view to their locating there.

South African Affairs. BURGHERS HOPEFUL OF A PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT. Capetown, Sept. 2.—Reports received here from various outlying districts of the Transvaal describe them as being in a state of excitement. The burghers, it is said, are watching the developments keenly, but the majority of them hope for a peaceful solution of the crisis. There is a general exodus of British subjects from the larger towns. Orders have been issued to the commandants and field cornets to have themselves and burghers in readiness in the event of an outbreak of hostilities.

London, Sept. 2.—Col. Hector A. Macdonald, the Omdurman hero, has been urgently summoned to report at the War Office. He expects to go to Cape Colony immediately. Buluwayo, Matabeleland, British South Africa, Sept. 1.—Recruits for Colonel Plumer's camp are going to that place daily. Sixty South Rhodes volunteers were sworn in yesterday.

Impure Water. The dirty brook should be a theme for thought by more than one dairyman. The man that has no running brook on his farm is more likely to have good water for his cows than the man that thinks he is blessed by a stream of running water. Where the stream is rapid moving and fairly deep it may serve for a drinking place the year round, but in most of our western states the conformation of the land is not such that a stream is either swift or deep or clear. In states that are filled with mountains and hills and forests the streams to a large extent remain pure the year round. The soil on their banks is held in place by a multitude of vegetable growths. Frequently they run over a bed of stones and are little exposed to impurities from the immediate banks. Such brooks may, in mountainous localities, serve as a suitable drinking place for the cattle most of the year or until the summer drought renders them stagnant. But in this great level country of the west conditions are different. The ordinary brook should never be depended on as the water supply for the cattle. There are few times in the year when it is safe for them to drink from it if the dairyman wants to keep both animals and animal products pure. In the midsummer especially it is a positive detriment to the dairy business. The man with the slimy, muddy brooks too often neglects to have a pure water supply, which his brother farmer, who has no brook, is compelled to supply. We have seen such streams in summer become muddy wallows where the cows both stood and drank. There is no doubt that animals, like humans, contract many diseases solely through bad drinking water. On many farms the conformation of the land is such that shallow streams may be made sanitary by deepening the central channel and sinking a few shallow wells in their beds at various places if the pasture is so large that the cattle would have to travel a great distance on a hot day to get water.—Farmers' Review.

Persistent Milking Wins. Last season, when the price for calves went skyward, many farmers who had patronized the creamery and raised the calves on skim milk thought they could see more money and less bother in letting the calves suck their cows. The indications are that this year calves will not be worth as much money, and as the cattle stock of the country increases to the normal calves will further decrease in value. Those farmers who stopped milking and turned in the calves will then see the mistake they made. They will find that their cows are not nearly as good milkers as they were before, and it will take them several years to build up an efficient dairy herd again. If there is any one thing about dairying that has been thoroughly and completely demonstrated, it is that milking makes milkers. The best cow in the world can be ruined as a milker in a comparatively short time by simply letting the calf suck her or by ceasing to milk. The poorest cow can be improved by continued and persistent milking. The man who has 10 or 12 or more cows and milks them year in and year out, keeps right at it and practices improved methods of feeding will get ahead right along. It don't pay to milk the cows one year and let the calves suck the next.—Creamery Gazette.

Pay in Advance. "Stop, Bessie! What are you pounding little brother for?" "Because, mamma, he's sure to do something he oughtn't to do in about two minutes."—Chicago Record.

Unvaried Diet.

An amusing story is told of an old time soldier who loved liquor better than food, and was bound to have his diet according to his taste. It was in the days when British soldiers provided themselves with rations out of their pay. To insure the proper feeding of the men a strict inspection of the daily mess was instituted. It was found that unless this was done many soldiers would go without meat in order that they might have money to buy grog.

Donald loved whisky, and could live very well on oatmeal. Therefore he eschewed butcher's meat. But at the daily mess it was essential that he should have meat before him.

For a long time Donald saved his money, and yet, to all appearance, lived up to the requirements. When the officer went his round Donald had his mess before him. It was tripe, tripe, and tripe again for a change.

"Do you always eat tripe?" asked the inspecting officer, becoming a little suspicious.

"Always, your honor," replied Donald.

The officer stuck a fork into the dish before him.

"Well, Donald," he remarked, "I never before saw tripe with buttons on it."

The meat proved to be a slice from a pair of leather breeches.—Youth's Companion.

An Eye Easily Blinded.

Here is a funny little story from far-away Ceylon. A tea planter who had a glass eye was desirous of going away with a friend, but he knew that as soon as the natives who were at work on the plantation heard that he had gone they would not do a stroke of work.

"After much thought an idea struck him. Going up to the men, he addressed them thus:

"Although I myself will be absent, yet I shall leave one of my eyes to see that you do your work."

And much to the surprise and bewilderment of the natives he took out the glass eye and placed it on the stump of a tree and left. For some time the men worked like beavers, and then casting furtive glances at the eye to see if it was still watching, but at last one of them, seizing his tin in which he carried his food, approached the tree and gently placed it over the eye. As soon as they were not being watched they all lay down and slept peacefully until sunset.

An Awful Ordeal.

Once in a year, and at one place in the world, there is a crush that surpasses anything else of its kind in the world. It is the great fair of Bawa Farid, which is annually held in the town of Pak Pattan, in British India.

It is held in honor of the famous St. Farid-ud-Din, surnamed Shakar Ganj, or sugar store, from the fact that his body had become so pure by continual fasting that whatever was put into his mouth, even earth and stones, was instantly changed into sugar.

The principal ceremony consists of passing through an opening made in a wall adjoining the shrine, measuring 5 feet by 2 1/2 feet, and called "The Gates of Paradise."

Whenever between noon and night is able to pass through this opening is assured of paradise, and when there are 50,000 striving to pass through at the same time the crush is something terrific. Women faint, bones are broken, and the heat is stifling.

SELECTIONS

HARRISON'S MURDER CASE.

How He Won One of the Few That Dan Voorhees Ever Lost.

The scars are almost healed. The small boys of the civil war period are growing gray, and Hoosiers who used to be afraid to go into Kentucky and Kentuckians who dared not cross into Indiana now "jug" for catfish from the same skiff and swap war lies and plug tobacco in perfect amity. The war must be over.

Ben Harrison's appearance in one of the greatest lawsuits in the world's history—the boundary dispute between Venezuela and Great Britain—is not his first cause celebre by any means. He may recall one in which he participated when he was 25 years younger than he is now, with Dan Voorhees as opposing counsel. He may remember it because it was one of the few murder cases Voorhees ever lost. The state of Indiana had found fault with one Bill Smith—that was not his name, but 'twill serve—because Bill had killed a farmer. It was a most unprovoked murder, for Bill and a party of roystering companions had stoned the farmer's house, and when he appeared without the moat to make physical protest they set upon him most savagely. He was stabbed to death with a jackknife in the hands of Smith.

Harrison was called in to assist the prosecuting attorney. It was a great day at the county seat, and the courthouse was packed to witness the battle royal between the two giants of the forensic arena. Smith was a very unpromising candidate, for nature and a bad ancestry had made a low browed degenerate of him to begin with, and his own efforts had not improved his makeup. While the witnesses were being examined he leered and grinned and spouted tobacco juice vigorously extracted from a quid which he got about the size of the ordinary egg of commerce. Voorhees, calling each juror by his first name—"Bill," "Jim" or "Jack," as was his wont—made a most impassioned plea for the young man, begging his 12 peers to "give him just one more chance." He hung the changes on that text for three or four hours, and the more eloquent Voorhees became the more Smith grinned and expectorated.

When Voorhees had finished, Harrison walked close up to the prisoner, regarded him most attentively for a length of time that seemed an hour to the jury and spectators and an age to the culprit, and after he had finished his survey exclaimed in mock continuation of Voorhees' speech: "Yes; give him one more chance!" And the deadly sarcasm in his tone was like a thrust to the heart of the defendant.

With malignant deliberateness Harrison sized up the degenerate again for an interminable length of time, and the jury could not help doing the same. "Give him one more chance!" hissed the cold blooded, cruel Harrison, and then the flaying began. If ever a man was verbally skinned alive that man was Bill Smith, and Voorhees acknowledged after the trial that his client's fate was sealed when Harrison first mutely called the jury's attention to the prisoner's utterly depraved appearance and then sneered, "Give him one more chance!" Smith got 20 years, which Mr. Voorhees declared was a light sentence, considering all the circumstances.—Minneapolis News.

A Landmark in the Way.

A large stone that is one of the landmarks of Fairfield county has raised a dispute that will probably have to be settled in the courts. The stone was planted at a road crossing of the old Boston and New York turnpike, which now forms the main street of the village of Fairfield, in 1797 by the ancestors of Henry L. Flint, a prominent business man of Bridgeport.

The Bridgeport Traction Company has recently decided to place larger cars upon that line, but when the first car was run to Fairfield it was unable to pass the corner owing to the proximity of the stone to the track. Mr. Flint was asked to remove the landmark, but flatly refused to do so. The traction company officials say they will take legal action to have the obstruction removed.—Hartford Courant.

Uses of Opaline.

According to the Boston Journal, a new article called opaline has been placed upon the market by a French plate glass factory, presumably a French invention, though this is not mentioned. It is described as a vitreous mass, absolutely free from metals, acid proof, of a grayish blue opal color and resembling artificial ice. It is cast and rolled into large plates of from 85 to 100 square feet surface area and from one-half to one and a half inches thick.

Large surfaces, it is said, can be lined with a stic plate without a joint, and it is superior to marble, in that it is acid proof and remains spotless. The plates have a smooth and a rough surface, the latter to render adhesion to mortar sure, though for partition walls it is furnished smooth on both sides.

His Dinner Costume.

Palermo has not yet got over the Due d'Orleans' dinner costume. The French pretender presented himself at a dinner party given by an Italian duchess there in white knee breeches, white silk stockings, white waistcoat, velvet smoking jacket with the order of the Golden Fleece and of Charles V on the breast and in shoes with diamond buckles. He explained that that was the way he dressed for dinner at home.

CANADA'S GREAT EASTERN EXHIBITION.

15th ANNUAL FAIR OPENED THIS MORNING.

ENTRIES AHEAD OF LAST YEAR.

LIST OF EXHIBITORS IN VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS RAILWAY AND STREET CAR SERVICE.

Bigger and better than ever before will be the 15th annual exhibition of the Eastern Townships Agricultural Association which opens today. The spell of fine weather which was experienced here for ten days was broken on Friday, when a heavy rain fell, which continued up to Sunday morning. "Better have the rain now than next week," was a frequent remark, and it would seem that the clerk of the weather had this in view also, and let down just sufficient to lay the dust, and make the grounds assume a greener tint, for this morning the lowering skies of the past two days had disappeared, and so far as the weather is concerned the exhibition was opened with a nice gentle hint from Old Sol that he had not forgotten to give Queen's weather to this well known fair.

The clang of the hammer resounds through the various buildings, where the carpenters are putting the final touch to the additions that had to be erected at the last moment owing to the large number of entries in various classes. Aside from this every thing was in first-class shape for the erection of the various exhibits. Machinery and exhibits for the Main building began to arrive some days ago, but the stock did not begin to arrive until night, Saturday, and towards evening very few stalls were empty. Each incoming train brought consignments of stock and exhibits, and this morning there are more exhibits on the grounds than at the same time in any former year.

JOHN MCINTOSH, PRESIDENT.

The grounds were alive with workmen all day Saturday erecting booths for refreshments, etc., while side show men were kept busy getting things in shape to be in readiness to catch the crowd at the start.

The large machinery hall built last year has already been found inadequate to meet the demand for space, and the management were compelled to add an additional platform extending the entire length of the original building, which gives in the floor area a third more than the original space. This year the machinery will be run by electric power supplied by the Gas and Water Co., who have installed a large motor for that purpose.

The main building outwardly presents a bright appearance, having had a coat of paint during the summer. On Saturday the interior was in a state of chaos, but this morning order has been restored somewhat, and the final touches are now being made. The exhibitors in the buildings are more numerous, and one feature is that the majority of them are from the large centres.
