Happy Birthday to You

MAGOG LODGE 100 YEARS OLD — Lake Magog Masonic Lodge, No. 55 AF — AM, GRQ, celebrated its centennial on Saturday. The one hundred year old lodge's special day of commemoration began with a meeting at 2 p.m. followed by a church service then a banquet dinner at the Ripplecove Inn at Ayer's Cliff. Seen at the banquet are: Samuel Hyde and Alvin E. Swoger, Lodge Treasurer, the two most senior Past Masters in attendance; Edward Bonn, serving Lodge Master; and George Green, Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Opposition wants Liberal action as price index jumps

OTTAWA (CP) — A one-per cent jump in the consumer price index in August has brought a cry from opposition parties for an early parliamentary sitting to deal with inflation problems.

The rate of increase in the first eight months of the year indicates the price index will go higher during 1974 than most economists expected.

Food price increases continued to be the dominant factor pushing up the all-items index and in August the food index rose by 1.4 per cent.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said the report from Statistics Canada on August index levels reinforce amazement of party members that the government has not called an early sitting of Parliament to deal with inflation.

Parliament is to start sitting Sept. 30.

"The government is not facing up to its responsibilities... It is wallowing in rotten eggs." He was referring to recent disclosures that millions of eggs have rotted while in government storage facilities.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, said the report shows inflation is as bad in Canada as in most other western countries.

PREDICTIONS OFF

Most predictions by economists early in the year were for a gain of about 10 per cent in the consumer price index during 1974.

Up to August the eight-month rise was 8.8 per cent above the 1973 average index level. The 10-per cent predictions were on year-over-year averages and monthly increases for the remaining four months of the year would have to be about three-tenths of one per cent to keep the annual rate to about 10 per cent.

Quebec in focus

Won't pay QPF costs

MONTREAL (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Wednesday that Ottawa will not defray the costs of maintaining a provincial police force in Quebec.

Mr. Allmand told a news conference he could not understand why the Quebec government should be compensated for an alleged financial loss as a result of the province not contracting for the services of the RCMP.

Jerome Choquette, Quebec justice minister, had asked Ottawa to provide $360 million as retroactive compensation to the province for maintaining its own police force.

In Montreal to attend opening ceremonies for the $8.2 million RCMP regional headquarters, Mr. Allmand said Quebec had not been represented in 1960 and 1964 when discussions were held between the provinces and Ottawa on a cost-sharing formula for RCMP services.

Under the present scheme, the federal government pays half while the provinces pay the other half. Quebec and Ontario maintain their own provincial police forces.

Emperor Haile Selassie ousted

ADDIS ABABA (Reuter) — The Ethiopian armed forces today deposed Emperor Haile Selassie and declared a provisional military administration for the country.

A statement broadcast by the armed forces committee, which has gradually stripped the emperor of his powers since it began a bloodless revolution last March, said the country's constitution has been suspended and both houses of parliament closed.

Crown Prince Asfa Wossen, 57, now in Switzerland, will be recalled to be king and act as the figurehead of a constitutional monarchy. He is the deposed emperor's son.

The statement said the military administration will remain in force until democratic elections are held under a new constitution.

FAMILY HELD

The 82-year-old emperor and all members of the imperial family were reported under detention in the national palace. Ministers of the civilian government have been asked to continue in their jobs.

Tanks rumbled up to the national palace, the emperor's residence, at 4:30 a.m. and took up positions in front of the entrances. Tanks also were stationed around the national bank—opposite the defence ministry—and main city squares.

The overthrow of the Lion of Judah was the climax of a months-long campaign by leaders of the Ethiopian armed forces. In the end, the man who once ruled supreme over 26 million people and was one of the most respected monarchs in the world had been reduced to a figurehead, a virtual prisoner in his own palace.

First the armed forces, then the politicians and finally the mass of the population joined in the campaign for his removal and he stood accused of bringing the country to the brink of ruin, provoking internal dissension and personally enriching himself at the expense of the people.

Crash claims 69

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Eastern Airlines jetliner had cleared its approach Wednesday and passengers settled back for an apparently normal landing. Then, seconds away from the expected safe landing, the craft mysteriously plunged into a cornfield, killing 69 persons.

The DC9-30 disintegrated and burst into flames as it bounced from the cornfield into a wooded hillside. Thirteen persons survived the crash, including a stewardess who walked away from the wreckage.

"There was no warning," said Charles Weaver of Charleston, one of the survivors. "It looked like a normal landing approach. I looked out and saw the ground and I knew we were going to crash."

Cause of the crash of Eastern flight 212 from Charleston, S.C., remained a puzzle as federal aviation investigators began their work.

Federal authorities hoped the first officer, James Daniels, who also survived, could shed some light on the crash.

Ed Slattery, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said the plane's flight data recorder and cockpit voice recorder were both recovered and were sent to Washington for study.

Among the dead were Rear Adm. Charles Cummings, named commandant of the 6th Naval District in Charleston six days ago, and John Merriman, news editor for the CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite.

Smallwood returning

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Joseph R. Smallwood set a course Wednesday for the premiership of Newfoundland, a post he relinquished in January, 1972, after his Liberal party's first defeat in 23 years.

The 73-year-old Mr. Smallwood, the man who led Newfoundland into union with Canada in 1949, announced he will seek the Liberal party leadership at a convention here Oct. 25-26.

He said visits to 255 communities in a 9,000-mile tour of Newfoundland this summer brought him into contact with "many thousands of people who have urged me to offer myself for the premiership of our province and I have made up my mind to follow their suggestion."

The only other contender for the leadership so far is the current party chief, Ed Roberts, 54, who said he was not surprised by Mr. Smallwood's announcement.

Mr. Roberts, health minister in Mr. Smallwood's last government, was elected leader after the former premier retired from politics in February, 1972.

Mr. Smallwood's departure from politics came in the aftermath of the indecisive provincial election of October, 1971.

Over 160,000 spoiled ballots

OTTAWA (CP) — A total of 163,881 voters spoiled their ballots in the last general election and all but "a few dozen" did so because they wanted to, says Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel.

"The decision of Parliament to change the ballot was a good one," Mr. Hamel said in an interview Wednesday.

"Excluding the figures from Quebec, which for obvious reasons tend to distort the picture, the spoiled ballots were fewer than in the last two elections."

Quebec voters were urged by the separatist Parti Quebecois to spoil their ballots in the July 8 election in protest against federalism. In the 1972 general election, it was the Quebec labor leaders who urged the same type of protest.

Ford's pardon was good sportsmanship

PINEHURST, N.C. (Reuter) — President Ford, facing controversy over his pardon of former president Nixon and his readiness to examine further pardons, appealed Wednesday night for understanding and reconciliation.

He told an audience of golfers he had never seen a tournament "that didn't end with the victor extending his hand to the vanquished."

"The pat on the back, the arm around the shoulder, the praise for what was done right and the sympathetic nod for what wasn't, are as much part of golf as life itself."

"I would hope that understanding and reconciliation are not limited to the 19th hole alone."

Ford, who played nine holes on a golf course here with some of the world's top golf stars, added: "This afternoon for a few hours I tried to make a hole-in-one. Tomorrow morning I'll be back in Washington trying to get out of one."

He is embroiled in controversy for his pardon of Nixon, the suggestion that he was studying other Watergate pardons, and his plan for a conditional amnesty of Vietnam war resisters.

Ford came from Washington to open the World Golf Hall of Fame.

Negotiations resume in Telemedia conflict

By MICHAEL ISAACS
 Record Reporter

SHERBROOKE — Union and management representatives seem prepared to resume negotiations next week in the Telemedia controversy which has wracked that company for months and has resulted in the lock-out since June 20, of 99 employees of Tele-7, CHLT-AM, CHLT-FM and CKTS.

Earlier this week, local union president Armand Bergeron and Andre Mercier, president of Telemedia operations in Sherbrooke, met briefly in what appeared to be a prelude to further around-the-table talks. Mercier, subsequently, said publicly that he expected a solution to be reached within the near future. The last efforts at negotiation came 2-3 weeks ago.

According to management, the only matter separating the two groups, a gulf Mercier has repeatedly acknowledged to be great, is that of wages. At the outset of the dispute, the union was seeking increases of 35 per cent over a two-year contract, with cost of living indexation to begin during the second year of the contract. The company offer called for 10 per cent increases during each year of a three-year contract, without indexation.

Since that time, both sides have modified their positions, with the union now looking for 25 per cent and 10 per cent increases during the first and second years of a 30-month contract, and for cost of living indexation. The latest company offer was for 20 per cent and 12 per cent increases during 18-month portions of a three-year contract, without provision for cost of living indexation. The company stance carried with it the condition that salary scales be abolished.

Marcel Gagnon, head of the union's information committee, challenges the authenticity of change in the management offer. "We have realized that all company offers represent, in effect, the same package deal involving a total salary increase of $640,000 for all employees considered together," he told The Record last night.

In addition, Gagnon contended, the abolition of salary scales would bring with it a return to individual negotiations between employees and management for wage increases based on service to the company.

"Such a move would also eliminate the opportunity for those employees now on the scales — about one-half of the total — to catch up with the highest salary levels," he argued. The scales provide for annual increases in salary for employees with less than five years experience. After five years, salaries peak.

The union demands have been estimated as calling for a global salary increase of $1.6 million over the duration of the contract, all employees considered together.

In a surprise move earlier this month, the union sent Pierre Juneau, president of the Canadian Radio and Television Commission (CRTC), a letter requesting the commission to intervene in the conflict. "It is the belief of this committee (for political pressure) that the four broadcasting outlets have been operating for the past 10 weeks in contravention of their licenses, granted by your commission in the name of the Canadian people," the union observed. "Further, we feel that one of the licenses, namely CHLT-Tele 7 Ltee., will be undertaking an affiliation with the TVA Network in a manner other than that which was proposed in public session before your commission."

In defence of their first allegation, union members pointed to the extensive complaints from the local population which have been received by the outlets in regard to program content. Since June 20, the outlets have used Radio-Canada program material while running their own local commercials — with the result that local content has been virtually eliminated from Telemedia broadcasts since that date.

The union letter, however, reserved greatest criticism for the second matter, making reference to the arguments with which CHLT-Tele 7 Ltee. made application before the CRTC to dis-affiliate from Radio-Canada and to re-affiliate with the TVA Network. "The reasons for such a demand were constructed with more fine words and lofty ideas, the main line being, in the end, to bring a better service to the people of Sherbrooke and the region covered by Tele 7," the letter stated.

The letter recalled the concerns expressed by the CRTC for the future of local production and of local Telemedia employees. Then, in its commentary on the assurances given by Telemedia officials to the effect that local production would be increased by the re-affiliation, the union declared: "This committee has strong indication that Tele 7 does not plan on using its affiliation with TVA to strengthen its local production and ensure work for all its present employees (and lockouts), as indicated before the CRTC in June of 1973, but rather plans to diminish drastically its local production, replacing those hours with programming from the TVA Network, and as a result just as drastically reduce its number of employees."

"We fear that Telemedia (Quebec) Ltee. plans to make Tele 7 a mere switching station for Channel 10 (CFTM-TV) Montreal, while producing a bare minimum of local content," the union elaborated. "Since Tele 7 has a contract with TVA which allows them unlimited access to CFTM's programming, and which gives Tele 7 the right to insert its own commercial announcements, we have no doubts that the abolishment of local programming would be financially rewarding for Telemedia."

In light of a statement made by management last week — which indicated that the company has plans to lay off some 30 employees because of an alleged personnel surplus — the concerns described in the letter to the CRTC appear well-founded, Gagnon claimed the union members though, when the company statement was made, that management was attempting to intimidate the employees into signing an agreement under the latest company terms.

"Now, because of the statement, the next negotiating session will not be confined to the issue of wages," Gagnon asserted. "We will be looking for regulation of the issue of employment security."

Sweetsburg Court

SWEETSBURG WARD (JD) — Judge Gerard Normandin granted Jean Romain Morin, Cowansville and Berthierville, the right to opt for a trial before a magistrate alone.

Morin, 34, a parolee from the Cowansville Institution, had been ordered to the next term of the local assizes following preliminary hearing on a charge of attempted rape.

The alleged crime occurred in Cowansville, August 9, 1974, when a woman was assaulted in her Church Street residence. She was two months pregnant.

Trial was set, for the form, for October 2. Mr. Morin was represented by Gilles Poussard, Granby Legal Aid Office. Morin entered a plea of not guilty through Mr. Poussard.

Andre Choquette, 26, RR 1, Waterloo, was remanded pending preliminary hearing, on counts of theft and possession of stolen goods. Choquette was arrested by members of the Cowansville detachment, Quebec Police Force, at the Granby toll booth of the Eastern Townships Autoroute at approximately 11:45 p.m., September 3, 1974, when he was found driving a truck, the property of RPR Transport, East Farnham.

Crown prosecutor Claude Noisieux, in his bid for preventative detention, told Judge Normandin, the QPF were alerted the truck had been stolen and arrested the accused on the ETA. Mr. Noisieux said: "He told the police not to shoot as he was not armed, and they had caught him dead to rights."

Mr. Noisieux then indicated the accused was free on a cash bond pending trial in the Judicial District of St. Jean on a charge of armed robbery, and indicated the person who had supplied the bond, Ray Coulobme, also of Waterloo, was known to the police.

"Furthermore he has been charged and sentenced for evading legal custody," Mr. Noisieux said.

Judge Normandin fixed preliminary hearing for September 12, and said he would judge on the possibility of freedom for the accused then.

Herbert Sharman, West Brome, pleaded guilty to a charge of criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle, in Dunham, August 24.

Crown attorney Noisieux said the accused had had an argument with a relative and followed his car. He then attempted to run into it to force it into the ditch. The car was occupied by the wife of the person Mr. Sharman was annoyed at, as well as another woman and a child.

"This is not a usual case," Mr. Noisieux said. "There were two deliberate attempts to run a car into a ditch which could well have become a fatal accident. Under the circumstances I can only ask for a jail term."

Sharman then told Judge Normandin he only touched the rear bumper of the car once.

Mr. Noisieux suggested sentence be suspended to October 2, when he would produce other witnesses. Judge Normandin upheld the suggestion of the Crown, and told Sharman, who was not represented: "You should have a lawyer when you return."

Michel Maurice Bariteau, Cowansville and Montreal, who pleaded not guilty to a charge of theft of jewellery, was remanded pending trial, before a magistrate, September 18.

The accused, who was represented by Gilles Poussard, pleaded not guilty to a robbery of $600 from the residence of Frank Gillespie, Cowansville, September 1.

Mr. Noisieux produced a witness who proved the accused was before the upcoming term of assizes in Montreal, and was free on parole with an order to keep the public peace.

Mr. Poussard's motion to have the charges heard in Montreal were rejected by Judge Normandin.

"Although he was honest in his testimony he has no proven means of support, and he admitted to crimes of a similar nature in Longueuil. I have no option but to protect the public, therefore the accused is ordered held in preventative detention pending his trial September 18."

"I do not feel this is prejudicial to either the accused or to society. After all, must be protected. The accused is only 18 years old, and he seems to shrug off criminal charges with impunity."

Pierre Lizotte, 31, Granby, whom defence attorney Gilles

Poussard described as a braggart with the mentality of a 12 year old was sentenced to 23 months in jail, following his plea of guilty to two charges of breaking and entering in Granby, earlier this summer.

Mr. Poussard cited a judgment of Judge Jean Paul Berube in Drummondville, last week, where the accused pleaded guilty to a similar charge. "Your learned brother, in what he termed one of his hardest decisions, agreed to the presentence report handed in, and granted my client the benefit of a two year suspended sentence with the stipulations he report to his probation officer weekly, and that he undergo psychiatric treatment at the Granby outdoor clinic operated by the Sherbrooke University Medical Centre once a month."

"The accused has been in and out of prisons and penitentiaries, in fact he often is liberated because he requires medical help, and his constant stream of bragging leads him into trouble with other inmates. I humbly suggest his place, although the gravity of his crimes merit a 15-year term, is not in a penitentiary, rather where he can have medical help."

"I humbly suggest sentence be suspended for four months to see if he lives up to the terms of probation established in Drummondville."

Crown prosecutor Claude Noisieux said: "He is a constant problem. He involves juveniles, as a matter of fact there is normally a stream of them going through Social Welfare Court when the accused is free. I cannot but agree with my learned brother when he describes his client as a braggart. The Granby police tell me he is the most imaginative liar they have ever met... He tells them of crimes he imagined he committed!"

"The amount of the thefts is far from minimal, and I must insist on a heavy term." Objects stolen had a value of $10,000.

Judge Normandin sentenced the accused to three years in penitentiary, then reduced the term to 23 months following additional representations from Mr. Poussard who said psychiatric facilities were available at the Waterloo Institution. "Furthermore he will then be in direct contact with his probation officer," Mr. Poussard concluded.

Andre Gosselin, Granby, had his sentence deferred to December 23. Gosselin, who was represented by Paul Gagne, pleaded guilty to a charge of public mischief and property damage, at the Windsor Hotel, Granby, and breach of a probation order issued by Judge Normandin prohibiting him to enter hotels in the Granby area for six months. The probation order took effect July 29, 1974.

Mr. Gagne suggested the said hotel caters to the dregs of local society and the owner allows them to drink until they have no money left and throws them out. "That's when the trouble starts," Mr. Gagne said. "My client has been detained one week and I feel a continuation of sentence would force him to live up to the terms of the probation order."

Crown attorney Noisieux agreed to the request of the defence, and suggested sentencing be carried into 1975.

Judge Normandin told the young accused: "You have scoffed at the authority of the courts, however I will give you one further chance. If you are caught in any hotels between now and December 23 you will enjoy the Christmas tree next door." Judge Normandin was nodding in the direction of the Sweetsburg Jail.

Ms. Carmen Lacombe Brodeur, Granby, pleaded guilty to four counts of fraud. Crown prosecutor Noisieux told the court the accused had received government cheques in the amounts of $128.00; $106.00; $24.00; and $30. She converted them to: $428.00; $606.00; $124.00; and $130.00.

Mr. Noisieux then proved two prior convictions on similar counts, and told the bench he would have to ask for a jail term. Mr. Noisieux made no objection to a pre-sentence report suggested by defence lawyer Gilles Poussard.

Sentence was remanded to October 21.

Leon Cormier, 62, St. Valerien, was found guilty of simple assault on the person of Mrs. Reine Gendron, at Ste. Cecile de Milton, August 9, 1974.

He was handed a suspended sentence and placed on probation for six months.

Paul Andre is fun Sherbrooke native with ice show

by Elizabeth Nataf Record Reporter

SHERBROOKE — After a long absence, a native son has returned to Sherbrooke as a star of the widely acclaimed skating revue, Holiday on Ice. A 29 year veteran with the company, Paul Andre speaks enthusiastically of his career, which began when Dave Nutter, of Sherbrooke, gave him his first pair of figure skates. Although he had been interested only in hockey until then, Paul took to figure skating immediately and today he still speaks of it with eagerness in this voice. As he told The Record: "My work is like play. There's always something new." It has never been a chore for him to perform in front of an audience. Paul believes in staying active and he keeps a formidable pace. Aside from his rigorous schedule of performances and rehearsals, he does all the choreography for his numbers in the show as well as his own research and musical arrangements. He has also trained dogs for the show, but is not using them at the moment. In addition to the activities associated with his skating, Paul enjoys horseback riding, tennis and golf. His golf is so good that leading professionals, including Arnold Palmer, Cary Middlecoff, and Bob Toski have tried to persuade him to quit skating, turn professional and join the pro circuit.

But skating is Paul's first love and he'll stay with it as long as he can make people laugh. He has travelled all over the world with Holiday on Ice, which he joined when it was still called "New York Ice Fantasy". He has seen South America, Europe and North America. When he is not on tour, he lives in Florida, a place he loves.

Paul's wife joins him on the tour but goes home to prepare for Christmas holidays. Paul's family also includes two sons, aged 18 and 22, and a daughter of 15. They were educated in Switzerland while Paul was living there but he decided to return to North America when the children reached high school age. The children wanted to relearn the English, they felt they were losing in the French schools they attended abroad.

This week, Paul appears in two sequences nightly at the Sports Palace in Sherbrooke. His specialty is creating comedy characters, both male and female. His outrageous portrayals are so unique, it is difficult to stop laughing. In the skit 'You Gotta be a Football Hero', he appears as a flamboyant football player who has to be seen to be believed. The second time Paul comes on the ice, it is as a WAC officer in a skit entitled Wackiest of the WACS. Here Paul makes one of his famous drag appearances. Dick Ganohsek is featured with Paul in both numbers. Also appearing in Wackiest of the WACS are Jim Peterson and Don Yontz.

Holiday on Ice is in Sherbrooke until Sunday. Last chance to see them is at the Sunday matinee which takes place at 2:30 p.m. The troupe leaves for Columbus, Ohio, following the performance.

Meanwhile Paul Andre is having a great time. In Sherbrooke he is spending the stay seeing his family and old friends to catch up on the latest news. He is often found on the golf course.

KING OF COMEDY — Paul Andre, a veteran of 29 years with the skating revue Holiday on Ice, is featured in a six-day stay at the Sports Palace. A native of Sherbrooke — he was born here — Andre is a specialist in creating comedy characters. The show, which has run 30 years, has taken him to South America and Europe and across North America. During the present tour, Andre's acts include a flamboyant football player and a mixed-up WAC officer. In Sherbrooke until Sunday, the revue moves to Ohio for its next engagement.

No need to demonstrate anymore Bishop's students not radicals

By ROSA HARRIS Record Reporter

LENNOXVILLE — The stormy days of campus unrest that symbolized the sixties, have virtually faded into oblivion, according to students interviewed at Bishop's University yesterday.

Although they all agree that the change has taken place opinions vary on what caused the sudden demise of student activism.

Jocelyne Assad, 20, a first year business administration student from Ottawa, reasons that the student demands of yesterday have been met by most university administrators and that the cause of contention has dissipated.

"This generation of undergraduates have everything the last one fought for," she said. "As a group, we're pretty content."

Miss Assad feels that the baby boom of the late forties, the results of which flooded the campuses last decade, also contributed to the dissidence prevalent then.

"Enrolment in universities everywhere is down," she pointed out, "so there are fewer radicals. I think that if an important issue arose, however, the campus would still rally."

The women's movement, which found its voice in the sixties, has forced institutions of higher learning to accommodate it. "When I attended a commerce course at the University of Ottawa a while back, women accounted for only 10 percent of the students. But here at Bishop's, women constitute 30 percent of all business administration majors — a field formerly considered man's territory," Miss Assad mentioned.

An 18-year-old Champlain College student, who prefers to remain anonymous, feels that demonstrations were as much a fad of the sixties, as swallowing goldfish was in the old days.

"The radical era has ended," she said. "It was a craze and nothing more, and it went the way of all crazes. People just got bored." Edward Farmer, 22, a second year student in the arts faculty at Bishop's, acknowledged that the number of angry young students had dropped drastically. He expressed frustration over the change.

"We are asleep," he said. "What's more we're regressing back to the days when the struggle for the almighty dollar was uppermost in most students' milligrams. He was fined $75 and costs, in default 30 days, and was given a month's delay."

Raymond Proulx, Granby, was found guilty of a count of hit and run at Ste. Cecile de Milton, August 8, 1974. He was fined $75 and costs, in default 30 days. Judge Normandin rejected a breath analysis attached to the accident as it was taken in a delay exceeding two hours.

Michel Passeneau, Montreal, pleaded guilty to a charge of hit and run, in Granby, October 25, 1969. He was fined $75 and costs, in default 30 days.

"We've had a history of backing off when it came to demonstrating over the war and other major concerns. We always had less of a stake in the outcome," he exclaimed. "The activist element on campus was just a very verbal minority," he said, "but in the long run, people are individuals. They won't be forced into movements. They have their own security to worry about."

The consensus of the students interviewed was that most of the issues which gripped young people during the last 10 years have been resolved one way or another. The Vietnam war, after all, is over, the draft has been abolished, and students are enjoying more campus freedom than ever before. Some feel however, that the basic attitudes which caused dissent have not changed.

"Students have a lot of say now, but the gut reactions of administrators and teachers have remained the same," Kathy Dupuis, a 19-year-old second year arts student feels, "If last decade coined the phrase 'generation gap' this one suffers from a 'condensation gap'. Faculty still talks down to us."

Nina Braslewicz, 19, in the first year arts program, feels that the last generation of students was simply biding time in college until something better came along.

"Really, they were just slacking off," she said. "They had no career goals. Now they're thinking about the future and gearing their courses toward professions."

Maureen Hogan says she personally got tired of activism, but 21-year-old second year arts student says she is still willing to fight for the issues that affect her.

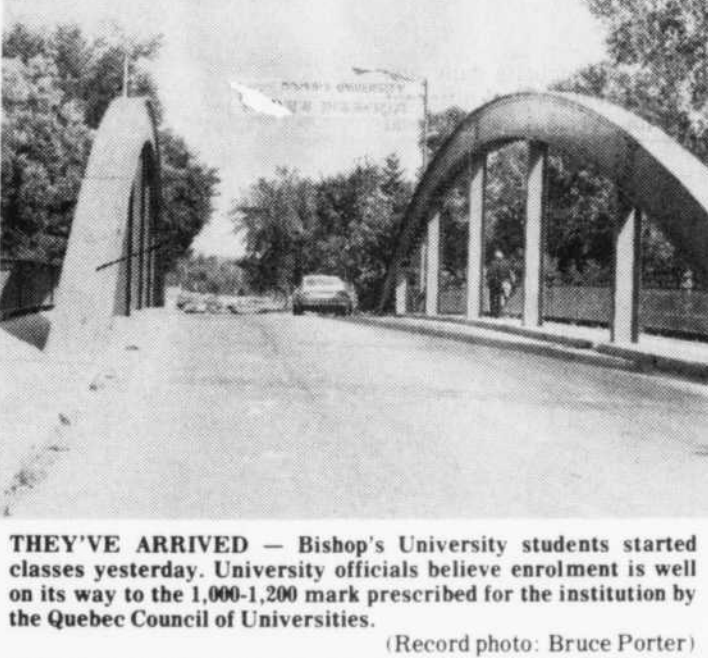

"I would definitely demonstrate if the subject at hand was the desecration of our environment," she affirmed. "Certainly women's causes would probably attract me to a march also."

For the most part, however, she feels that people have outgrown that mode of protest. She went on to say that people are more career oriented today because students were being turned out of universities with Ph.D's in the past who were basically unqualified in the eyes of potential employers.

"They've come down to earth now," she concluded. Elliot Wright, an alumnus of Bishop's expressed concern over the return to apathy prevalent on all North American campuses. "Bishop's has never been known as a hot bed of activism. I'm not saying that the student body should go out and burn down the administration building," he remarked, "but a certain amount of confrontation is a healthy sign. Total acceptance of the status quo causes stagnation."

"Students must remember that they are the catalysts of change. It's their responsibility to educate themselves on societal ills."

"I don't suggest a return to the violence we saw throughout colleges in the sixties," he went on, "but I would hate to see a return of the inertia that plagued campuses in the days after the second world war. We still owe it to ourselves to get involved," he reflected.

THEY'VE ARRIVED — Bishop's University students started classes yesterday. University officials believe enrolment is well on its way to the 1,000-1,200 mark prescribed for the institution by the Quebec Council of Universities. (Record photo: Bruce Porter)

Progress Club seeks members

SHERBROOKE (MI) — The Sherbrooke chapter of the Canadian Progress Club held its first meeting of the year this week, following the annual dinner in honor of the club's past president.

The branch, comprised of two representatives from each profession, is currently undertaking a recruiting campaign intended to boost its membership to 40 members. At present the Sherbrooke chapter includes 20 members, down from the mid-30 mark attained last year.

According to the literature published by the Sherbrooke club about itself, members have spent nearly 20 years, since the club was chartered in 1956, providing various types of assistance to members of the Sherbrooke community. Among such actions, the club lists: distribution of nearly 250,000 bottles of milk among the needy; expenditures of thousands of dollars in food, clothing and in the satisfaction of other needs evidenced by the underprivileged; and contributions of $5,000 per year, since 1971, to the Sherbrooke Recreation Club for the Handicapped.

Marius Ruel, president for the 1973-74 and 1974-75 years of the club's operations, is only the second person to serve two years as president of the Sherbrooke branch of the club.

Michel Lacoste, Granby, pleaded not guilty to two charges of breaking and entering and theft of two television sets, in Granby, July 13 and 25. Defence attorney Louis Grignon opted for trial before a magistrate, which was set for October 2.

Rodolphe Gendron, also of Granby, pleaded guilty to the charges. He will be sentenced October 2.

Jack Ross, Granby, changed his option and pleaded guilty to a charge of hit and run. His lawyer, Aime Beaudry, told the court Mr. Ross knew he had hit an object, stopped some 500 or 600 feet down the road. When he returned the other vehicle had vanished. He concluded by saying Mr. Ross was willing to pay for all damages incurred on the car of Clayton Smith upon receipt of a valid estimate. Ross was then fined $75 and costs, in default 30 days. He was allowed two weeks to acquit the fine.

Leo A. Dion, Verdun, was found guilty, in default, of having driven a motor vehicle while he was impaired. The offence occurred near Eastman, July 30. He was fined $100 and costs, in default 30 days.

New Canadians show off arts

SHERBROOKE (EN) — Attempting to break away from the tradition of presenting only the culinary aspects of the culture of new Canadians, the Service d'Aide aux Neo-Canadiens (SANC) will be conducting an exhibit of handicrafts for the first time this year.

The idea behind this approach is to show that new Canadians have more to offer to this country than their abilities in the kitchen, and the ladies of SANC are out to give tangible proof of that fact.

The exhibit, which is to take place on Saturday and Sunday, September 28-29, will feature examples of handicrafts donated for the purposes of the show by the members of the organization.

Included in the show will be examples of native artwork, jewellery, as well as other examples of the different types of artifacts which the members have brought from the various countries of their birth.

Among the countries to be represented at the show will be Greece, Rumania, France, the Philippines, Great Britain and Korea. Canada will also have an exhibit in order to show the visiting public what is available in Canada in order to permit as wide a cultural exchange as possible. The show is not a commercial venture, as none of the articles on display will be for sale. Admission is free to encourage public participation, as well as to point to the fact that there is no obligation involved.

A member from each country will be at the kiosks to answer questions and to explain the displays on hand.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Marie-Louise Jovian or Mrs. Zuki Sanchez who are in charge of the exhibition.

Knowing how important it is for new Canadians to meet with others of similar backgrounds, and realizing what a pleasurable experience this can be for both new and old Canadians, the members of SANC invite everyone interested to come and join them in a weekend of activity and see the familiar as well as the exotic during this event. The exhibit will be held at the University of Sherbrooke.

Operation Hope

SHERBROOKE — A group of interested Christian people from the various churches in the Sherbrooke area banded together in the fall of 1973 for a week of meetings. The venture was called "Operation Hope".

Due to last year's success, a similar venture is planned for October 21-27 this year. The guest speaker will be Rev. Gordon Matheson, the minister of the Presbyterian Church in Chapel, Tatamagouche, N.S.

The meetings will be held 8:30 p.m. in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Frontenac St. in Sherbrooke starting at 7:45 p.m. The "Operation Hope" committee, made up of interested Christian leaders from this area, extend a warm and friendly welcome to all the people in the community.

The purpose of the meetings is to bring inner renewal to the church and an outreach to the community.

In preparation for "Operation Hope", a series of prayer services will be held at 8 p.m. in the following places: September 14 at Huntingville Community Church; September 28 at the First Baptist Church in Sherbrooke; October 12 at Grace of the Presbyterian Church in Chapel, Montreal street, Sherbrooke; and on October 20 at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Sherbrooke.

Consumers' Voice

Prime Minister Trudeau said the other day that one of the important factors he had in mind in appointing new ministers to his cabinet was their ability to communicate. Presumably those he kept in the cabinet have that ability. So consumers will be watching with interest the performance of the new minister of consumer affairs, Andre Ouellet, with a view to seeing how well he can communicate the wishes of consumers to the cabinet — and how influential his recommendations will be.

For a start, Mr. Ouellet might do something about the egg situation and the egg marketing agency, which have drawn the wrath of consumers and their organizations for some time. Last week the Consumers Association of Canada asked the federal government to deny a request from the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (a request made on the recommendation of Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan) for money to bail it out of the financial mess through which its mismanagement has landed it.

In a telegram to Finance Minister John Turner, the association asked that funds not be given the agency, which is some $10 million in debt; which has sold eggs for much less than it bought them for; which has piled up a huge surplus of eggs some of which are rotting; and which, by price fixing and eliminating competition, has discouraged consumption and caused untold waste.

Much of the blame for the egg marketing agency's predicament must be laid at the door of Mr. Whelan. Mr. Whelan is a loud and non-stop one-man lobby for the farmers he represents, and everybody else be damned. But Mr. Whelan apparently has the ear of the cabinet. To make himself heard above the minister of agriculture the minister of consumer affairs will have to talk convincingly indeed. But he will have the consumers of Canada behind him — and they have as much right to be heard as have the farmers.

Dim Future

An almost unblemished record of failure has not stopped futurologists from continuing to predict either gloom and doom or sweetness and light for the years ahead. The doom-sayers have had most of the field for the past couple of years, but there are now increasingly optimistic forecasts for the future.

Predictions of a world that has run out of vital natural resources are countered by claims that resources are not likely to be exhausted for another 100 million years or so; which, if true, gives us plenty of time to worry.

We are used to hearing that soon there will be more people than the globe can support, and that all the advances in the technology of birth control are of no avail as long as the poorest people in nations that can least afford expanding populations look on their children as their wealth.

This too is contradicted by the American futurologist, Herman Kahn, who recently painted a rosy picture of the year 2200 when 15 billion human beings will be living a life of affluence. A gloomier outlook comes from Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan who fears that world population will be stabilized by mass starvation — a prediction that seems more likely in the immediate circumstances.

Mr. Kahn sees the answer to all ills in continued economic growth, while the Club of Rome calls for a deliberate slowdown in development as the only solution.

Which makes it hard to decide what to do. Mr. Kahn's admission that "you've got to be kind of dumb to try to figure 100 years in the future" is refreshing in its honesty, but does not help much in making a decision. And a wrong choice could be disastrous. But some comfort can perhaps be found in Chester's observation that "the human race, to which most of my readers belong, has been playing since the beginning of time at the game of Cheat the Prophet." Hopefully, it will continue to do so.

Oil-exporters won't lower prices

WASHINGTON (CP) — Despite increasing evidence of the havoc imposed on the world's economies and food supplies by high oil prices, there is little hope in Washington that oil-exporting countries will permit the price to drop in the near future.

Representatives of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC)—the cartel that embraces the Arab producers along with Iran, Venezuela and other major exporters—are to meet Thursday in Vienna against a background of continuing pressure from oil-pinch countries to ease the burden.

Indications are that the OPEC countries will stand firm for at least three months. Alternatively, they might decide on even higher prices to counteract the effects of inflation on the products the OPEC countries must buy. No one seriously expects a price reduction.

A clear indication of OPEC determination has been their resistance to a fall-off in world demand for oil and a subsequent build-up of supplies that threatened to force prices down. Led by Kuwait and Venezuela, the OPEC countries began reducing production—in Kuwait's case, by one-third.

RESISTANCE GROWS

Even Saudi Arabia, which long favored an increase in production and lower prices, has apparently decided to go along with the other exporters.

U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon may have been anticipating an unfavorable decision from the Vienna meeting when he called Tuesday for a series of measures designed to encourage more energy production from domestic American sources.

He told an American oil producers' meeting that all price regulations for oil and natural gas should be ended, some environmental controls modified and federally-owned oil reserves exploited.

Simon at one point hoped to persuade or pressure the Arab producers into accepting a one-third drop in average world oil prices. More recently he seemed to look modestly for mere stability in prices through a reduction in world demand and an increase in alternative energy supplies.

The effects of increased oil prices—which trebled in little more than a year—are becoming daily more apparent to economists and politicians. Fears of worldwide recession and economic chaos are being spelled out by a growing number of public figures.

As billions of dollars have flowed into the treasuries of the oil-producing countries, the price of energy-dependent goods and services has shot up. There has also been a decline in money available for other purposes in oil-importing countries, bringing a noticeable decline in real economic growth and in employment.

Not all of the current troubles can be blamed on oil. Inflation was a substantial problem even before OPEC's price increases, with the cost of food and numerous other commodities rising sharply.

PROBLEM SPREADS

But the sudden jump in the price of oil, which fuels much of the major Western countries to cope with other aspects of inflation and recession.

The crisis may prove to be even harder on those underdeveloped countries which have no oil resources. The expanding populations in such countries, with their demands for better nutrition and shelter, have imposed strains on many governments.

Apart from the higher prices they must pay for imported oil to operate tractors and factories, underdeveloped countries are also faced with larger bills for imported food and petroleum-based fertilizers that had become their best hope for expanding food production.

Combat zone on the turnpikes

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — A driver traveling 55 m.p.h. on the New Jersey Turnpike recently was forced into higher speeds by the sight of a tractor-trailer truck rushing into his rearview mirror. The driver gunned to 60, then 65 and 70 — but still the truck closed ground.

Finally, unnerved, the motorist hit his brakes and the truck wrenched past with an Armageddon roar while its driver, clearly visible in his lofty warroom, grinned, drank soda pop and waved a contemptuous middle finger from his window.

America's highways, never showplaces for reason or brotherhood, are today deteriorating even further toward total anarchy. The reduction of the legal speed limit to 55, while seldom observed by anyone, has created new and potentially tragic frictions between the highway's natural enemies: the cars and the trucks.

Terrible games of tag and bully are taking place at speeds enough to slaughter the participants — and anybody else hapless enough to be in the way.

The situation, says Ken Pierson of the Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety, here is nothing short vehicular "tyranny."

He says the bureau, an arm of the Department of Transportation, is "receiving more and more complaints concerning the disposition of some truck and bus drivers to operate at excessive speed, to tailgate automobiles and other commercial vehicles, as if the highways were their private domain and automobiles were interlopers on a private preserve."

Pierson is not the only one receiving motorist flak. A New Jersey Turnpike tolltaker says protests at his booth go on all day, every day: "I remember this one guy, he said he got so mad at a truck he tried to ram it. Can you imagine? The guy had a little Volks and he was trying to smash an 18-wheeler. But you can't blame him; what I see on this turnpike is almost like combat."

As yet, casualty figures concerning the blacktop war are unavailable. At least one federal agency — the National Highway Safety Council — is supposed to be studying the safety impact of the 55 limit, but authorities there admit to inaction. Withal, there is no doubt as to the casualty potential.

The American Automobile Association says that games between cars and trucks are as one-sided as lynchings; it reports that while tractor-trailer trucks comprise only 3.7 per cent of the road miles driven in the nation, they account for 6.6 per cent of the fatal accidents. So big are the rigs (the legal weight limit in interstate highways is now 73,280 pounds) that their "frequency of involvement in fatal accidents is 86.5 per cent greater than the car."

This is not to say, of course, that trucks are inherent road menaces. The American Trucking Association argues correctly that truckers overall are comparatively safe drivers and that combination trucks in general account for only 2.3 per cent of all highway accidents.

Nonetheless, there is growing unease even in the trucking industry that more and more drivers are becoming arrogant, careless and unlawful.

Sen. Harold Hughes (D-Iowa), himself an ex-trucker, estimates that 90 per cent of big rig drivers use pep pills; the DOT reports an increase in headphone stereo set use by younger drivers, "a safety hazard of incredible proportions"; and such is the temptation to overload trucks that the Pennsylvania Highway Patrol remembers nabbing one dolt driving with 200,000 pounds.

Given the more aggressive and insensitive driver, then, road tyranny is an unsurprising result. ("We got to make time," says one owner-operator, "I can't feed my kids on 55 mph.") The question is how to stop it? Local police around the nation insist that increased enforcement is not the answer. New Jersey Turnpike cops gave 1,000 more truck summonses in this January-May over last, but "that didn't hardly faze them." Even now the Teamsters Union is attempting to force companies to pay for such driver indiscretions.

So there may be no answer here save an unforeseen enlightenment of the violating truck drivers. And until and if such religion occurs, safety officials warn motorists to cool it. Trucker tyranny can't be remedied by motorist revenge. Stay in your lane, at your speed, and let the big apes do the maneuvering. What the truck-car situations do not need are TWO damn fools.

Castro's terror

Jack Anderson's

Washington Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON — A less bombastic Fidel Castro is now on his best behavior, as he strives to bring Cuba into the society of Western Hemisphere nations. But hidden from the prominent visitors he has enticed to Cuba is an unspeakable world of political oppression.

We have written about the terror and torture in the prisons of Brazil's right-wing dictatorship. Now we have received evidence of similar tactics in the prisons of Cuba's left-wing dictatorship.

Just as Brazilian political prisoners smuggled their stark stories to us through priests, Castro's prisoners have managed to smuggle letters, affidavits and other evidence to the U.S. with directions that they be delivered to us.

We have checked out their charges, as best we could, with former prisoners who have been released from Castro's custody. We are willing to make a personal inspection of these prisons, if Castro will permit it, as we also offered to do in Brazil.

The letters and affidavits describe a horror which, for the unhappy souls who run afoul of Castro's political police, usually begins with a frightening, after-midnight arrest.

"You and your family are all fast asleep," states one affidavit, "when the tremendous knocking at your front and back doors starts. About six or seven G-2 men, armed to the teeth with Russian machine guns, rush in your house, screaming, pushing your family, searching your home, not allowing your wife or children to go to the bedroom to put their clothes on.

"They insult you with every filthy name in the book. Finally they push you outside, with your family crying, and put (you) into a G-2 car." The victim is hustled to G-2 headquarters where, according to the affidavit, "you are taken into a small room, have all your clothes taken away from you, searched even within your body, then given a pair of mechanic overalls without any sleeves."

The interrogation takes place in a small office. "The officers all put their guns on the table in front of you to scare you," recounts the affidavit. "Then the questioning begins, with insults, the threats, the false accusations, where everybody is accused of being the CIA."

If the prisoner doesn't give the answers they want, he is held alternately in overheated and frigid cells. "The heat is so bad, you faint. And then you are brought in a special cell that has air conditioning so cold you freeze. All this to make you talk."

The prisoners are permitted to see their families once a week. "You are shaved by a gorilla, without shaving cream, then taken to a small room, all bugged, with your investigator sitting next to you, and are given six or seven minutes with your family, after your family has been given a lecture to tell you to confess."

The letters and affidavits described the food in Cuban prisons as scarcely enough for survival. At La Cabanas Fortress prison, 160 men were crowded into galleries without windows, nothing but an iron grill at the end. It was so hot in the summer that the prisoners couldn't bear to wear clothes. When it rained, the water washed into the living quarters.

"At one time," states an affidavit, "we were not allowed to have water to shower for 23 days." Another describes the hour in the sun which the prisoners were permitted once a month.

"But we had to run in double time. All the time we were running, we were being hit by the guards with clubs, bayonets and iron sticks. Then down again into the hole, again being hit by the guards."

Most of all, the prisoners dreaded the "riquisa," as the cell searches were called. "The guards come into your gallery after midnight," according to one account, "and line you up outside or against the wall. They start to throw everything you own outside and douse water all over your bed, which normally is thrown from one end of the gallery to the other."

"You also get beat up. When you are taken outside, nude, the militians (women guards) stand in the patio and laugh at your nakedness."

At the Isle of Pines prison, the prisoners were welcomed off the ferry boat by "guards on both sides of the gangplank, hitting us as we passed by them, and I mean hitting with clubs and sticking us with their bayonets, just for fun I guess," states one letter.

The prisoners at the Isles of Pines got up at 5 a.m. and worked until 6 p.m. "cutting weeds, planting trees, picking fruit." "God forbid," reported one former prisoner, "if they should catch you eating a piece of fruit. The guards would make mince meat out of you with their bayonets."

The prisoners were subjected to daily beatings, according to the smuggled documents. "There was seldom a month in the Island when they did not kill one or two prisoners in the work camp, or cut them up, crippling them, or something," charges an affidavit.

The documents give detailed descriptions of the prisons, enclose typical menus and name some of the most brutal guards. One prisoner, risking almost certain retaliation, has asked us to tell his personal story. This will be published in a future column.

What have Democrats brought on themselves?

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Gerald Ford is the most dangerous opponent the Democratic majority in Congress could have confirmed for a White House role.

To understand this it is necessary to reread a sentence in Jan. 23, 1967 issue of Newsweek — "almost singlehandedly Ford raised $1.2 million... for Republicans running in Democratic-held districts, saw to it that they were supplied with well-researched position papers — and harvested his reward with the arrival of 52 freshmen who owed their political lives more or less to him."

Mr. Ford is basically a party builder, as neither Eisenhower nor Nixon was. As no other Republican president in this century, he understands the real basis of political power — a strong representation in elective office and trained blood ready to move into every contest in which the Democrats show weakness.

Make no mistake about it, the 1967 example was no aberration. In 1972, Ford's fund raisers gave $500 to $1,000 each to 13 Republican congressional candidates and $1,000 to Sen. Bob Griffin's race. These were funds over and above what Mr. Ford needed for his own re-election drive.

Year after year Mr. Ford has toured the country at every opportunity, pushing local Republican office holders and candidates of all flavors — liberal, conservative and middle of the road. He has gone to bat for Rep. (Pete) McCloskey, (R-Calif.) who opposed Nixon for the presidential nomination and for Michigan Rep. Donald Riegle before the latter switched his party affiliation to Democratic.

On becoming vice president, Mr. Ford lost no time in using his new post as an opportunity to hustle from East to West, plugging for the GOP and its candidates. This suggests Mr. Ford, as no other Republican president in our time, will set out to use all his legitimate White House influence to promote the election of Republicans to the Senate, the House and to state governorships. He will make certain younger Republicans of promise receive federal posts which will give them the exposure they need for elective office in the future.

Mr. Ford's use of power in his congressional days was systematic and bold. First, there was the careful building of alliances and the establishment of IOUs due him for repeated favors. This led to his election as minority leader, described at the time as a "foundation rattling reconstruction of the GOP power structure." It gave Mr. Ford the influence he needed to install one of his Young Turk aides, Melvin Laird, as GOP caucus chairman, and to create a new influential post — chairman of the House Republican committee on policy, planning and research — for another ally, Charles Goodall (R-N.Y.). This three-man team then installed the brilliant Dr. William Prendergast as research director.

From this Ford-engineered research group there came, one after another, a series of tough positive position papers which the Wall Street Journal and the Washington Post called appealing legislative proposals calculated to win widespread people support, even if not adopted by the Democratic majority. They covered such issues as election reform, reorganization of Congress, revenue sharing, budget paring, tax credits for college expenses, a Republican version of medical aid and assistance for low-income housing.

Mankind's great problems under study

MONTREAL (CP) — The old dream of a world university is gradually approaching reality under the United Nations, says Roger Gaudry, the French-Canadian educationist who has been assigned a key role in the project.

"The new United Nations University (UNU) will be unique among universities and it will tackle the great problems of mankind in a special way," said Dr. Gaudry, chairman of UNU's governing council, which has 24 scholar-members from 24 countries.

He reported that "with a little luck" the appointment of a rector—a major step in the making of the new institution—will take place late this year. Nominations, closing Sept. 1, had come in from all parts of the globe.

Rector of University of Montreal and chairman of the Science Council of Canada, Dr. Gaudry stressed in an interview the need for financial contributions for the creation of an endowment fund to finance the operations and ensure the freedom of the new university.

APPROVE CHARTER

Meeting in New York last December, the United Nations General Assembly approved a draft charter stating that the university "shall devote its work to research into the pressing global problems of human survival, development and welfare."

Dr. Gaudry reported world reaction to the evolving institution now is "very positive everywhere" after some initial doubts. But so far only one country had pledged a financial contribution.

"We need the support of many, many countries," said the veteran research scientist and administrator.

"Many countries, including Canada, are thinking of contributing but as far as I know Japan is the only one to have made a definite and precise offer."

The institution, "not a university in the ordinary sense of the word," will be composed of a co-ordinating University Centre in the Tokyo area and action-oriented research institutes in developed and developing countries around the world.

"There will be no degree-granting, no formal teaching and no undergraduates, though young people will take part in research programs in the mission-oriented institutes."

NEEDS BIG FUND

Dr. Gaudry added that the endowment fund must be big enough to provide continuity of financing of UNU programs and some sort of security for persons working in the institutes. Also, UNU would be handicapped if completely dependent on the annual budgetary decisions of various governments.

"Though some programs may be financed by large foundations, we need a fund that will guarantee a minimum of freedom of action on the part of the university," said Dr. Gaudry.

"To be really worthwhile, an endowment figure between $500 million and $1 billion would be most desirable."

The Montreal scholar said solid progress has been made since December, when the General Assembly authorized appointment of the governing council and approved Tokyo as headquarters of the new institution.

Japan had offered $100 million—over a five-year period—to the endowment fund plus physical facilities, provided Tokyo would become the "head office" and also provided Japan was not the only country contributing.

"We expect the council will meet in Tokyo early next year," said Dr. Gaudry, adding that previous plans to meet there this fall fell through because of a scheduled October council conference in Paris in connection with the first rector's appointment.

$10 MILLION ASSURED

Putting the financial picture in perspective, Dr. Gaudry estimated Japan's contribution will result in annual income of only $10 million or so for UNU, while the annual budget of his own university alone comes to nearly $100 million.

"A large amount of money is needed to run a world university with, say, 10 or 15 research institutes," he added.

"Of course some countries have offered to build and finance an institute in their own domains. Just the same, some institutes will have to be built in developing countries, in countries which cannot easily afford a good modern research institute. The number of institutes will depend on the university's program, which, in turn will depend on financial resources."

"That was why the Gaudry council earlier appealed to all governments and non-governmental organizations, including foundations and universities as well as individuals," to support UNU.

Dr. Gaudry announced in the interview that a committee of Canadian university presidents has been named to study and make recommendations to the federal government on various proposals, including one put forward by the city of Toronto, for Canadian participation in UNU.

LONG-TIME DREAM

How did the whole project begin?

"A world university has been the dream of scholars for a long, long time but there were as many ideas of what it should be as there were scholars," said Dr. Gaudry.

"When the idea was actively discussed after the Second World War, it was obvious that people were applying the same words to different concepts."

"People from the developed countries did not see the need for an ordinary classical-type university international in scope because the existing large universities were already international by their very nature."

"For example, my own university has more than 2,000 foreign students in a total enrollment of 20,000. It is understandable that there was a desire not to duplicate what was already being done. But the UN University is being carefully prepared to avoid duplicating the valuable work of other agencies."

Burma's U Thant, then secretary-general of the United Nations, sensed the moment had come in 1969 when he proposed the university. He cited the "work being done by individuals to establish institutions of higher learning with an international character."

SOVIETS ABSTAINED

The university idea was approved by the UN General Assembly in 1972. The charter, drafted by a founding committee, including Dr. Gaudry, was approved by the assembly last December by a vote of 120 to 0 with 10 abstentions. While China supported the draft, the Soviet bloc abstained.

But scholars from two Soviet-bloc countries—Poland and Romania—are serving on the governing council, appointed in April by UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim. UNU research would likely concentrate on the social sciences, the environment and questions relating to peace and understanding among nations, rather than the natural sciences. It would avoid duplication of effort in the energy area, for instance, where extensive research is already taking place at enormous expense.

Meeting in New York in May and Paris in July, the council began building the institution from the ground up while member countries, international university associations and other groups were invited to send nominations for the post of rector.

The UN secretary-general and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization director-general will face the task of naming the first rector after receiving a "short list" of three to five names from the council, which in turn will be guided by its nominations committee, also chaired by

SURPRISE FOR CANADA

How did the Canadian scientist land in the centre of things?

"I hadn't the faintest idea it would come out this way," said the Rhodes Scholar and long-time industrial researcher, who has collected an armful of honorary degrees from Canadian and French universities.

A Companion of the Order of Canada and pioneer in the science field in his native Quebec, he had been appointed to the governing council after service on the university's founding committee. Council members conducted a secret ballot for the chairmanship after their initial get-acquainted meetings in New York.

"To my surprise, my name came out way ahead of the others," said the urbane Canadian.

It is known that Dr. Gaudry, now in his 10th year as head of University of Montreal, is favored by the Japanese government and in some other circles for the job of UNU rector, but he dismissed the possibility.

"I am about 10 years too old," said Dr. Gaudry, 60, citing the arduous travel schedule attached to the job. "I think a younger person will do better."

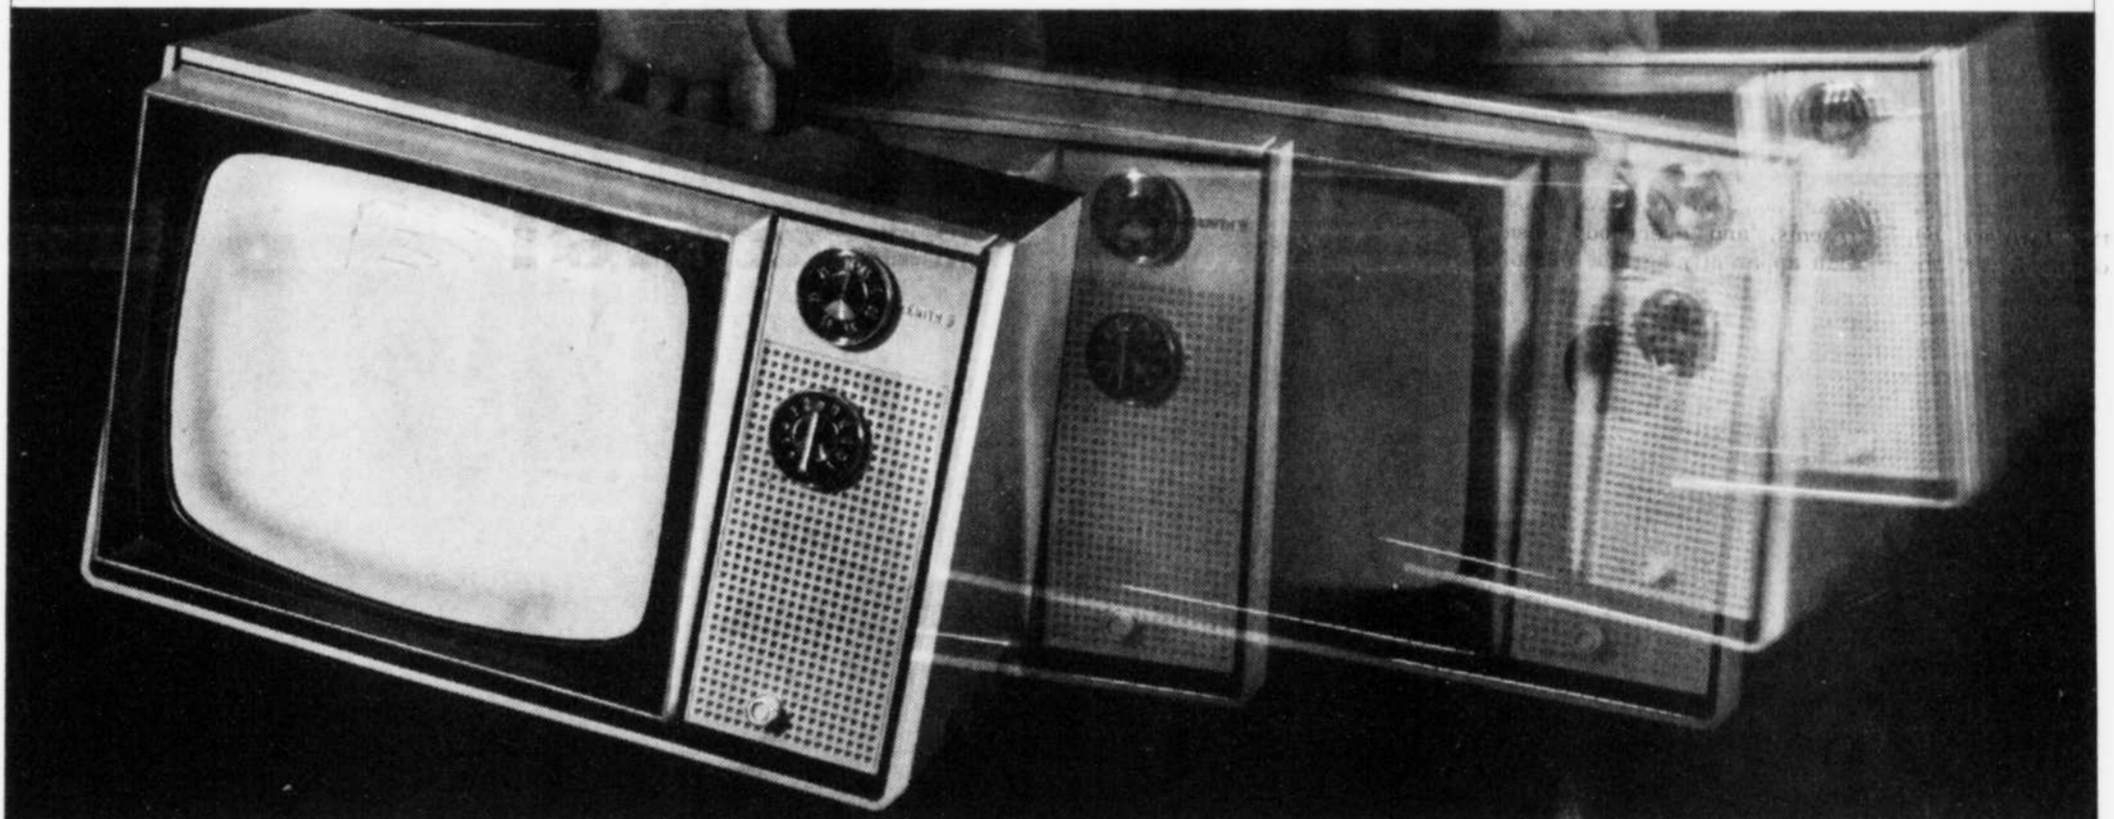

But Dr. Gaudry, who once commented that "the higher you go in life, the more you become a salesman," feels he can help now with the biggest selling challenge of his career.

"It is always difficult to sell an idea," he said.

McHarg-Laramée

Wed

MR. and MRS. M. LARAMEE

A pretty summer wedding took place Saturday August 3 at 3 p.m. in St. Anthony's Church, Lennoxville when Brenda Jane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville McHarg, became the bride of Michel Pierre Bertrand, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emile Laramee.

The church was beautifully decorated with baskets of colorful summer blooms. The guest pews were marked with white ribbon bows faced with pink carnations.

The groom was escorted down the aisle by his father. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father wearing a white floor length gown in Lagoda enhanced with embroidery and applique lace, a short train, high neckline and long straight sleeves bordered with ruffles. Her cathedral length veil of nylon tulle was in triple tiers trimmed with French lace, the bouffant veil being held in place by a white rose on leaves centered with white pearls and sequins. She carried a trailing bouquet of red and pink sweetheart roses with baby's breath.

Mrs. Stuart Robinson, sister of the bride as matron of honor was in a gown of pink crepe.

Mrs. Harold Gilchrist, sister of the groom, Mrs. Douglas Pinchin and Miss Hazel McHarg, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids wore identical gowns in burgundy moss crepe. Their sleeveless gowns were fashioned with low neck lines, fitted bodice ending in very full skirts. The bolero tied in the front and were fitted with long puffed sleeves with wide cuffs. They carried nosegays of summer flowers.

Little Miss Diana Robinson, niece of the bride acted as flower girl. She was wearing a floor length gown of pink crepe with pink dotted organza bodice.

Little Miss Linda Gilchrist, niece of the groom and Master Darrell Doyle, the ring bearers, carried the rings on heart shaped cushions adorned with lace edging. Miss Linda Gilchrist wore a dress identical to the flower girl and each wore maple leaf flowers made in their hair.

Mr. William Lackie, friend of the groom, was best man. Mr. Stuart Robinson, brother-in-law of the bride, Mr. John McHarg brother of the bride and Mr. Douglas Whittingstall, friend of the groom acted as ushers. The men of the wedding party wore white dinner jackets with black trim, black trousers, pink shirts and black bow ties with boutonnières of pink carnations.

Mrs. McHarg, mother of the bride, chose a floor length gown of light mauve crepe with a silver metallic and her accessories were in silver. She wore a corsage of yellow carnations.

Mrs. Laramee, mother of the groom was in a floor length gown of pink crepe with white accessories wearing a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Mrs. Turgeon, maternal grandmother of the groom was in a dress of blue crepe with white accessories and wore a corsage of white carnations.

After many pictures were taken, the wedding party motored to the Alouette Motel, Sherbrooke, for the wedding reception where all were served a turkey dinner.

The bride's table was centred with the three tiered wedding cake made and decorated by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burt. The cake was decorated in white, topped by a lighted white church featuring the bride and groom at the bottom of the red velvet carpeted stairs. The initial cut was made by the bride and groom and served later to the guests. Mr. Lackie asked the blessing. Later he proposed a toast to the bride with the response given by the groom.

An enjoyable evening was spent dancing to the music of Albert Nutbrown's orchestra. A number of other friends joined the party on invitation.

Prior to leaving for their honeymoon spent travelling in the United States, the bride threw her bouquet, caught by Heather Nutbrown. The traditional blue garter was thrown by the groom and caught by Mr. Alvin Doherty.

Miss Kimberley Ann Robinson and Bonnie Davidson were in charge of the guest book. Prior to the wedding, the bride was entertained at four showers by Mrs. Harry Burt and Mrs. Thornton Cleveland in Lennoxville, Mrs. Douglas Pinchin and Miss Jacqueline McLeod in Sherbrooke, Mrs. William Lackie in Breton and Mrs. Everett Mastine and Miss Brenda Lynch in Richmond. The nursing staff on fourth floor Sherbrooke Hospital entertained the bride at a buffet supper at the Sherbrooke University and presented her with a wedding gift.

Following the wedding rehearsal on Friday evening, the groom's parents Mr. and Mrs. Laramee entertained the wedding party. Brenda and Michel exchanged gifts and presented gifts to their attendants. Buffet refreshments were served to bring a most enjoyable evening to a close.

The couple are now residing in Lennoxville.

One housewife's fantasies

Dear Ann Landers: I am an average housewife, 31 years old. About a year ago I bought a detective magazine and found it fascinating. I then became incurably addicted to murder mysteries.

After a while I began to think of myself as the victim of every horrible crime I read about. It was quite thrilling to imagine myself being killed in the manner described in every story.

When I told my husband about my fantasies he was horrified and forbade my buying any more murder magazines or books. He says it is sure to affect my mind. I don't believe I'm becoming mentally ill. Yet I become very frightened at night and feel like a battlefield for warring emotions - fun and fright. Please comment - O.W. Of Utah

Dear O.W.: I urge you to seek professional help and learn why you get your jollies out of scaring yourself to death. I sense deep feelings of ambivalence and conflict in your thinking - probably rooted elsewhere.

In the meantime, knock off the bloody books, woman, and read something else.

Dear Ann Landers: You frequently offer advice to spouses of alcoholics and drug addicts, but how about a word to people who are married to diabetics? It's just plain hell and I don't know how to deal with it.

My husband has been a diabetic for 18 years. From the beginning he has refused to stay on any kind of diet. Certain foods and beverages are poison to him but he eats and drinks what he pleases. I prepare his meals according to doctor's orders but what good does it do when he sneaks forbidden food at every opportunity?

This man has made such a wreck out of me that I had to go to a "head shrinker," as he calls it. I quit going because I figured that HE was the one who needed one, not me. (Of course, he wouldn't go.)

Last year the crazy fool was hit with an insulin reaction and almost died in the ambulance on the way to the hospital. He pulled through but it didn't teach him a thing. He still eats and drinks whatever he pleases.

Is there an organization for spouses of diabetics like Al-Anon, for people who must live with alcoholics? I can't leave this man because I have two sons and an 80-year-old father who need a home. I need some advice. - Blue In The Face In Springfield

Dear Blue: Please try Recovery, Inc. Look in the phone book and go to the next meeting. You need the emotional support of individuals who are coping, successfully, with a variety of continuing problems.

Had you stayed with the "head shrinker," he might have helped you realize that nobody can keep a self-destructive person from killing himself. You have the power to run YOUR life, but not your husband's, and that's where your head should have been these past 18 years.

Dear Ann Landers: Wanted: A father who is willing to "train a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Sign my letter - A Mother Who Is Failing

Dear Mother: If your husband won't help you, get a professional counselor who will. And don't feel you are failing. Some kids go haywire in spite of good training from both parents. Why? That's the 64-million-dollar question and I have no answer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Spend a happy day with loved ones. Let them choose their favorite thing to do, place to go.

club. Then he would play two rounds of trumps and stop so as to leave a trump entry to dummy. Three rounds of clubs would come next. He would ruff the third, go to dummy with dummy's last trump, discard a diamond on the 13th club and finally lead a diamond toward his king. This would give him an overtrick if East held the ace, but with that card resting comfortably in the West hand, South would just make his contract. That is certainly a lot better than going down.

Grenier-Poulin wed

A very pretty summer wedding took place on Aug. 10, 1974, in Ste. Marie de Beauce when Diane Grenier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grenier, was married to Yvon Poulin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Poulin of St. Simon Les Mines Beauce, Rev. Labrie officiating.

Miss Celine Pecteau, close friend of the bride, played the music, accompanying the soloist. Baskets of white and blue tinted chrysanthemums were used to decorate the church and the guest pews were marked with blue and white ribbons and flowers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white gown of pout silk trimmed with lace and ribbon. Her long veil was held in place with a wreath of blue tinted chrysanthemums. Her bouquet was composed of the same kind of flowers, tied with blue and white streamers.

Miss Rolande Grenier, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid, wearing a long pale blue gown and a large white picture hat with blue ribbons, with a bouquet resembling that of the bride. Jean-Guy Perrant acted as best man.

Mrs. Grenier, mother of the bride, wore a long fortrel gown of pink, with matching hat, and corsage of white chrysanthemums. Mrs. Poulin, mother of the groom chose a gown of green fortrel, with matching hat and corsage of yellow chrysanthemums.

The reception was held at the Villa de Pins Hotel. The afternoon was spent in dancing, the bride doing a tap dance before leaving on their honeymoon. She was wearing a yellow suit with black accessories. The couple have taken up residence in Ste. Marie de Beauce. The groom is an intern at the Beauveville Hospital.

Relatives attending from out of town, were from Gould, Ayer's Cliff, Beebe, Sherbrooke, Arvida, Montreal, Chicoutimi, Donnacona, and New Hampshire, U.S.A.

Dr. Lamb

Skin ointment from physician

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - In one of your columns you wrote about skin cancer. You said some spots that are really not yet cancer, but the kind that may become cancer, can be removed by various skin ointments now available. Can you please list some of these ointments so that I may buy them?

DEAR READER - I received a lot of mail asking about that. Those ointments are not something you can do yourself. And, you can't obtain them without a prescription. One of these I was thinking about is Euflex. But these ointments must be used with care. Dermatologists use other ointments as well for the same purpose.

It is probably not a good idea to be trying to remove skin spots on your own. Your doctor needs to see what they are and be sure you get the right treatment. And, in many instances, for the raised furry spots and surface spots that sometimes turn into cancer he can give you a generalized treatment for them. I think I mentioned before that a medical saline like Euflex can even identify cells that are about to undergo changes that still look perfectly normal. So, if you have these raised spots that doctors call "keratosis" and similar skin problem, your doctor can do something about them without having to cut all of them off.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My mother is a diabetic and when I was younger she would tell me that I could never marry a man whose mother was also a diabetic. She said we would have deformed babies.

Recently my husband's mother was told she would be placed on diabetic tablets. This has made me very concerned about having children. Is there any medical truth to what I was told? Is it possible that this factor may cause abnormal children?

DEAR READER - That is a bit of an exaggeration. You do have the chance that some of your children will be diabetic. That does not mean they will be deformed. I would guess from the nature of your letter that you are still pretty young. Actually about 10 per cent of the people over 65 do have diabetes. The rate of diabetes increases with age. We don't know yet whether or not you will be a diabetic during your life time or even whether or not your husband will be.

If both of you are diabetic, then it will be likely that your children will be, but perhaps not until they too are past 65. Both of you may be a carrier of the trait and then some of your children may be diabetic. One of you may be a carrier and the other person be normal. Then more than likely none of the children will have diabetes.

So, what you are really worrying about is what are the chances of the children having diabetes, and if they do, when will they have it. I think beyond that you should forget about the problem. I would, though, plan on having periodic checks for yourself, your husband, and children, including at least a blood test to see if you have developed any evidence of diabetes.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on blood sugar, send 50 cents to the same address and ask for the "Blood Sugar" booklet.

OBITUARY

SAMUEL H. KIRKPATRICK of Bury

The sudden death of Samuel Hugh Kirkpatrick which occurred at his home on Friday August 9, 1974 was a distinct shock to his family and friends in this community where he had spent his life.

In his 69th year, Sammie as he was familiarly known, was born May 30, 1906 the youngest son of the late Charles and Grace (Adams) Kirkpatrick.

He received his education at the Bury High School. After leaving school he stayed for a time on the farm with his parents, brothers and sister. Later, as a young man, he worked on various farms in the area often at the same place for months at a time where his agreeable personality won the regard of the family. If the lady of the house had occasion to be absent for a meal, she had no cause to worry, knowing that Sammie would prepare it just as capably as she would have done herself.

Among his many agreeable qualities, one was his outstanding and rare affinity with horses. It would seem that he understood their equine character and they responded equally to his affection, as he could, in this quiet way, calm the most obstreperous animal. Wherever he worked the care of the horses was one of his duties.

In recent years, unable to do strenuous work, he went to live in his old home with his nephew, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Kirkpatrick and nieces Marjorie and Melanie and niece Miss Evelyn Kirkpatrick, where he busied himself doing small duties around the premises.

He laid in repose at the Boynton Funeral Home where the funeral service was held on Monday August 12 with Rev. C. Gustafson officiating.

Interment was in the family lot in the Bury Cemetery. Bearers were Arthur Ward, Glendon Morrison, Allan Kelso, Roger Bolduc, Clifford Anderson and Albert Lasenba.

Unmarried, he is survived by his only sister, Mrs. Irene Flanders of Bury, three sisters-in-law Mrs. Winnifred Kirkpatrick, Cookshire, Mrs. Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, Ottawa, and Mrs. Enid Kirkpatrick, Prince George, B.C., nephews Preston Kirkpatrick, Bury, Ralph Kirkpatrick, Agincourt, Ont., Gordon Kirkpatrick, Bury, Howard Kirkpatrick, Herts, England, Emerson Kirkpatrick, Kingston, Ont., Austin Kirkpatrick, St. Catharines, Ont., Maurice and Malcolm Bennett, Bishopton, Victor Kirkpatrick, North Vancouver, B.C., Nieces, Mrs. Theron Bennett, Bishopton, Miss Evelyn Kirkpatrick, Bury, (Doris) Mrs. Hall Stymest, Prince George, B.C., Mrs. Catherine Guilmet, Ottawa.

He was predeceased by four brothers, Archie, Charlie of Bury, Irvin of Ottawa and Douglas of Montreal. A little sister Agnes died in infancy.

Coach Delage ready as Beavers improve

SHERBROOKE (GB) — Although the 1974-75 major junior hockey season is still more than two weeks away, coach Ghislain Delage of the Sherbrooke Beavers figures his team is just about ready for the opening game against the Quebec Remparts on Sunday September 29 at the Sports Palace.

Delage may be somewhat overly optimistic but the way his players have been flying in practices this week at the Ivan Dugre arena, he has good reason to be impatiently awaiting the arrival of the powerful Remparts.

"We are finally getting down to a system," he said. "Our patterns are improving and the players are learning positional hockey. With more players to work with," he added, "we are definitely ahead of last year's pace at this time."

He also had praise for his eight defencemen in camp. This season the blueline brigade will be stronger than in the past, he said, after last night's 90 minute workout.

Although junior hockey is usually noted for high scoring games and rather loose defensive play, the Beavers, he figures, will give up fewer goals with a tighter defence.

Richard Mulhearn is working with Floyd Lahache, Francois Robert is teamed up with Andre Leduc, Regis Vallieres is paired with Robert Desormeaux and Alain Belanger, converted from a winger, is working alongside Brendan Lowe. Leduc is looking stronger with every workout, said Delage, and he appears fully recovered from a knee injury that sidelined him towards the end of last season.

Brendan Lowe, a native of Lachine was recalled by Delage after he appeared to be a borderline case. But his play warranted another look. "So far, I am pleased with Lowe," said Delage. Lowe is 6'2" and weighs 180 pounds.

The exhibition games this week indicate a close battle among the 10 teams in the Quebec Major Junior A. It's hard to pick a constant winner between Montreal, Hull, Cornwall, Laval and Sherbrooke.

In the other division, Quebec, Sorel, Chicoutimi, Shawinigan and Trois-Rivieres any team could win.

The Remparts should repeat as winners in their section. But after that, the experts are divided on the way the teams will finish. Sorel is weaker after losing most of their top players. Shawinigan and Chicoutimi could be stronger. Trois-Rivieres is expected to ice a bigger team than last year and with Claude Dolbec behind the bench.

The Montreal Junior Canadiens, Laval and Sherbrooke could end battling for top spot. The Hull Festivals will be stronger while the Cornwall Royals will miss their experienced players.

Coach Orval Tessier realizes he has a young squad this season and it will take him another year or two to rebuild. The Royals will be hard to beat on their small ice surface.

The Junior Canadiens with Mario Tremblay in their lineup will be one of the teams to beat this season. Tremblay, who was drafted by the NHL Canadiens will not even work out with the Habs, said general manager Roger Bedard this week. Bedard also revealed that Tremblay had already signed his contract with the Regan crew. A league meeting on Tremblay's situation will be held in the near future. There were reports he would play with the Voyageurs of the AHL. Tremblay will be a top attraction wherever the Canadiens play this winter.

When the Beavers skate against the Hull Festivals Friday in Hull, they'll be going against an improved team over last year. They will also be watching defenceman Tom Lyver, a native of Newfoundland who was to have played for the Beavers this winter. Lyver, however, was lured away by Norm Bari, the Hull general manager.

Reports from the Hull camp say he is a strong skater but Wayne Maxner, the new coach will have to work on his hockey skills. The Festivals still have 33 players in camp. They dropped a 6-3 contest Tuesday night against the Sorel Hawks.

Maxner has been working with his defencemen, a weak point with the Festivals in their first year. His number one goaltender appears to be Denis Charbonneau Guy Bouchard will probably back him up.

The Beavers will likely play three exhibition games in four nights. After Friday's game in Hull, they play Cornwall Sunday. Coach Delage would also like to play Monday against his number one farm team, the Granby Vics. The game originally was scheduled for Tuesday but the 17 will be another memorable night when the Russians and the WHA All Stars play in Quebec City. The Granby team will likely agree to the change.

When the Beavers entertain Cornwall Royals next Wednesday, the 18th, at the Sports Palace, students with their ID cards will be admitted free. George Guibault, general manager, announced the free admission following a mix up last week when students were charged two dollars for the Sorel game instead of the usual $1.25.

The error was noticed after the game and it was too late to reimburse the students.

NOTES: Marcel and Marthe Darche former Sherbrooke residents now living in Trois-Rivieres and playing out of KI-8-EB led the four qualifying teams into the Air Canada mixed two ball championship national finals by shooting a net 66 1/2 at the provincial play-off held recently at the Beleeil golf club.

The Provincial play-off brought together teams from 43 groups who had each qualified at their club to compete in the provincial play-off, the tournament competition using half of the combined handicap of the partners. The leading four teams in the provincial play-off at Beleeil will join the leading six teams from the provincial play-off in Ontario at the Doral Golf and Country Club, Miami, Florida, on October 26-27 to compete in the 36 hole national finals. The Darche's combined with a gross 88 less their handicap of 21 1/2 for 66 and a half. The Labatt two ball this Saturday at Milby has attracted 100 golfers from the Townships and Montreal area. Also this Sunday will be the George Trew Field Day at Mont Orford.

Duke Doucet has entered the Schenley-Manoir Richelieu tournament this weekend. Each professional will form a team with three amateurs from his own club. The score registered by professionals will determine the winners of the prize money, and the team scores will determine the winners of the pro-am championship. At the Sherbrooke C.C., some major renovations are taking place with new drainage, sand traps around the first and 17th holes, and a new elevated tee at the fourth hole.

Team Canada ends exhibitions tonight
EDMONTON (CP) — Team Canada '74 ends its five-game exhibition series here tonight, giving coach Billy Harris a last chance to evaluate the World Hockey Association players who will take part in an eight-game series with the Soviet national team.

An impressive performance Tuesday at Saskatoon, where Team Canada beat the Western Canada Hockey League AllStars 6-1, lifted some of the pressure on Harris, but several questions remain.

Despite encouraging medical reports on Bobby Hull, the knee he injured Sunday in Calgary has not been tested in a game.

"I'm as concerned about having him as a leader as I am about having him play—and it's obvious how much we need him just as a player," said Harris. "He is so keen about this series that it rubs off on everybody."

During the eight periods he played before his injury, Hull was the dominant figure almost every time he stepped on the ice. Hull will start against the Russians in the opening game Tuesday night at Quebec City. Even without Hull, Team Canada played its best game

Sailing off

NEWPORT, R.I. (Reuter) — The possibility of fog threatened today to postpone the second race in the American's Cup yacht series for the second day in a row.

After American defender Courageous won the opening race Tuesday, over Australian challenger Southern Cross, the second race was called off when dense fog Wednesday settled over the 24.3-mile course on Rhode Island Sound.

Fog was forecast for early this morning but was expected to turn to haze by late morning. The event was scheduled to start at 12:10 p.m. EDT but could begin as late as 2:10 p.m. under the rules of the race.

Winds of between 10 and 12 knots were forecast, which could bode well for Southern Cross, believed to be at its best in stronger wind conditions. Tuesday's race was sailed in light air, a condition which favors Courageous.

Both yachts went out for brief runs Wednesday around the fog-shrouded Newport harbor, mainly to evaluate sails and to keep the crews busy. Southern Cross later was hauled out of the water so that its rudder could be repaired. A small piece of the rudder was ripped off Tuesday night when a protective covering was being placed around the yacht.

Cards win in 25 innings Longest night game ever

The longest night game in major league baseball history ended at 3:13 a.m. EDT today with St. Louis Cardinals the winners by a 4-3 score over New York Mets after 25 innings.

Bake McBride opened the 25th inning with an infield single and moved around to score on two Mets' errors for the winning run.

The teams had played for seven hours and four minutes, used a major-league record 50 players and recorded 34 hits. The 24 players used by the Cardinals also was a National League record.

The game fell just one inning short of the major league record for the longest game ever played, that being a 26-inning battle between Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves in 1920. But it did beat the record for a night game, the longest previously being a 24-inning match between the Mets and Houston Astros in 1968.

However, the game which finished today was 19 minutes short of the longest game by time recorded in a Mets-San Francisco Giants contest in 1964.

HOMER TIED IT
 Ken Reitz of the Cardinals hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth to tie the score.

After the opening crowd of 13,460 had dwindled to about 1,000, McBride led off the 25th with an infield single. Relief pitcher Hank Webb, trying to pick McBride off first, threw wide and McBride raced to third.

First baseman John Milner retrieved the ball and threw home but catcher Ron Hodges dropped it for another error and McBride scored.

In other National League games, Philadelphia Phillies topped Pittsburgh Pirates 8-5,

Los Angeles Dodgers beat San Francisco Giants 5-4. San Diego Padres defeated Houston Astros 2-0. Montreal Expos swept Chicago Cubs 6-1 and 13-4 in a two-night doubleheader, and the Atlanta Braves-Cincinnati Reds game was rained out with the score tied 1-1 in the fifth inning.

As plate umpire Ed Sudol signalled him safe, McBride lay on the ground, seemingly stunned that the tie-breaking run had finally scored.

"There was dirt in my eyes, dirt everywhere," he said. "I was tired."

If he thought he was tired, he should have checked Sudol.

HAD EXPERIENCE
 The plate umpire has been through this before. He was behind the plate for the 23-inning Mets-San Francisco game in 1964 and the 24-inning game between Houston and the Mets in 1968.

"My legs feel like a couple of lead posts," he said. "The players kept coming up and asking, 'How're you standing?' and I didn't know what to say, because I didn't know how I was standing."

The Cards victory moved them to within 2 1/2 games of first-place Pittsburgh in the National League's East Division.

The Pirates not only lost the game, they lost their ace pitcher when a line drive by Philadelphia's Willie Montanez struck Dock Ellis on the right hand, fractured a bone and knocked the Pirate star out of the lineup for at least three weeks.

The other damage done by a Philadelphia bat was Bill Robinson's three-run eighth-inning home run, which broke a 5-5 tie and sent the Phillies to victory.

Ali—tired blood

N'SELE, Zaire (AP) — Muhammad Ali confessed Wednesday to having middle-aged tired blood and said he had called in a doctor because he was worried about feeling listless during initial training for his Sept. 25 heavyweight boxing championship fight with George Foreman.

After sparring briefly at his headquarters by the Congo River, and castigating Foreman as a "mummy" and an "elephant," Ali grew serious-looking and began talking about his medical problems.

Orioles beat Yanks in seven hour slugfest

Their two-night doubleheader lasted nearly seven hours, but managers Bill Virdon of New York Yankees and Earl Weaver of Baltimore Orioles both came away happy.

Boog Powell's run-scoring pinch-single in the 17th inning of the opener gave Baltimore a 3-2 victory and made Weaver happy, but Larry Gura's five-hit pitching led the Yankees to a 5-1 triumph in the nightcap and brought a smile to Virdon's face.

The split of the doubleheader, which lasted six hours, 52 minutes from start to finish, kept the Yankees two games ahead of second-place Baltimore in the hot American League East race.

Cleveland beat Boston 3-1, dropping the Red Sox 2 1/2 games off the pace and putting the Indians just five games out.

"It was a big game for us," said Virdon of the win in the nightcap. "It meant the difference between being tied for the lead or two games ahead. Am I happy? I guess so, but we had a chance to win them both and we didn't."

Weaver, too, was pleased. "I'm happy about tonight," the Baltimore skipper said. "We could have gone home almost out of it."

TWINS BEAT OAKLAND
 Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota Twins beat Oakland's A's 5-3 in 10 innings. Texas Rangers defeated Chicago White Sox 6-2. California Angels edged Kansas City Royals 3-2 in 10 innings and Milwaukee Brewers blanked Detroit Tigers 3-0.

Gura, purchased on Aug. 18 from Syracuse of the International League, raised his record with the Yankees to 3-0.

"I'm going to use at least four starters from now on," Virdon said, "and Gura's likely to be one of them."

Gura yielded a run in the first inning, then shut the door on the Orioles. The Yankees went ahead with four runs in the second when Sandy Alomar and Jim Mason hit RBI singles, Elliott Maddox was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded and Lou Piniella hit a sacrifice fly.

Roy White accounted for the final run with his fifth homer of the season in the ninth.

The opener, which ran four hours and 12 minutes, ended when Powell singled following two walks off relief pitcher Cecil Upshaw, 1-6.

The hit was only the third over the last 10 innings by the Orioles, who had tied the score 2-2 on Andy Etchebarren's first home run of the season in the fifth inning.

PERRY WINS 19TH
 Cleveland pitching star Gaylord Perry stopped Boston on five hits in posting his 19th victory against 10 losses.

Harmon Killebrew hit his 13th home run of the season in the 10th inning, a two-run shot on the first pitch from Darold Knowles

Expo power helps win two

By SCOTT ABBOTT
MONTREAL (CP) — The hitting power Montreal Expos needed in August—when they still held pennant hopes—arrived Wednesday night, a month late.

The Expos rocked five Chicago Cubs pitchers for 20 hits on the way to a 6-1, 13-4 sweep of their National League baseball doubleheader, their first sweep at home since July last year.

Tim Lincecum, on a 15-for-25 batting streak that has raised his average to .256, blasted six singles. He drove in a run and scored once in the first game and crossed the plate twice in the nightcap.

Both teams' lineups were sprinkled with young players up from development clubs. The Expos are 12 1/2 games behind the front-running Pittsburgh Pirates in the East Division, and the Cubs are one notch below, in last place 19 1/2 games out.

Cub Ron Dunn, playing second base in the nightcap, was the outstanding youngster offensively. He had his first major league homer, a two-run shot in the second, and three doubles later in the game.

But that performance could not overcome the Expos, who scored six runs in the fifth on just three hits, including Barry Foote's three-run double, and an error.

DAVIS DEADLY
 Montreal jumped on Cubs starter Ray Burris, now 3-4, for four runs on as many hits in the first inning. Willie Davis's two-run homer, his 10th of the year, was the big blow.

Tom Walker, with relief help from Chuck Taylor, notched his third win against five losses.

In the first game, Steve Renko benefitted from Mike Jorgensen's heavy hitting—a pair of two-run homers—in forging a 10-14 record.

Renko, who surrendered a home run to Rick Monday leading off the sixth, left after an infield out and back-to-back walks to Pete Laocock and Jose Cardenal. Renko appeared to be having little trouble with the Cubs but experienced muscle spasms in his lower back.

Dale Murray went the rest of the way, earning his second save.

In a single game tonight, Mike Torrez (11-8) is to face Tom Detorre (1-3) of the Cubs.

Jonas on bench as Ticat's romp

When Hamilton Tiger-Cats acquired Don Jonas from Winnipeg Blue Bombers last week in a quarterback swap, it was assumed Jonas would become the Ticats' No. 1 passer.

"The way things are going, I might not be able to crack the lineup," Jonas said Wednesday night after Bill Etter led the Ticats to a 27-0 win over Calgary Stampeders.

Etter, in his second year as backup to Chuck Ealey, since departed to Winnipeg, won his second Canadian Football League game in a row with a strong display of passing and running.

Etter started with a six-yard touchdown pass to Tony Gabriel in the first quarter, and then his 73 yards gain on eight carries and his passing led to two touchdown runs by Dave Fleming, one from 11 yards and one from two.

"He's got confidence now," Ticat coach Jerry Williams said of the sophomore quarterback from Notre Dame.

"You can see him improving in every game. Don't forget he didn't play that much at Notre Dame. He even sat out one year because of injuries."

"He's fast. He's not as good a runner as Ealey, but he has good speed and I think, in a foot race, he might take Ealey."

Jonas got into the game for a couple of plays late in the fourth quarter.

Len Sunter provided the remainder of Hamilton's scoring with two field goals, two converts and a single.

LOST FOUR FUMBLES
 The Stampeders, with Pete Liske at quarterback most of the way, showed little spark and gave up four fumbles. Calgary's total offense was 171 yards while the Ticats gained 297.

The Stampeders, with only one win in eight games, move on to Ottawa for a game Saturday afternoon against the Rough Riders.

Tonight, British Columbia Lions visit Toronto Argonauts in an 8 p.m. EDT encounter that is to be televised on the CBC national network.

One of the television commentators will be former Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson who was announced Wednesday as Toronto's new head coach, starting Jan. 1, 1975.

The Argos announced he will sign a five-year contract to replace John Rauch who was fired last week.

Joe Moss, defensive backfield coach under Rauch, will fill in as head coach for the remainder of the season.

The Argos, with only three wins in eight starts, have a number of injury problems. Defensive tackle Granville Liggins has a bruised leg and defensive back Larry Uteck a rib injury.

Both are doubtful starters.

Argos announced Wednesday that defensive end Ed Harrington was released after he came off the injury list, leaving rookie Farris Scott from Youngstown State at the defensive end position.
