RIGHT OF SANCTION BY PROVINCES THE DEMAND OF THE ANTI-SUNDAY OBSERVANCE BILL GATHERING

Mr. Henri Bourassa M.P., the Principal Speaker, Accuses Colleagues of Having Betrayed the Cause—Latest Amendment Not Satisfactory as Preserving Provincial Rights—Mr. Bruneau, M.P., Attacks Bourassa.

If one were to judge by the enthusiasm voiced at certain portions of the meeting on the Champ de Mars last night, in opposition to the Lord's Day bill, several thousands of people were emphatic in their approval of the reiterated statement, that, in the province of Quebec, it would never become operative.

The meeting was organized with the avowed intention of condemning the passage of the bill. Four brass bands were advertised. It was expected by the promoters, who made no secret of their hopes, that the music would bring with them men and women numbering close up to the twenty thousand mark. In this respect their hopes did not materialize. At its greatest number, the crowd did not exceed four thousand, perhaps less. There was a band on the platform early in the evening, and it attracted a good number of stragglers; but it was not until about 7.30 p.m. that the mass of people arrived on the scene. They took place opposite a huge platform, erected at the back of the east wing of the Court House.

Then the unwelcome rain came. At this the audience dwindled down to about 500. Gradually, however, the rain ceased and the people came back from their hiding places on Craig street and under the sheltering spots of the old Court House and the City Hall.

As the crowd grew bigger, the speechmaking began. Mr. Olivier Asselin proposed the name of the joint chairman.

He was received with much applause. In his speech of a few minutes he dwelt on the general question, stating that it was the desire of the French-Canadian people and a large number of their English-speaking friends, that no such measure as that which had been proposed was in keeping with the liberties of the people. He was sure that the speakers would make it very plain to every one that a great mistake had been taken up seriously by the Parliament of Canada.

Though this little speech was of short duration, the crowd had been augmented by many hundreds, and such enthusiasts as Mr. Albert St. Martin proposed that there should be an "overflow" meeting on the steps of the Champ de Mars, fifty feet from the scene of the big gathering. There were a number of sympathizers with him; but none of them appeared to want to get far away from the main gathering, particularly as it was known that Mr. Bourassa was to make a "speech worth hearing."

RUMORS FROM OTTAWA.

At this stage a rumor spread that news from Ottawa declared Sir Wilfrid had decided to let the provinces have their own say in the matter; that the bill might be made a law, but it would be amended, so that each province could suit it to themselves. No one seemed to know just what this meant, but there is no doubt that it took a good deal of the fire out of a certain portion of the gathering, particularly that portion which stood on the back of the platform and could not hear a word of what was said.

The second gathering did not materialize, and the crowd settled down, or rather stood up, to listen, as best they could to the eloquence of the orators chosen for the occasion.

Mr. Asselin proposed that Mr. G. Boivin and Mr. Latreille be selected as joint chairman. There was a mighty cheer over the proposition.

Hardly had Mr. Boivin commenced to speak, when a second band appeared followed by five hundred people. The brass instruments drowned the voice of the speaker, and Mr. Boivin had to stop. "Down with Hypocrisy," and "Vive la Liberte," were the mottos on the transparences which were carried at the head of the procession. Cheers greeted its arrival.

When Mr. Boivin had finished his short address, Mr. Latrielle followed in an equally short speech. Each made it plain that he did not propose to discuss the question, but merely to place himself on record as opposed to the bill. They would leave it to the orators of the evening to make clear the many arguments against it.

Chief Carpenter and officers of the police were there in abundance, but they were not required. It was an orderly gathering, and it was evidently quite satisfied with itself. By eleven o'clock the gathering dispersed, and the protesting speakers departed, escorted by their respective friends and admirers.

LIBERTY OF THE CITIZENS.

Gustave Francq was the first speaker. Twenty years ago, he said, a meeting was held on the Champ de Mars in Montreal to save the life of a countryman. The present meeting was not being held to save any life, but was being held to safeguard the interests and liberty of each one of the citizens of Montreal. To begin with he was strongly against the Sunday bill, and although he would not discuss its different clauses, he wished to express his feelings which he thought were held in common by the labor class in Montreal. He respected Dr. Shearer and the Lord's Day Alliance, as well as their ideas for the people with whom they lived, but he did not feel as though they should come and dictate to the people of this province how they should observe Sunday. The labor faction of this province only wanted six days work a week, but wanted to be their own judges as to how to put in their day of rest. It would not seem just to any man to oblige the laboring man who, after a hard week's work in stifling air, would on Sunday be obliged to confine his recreation to the too close apartments of a small cottage, instead of being at liberty to go, where for at least one day in seven he could breathe the good pure air so much needed. It was all very well for the Lord's Day Alliance people to preach this doctrine, when during the whole week they could, often at the expense of the ones who they were now trying to oppress, take all the recreation they required.

Specially as a representative of the Typographical Union he was much against the abolishing of Sunday papers. Every one wanted to read Sunday papers, and it was not right for people to think that one was going to be from Saturday till Monday morning without knowing what was going on about them. As to the question of Sunday papers he thought it was much less of a crime to work a couple of hours on Sunday morning to get out a Sunday paper, than to work several hours Sunday afternoon and night to get out a Monday morning paper.

In his opinion it would also be a shame to close up the small stores which on Sunday derive the most benefit from a commerce already too little to assure them a comfortable livelihood. He would like to know if the supporters of the bill would be willing, if very thirsty on Sunday to wait until Monday morning to quench their thirst, for want of even a small refreshment store to buy a bottle of ginger ale. There was no doubt about it, the bill was an absurd one, and one through which Sir Wilfrid Laurier did not seem to see defeat staring him in the face. Every workman wanted one day out of the seven for rest, but wished to rest whatever way he deemed advisable.

MEMBER FOR HOCHELAGA.

Mr. L. A. Rivet, member for Hochelaga, was the next speaker. He was very qualified in his opposition to the measure, and this spirit of indecision on the subject drew on him at times the interruptions of his auditory who were remarkably frank in their expressions of opinion.

Mr. Rivet declared that while he thought the bill in its application was an attack on the liberties of the subject he did not oppose it on its principle. Its object was to keep holy the Sabbath day, and he thought that such an object would find favor with all right-minded men. In its application, however, in certain directions it encroached on the liberty of the individual citizen and for this reason he was heartily opposed to it.

The solution of the whole question was in his opinion to give the power to those who wanted the bill to adopt it, leaving to those other provinces which were opposed to the bill the liberties of rejecting it. This he was happy to inform them was provided for in an amendment which had been passed that afternoon, and according to which the bill would not become law in any province till it had been accepted in the name of the province by the Lieutenant-Governor.

This gave the matter into the hands of the different provinces each of which might decide for itself in the question. Quebec had no need to be taught how to keep holy the Sunday; its customs in this respect had received the sanction of religion and the approval of generations. It was for them therefore to say whether these customs needed any legal additions or whether they should persist as formerly.

The conclusion of Mr. Rivet's speech was hastened by repeated calls for Mr. Bourassa, whom the crowd evidently looked forward to as the speaker of the evening. When the member for Labelle finally stepped forward he was greeted with prolonged cheers.

MR. BOURASSA'S SPEECH.

After a few brief introductory remarks, Mr. Bourassa immediately took up the subject of the bill by making an attack upon his colleagues who had voted in favor of the amendment announced by Mr. Rivet. "I had not left Ottawa," he cried, "for twenty-four hours when I learned that an amendment had been passed and that I had been betrayed by my colleagues in spite of their promise to me that they would stand by our agreement to oppose the bill till the bitter end unless certain changes were made in it. They have betrayed me, but they shall not reap their reward. Mr. Gervais, Mr. Piche, Mr. Rivet and myself had made a contract to fight the bill persistently unless two clauses were introduced in it which, in our opinion, would protect the interests and liberties of our constituents. Whether or not they have kept to this agreement you shall be the judges; for I shall tell you the whole story."

Preparatory to explaining the precise nature of the amendment passed yesterday afternoon, the speaker went into a lengthy explanation of the bill, prefacing the exposition by stating that the people had not been properly informed by the newspapers as to the true nature of the measure and of the proceedings in connection with it. He went so far as to name one of the French dailies as having refused to make any announcement of the holding of the meeting and as having duped the people with regard to the bill while pretending to have the sanction of His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi. "As for this claim of the Archbishop's sanction," he continued, "it is altogether a dupe and a snare. The fact of the matter is that His Grace has never asked for the passing of this bill. What he did ask for was that excursions on Sundays by boat or rail should be put a stop to, as leading to drunkenness and disorders of various kinds. The wisdom of the demand is not a present concern of mine; but that is what His Grace demanded. But those who tell you that he asked for a bill which would prevent a man going out to the cemetery on a Sunday and buying a few flowers to put on the grave of his child or of those dear to him under penalty of the law, simply lie to you and slander that distinguished prelate. Anyone who says that he would approve of a law which would make liable to arrest the lawyer or notary who would go down to his office on Sunday and write a couple of letters to his clients, or the business man who looks over his accounts, lies and lies basely. Such a law as that is not a Christian law or a pagan law; it is simply a monument to the folly of those who proposed it."

The speaker then took up the plea that the law, though it may somewhat curtail the liberties of the dweller in cities still does not interfere with the freedom of the countrymen; and he gave instances in which its application would interfere with the farmer, as if seed were needed in sowing time he would be prevented from buying it on the Sabbath under penalty of the law. Neither could he pay his taxes on Sunday when he would have come into town for religious service, but would have to make a separate journey of perhaps many miles.

MEASURE'S CROWNING FAULT.

The crowning fault of the measure, in his opinion, was that the offences which were made penal ones were not defined. This was in direct opposition to one of the most important principles of the constitution, which held that an offence must be specified before a penalty can be attached to it. This law would leave it to the judgment of every magistrate in the country, be he ever so stupid, to decide whether an

PICHE AMENDMENT TO SUNDAY BILL

Provincial Legislation will not be Affected by Clauses of Act.

MANY MORE EXEMPTIONS.

Prolonged Discussion, During Which Mr. Lancaster Pays Respects to Minister of Justice.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Press Gallery, House of Commons, Ottawa, June 30.—The most important discussion which has occurred since consideration of the Sunday observance bill commenced, took place on an amendment to clause two, which is probably the most important clause of the bill providing, as it does, that it shall not be lawful to carry out any business transaction or to employ any other person to do on that day any work, business or labor. The amendment which was proposed by Mr. Camille Piche, St. Mary's division, Montreal, and adopted, permits any provincial legislature to repeat, alter, or modify every provision contained in section two of the act, as well as power to modify many of the permissive provisions of the bill, included in section three.

It means that a great concession has been made to the provinces, which will materially lessen the scope of the bill as originally framed and that here will be as little uniformity in respect to many Sabbath laws in the various provinces in the future, as there has been in the past. The clause as originally framed reads: "It shall not be lawful for any person on the Lord's Day, except as provided herein, or in any other provincial act heretofore passed to sell or offer for sale or purchase any goods, chattels, or other personal property or any real estate, or to carry on or transact any business of his ordinary calling or in connection with such calling or for gain, or to do or employ any other person to do on that day any work, business or labor."

Mr. Piche's far reaching amendment strikes out the words "Heretofore passed," and substitutes the following: "Now or heretofore in force regarding matters coming within the classes of subjects enumerated in section 92 of the British North American Act."

Section 92 of the B. N. A. Act, it may be explained, is the section which defines the matters in respect to which the provinces have the right to legislate.

A number of other amendments were adopted which enlarged the exceptions and provided for more labor on Sunday. It was also provided that the law shall not come into operation until March 1, 1907.

The bill was passed in committee and reported. It now stands for a third reading.

MR. MONK'S ARGUMENT.

When the House met at three o'clock Mr. F. D. Monk, who was speaking at one o'clock, continued to argue that the amendment to clause 2 of the Lord's Day Act, proposed by Mr. Piche, would not give the necessary relief to the provinces. He said he was not obstructing the bill, but felt that it was but proper to point out the difficulties as they arose, as this was the only means of knowing at what point the House had arrived. Mr. Monk expressed anxiety as to what the proposed amendment really meant. He wanted to know, for instance, if the bill would still prevent excursions on Sunday, carried on by companies incorporated under Provincial Charter.

Mr. Gervais, of Saint James's division, Montreal, was of the opinion that the amendment was an improvement on the clause as it was originally drafted. He did not feel disposed to base his vote on the decision of the Privy Council that the provinces do not possess the power to legislate in respect to Sabbath observance as that august body had on previous occasions given contradictory judgments and on this question might some day render a different opinion. The British North American Act made it clear that the Federal authority is supreme in adopting the criminal law, but it was highly important in the interests of peace and the harmony in the Dominion that Parliament should not abuse the power by defining as a misdemeanor and civil rights authorized by provincial legislature.

MR. GERVAIS' ILLUSTRATION.

As an illustration of his point, Mr. Gervais said that under the clause as first drafted, a notary in the province of Quebec would not be allowed to sign a note on the Sabbath Day, although under the notarial laws of the province this is a lawful act. The amendment offered by Mr. Piche would wipe out this difficulty as well as many others of a similar nature.

Dealing with wider scope of the bill Mr. Gervais declared that public morals are largely a question of customs, usage and local habits, and it would be absurd for the central Government to attempt to bring about uniformity throughout the Dominion.

Mr. Chisholm, Conservative, of East Huron, thought the measure lacks elasticity, and does not make provision for the different conditions of life prevailing in the Dominion. He advised the Government to re-draft the measure and bring down something better.

WILL CONSTRUCT IMMENSE BRIDGE

Canadian Pacific Plans Structure Which Will be More Than Mile in Length.

Plans have been perfected by the Canadian Pacific to construct a bridge near Lethbridge, Alberta, which will be an engineering marvel, and probably will be ranked as one of the world's wonders. The plans call for a structure slightly more than a mile long and 300 feet above the wafer level.

The Canadian Pacific bridge will span the Belly River, and it is to be built for the purpose of shortening the route between Lethbridge and MacLeod. The grade of the new line will be much easier and heavier loads can be carried at less cost. The work will be commenced at once.

By an error in the telegrams received by The Star, Mr. W. L. MacKenzie King and Hon. Adelard Turgeon were erroneously stated to have received the honor of K.C.M.G., instead of C.M.G. The new Companions of St. Michael and St. George take rank with a long list of distinguished Canadians. By the majority of Canadian papers the new Companions were styled as "Commanders," and this initial mistake gave rise to the further error in styling them Knights Commander of St. Michael and St. George.

Books of the Week Reviewed; Railroads, Etc.

By George Murray, B. A., Oxon., F. R. S. C.

Railroads, Their Employes and the Public. By John E. Miles. (Published by the author. Boston, 1906.)

Mr. Miles is a locomotive engineer and chairman of the Legislative Board of the "Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers." He has positive views, and expresses them plainly,about matters of prime interest to the traveling public. He says: "There never was a time in railroading when employes received as good wages — when their labors were as light and their hours of employment as reasonable as at present. And in face of these facts there never was a time when there was less interest, more discontent, uncertainty and dissatisfaction than exist to-day. For the cause of this the opinion of one man is as good as another's. My guess would trace it to too much red tape destroying united interest."

Mr. Miles believes that locomotive engineers should be specially trained for their duties. He cites Purdue University, Lafayette, Indiana, as giving sound instruction. Of particular interest are his views, representing as he does a vast army of exceptionally intelligent men, regarding legal enactments affecting hours of employment and the like. He tells us: "It is the opinion of the engineers that more satisfactory arrangement for all parties interested can be, through agreement, arrived at between the management and the employes, than through enforced legislation." As to reducing fares by force of law, he says: "Let us endeavor to show the public and their law-makers that it is a questionable policy to demand cheap fares when such a policy may entail loss of life or unfair treatment of railroad employes, as compared with other trades or professions. It is almost an assured fact that present rates of dividend to shareholders will be maintained until all other means of 'trimming' have failed."

He would clothe commissioners with large powers. "We would allow the utmost freedom of contract between railroad employes and their officials; but we would advise—in fact, require—that all trade agreements be approved by some commission, and be binding on both contracting parties, subject to change only upon the consent of the commission."

Mr Miles is very clear that employes who suffer from personal injuries in the course of duty should have the same rights to compensation as if they were not employes. His recital of the maiming of a veteran engineer, William Adams, is pathetic. This unfortunate man was offered by his employers "a gratuity"—five hundred dollars, provided that he granted them a full acquittance of all claims. It is in such pages as these, written vividly out of his heart, that Mr. Miles is at his best. He describes a fireman keeping up steam in an overladen engine that he might pay a visit to his invalid mother. In another chapter as telling, we learn the constant and racking strain imposed upon an engineer, when, through neglect or avarice, his employers place him in charge of an ill-built or worn-out engine.

Aprecis Juris, and Other Legal Essays in Prose and Verse. By Charles Morse, D.C.L. (Toronto: Canada Law Book Co.)

These essays, largely reprinted from American and Canadian law journals, range through an ample field. We are taken all the way from the origin of Contract, through the art of being irrelevant, until the close, when we have a word as to contracts in restraint of marriage. Our author is discursive and entertaining, with an eye for the profound philosophy which underlies Law, bringing it by one reform after another ever nearer to Justice.

Not in the Curriculum. A Book of Friendly Counsel to Students. With an Introduction by the Rev. Henry Van Dyke. (N.Y., and Toronto: The Revell Company.)

This little book was written by two young men who recently graduated from Princeton University. It is a sincere, tersely spoken message to any young fellow about to enter college. Among its varied themes are Friends, Study, Athletics, Ideals, How to be Popular, Money, Self-help, Conversation, Relations to Your College, Practical Christianity, Purity. Two comparatively long chapters deal with Doubt and with the Bible in College life. Their tone will give the reader an insight into the "Princeton religion," the firm hold of Christian truth which characterizes the university over which Dr. McCosh and Dr. Patton so long presided.

In the pages on "Relations to Fellows," we find the following specimens of sound sense:

"In thinking or speaking of any of your fellows, look for the good, not the evil. . . Choose your own path and plan of action, and then use them. Give others the same liberty that you demand for yourself. . . . Consider a man's motives, before you condemn his actions. . . . Be especially careful to deal justly and charitably towards any man against whom you may have a personal prejudice. . . . Respect every man's opinion, but act on your own."

We commend these brief maxims to the attention of all young students.

A Woman's Problem. By Kate S. Penney. (Toronto: W. Briggs.)

This is unfortunately an off-told story of domestic life, but the tragic element, which necessarily saturates most of it, makes our pity for the heroine, who tries to solve "The Woman's Problem," almost painful. At the age of thirteen Elinor Norwood, left an orphan, goes to live with Mrs. Drury, her father's sister, who is a widow with a comfortable fortune. Most of the scenes take place at Linton, "an aggressive young city" in one of the Southern States of America, whose inhabitants are described in a life-like manner. After Elinor has finished her education at a convent school, fifty miles away, she returns to her aunt's home, and brings "light and sweetness" into the house. Mrs. Drury had a strongly practical mind, while her emotional niece had girlish dreams and poetical ideas, which she felt obliged to keep to herself. The novelist describes her as "tall and fair and slender, with golden gleams in her light brown hair, and a serious look in her hazel eyes, belied by the swift coming smiles of coral lips * * * * She was quiet rather than gay, and the light in her eyes was that of truth and sincerity rather than that of coquetry." As time went on, and Elinor blossomed into womanhood, she had many offers of marriage. But although she had not been able to decide whom she would marry, she felt especially undecided in the case of two of her wooers, John Churton, whom she had known from her childhood—a rising young lawyer—and Dr. Kent, who was a comparatively recent acquaintance. At a picnic which was given one bright May day by the former gentleman to his many friends, he found himself when the guests were visiting what was called the "Lovers' Walk," alone with Elinor, and took the opportunity of "proposing" to her. He began by speaking of his professional prospects, and informed her that Mr. Hardwick, the head of a successful legal firm, had yesterday offered him a partnership. He added that it was very gratifying to his pride, but that if Elinor would reconsider her decision in his case, his happiness would be complete. The lady's answer was that she did not wish to change anything, and she asked him why, like herself, he could not be content with pure friendship? Disappointed and irritated by her reply, he hastily said to her: "Do you answer Dr. Kent just as you do me?" "Yes," she replied, "though I do not recognize your right to ask me that question." He continued: "I am glad; for I believe your life would be shipwrecked with him for a pilot. * * * I heard on unimpeachable authority that he became so much intoxicated at a dance last week that the host would not allow a young lady he had escorted to go to her home in his company." Elinor was indignant, and more than hinted that his remark was a dishonorable one. Nevertheless she had frequently heard old Hannah, her aunt's servant, say that "there dere is a heap o' talk 'bout Dr. Kent bein' a little wild." On her return home, Elinor received a letter from Dr. Kent which moved her strangely, and put "a woman's problem" before her. In it he renewed his proposal of marriage, and added: "I am sure that were your life entwined with my own you could make me what you wished. * * * I know that with you by my side, as a guardian angel, temptations would lose their power." Elinor knew well the characters of both Kent and Churton. That of the latter possessed more strength and stability, but lacked gentleness and suavity, while Richard Kent's very vacillation had a fascinating quality, though she was sensible enough to realize the danger that lurked in that suggestion of weakness. "Am I strong enough to take the responsibility?" she asked herself with a sense of awe, and after much thought and earnest prayer for help to do the best, she wrote and accepted Kent's proposal. The result is described in a narrative that is full of beauty, wisdom, and pathos. The keen sufferings of the young wife—the lapses, relapses, penitence, and remorse of the husband are realistically described, and we rise from a perusal of the book with grateful feelings to the authoress for the powerful warnings to both sexes that form the staple of her affecting story.

Aesop's Fables. Illustrated by J. M. Conde. (N. Y.: Moffat, Yard & Co.)

These immortal fables, if not correctly attributed to a deformed Phrygian slave, who is said to have been born about 620 B.C., may, at any rate, be called "Aesopian Fables." Little—almost nothing—is known of his life. He is said to have visited the court of King Croesus at Sardis, where he met Solon Thales, and other sages, and to have so pleased his royal master by his conversations held with those philosophers, that he applied to him an expression which has passed into a proverb, "Mallon ho Phrux," i.e., "The Phrygian has spoken better than all." The life of the wise slave was written by Maximus Planudes, a monk of Constantinople in the early part of the 14th century, but it is so full of apochryphal stories, lying legends, and gross anachronisms, that it is universally condemned, as false, puerile, and unauthentic. It is certain that Aesop never wrote any fables. In the first instance they were narrated amicably during his frequent travels to the story-loving Greeks with whom he met. Only one fable can be traced to him with any show of authenticity, and that is the tale of "The Fox, the Hedgehog, and the Dog-Ticks," which, Aristotle tells us, was used to check the Samians in their desire to put to death a ruler who had fattened on the public treasury. We have no space to discuss the question, "Who wrote Aesop?" It must suffice to say, that the most famous scholars seem to agree that Babrias (not 'Babrius," as Mrs. Elizabeth L. Cary calls him), a Greek of one of the Ionic colonies, is the true author; but it has always been a subject of keen controversy among the learned. The present volume contains 317 fables, and the English version is an old one by Rev. G. F. Townsend, which is far less paraphrastic than the wordy translations of Archdeacon Croxall or the late Rev. T. James, Canon of Peterborough. Of the book of Aesop's Fables it may be said, that Martin Luther translated 20 of them, and ranked the collection next after the Holy Scriptures. In modern times it is not surprising to find that the creator of "Mrs. Poyser" yielded to inexhaustible laughter whenever she dipped out the Fables. The most ancient collections do not give the brief "Moral" by which in later editions the lesson of each story receives point, as it has been argued with much plausibility that any well constructed fable will make its own point. Nevertheless, it has been urged with equal plausibility, that however brief a fable may be its "moral" can be condensed into the still briefer form of a proverb, which lodges easily in the mind, and recalls the incidents of the fable. The Fables have always been a popular subject with illustrators. Walter Crane and John Tenniel have exercised their elaborate art on them, and I have before me another edition of Townsend's Aesop with 50 illustrations by Harrison Weir. But Mr. Conde's drawings in the present edition can hardly be surpassed. There are 85 in all, and 16 of them are full-page illustrations artistically colored, the remainder consisting of clever woodcuts. The volume will charm the tastes of both young and old.

TEETH preserved to middle age are pretty sure to last out one's lifetime. The greatest known preservative of the teeth is SOZODONT. Why? Because being an Alkaline and Antiseptic Liquid, it penetrates the minutest crevice of the teeth, destroying the deadly mouth acids and purifying the whole tooth structure.

By Guy Thorne.

Author of "When It Was Dark," "A Lost Cause," etc.

The phenomenal success of Mr. Guy Thorne's novel, "When It Was Dark," which has attained a sale far in excess of almost any novel of modern times, ensures a big welcome for this new story. The publishers would lay stress on the fact that it is an absolutely new book, only just completed. The author takes two young men from Oxford, who both interest themselves in social affairs. Hazel believes in the incarnation and sees everything in the light of it, but Bosanquet is the high-minded sceptic. The working out of the views of these two men constitute a vivid and engrossing story, abounding in strong dramatic scenes.

Literary Notes and Gossip.

A reprint in modern type of the Shakespeare First Folio is in preparation in London. The edition, which is to be in thirteen good sized volumes, is, of course, intended for Shakespeare scholars.

A copy of the first edition of the earliest book on arithmetic—Calandro's Arithmetics, 1491—is now available for collectors at $200. This was the only edition, printed in the fifteenth century, the second edition bearing the date 1518.

"Tuberculosis: Its Origin and Extinction" is the title of a book by Dr. W. P. Turner, of the Isle of Wight, which The Macmillan Company will publish shortly. The volume attempts to deal with tuberculosis as a whole, to trace its origin, and to indicate a method by which it can be completely abolished, in both men and animals.

Mr. Baring-Gould's forthcoming book on the Rhine ought to be pleasant reading for those who do not in sight-seeing ignore historical interest. The history of the three great electorates on the river's banks and of the owners of the castles that still tower in ruins above it, this author has set down in his own picturesque way. And while the reader is about it let him turn to a book which he has not seen, perhaps, for many a year, and peruse that most delightful legend of Princess Helena of Cleves and the noble Otto of Godesberg.

In "Corydon: an Elegy," Mr. Reginald Fanshawe, an Oxford man, commemorates Matthew Arnold, who has been called in a special and unique sense the poet of Oxford. Here is one stanza of the poem:

Sleep now at Laleham, shepherd, by thy Thames!
That flows true-tuned to melodious death
Loveliest, last of nature's requiems,
Deep, placid, full, as one that followeth
Morning's own music, brimming to the breath
Of cowslip. Sleep! A peace divinely clear,
Better serenity is none beneath
Thy mountains high, contextual calm austere,
By chattering Rotha's rush, or Rydal's narrowing mere.

The private collections as well as the public archives of Frankfort have lately been drawn upon for the purposes of an exhibition of old newspapers, mostly German. The oldest German newspaper in existence is dated March 12, 1622, but the first daily German newspaper, "The Athenaeum" notes, was started at Strassburg in 1609.

Putnam's Magazine is an assured fact. It will be illustrated, and will enter fairly into competition with Harper's, The Century, Scribner's, and the other leading magazines. Its contents will be of a varied character. The editor has already been appointed, but no date has been announced for the appearance of the first number.

Into the market has come another structure associated with poetry. This is Hunsdon House, where Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, first saw the nine-year-old Geraldine in whose honor he promptly wrote a sonnet:

Hunsdon did first present her to mine eyne;
Bright is her hewe and Geraldine she hight.

The romantic legend of the love of Surrey for this daughter of Lord Kildare is very pretty, but so excellent an authority as Mr. A. W. Pollard has shown it to be merely moonshine. Hunsdon is more truly interesting as one of the palaces of Henry VIII.

There is a rumor that John Morley may write the authorized biography of the late Sir William Henry Harcourt, though it seems that Mr. Morley must have too little leisure now to undertake any heavy literary work. The story of the career of Sir William Harcourt will form a very important chapter in English political history. There is ample material to work upon, and it is said that Sir William's son, Lewis Harcourt, M.P., may undertake the task, if Mr. Morley is unable to.

The younger among the Northern realistic novel writers taught in the schools of France have learned their lessons not wisely, but too well. They have swamped the bookstalls of Northern Europe with material which is nothing if not piquant, but which has taught the average reader to abstain from purchasing any volume the author's name of which is not some guarantee for the tone and tendency of a work. But strange to say, the younger and young authors who model their stories on the work of the extremists in the French naturalist and impressionist schools have not realized one important fact which is patent to all readers who are able to compare modern French novels with those written in other languages. They make no allowance for the difference of language, and forget or ignore that things which may be said in French without greatly offending are coarse and revolting in an idiom lacking the subtle grace that suggests an atmosphere of apologetic persiflage in the most risque French story. This defect is apparent even in works of German writers, though the wealth of the German language mitigates the evil to some extent. When a Scandinavian tongue is used the result is still worse. —The Westminster Gazette.

Cable despatches announced some weeks ago the book of miscellaneous essays Sir Theodore Martin, in his ninetieth year, was preparing to publish. The author of the "Bon Gaultier Ballads," with Prof. Aytoun, has been engaged in literary work for more than half a century. He has written biographies of the Prince Consort, Lord Lyndhurst, the great Chancellor (whom Sir Theodore resembles in the preservation of all his faculties to a ripe old age), and his wife, the famous actress, Helen Faucit. He has translated Virgil and Horace, Catullus, Leopardi, Dante, Schiller, Goethe, and Heine. He has been a Parliamentary agent, in the passing of private bills, for fifty-one years. His new book has just appeared in London and is largely made up of collected papers, of course, including some which date from back in the sixties. David Garrick, Baron Stockmar, Macready, Rachel, are among his subjects.

To the long list of literary men, Latin and Anglo-Saxon, who have delighted in the companionship of cats must be added the late Dr. Garnett, of the British Museum. He not only wrote cat poetry—which many men have done, as a certain captivating anthology, in which his own "Marigold" appears duly testifies—but he was accustomed to regard a liking for cats as a more or less necessary quality in his friends. It is recorded that one of his first questions to a new acquaintance was "Are you fond of cats?" and it is added that he once sadly remarked of somebody he had met, "A charming lady, a distinguished person of much literary merit, but she has one great defect — she doesn't like cats." He enjoyed seeing a prosperous, silken coated cat reposing on the hearth, and he thought, Miss Zimmern tells us, that its condition was an index of the household. Why this fondness of authors for Madam Grimalkin? Perhaps it is due to the unmistakable air of wisdom, of intellectual reserve which she wears, "with sombre seagreen gaze inscrutable;" perhaps it is the unfailing grace of her attitudes, the exquisite curves of her lithe body which appeal to a person of artistic temperament. Perhaps it is the bewitching combination of those attributes. It is certain that the three beings outside our kind that have close associations with literature —the owl, the frog, and the cat—are all meditative creatures, and of these Puss is undoubtedly the pleasantest as she is the cleverest.

When the name of James De Mille is mentioned, one thinks of "The Dodge Club," that delightfully humorous narrative of the sixties, in which the spirit of the Old World and that of the New were so deftly contrasted. Who that read the book in his youth has forgotten the American Senator who taught Il Contessa his favorite hymn—

My willing soul would stay, and then married her? "The Dodge Club" gave De Mille, a Canadian novelist, great vogue. "The Lady of the Ice" was scarcely less popular, and his tales of adventure and mystery were widely read. "Cord and Creese," reprinted now by Messrs. Harper and Brothers from the old plates, with the two column page, is like an echo of the past. A sound, thorough-going old-fashioned tale of family affliction, plot and counterplot, shipwreck and murder, buried treasure, and "moving accidents by flood and field." Well wrought and well written, with the suspense well sustained from chapter to chapter. It is an excellent specimen of its old-fashioned sort. But one reads it with the sense of its age strong upon him. Stevenson and Kipling have revolutionized the romance of adventure. The contemporary story-tellers are more sparing of words and, for that matter, of material, too. Folks who like good measure, however, will find "Cord and Creese" a satisfying book, the work of a story-teller who knew his business as it was practiced in his day, and who knew the world. De Mille's frequent excursions into the dead languages amuse one. He was a scholar who liked to display his scholarship.—New York Times.

Notes and Queries.

A Question in English Syntax.

I am asked to decide the following question: "Ought we to say 'Twice one are, or twice one is two?' 'Nine times two are, or is, eighteen?'"

The worst of being a referee or umpire in such cases is that the man against whom you give a decision, of course, considers you to be an idiot, and even the public are apt to say, as regards your involuntary answer, "Who made thee a ruler and a judge?"

The best course for the poor arbitrator to pursue is to back his opinion up by the best authority that he can find. This is a duty, and not the act of a sneak, as some people seem to think. The difficulty often is to be able to quote promptly the opinion of some man who is generally admitted to be an authority on the subject under discussion.

At p. 218 of "The Queen's English," by the late Henry Alford, D.D., Dean of Canterbury (Strahan, London), I find the following passage:

"We sometimes hear children made to say, 'Twice one are two.' For this there is no justification whatever. It is a plain violation of the first rules of grammar; 'twice one' not being plural at all, but strictly singular. Similarly, 'three times three are nine' is clearly wrong, and so are all such expressions; what we want to say being simply this, that the three taken three times makes up, or is equal to, nine. You may as well say, 'nine are three times three,' as 'three times three are nine.'"

What seems the difficulty with most people in understanding the case, is that they consider "times," which, of course, is plural, to be the nominative of the verb, which they accordingly make plural. But the true nominative is the phrase 'three-times-three,' or 'twice-one,' and this means that the abstract number 3 taken 3 times is equal to 9; or '3 x 3 equals 9.' In other words, the abstract number 9 is equivalent to the abstract number 3 multiplied by itself, or added to itself twice.

One of Dean Alford's opponents quotes, in an attempt to confute his assertion, the words in St. Matthew xix., 5: "And they twain shall be one flesh." Another quotes the First Epistle of John, v. 7. "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one." But surely no one in his senses can trace any analogy between these expressions, and the sentence "Twice one is two." The age of miracles is past, and it is vain to attempt to cure the blind.

Books on "Social Science."

A correspondent asks me to name the author of "Elements of Social Science," published, I believe, in the old country about ten years ago. If unable to locate this edition, I am asked to say what publication of recent date covers the question fully.

In the year 1885 Lowe published in London for half a guinea the first edition of a volume by Professor Noah Porter, entitled "Elements of Moral Science." The author is a professor at Yale College. A book entitled "Principles of Social Science," in 3 vols., price $10, written by H. C. Carey, had previously been published in Philadelphia. The list of works written on the same subject would occupy the full space of "Notes and Queries," and I can therefore mention only the names of a few of the best known authors, Professors J. A. Dorner and G. C. Harless have both published interesting works with the same title, "A System of Christian Ethics"; Frances Power Cobbe's book, "Studies of Ethical and Social Subjects," is well worth reading, while the treatises of Professor Alexander Bain, Herbert Spencer, J. S. Mill, Whately, Whewell, Professors Blackie and Laurie, Fowler, Bradley, Calderwood and Courtney—all modern writers—can easily be procured at any good library, or from a bookseller.

A Question Easily Answered.

A. S. H., of Phoenix, B.C., writes: While I was residing in Montreal I was indebted to you for two or three kindly suggestions in connection with the N. and Q. department of the Star. Will you now let me have your opinion on another little matter in which I am at variance with a friend of mine. When concluding a letter should I write it: Your's truly (with apostrophe between r and s), or Yours' truly (apostrophe after s), or Yours truly (without apostrophe)?

In answer to Mr. H.'s question, I may say positively that no apostrophe is correctly used with "hers, its, ours, yours, theirs." I take up the first book of grammar that I notice on my bookself, viz., a "Hand-Book of the English Tongue, by Dr. Joseph Angus," and I find that he divides pronouns into two classes, substractive and adjective. Of the latter class he writes as follows on p. 180: "Adjective Pronouns—a somewhat contradictory title—are so called, because they are pronouns in origin, some of them never used with a noun, and all of them sometimes used without; and because most of them are used as adjectives. They are (1) The Possessive Pronouns: his, its, mine, thine, hers, ours, yours, and theirs, etc., etc."

G. R. Carpenter in his valuable treatise on "The Principles of English Grammar," says at p. 53: "Each of the personal pronouns, except 'he' and 'it' have two possessives. The forms 'my, thy, her, our, your, and their' are used only when preceding the noun they qualify, as in 'my life,' 'your faith.' The forms 'mine, thine, hers, ours, yours, theirs,' are commonly used after the noun, as in 'the dog is mine,' 'that dog of mine.' Double possessive occur frequently with pronouns, as well as with nouns, e.g., 'a horse of his,' 'a neighbor of mine,' 'a friend of yours.'"

Mr. Carpenter explains this double possessive fully at p. 69. But all that my correspondent wishes to learn is that no apostrophe is ever found in connection with "its, hers, ours, yours, theirs."

Two Questions to Mr. A. G. Jones.

Here are two letters from obliging correspondents in answer to a question put by Mr. A. G. Jones (of Richmond, Q.), in the Star of June 23rd:

"I read Mr. A. G. Jones' query in last Saturday's Star, and I think I can throw some light on the matter. The incident to which he refers happened on the South American Coast—the exact post I forget—and the British ship was H. M. S. cruiser Calliope. A hurricane sprang up; and, as the harbor the ships were lying in was an open one, the only chance of safety was by putting out to sea, and riding through the storm. This several ships, of various nationalities, attempted; but the cruiser above-mentioned was the only one that escaped being dashed on the rocks. This happened, I think, in the '80's. The reason I remember the main facts of the case is, that this same ship, converted into a training ship, used every summer to visit the port in Scotland where I lived; so the story was well known. Passing up the Clyde about two months ago, I saw, with pain, the gallant Calliope discarded as useless by the Admiralty, in process of being broken up.

"The incident, of which your correspondent, Mr. A. G. Jones, of Richmond desires particulars, probably took place in Samoa. I cannot recollect the date, or give a full description, but I remember that some years ago there was an international incident over the German occupation of Samoa during a rebellion against the native King (Mataafa, I believe). American, German, and English warships were in the harbor, cleared for action, and trouble seemed imminet when Providence, in the shape of a cyclone, or typhoon, drove the ships from their anchorage and prevented trouble. I think this will be the affair your correspondent mentions.

MAYOR EKERS SEES NO NEED FOR HASTE

There has been quite a discussion at the City Hall over the statement published that there were certain members of the City Council who had decided not to adjourn Council till after the gas question was settled.

Speaking of this statement to-day, Mayor Ekers said: "There is no reason whatever that Council should sit every week all through the hot summer months in order to make a new contract with the Gas Company. The company's contract has yet three and a half years to run and a couple of months' delay of the matter will not make the slightest difference.

"I am as anxious as anyone that the Gas Company should decide to lower the price of gas; but I say nothing is to be gained by holding meetings of Council during the summer months in order to force the hand of the company.

"When Council adjourns in July the understanding will be that another meeting will be held one month afterwards; this should be sufficient for all purposes. It is ridiculous to think that Council will meet every week in order to please anyone."

Continuing, the Mayor said: "If aldermen call special meetings of Council, after a majority of Council are absent from the city in order to rush through the gas question, the people will not fail to disapprove of such action. I cannot believe that such meetings will be called, despite the fact that it is rumored such will be the case."

The Grocers' Association met on Thursday, M. P. Daoust presiding, when arrangements were made for the annual excursion of the association. It was also decided after considerable discussion, that certain members of the association join forces with the delegation from the larger commercial concerns to petition Parliament to amend the law for their protection against "combines." The parks continue in unabated popularity and thousands every evening find their way to the open air places of amusement. Next week will be the last of the engagement of the Fuller Stock Company, the Theatre Francais closing next Saturday night until the regular opening for next season.

THEATRE FRANCAIS.

"More to be Pitied than Scorned," will be presented at the Francais, next week, by the Fuller Stock Company. The plot is a simple one, telling in a plain straightforward manner of the many humiliations heaped upon Julian Lorraine, leading man of the Amphion Stock Company, and Viola Keith, the daughter of a clergyman, who has fallen desperately in love with and secretly married Lorraine. Two members of the same company to which Lorraine belonged, Vincent Grant and Julia Clifford, concoct a scheme to separate the lovers and produce a forged marriage certificate purporting to prove Lorraine, already a married man, and consequently a bigamist. To save her husband, Viola declares she is not married to Lorraine, and leaves him. The play, of course, ends happily. Numerous comedy scenes and specialties relieve the tension of the dramatic scenes. Matinees will be given daily. This will be the last week of the stock company. The theatre will remain closed until the opening of the regular season in August.

AT THE PARKS.

Diversity of offering is the aim of the management of the Dominion Park in presenting Morin and his French military band. This organization, though new to Montreal, enjoys great popularity in New York, where Morin has lived since 1886. The bandsmen are uniformed similarly to the Garde Republicaine Band of Paris. Morin goes in for the popular and more acceptable things in music, and yet does not slight the classical productions. It is peculiarly fitting that the engagement of this band is for July, including the 14th.

In addition to the band the attractions at the park will include De Renzo and Ladue, who will present their comedy, revolving pole act. The band programme for Monday evening is as follows:

March—"To the Fraternity".....Morin
Overture—"Joan of Arc" ..... Verdi
Celebrated Nocturne—"Monastery Bells"..... Lefebvre-Wely

Slow Waltz—"Loin du Pays"....Berger

For the coming week Riverside Park will have a strong list of vaudeville acts. Among the attractions will be

Leon Adeline and Rice, at Riverside Park next week.

Cadieux, who does clever work on the bounding wire, somersaulting and other acrobatic feats. Leon, Adeline and Rice, will introduce some comedy juggling work that is said to be out of the ordinary. Rice and Elmer, in their well-known specialty, "The Chinaman and the Rube," will have several new features for their act. The attractions on the grounds are being well patronized. The Ferris Wheel, and the Live Fox Chase are also drawing well. The children who go to the park on Saturday afternoons increase in numbers each week.

With the delightful breezes from the St. Lawrence to help along an all-round good programme, Sohmer Park is being visited by crowds of people. For the coming week attractions include the three Camaras sisters, whose acrobatic work has made them much talked about in New York. The Exposition Four will return with their musical act, which, when it was last seen in Montreal made a decided hit. Sitma Bratz, a young lady juggler, will introduce a new style of entertainment. The vocal portion of the programme will be contributed by Mlle. Cantareuil, soprano, and Jules Gagny, the tenor, who made his debut here last Monday. Lavigne's band is as popular as ever, and the introduction of the massive organ, which is played at intermission and after each performance has been appreciated.

Baby Minerva, with the Fuller Stock Company, at the Francais next week.

THE BLACK DIKE BAND.

The Black Dike Band which comes to the Arena on July 9th, has its home in Queensbury, England, half way between Halifax and Bradford. The history of the band is interesting. In 1816 bands appear to have been organized in the village of Queensbury, and Peter Pharton's Reed Band took first position,—the late Mr. John Foster being a member, and playing the French Horn,—an instrument still treasured by the family. In 1855 the band was established, being conducted by Mr. A. Owen from 1880 to 1888. Since that year Mr. John Gladney has been conductor. To them much credit is due, but the ability of Mr. Phineas Bower, who was bandmaster from 1874 to the end of 1895, during which period many notable successes were recorded, should also be mentioned. As a solo euphoium player, Mr. Bower had no superior, and he received many offers from notable English and foreign bands. His brother, Mr. H. Bower, succeeded him as bandmaster, and he is an accomplished cornet player. Mr. Ceres Jackson is the present solo cornet player, and it has been acknowledged that he is without a rival.

DOINGS OF THE PLAYERS.

Mr. Percival T. Moore arrived in Montreal last week for two months' rest before the reopening of the theatrical season, and is the guest of his sister, Mrs. A. D. Angus, 160 Metcalfe Ave. Next season Mr. Moore is to stage-manage Arnold Daly's productions and hereafter he will devote himself to producing and staging plays.

Mr. Percival T. Moore.

Henry Arthur Jones comes to America in August to superintend the rehearsals of his new play "The Hypocrites."

In Brussels, next October, Yvette Guilbert will make her first appearance as a legitimate actress. She will play the part of a woman of forty-five, in "L'Eau Trouble," a piece written especially for her by two Parisians.

The Royal Besses O' Th' Barn Band of Whitefield, near Manchester, England, will visit Montreal during its tour in America.

Robert Mantell is said to be considering for next season a production of the Mounet Sully "Oedipus," and an acting version of Isben's "Brand," which has never been professionally staged in America.

Miss Pauline Hall was thrown from a carriage last week and severely hurt.

Henry E. Dixey will be seen next year in the dramatization of Cyrus Townsend Brady's "Richard the Brazen."

When H. B. Irving opens his season in New York in October, he will have in his repertoire his adaptation, entitled "Mauricette," Stephen Phillips's two poetical plays, "Paolo and Francesca" and "The Sin of David." Also several plays of the late Sir Henry Irving's, including "Charles the First," "The Bells" and "The Lyons Mail."

Mrs. Patrick Campbell has scored a second failure this season, the new play, "The MacLean of Bairness," meeting with slight favor in London. In justice to Mrs. Campbell, it must be admitted that the Italian girl she played is said to have afforded her few opportunities.

Mrs. Julia R. Waixel, a well known accompanist and vocal coach of New York, is spending her vacation with relatives in Montreal. Mrs. Waixel has visited the different conservatories here and speaks highly of the methods and the thoroughness of the local institutions. She returns to New York in August to coach two new musical productions for Broadway theatres.

Marie Corelli is said to be contemplating a trip to America to attend rehearsals of her play, "Barrabas."

Olive Fremstadt, the prima donna, has announced her marriage to Mr. Edson Webster Sutphen. The ceremony took place in Salt Lake City last April.

Holbrook Blinn, last seen here as Napoleon in "The Duchess of Dantzig," will play David Tyrne, a cripple, in "Man and his Angel," a new society play by Stanley Dark.

Tyrone Power, who will play the star part in "Barrabas," next season, is at present at Isle-aux-Noix, Que.

Mme. Nordica and Miss Alice Nellson will be members of the San Carlo Opera Company next season.

W. A. Brady entered a lions' cage the other day and spent several minutes calling on the occupants. He was armed with a revolver, and is said to have become an amateur lion tamer, because somebody said it was dangerous.

Mr. Frank Watkis, who acted as accompanist on Mme. Albani's recent tour, and who was associated with Mme. Patti in a similar capacity, has been engaged for next season by Dr. Charles Harriss, and will be identified with the Philharmonic and the McGill Conservatorium.

Jimmy Powers will star next season in the English musical extravaganza, "The Blue Moon."

Miss Virginia Harnerd (Mrs. Sothern), who is at present in London, will star next season in "The Girl in Waiting."

Clara Lipman, who wrote "Julie Bonbon," in which she and her husband, Louis Mann, starred last season, is at work on another play, in which they will be seen next year.

"Told in the Hills," was produced in Chicago this week, with Edwin Arden in the leading role, and will run all summer.

On the road next season Raymond Hitchcock will be seen in "The Gailoper."

The divorce recently granted to Bessie Barriscole was the first intimation received by her friends of her marriage to Sumner Gard, a former member of the Proctor Stock Company here.

Amelia Summerville, "the merry little mountain maid," of Dixey's famous production of "Adonis," has been engaged by Joe Weber, to take the place of Marie Dressler.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. McLaughlin.

Paris, Ont., Wincey Mills, June 23, 1906.
Dear Sir,—Your Belt, which I purchased some four months ago, has done me a world of good. I cannot say too much in praise of it. I had only worn it a week when I found a great difference in myself. The swelling began to go out of my leg, and instead of being hard and swollen, they began to be quite natural. I only wore the Belt for three months, and I can honestly say I am a well man. Instead of hardly being able to drag myself around with swollen feet and legs, from rheumatism, I can now walk with pleasure, which I had not done in two years. I feel better in every way than I have done for years. I am so glad you persuaded me to take your best Belt. It's worth double the money to me.
You are at liberty to use this as a testimonial, with my full endorsement, and trust that it may influence some poor sufferer to try one.
Yours sincerely,
JAMES A. PEARCE.

Michel Finn was sent to gaol yesterday for two months by Judge Sicotte on a charge of loitering. Constable Kearns, who made the arrest, stated in evidence that yesterday morning between one and two o'clock he noticed three suspicious characters on Ottawa street. He went to the patrol box and called for assistance and Constable Clarkson was sent to his help. On his way Clarkson met the three men, who ran away when they saw him coming. He and Kearns gave chase and were successful in catching Finn.

MY LADY'S BOOK-SHELF.

The Small House at Allington.

There is no prettier little story in the English language than Trollope's, "The Small House at Allington." It is nothing great, nor wonderful, nor startling in any way, but the girl or woman who has not read it has missed something. It is quite one of the best of Trollope's novels and in it we get glimpses of many of the throng of characters that meander through his series of tales. And once you get on even bowing acquaintance with any of the dramatis personae, from "Plany Pall" to old Mr. Harding, you are not satisfied until you know all about them. In this way Trollope is very satisfying. He gives you novel after novel in which the same characters appear, and you can follow the freeks of fortune through half a dozen or more books.

Take "The Small House at Allington," for instance. It is safe to wager that the fair reader will become so engrossed in the love affairs of Lily Dale that she will not be satisfied until she knows whether Johnny Eames succeeds in his suit or not. And she will feel so resentful towards Crosbie for jilting Lily that she cannot but rejoice when he finds the noble De Courcy family too much for him.

It is a pretty little tale, this of the big house with the kind-hearted, stern old squire, wifeless and childless, and the little house where the squire's sister-in-law and her two daughters live happily together. All is idyllic until Adolphus Crosbie comes upon the scene. Why do we never hear of an Adolphus now, I wonder? It is a name that has disappeared entirely. Then follows the wooing of pretty Lily Dale, with her quips and cranks, and the subsequent downthrow of her happiness by her lover's heartless conduct.

It would not be fair to spoil the story for new readers (of whom, for their own sake, I hope there will be many) by telling too much of the plot. There is a small and delightful edition of Trollope's novels now being published, and all who have not read them should lay in a supply for the summer holidays. It is in this particular work that we get the first glimpse of that delightful character, Plantagenet Palliser, heir to the old Duke of Omnium, and have an amusing account of his famous flirtation with Lady Dumbello, which aroused the gossips of society. This actually went so far that he asked if he might call and the stately Lady Dumbello, who it will be remembered was the daughter of that famous Archdeacon Grantley, replied: "I always receive on Sundays." Later on, urged thereto by the gossips he murmured "Griselda! may I call you so?" and she replied "Certainly not!" and that was the total of the much-talked of affair.

Another entertaining bit is where Lady De Courcy is saying farewell to her guests. She shakes hands and makes polite speeches to Lady Julia, who passes out of the door. But unfortunately before the door is closed she turns to her daughters and remarks: "What a fool I have been to have that woman in the house." "Indeed you have," screams back Lady Julia through the passage. Then when Lady Dumbello departs she is all sweetness and graciousness, but as soon as the door closes on her she says to another guest: "Have you observed that she has not held up her head since Mr. Palliser went away?" This guest, when her turn comes, says to a daughter: "I wonder what your mamma will say of me when I go away to-morrow?"

The Nameless Terror.

In that curious book, "The Autobiography of Mark Rutherford," there is one passage that must strike a responsive chord in many hearts. It is where Mark, after leaving the Unitarian Chapel, found a situation in a private school at Stoke Newington, not far from London. He was shown to his poor, but clean quarters and crossed to the window and looked out. In the foreground were scattered lights, marking roads, which broke off where buildings had ceased. "Further off," in Marks's own words, "was the great light of London, like some unnatural dawn, or the illumination from a fire which could not itself be seen. I was overcome with the most dreadful sense of loneliness. I suppose it is the very essence of passion, using the word in its literal sense, that no account can be given of it by the reason. Reflecting on what I suffered then, I cannot find any solid ground for it, and yet there are not half a dozen days or nights of my life which remain with me like that one. I was beside myself with a kind of terror, which I cannot further explain. It is possible for another person to understand grief for the death of a friend, bodily suffering, or any emotion which has a distinct cause, but how shall he understand the worst of all calamities, the nameless dread, the efflux of all vitality, the ghostly haunting horror, which is so nearly akin to madness? . . . . . I know the causelessness of a good deal of all those panic fears, and all that suffering, but I tremble to think how thin is the floor on which we stand which separates us from the bottomless abyss."

These words only appeal to those who have gone through, and go through what the writer has. Some persons never have known this nameless horror. They may be glad they have not for of all horrors it is the worst. It is not to be confounded with fear of death. It is not that, but rather an indescribable dread of something awful, a feeling, as Mark Rutherford says, of being on a very, very thin floor that separates us from some frightful abyss. With this is combined a vivid realization of the intense loneliness of the human life. You are not lonely, you are absolutely isolated. You seem to be a mere speck of wavering flame, flickering in an inconceivable blackness. With this is a terror which grips our very soul. Any one who has been in a burning building, on a sinking ship, or in any place where death and panic reigns, knows the terror that grips the people. It is the same feeling intensified a hundredfold. So intense is it that speech and movement are paralyzed. It is this feeling that Mark Rutherford has put in words. His are wonderful books and, for those who like a thoughtful book a constant pleasure. So great has been the demand for them that a new shilling edition has just been published, an exceedingly neat little edition in dark green cloth.

Pronunciation of Knowledge.

A little story is told in the Academy of a characteristic act of Tennyson's. It was at a dinner party and one of the guests used the word "knowledge," pronouncing it in the old-fashioned way with a long "o." The poet jumped to his feet and went over to the man who had thus pronounced the word. "Let me shake hands," he exclaimed, "with the Englishman who says knowledge (with the long "o") instead of knowledge. Among the faithless, faithful only he!"

This is very like Tennyson, who had most eccentric ideas about many things. He was in the habit of reading his own poetry aloud and those who heard him say it was curious to an extreme. He would read it in a singsong manner, akin to chanting, with great emphasis on the metre. This probably accounts for the musical quality of his verse.

Advertising Extraordinary.

A very curious way of advertising has just been brought to light by a writer to one of the English weeklies. A clergyman in England received a post card beginning "Rev. Sir; I feel it my duty to bring before you an extraordinary attack that has been made upon you," and continuing by giving the name of the book, "Parsons and Pagans," concluding with the wily sentence, "Could not the law of libel be invoked?"

The recipient of this naturally bought the book and looked for the reference; page and line were given, but no mention whatsoever was made of the "reverend gentleman."

He was so indignant at the fraud that he put the matter in the hands of a lawyer, with the result that the English publishers have been exonerated and the author forced to acknowledge that he used this method of advertising, imported from America, to increase the sale of his book. It now turns out that clergymen all over the country have been receiving similar postcards and consequently buying the book. It is certainly ingenious but decidedly unpleasant.

A PERFECT WOMAN.

I doubt if she said to you much that could act
As a thought or suggestion; she did not attract
In the sense of the brilliant or wise. I infer
'Twas her thinking of others made you think of her.
—Mrs. Browning.

—Design by May Manton.

5381 Fancy Blouse Waist. 5334 Seven Gored Skirt.

THE NEW FOULARD RADIANT.

Nothing makes more comfortable or more fashionable afternoon gowns for summer wear than the new silk known as foulard radiant. This one is woven in one of the pretty checks that are so attractive and is combined with a chemisette of tucked muslin and trimming of lace and of black velvet ribbon, which serves to give character to the whole. The blouse is a favorite one of the season and is tucked for its entire length at the back, to yoke depth at the front, the epaulette-like trimming being arranged over the shoulders. The skirt is seven-gored, laid in tucks at the centre front and centre back that are turned toward the centre, while it is plain over the hips.

For a woman of medium size, the blouse will require 3 3-4 yards of material 21, 3 1-4 yards 27 or 1 7-8 yards 44 inches wide with 5-8 yard of tucking for the chemisette and 4 yards of lace; for the skirt 7 3-4 yards 27, or 5 1-4 yards 44 inches wide if material has figure or nap, 6 1-2 yards 27 or 4 1-2 yards 44 inches wide if it has not.

The May Manton pattern of the waist, No. 5381, sizes 34 to 40 inches bust, or of the skirt, No. 5334, sizes 22 to 32 inches waist, will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper on receipt of ten cents for each.

LEAVES FROM A NOTE-BOOK.

Vegetarians Rejoice.

There is one class to whom all this agitation about the meat question has brought profound joy, and that is the vegetarians. It has probably done more to encourage the growth of vegetarianism that anything since the inauguration of the movement. For not only have the horrible disclosures about packed meats put people off buying canned goods, but have raised a disinclination to have anything at all to do with meat in any shape or form. And so they turn to fruit and vegetables. Certainly in hot weather these articles of diet are much more tempting than meat, although a great many persons cannot get along without some animal food. But it is well to have as little as possible during the summer months. Give up the chops and steaks at breakfast and have simply an egg or a slice or two of bacon.

Speaking of bacon, this agitation ought to help the manufacture of our bacon, which is infinitely superior to the American product. Many housekeepers, desiring something very fine, buy the imported American bacon in cans or glass, but it does not begin to compare in flavor with the home product. Good Canadian bacon, kept in a cool place, and very thinly sliced, is equal to the best English bacon. The trouble is so many cooks do not know how to cook bacon. It should be very cold when sliced, sliced very thin, and cooked quickly and not too long in a pretty hot pan.

Another article of diet helped on by the anti-meat agitation is eggs. With a great many persons eggs take the place of meat. Eggs in some shape or form make a delicious lunch for the hot weather. It is not difficult for the ingenious housekeeper to find many ways of varying the family menu without a great amount of meat. But meat must be used, and there is no use in arousing unpleasant queries about our food etc. to a good butcher and one whom you know to be cleanly in his way of keeping meat; then wash all meat before cooking and eat it with a clear mind. Anyone who persists in talking "The Jungle" at meal times should be banished to solitary confinement!

A Suggestion for Our Motorists.

The other day in New York the Motor Club took twelve hundred orphans for a spin down to Coney Island. What a gay sight that must have been! Twelve hundred poor children being treated to one of the most wholesome pleasures of the rich.

Would we had enough motors in Montreal to do the same. But perhaps we have. The motors are increasing every day, and our orphan asylums are not so large as those of New York. It would be a pretty sight to see a string of automobiles taking a crowd of children, say, out to Ste. Anne's and back.

While on the subject it has often occurred to the Note-Book what a pleasant charity it would be for the owners of motors to take bed-ridden or helplessly lame persons for a ride occasionally. There are so many, many persons in a big city who have little or no pleasure. And very often they are just of that particular class to whom it is impossible to offer charity. Impossible to offer charity, but not impossible to offer kindnesses.

Do the rich think of their poorer brothers and sisters as much as they should? True, they give generously to all sorts of charities, but there are many little personal kindnesses which can only be done individually. Such golden deeds bring not only pleasure to the recipient, but profit to the giver. Try it and see!

PRACTICAL FASHIONS

Pink and Blue Garden Hats.

There are certain touches in garden party hats really enchanting. Imagine a rose-pink, wide-brimmed straw of the chip order, having three white grass cloth or sheerest of pineapple cloth shaped brims overlapping each other, and each one protruding the width of its stitched edge over the pink straw brim. An enormously large pink rose, with a twist of soft wide chiffon satin ribbon to match was drawn loosely about the crown of the hat, and tied in a wide long-looped bow at the back. This bow was wired to keep its cross lines intact, while short ends cut straight across took away any possible stiffness. Pink and blue straw hats are often hidden under the most beautiful lingerie laces, so that they only show the faintest trace of color, if any at all, upon the outside. It is the becoming reflection of the under straw brim that tells in this particular style.

Rag Carpets.

A craze for rag carpets has lately taken hold of those who spend their time in searching out old fashioned furnishings. In the really old rag carpets the colors were all jumbled together, but those now in style have effects both wide and narrow of stripes, and the colors are placed to give an effect in harmony rather than the crude effect which characterized the old.

Many woman save silk scraps and have them woven into silk portieres, the same weave as that employed for rag carpets. These can be made quite pretty and wear practically forever.

Old-Fashioned Chairs.

Another old style that is being revived is the liking for hemp-bottom or Shaker chairs.

Whether it is that there is nothing authentic left in the antique line that these kitchen furnishings are elevated to a place in living rooms and porch, or that some persons do really see lines of grace in their little peg legs is not decided, but the fact remains that are being much sought for.

Woman's Standby.

There is nothing which gives a woman so much real service as a coat and skirt suit. For the summer the rule is a jacket or short bolero worn over a silk or washing waist. The embroidered blouses of fine lawn and linen are to be even more in favor than they were last year, while for more practical purposes the tucked baste and linen ones will be a necessary part of all well-furnished wardrobes. It is a fashion that has much to recommend it for summer as well as for spring. A woman always looks cool and fresh in a wash blouse, and in its very nature it allows for all difference of taste and income. The hand-embroidered blouses will be worn by women to whom expense is not an important consideration, and by those who are clever and forehanded enough to make them for their own use. For the woman who must buy hers ready-made there are many bargains to be found in the shops, and very satisfactory ones, too, although for truth's sake it must be said that these never give the same effect as the hand-made waists.

Hot Weather Negligees.

Never before since fashion became matter of historical record have so many exquisite designs for negligees been seen as are exhibited this spring. The fad for lingerie effects in blouses has extended itself to these daintiest of women's garments and for morning wear at home and for the afternoon siesta there are combinations of eyelet embroidery, batiste, linen lawn and silk that are most enticing. The word is used advisedly, for where is the woman who can resist such exquisite daintiness and fluffiness, even though she know that a good serviceable walking skirt and a pair of stout boots are more needed in her outfit? She must indeed be made with iron will to pass by these dreams of gowns.

For summer breakfast gowns these designs include a skirt of lawn or thin silk with elaborate flouncings and a jacket of some soft, loose flowing shape to wear above. The jacket is usually cut a little low at the neck for comfort, and has almost always elbow sleeves. It may be cut with long lines or in the Empire style in some of its various modifications, but it has invariably lace ruffles and ribbons of silk, gauze, or velvet.

Old pieces of heirloom English eyelet embroidery in the shape of turn-down collars or undersleeves may be utilized on such jackets to great advantage. In fact, with a pretty design to copy a clever woman may make for herself a charming breakfast jacket out of a few yards of left-over organdie or lawn and some lace which has been taken from a worn-out gown.

IN OUR LIGHTER MOMENTS

"Maggie is at work on her trousseau."

"Is she? What does Jack think about it?"

"Oh, she thinks she can see him again in six or seven weeks."

A lady who recently bought a dinner service of fifty-four pieces, for five dollars, was informed shortly afterwards by her housemaid that the bargain had become still more wonderful for it now consisted of one thousand, one hundred and seventeen pieces!

A story is told of Franklin that once when he was dining with the English and French embassadors, the former proposed "England—the sun whose bright beams enlighten and fructify the remotest corners of the earth. The Frenchman followed by "France—whose mild, steady and cheering rays are the delight of all nations." Franklin was not to be outdone and he immediately rose to the occasion with "George Washington—the Joshua who commanded the sun and moon to stand still—and they obeyed."

One's better half is sometimes the whole thing.

The best man at a wedding is so called because he's the best off.

No matter how fat a woman may be she will jump at conclusions.

Some women are mind readers, but nearly all are mind speakers.

The man who doesn't square up his bills gets rounded up by his creditors.

Many of us spend our time dreaming of a marble pile when we should be doing up the wood pile.

Rich or Poor?

Only a string of cold white pearls,
Or diamond drops, like frozen tears,
Has clasped my lady's slender neck
Through all the barren empty years.

Only wee, warm, white baby arms
Have clasped my neck thro' the sweet years:
Yet she is rich and I am poor—
Or so it to the world appears!
—Marie Hedderwick Browne.

Advice to the Husbands.

The late Susan B. Anthony once attended a wedding in Rochester, and at the reception she said to the bridegroom: "If you want this marriage to be a happy one, you must be as kind and tender always as you are now. I once knew a young couple whose marriage had not turned out as happily as it should have done. The wife said to the husband one evening:

"'Before we were married, dear, you were always giving me presents. Why do you never give me any now?'

"'My love,' the husband replied, 'did you ever hear of a fisherman giving bait to a fish he had caught?'"

Upon his termination.

Cryptogamous concretion never grows
On mineral fragments that decline repose.

Whilst self-inspection it neglects,

Beautiful and dainty as these garments look in a show-window, they are not necessarily beyond the reach of an ambitious woman, who has some ingenuity.

Mr. Wm. St. Pierre, one of Montreal's leading tailors, has returned from New York, where he spent a week looking up advance styles for fall. While there also he secured the services of a first-class skirt cutter, fitter and designer. This lady was brought from London several years ago by Redfern & Co., New York. Since that time she has had connection with many of the leading New York ladies' tailoring establishments, including six years with Redfern & Co., three years with Gunther, two years with Haverhald & Francis, 5th avenue, and four years with Silverman.

POEMS WORTH REMEMBERING.

The Fatherland.

Where is the true man's fatherland?
Is it where he by chance is born?
Doth not the yearning spirit scorn
In such scant borders to be spanned?
O yes! his fatherland must be
As the blue heavens wide and free!

Is it alone where freedom is,
Where God is God and man is man?
Doth he not claim a broader span
For the soul's love of home than this?
O yes! his fatherland must be
As the blue heavens wide and free!

Where'er a human heart doth wear
Joy's myrtle-wreath or sorrow's gyves,
Where'er a human spirit strives
After a life more true and fair,
There is the true man's birthplace grand,
His is a world-wide fatherland!

Where'er a single slave doth pine,
Where'er one man may help another—
Thank God for such a birthplace, brother!—
That spot of earth is thine and mine!
There is the true man's birthplace grand,
His is a world-wide fatherland!

New Recipe for Trout.

The trout may be split open, laid in a roasting pan, and lightly buttered; then they are to be quickly cooked under a cover for about fifteen minutes in a hot oven, or till the flesh shows that it is really done, but not browned. A cup of hot water mixed with a tablespoonful of butter, half a teaspoonful of salt, and a saltspoonful of cayenne is to be kept hot and the fish basted three times as they cook. When done they are to be folded together again, the gravy well drained from them, and set to cool. A half box of gelatine is to be dissolved in a cup of cold water and a pint of clear veal or chicken stock, not too strong, heated. When it boils it is to be poured over the gelatine and seasoned, then stirred till clear and strained again through flannel. If the stock does not seem transparent when first put on, break up an egg shell and mix it with the unbeaten white, and stir it in and let it boil up for a moment; this clarifies it. Pour this over the fish after it becomes cool, and set it on ice. When firm, turn out on a plater and garnish with watercress and lemon. It is best to use a very shallow pan in setting the aspic so the fish may be barely covered.

Crab Meat and Mushrooms.

Another delicious dish is a combination of crab meat and mushrooms. To prepare it take a large cup of crab meat, tinned or fresh, and an equal amount of fresh mushrooms, peeled and cut into bits. Put a slice of onion, chopped very fine, into a saucepan, and cook with a tablespoonful of butter; just before it begins to brown add a tablespoonful of flour, and then a cup of cream, put in slowly as it is stirred. When smooth and thick add the mashed yolks of four hard-boiled eggs, salt, paprika, and lemon juice to taste, and then the crabs and mushrooms. When all is blended well and the mixture rather thick, fill the crab shells with it, cover the tops with fine crumbs and bits of butter, and just brown in a very hot oven. Serve with lemon quarters.

Whitebait.

Whitebait are a delicious little fish and one that makes a pleasant variety at a dinner. They should be well washed and dried a few at a time between the folds of a towel. Roll in flour, toss on a sieve to remove superfluous flour, and fry at once in deep fat. Use a basket having a single layer of fish on the bottom. Fry no longer than a minute to a delicate amber color, turn on soft paper to drain, sprinkle with salt, and keep hot in the oven until all are fried. Serve the fish between the folds of a hot napkin. Pass with them slices of lemon or sauce tartare.

Braised Fowl.

The length of time fowls should be cooked depends upon the age. A fowl one year old requires from one to three hours in cooking. Draw, singe and truss the fowl as for roasting. Saute on all sides in a frying pan containing about two tablespoonfuls each olive oil and butter, or butter and bacon or salt pork fat. Add half a cup of sherry wine—this may be omitted—a pint of broth, chicken, veal or beef, a sliced carrot and onion, two or three sprigs of parsley, and sweet herbs at discretion. Heat to the boiling point, then cover and set into the oven. When cooked, strain the liquid, remove the fat, and thicken with flour and butter cooked together. A little tomato puree may be added to the sauce if desired. The sauce may be poured over the fowl or served apart.

IN THE LIGHTER VEIN.

With the Children.

Children dear, are you all kind to your cats? So many, many houses have cats and so many, many persons are not kind to their cats. Very often they do not mean to be unkind but are just thoughtless. In the first place they often do not give poor pussy enough to eat. When you see a cat with its sides very flat and hollow you know it is not well fed. Some foolish people think that cats must have nothing but milk. You might just as well try to feed a boy or girl on nothing but milk as a cat. They should have meat every day, meat cut up in nice little bits. And they love fish. There is one house in this city where the fishman comes every few days and leaves a nice bit of cod just for pussy. It only costs a little and pussy just loves it.

And do you ever pull the cat's tail? I hope no child whose mother reads this to them ever pulls a cat's tail or ill-treats it in any way. The other day in Canada a boy caught poor pussy and tied some paper to its tail and set fire know what happened. The cat ran into the barn and the hay caught fire and the little boy running in after the cat was burnt to death. If this little boy had not been so wicked he would be alive in this beautiful world to-day.

When you go away for the summer you should either take pussy with you in a basket or arrange for some friend to look after him. It is dreadful in the city in the summer to see all the poor half-starved cats whose owners are away having a good time in the country. Try, dear children, to think of all God's dumb creatures as little brothers or sisters of yours whom you

AS DONE IN LONDON.

A Chicagoan when in London recently noticed the signs "keep to the left" on street corners, and as this admonition was exactly opposite to the rule generally observed here he was naturally interested. He accosted a policeman on crossing duty, saying: "Officer, may I ask why in London everything goes to the left?" The bobby stared at him for a moment, raised his hand to stop a cab, and said: "Why the dickens shouldn't it?" Mr. Lakeside grinned his approval of the retort as he handed over "the price" and walked away.

SOME STREETS WILL BE REPAIRED

Finance Committee Decides to Ask Council for Money for Urgent Cases.

SHORT PURSE STILL THE CRY.

Special Committee Appointed to Deal With Problem of Duplicate Street Names.

When the Finance Committee met yesterday afternoon the question of street repairs was brought up.

It was shown there were a large number of streets in the city that needed repairing in the very worst way. In this connection a report was read from the Roads Committee asking that the sum of $100,000 be voted to make the most urgent repairs. It was shown, in the report, that the streets in Point St. Charles, and in other wards, were in very bad repair.

The committee admitted that the streets needed repairing, but it was pointed out that the civic funds were quite inadequate to the demands made upon them.

It was finally decided to report to council, asking that money be voted to make repairs to streets that were in very bad state of repair.

CHANGES IN STREET NAMES.

There was some discussion in regard to the changing of a number of street names. It was pointed out that owing to the annexation of St. Cunegonde and St. Henry wards, there were, at the present time, many streets in Montreal that bore the same names. In order to avoid confusion considerable changes would have to be made.

The committee decided to appoint a sub-committee to inquire into the matter and report.

AMHERST ST. EXPROPRIATION.

Mr. Pelletier, city comptroller, reported to the committee that he had been informed by the civic law department, that the contestation of Mr. William Clarke, in the Amherst street expropriation case, had been thrown out by the courts and that he should therefore make the deposit of the indemnity, namely, $29,797. The total amount voted in connection with this expropriation was $198,000, and of that amount $174,377 had already been paid. There was thus an available balance of $23,623 and in order to pay the indemnity due to Mr. Clark, they would need an additional vote of $6,174. The committee decided to make a report to council recommending that the money be voted, the balance required being varied from the appropriation for the expropriation of Lafontaine Park.

Fresh Air "Day Dreams."

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—Most of us have, or have had, our day dreams. I have had mine. I was working in a sweat shop in London, Eng., when only 11 years old. Oh! how I yearned for the country, the clear sunshine and the trees! I still remember my first visit to Epping Forest. I hid on the master, for fear of the dread city. I never went back.

I am only a common workman (out of a job at that), but if God ever gives me the handling of wealth, I will see to the poor youngsters and weary mothers of the factories. My own mother died at a loom in Athlone factory. I only wish that every word of mine brought you in a ten spot for your Fresh Air Fund.

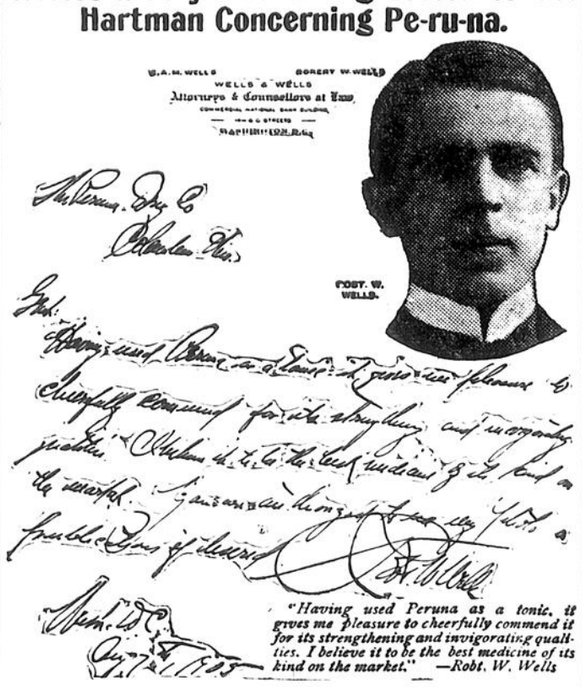
A PROMINENT ATTORNEY

Writes a Very Interesting Letter to Dr. Hartman Concerning Pe-ru-na.



"Having used Peruna as a tonic, it gives me pleasure to cheerfully commend it for its strengthening and invigorating qualities. I believe it to be the best medicine of its kind on the market." —Robt. W. Wells

The above Testimonial Was Written by Hon. Robt. W. Wells, Attorney, Member of the Maryland House of Delegates Since 1902, and a Member of the Bar U.S. Supreme Court and Maryland Courts.

WHAT IS A TONIC?

A tonic is a medicine that increases the appetite, increases the digestion, increases the power of the system to assimilate and appropriate food.

This is the action of all true tonics.

To be sure there are tonics that are simply stimulants. They irritate the stomach, and an unnatural craving for food is excited. This class of medicines should be classed as stimulants rather than tonics.

A tonic, as above stated, quickens all the functions of digestion. It invigorates the body by furnishing more force for the body.

The action of true tonics is not temporary, but lasting.

The lassitude which warm weather brings is due to an under-supply of nutrition for the body. Plenty of food may be on the table, but the food is not relished, or else is not digested.

Slight catarrhal derangements of the stomach and bowels will so effectually interfere with digestion as to produce great depression of the system.

Where there is a need for regulation or invigoration of the digestive organs, a short course of Peruna will generally produce the desired results.

Mr. Chas. Brown, Rogersville, Tenn., writes:

"I feel it my duty to write you a few words in praise of your Peruna.

"I have tried many different remedies, but have found that Peruna is the greatest tonic on earth, and a perfect system builder.

"A friend advised me to take Peruna for indigestion, and it cured me in a short time.

"I was very weak and nervous, could sleep but little at night but Peruna cured that tired, all-gone feeling, and made me feel like a new man, so I heartily recommend it to all who are weak and run down. It will give new life and energy.

"I cannot speak too highly of Peruna, and will not forget to recommend it on every hand. I will answer any letter from those desiring to know what Peruna has done for me."

WILL VISIT SHRINE.

No Regular Pilgrimage, but Many Afflicted are Coming.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Boston, Mass., June 30.—In spite of the success of the excursion of pilgrims from New England last year, when nearly four hundred went to Ste. Anne de Beaupre from this district under the care of Rev. Father Sanders, of Somerville, Mass., there will be no regularly organized pilgrimage this year. Father Sanders made this announcement yesterday, but it was reported at the railway offices here that a big excursion would be run from Portland for the feast on July 26. Applications from hundreds of cripples and people afflicted with diseases are pouring in from all points in New England, from New York, from Philadelphia and from Boston. It is probable that over six hundred will go from this district for the healing powers of the shrine are more widely known and believed in throughout New England than ever before, on account of the record number of cures recorded among them last year.

Arrested American Poachers.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Brockville, June 30.—At the point of the revolver, Fishery Inspector Fraser made a capture of poachers above Brockville. He was up the river in his motor boat and on the south side of Grenadier Island he came on two men with a boat load of minnows and a lot of nets. They were getting them for bait. The strangers hailed from Alexandria Bay, N.Y., and when the Inspector proceeded to confiscate the outfit, including the boat, the Americans showed fight, but Fraser drew and the trouble was all over.

CANADA ROUNDING OUT HER FOURTH DECADE AS A CONFEDERATION

On Monday, Canada celebrates the fortieth Dominion Day, the beginning of the fortieth year since the Confederation of the provinces to form the Canadian Dominion.

The thirty-nine years have passed since that first of July when the union which had so long been the dearest dream of the greatest statesmen this country has ever known became a glorious reality and the birth of the Dominion was announced to the world. Now the fortieth year begins, and it promises to merely continue the work of the thirty-nine preceding ones and to witness the same progress and prosperity in the country.

The country is at peace, her manufactures are being rapidly developed, every day almost sees new additions to the total of the lands under cultivation, immigration is larger than ever before, new railways are in course of construction, and those already in operation are doing more and more business every day. Everything betokens progress.

Nor is this progress entirely a material one. Fine systems of public schools and many institutions of higher learning have raised the standard of culture to a very high pitch, and the ordinary Canadian now enjoys a breadth of knowledge and intellectual developement such as fell only to the lot of the particularly fortunate in the years before the union.

In view, therefore, of this wonderful progress in every department of national life, so much of which is to be attributed to the confederation which made of the separate and often rival provinces, members of one family and brothers in their mother's house, the fortieth Dominion Day has a special claim to the attention of Canadians and deserves to be celebrated in a signal manner.

ROOTS OF CONFEDERATION STRETCH BACK FOR MORE THAN CENTURY.

Though Confederation was finally accomplished only on the 1st of July, 1867, the story of the movement for a closer union between the different Canadian provinces goes very far back into the history of the country. It very early became apparent to those who gave thought to the subject that the spirit of disorganization and even hostility that prevailed among the different governments that then held sway in this country would have the effect of weakening and dissipating their energies and so leave them open to the enemies that might arise. They realized that in union is strength and they made practical application to the old principle by various attempts to put on foot such a movement. The difficulties in the way of the project in the beginning were enormous and seemed well nigh insuperable. But the movement slowly gathered force as it became more and more clear to the people of the country that in it lay their only salvation, until finally, on the 1st of July, 1867, was accomplished the great union or confederation, whose fortieth year of life begins to-morrow.

EARLY PROPOSALS.

As one retraces the many steps that at last led up to this happy consummation, the first intimation of the scheme is found in the proposal of General Francis Nicholson to unite all the Anglo-American colonies. This wise and farseeing project was still rather premature and was soon forgotten. In 1754, however, Pownal, Hutchinson and Benjamin Franklin made the same proposition. Such a plan was only what might have been expected from a man of Franklin's invariable foresight and good sense; but it was not yet time. Soon after this came the conquest of Canada by the British. William Smith, who afterwards became Chief Justice of Quebec, also suggested a plan of union of all the British possessions in North America in 1775, but at that time the long brewing trouble between the Mother Country and her thirteen colonies to the south broke out into open rebellion and Smith was forced to leave the revolting colonies and to come to Canada. After the independence of these colonies had been recognized, a plan of union for the remaining British possessions was brought forward by a certain Colonel Morse and not long afterwards the question was raised in the Legislature of Nova Scotia. The matter began to attract general interest and pamphlets on the subject began to appear and speeches in its favor were made in all parts of the country.

Finally, in 1837, a resolution in favor of the idea was passed by the Imperial Parliament, and a year later it was recommended by the Upper Canada Assembly and Council. Lord Durham, in his report in 1839, spoke strongly in favor of it as a solution of the difficulties which beset the provinces at that time. On military grounds it was urgently advised by Major Robinson and Captain Henderson in their report on the Intercolonial Railway, in 1848, while in 1849 the Legislative Council of Canada advocated union in an address. Two years

Lord Lisgar.

Sir John Young, Baron Lisgar, was the second Governor-General of Canada. He was born at Bombay on August the 31st, 1807. He was educated at Eton and Oxford, graduating in 1829. He was called to the Bar in 1834, and about the same time began to take quite a prominent part in politics. In 1844 he was named one of the secretaries of the Treasury. In 1852 he was made Chief Secretary for Ireland, and was nominated to the Privy Council. He resigned the Irish Secretaryship in 1855 for the position of Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Isles. He was succeeded in this position by Gladstone. In 1861 he was named Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief of New South Wales in succession to Sir William Denison. In 1869 he was appointed Governor-General of Canada and Governor of Prince Edward Island, which, at that time, was not yet in the union. Resigning in 1872, he returned to Ireland, leaving behind him in Canada a reputation for ability and sound judgment. He died in 1876.

lectures in favor of the projected union, newspapers in every part of the country came out with strong editorials in its favor, and the trend of popular opinion was distinctly propitious.

FAVORING INFLUENCES.

The movement was also greatly assisted by the policy of the American government at that time, which seemed to regard the British colonies with decided hostility. This feeling was expressed in the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty and in the toleration of the Fenian raids later on. The close of the Civil War left in the United States multitudes of men trained in the use or arms and in military skill by the experiences of the war who were without employment and who would have been glad of an opportunity to continue the life of excitement and adventure to which they had become accustomed. This state of affairs naturally made Canadians think seriously of the position in which this country would be placed in the event of active hostilities between the two countries and made them realize that their condition of disunion would have made their position a very hazardous one. In this way external pressure had a great influence in fostering the closer union of the provinces. Nor should the kindly help, advice and co-operation of the Mother Country be forgotten. Everything possible was done by the Imperial Government to encourage the movement which British statesmen saw would do so much for the progress of the country.

CHARLOTTETOWN CONFERENCE.

In the Maritime Provinces the first practical application of the principle came in the form of a proposed local union. In 1864 delegates from these provinces met at Charlottetown, P. E. I., to consider a Maritime Union. Delegates from Canada also appeared and applied for permission to discuss the larger union which was finally accomplished. From this meeting, known in history as the Charlottetown Conference, the movement really took shape. In bringing this about Sir Charles Tupper took a very prominent part and his name stands foremost among the "Fathers of Confederation," and second only to that of Sir John A. Macdonald in the glory of its accomplishment. After these names come the names of Hon. George Brown, Sir George Cartier, and Sir Leonard Tilley as men who were prime movers for Confederation and to whose unremitting endeavors and broad statesmanship its successful issue is to be largely attributed.

The result of the Charlottetown Conference was that delegates from all the provinces of British North America met at Quebec on October the 10th, 1864, to consider the question of confederation. Even Newfoundland sent its representatives, Sir F. B. Carter and Sir Ambrose Shea. The delegates of Prince Edward Island were: Colonel Gray, Hon. E. Palmer, Hon. W. H. Hope, Hon. George Coles, Hon. T. H. Haviland, Hon. E. Whelan, and Hon. A. A. Macdonald. From the other provinces came the following delegates, who are commonly called the "Fathers of Confederation," because the seventy resolutions which they drew up practically constituted the British North America Act of 1867, so far as the terms and conditions of that measupre are concerned:

From Canada— Hon. Sir Etienne P. Tache, Hon. John A. Macdonald, Hon. George E. Cartier, Hon. W. McDougall, Hon. George Brown, Hon. Alexander T. Galt, Hon. Alexander Campbell, Hon. Oliver Mowat, Hon. H. L. Langevin, Hon. T. D'Arcy McGee, Hon. James Cockburn, and Hon. J. C. Chapais.

From Nova Scotia—Hon. Charles Tupper, Hon. W. A. Henry, Hon. Jonathan McCully, Hon. Adams G. Archibald, Hon. R. B. Dickey.

From New Brunswick—Hon. Samuel Leonard Tilley, Hon. John M. Johnston, Hon. Peter Mitchell, Hon. Charles Fisher, Hon. E. B. Chandler, Hon. W. H. Stevens, Hon. John Hamilton Gray.

Lord Monck.

The first Governor-General of Canada was Charles Stanley, fourth Viscount Monck. He was born in October, 1819. In 1844 he married his cousin, Lady Elizabeth, Louise Mary Monck, daughter of the Earl of Rathdowne. In 1861 he was appointed Governor of the Province of Canada and of the other British possessions in North America. He soon established a high reputation in Canada for his ability and broad statesmanship, and did much for the cause of confederation. When its was finally accomplished, he was named the first Governor-General of the new Dominion. He retired, however, in 1868. From 1874 to 1892 he was Lord Lieutenant and Custos Roticlorum at Dublin. He was also Commissioner of Church Temporalities in Ireland. He died on the 29th of November, 1894.

afterwards a meeting was held in this city, attended by Hon. John A. Macdonald, at which a favorable resolution was passed. In the same year Hon. W. Hamilton Merritt proposed in the Legislature of United Canada that a convention of fifty persons should be called to frame a constitution.

PASSES THEORETIC STAGE.

It will be seen from this that the question was rapidly passing the theoretic stage and was being practically considered with regard to the means by which it might be brought about. About this time Hon. J. W. Johnston, Conservative leader in Nova Scotia, advocated union in that Legislature, while the Hon. J. H. Gray did the same in the Legislature of New Brunswick. In 1857, at the instance of the government of Nova Scotia, the Hon. J. W. Johnston and the Hon. A. G. Archibald pressed the policy upon the attention of the Colonial Secretary. In the next year the Governor-General, Sir E. W. Head, in his speech at the close of the session of the Legislature of Canada, offered to communicate with the different governments concerned; and shortly after Hon. G. E. Cartier, Hon. John Ross, and Hon. A. T. Galt were sent to England to propose that the Imperial Government should appoint delegates from all the provinces to discuss the question. The movement for union was at this time an almost irresistible tide and it was now clear that it was only a question of time. The most important men in political life were everywhere giving

HOW THE QUEBEC CONFERENCE GRAPPLED WITH ITS PROBLEMS.

The debates which were held during the sessions of the Quebec Conference may be justly regarded as among the most important ever held in this country in view of the important bearing of their conclusions upon the fortunes of the whole Dominion. The conference assembled on the 10th of October, and continued to sit until the 28th of that month. The sessions were held within closed doors. Furthermore, no official report of the proceedings was ever published. Some of the members, however, took very copious notes of the discussions, and these memoranda were afterwards fashioned into a report and published by Colonel Bernard. Sir John A. Macdonald also left among his papers a very complete account of the happenings at the conference. By this means one is enabled to follow the discussions from day to day, and to trace the process by which the form of each proposition was developed, and so get a fairly complete and accurate notion of what took place at this gathering which was destined to have such a great effect on Canadian political life.

At the opening of the conference, Sir Etienne Tache, the Premier of Canada, was chosen as chairman of the assembly. His election was a unanimous one. Major Hewitt Bernard was named executive secretary and the Provincial Secretaries of the different provinces were appointed joint secretaries.

The order of proceedings was then discussed, and after somewhat lengthy

The Marquis of Lorne.

John Douglas Sutherland Campbell, P.C., etc., was the fourth Governor-General since Confederation. He was born at Stafford House, London, August 6th 1845. On the 21st of March, 1871, he was married to Her Royal Highness Princess Louise. On the 25th of June, 1878, he was chosen to be the successor of Lord Dufferin as Governor-General of Canada, which appointment was a most popular one. During his career he was one of Her Majesty's State Counsellors for Scotland; Lord-Lieutenant, and hereditary sheriff of the county of Argyll; Chancellor of the University of St. Andrews and a trustee of the British Museum.

debates it was resolved on the second day that on all questions except those of order, each province should have one vote, and that Canada should be considered as two provinces, although Upper and Lower Canada were at that time united.

After the method of procedure had been decided upon a general resolution in favor of union was proposed and adopted. The resolution was to the effect that "the best interests and present and future prosperity of British North America will be promoted by a federal union under the Crown of Great Britain, provided such union can be effected on principles just to the several provinces.

SIR JOHN MACDONALD'S PROPOSALS.

It was moved by Sir John Macdonald. In proposing it he spoke at some length. The time had come for union, he declared, and if this opportunity were let slip the scheme might as well be abandoned in despair. "Canada cannot remain as she is at present," he continued, "and if we come to no decision here we Canadians must address ourselves to the alternative, and reconstruct our government. Once driven to that it will be too late for a general federation. We cannot, having brought our people to accept a Canadian federation, propose to them the question of a larger union. It is stated that in England federation will be regarded as showing a desire for independence. I believe the people of England are strongly bent on keeping up her position as a mighty Empire, and this can be done only by helping her colonies. Goldwin Smith, the Manchester school, and the Times to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sir John then proceeded to show the advantages to Canada as well as the Mother Country which would follow from the union of the provinces. "The colonial question," he said, "has never been fairly represented to the people of England. The British North American colonies are not so profitable as Australia from a money point of view, but if we were organized as a confederacy our increased importance would soon become manifest. Our present isolated and defenceless position is no doubt a source of embarrassment to England. We must, therefore, become important, not only to England, but in the eyes of foreign states, and especially of the United States. For the sake of securing peace to ourselves and to our posterity we must make ourselves powerful. The great security for peace is to convince the world of our strength by being united."

STRONG CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

He then made suggestions for the constitution of this confederacy. "In framing the constitution care should be taken to avoid the mistakes and weaknesses of the United States system, the primary error of which was the reservation to the different states

The Marquis of Dufferin.

Sir Frederick-Temple Hamilton-Temple-Blackwood, Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, third Governor-General of Canada, was born June 21, 1826, and was united in marriage to Harriot Georgina, eldest daughter of Archibald Rowan Hamilton, Esq., on the 23rd of October, 1862. From 1864 to 1866, he was Under Secretary of State for India. In 1866 he was appointed Under Secretary of War. He was Paymaster-General and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster from 1869 to 1872. He was then appointed Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, which position he occupied from 1872 to 1878. From 1879 to 1881 he was ambassador to St. Petersburg, and occupied the same post at Constantinople from 1881 to 1884. From 1884 to 1888 he was Viceroy of India. He was Ambassador Extra and Plenipotentiary to the King of Italy from 1888 to 1891, and was appointed Ambassador Extra and Plenipotentiary to the French Republic in 1891. He also occupied the position of Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports from 1891 to 1898.

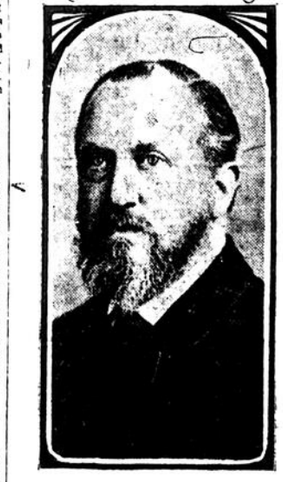
The Marquis of Lansdowne was Canada's fifth Governor-General. This nobleman, the fifth of the name, was born in January, 1845, and was the eldest son of the fourth Marquis by a second marriage, with a daughter of the Comte de Flahault. He succeeded his father to the title in 1866. In 1869 he married Lady Maud Evelyn Hamilton, daughter of the Earl of Abercorn. The Marquis of Lansdowne has held many high diplomatic and political positions. He was Lord of the Treasury from 1869 to 1872; Under Secretary for War from 1872 to 1874; Under Secretary for India, 1880; Governor-General of India from 1888 to 1893; and Secretary for War from 1895 to 1900. He was Governor-General of Canada from 1883 to 1888. His ancestral estate is one of the finest in Great Britain, comprising 143,000 acres.

of all the powers not delegated to the general government. We must reverse this process by establishing a strong central government, to which shall belong all powers not specially conferred on the provinces. Canada, in my opinion, is better off as she stands even now than she would be as a member of a confederacy composed of five sovereign states; and this would be the result if the powers of the local government were not defined. A strong central government is indispensable to the success of the experiment we are trying. Under it we shall be able to work out a system having for its basis constitutional liberty, as opposed to democratic license. With the Queen as our sovereign we should have an Upper and Lower House. In the former the principle of provincial equality should obtain—the Confederacy for this purpose consisting of three divisions, Upper Canada, Lower Canada and the Maritime Provinces. In the Lower House the basis of the representation should be population, not by universal sufrage, but according to the principles of the British constitution. With respect to the mode of appointment to the Upper House some of us are in favor of the elective system, more are in favor of appointment by the Crown. While I do not admit that the elective system has been a failure in Canada, I think that we had better return to the original principle, and, in the words of Governor Simcoe, endeavor to make ours an image and transcript of the British Constitution."

The resolution thus proposed by Sir John A. Macdonald was seconded by the Hon Samuel L. Tilley, and was adopted.

The Conference then took up the details of the proposed confederation and set itself to settle the multitude of questions and problems which immediately suggested themselves. To deal with the various resolutions which were immediately proposed, it was decided on the third day that the resolutions intended to be moved should be prepared in advance by a committee composed of the Canadian delegates. A series of resolutions, or rather suggestions, based on the views expressed at the preceding conference held at Charlottetown was then introduced by Mr. Macdonald, and debated seriatim. Many of the questions were very easily settled. Some, however, offered considerable difficulty. Those which required the greatest time and care to adjust satisfactorily were the ones concerning the apportionment of the financial burdens, the distribution of powers between the federal and local legislatures, the allotment of representation in the Lower House, and the constitution of the Upper House. On all these and other matters there were, as might be expected, differences of opinion more or less pronounced. At times, indeed, it looked as if agreement would be impossible, and the failure of the negotiations inevitable. But, thanks to the spirit of conciliation and of compromise which pervaded the assembly, such a misfortune was averted and the conference brought to a successful and harmonious issue.



Lord Stanley, now Earl of Derby.

The sixth Governor-General was Lord Stanley, now Earl of Derby, who held office from 1888 to 1893. He is the sixteenth Earl of the name, and was born in 1841. He was the second son of the 14th Earl and of Emma Caroline, daughter of Lord Skelmersdale. He was known as Lord Stanley until he succeeded his brother to the earldom in 1893. In 1864 he married Lady Constance Villiers, daughter of the Earl of Clarendon. He received his education at Eton, entering the army in 1858, and rising to the rank of Captain of the Grenadier Guards. He early took an interest in things political and rose to occupy several distinguished positions besides that of Governor-General of Canada. He was made Lord of the Admiralty in 1868; Financial Secretary for War from 1874 to 1877, Secretary for War 1878 to 1880; and Secretary for the Colonies from 1885 to 1886. His estate contains about 69,000 acres and lies mostly in Lancashire.

The Earl of Aberdeen.

One of the most popular Governor-Generals that has ever been in this country was the seventh, the Earl of Aberdeen. He and Lady Aberdeen made a very favorable impression on Canadians by the deep interest they took in the welfare of the country and in the encouragement of its industries. The Earl, who is the seventh of the name, was born in 1847. He received his education at Cheam school and at St. Andrew's and Oxford universities. In 1877 he married Ishbel Maria Marjoribanks, daughter of the Baron Tweedmouth. He was Governor-General of Canada from 1893 to 1898. Other positions he has held are: Lord Lieutenant of Aberdeenshire since 1880; Lord Lieutenant of Ireland from January to July, 1886, and recently reappointed; and Privy Councillor since 1886. The Earl has ever been of studious tastes and has been the recipient of many university degrees in England and in this country.

The Earl of Minto.

Lord Minto was the predecessor of the present Governor-General, and held office from 1898 to 1904. He was born in 1847 and was the son of the third Earl of the name, whom he succeeded in 1891. He received his education at Eton and at Trinity College, Cambridge, becoming an ensign in the Scots' Guards in 1867. He saw much service in various parts of the globe. He was with the Turkish army in 1877; in the Afghan War in 1879; secretary to Lord Roberts at the Cape in 1881; Volunteer in the Egyptian campaign of 1882; Military Secretary to the Governor-General of Canada, the Marquis of Lansdowne, from 1883 to 1885; served as Chief of Staff in the Northwest Rebellion in 1885. The Earl of Minto is now Viceroy of India, to which position he was appointed in 1905.

SPIRIT OF THE DISCUSSIONS.

The following extract from a report of the sessions is typical of the tone in which the discussions were carried on.

Hon. George Brown—"As to local governments, we desire in Canada that they should not be expensive, and should not take up political matters. We ought not to have two elective bodies, but only one body whose members shall be elected once in every three years. There should also be one Legislative Chamber for the three years, and it should not have power of dissolution. The Lieutenant-Governor should be appointed by the Federal Government and the departmental officers should be elected during pleasure or for three years, to be allowed to speak, but not to vote."

Hon. George Cartier—"I entirely differ with Mr. Brown. His plan would introduce into our local bodies Republican institutions."

Hon. Mr. Brown then moved that in the local government there should be but one legislative chamber.

Sir Etienne Tache—This motion is made merely to elicit the opinion of the conference.

Hon. Mr. Tilley—"New Brunswick differs from Mr. Brown. We propose to keep existing things as they are, so far as is consistent with expense. We also propose a lieutenant-governor and five departmental officers, who shall have a seat in the House."

Hon. Mr. Dickey—"Before coming to details let us settle principles. Will the conference take any present local government as a model?"

Hon. Mr. Fisher—"I am opposed to Mr Brown's views, and I approve of the present system of local legislature. But I agree with Mr. Brown that the lieutenant-governor should be appointed by the Federal Government.

Hon. Mr. Carter—"We had only one chamber in Newfoundland in 1842, and it was appointed partly by the Crown and partly by the people. It worked very well and gave satisfaction. Our object was to reduce expense."

Hon. Mr. Henry—"I think it is very desirable that we should have uniformity, but I think it would be better for us to decide what powers should be left to the local Legislatures before we proceed to discuss their constitutions?"

Hon. Mr. McGee—"No, not at all. Let us first institute the bodies, and then consider the assignment of their powers."

Hon. Mr. Chandler—"We are here to form a constitution for the Federal Government, and it should be our purpose to let the provinces otherwise remain as they are so far as possible."

Sir Charles Tupper—"I agree with the general principles laid down by Mr. Brown and I think that the governments should be as simple and inexpensive as possible. We should diminish the powers of the local governments, but we must not shock too much the prejudices of the people in that respect."

Hon. Mr. McCully—"We must have miniature responsible governments."

The adjournment of the session then intervened.

DIFFERENCES OF VIEW.

The following discussion took place at the session of Monday, October the 24th. What gave rise to it was a motion by the Hon. Mr. Mowat defining the powers of the local Legislatures.

Hon. Mr. Chandler—"I object to the proposed system; you are adopting a legislative union instead of a federal one. The local Legislatures should not have their powers specified, but should have all the powers that are not reserved to the Federal Government, which alone should have its powers specified. You are now proceeding to destroy the constitutions of the local governments."

Sir Charles Tupper—"I have heard Mr. Chandler's arguments with surprise. Powers—undefined—must rest somewhere. It has been made a prominent feature of the scheme to have a plan in this respect contrary to that adopted by the United States. Mr. Chandler says that it gives a legislative instead of a federal union. I think that a benefit. Is the Federal Government to be one of mere delegates? We have provided for a legislative representation and for the representation of every section of all the provinces. Is this conference limit the powers of the General Legislature, I feel that the whole platform is swept away from us."

Hon. Mr. Coles—"I did not understand that this was laid down as a basis at Charlottetown. I thought that the only thing specified there was representation by population in the Lower House. I agree with Mr. Chandler's view."

Hon. Mr. Haviland—"I entirely disagree with Messrs. Chandler and Coles. I understood that it was the basis of our scheme, in order to avoid the difficulties of the United States, to give limited powers to the local Legislatures."

Colonel Gray, N. B.—"Mr. Coles' memory is rather short." He then proceeded to quote from speeches delivered at Charlottetown by Sir John Macdonald and Hon. George Brown. "Whatever conclusion we may now arrive at," he continued, "such was the basis of the Canadian scheme."

Hon. Mr. Chandler—"My argument has not been met as to its merits, but as to what was laid down at Charlottetown. We all agree that the local governments should have local powers, but we differ as to whether such powers should be defined."

Sir Charles Tupper—"Under Mr. Chandler's view the Governor-General would be less than the Lieutenant-Governor and the Federal Government less than the local."

Hon. Mr. Dickey—"I propose a Supreme Court of Appeal to decide any conflict between general and state rights. I am rather inclined to agree with Mr. Chandler, for great interests are lost sight of in Mr. Mowat's motion."

This important question of the powers of the local and federal governments was finally settled for the most part according to the desires of Sir John A. Macdonald and his supporters, and in this respect the Canadian constitution was made the counterpart of that of the United States. In the great republic the central government possesses only certain well defined powers and all powers which are not so specified belong to the different States. In this country on the contrary, it is the powers of the local governments which are limited and defined and every other power is vested in the Dominion Government. In this way it was hoped to avoid the multitude of difficulties of all kinds which have arisen in American national life as a result of the conflicting powers of the various sovereign states.

Only a Little Cold often Develops Into Catarrh.

Colds are dangerous things to trifle with. They hang on and on, and people keep putting off curing them, until that stuffy feeling in the nose proclaims that catarrh has developed. Stop the cold while it is only a cold. Japanese Catarrh Cure instantly relieves "cold in the head." The balmy, arom tic pomade soothes and heals the inflammed surfaces, clears the air passages, and arrests the development of the trouble. The treatment is so pleasant and so simple, that Japanese Catarrh Cure holds first place in thousands of homes throughout the Dominion.

Mr. Alex. McRea of New Westminster, B.C., writes—"I was for some weeks suffering from a cold in the head, which was apparently developing into Catarrh. I purchased a box of Japanese Catarrh Cure and in less than two days, the trouble entirely disappeared. I can highly recommend it: the first application relieves."

Eventually the result of long and animated discussions was embodied in seventy-two resolutions which were unanimously adopted by the conference and transmitted to the several governments to be communicated to their respective Legislatures.

DIFFICULTIES DID NOT END WITH ADOPTION OF BASIS OF UNION.

Although with the drawing up and passing of the seventy resolutions at the Quebec conference, a great part of the work of confederation had been accomplished, there still remained a long struggle before they were accepted by all the provinces concerned and complete success crowned. Shortly after they were proclaimed these union resolutions, as they were called, were adopted in the Canadian Assembly by a vote of 91 to 33, and in the Council by 45 to 45. The 91 favorable votes in the Assembly were made up of 54 from Upper Canada and 37 from Lower Canada.

So far all was well, but in the early days of the ensuing March the movement received a decided check by reason of the defeat at the polls of the New Brunswick Government which had imprudently ventured on an appeal to the people before the question had been brought before the Legislature of the province. This defeat had a great influence on the other Maritime Provinces.

Nova Scotia showed a disposition to revert to the original plan of a Maritime Union. Newfoundland remained inert; and the Prince Edward Island Legislature went so far as to repudiate the action of the delegates at the Quebec conference, and declared itself hostile to union with Canada on any terms. British Columbia and the North-West were not as yet in a sufficiently organized or populated stage to deal with the question.

The set back was only temporary, however, and after two general elections in New Brunswick and a change of Government the resolutions were approved and adopted in July, 1866, by good majorities. In Nova Scotia, as in Canada, the resolutions were adopted by the Legislature. The vote was taken in the Assembly on a motion of the Hon. Dr. Tupper, and was 31 for and 19 against. No general election was held. In December, 1866, delegates from the four provinces met in London to make the final arrangements. They were mostly members of the Quebec conference, though there were three new names: Sir William P. Howland, who still survives; Hon. J. W. Ritchie, and Hon. R. D. Wilmot. The final details were settled and on the 28th of March, 1867, the resolutions received the Queen's assent, after passing through the Imperial Parliament as the British North America act. They became the constitution of the new Dominion of Canada on the first of July, 1867.

MUCH LEGISLATION WAS ENACTED BY FIRST PARLIAMENT.

Sir John A. Macdonald was called upon to form the first Canadian ministry, and succeeded in getting together what has been described as probably the strongest Cabinet Canada has ever seen.

In making his selection he announced his policy as follows: "I desire to bring to my aid in the new government those men, irrespective of party, who represent the majorities in the different provinces in the Union. I do not want it to be felt by any section of the country that they have no representative in the Cabinet, and no influence in the government. And as there are now no issues to divide parties, and as all that is required is to have in the Government the men who are the best adapted to put the machinery in motion, I desire to ask those to join me who have the confidence and who represent the majorities of the various sections of those who were in favor of the adoption of this system of government, and who wish to see it satisfactorily carried out."

FIRST ADMINISTRATION.

The first administration of the Dominion, which as a result of this policy, was a coalition ministry, was as follows:—

Hon. John A. Macdonald—Premier and Minister of Justice.

Hon. George E. Cartier—Minister of Militia.

Hon. Alexander Campbell—Postmaster-General.

Hon. A. T. Galt—Minister of Finance.

Hon. S. L. Tilley—Minister of Customs.

Hon. A. J. Ferguson-Blair—President of Council.

Hon. H. L. Langevin—Secretary of State.

Hon. W. P. Howland—Minister of Inland Revenue.

Hon. Peter Mitchell—Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

Hon. A. G. Archibald—Secretary of State for the Provinces.

Hon. Edward Kenny—Receiver-General.

Hon. William McDougall—Minister of Public Works.

Hon. J. C. Chapais—Minister of Agriculture.

The ministry was composed of about an equal number of Conservatives and Liberals, and was opposed by Hon. George Brown, and that branch of the Reform party which supported him.

Lord Monk was sworn in as Governor-General on July 1, 1867, and immediately announced that he had received Her Majesty's command to confer the title of K.C.B. on Hon. John A. Macdonald, and the title of C.B. on Hon. George E. Cartier, S. L. Tilley, A. T. Galt, Charles Tupper, W. P. Howland and William MacDougall.

The writs for the first general election were issued early in August and as a result of the voting the government was sustained by a large majority.

INITIAL PARLIAMENT.

The first Canadian Parliament to meet at Ottawa after Confederation was accomplished assembled in November 1867.

The Hansard reports of the House were not inaugurated until 1874, the consequence being that the records of the proceedings of the parliaments previous to that time are incomplete. They are made up of newspaper reports and pasted into "scrap books." The record of the first session of the initial Parliament is made up largely of the reports of the speeches and proceedings as published in the Ottawa Times, a paper which has long since gone out of existence. The writer of these reports, in his introduction to the story of the first meeting of the House made some remarks which will be read four decades later with a great deal of interest. They include at least one prophecy which has been fulfilled to EARL GREY.

The present Governor-General, Earl Grey, was born in 1851 and is the son of General Hon. Charles Grey. He succeeded his uncle the third Earl Grey in 1894. He was educated at Eton and at Cambridge, where he graduated as Senior in the Law and History Tripos in 1873. He early entered politics as member for Northumberland and has since held many responsible positions. Before his appointment as Governor-General of Canada he was Lord Lieutenant of Northumberland since 1899. For many years he has been a director in the British South Africa Company. From 1896 to 1897 he was Administrator of Rhodesia. His estate contains about 17,600 acres.

the utmost expectations of the men who started the Dominion on her career as a nation. He said:

PROPHECY FULFILLED.

"The proceedings of yesterday, supplemented by those which will take place to-day, will form an interesting chapter in the history of our new Dominion, which we have good reason to believe will, in the progress of time, embrace the whole territory, from north of the United States to the late Russian possessions, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Already it is the second power on this continent, and should careful and moderate views animate our statesmen, and the struggles of hostile and intemperate factions continue to be a part of the policy of our southern neighbors, ending the various sections asunder, there is no reason that in time it may not be the first of American powers."

The routine procedure in connection with the opening of the first Canadian parliament was the same as it is to-day. His Excellency, Lord Monk, the Governor-General, was escorted to the House by a military guard of honor, and the Ottawa Field Battery fired the usual salute of nineteen guns. His Excellency was accompanied by Lieutenant-Governor Musgrave of Newfoundland, Lieutenant-Governor Stisted, of Ontario; Lieutenant-General Sir Charles Wyndham, commander of the forces; and Major-General Russell, with their espective suites. The members of the House of Commons having been commanded to appear at the Bar of the Senate were instructed to elect a Speaker, and the first speech from the throne ever read at Ottawa was listened to attentively. It is recorded that Lord Monk read the speech in a clear, distinct and measured voice, which seemed to impress upon those present the importance of the subjects recommended for consideration.

SPEECH FROM THRONE.

The speech opened with the usual congratulatory paragraphs, and proceeded to outline the important legislation it was proposed to consider in the following words:—

"Measures will be laid before you for the amendment and assimilation of the laws now existing in the various provinces relating to currency, customs, excise, and the revenue generally; for the adoption of an uniform postal system; for the management and maintenance of the public works and properties of the Dominion; for the adoption of a well considered scheme of militia organization and defence; for the proper administration of Indian affairs; for the introduction of uniform laws respecting patents of invention and discovery; for the naturalization of aliens and for the assimilation of the criminal law and the laws relating to bankruptcy and insolvency.

"A measure will also be submitted to you, for the performance of the duty imposed upon Canada, under the terms of the Union Act of immediately constructing the Intercolonial Railway."

The speech went on to say that Parliament would be asked to consider the important subject of western territorial extension and measures defining the privileges of Parliament, and for the establishment of uniform laws relating to elections, and the trial of controverted elections.

Having heard the speech from the throne, the members of the House of Commons returned to the Commons chamber to chose a Speaker. On the motion of Sir John Macdonald, seconded by Hon. George E. Cartier, who, later on became Sir George Cartier, the choice fell on Hon. James Cockburn, who thus became the first speaker of the Canadian House of Commons. On thanking the House for the honor conferred upon him, the Speaker expressed the opinion that owing to the long parliamentary experience of a large number of the members of the House, he would have valuable assistance in the discharge of the duties of the office.

Before the House adjourned Sir John A. Macdonald said that as there were no rules for the guidance of members, he thought the plan adopted in 1841 (when Upper and Lower Canada were united) should be followed. It would be necessary for a committee selected from the whole House, to be appointed for the purpose of drawing up a code of rules. In the meantime, the practice of the last session of the Parliament of the Province of Canada was the best they could follow. This suggestion was adopted and the first sitting of the first Parliament of Canada came to a close.

DEBATE ON THE SPEECH.

Two days after the formal opening of Parliament, Hon. Charles Fisher, of New Brunswick, moved the address in reply to the speech from the throne. He expressed the belief that the feelings of gratification on the accomplishment of Confederation were shared by a majority of the people of all sects and classes. He reviewed the circumstances leading up to the union and declared that the establishment of the new nationality was a fresh starting point, and would stand out as a prominent feature in the future history of the country in which every man and woman in Canada could feel a just pride. The debate on the address was continued over several days and was participated in by several men whose names will long be remembered, including the late Hon. Jos. Howe, of Nova Scotia; the late Sir Oliver Mowat, Sir Charles Tupper, Sir Richard Cartwright, and Hon. Edward Blake.

Forty years ago, the system of dual representation was in force in Canada, under which it was possible to be a member of both the Federal House and a Provincial Legislature. This system was not abolished till the seventies. It was the custom for the Dominion House to sit for a time and then adjourn for several weeks in order to give members of two Houses an opportunity to attend to their provincial legislative duties. This plan was inaugurated on December 21, 1867, when the House adjourned till March 12. During the few weeks the House sat a great deal of work was accomplished, for on the day of adjournment, Royal assent was given to bills which embodied much of the legislation foreshadowed in the speech from the throne, including an act providing for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, which had been debated at great length and with considerable warmth.

DEBATE OVER I.C.R.

When the bill for the construction of this railway was brought up, Hon. Mr. Dorion, a prominent Quebec Liberal, moved in amendment that the route should not be decided on without the consent of Parliament. This proposal was rejected by a vote of 35 to 83, which may be taken as a fair indication of the relative strength of the supporters of the Coalition administration and the Opposition.

One of the most important events of the session was the adoption of a series of resolutions introduced by the Hon. William McDougall, who passed away in Ottawa just a year ago, setting forth why the Northwest should be added to the Dominion, and asking the Imperial Government to give the Canadian Parliament authority to legislate on the subject. Mr. McDougall's speech was able and exhaustive. The resolutions were adopted, and a select committee was appointed to draw up an address embodying them.

An event which will long be remembered occurred a few weeks after Parliament resumed business in March—the assassination of D'Arcy McGee. Hon. Mr. McGee, who was a widely known politician and litterateur, attended the House of Commons on the night of April 6, and made an eloquent speech. He left the House shortly after 2 a.m. on the following morning, and while entering his boarding house was shot through the head. The crime was brought home to P. J. Whelan, a tailor, who was hanged in the following October. The tragic death of Mr. McGee created intense excitement in Parliament and many warm tributes were paid to his memory by the most eloquent speakers in the House.

As a further act of respect the House adjourned for a week. On re-assembling business was pushed with all possible speed, and when prorogation took place on May 22, a large number of additional bills received the Royal assent.

paid their governors more handsomely than Canada proposed to do. Sir John in describing the work of the first session said:

"The only matter that went wrong during the whole session was a measure to reduce the salary of the Governor-General from £10,000 sterling to $32,000. The Government opposed this with all their might, but there was a regular stampede of friends and foes in favor of the reduction, and no arguments could avail. It unluckily so happened that the Governor's salary was the only point in the Union Act that could well be objected to, and it was made a handle at all the elections. Most of the young members had pledged themselves to vote for a reduction, and they carried out their pledges. There is a great cry for retrenchment just now, which originated principally in the Maritime Provinces. They were unaccustomed to our scale of salaries, and Canadian extravagance has been made a matter of daily discussion in the newspapers. I was a good deal surprised to find that Lord Monck was very unpopular among members of Parliament. Why, I cannot say. I like him amazingly, and shall be very sorry when he leaves, as he has been a very prudent and efficient administrator of public affairs. Still, he seems not to have the power of making friends, and there is a bitterness of feeling displayed towards him for which I was altogether unprepared."

The bill passed the House of Commons by a majority of three to one, and also received a majority in the Senate. Lord Monck did not give Royal assent to the bill on prorogation day but reserved it for the Queen's pleasure. As a result of this bill the Imperial Government experienced great difficulty in finding a successor to Lord Monck when he resigned, the feeling prevailing in Great Britain that the reduction of the salary greatly lessened the dignity of the office. Sir John Young finally accepted the post and at a later date in our history the original salary was restored.

Apart from the trouble over this measure, the Government experienced but little opposition during the session, owing to the defeat of Hon. George Brown at the general elections his followers were disorganized. The leadership devolved upon Mr. Alexander Mackenzie, who, in 1874, because the first Liberal Premier of the Dominion.

Mr. Joseph Howe, the great Nova Scotian, was for a time regarded as the probable successor of Mr. Brown, but he refused to identify himself at that time with either political party, or to take any step indicating that he had accepted Confederation.

A UNIQUE DISTINCTION.

A number of the men who took part in the deliberations of Canada's first Parliament are still alive, but only one man has had the distinction of being a member of every Canadian Parliament. Hon. John Costigan, the present representative for Victoria, N.B., took part in those events, and has ever since remained a member of the House. Sir Charles Tupper, Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere, and Hon. Edward Blake, were members of the first Canadian Parliament, as were also a number of present day senators, including Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir Richard Cartwright, and Sir John Carling.

A glance over the index of the inadequate reports of the proceedings of those days show that among those new and more progressive policy. It is also recorded of him that: "like Disraeli, he educated his party; he brought them to take a more comprehensive view of affairs, and attracted to himself the more moderate men of the other side, and with so much effect that, in the following year, the reconstructed party came into power, and "the young doctor," as he was called, became Provincial Secretary.

From that time till the confederation of the provinces, he was, perhaps, the most prominent figure in local politics, having succeeded to the Premiership in 1864. The conspicuous part he bore in the accomplishment of confederation and the establishment of the Dominion of Canada is well known to all. He attended the Charlottetown and Quebec conferences, and afterwards went to England, where the question was finally settled at the Westminster Palace Hotel conference.

IN THE DOMINION ARENA.

His services were not forgotten and he was created a C.B. On the formation of the first Government he was invited to take office but declined in favor of Sir Edward Kenny, despite the honor, to devote himself to the better interests of the country, and meet obstacles arising in other provinces of the Dominion. But his self-repression did not keep him long out of the Liberal Cabinet. He was sworn to the Privy Council in June, 1870, as President of the Council, which honor he fully deserved. Transferred to the Department of Inland Revenue in July, 1872, he succeeded Sir Leonard Tilley as Minister of Customs in the early portion of 1873, and was still holding that office when the Macdonald administration resigned in the autumn of that year.

During the five years that the Conservative party was in the Opposition, Sir Charles, then Dr. Tupper, was Sir John Macdonald's principal organizer and adviser, and to no one was the Conservative party more indebted than to him, for their return to power in 1878. While in Opposition he elaborated and brought before Parliament the scheme of moderate protection for home industries, known as the "National Policy," which was subsequently adopted and put into force. In the new administration he became Minister of Public Works and afterwards created the Department of Railways and Canals and was its first Minister. As such he carried out the policy of the Government in reference to the enlarging of the Welland Canal, the deepening of the St. Lawrence channel, the improvement of the Intercolonial Railway, and the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He retired from the ministry in 1884, and up to 1887 was the representative of the Dominion of Canada in London, as High Commissioner. He again entered the Government in 1887 and became Minister of Finance, which position he, however, resigned in 1888 to return to London as High Commissioner. In January, 1896, he entered the Bowell administration as Secretary of State and leader of the Opposition at the meeting of the new Parliament in August. He led the House of Commons, and on the retirement of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, four months afterwards, became Prime Minister of Canada. The Conservatives were defeated at the general elections and Sir Charles became leader of the Opposition until 1900, when meeting defeat in his own constituency he retired from public life. The two aims Sir Charles has always kept in view, as a loyal subject to his King, and as a jealous guardian of the honor of his people, have been the strengthening of the golden link which connects England with the first and greatest of her colonies, and the holding aloft of the standard of right of the nation, so that she may prove herself worthy of the proud position she has made her own.

HOW NATIONAL BIRTHDAY IS TO BE CELEBRATED HERE.

When the union of the various provinces was finally consummated, and the Dominion of Canada had become an accepted fact, the celebration of the great occasion in Canadian history was naturally a very enthusiastic one. The first Dominion Day was a most important event in the life of every right-thinking and right-spirited Canadian, marking as it did the birth of a new nation and the assumption by Canada of the place that was hers by right among the powers of the world. Confederation, therefore, was regarded by the private individual with a sense of personal victory and advancement, and each and every one gave the fullest possible expression to their joy. The papers of the time are full of accounts of the happenings of that great day and of the numberless celebrations of which it was the occasion.

In view of the importance of the occasion to Canada, which may be said to date her national life from then, it seemed good to the law-makers that the day should be held forever memorable in the history of the country and that it should be for all time a day on which Canadians ceased from work and gave themselves up to celebration and to joy. A law was, therefore, passed constituting the 1st of July a national holiday. This law was framed in 1868, the year after Confederation, so that every anniversary of the occasion has been kept in a way sacred by the Canadian people.

Although regarding the day with no less enthusiastic joy than their neighbors of the Republic to the south regard the fourth of the same month, Canadians are somewhat more quiet and sedate in their celebration, and the demonstration never reaches the extremes which are customary in the United States. The day has always been largely an occasion of outings and excursions. Instead of exploding tons of powder and raising variously assorted smells and making themselves mutually and generally uncomfortable, Canadians have adopted the habit of taking their families and going off into the country and spending the day amid the healthful breezes and pleasant sights of forest and stream. It has seemed to them in so doing they offer much more fitting thanks for the blessings which the day commemorates and at the same time make it contribute incalculably more to their own health of mind and body. But though fire-crackers have never been an essential part of the celebration of Dominion Day, they have always been in reasonable evidence, and the small boy has not been allowed to go lamenting. Military salutes, of course, are also part of the day's celebrations and every first the guns boom out in honor of the Dominion and the Confederation from which it took its rise. The general character of the day, however is one of quiet joy rather than of noisy demonstration.

The celebration of Dominion Day in this city will be of the usual character. A detachment of the Garrison Artillery will fire a salute of twenty-one guns on St. Helen's Island. This will be the only military recognition of the day. The unofficial celebration, however, will be of a more extensive description. Flags will everywhere fly, the small boy will explode the playful cracker, people will crowd to all the favorite resorts in the neighborhood of the city if the weather permits, and everyone will do something to show a proper appreciation of the fortieth Dominion Day.

The picture of the "Fathers of Confederation" is a photograph of a painting made for the Dominion Government in 1884 by Robert Harris, R.C.A. The painting, which is a large one, for many years hung in the National Art Gallery at Ottawa, but recently was removed to the new Railway Committee room of the House of Commons. In addition to the painting, two photographic groups of the "Fathers of Confederation" are known to be in existence—one taken at the initial conference, held at Charlottetown in 1864, the other taken at the successful Quebec conference. A copy of the Charlottetown photo is in the possession of Mr. Joseph Pope, Under-Secretary of State. The Quebec group hangs on the walls of the corridor leading to the parliamentary.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SALARY REDUCED.

Mr. Joseph Pope, in his Life of Sir John Macdonald, tells us that among the acts passed during this session was a bill reducing the salary of the Governor-General from $50,000 to $32,000. It was opposed by the members of the Government, and particularly by the First Minister. Sir John Macdonald urged that several colonies, inferior to the Dominion in size and importance who took part in the debates of the first session, exclusive of the ministers already mentioned, were the following:

Hon. J. J. C. Abbott, Hon. T. W. Anglin, F. Bechard, Jos. H. Belleron, Hon. J. R. Benson, Edward Blake, Hon. Jos. G. Blanchet, E. V. Bodwell, John Bolton, Mackenzie Bowell, Charles Burpee, F. H. Burton, Hon. John H. Cameron, Hon. Alex. Campbell, Stewart Campbell, Hon. John Carling, James W. Carmichael, R. J. Cartwright, Michael Cayley, Brown Chamberlain, Hon. P. J. O. Chauveau,

THE SOLE SURVIVOR OF THE FATHERS OF CONFEDERATION.

The sole survivor of the Fathers of Confederation is Sir Charles Tupper, who, as Dr. Tupper, was one of the delegates from Nova Scotia to the Quebec conference.

Sir Charles Tupper, is the eldest son of the late Rev. Charles Tupper, D.D., of Aylesford, N.S., and of Miriam Lockhart Low, of Parrsboro', N.S. The members of this branch of the family are direct descendants from Thomas Tupper, who emigrated to America in 1635, landing at Sangus (now Lynn.) Mass. Two years later he left Sangus for Sandwich, Mass., where, with others he was an incorporator of the town.

The Tupper family were among the first settlers in Nova Scotia, the father of Sir Charles settling in Amherst, N.S., where the great statesman was born on the second day of July, 1821. He was educated at the different schools of Amherst and finally at Horton Academy. After graduating there he took up the study of medicine and graduated M.D. at Edinburgh in 1843. In the same year he was admitted a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, a distinction which he very much deserved. Dr. Tupper commenced the practice of his profession in his native county. His ability became rapidly known in the place where he was established and in the surrounding country as well, so much so that he secured an extensive business.

ENTRY INTO PUBLIC LIFE.

His ability, however, was not confined to medicine, and his friends, who were numerous, soon induced him to enter into public life. He accepted and at the general elections of 1855, was elected as member for Cumberland to the Local Assembly. His victory was a great one for the party, for he defeated the late Hon. Joseph Howe, then leader of the Liberal party in Nova Scotia and afterwards Lieutenant-Governor of the province. On entering Parliament the new member, conscious, it is said, of the weak points in the old Conservative programme, drew up and was allowed by his seniors, to adopt a

PALE FACE, WEAK BLOOD.

Why are some people strong and able to defy disease, while others are weak and subject to all the ills of human kind?

The difference is in the blood. Pallor of the eyelids, gums and lips tell of blood that is lacking in quality and richness.

The person who has poor blood is subject to headache, dizziness, sleeplessness; the action of the heart is weak and there is sometimes palpitation; the breath is short and there is lack of energy and strength.

This weak, anaemic condition is entirely overcome by the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which is above all else a builder and enricher of the blood.

New, rich flesh and tissue are added, new strength and vigor take the place of weakness and suffering, and instead of taking cold or contracting disease at every gust of wind that blows you find yourself getting strong and robust.

DINKELSPIEL ON SMALL TALK.

George V. Hobart, writing as Dinkelspiel in the New York American, gives the following advice on society:

Mein Lieber Looey—Ve haf your letter from Bar Harbor und your mother und I vas glat to know dot you vas beginning to enchoy your wacation at dot famous place vare you intention to stay until five minutes before your return tigget eggspires.

You ask me in your letter, Looey, to lend you an idea for some polite gonversationing vich you could use mit some of der ladies of der fair sex such as you vould meet on der porch of der hotel.

I vas glat you asked your olt father abould dis, Looey, because I doand know anybody vich is better able to gif you inside information abould real society doings as vot I am, yet.

I vill nefer forget, Looey, de fairst time I entered society. It vas at Newport. I recollection, und der scene is vun vich vill sparkle forth through history like a vet bathing suit on a sunsvept beach.

It vas at Mrs. Pickleshine's reception und bright der lamp shone ofer brave vimmens und fair men.

I vas eggstremely nerfous abould making my debuttal, but I vent through der ordeal mitould having to unbutton my collar.

Ven I entered der reception hall und handed my overshoes to der feetmen der 400 burst into silence.

It vas a dramatic moment.

"Should I remove my shoes und gif dem also to der feetman!" thought I.

"Is he der real ding or does he vear openface socks!" thought der 400.

It was a critical moment, but not a critic vas dare.

Suttenly der blue blood arose to my surface und I vas saved. Mit a low bow I shook hands mit der butler und two minutes aftervards I vas at my ease asking der hostess vot vas for supper.

A leedle later it vas a complete triumph for me ven I upsetted a plate of soup in der lap of a chent dot nefer used soup in any form.

To go into all der details in dis letter vould be too eggstemporaneous, Looey, but because you ask it I vill gif you a leedle bunch of vot ve call "small talk" in society, vich you vill find useless ven you meet a lady belonging to der Smart Setters for der fairst time.

Let us supposition now, Looey, dot she vas gracefully seated in a low-neck chair on der pizazza vile you vas leaning artistically against der upright vich supports der roof und also a sign vich says "Vet Paint."

From time to time you should gaze ould across der blue vaters of der ocean und den, turning your eyes on her mit infinite manliness, firmly but surely push ofer in her face a large bunch of cigaroot smoke vich you haf no furder use for.

After dis you vill small talk yourself in dis fashion:

You—It vas a beautiful day to-day, ain'd it, yes?

She—Yes, thank you; and so is tomorrow, maybe.

You—Vich dit you like best, der ocean or der seashore?

She—I haf no preference, but if anyding I like der mountains.

You—Dit you go to Europe last summer?

She—No; der steamer vouldn't call for my trunks.

You—Does your husband like Bar Harbor?

She—No; he says home-made bars vas goot enough for him.

You—Vas you going to haif a new divorce dis fall, or vill you use last summer's?

She—My husband gets home so late at night dot ve haif hat no chance to talk it ofer yet.

You—Vas you fond of pickled ice-cream?

She—No, thank you; a high ball vill do nicely.

You—Do you play golf mit der Scotch or English accentuation?

She—I prefer bridge, vist, because I vin two dollars at it yesterday.

You—Do you vear your chewing gum on der starboard or der port side?

She—No, but I vill puff a cigaroot mit you if dare vas nobody looking.

You—Vas you fond of literature?

She—It depends on who is der letter from.

You—Who vas your favorite author?

She—Der Mint.

You—Could you name for me der five best books in der vorld?

She—Bank book, cheque book, pocket-book, mileage book und cook book.

After dis you should change der subject, Looey, und, show her how much paint you haf removed mit your flannel suit.

Dis is alvays goot for a laugh at dis season of der year. Yours mit luff,

D. DINKELSPIEL,
Per George V. Hobart.

Dominion Day Programme.

No special excursions will be run from the city on Monday next, but several have been arranged for Sunday, returning on Monday night. The railways have adopted a plan for some time past of allowing no special excursions under the auspices of societies on public holidays, but instead allow the customary cut of a single fare for a return trip to all points.

Among the excursions fixed for to-morrow and Sunday are the following:

Saturday: St. Henri Literary Club goes to Valleyfield; Williams Manufacturing Company employes go to Otterburn Park; 2nd Canadian Artillery goes to St. Albans, Vt.

Sunday: Choir of St. Elizabeth Church goes to Valleyfield; the Canadian Veterans go to Plattsburg; The Independent Order of Foresters go to Burlington; 41st Regiment goes to Brockville.

On Sunday about five hundred members of the Club Artisan of Lewiston, Me., will visit Montreal.

The Sons of Scotland Benevolent Association have prepared an attractive programme of sports for Dominion Day at Electric Park, Ahuntsic. They include both platform and field events.

On account of the inclemency of the weather, the fetes of Jacques Cartier Typographical Union No. 145, which were to have taken place last week at Riverside Park, were postponed until to-day, Sunday and Monday.

The Salvation Army will hold its annual picnic to Girdwood's Grove on Monday.

Those inclined to take a water excursion over Dominion Day can be accommodated in various directions.

At 2.30 p.m. on Monday the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Company's steamer Terrebonne leaves Victoria Pier for Vercheres, Boucherville and Varennes, returning to the city at 7.30 o'clock the same evening.

Another water trip is from Montreal to Sorel, Three Rivers, Batiscan and Quebec by R. & O. steamer. A person may leave on this trip either on Saturday or Sunday evening, at 7 p.m., returning at daylight Tuesday a.m.

Another trip, water and rail, may be made to Cornwall via the Grand Trunk, returning by the Richelieu steamer. The 9 a.m. train will connect with the steamer.

The Ottawa River Navigation Company will on Dominion Day operate their steamer Duchess of York between Montreal and Carillon. The Grand Trunk train leaving Montreal at 8 a.m. connects with the steamer at Lachine. The run is then made up the Ottawa and back to Montreal the same evening.

No Change in Law at Present.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Ottawa, Ont., June 30.—It is not likely that a report will be presented this session by the special committee which has been considering the election laws. The committee was called to meet this morning, but the only member who turned up was Hon. Thomas Greenway. Two or three members are out of the city and the others were attending the morning session of the House. The findings of the committee will probably be presented at the next session of Parliament, which will be in time for the framing of a new law before the general elections are held.

Cavalry Brigade Breaks Camp.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Sherbrooke, Que., June 30.—The 3rd Cavalry Brigade broke camp yesterday morning, and by night all had reached their homes. The camp is regarded as a very successful one. There were some deficiencies in the grounds and their equipment, unavoidable the first year. With a small expenditure, however, military men say the Sherbrooke site can be made one of the finest cavalry camps and instruction grounds in the Dominion.

Municipal Waterworks for Steelton.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., June 30.—The town of Steelton, one of the Soo's western suburbs has carried a municipal ownership by law by a vote of 195 to 45. The by-law was to provide for the installation of a water works system. Had it been defeated the system would likely have been put in by the Lake Superior Corporation.

Duke's Sympathetic Letter Too Late

Special to the Montreal Star.

Quebec, June 30.—A very sympathetic letter, written by the Duke of Argyle to the late Sir Hector Langevin, on hearing of his illness, has just been received here.

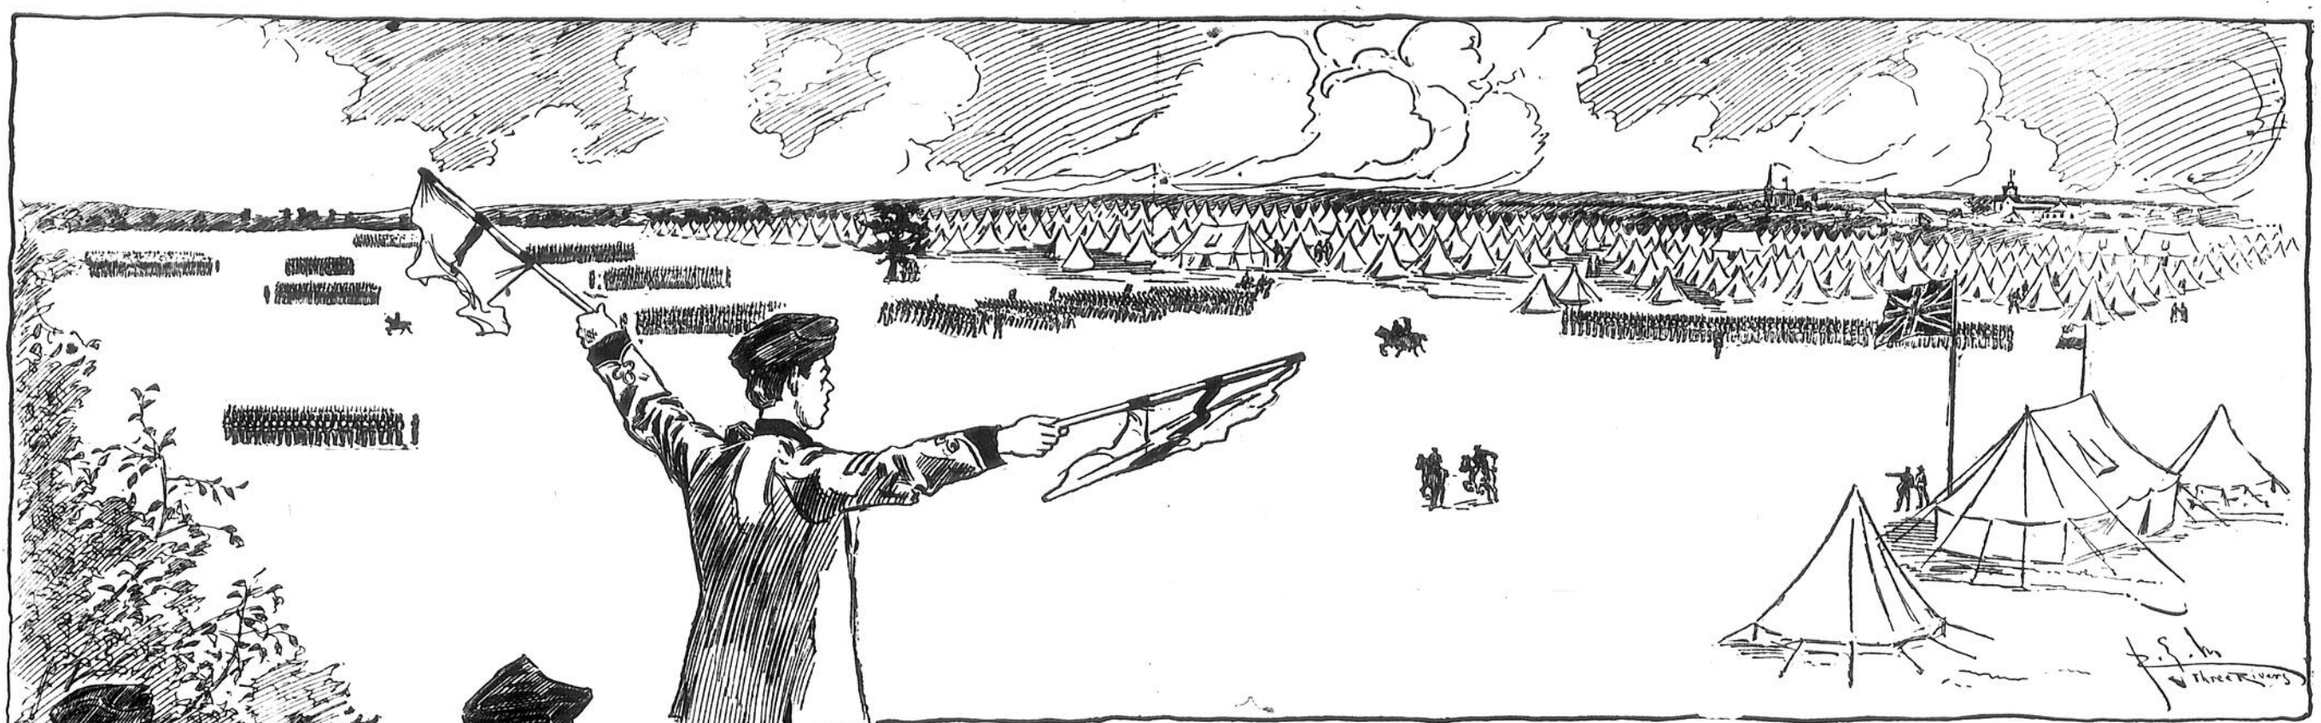
Training Raw Recruits Into Seasoned Militia At Three Rivers



THE MILITARY CAMP AT THREE RIVERS, SHOWING THE WHOLE SWEEP OF THE CAMP, WITH SOME OF THE TROOPS AT DRILL.

MEMBERS OF SIGNALLING CORPS AT WORK.

Sixteen hundred farmers, loggers, shantymen, lumberers, and river men, the backbone of the country, are fast being turned into "Tommy Atkinses," at Three Rivers this week. Their show is not much, and the state of their buttons and boots is enough to make a British regular weep, but they are all there just the same. After all uniform and dressing does not count for more than discipline and if discipline is there without all the necessary gimcracks to make it apparent, the man behind the gun must surely be just as good.

Tuesday, the first day of the camp, was given over entirely to marching into quarters and medical inspection. The camp was in first class condition preparatory to receiving the men, and when the regiments came in, Lieutenant-Colonel Wilson and his medical staff had very little difficulty in weeding out the halt and the lame, nearly all the companies presenting a clean medical sheet. There are some men, perhaps, who must, by their appearance, have passed the age limit prescribed by the King's Regulations for a soldier, but they passed muster all right and come in very handy, with their many experiences of camp life, as an aid to the regulars in instructing the "rookies," of whom there is a large percentage in the brigade this year.

The morning of the second day saw the camp in thorough working order, military routine and the bugle being the ruler of all things. Reveille blew at 5.30 a.m., sick call at 6.00, breakfast at 7, orderly room at 7.30, meat rations at 8, first drill at 8.30, second drill at 10.30, dinner at 12.30, third drill at 2 p.m., groceries and bread rations at 4, tea at 5.30, guard mount at 6.30, retreat at 7.30, first post (gun fire) 9.30, last post at 10, and lights out at 10.15. This routine is maintained throughout all the infantry camps in the Dominion of Canada.

In the training of the corps some very commendable changes are apparent this year, as compared with former years. Drilling by numbers hereafter will, in every case, be omitted, and companies will be formed and drilled in single rank only. The drum, and that old, old method, which at one time was thought could never be omitted and at the same time make the recruit a good soldier, namely, the pace stick, have been cut out and relegated to the past. Many other sections in the infantry drill, of great use, no doubt, to the regular soldier, but hardly worth the time and trouble of teaching them to the rural battalions have also had their heads cut off, thanks to the great reduction in the number of yards of red tape which has surrounded the Canadian Army for such a long time. Drilling in single rank is of great use in training the subalterns to habits of independent action, and is looked upon as one of the wisest moves of the department for a long time.

Most of the time this year will be taken up with a systematic training of every company of each battalion in range firing. In former years it was customary to appoint a musketry instructor to a brigade. This year there is an instructor appointed for every regiment. The men are taken out the first day and taught the use of the Lee Enfield firing exercise and manual, and the next day put right on the range, so that every man has a chance to learn and put what he knows right into practice. In the old days when the rural battalions were armed with the Snider, and many of the soldiers were nothing more than lads, it was no joke to lie on the butts all day getting one's shoulder kicked off, having the sun bake big blisters on your neck, everybody in as bad humor as yourself, and all around having a pretty miserable time of it. To-day this nightmare is changed to the quiet ping-g-g-g of the pretty nickel-coated bullet, travelling many times faster, farther, and more accurately than the bang-g-g-g of the Snider, and with much greater comfort to the man behind the gun. The soldier is taught, sometimes laboriously, but in a systematic way, the uses and handling of the gun and the lie on the range. The first shot does not dislocate his jaw or throw his shoulder out, and although he may not have even hit the target, he plucks up his courage and begins to think that shooting is not half as fierce work as his father told him it was. He bucks up, grips the gun a little tighter and by the time he has fired half a dozen shots is beginning to forget to shut both eyes and pucker up his face. Shooting, then, is only a matter of practice, and it is not long before the recruit, who never knew what it was to look along a gun barrel before, can draw as close a bead as the best of them.

Another very important branch of the service is getting its fair share of attention this year. That is signalling. Captain Greaves has a squad of signallers out from morning to night practising the semaphore and Morse codes and some of the men are becoming very proficient at it already. The heliograph has also been used, and there has not been the slightest trouble in deciphering the messages. The Intelligence Department, closely allied to the signallers, for the former usually get the information and the others forward it, is also doing some good practical work. Major Lordly, the District Intelligence Officer, and Lt. Palmer started out by riding from Montreal to Three Rivers, exploring the country from a tactical standpoint as they rode along. While the rest of the troops are busy at their different tasks, Major Lordly is not idle and has by this time sized up the country around Three Rivers pretty thoroughly.

The proper and regular feeding of an army is probably about the most difficult and necessary thing that the modern tactician has to figure out. In the old days when transportation was slow and troops could often live on the country through which they were passing it was no very difficult matter. Now the arrangement of affairs has become so changed and the needs of an army so different, that it has been found expedient to form a new corps altogether to fill the needs of an army in the field or on the march. This is known as the Army Service Corps, and although not in existence very long in Canada is already showing what great benefit has been derived from its work and how very useful their systematic methods are. It is their duty to see that the troops are rationed, supplied with forage, and in fact all the necessities of life. Baking bread comes under their care, and this is one of the most interesting phases of camp life. Under command of Major Lockerby, No. 4 company of the Canadian Service Corps of Montreal has undertaken to look after the supplies for the Three Rivers camp, and a very slight inspection of their stores and quarters is only necessary to prove how well and faithfully they have done their work. Both in making preparations for the incoming troops, and in looking after them when they arrived. The artisans and men, immediately upon their arrival, set to work to build ten field ovens, the capacity of which is calculated to feed all the men in camp. They are iron Dutch ovens, which the men lay in a trench and cover with sod and sand, leaving a ditch in front of them to rake the hot ashes into after they have been heated. The ovens are filled with kindling and heated up to a very high temperature. Then the ashes are raked out and the pans of bread are shoved in on long flat poles called "peels," the oven door is shut, and the most delicious bread is baked from the mere heat of the oven.

Issuing and looking after rations is another of their important duties. When "rations" blows every quartermaster of each regiment hies himself to the Quartermaster's store, where a squad of storemen is in waiting with the rations of each company all weighed out and ready to be passed upon by the Orderly Officer. This department does all the contracting and purchasing, too, a thing which is about as important as anything in the Canadian Army, and which if well and properly done goes far to make a brigade's training a success.

The next branch of the service in camp at Three Rivers is the Army Medical Corps, under the command of Lieutenant Wilson. They have a field hospital and tents erected away from the rest of the camp, the officers messing with the officers of the Army Service Corps. With new equipment thoroughly trained men and intelligent officers, this corps may be classed as one of the finest in the service, and No. 5 Field Ambulance from Montreal, which is doing duty at the camp, is acknowledged as one of the best in Canada.

THE ART ASSOCIATION'S WORK.

(Written for the Star.)

To get the most out of life, is a problem that confronts each of us. Our days here are few and quickly pass. Life, as the old story says, is like a bird that flies in at one window and out of another. Whence comes it? Whither goes it? But while we are here, we can make the most of life, get the greatest pleasure and good out of it. It is here education steps in, teaching us how to live, how to apply our hearts unto wisdom. Work we all must, play we all should, and by play is meant the relaxation that should follow all labor. Unfortunates not blessed with education do not know how to relax. Too often, alas, their relaxation means only vice and folly. We are harsh and unforgiving in our thoughts towards wretched beings who commit horrible crimes, when often we should pity instead. Is it not often the fault of their environment and their lack of education? Instead of condemning them, we should condemn ourselves for not doing more for them. The story is told of the miner who was asked by a charitable worker why he always spent his holidays in getting drunk. "Why ma'am," he replied, in his Lancashire dialect, "it's the only way I have of forgetting the misery of life." Had all unfortunate men such as he some mode of education they would know better. They would learn that real happiness is to be found in the beautiful things of the world—nature, books, art, music. And this is where an Art Association, wherever it may be, comes to the fore. Its aim should be to teach humanity the pleasure and profit to be found in art. It is not alone for the well-to-do and the wealthy, "gigsmanity," as Carlyle calls them; it is for all classes of the community. It is, in brief, the link between the great world of art, past and present, and the great mass of humanity. There are few more touching sights to be found anywhere than to sit in some art gallery on a Free Day in a great city and watch the laboring classes pass before the pictures. Here a man with bent back and seamed face smiles at Rosa Bonheur's prancing horses; there a woman with needle-pricked fingers and tired eyes gazes entranced upon a divine Madonna by Raphael; beyond, a worn artisan forgets his troubles as he studies one of Watts' sermons in paint. After a hard day's work there is nothing more refreshing, more elevating, than to look upon beautiful pictures. They call not only to the poor but to the rich. Often the pleasures of the rich are not more uplifting than those of the poor. Some rich men amuse themselves in getting drunk as well as the poor. Rich men spend priceless hours with low companions. Rich men's daughters and wives fritter and waste much valuable time. But the work of an Art Association is for them as much as for their poorer brothers and sisters. It is for all alike. This is a fact that should be remembered.

To come to our own Art Association in particular, perhaps too much emphasis has been laid in the past upon its being a luxury for the well-to-do and not an educational factor for all. This may be largely due to the fact that it has not at any time been blessed with a great abundance of funds. It was incorporated in 1860, with the late Bishop Fulford as its first president; but the Art Gallery, as we now know it, was founded in 1877 by the late Beniah Gibb, who, in the words of the bronze tablet in the hall, "devised and bequeathed to the Art Association the land upon which this building stands, eight thousand dollars in money, over ninety oil paintings and eight valuable bronzes."

Since then it has received numerous other bequests, the principal being from the late John W. Tempest, who left it an interesting collection of paintings and seventy thousand dollars as a trust fund for the purchase of pictures. Two other bequests of pictures are from the late William G. Murray and James Hutton. It has also quite lately been enriched by a noble bequest from Miss Orkney, a niece of the founder, of fifty thousand dollars. This will be of great assistance to the Art Association and will enable it to extend its work.

Its aims are at present to provide for the people of Montreal an Art Gallery where good pictures can be seen and studied; also to hold annual exhibitions where Canadian artists may get in touch with the public. Other work comprises giving lectures to its members on various topics, holding loan exhibitions, when the generous owners of magnificent private collections lend them, as it were, to the public, provide an art school, and incidentally a reading room where art papers and magazines, catalogues of exhibitions and a small but growing collection of books on art subjects, can be seen by the members.

The work of the Art Association is as yet in its infancy. There is no philanthropic work—philanthropic inasmuch as it is educational—that has a greater field before it. The public library, the popular concert, the free art gallery, all these are philanthropic works in the best meaning of the word. They help the people to help themselves. By teaching the masses to appreciate art a great field of wholesome pleasure is opened to them. This is yet almost untouched by our Art Association, chiefly owing to lack of funds. It has been suggested that the Art Gallery badly needs furnishing. It is as yet sparsely supplied with good pictures. But such as they are, it has been suggested they should be open to the public, free of all charge, one day in the seven, preferably Sunday, as it is the one day when the working man is at liberty. Could not also the excellent loan collections be free to the public for one day or more? Then what of a course of free lectures on art subjects for the great mass of the people? These need not interfere with the ones already held for the members. These free lectures might be short, simple and copiously illustrated by slides. Would such a course not open up a tremendous educational field? They might not be well attended by the class for which they were intended just at first, but, if rightly conducted, they would undoubtedly become popular. The great danger that overhangs any institution is that of getting in a rut. The motto should always be "onward and upward." There should be new channels of endeavor opened up; not the same old round from year to year.

A lecture given some time ago by Prof. Nobbs suggested several ways in which Art could help the community. Take his idea of an architectural exhibit, models and drawings of the best in architecture. Could this not be done to some small extent? The architecture in Montreal is at a very low ebb. Could not the Art Association do something towards raising it? It is a disgrace and a shame to see our beautiful city disfigured by some monstrosities that have been erected. Another suggestion has come to us, for an exhibit of good furniture and drawings and models of good furniture. Canada should lead the world in the manufacture of furniture with her wonderful forests to draw upon. But what do we see? Canadian furniture of the most hideous and impossible designs. The same may be said with respect to lines of wall-paper and some cotton fabrics, in which there is an utter lack of artistic taste, and the prevalence of hideous and impossible designs. Such an institution as the Art Gallery should be, as it were, a promoter of art education, and an arbiter of taste in the city.

May ours, before long, occupy such a useful position!

Fancy Fair at Beaconsfield.

A fancy fair and evening entertainment will be given at the Beaconsfield Club House, on Tuesday, July 3rd, in aid of Brehmer Rest, a convalescent home at Guy's Mills, two miles from St. Agathe. This home was opened a year ago by a few ladies, wishing to help people of moderate means and also poor people suffering from anaemia, pleurisy and similar diseases, who would doubtless develop the dread disease, tuberculosis, if not given an opportunity to have mountain air, good food and good care. No persons suffering from tuberculosis are accepted. The home can only accommodate twelve people, and has proved its necessity, as it has been full during the entire year and very frequently there is a waiting list. The fair is under the supervision of Mrs. Chillas and Miss A. M. Clark, assisted by a number of young ladies from Beaconsfield, Pointe Claire, Dorval and Beaurepaire. During the afternoon a quantity of artistic work will be shown, also toys, stationery, housekeepers' supplies and candy. High tea will be served on the balcony from 5.30 to 7 p.m. Five o'clock tea and ice cream will also be served. In the evening Major Long will give an exhibition of fencing and sword feats. A number of young ladies, under the direction of Major Long, will give the dumb-bell and swinging clubs exercises. There will also be music during the evening.

POTTER'S REMARKS DECIDEDLY RUDE

Perception of Cloven Hoof Beneath British "Gush" Thought Strange.

OTHER AMERICANS DIFFER.

Remember the Political as Well as Blood Ties Which Unite the Country.

London, June 30.—Bishop Potter's remarks on British "gush" and his assertion that there is no love lost between the two countries have called forth various comments in the newspapers, both daily and weekly, the consensus of opinion being that the Bishop ought to be the last man in the world to complain of treatment received at the hands of the Britishers because he has been welcomed by the clergy and the laity as few foreigners have been.

In business circles it is thought that the natural implication of Bishop Potter's remarks is that English confidence in the integrity of Americans has been rudely shaken by the disclosures of American business corruption made during the two years just past.

Mr. Emory McClintock, an American business man now in London, says, "I think that English confidence has been shaken in the Americans, but I cannot believe it will prove a permanent effect. During my visit to this country I have experienced only the most admirable spirit of fair play on the part of the Englishmen I have met. Commercial confidence as between the two countries cannot be easily overturned. It is a matter of profound regret that even temporarily there should be any suspension of confidence between the two countries.

"Lord Salisbury's attitude during the United States' war with Spain, the American attitude of non-interference during the Boer war, and, above all, the identity of views held by the two countries during the Japanese war, had built up a most cordial understanding between America and England; and I certainly hope and believe that understanding will not be permanently weakened by the regrettable exposures of the past year."

"PLUMPED" AGAINST HATS.

In Referendum the Parisians Voted Against Wearing in Theatres.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Paris, June 30.—A signal victory has been won by the Echo de Paris. It is a daring thing to tilt at that perennial monster, the French lady's theatre hat, but it is a still more wonderful achievement to have at last brought the creature to earth and slain him. Moreover, it has all been done actually with the help of the ladies themselves. The newspaper arranged a referendum in the twelve chief theatres of Paris, including the Opera Comique, the Vaudeville, the Gymnase, the Nouveautes and the Theatre Sarah Bernhardt. Voting papers of three different colors were given to each spectator. The first meant "no hats," the second "small hats," and the third was for the unblushing ladies who want to keep to the status quo, a status behind which it is completely impossible to catch a glimpse of the stage. Spectators plumped with furious zeal. French-women had never enjoyed the right to vote in their lives before, and exercised it with enthusiasm. For their first time of voting they voted well, for the large hat party has been hopelessly beaten at the polls. It was not a male vote only which carried the day, for hardly a man went alone to the theatre on ballot night, as all the ladies insisted on being taken to the play in order to enjoy the sensation of the franchise. Some husbands of large hatters were publicly threatened by their wives, but most of them stood firm, resisted intimidation, but plumped with the majority.

INCREASE LEATHER'S COST.

Effect of the Packing House Revelations Upon the Leather Market.

Special to The Montreal Star.

London, June 30.—When there was an outcry in Chicago last autumn that the Beef Trust officials were hoarding hides to raise prices the Shoe and Leather Record jokingly suggested that they were more likely boiling them as table delicacies.

"On the ground of the public health," the current number of the journal says, "there is no reason why the hide of the animal should not be eaten equally with the flesh. But people cannot eat their boots and wear them too.

"If our suggestion be true that hides have been rendered scarce because some of them have been eaten, tanners may in the future find enough hides coming forward to satisfy their reasonable requirements. On the other hand, should the total consumption of meat be permanently checked by the Chicago disclosures, a reduced kill must further increase the already high price of hides."

TO RECOVER FROM SEA.

Greeks Seek Turkish Gold and Art Treasures.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Milan, June 30.—A contract has been concluded between the Greek Government and a Leghorn divers' association famed for their skill for the recovery of seventy Turkish men-of-war sunk at Navarino by the combined English, French, and Russian fleets during the famous battle of October, 1827. The Turkish ships were believed to be carrying a great deal of money. The contract also includes a search for the Roman galleys sunk between Cerigo and Candia while conveying art treasures carried off from Greece during the Latin conquests. The exact spot where these galleys lie is already known, a Greek diver having lately brought up from those waters a beautiful Greek vase, which that Government purchased for four hundred thousand drachmas. The Leghorn divers will leave for Navarino at once.

Engineer was Nearly Electrocuted.

Ottawa, June 30.—Ex-Ald. William Hill, engineer in the Supreme Court building, Bank street, had a narrow escape when he attempted to approach the switchboard to cut off the electric current during a fire started by lightning striking one of the transformers. Two thousand volts went through him and he fell unconscious to the ground. Outside of a burn on his arm, he feels no evil effects of his adventure.

THREE DIFFERENT KINDS OF PAVEMENT

Craig Street East "Boasts" Brick, Granite Blocks and Asphalt all Intermingled.

ASPHALT FULL OF HOLES.

Other Streets North in Same District Show Abundant Need of Repair or Remaking.

The thoroughfares throughout the business district, almost without exception, show traces of neglect, and such streets as Lagauchetiere, Vitre and Craig, are no exceptions to the rule. For instance, Craig street, considering that it is one of the chief arteries of Montreal, is notoriously bad the year through. "As bad as Craig street," is about the worst thing a citizen can say or imagine.

In many cases one is struck with the fact that a comparatively few dollars would now put many of these streets in first class condition, while if they are neglected for any great length of time, as now seems probable, the bill of expense will eventually be enormous, and some day or other they must be fixed or re-made entirely, as the case may be.

LAGAUCHETIERE.

When this street was visited it had just been watered and scraped, and therefore was in a clean condition. Going from St. Lawrence street, east on Lagauchetiere, one finds the street to be very uneven. Sections of it are very good and others are full of holes. From St. Lawrence to St. Dominique the road is good. From St. Dominique to St. Elizabeth it is uneven and the crossings need to be repaired. From St. Elizabeth to St. Denis the street is in a fairly good condition.

The sidewalks on this street are fairly good, only needing a couple of repairs, such as new boards to be placed instead of the old ones.

VITRE STREET.

This is another street which had been visited by the scraping and cleaning gang. Passing from St. Denis street to St. Lawrence street, one finds different specimens of bad roads. From St. Denis street to Sanguinet street the road is fairly even. From Sanguinet to city Hall avenue, the road is filled with little holes about four inches deep, and from a little distance has the appearance of choppy water. Behind the Drill Shed the road is in a very bad condition. Here the Terminal car tracks run along Vitre street for one block, and on each side of the car tracks the road is filled with ruts and holes. The car tracks are far above the street level and it is dangerous for a cart to be caught between the rails while in the act of crossing. Continuing along the street to St. Lawrence street, the road is uneven. The crossings need repairs and so do the side walks.

CRAIG EAST.

On Craig street there are three different kinds of road. The south side of the street is entirely asphalt, while the north is constructed at various points, of brick, granite blocks and asphalt. The asphalt along the south side is very bad. Holes full of water are common.

On the north side from St. Lawrence street to the Drill Shed the road is made of red brick. This road was put down quite a few years ago, and it is now worn very uneven by the heavy traffic on the street. In front of the Drill Shed the street is made of granite blocks. Three car tracks run along the street here, one of the Terminal and two of the Montreal Street Railway. The stones along the edge of all the tracks are irregular. Some have a corner sticking up and others the broadside of the stone. Still others are loose and taking the street as a whole in front of the Drill Shed the road is very bad. From the Drill Shed to St. Elizabeth street is also made of granite blocks, but they are even, and this section of the street is the best. From St. Elizabeth to St. Denis street is asphalt on both sides, and is in a bad condition, having many holes in it, and some of them large. The side walks are all good.

CITY HALL, ST. ELIZABETH, SANGUINET.

City Hall avenue, St. Elizabeth and Sanguinet streets are in bad condition, owing to the unevenness of the roads. In many places pools of water have [illegible] stenches. The edges of all the sidewalks are slowly rotting, and the approaches to drains are as a rule merely mud gullies, especially on the City Hall avenue side of the Drill Shed. From back of the General Hospital on Cadieux street to Sanguinet, corporation laborers had, just before the street was inspected by a Star reporter, scraped up the mud into heaps, but no effort to clean up the mud was apparent.

Health Committee's Short Session.

The meeting of the Health Committee was of short duration yesterday afternoon.

The petition of Gareau & Co. for the erection of a stable on Parthenais street was recommended by the committee and referred to the Council, as was also the petition from the residents of the north end of Breboeuf street for a sewer.

The secretary was instructed to notify the Fenin Leather Company to remove the exhaust pipe from their tannery to the sewer in the road.

There will probably not be another meeting of the committee for a month on account of the holiday season unless something unusual comes up.

The Englishwoman has become the keenest sort of politician. The fact is that after ages of suppression she has at last discovered that she is as good as any man living, and she is not slow in showing it.—Town and Country, New York.

One Ingredient of Zutoo

Is soda—just old-fashioned soda, that our grandmothers took to settle the stomach.

The principal ingredient—the one that stops the headache, is a vegetable ingredient, imported for us from Japan. It wont hurt you any more than will the soda.

The other ingredients of Zutoo are just as harmless.

If you knew what the drug cures contain, and their ultimate effect on the system, you would discard them at once and take Zutoo, which is harmless as Soda.

ROAD FILLINGS CAUSED STENCH

Canon Renaud Appears Before Roads Committee and Makes Serious Complaint.

Rev. Canon Renaud, rector of St. Thomas' Church, appeared before the Roads Committee yesterday afternoon to protest against the filling-in matter used in making Dorion and Delorimier streets. He said that whenever it was disturbed by workmen the stench was awful. The chairman promised to look into the matter.

Canon Renaud opposed the granting of the right to the Street Railway Company to lay lines on Sherbrooke street east. Ald. Lariviere replied that he too was opposed to it, and would never submit to any such measure.

Mr. C. Ritchot, representing the Grand Trunk Railway, appeared before the committee and submitted a sketch drawn by their architects of the plan by which they want to construct an underground tunnel to connect their present offices with the proposed new building on the east side of McGill street. The committee replied that they had no objection to the proposal.

Economy and the Streets.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star.

Sir,—In your issue of the 26th I notice that Mr. Henderson and Mr. Pinoteau have just returned from a visit to New York, Washington and Philadelphia, the object of the visit being to inspect the various parks in these cities and see what pointers could be obtained.

Was there ever such a fraud perpetrated on a community as sending two gentlemen on a pleasure trip to inspect American parks, while the ratepayers were choking with filth and dust because we have not enough money to clean and repair our streets? On another page I notice a discussion of unauthorized repairs to No. 2 Fire Station. Perfectly right. No money should be expended without the consent of Council. But when did anyone ever hear of unauthorized money being spent to clean or repair the streets?

For the last twenty years the Montreal Star has been raising money to give the poor children of the city an outing at this season, giving freely of its valuable space, but what follows? These poor children return invigorated and healthy to be in a short time again choked and sickened by the dirt and dust of this ill-kept city. Aldermen only laugh at a citizen drawing the attention of the community to this state of affairs. It is not editorials or letters that this class of officials who send officials on pleasure trips to the United States and condone the spending of unauthorized money, and then say there is no money in the treasury for cleaning streets, require; it is the asylum.

THE SENATORS AND POPULAR ELECTION.

The Senators are plainly not affrighted at the notion of an elective Senate. Several of them have made popular election the basis, in whole or in part, of their schemes of reform. Many of them are men who have fought elections in their time and fought them doughtily, and so have no dread of meeting the electors face to face.

If popular election were to play an effective part in the making of the Senate, the authority and influence of that body would undoubtedly be vastly increased. Appointment might be . pt for the naming of some Senators with a view to getting certain good men in the Chamber who would never endure the wear and tear of an election campaign; but even this appointive power could be vested in some other body than a committee of the Commons. The suggestion that the universities might be given representatives in the Senate is, for instance, a capital one; and the Provincial Cabinets could be entrusted with the filling of a few seats.

But if the Senators were elected from large constituencies they would speak with a weight which is now absent from their wisest utterances. The constituencies should be so large as to entirely divorce the Senate from the Commons elections, and to prevent the little man with the local "pull" or the "glad hand" from wiggling his way into the House. It is bad enough to have such timber in the Commons.

Senators, under such conditions, would have to be men of stature who could be seen over a large area. They could put before the people statesmanlike proposals, and would not find their best ideas discounted because they were not good at shaking hands and kissing the babies. The cold but brilliant public men would gravitate naturally to the Upper House; and the best intellects in the country would usually be found in the calm atmosphere of the Red Chamber.

THE TREASON OF THE "LOWEST TENDER."

Toronto has had a series of experiences which are calculated to jar the faith of the plain citizen in the efficacy of letting work by tender. The "combine" exposures of last spring are yet fresh in the public mind, and they have now unearthed another scandal in connection with the roofing of St. Lawrence market. It seems that eight firms tendered for the contract, and the job was given to the lowest tenderer. What more could be asked? The most sophisticated citizen of a few years ago would have been amply satisfied.

But it turns out that this lowest tender contained a sum of $2,200 for distribution among the "disappointed" tenderers. They had previously agreed to put in higher tenders than the innocent "lowest"; and they were paid various amounts for their abstinence. Under such an arrangement, the safeguard of competition is eliminated; and the public have no guarantee that they are not charged two prices for their work, while their suspicion is disarmed by the sham guarantee of apparently competing tenders.

If this sort of trick can be played on a public body, it can be made equally effective against a private individual. It does not depend, it will be observed, upon any dishonesty on the part of the public representatives. They may be acting in good faith. They advertise for tenders, and select the lowest. But, if the cards are stacked against them before the game begins, nothing short of expert knowledge on their part can stand as a real protection against organized greed. In the same way, the private citizen must look to his contracts if he would protect his purse. To depend upon competition under such circumstances is to depend upon a very doubtful guardian.

The law should certainly punish severely any such cases of combination which are brought before it. To enter into a plot to pretend to tender for a public work, when no genuine tendering is to be done at all, is to practice a fraud upon the public. It not only takes their money, but deprives them of their natural protection against high prices, and yet deludes them into the belief that this protection is in position. But the law can do no more than capture sporadic cases of this evil. It must be very seldom, indeed, that exposure follows such a bargain. When a number of business men undertake to keep a valuable business secret, they must usually be well able to do so. For one exposure, it would not be unfair to imagine a group of successful conspiracies against the public weal.

The lesson from this is that the old system of advertising for tenders must now come under suspicion. It can no longer be depended upon to beat down prices to a fair level. We must take other means to make sure that we are not being charged too much. The tendering system may still be preserved as one which may be effective occasionally; but the representatives of the public must hold themselves responsible for a thorough knowledge of the matter in hand, which will enable them to sit in informed judgment on even the sacred "lowest tender."

"ET TU" WHISKEY.

This is the day of the iconoclast. The uprightness of high insurance officials has been questioned; the disinterestedness of the Standard Oil Company doubted, the rich, red frankfurter of the free lunch counter alleged to have more variety of preserved bark than Peruvian bitters; and even the integrity of the time-honored canned beef suspected. To the feverish anxiety of those with probes and microscopes, nothing is sacred. Now they are after the whiskey men. It is actually alleged that adulterations and imitations have been discovered in the article which made the name of Scotland famous throughout all the lands, and the beverage which "blesses" Kentucky.

In the pure food debate at Washington, a few days ago, some interesting facts were disclosed. Statistics were produced by a representative from Alabama to show that in the United States 105,000,000 gallons of "doped" whiskey was annually poured down the throats of the population, and only 2,000,000 gallons of the real goods were consumed. "Eight-year-old liquor" was made between the rising of the sun and the setting thereof. To demonstrate what was done and how it was done, a representative from Kentucky gave the House an object lesson. He took a quart of alcohol, shook in a little caramel to color it, added some essence of Bourbon, and then defied any connoisseur in the House to tell his decoction from the genuine article. "This hellish mixture," he said, "will eat the intestines out of a coyote. It will make a howling dervish out of an anchorite. It will make a rabbit spit in a bull dog's face."

Yet efforts to compel all dealers to give a precise and accurate statement of the ingredients upon every bottle of liquor they sold, were futile. A proposed amendment to the pure food bill to this effect was voted down, which shows that the "doped" whiskey manufacture is a power potent to perform.

The making of liquor is under more complete government supervision in Canada than in the United States, and it is doubtful if imitation or adulterated whiskey is sent out from any of our distilleries. It does not follow that those who drink whiskey invariably get what they pay for. "Let me fill the bottles and I care not who makes the labels," is a principle more generally acted upon than most people know. Those who travel and taste say that in this temple of purity, Montreal itself, the use of adulterated liquors of dangerous quality, has had a tremendous increase within the past five years. It is even stated that there are saloons where experts work in specially fitted basements, to "fix" liquors, being able to remove and replace corks and capsules, so as to defy detection. The villainous quality of the stuff being handed out over some of the bars in Montreal, has been called to the notice of the City Council, and the opinion of the city attornies given that the city had a right to seize and destroy bad liquors just as much as tainted beef or mouldy mutton. That appears to be about as far as the agitation went.

In an article in one of the technical papers in the United States, about a year ago, the late Dr. Buller, of Montreal, was one of the chief authorities cited to show that a large amount of blindness had come under his notice due directly to drinking liquors made with methylated spirits. Let it be remembered that the cases which came under the notice of that authority were right here in Montreal. As long as the government license the sale of liquors those who drink them have a right to be protected against poisoning. Much of the worst effects of drinking liquor is probably due to the bad quality sold. It is among the places resorted to by the poorest people that the vilest drink is sold, and few of those who occupy the pen in the Recorder's Court every morning got drunk on "the real goods."

THE RULERS OF EUROPE.

Few monarchs have enjoyed the distinction of seeing both a daughter and a niece ascend two thrones as contemporary rulers within the space of one short month. Yet such has been the experience of Edward VII., King of Great Britain and Ireland. Not more than a week since, the coronation of his youngest daughter Maud, as Queen Consort of the newly-elected Norse King, Haakon, took place, almost before the world had ceased to discuss the brilliant details of the recent gorgeous wedding festivities in the Spanish capital when King Edward's young niece, Princess Victoria Eugenie of Battenberg, became the bride of King Alfonso.

The late Queen Louise of Denmark was not infrequently referred to as "the grandmother of all Europe." Of King Edward it may be said even more truthfully, that he is "the uncle of all Europe." The links in the chain of royal relationships in Europe are becoming more and more closely forged. A glance at the various reigning houses of the Continent shows how closely they are allied with that of Great Britain.

Nicholas II., Czar of all the Russias, is a nephew of Queen Alexandra, and his Imperial consort, nee Princess Alice of Hesse-Darmstadt, daughter of the late Princess Alice of England, is a niece of the King. William II. of Germany is another of the royal nephews, being a son of the late Queen Victoria's eldest daughter, the late Empress Frederick of Germany. Princess Gustavus Adolphus, nee Margaret of Connaught, the future Queen of Sweden, is another of the royal nieces; as also the Crown Princess Marie of Roumania, eldest daughter of Alfred, late Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and a brother of King Edward. King Charles of Denmark and King George of Greece are brothers-in-law of the British ruler. The Crown Princess of Greece is also another of King Edward's nieces, being a sister of the German Emperor. King Leopold of Belgium was a cousin of the late Queen Victoria. Queen Wilhelmina of Holland is closely connected from the fact that her mother, Dowager Queen Emma, is a sister of the Duchess of Albany, widow of Prince Leopold, King Edward's youngest brother, thus making Queen Wilhelmina a cousin of some of the younger members of the British Royal House. The Emperor of Austria and the Kings of Italy and Portugal as yet can claim no special kinship with English royalty. The monarchs of Saxony, Wurtemburg and Bavaria can all claim a distant cousinship with King Edward. The occupants of the ducal thrones of Saxe-Cobourg and Gotha and Hesse-Darmstadt are both nephews of King Edward, the former being the only son of Leopold, late Duke of Albany; and the latter, a son of the late Princess Alice of England, by her marriage, Grand Duchess of Hesse-Darmstadt; the houses of Saxe-Meiningen, Schaumburg-Lippe, Schleswig-Holstein and so on, are also intimately connected with English royalty. Just what bearing these various relationships will have upon the future diplomatic relations of the countries involved, would be difficult to foretell; but if there is anything at all in the old saying, "blood is thicker than water," the bond of unity between the nations should be materially strengthened.

When the late Hon. Raymond Prefontaine was buried by the State, it was felt that a strong man and a progressive Canadian had passed away. The mistakes were forgotten and only the good remembered. In Montreal the leading citizens turned out to do him honor, and altogether the tributes paid were exceptional. It, therefore, seems a matter of very questionable taste that some of his colleagues insist on the necessity of still defending his memory. There is nothing in the records that would indicate any desire on the part of his one-time political opponents to asperse the dead man or belittle his record. Indeed, the transactions under investigation in his department have not involved a personal reference to the dead minister in an adverse sense. To say, therefore, that his memory needs a defender, under these circumstances, is to cast the first stone. The game of politics should not be played with the tools of a gravedigger.

THIS DATE THIRTY YEARS AGO.

June 30, 1876.

The late Sir William Dawson.

The children of the Protestant Board schools met at the Victoria Skating Rink, at ten o'clock on Wednesday, to the number of three thousand. Principal Dawson, of McGill University, presided. The meeting opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. Wells and hymns by the pupils. The chairman next presented the prizes, and made an interesting address to the children. Rev. Mr. Wells, Mr. Lunn, Aldermen G. W. Stephens, Holland and Clendinneng also spoke of the value of an education in their future lives. The proceedings were brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

ALL the members of the School Board above mentioned have passed away, except Mr. William Clendinneng, who still enjoys good health, and keeps up his interest in the welfare of the Protestant public schools. He served for many years in the City Council, and while there succeeded in passing many useful by-laws for the improvement of the city.

The members of F Company received their new clothing, just arrived from England, last evening at the regimental reading room. The trews are of a dark, neat plaid, and the tunics of the usual Fusiliers pattern, with a busby as headdress.

The Fusiliers are now the Royal Scots of Canada, Highlanders, and have changed their title and uniform several times in the past thirty years. The late Captain Campbell Macdougall raised and commanded No. 6, or F Company for many years. He was a most popular officer.

The late Dr. Beers.

The lacrosse teams that have been playing in the principal cities of Great Britain and Ireland sail from Liverpool today on the Moravian. Dr. Beers sailed on the 22nd instant, and may be expected in town in a few days. Mr. J. K. White, secretary of the Montreal Lacrosse Club, called a meeting of the members last evening, in the gymnasium, when steps were taken to receive the teams in an appropriate manner.

THE tour was not a success from a financial point of view; though the Dominion got well advertised, the "gate" barely covered expenses. The late Dr. George Beers and his companions received the greatest courtesy and attention from the late Queen Victoria and best classes in the country. On the arrival of the European team in the city they were met by their fellow members of the Montreal Club and welcomed home. Subsequently they were entertained at a banquet.

The arrangements for the grand farewell concert to M. and Mdme. Jehin-Prume have now been completed by the committee, and it is announced that the programme will be the best heard for years in this city. The concert will come off on the 3rd July, and promises to be well attended by the musical public.

Both of the above eminent artists "crossed the bar" some years ago. Mdme. Prume had a well cultivated full soprano voice, of good range and power, which she used with sympathetic effect on all occasions. She was a great favorite with concert audiences, and so was her husband, who was a violinist of the first rank. He was a master of his instrument, and could draw from it the sweetest of tones. He brought much credit to the Dominion.

Judging by the packers' yarns, things are so clean that the cattle wipe their feet on the door mat before entering the stockyards.

If Montreal is going to buy St. Helen's Island, would it not be a good idea to run a ferry service there that could do the round trip under the time that it takes to go to Europe and back?

"I don't mind the weather," the millionaire said,
I don't mind the sun that is blazing o'erhead,
I don't mind the air that comes blistering hot
And threatens to broil me right here on the spot.

"When the weather prediction says 'hotter next day,'
With sweet resignation I go on my way.
I find as I live year by year in this clime
There's nothing you cannot get used to, in time.

The magazine writers have raised me to fame,
The weather, with fierce equatorial touch—
I don't mind it now; I've been roasted so much!"

That is Rossland's Output for the Past Year.

The president of the Rossland Board of Trade estimates the total output of the Rossland mines for the year 1906 at 314,473 tons.

Estimating this at a value of $12 a ton gives a grand total for the year of $3,759,000 as the gross value of the ore.

This is less than the estimated values in 1902, 1903, and 1904, but exceeds all figures before that; 1903 was the banner year, with an output of 377,134 tons of an estimated value of $4,631,280.

The total output since and including 1894 is given as 2,314,893 tons of an estimated value of $33,490,141.

The Case of Alphonse Foucault.

Judge Desnoyers opened yesterday the investigation into the case of Alphonse Foucault, the cabman, who is charged with attempting to assault Leda Baillargeon, twelve years of age, while she was alone in her home, 10 Chaboillez. The little girl stated that she was detained three hours before anyone heard her screams. Constables Laberge and Desrosiers, who arrested Foucault, were also heard as witnesses, but did not throw any light on the case. Counsel for Foucault asked the court that the accused be admitted on bail, and the judge said he would consider the request if two good reliable bondsmen were furnished, as he did not want to take a chance of Foucault jumping his bail. The case was then remanded until next Wednesday for voluntary statement, when the accused will be committed for trial.

Liquor License Case Settled.

The liquor license belonging to 107 Mountain street, over which there has been such a dispute, has finally been awarded to Donald Label. Judges Desnoyers and Choquet, sitting as the license commissioners, yesterday afternoon, finally decided what should be done with the license, as their action now does away with any more chance to appeal. Mr. Recorder Poirier, who is at present absent from the city, signed the license a few days ago. Judge Choquet was of the opinion that the license ought not to be granted until the case had been disposed of by the Court of Review, but Judge Desnoyers agreed with Recorder Poirier, so, since the majority rules, the license was granted.

VAGARIES OF IRISH GHOST

Profane, but Feminine, it Haunts a Tipperary Town.

USES THE MAILS ALSO.

Advocated a Drop of Poteen for Police Searching for It, and Eludes Them.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Dublin, June 30.—A particularly profane spook, believed to be feminine, is disturbing the Tipperary town of Clonmel. Its language is described by the oldest inhabitants as "dareadful, intoirely"—such, in fact, as has never been heard before even in Tipperary.

It is not the banshee, the dolorous spook peculiar to Ireland, for she is the most inoffensive of the supernaturals, and usually confines her visits to the homes of the decayed aristocracy.

The residents in two business houses adjoining one another in the main thoroughfare in Clonmel have been the victims of the profane visitor. It raps at their walls, and uses appalling language rolled out with a feminine brogue. It steals the household goods, eats the meat in the safes, leaving only the bones, upsets the furniture, overturns the beds, and empties the water jug on the blankets.

It is a very modern spook, for its profanity is said to be up-to-date, and before it came announced its arrival by letters dropped through the letter boxes of the two families it has visited. One householder kept a watch for three hours, and the moment he left a note fell through the letter box saying: "There's no use your watching. You won't catch me."

Parties of police have been stationed in both houses at the same time. They heard the raps, and the language, and distinctly recognized a feminine brogue. Soon after they left a note was dropped through the letter box of one of the houses giving a detailed account of a conversation that had passed between the owner and the police. The spook also bade the police welcome when they came, and good-bye when they left, and asked the tenant why he did not give them a "wee dhrop iv potheen."

TOYED WITH LYDDITE

And the Boer Lady Perished from Her Artistic Propensities.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Johannesburg, June 30.—A curious tragedy has occurred on a farm in the Utrecht district. A Natal farmer named Moolman found a 4.7 naval gun shell lying on the veldt unexploded, and took it home with him.

His sister, who wanted the shell for purposes of decoration, began to dig out the lyddite, and to soften it poured cold water upon it. The lyddite and water began to effervesce, and the girl went indoors and, from the end of the passage, watched the shell, which lay upon the doorstep.

Suddenly there was a terrific explosion, and Miss Moolman fell dead, struck in the breast by a piece of shell. The whole house was wrecked, every pane of glass, every window frame, and every door being cast to the ground, and most of the furniture being upset and smashed.

FERMENT IN ENGLAND

The Hornet's Nest Which New Education Bill Has Stirred Up.

Special to the Montreal Star.

London, June 30.—A great Catholic demonstration against the new educational measures proposed by Parliament is being planned here. At the last Catholic demonstration at Gateshead Mr. Watts, of Liverpool, in denouncing the Education Bill, declared:

"What monopoly in America has done with the food of the people, monopoly in education in England will do for the Christian religion."

The Primate replying to the letter from lay members of the church advocating adoption of the principle of Clause 1, but amendments in the direction of religious education, says that the signatures are bound to demand thoughtful attention, and that he appreciates highly the contribution it makes to the material for a decision on the question.

BLACK MAN'S BURDEN.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Brussels, June 30.—King Leopold sets forth his personal claims to the Congo Free State in two letters just published in the "Official Bulletin."

His Majesty then comments on the atrocities which have taken place, which he says are inseparable from all human work. Administration must protect the natives, but cannot forget the rights of the whites.

The State must be developed by railways and other means, and for this purpose bonds will be placed as necessity arises. "Sleeping sickness must be stamped out," writes His Majesty, "and for the investigation necessary I will sign a credit for $600,000. A price of $400,000 also awaits the man who succeeds in doing this."

The Reporter Escaped.

(St. Andrews Beacon.)

It is rather an unusual practice in Canada to summon newspaper men before the bar of Parliament. The writer recalls the narrow escape of a youthful reporter in the New Brunswick Legislature twenty-five years ago. Urbain Johnson, M.P.P. for Kent, delivered himself of a speech which contained such a mixture of French that the reporter was unable to follow him. Feeling sure that a speech that had elicited such rounds of applause from his brother legislators should not be allowed to be wasted upon the desert air of the Legislature, the reporter requested another member from Kent (now deceased) to supply him with a condensed report of Mr. Johnson's remarks for publication. He said he would be glad to do so. When the alleged speech appeared in the St. John paper the next day it was found to contain sentiments that Mr. Johnson declared he had never entertained nor expressed. In high dudgeon he arose in his place in the Legislature and demanded that the reporter who had sent such stuff to his paper be brought before the bar of the House for punishment. The other members of the House insisted upon Mr. Johnson reading the published address. When he got through the House was in such an uproar of laughter that Mr. Johnson's motion on the subject could not be heard. The subject was never brought up again, much to the satisfaction of the trembling reporter, who did not know what pains and penalties might be inflicted upon him.

When the Liver is out of Order calomel, cascara, salts, strong liver pills and purging mineral waters won't do any permanent good.

When a person is bilious, the liver is not giving up enough bile to move the bowels regularly—and some of the bile is being absorbed by the blood. In other words, the liver is in a weakened, unhealthy condition.

Now, purgatives don't act on the liver at all. They merely irritate the bowels, and afford only temporary relief. But FRUIT-A-TIVES are the one true LIVER TONIC. They act directly on the liver—strengthen and invigorate this vital organ—and put it in a normal, healthy condition.

FRUIT-A-TIVES also stimulate the glands of the skin—and regulate the kidneys and sweeten the stomach. When skin, liver and kidneys are normally healthy, there can be no biliousness, no constipation, no kidney trouble, no impure blood, no headaches.

No other medicine known to science is so reliable and so effective in curing Biliousness as these fruit liver tablets.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are fruit juices with tonics added—and are free from alcohol and dangerous drugs. 50c. a box or 6 for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price, if your druggist does not handle them.

Columbia, S.C., June 30.—W. O. Tatum, dispensary commissioner, has just received information from Orangeburg that J. T. Parks, auditing clerk of the state dispensary and secretary of the State Democratic executive committee, and R. H. Covar, business manager of the Orangeburg Patriot, were mortally wounded there yesterday in a street duel. Both men were shot through the body.

Parks formerly owned the Patriot and sold it to Covar. The shooting is the result of trouble over the settlement.

World Gossip

Says Galicians Are Good People.

"There are about 60,000 Galicians in Canada to-day, the greater number of whom are situated in the Edmonton district, and, as a whole, they are a very satisfactory element."

Last night, while discussing at the Windsor Hotel the character of the immigrants arriving in Western Canada, Mr. John A. Cairns, of Winnipeg, made the above statement.

"The people out there known as the Galicians are of two families, the Polish and the Ruthenians. To-day there are approximately six thousand of these people in Winnipeg, with an additional nomadic population of probably two thousand.

"Of the six thousand in and around Winnipeg, the majority are property owners, some of them very well fixed, and when seen on the street they cannot be distinguished from the more prosperous citizens.

"There has in certain instances been some trouble, but this has been caused to a great extent by a band of a few young men, who hail from three or four of the Galician villages out West. These fellows served in the army in the old country, and afterwards came to Canada, and, taking up quarters together in Canada, have combined for offensive and defensive work. They travel in gangs. A party of them will go out on railway construction or other work for a few months, and return to spend their money around the resorts of the city, a very large percentage going over the bars. The result of this may be easily understood. There is a feeling among the respectable element that this gang ought to be eliminated. However, these fellows are only the exception, and the majority have proved very satisfactory in every way, and they are a desirable class for this or any other country."

Government Methods of Buying.

"Appearances point to the fact that our present Government are not any too careful in the methods of buying employed by their agents," said Mr. Frank J. Hartney, of Vancouver, last night.

"In our city a short time ago the Government bought in the confiscated gasoline schooner North at auction, for which it paid a price of $6,000.

"Of course, there is nothing remarkable in this fact, but there is considerable to say regarding the way in which the business was transacted.

"Had it been generally known that the Government was bidding for the boat, every private bidder would have retired, leaving the field to the Government, but this knowledge was not general, and, as the sale had to be carried out according to all legal requirements, several people wasted their time and breath making offers. In the light of the purchase by the Government this outside bidding was ludicrous, something like a man betting good coin against "stage money" at a race track. By bidding in the boat, the only expense to the Government will be the payment of the legal costs incurred in fighting the claims of the owner, from whom the vessel was confiscated.

"Mr. C. B. Sword, fisheries inspector out there, did the buying in for the Government, and as soon as the sale began the first bid offered was $2,000, which amount was raised to $5,000. Then Mr. Sword bid $5,500. One man raised to $5,600, then Sword took another $50. The first man went another $50, and the Government official then raised the price $200. The only outsider in the business then laid down his hand, and Mr. Sword enjoyed a good laugh up his sleeve.

When it became known that Mr. Sword was acting for the Government, the other bidders felt indignant, as the Government might have bid $60,000, as the amount named above.

"Why it was necessary to do this no one has explained, and the fact of the matter is, they would have a hard time explaining it."

Tribute to Roosevelt.

London, June 30.—At a luncheon tendered Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Lord Curzon, speaking for the guests, said it had been a great pleasure for them to meet the daughter of the greatest statesman of the day. President Roosevelt, he added, had made an enduring mark on the history of his times, but also, he said, the British had to thank him for cementing the good-will existing between the two peoples.

BAILIFF'S SALE—PROVINCE OF QUEbec, District of Montreal, No. 7184, Circuit Court. Pierre Dorais, Plaintiff, vs. Frank F. Taylor, Defendant. On the 11th day of July, 1906, at eleven of the clock in the forenoon, at the domicile of the said Defendant, in Town of St. Paul, Levis st., in the District of Montreal, will be sold by authority of Justice, all the goods and chattels of the said Defendant, seized in this cause, consisting of furniture, ANATOLE CHERRIER, B. S. C. Montreal, 29th June, 1906.

OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP HELD AT MUIRFIELD

Golf Tournament Accross the Water in Which Braid Did Some Great Work—Vardon's Putting Weak and Taylor Brilliant But Disappointing

The last day's play of the open golf tournament of Great Britain is described as follows by the London Telegraph:

Rain fell overnight at Muirfield, so that the greens were much stiffer in the morning, but under the influence of sun and wind became fast again after lunch. Vardon was probably playing the best golf up to the hole, but his putting was weak; Taylor was at times very brilliant and then very disappointing; Braid, though shorter than usual, was very steady.

Curiously enough Taylor and Mr. Graham were drawn together, so that their match was the all-important one in the morning. Mr. Graham was but one shot behind, and it was generally thought that should he come away with another very low score he might be added to the list of Hoylake amateurs who have won the open championship. He made rather an unfortunate start, however, for he was very weak with his approach putt at the first hole, and required a four. Taylor was perfect at the first four holes, but Mr. Graham again lost a shot at the third hole, where, after two lovely shots, he was short with his putt of six yards, and missed a short one of a yard through his putter catching the edge of his coat. Taylor nearly had a 3 at the fourth, and both men managed a 5 at the fifth, though Mr. Graham was in the rough with his second. An easy half in 4 followed, but Taylor was rather short going to the wall, with his putt of ten yards, and missed his next. This gave Mr. Graham back a stroke and a half in 4 at the ninth, and left Taylor leading with 37 to 38.

Neither got their putt down at the tenth, though the hole was beautifully played, Taylor's ball kicking away to the left off his run up to the hole. At the eleventh both took their cleeks off the tee and wooden clubs for their second shots. Taylor was close to the hole, and got down a good putt for a 3. Mr. Graham was short with his long putt, but holed out well in 4. Both had splendid iron shots at the twelfth, but Mr. Graham missed his putt and went still another stroke behind. Taylor was unlucky to break into the bunker at the thirteenth, but had a good lie, and managed a 4. Mr. Graham made a good second and secured a 3, but cut his tee shots too fine at the short hole and struck the face of the bunker. He failed to clear the face with his second, and required five strokes for the hole, which Taylor played nicely in 3.

At the fifteenth Taylor was a bit lucky to run clear between the pot-bunker and the big one, but threw away his fortune by missing a very short putt. Mr. Graham, with a beautiful long putt, lay dead and registered a 3. The long play to the 16th was good, but Taylor hit his approach too high, and was short with his long putt. Mr. Graham also failed with his putt from the edge of the green, and also required a 6. Taylor dropped a shot at the seventeenth on the green, and Mr. Graham lost at least a stroke at the last hole, where he slackened his grip of the iron and put his second shot into the bunker. The total scores were: Taylor, 75; Mr. Graham, 78.

Meanwhile Rowland Jones had handed in a 73, which left him only one stroke behind Taylor's aggregate of 224. Vardon had started none too well, but picked up until the seventeenth, where he appeared to be put off his tee shot by a spectator. He missed the ball, and the hole cost him 6 and the round 77. He was thus three strokes behind Taylor. James Braid was late in coming in, and by this time Taylor and Mr. Graham had started on their last round. The champion was out in 37, and helped himself at the twelfth with a splendid 3. He, however, dropped a stroke at the sixteenth and another at the Seventeenth, owing to his being short with his approach. Finishing with a good third shot, he made a 4 of the last hole and finished in 74, thus equalling Vardon's 227.

In the afternoon Taylor and Graham again took the first crowd, but the champion opened badly with a five, being bunkered to the left of the green, and added to his score with 5's at the third and fourth. Mr. Graham gained a stroke at the second and another at the fourth. Taylor overshot the green at the seventh, and missed a shortish putt. Two halves in 4 followed, the outward scores being 41 and 39. Mr. Graham was thus but two strokes behind on the whole tournament. Taylor, however, got another stroke advantage by the aid of a 3 at the tenth, but required a 6 to the eleventh, where he failed to carry the ridge with his second, his ball coming back into the bunker. Mr. Graham had a 5 here, and the next was halved in 5, where Mr. Graham was in the bunker short of the green with his second. He, however, got square with the professional at the fourteenth, owing to a fine 3 at the thirteenth, and the fact that Taylor hit his iron shot off the socket at the short hole and required a 5, it now looked as if the amateur was to take the lead, for he hit a beauty at the fifteenth, and should almost have got a 2. He missed, however, and missed again, so that Taylor, who holed well in 3, gained a stroke where it looked as if Mr. Graham might have taken an advantage of 2. The sixteenth was well halved in 5, and the seventeenth in 4, so that Taylor led by one stroke. Excitement was intense when Taylor pulled his ball far into the rough, and Mr. Graham lay well in the middle of the course. Taylor had a fortunate lie, and with a magnificent short pitch got right over the hole with his brassey. Mr. Graham played the hole perfectly; but Taylor, holing his putt for a 3, finished 2 ahead, with a total of 304 to 306.

Vardon started with a 3, but let two 6's get into his card at the second and fifth. Then for a while he played grandly, but seemed likely to get a bad hole at the ninth, where he was bunkered off the tee. With a wonderful iron shot he got the ball on the green, and holeing a long putt for a 3 was out in thirty-nine. He missed the putt for a 3 at the next, and played his long putt rather hard at the eleventh. Then he fell in a fearfully bad run of putting, just as he had overtaken Taylor and seemed likely to go right away. He missed a putt of a yard at the twelfth, and then after a grand drive to the green at the next he lost a stroke on the green. Trying for a 2 at the short hole, he overran and took 4, and added to his disasters by driving into the bunker at the fifteenth. Despite these misfortunes he finished in 78, or one stroke behind Taylor.

Walter Toogood now came in with 71, a professional record. Rowland Jones made a poor finish, so that Braid was left with a 76 to win. He did not start until four o'clock, and played steady golf against the wind. He had a lucky 3 at the first hole, where he jumped the bunker on the left. He followed this with a fine 4 and an indifferent 5, but after this his play was showed that, bar accidents, he was to be the winner. He did nothing wrong until the ninth, where he was in the rough off the tee and overshot the hole with his second, requiring 5 to hole out. This gave him a total of 38 for the first half. Coming in, he sta[rte]d with [o]ne 4's at the eleventh and twelfth, but from this point it was only a question of how much he would outdistance his rivals. This question he answered at the seventeenth hole, where he holed a fifteen yards put for a 3 and proceeded to attempt the same feat at the last green. He holed out in 73, giving him a total of 300. Braid, who is a Fifeshire man, is thirty-six years old, and learned his golf at Elie and afterwards at St. Andrews. This is his third win; three times also he has been second. He has evidently the best nerve of the leading professionals, and stands from all points the first golfer of the year.

Property for C.P.R. Extensions.

The property purchased by different C.P.R. officials on Mountain street and in the vicinity of Windsor station, with a view to turning it over to the company for the extension of the terminus at a future date, has now been transferred to the company. In the property is included 110-114 Windsor street, which has been standing under the name of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, and which was turned over to the C.P.R. for the sum of $28,727; and 170 and 172 Mountain street were also turned over.

Grand Trunk's New Building.

Tenders will be called for next week for the new structure which the Grand Trunk Railway is proposing to build on McGill street opposite their present headquarters. It is expected that the new building, which will be ten storeys high, will cost in the neighborhood of $250,000, and will be occupied almost entirely by the offices of the Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk Pacific. A subway will connect the present building with the new one.

National Editorial Association Return

Members of the National Editorial Association, to the number of 275, are now visiting in Montreal. They arrived in the city this morning from Quebec and a trip up the Saguenay. About fifty of them passed through yesterday, returning to their homes before the rest of the party. After spending to-day and to-morrow here and being entertained by the city, the members of the association will leave for Ottawa, and from there will go to Detroit, where the party will disband.

The Virginian in Port.

The Allan line steamship Virginian arrived in port at 9 o'clock this morning from Liverpool. The Virginian made a good run from the other side. She reached Quebec at 10.30 o'clock yesterday morning, and after discharging the third-class passengers, proceeded up the river at 3 o'clock p.m., anchoring out when darkness overtook her.

Civic Improvement League.

Halifax, June 30.—A Civic Improvement League has been formed here to beautify the city. It has an executive of twelve, two from each ward.

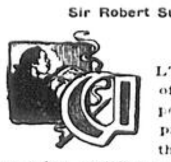
Sir Robert Superseded.



LTHOUGH the decree of the Chinese Imperial Government presented through the Wai-Wu-Pu has somewhat modified the customs situation in Pekin, yet the fact remains that Sir Robert Hart, who, since 1863, has been Inspector-General of Customs in China, now finds himself subordinate to a couple of Chinese officials; and although, moreover, the Pekin Government repudiates the suspicion that its aim is to obtain absolute control over the maritime customs, still the question arises, Where is China, if not from those customs, to get the millions which the projected Chinese army will absorb? The plain fact is, that the revenue department of China is mortgaged up to the hilt for the service of foreign loans, aggregating some $2,300,000,000, and also pledged for the payment of the remainder of the war indemnity. Sir Robert Hart, as statistics show, has just managed to make both ends meet, and has satisfied the foreign bond-holders. But will the two mysterious officials who have just been appointed in authority over him continue his good work? There are signs in European Chancelleries that China's action will presently be resented in a concerted diplomatic demonstration in Pekin which will probably be unequalled in the history of the world. The grounds taken will be three: The protection of foreign bond-holders, the menace to the peace of Asia by the formidable army which the Wai-Wu-Pu proposes to create, and the injustice inflicted upon the members of the Chinese Civil Service, which, for more than forty years, Sir Robert Hart has been laboriously building up. The Chinese Customs Service came into existence as a temporary expedient in 1854, when the rebels captured Shanghai and destroyed the Imperial Customs Bureau. To remedy this inconvenience the treaty Consuls, acting with the concurrence of their respective Ministers, decided to constitute a joint commission for the collection of maritime customs duties. Thus from a small beginning the present service has been finally evolved under the masterly guiding hand of Sir Robert, who has not only succeeded in making it possible for China to secure loans abroad at the best terms, but guaranteed their basis of stability. What becomes of the guarantees if a native directorate be placed in control, which implies the most elaborate denials notwithstanding—the diversion of a large amount of duties into China's war chest, and the reversion of the old system of nepotism, venality, and maladministration?

Canadians in the United States.

On a rough calculation, there are about fifteen hundred thousand Canadians in the United States, and if their descendants are counted, about three millions. From a list of more than two hundred names of eminent Canadians now living in the United States it appears that the principal human exports of Canada are professors, preachers, doctors, and authors. At the head of the thirty-eight professors in the list stands Jacob G. Schurman, who has been for fourteen years president of Cornell University. In all respects he is a representative Canadian of the highest type. His first glimpse of the world was from the windows of a little farmhouse on Prince Edward Island. The "grand old man" among the professors is one who holds the doctor's degree of sixteen universities, and who is the only American since Franklin to be an associate of the Institute of France—Professor Simon Newcomb, the astronomer. For fifty-two years he has taught the American people the story of the stars, and he is still at work on cosmic problems at his home in Washington. The most widely known of the Canadian preachers is Bishop Charles H. Fowler, of the Methodist Church. Another of the same denomination who was known some time ago as "President McKinley's pastor," is the Rev. Hugh Johnson, of Baltimore. Two of the most eminent leaders of the Roman Catholic Church are Canadians by birth—Archbishop Quigley, of Chicago, and Archbishop Riordan, of San Francisco. Four Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church are also Canadians: C. P. Anderson, of Chicago, A. L. Williams, of Nebraska, W. W. Niles, of New Hampshire, and P. T. Rowe, of Alaska. Coming to the doctors, the one who has caused the greatest amount of discussion during the past twelve months is undoubtedly Dr. William Osler, who recently became Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford after sixteen years of service at Johns Hopkins. The oldest doctor on the list is Dr. Charles H. Shepard, of Brooklyn, eighty-one years of age, to whom is due the credit of having built, in 1863, the first Turkish bath establishment in America. Dr. Wolfred Nelson, of New York, is one of the world's leading authorities on tropical diseases; as is Dr. Thomas P. Hall, of Chicago, on the medical uses of electricity. In business the most prominent Canadian is James J. Hill, who has been called the "Railway Napoleon of the North-West."

RIGHT OF SANCTION BY PROVINCES
THE DEMAND OF THE ANTI-SUNDAY OBSERVANCE BILL GATHERING

action should be regarded as being within the provisions of the bill or not, and so might inflict penalties practically at his uncontrolled discretion. Works of necessity or mercy were excepted, but who was to say that any given work came or did not come under these heads.

"These were the objections to the measure, but a solution had been offered as Mr. Rivet declared one that settled the whole problem. This solution, however, was not all that Mr. Rivet had represented. It was not the amendment that Mr. Piche had proposed and which they had both promised to insist on. Mr. Piche's amendment had demanded that each article of the bill be subjected to the consideration of the different local governments and should not become law till it had received their approval. Mr. Bourassa himself had also proposed an amendment which was to the effect that the whole bill should be submitted to the decision of the provincial legislatures and should not become law without their assent. This would have been a sufficient protection of the rights of those who did not wish the bill to be passed while permitting those who wanted it to do as they pleased. "I am so careful of the liberties of others," said Mr. Bourassa, "that I would allow them to imprison and fetter themselves if such were their desire."

This amendment, however, while submitting the bill in some respects to the decision of the provincial legislatures had made a condition that this decision should affect only matters which came into provincial jurisdiction. This, in the opinion of the speaker, would lead to endless disputes and would not guarantee the protection of civil liberties, because many of the matters concerned in the measure were under federal as well as local control. He instanced the fruit and candy stores which it was intended to close. This would mean the throwing of thousands of poor families upon the street, but still as it was a matter of commerce and as this was a question for federal decision the provincial veto would not be of any assistance whatever. In this way the amendment while looking very impressive at first sight dwindled in its application to very insignificant proportions. "It leaves uncovered three quarters of the ground," he said, "and the remaining quarter is of little account."

MR. BOURASSA'S RESOLUTION.

Mr. Bourassa in conclusion read a resolution which was unanimously adopted. It read as follows:

"The citizens of Montreal and its suburbs, in public meeting assembled, strongly protest against the adoption of the Lord's Day Bill now under discussion in the Federal Parliament.

"That measure is a derogation of all the customs which have existed from all time past in the province of Quebec, and infringes deeply upon the civil rights, and the social organization of which the inhabitants of that province have heretofore been possessed, both under the French regime and the various constitutions which Great Britain has granted to them since the treaty of Paris.

"The citizens of Quebec, as well as those of Ontario, are anxious to preserve the religious character of the Lord's Day and to assure to the working classes the rest to which they are entitled.

"Deeply imbued with the principles of liberty and with respect for the conscience of their neighbors, they acknowledge without any reservation to the citizens of the other provinces the right to accomplish as they think fit that Christian and social duty; but they believe they are entitled equally to the right of practising the same duty within the limits of their province, according to their national and religious traditions, and to their public laws and customs, older as they are than those of any other province in Canada.

"Such a question, involving as it does the creed, racial tradition, family habits, civil rights and social organization, should remain within the sphere of action covered by provincial legislation, and according to the declaration made by the Minister of Justice the Legislature of each province could enact, under a different form, laws for the observance of Sunday in conformity with the needs and wishes of the people of such province.

"At all events, the Federal Parliament should restrain its action to the adoption of a law regulating the circulation of trains and steamships on Sunday.

"The citizens of Montreal hereby appeal to the members of the Senate and the House of Commons, without regard to race, creed or party, in the name of the peace which should reign undisturbed between the two great social elements of which the people of Canada is mainly composed, and request them most urgently to have regard to provincial rights in this matter, and not to impose on the province of Quebec a law contrary to the customs, the sentiments, the interests and the civil rights of its inhabitants.

"It is hereby suggested that if a majority of the representatives from the other provinces are anxious to press the adoption of this measure, a clause should be inserted therein providing that the act shall come into force only in those provinces where the Legislatures shall enact that the said act shall apply to their respective territory and inhabitants.

"In consequence of all that is above stated, this meeting approves of the attitude of the members of the House of Commons who have heretofore opposed this measure and of their efforts in endeavoring to have it amended, and affirms that their duty as well as the duty of every representative of the people anxious to preserve the liberties of the people, is to oppose by his vote the third reading of the bill, unless such a clause is added as will absolutely reserve to the Provincial Legislatures a ratifying power."

MR. ALPHONSE VERVILLE, M.P.

Mr. Alphonse Verville, M.P., was next to address the audience. He said that up to the present time he had said very little about the bill in the House. But now that things had taken such a turn he would vigorously protest against it at the third reading. He did not contest the need of a day's rest for the laborer. No, much to the contrary, but he considered that the poor as well as the rich should be allowed to have healthy recreation on their day of rest. The Lord's Day Alliance and its followers could do as they pleased about spending their day of rest in the country where they lived, but he could not stand to have them dictate to the people of this province. As to the support the bill was receiving from the many members of the House, he had found that the country's interests would be much safer if the people's representatives had a freer hand and were not bound by party ties. The Premier had promised him amendments to two clauses, "and if to-morrow," said the speaker, "at the third reading of the bill, these clauses have not been amended, I will before the House openly tell the Premier that he tricked me and lied to me."

Mr. Lavergne, M.P., was the next speaker. He expressed his pleasure at being present and said he felt assured that the night's demonstration would give him renewed courage to continue his fight against the bill. When the bill was first brought up the Government informed them that it had been asked for by the labor fraternities while all that was wanted by them was one day a week for rest without the additional hypocritical legislation which is now included in the bill. The supporters of the bill claimed that it would impose sacrifices to both Quebec and Ontario. This he considered was a good reason to abandon it, for what was the reason to impose sacrifices on two provinces to satisfy the folly of a few. He was told in open Parliament by Mr. MacDonald that the Province of Quebec was not to be considered in the matter, and after that who could be surprised to see meetings of protestation held? If all depended upon him and a few of his colleagues still remained loyal, the bill would not pass.

BRUNEAU ATTACKS BOURASSA.

Mr. Arthur Bruneau, M.P. for Richelieu, got up to speak, but had considerable trouble to making himself understood. He protested vigorously against the insults which had been proferred against him by the secretary of the organization committee and Mr. Bourassa. The meeting was now beginning to take a turn to straight politics, and the audience which had previously been captured by Mr. Bourassa showed itself most hostile to Mr. Bruneau. The chairman called for order in vain and the speaker, when he left the platform, had evidently not said all he wished to. His speech was an attack on Mr. Bourassa for what Mr. Bourassa had said about him. Three-quarters of the things enumerated by Mr. Bourassa were not in the bill, and he called the attention of the public to the possible provincial legislation regulating the Sunday observance bill if passed by the Commons. However, the bill would not pass the House before the Provincial Government had passed legislation regarding the customs of the province.

Mr. Bourassa replied in a few words and was again cheered for a long time, and refuted to the apparent satisfaction of those present, the questions brought up by Mr. Bruneau.

Messrs. L. T. Marechal, K.C., Olivier Aselin, J. A. Rodier and Arthur Beauchesne also addressed the meeting all strongly protesting against the Bill.

PROTEST AGAINST THE SUNDAY OBSERVANCE BILL.—SCENE ON THE CHAMP DE MARS DURING THE PROGRESS OF THE SPEECHES.

Mr. Alphonse Verville, M.P.

tario, for instance, might legislate something to be entirely legal in these provinces, but yet the same would remain a punishable misdemeanor under the Dominion Lord's Day Act. Provincial legislatures, for example, might authorize Sunday newspapers by private bills, but yet publishing of the same would be counted a crime under the Lord's Day Act, and be liable to prosecution. Provinces could not legalize this if it is directly prohibited by Dominion Parliament.

Mr. E. M. MacDonald, Liberal, Pictou, said if Parliament declared that the provinces have the right to legislate on whatever was exclusively within their jurisdiction then whatever this covered would not be punishable or prohibited by federal power. The decision of the Privy Council made it imperative that the Dominion Government should legislate in the direction of securing a general rest day.

REBUKE FOR LAVERGNE.

He rebuked Mr. Lavergne for saying that ninety-nine per cent. of the people asking for Sunday legislation did not know what they were asking for. He characterized Mr. Lavergne's remarks as being of an incendiary character.

Mr. Lavergne protested vigorously against this language, and there were cries of "withdraw." Mr. MacDonald laughingly remarked that he would withdraw the expression. In Mr. Lavergne's case, he thought there was more smoke than fire.

Proceeding the member for Pictou said that in framing the Lord's Day Act, it was important that the rights of Quebec should not be violated, and it was equally important that the rights of the other provinces should be recognized.

BORDEN QUOTES ACT.

Mr. R. L. Borden at this point took a hand in the discussion for a moment. He quoted from the B. N. A. Act to show that Mr. Piche, in framing his amendment, did not comprehend the meaning of the language of the clause. He was accepting something already accepted and including something already included.

Mr. MacDonnell, Conservative, of South Toronto, said the fault of the amendment was that it gives the provinces the right to back out in reference to matters of their jurisdiction, but contained no reciprocal right which would allow the provinces who do not think the bill is strong enough to make it stronger. It was jug-handled legislation, which would result in as many Sunday laws as there are provinces.

At this point Mr. Lavergne's sub-amendment was put and declared lost, then Mr. Piche's amendment was put. Mr. Borden said the House was entitled to a Ministerial statement as to the Ministry's view of its effect.

THE MINISTERIAL POSITION.

Hon. Mr. Aylesworth rose, and while disclaiming his ability to give an authoritative opinion off-hand upon any abstruse question of law which might come up in the House, expressed a willingness to give his personal opinion. The amendment, he thought, was logical and consistent with the purpose of the bill, the basic principle of which is concession and compromise.

It was not claimed that the bill covers the whole field. The clause under discussion strikes at all business transactions on the Sababth Day, except in regard to questions on which the Provincial Legislatures may exact laws. For instance, a member of the House had given verbal notice that he would move to have it provided that under certain conditions crops could be harvested on Sunday. Such a proposal would be directly against the popular sentiment in Ontario, but under the amendment proposed the Quebec Provincial Government might pass such legislation if it thought fit to do so, as it would involve merely a question of civil rights. On the other hand, there are a number of special matters in which the Federal Parliament would by this act exercise its exclusive authority.

POSITIONS ARE REVERSED.

Mr. R. L. Borden was evidently but little impressed with the view expressed by the Minister of Justice, and said so in no uncertain words. The fault he found with the bill as it was proposed to amend it, was that the part which should be federal legislation was being made provincial legislation, and vice-versa. So far as providing for a day of rest is concerned, he said, that should be the subject of Federal legislation, but it is now proposed in effect, to make it the subject of provincial control. But when it comes to dealing with the opening of public parks, to allow games, or to use a rifle, these matters should be dealt with by the Provincial legislation. In providing that the observance of the Lord's Day does not trench on the religious convictions of many persons in this country, we should have a Federal statue but in providing as to recreation and the mode of spending the Lord's Day we should have Provincial laws.

In reply to a question put by Mr. Black, Mr. Borden said that it would not be possible to provide for local conditions except in so far as the provinces are concerned. There could be no further sub-divisions for purposes of this kind, but the people of each province could be left to settle these matters in their own way. Proceeding Mr. Borden said that the Federal legislation should be confined to the features upon which the whole country would agree, leaving as far as possible to the provinces the legislation of that portion which does not deal with the observation of the Lord's Day, as a day of rest, but deals with the use to which the people shall put their day of rest. For these reasons, it would be better not to insert the amendment in the particular terms proposed but to insert in much more modified terms, and to add a similar amendment to other sections of the bill.

PREMIER SHOWS DIFFICULTY.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier who spoke briefly, said it was impossible to leave the matter entirely to the provinces and it was difficult to decide where to draw the line. The effect of the amendment would be to leave to the provinces the matter of regulating the legislation touching on the local customs and wishes of the people.

Mr. Piche's amendment was then agreed to and clause 2 of the bill adopted without a division.

Considerable discussion took place on the clause of the bill respecting starting and maintaining fires, making repairs to furnaces and repairs of necessity essential to an industry, which are to be permitted on Sunday.

Mr. Bennett, Conservative of East Simcoe, spoke of iron smelting. In that industry the furnace fire could not be permitted to go out without great loss. The Minister of Justice thought that the clause provided for such cases.

MONEYMAKING ON SUNDAY.

Mr. Martin, Liberal of North Wellington, and Mr. Kennedy, Liberal, of New Westminster, held that such provision was not necessary. It simply permitted Sunday labor for money making. If money making on Sunday was the principle of the bill, said Mr. Martin, let them stand up and say so. He complained about so much of the talking being done by lawyers. They were always talking on behalf of the manufacturer and the money maker, but never for the day of rest.

Mr. Kemp, Conservative of East Toronto, spoke of the sugar beet industry. He had been informed that within one hundred days after the beets were harvested they had to be worked up for after that time they underwent a change and sugar could not be extracted. The process was also continuous and could not be stopped. The Minister of Justice held that the clause covered such a case.

Mr. Ross, Liberal, of Yale Cariboo, held that a furnace could be closed down on Sunday without injury to the product or the plant by banking the fires, leaving them smouldering, but it would cause great loss of time, so much so that the business would be ruined. The sub-section, as in the bill, read as follows:

"Starting or maintaining fires, making repairs to furnaces, and repairs in cases of emergency, and doing any other work, when such fires, repairs or work are essential to any industrial process of such a continuous nature that it cannot be stopped without serious injury to its product or to the plant or property used in such process, or if, without the doing of such work on the Lord's Day, such process cannot be carried on continuously and safely during the other six days of the week."

CLAUSE WAS AMENDED.

An amendment was carried striking out all the last part which reads: "Or if without the doing of such work on the Lord's day such process cannot be carried on continuously and safely during the other six days of the week."

A clause was added by the Minister of Justice permitting the operating on Sunday of ventilating and pumping machinery in mines when necessary for the preservation of life and property. Another clause was added permitting a person to hire on Sunday a horse and carriage for his own use or the use of his family or to hire a small boat for a like purpose.

TO TAKE OUT BEST GIRL.

Mr. Henderson, Conservative, Halton, wanted it possible for a young man to hire a rig on Sunday for the purpose of taking out his best girl for a Sunday drive.

That was provided for, said the Minister of Justice, for the young man would be hiring the rig for his own use.

The clause respecting Sunday work on a Monday morning newspaper was amended. As drafted the clause stated that such Sunday work might be commenced at 8 p.m.

Mr. Templeman, Minister of Inland Revenue, had this changed to six o'clock in the afternoon.

Another amendment adopted permits the loading and unloading of grain and ore carrying vessels before 7 a.m and after 8 p.m. on Sunday from September 15th to the close of navigation. Work on Sunday by a person in the public service, when working under Government regulation is also permitted.

Another clause was added stating that after 6 p.m. on Sunday any unavoidable work in the taking of fish would be permitted.

The following clause was added to the suggestion of the Minister of Justice: "Any work which the board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, having regard to the object of this act, deem necessary to permit in connection with the freight traffic of any railway." Mr. Bureau, Liberal, Three Rivers, wanted an exception in favor of towing logs on Sunday, but his amendment was not adopted.

Mr. Ross offered an amendment providing for Sunday labor necessary to save property. The amendment was lost, it being thought that such cases were provided for.

Dr. Beland asked that a special clause be inserted providing for the making of maple sugar and syrup on Sunday, when necessary to save the sugar harvest.

The Prime Minister said they were making too many exceptions, but as they had made many there was no reason why an exception should not be made in favor of the farmers making maple sugar as well as in favor of fishermen. The amendment was adopted.

JEWISH EXEMPTION OUT OF ORDER.

Mr. Bickerdike, Liberal, of St. Lawrence, Montreal, presented an amendment whose effect would have been to give exemption to the Jews and Seventh Day Adventists. The clause in the bill providing for them was dropped at a previous sitting.

Mr. Bickerdike proposed that any one observing the fourth commandment conscientiously shall be permitted to work on the first day of the week provided such work does not disturb others. This was ruled out of order as it was practically the same as a clause that had been dropped.

"That," said Mr. Borden, "is the first time I have heard the fourth commandment ruled out of order."

Another amendment proposed by the Minister of Justice and adopted gives to men engaged in industrial pursuits and in transportation 24 hours free from labor if they are compelled to work on Sunday.

A change was made respecting the clause applying to pleasure grounds, the effect of which was to prohibit on Sunday public games or contests for gain or for prizes or rewards, or to be present at any performance or public meeting at which any fee is charged. It was also provided that the law shall not come into operation until March 1, 1907.

Why the delay? asked Mr. Borden. Was it to give time for the Provincial Legislatures to meet and do away with the law before it came into operation?

It would not affect any body, said Mr. Lancaster, except the people at Grimsby Park, where they would not be allowed to hold church services.

LANCASTER'S HOT RETORT.

"Have they churches there?" said Mr. Aylesworth.

Mr. Lancaster—"Yes, more than you have attended and it would be better if you went to church more and learned to be polite to the members of the House."

Mr. Lancaster was proceeding, when Mr. Aylesworth asked what was the object of his remarks.

"The Minister of Justice," said Mr. Lancaster.

The bill was finally reported, and now stands for a third reading. At 1.20 this morning the House adjourned.

SIX MONTHS' HOIST DEFEATED.

The first hour of the evening was given to private bills, and the third reading of the bill to incorporate the Grand Trunk Pacific Branch Lines Company was moved. In amendment, Mr. Lancaster, Conservative, of Niagara and Lincoln, moved that the bill be read "This day six months." This was seconded by Dr. Sproule, who spoke briefly, and was replied to by Mr. Turrif, Liberal, of East Assiniboia, who claimed that the policy of the Opposition was anything to block the Grand Trunk Pacific bill. The Canadian Pacific could get its branches built. Mr. Lancaster said no, but what he wanted was that the branches in question be built by the Grand Trunk Pacific Company itself, and not by a separate branch company.

The amendment for a six months' hoist was declared lost without a vote being taken.

Mr. Henderson moved an amendment to the effect that the bill be referred back to the committee of the whole in order to change the location of a branch in Saskatchewan.

The hour was talked out, without a decision having been arrived at. The bill therefore stands over.

CHIEF CLERMONT INJURED.

St. Louis Officer on Fire Apparatus When Struck by Street Car.

Chief Clermont, of St. Louis, and Fireman Martel had a narrow escape from death yesterday. They were standing on the step of a combination chemical engine, hose and ladder waggon answering to a fire alarm, when a street car struck the waggon at the corner of St. Louis and St. Lawrence streets. The waggon was damaged somewhat and the chief got squeezed between the engine and the car, inflicting a more or less serious wound on his knee. Fireman Martel escaped unhurt. The chief, who is able to be about, considers his escape a marvellous one.

THE WEATHER.

PROBABILITIES FOR NEXT 24 HOURS.

New Paper in Quebec.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Quebec, June 30.—"La Vigie" is the name of a new paper which issued its first number yesterday, and is apparently opposed to the policy of the reform party in the new city council. It asks who authorized the floating of the new Sacred Heart flag instead of the French Tri-color from the city hall on the occasion of the recent St.Jean Baptiste celebration.

Winnipeg's Sunday Car Service.

Winnipeg, June 30.—Manager Phillips, of the Street Railway Company, announces that the company will be prepared to put on a service by July 8. Failure to adopt a compulsory twenty-four hours' rest clause in the by-law is causing uneasiness among the union employes, and trouble may result.

The Canadian Pacific steamship Empress of Ireland sailed from Liverpool for Quebec at 6.30 p.m. on June 29.

HENRY MORGAN & CO. - Montreal

ADVISES ST. LOUIS TO CONTEST ACTION

Mr. F. J. Bisaillon's Opinion of the Suit Over the Famous Bastien Contract.

According to the opinion of Mr. F. J. Bisaillon, K.C., attorney of the town of St. Louis, the famous Bastien contract for $900,000 entered into with Mr. Treffle Bastien for the construction of sewers and water mains in the town, is legal, and the council should contest the action recently taken out by the Hon. Louis Beaubien, one of the largest proprietors of the town, to have the said contract nullified.

The special meeting of the council held last night to consider this important question was attended by Mayor Gelinas, and Councillors Turcot, Neville, Berube, Desjardins, Grignon and Godon, two being absent. As already stated in the columns of the Star, two local lawyers have expressed the opinion that the Bastien contract was illegal as the town of St. Louis had exceeded its borrowing capacity and could not incur a further debt without submitting the question to the taxpayers of the town.

Mr. F. J. Bisaillon, who had been asked to send a report to council advising the town how to safeguard its interests against the action taken out by Mr. Beaubien, takes an opposite view from that given by his colleagues of St. Louis.

Secretary Vincent read the former's report last evening. It stated that the only way for the town of St. Louis to safeguard its interests in this case is to contest Mr. Beaubien's action, which was ill founded in fact and in law. Plaintiff's allegations, he said, as presented, were insufficient to justify its conclusions and should be rejected on contestation. Plaintiff contended that the town, in accepting Mr. Treffle Bastien's tenders, increased its debt beyond the limit authorized by the charter.

GROUNDS OF OBJECTION.

This contention had no foundation in fact or in law, because:—First, the town could not, without violating well recognized principles in municipal rights, confound a floating debt with the consolidated debt; second, because the cost of the water-mains and sewers referred to in said contract, do not form part of the debt of the town and that the cost of the works for which the town was responsible at the time of the formation of the contract did not affect the authorized limit of its borrowing capacity. Third, because the obligations of the town resulting from the contract with Mr. Bastien are conditional and successive and will date only from the time when the conditions of said contract shall have been fulfilled and the time thereof expired.

Mr. Bisaillon went on to state that the Hon. Mr. Beaubien's action had been entered against the town of St. Louis, and not against Mr. Bastien, for nullity of contract, because there did not exist any binding in the matter between Mr.Bastien and Mr. Beaubien. Therefore the town is liable for the allegations of plaintiff; it is against it that the plaintiff makes the claim, Mr. Bastien being mis en cause only to wait and hear judgment which will be rendered.

If Mr. Bastien thought it proper he could wait until the judgment had been delivered. This would mean his acquiescence in the procedure, and, consequently, in the nullity of the contract, if such were pronounced. The town of St. Louis, however, could not do this. The said contract was the act of the town, which had had the plans and specifications prepared by its own engineer; it had made the conditions; it had asked for tenders; it had accepted them; it had ordered the work, and entered into a contract so as to ensure the execution of the same; it bound itself with the contractor and with proprietors in the town who were interested in having the said works carried out.

MUST DEFEND CONTRACT.

Now, if the Council did not defend the said contract it would admit the allegations of the plaintiff in re the illegality of the said contract on account of the town having exceeded its borrowing capacity and of having unduly favored Mr. Bastien; all of which was without foundation in fact and in law. If Mr. Beaubien won his case before the courts under such conditions the town would be obliged to pay the contractor for the full amount of the work and material on the ground, just the same as if the whole work had been executed.

Moreover, in the event of the contract not being carried out, there would be many actions for damages taken against the town by proprietors who had bought property and erected houses in the districts to be served by the drains and sewers contracted for by Council with Mr. Bastien, and who would suffer by its non-fulfilment.

Mr. Bastien concluded his report by stating that it was the duty of the town of St. Louis to safeguard its interests by defending the Bastien contract, and contest the action of Hon. Mr. Beaubien to annul it. The town's failure to defend this action, would, he said, place is in a grave liability.

Afternoon as Mr Bisaillon's report had been read by the secretary, Councillor Turcot asked that the matter be held over until the next meeting of council on Tuesday, July 3rd, so as to allow more time to consider this important subject. Councillor Neville stated that he understood the meeting last night had been called specially to deal with the action taken by Mr. Beaupbien.

However, Councillor Turcot's request was supported by Councillors Desjardins and Grignon, and granted by Council.

A letter was also read last night from Messrs. Berard & Brodeur on behalf of their client, Mr. Treffle Bastien, stating that if the Council allowed the Beaubien action to go to the courts before deciding what action it would take regarding it, he (Mr. Bastien) would hold the town responsible for all damages arising therefrom. He declared that the Council should contest the Beaubien action forthwith, and defend the contract which it had made.

The Week In Society.

In spite of the heat, and the very general exodus to summer resorts, and the almost unprecedented list of sailings for England, the season is only just dying. To-day the number of June weddings is completed and never before in Montreal has the month of roses seen fairer brides in greater numbers.

The social event of the week in Canada, and of the year in Kingston, was the Royal Military ball at which guests were present from every quarter of the Dominion. In Ottawa the week's most enjoyable entertainment was a large and very fashionable garden party given on Parliament Hill by Mrs. R. F. Sutherland, wife of the Speaker of the House of Commons. In Toronto, as in Montreal, weddings have held the first place in point of importance. One of the most interesting marriages of recent date was that of Miss Oronhyatekha, daughter of Dr. Oronhyatekha, to Mr. Percy Johnston, formerly of Australia, which took place at the Castle, Foresters' Island, on Wednesday. Wedding trips are being taken in many directions by the brides and grooms of the past week. Mr. William Henry Archibald, Jr., and Mrs. Archibald (Miss Lillian Turnbull) have left for Cape Breton where a round of entertainments is being planned for them; Mr. R. B. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson (Miss Lulu Stephens) will spend the first part of their honeymoon in the vicinity of New York; Dr. Mullally and Mrs. Mulally (Miss M. E. Mullally), have left for Prince Edward Island, the former home of the groom; Mr. Herbert Love and Mrs. Love (Miss Ruth Bell), will spend six weeks in the White Mountains before going to Toronto to reside. Dr. Kelly and Mrs. Kelly (Miss Wishart) have left on a trip to Winnipeg en route to the Coast; Mr. J. C. Pouliot and Mrs. Pouliot (Miss Eugenie Lemieux) are at Fraserville for a few days prior to sailing for England. And already whispers of autumn weddings are to be heard.

Yesterday's exodus to the Lower St. Lawrence was unusually large, even for a Friday, many people leaving by boat as well as by train, and the Lake resor. visitors have been augmented in numbers.

Dominion Day is responsible for many week end parties to near-by country places, and for the next two days few will remain in town.

Unfortunately several well-known families suffered bereavement during the week. Mr. William Hendrie's death in Hamilton will have a far reaching effect, and he will be deeply regretted, especially in Montreal, where he had many friends. Among those who went to Hamilton to attend the funeral were Mr. Hugh Paton, Mr. Colin Campbell and Dr. C. McEachran.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Hope arrived in town this week from their summer home, St. Andrews, N.B., being called here by the death of Mr. Hope's father, Mr. John Hope, of "Dalmeny," whose loss will be regretted by a large circle of friends. In the death of Dr. Craik, Montreal lost one of its most prominent figures, one who will continue to be missed for many a day.

The following were among those leaving this week by the Intercolonial Railway for the different seaside resorts: Mr. Montague Anderson and family, Mr. W. C. Towers and family, Mr. A. McInnes and family, Mr. J. McCormick and family, Mr. J. Howard (Toronto), to Little Metis; Mr. A. J. Mowatt (Toronto), Mr. N. W. Trenholme (Toronto), to Cap a L'Aigle; Dr. J. C. Warren (Boston), to Matapedia; Mr. Peter Amiot, to Rimouski; Mr. Walter Paul and family, Mr. J. W. Ross and family, Mr. H. Ames, Dr. Louis Frechette, to Riviere du Loup; Mr. E. K. Greene and family, Mr. A. F. Ross and family, Mr. D. Cream and famil to Little Metis; Mr. Justice Archibald and family, Mr. J. B. Bell and family, to Bic; Mr. D. M. McGoun, to Cap a l'Aigle; Mrs. S. E. McLimont and family, Mrs. Edward Murphy, Murray Bay; Dr. J. G. McCarthy and family, to Little Metis; Mrs. B. Von Eberts, to Murray Bay; Mr. H. S. Hunter and family, Mr. A. W. Buchanan and family, Mr. O. G. Elliott, Mr. C. H. Binks, to Murray Bay, Mr. H. J. Fuller and family, Mr. J. Eveleigh and family, Mr. R. F. Macfarlane and family, to Bic; Mr. Emanuel St. Louis and family, Mr. J. W. Ross and family, Mr. Andrew Allan, Dr. H. B. Yates, Mr. P. C. Ogilvie and family, Mr. A. D. Durnford and family, Mr. P. McCaffrey and family, to Cacouna; Mr. J. Howard and family (Toronto), Mr. H. D. Fry and family, Mr. R. R. Lindsay and family, Mr. W. P. Slessor and family, Mr. J. Robinson and family, Mr. D. Campbell and family, Mr. W. M. Molson and family, to Little Metis; Mr. Chevalier and family, Mr. G. Plow and family, M. C. Marriotti and family, Mr. L. H. Archambault and family, Mr. W. Rutherford and family, Mr. H. Lajoie and family, Mr. C. A. Dansereau and family, to Riviere du Loup; Senator Casgrain and family, to Gaspe; Mrs. W. J. Wilson and family, Mr. G. A. Kohl and family, Mr. Th. F. How and family, Mrs. J. Thacker and family (Toronto), Mr. J. E. Saucer and family to Little Metis; Prof. Wrong (Toronto), Mr. H. Hume Blake (Toronto), to Murray Bay; Hon. C. J. Fitzpatrick, Mr. J. J. Duggan to St. Patrick, Mr. F. W. Molson and family to Little Metis, Sir Louis Davies and family (Ottawa), to Prince Edward Island.

The representatives of Viceregal Lodge, Simla, India, carried all before them at the last Annandale gymkhanna, the fight for Colonel Baring's cup being very exciting. Mrs. Rivett-Carnac is still leading, but two of Lady Minto's daughters are very close up. They are such fine riders and have shown themselves to be gifted with so much ready wit and self-possession—the all-important attributes in these sports—that the victory of one of them is anticipated. Lady Eileen Elliot won the fishing competition after a dead heat with Mrs. Buck, and Lady Violet's whistling of a tune (the name of which was brought to her in a sealed envelope) was so prompt and unmistakable that her partner, Captain Bulkeley, was enabled to get away with a long start in the sprint back to the judge. Lady Ruby Elliot, with Captain Bulkeley, was second to Captain and Mrs. Rivett-Carnac in the Gretna Green race, and Lady Violet gained some more marks by her second in the Aunt Sally stakes, while Captain Ross, one of the Viceroy's A.D.C.'s, completed the cycle of success by carrying off the polo ball race.

The marriage of Miss Sarah A. Dawson, daughter of the late Patrick Dawson, Laval, Quebec, to Prof. T. K. Brennan, took place this week, in St. Patrick's Church, Rev. Father Martin Callaghan officiating. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her brother, Mr. Michael Dawson, of Laval, Quebec. She wore a travelling costume of navy blue silk and a cream leghorn hat, trimmed with pink roses and pale blue ribbon, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. Michael McDonough, of Quebec, nephew of the bride, was best man. The bride received very many handsome presents, including a gold bracelet and cross, set in pearls from the groom, whose gift to the best man was a gold pearl scarf pin. Mr. and Mrs. T. K. Brennan have left for New York, where they will spend their honeymoon.

The marriage took place at St. Cyprian's Church, Maisonneuve, June 27, of Miss Elsie Margaret Cave, youngest daughter of Mr. Richard H. Cave, Liverpool, England, to Mr. John Wilson Riddell, of Maisonneuve. The Rev. J. J. Willis performed the ceremony, and Mr. Robert Willis played the Wedding March. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Harry H. Cave. Miss Ruby Riddell and Miss Alice Green were bridesmaids and Mr. T. W. Hynes acted as best man. The bride wore a white gown of English embroidery with veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaids were dressed alike in white organdie, and carried bouquets of sweet peas. Mr. and Mrs. Riddell have left for a trip to the Laurentians.

The marriage of Miss Mary A. Kane, daughter of Mr. Daniel Kane, Quebec, to Mr. John R. McKernan, of Montreal, took place at St. Patrick's church, Quebec, this week. Rev. John A. Kane, C.SS.R., of Roxbury, Mass., brother of the bride, performed the ceremony. The bride wore a travelling costume of navy blue and picture hat of pale blue with plume to match and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. She was given away by her father, and the groom was attended by his brother, Mr. A. McKernan, of Montreal. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. McKernan left for a trip to Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto. They will reside on St. Denis street.

Mrs. H. Vacheli Koelle, of Montreal, and her daughter Miss Merle Woods were presented by Mrs. Koelle's sister in-law, Mrs. Noel, of London, Eng., at the King's Drawing Room, held in Buckingham Palace, on June 28th. Mrs. Koelle's dress was white chiffon, embroidered with pink roses and jewels, and pale blue chiffon velvet court train, lined with pink, and bouquet of pink roses. Miss M. Woods wore a white Empire dress with touches of gold, and train of white chiffon, gold embroidered, and lilies of the valley, and bouquet of lilies.

NEW MUSIC BUILDING.

Handsome Structure Has Been Completed on St. Catherine St.

This week marks the completion and opening of one of the handsomest structures on St. Catherine street west—the new Lindsay building. The splendid proportions and imposing facade of the building, of which Mr. A. F. Dunlop was the architect, are a distinctive ornament to the city. The building, which rises 100 feet above the sidewalk, is in what is known as Columnar style—the top and lower two stories being richly carved and decorated, while the intervening storeys are severely plain.

There are seven storeys above ground and two below. Four are occupied by the firm in connection with their business, while the remaining flats are being rented as office rooms. The main warehouse on the ground floor is of a most impressive character, being in the style of a lofty reception room, 100 feet long by 55 feet wide and 20 feet high, the cross beams being supported by a double row of Corinthian pillars, with sculptured capitals. The decorations here are not quite complete as yet. The color sceme will be particularly effective, as the walls are to be done in orange and violet.

A portion of the floor of this main room is divided into small parlors, surmounted by a mezanine gallery with handsome bronze railings of special musical design. Two fine semi-circular stained glass windows in allegorical designs symbolical of music, grace the vestibule. The staircases and vestibule walls are of veined Italian marble, with finishings on the staircases in bronze. The electric freight and passenger elevators are of the latest type, being of solid copper of special musical design. The studios throughout are strictly sound proof, and are to be tapestried in Renaissance and Louis XV designs.

A Considerate Landlord.

Lord Cadogan is known as one of the best landlords in London. When North street, Chelsea, was remodeled recently a syndicate wanted to buy his property. He said: "I will sell it, but I must insist upon your granting new leases to every one who is in that street, so that no one is turned out in five years, and so that they will all have ample notice." It made a difference of $250,000 to him.

THE PROSPECTS FOR INTER-PROVINCIAL MATCH

The First Event of the Canadian Golf Tournament on the Ottawa Links Will Take Place There To-day.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., June 30.—The first day's play of the Royal Canadian Golf Association's annual tournament starts off this afternoon at 2 o'clock with the Inter-Provincial match between Ontario and Quebec. The first pair to drive off will be G. D. Reith, of Beaconsfield, and George Lyon, of Lambton, the present amateur champion.

Ten men aside will be played, the scoring to be on the point system. The Quebec team has not been officially announced as yet, but Mr. Gordon Macdougall, of Montreal, who is the captain, said it would be chosen from the following players: J. D. Reith, J. P. Taylor, Gerald Lees, H. Levison-Gower, H. H. Halsars, H. McGreevy, T. Morgan, R. E. Macdougall, Gordon Macdougall and three others.

A large number of players arrived yesterday and were out practising over the course. In a four ball foursome, in which Lyon partnered Palmer and Temple, Blackburn played with Hamilton, the champion went round in 83-38 out and 45 home. This is a remarkably fine score and shows Lyon is at the height of his game. His driving was very powerful and he took a special liking to the greens, pitching his approach shots right up to the hole. He was a trifle weak in putting coming home. His 38 going out, is two strokes under bogey.

Ten players arrived from Lambton, including Mr. A. W. Austin, president of that club. R. S. Strath, last year's runner-up, is on hand and is playing well. Both the Macdougalls, of Royal Montreal, played over the course.

Much interest centres on the probable successful sixteen players who will qualify to play off for the championship. If the luck of the draw plays, Lyon and Reith at the top and bottom of the list, it is probable these two will find their way through to the final. It may so happen both will meet in earlier rounds. Other players to contend with are Taylor, the 1904 champion; Laird, of Toronto; Martin, of Hamilton, and Levison-Gower, of Ottawa. All are sterling golfers and might easily prove to be stumbling blocks to the more celebrated players. There is always the chance of some of the cracks breaking down in the qualifying round.

In connection with the qualifying round the team match will be played, five clubs having entered. The lowest aggregate gross score captures the trophy.

The Consolation competition for those willing to qualify for the championship, commences on Tuesday afternoon. The finals for the amateur event will be played on Thursday morning and afternoon. The open championship takes place on Friday.

QUEBECKERS HA'E GONE.

The New Professional has Greatly Improved Them.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Quebec, June 30.—Members of the Quebec Golf Club left here on Friday to take part in the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship, which opens at Ottawa on Monday next. The Quebecers who will attend are Messrs. H. S. Thomson, H. A. McGreevy, W. C. J. Hall, Ed Garneau, Ahern and A. Walcot. Mr. A. H. Murray will also accompany the Quebec team and take part in the professional competition.

The services of a professional this year has done much for Quebec's amateurs and they are expected to make a good showing especially of H. S. McGreevy, who shows wonderful improvement and is in excellent form. The Quebecers also hope that A. H. Murray though a young man, will make good in the professional competition.

HAMILTON HOPES.

It Is Expected There that Lyon Will Have His Hands Full.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Hamilton, Ont., June 30.—There will be two Hamilton representatives on the Ontario Golf team that plays in the inter-provincial contest at Ottawa on Saturday. They are Gordon Southam and F. R. Martin. The latter has been playing in particularly good form, and Geo. Lyon, the champion of Canada, will have to do his best to retain his laurels. In a match not long ago Mr. Martin beat him, though by a small margin. The Ontario team will be in all likelihood:—

Geo. S. Lyon, Lambton; F. R. Martin, Hamilton; Douglas Laird, Toronto; A. Z. Palmer, Jr., Kingston; R. C. H. Cassels, Toronto; D. C. Dick, Lambton; R. S. Strath, Lambton; Gordon Southam, Hamilton; H. J. Martin or A. E. Austin, Lambton. George S. Lyon left for Ottawa Thursday morning and Gordon Southam and other members of the Ontario team are already there getting in fine work on the links. F. R. Martin, who has been almost living on the Hamilton links, has also left for Ottawa.

GOLF NEAR LAKE ST. LOUIS.

The Week-End at Beaconsfield Golf Club.

Saturday afternoon will be devoted chiefly to the first round of the Club trophy competition. Dominion Day is set for the scratch tournament in competition for the Drummond trophy. Eighteen holes will be played in the forenoon, and 18 in the afternoon, the trophy to go to the best medal score for the 36 holes. With Reith in Ottawa for the Canadian championship, and several other players of small handicaps out of town, this competition should be very close among some 20 or 25 members.

Saturday, July 7, the club team meets Westmount at the Westmount links.

In the semi-finals for the Shorey cup, W. G. Gallon beat W. J. Hogg, by 1 up. Mr. Gallon will, therefore, play the final with the winner of the other semi-final match, F. J. Larkin vs. F. H. Adams.

FOR THE SHARP TROPHY.

The Royal Montreal Ladies Win Teaset.

The ladies of the Royal Montreal Golf Club had a match for a prize given by Mrs. E. F. Sharp, of New York, which consists of a tea set of blue ware, mounted with silver.

The match was between Miss Hilda Marler and Mrs. Aubrey Mussen. Mrs. Mussen won.

The date for the ladies' championship, which will be played in Toronto, has not yet been set.

NEW CRICKET DEPARTURE.

The Lachine Cricket Club have invited the members of the Yorkshire Society of Montreal, to play them at cricket on August 11th, and in view of getting the very best team for that occasion the members of the society have arranged to play a match on Monday next (Dominion Day), on the grounds of the Longueuil Club, who have kindly loaned it for the occasion. Teams will be chosen by the secretary, Mr. William B. Naylor, and by Mr. Joe Horsfall, who is the captain of the Longueuil Club. The ferry leaves Montreal at 9.15 and 9.45 a.m., and members are requested to show up in good numbers and bring along their lady friends. The team versus Lachine will be chosen after the match.

TWO-YEAR-OLD LONE GLOBE-TROTTER

C. C. Gladwin, Jr., Ticketed and Tagged to Cross the Ocean to His Aunt.

New York, June 30.—A smart red jockey cap and a swagger scarlet top coat with labels are all that will prevent the smallest traveller from being lost in the shuffle when he embarked yesterday on the steamship Cedric for an unescorted trip across the Atlantic. His entire experience of this world has been crammed into two years and eight months; but if he is still a trifle unsteady in his English he is not so on his sturdy little legs, and the prophecy is that he will be the pet of the ship before Miss Liberty is well out of sight.

The top coat will have a label firmly attached to one of the buttons, announcing that the wearer is:

Charles Clinton Gladwin, Jr., of New York,
Bound for London, England.
To be forwarded to Mrs. E. Barr,
49 Priory Road,
Chiswick, London, England.

On its reverse side will be the legend:

Son of Charles Clinton Gladwin,
N.Y.A.C.,
National and Metropolitan Snowshoe Champion,
United States and Canada.

The little two-year-old was left motherless when a babe of a few months. His father, a former Montrealer and member of the Crescent Snowshoe Club, reared him with all the care and gentleness a man can give to such a task, but when his sister, Mrs. Barr, offered to receive the little fellow in her home till he was old enough to be sent to Rugby, Gladwin gladly accepted.

A pair of round blue eyes, a shock of fair hair and a very manly attitude with legs stretched wide apart, distinguish Mr. Gladwin, jr. He has already tried his powers on the pair of skis his father laboriously made for him before he had learned to toddle. The boy will be met at Queenstown by friends.

Westmount and Points.

The following teams have been selected to represent Westmount vs. Point St. Charles to-day, Seniors at Beaver Field, Point St. Charles:

Great Contests of the Past—Stirring Events Where Strong Men Have Striven Against Strong Men—Pictures by Celebrated Writers and Historians.

Nearly every historian of note, every writer of importance, has devoted some of his genius and some of his talent to the painting of some notable contest in arms or sport; events which even now, years after they have been described, centuries perhaps after the time in which they had been pictured, makes the blood course swifter through the veins.

With at least some of these masterpieces of description the average reader and student are familiar; others are only known to a few.

It is the Star's intention to publish from week to week some of the most stirring of these stories of great trials of skill and strength. Although the customs differed, while the games and contests were rougher, the spirit was the same then as that which moves our Canadian young men in the sports they love and pursue at the present day.

The stories will be illustrated, and accompanied by brief introductions and explanations as to contest whenever necessary. They will form a valuable, instructive and entertaining addition to the sporting knowledge of the modern enthusiast in sport.

A Novel Athletic Contest.

The 200 yard straightaway race is a standard at all athletic meets. But a 220 yard straightaway run throughout under the roof of a single building is something new in sports. Such a race has just been decided at the Remington Typewriter factory at Ilion in connection with the annual athletic sports of Remington factory employes. The race was for a gold medal presented by one of the officers of the company and was run in heats in the centre aisle of the fourth floor of the Main Building of the factory. As this building is 800 feet long there was plenty of room for the 220 yard straightaway course with more room to spare.

The final heat was won by Paul J. Risedorf, time 24 seconds. This race will hereafter be an annual feature and each year a gold medal will be presented to the victor.

Corinthian Da's.

It has been found necessary to curtail somewhat the fixture list originally proposed for the tour of the Corinthian Association Football Club in Canada, since such a list would take up more time than the visitors have at their disposal.

Following are the Canadian fixtures which will be actually filled:—

August 11—Montreal.
August 13—Ottawa.
August 15—Hamilton.
August 18—Toronto.
August 20—Berlin.
August 22—Seaforth, or London, or the combined teams at London.

From London the Corinthians will go direct to Chicago, where they are due to play on the 25th, following with games at St. Louis, Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia and New York.

Chateauguay Boat Club.

On the first of July, the Chateauguay Boating Club are to have a few races, such as double skiff, ladies' and gents', ladies' and gents' tandem canoe, single canoe, etc., for club members. There will also be a hop in the club house on this evening, free to all members and their friends. The war-canoe of the club is to be raced against a naphtha launch.

Toronto Yacht Races.

Toronto, June 30.—The Royal Canadian Yacht Club has set the dates for the Fisher Cup trials, which will be held on July 18, 19 and 20 next. The Men from Whom the International Team Will be Finally Chosen.

Toronto, June 30.—Secretary John E. Hall, of the Canadian Cricket Association, received word from the east that the players invited to play on the international eleven could not get away from business for the match. A letter from Ottawa from Hal McGiverin states that he is seriously thinking of retiring from cricket altogether, owing to business pressure. In his letter he states that Bristow is in the same position, while Ackland can arrange to play on the dates set. Word comes from Montreal that Hill is no longer a resident of that city, and as his address is not known, he will not be on the team. Heygate and Baker cannot arrange to go to Philadelphia.

SHAMROCKS BATTLE WITH CAPITALS

A Great Game is Expected, as Both Teams are Determined to Gain Victory.

The Shamrocks will have the fight of their lives this afternoon when they meet the Capitals at Mile End. Already Shamrocks have been expected to go down before the Tecumsehs and the Nationals, but the boys in green always succeeded in getting away with victory. Since then, they have been rounding into shape rapidly, and now are in almost perfect condition and ready to resist a formidable enemy. That the Capitals will prove themselves dangerous is without doubt, as they are in good form and have been training with due attention to the prospects of a hard struggle, and reports from Ottawa are decidedly optimistic in tone. Capitals have always been a hard nut for Shamrocks to crack. While the Ottawa team has no greater record of successes on the Shamrock field than the Irishmen have on the Ottawa ground, yet it is but seldom that the Shamrocks have been able to make an easy win against Ottawa. All the experts seem to think that this game will be a close one, and if it is close it will be a difficult matter to select a winner.

No doubt among the most interested spectators of this afternoon's match will be the party of westerners, who go to make up the Souris lacrosse team, and the friends who accompany them. Some of these men will be having their first taste of eastern lacrosse, and it is likely that one of the interesting features of this game will be the comments which the Souris men may express.

BRENNAN IS SICK.

Butterworth Will Take His Place In Capital Team.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., June 30.—Capitals will be without the services of Larry Brennan, the husky defence player, in today's game against Shamrocks. This means Ernie Butterworth is sure of the place in question on the team. Brennan has been ailing all week with grippe, and was finally compelled to take to his bed. Fairburn will be taken down in addition to Timmons and Hogan as spare men. "I don't see how we can lose," said "Billy" Foran. "We have the men, and if they play their game there will be nothing but victory for us."

The game is creating great interest in Ottawa, and the bulletin boards will be eagerly scanned for the results. The Capitals were a little surprised Joe Lally agreeing to referee, after he had refused to do so yesterday. His assistant, McKerrow, is entirely satisfactory to the people here.

St. Michael's Will Play.

A good game of lacrosse will take place on Queen's Park, Verdun, to-day, when St. Michael's Intermediate lacrosse team will play Verdun I. A large crowd is expected to follow St. Michaels out as they have been playing in very good form and expect to win.

St. Michael's lacrosse team is open for challenges from any club whose players are 18 and under. Apply by letter to Mr. Gus Dillon, secretary St. Michael Y. M. A., 13 Amherst street, St. Denis ward.

WALL STREET AND FALL ELECTIONS

Another Factor That is Creating a Good Deal of Nervousness in Financial Circles.

NO BIG SLUMP LOOKED FOR.

Unless there is Any Serious Crop Damage—The Chief Factors of the Past Week.

From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star in Wall Street.

New York, June 30. While it is expected that prices will go somewhat lower as a result of the bearish sentiment which is now so prevalent, conservative observers do not look for a big slump unless some new and important factor in the situation, such, for instance, as serious damage to the crops, should appear. Although the bearish sentiment predominates, there are men prominent in Wall Street who are studying the situation closely who believe that there will be a marked reversal of the pessimistic sentiment within a reasonably short time. They believe also that the investigations that are now being carried on under the direction of the Federal Government will be more favorably regarded, even by the highly speculative contingent in the stock market than they have been so far.

Roosevelt Has Quit.

In connection with the last mentioned point, there is excellent authority for saying that all the important news with respect to investigations of large corporations is out, so far as President Roosevelt is concerned. Upon the same authority, it may be stated that he has no further startling announcements to make in this connection. The investigations and prosecutions which are in progress, or have been ordered, will be conducted along the lines which have been mapped out. According to this authority, the Government does not propose to bring actions against any other large corporation.

Improved Sentiment.

If this programme is carried out, conservative observers believe that the chief result of what has been done, and of what is planned in the way of investigations, will be beneficial to all interests. They also are strongly of the opinion that when the investigations are completed the sentiment throughout the United States with respect to Wall Street will be much more favorable than it is at the present time, and that it will be fully realized that large undertakings can be successfully financed only in Wall Street, or in the large financial centres of Europe.

Standard Oil Selling.

Reports that the Standard Oil interests have been heavy sellers were freely used by bears this week, and detailed accounts in the papers of the Bureau of Corporation's plan for further investigating the Steel Corporation may have caused some of the decline in Steel common, which reached a new low record for the year, recovering the loss afterward. This investigation has been in progress for some time, and has thus far revealed little, although the full reports have not yet been published.

The Anaconda Move.

The copper shares, both Amalgamated and Anaconda, slumped badly, but when the announcement of an increase in Anaconda's dividend from a 2? per cent. rate to 25 per cent. reached the speculators Amalgamated rallied smartly, and Anaconda, which had previously dropped from 232½ to 228, rose abruptly to 245, and evidence came to light of inside buying before the announcement. As often happens in a falling market one or two high-priced shares took a damaging tumble, such as Federal Smelting, which on one sale Tuesday fell off 15 points. St. Paul seemed unable to withstand the heavy pressure against it, and rallied less than the other stocks. Its connection with the Standard Oil interests was regarded as significant.

Big Railroad Gains.

The strong feature was Southern Pacific, and the reports of an early resumption of dividends on the common are receiving more serious attention. One rumor which disturbed seatiment was that the banks had refused to accept industrial stocks as collateral in view of the uncertain state of the market, but the rumor received unqualified denials. Atchison stock received good support on the statement of earnings for May, showing a gross gain of $950,000, and a gain in net of $666,014, and a total increase in income for eleven months of over $5,000,000. For the third week of June the Southern Railway reported a gain of $96,000, and the Canadian Pacific one of $.66,000.

Crop Reports Better.

Taken as a whole, the news for the past week was not unfavorable, particularly as regards the weather reports, which indicated that the much emphasized drought in the west had been checked by timely rains. Thus far there is absolutely nothing to indicate that there will not be good average harvests, though, of course, corn has yet to go through the crucial period.

More Gold Imports?

With a further drop in sight sterling to 4 8485, the lowest level since the last import movement came to an end, Wall Street bankers are of the opinion that early gold imports are among the possibilities. In fact, tentative enquiries were instituted abroad as to available supplies of the yellow metal, with the result that it was ascertained that no large amounts could be picked up in the open market. The Bank of England has of late weeks been persistently accumulating gold, and does not favor competition from outside bankers. As large consignments, aggregating $3,000,000, arrive from South Africa next week, opportunity will be afforded for obtaining engagements.

The Import Point.

There was a difference of opinion as to the import point, some international bankers holding that they would be able to import gold from London at the current rate for sterling with bar gold at 77s 9½d, the prevailing quotation. Others, however, maintain that negotiations on this basis could not be carried out with profit unless the Treasury Department resumed its policy of advancing funds to the importing bankers, pending the arrival of gold engaged.

Secretary Shaw, however, is not likely to offer assistance at this juncture. London is not expecting gold exports to this country. The reduction in the discount rate is an indication of this fact. Presumably obstacles would be placed in the way of such a movement.

The Traction Pool.

The Interborough-Metropolitan pool ended disastrously. A few weeks ago stock market circles were flooded with bullish information on this Belmont-Ryan stock, which they were assured positively would be supported around 50. Yet the gentlemen's agreement broke of its own weight, and to-day the pool are being asked to contribute 90 per cent. of their subscriptions. It is estimated that the stock stands them in the vicinity of 53, which means a loss of over 15 points, or more than 25 per cent.

The Short Interest.

A good deal of interest naturally attaches to the extent of the short interest in the market. Reports concerning this are conflicting, and no two persons agree, except on the point that the short account has been materially increased. It is also pointed out that up to Tuesday the "shorts" were apparently in no great hurry to cover. Unbiased opinions are mostly to the effect that while the short interest is fairly large, it is not as aggressive or extensive as current gossip states, but that each succeeding day's reactionary market tends to foster the bear account.

Elections and Stocks.

The fall election seems to be a source of anxiety in some sections, it being also inferred that the president will work for tariff reform at the next session of Congress. In a word, Wall Street is decidedly nervous, and is disposed to emphasize adverse factors.

S. S. S.

IS GOING FULL STEAM AHEAD.

Canadian Northern Railway Showing Fine Gains in Earnings.

The rapidity with which the Canadian Northern Railway is being built is well illustrated by the mileage figures as reported for the month of May during the past three years.

The comparison is not carried back any further because the monthly mileage figures have been reported only since 1901.

The mileage of the system in May of the past three years has been as follows:

Year.	Mileage.	Increase.
1906.....	2 370	26 per cent.
1905.....	1.876	39 per cent.
1904.....	1.350	..

In two years the road has nearly doubled its length, the mileage increasing from 1.350 to 2.370 miles, a growth of 1,020 miles. The expansion last year amounted to about 1½ miles per working day.

Both gross and net earnings of the road have more than kept pace in May and the past eleven months of the year with the increase in the mileage. A comparison of last year's results with those of the current year is as follows.

	Gross Increase.	Net Increase.	Mileage Increase.
	P.C.	P.C.	P.C.
May	74.5	111	26
Eleven months	42.1	50.7	26

The increase in gross is too large to be accounted for merely on the basis of the increase in mileage.

TRADE THROUGHOUT CANADA.

Conditions Everywhere are Good, and the Crop Prospects Excellent.

Montreal reports to Bradstreet's say: Wholesale trade here continues to display a quiet tone, but during the past week there has been considerable improvement in the movement of retail dry goods lines. Summer goods are moving briskly, and travellers report a fairly good business in the booking of fall orders. Woollens hold very firm. There is a good seasonable trade in hardware lines, and the metal trade is brisk. There is an easier tone to the market for most lines of metals. The demand for paints and oils, which has been heavy, is now showing some seasonable falling off. The grocery trade has still a quiet tone. Sugars hold firm, and are expected to advance. Canned salmon is in light supply, and expected to go higher. Country trade is fairly brisk. The business in dairy products is active. Exports of butter and cheese are much heavier than those of a year ago, and prices are higher. The make of cheese will be large, and with prices about 2c per lb. higher than a year ago, the trade will have a still greater effect upon the general business than it had last season. Collections generally show improvement, especially from those points which are benefiting by the trade in dairy products. Woods are firm, and hide prices are advancing. The lighter grades of leather are scarce, and all kinds are firm.

Toronto—General business conditions here show little change from a week ago. The outstanding feature is cheerfulness regarding prospects for future trade, which, thanks to promising crops and good prices for general products, are very bright. There is considerably more activity among wholesale dry goods men. The demand for summer lines has shown increased activity, and great preparations are under way for the fall trade, for which orders are already good. Woollens and linen goods are very firm. There is a fair movement in groceries. Sugars are firm, and expected to advance. The demand is expected to be large on account of the heavy fruit harvest. Western Ontario peaches promise to be an exceedingly large crop. Hardware houses report continued activity in all lines. Collections are generally fair to good. Country trade keeps active. Large quantities of cheese are being made, and prices hold up well. Hog prices are again higher, owing to the scarcity. Selects are quoted here at $7.50, live weight. The cattle trade is quiet, and prices about steady. Wools continue very firm, and hides are advancing. Offerings of both wool and hides are fair. Money has a slightly easy tone.

Winnipeg—The trade outlook here centres in the conditions of the growing crops, and, from all points of view, the indications of future trade conditions are most satisfactory. The grains are looking exceedingly well, and the bumper crop of the country's history seems to be assured. Local wholesale houses report a rather better demand for summer lines, and retail trade is generally brisk. The demand for hardware and groceries is somewhat more active than it was a week ago. Country produce is moving well, and values are well maintained. The fall trade for general lines promises to be heavy.

Victoria and Vancouver—There is a continued brisk tone to trade all along the coast. There is still a heavy demand for wholesale sorting lines, and the trade of the interior is active. The lumbering and mining trades report great briskness. The coast shipping trade keeps busy, and money is still fairly free.

Hamilton—Retail trade is showing a brighter tone, and wholesale sorting lines are moving bore briskly. Country trade is good and collections satisfactory. Receipts of country produce here are large.

London—There is now a good tone to all lines of trade. Warm weather has improved the demand for light dry goods, and other lines of wholesale trade also report more activity. The crops are looking in good shape, and the outlook for fall trade is bright.

Ottawa—There is a good volume of business moving in nearly all lines. Country retail trade is showing some improvement and collections are generally fair to good. Trade in wholesale groceries and hardware continue heavy. Local industries are actively engaged, and prospects for the future are bright.

LUMBER MARKET IN ONTARIO.

There exists among the manufacturers a strong feeling of confidence in the stability of the lumber market, this being based on the continued good demand, says the Canadian Lumberman. Buyers are still plentiful, and even at this season of the year are displaying some eagerness to cover their requirements. The knowledge that much of the white pine and hemlock production has already been contracted for, thus reducing the quantity available for purchase, has made buyers more anxious than usual, and has greatly strengthened the situation from a manufacturer's standpoint. Toronto dealers are enjoying a large trade in building lumber, but there does not seem to be much disposition to advance prices. "We are making a profit," said a prominent dealer, "and will not increase present prices unless compelled to do so by the mill men, and we are hoping that the manufacturers will see the wisdom of encouraging consumption by keeping prices within reason." Hard woods are featureless and less active than pine, but the higher prices ruling for the past two months have in most instances been maintained. Some offerings of birch are being made at a slight concession.

Secrecy—Despatch—Accuracy

The three cardinal points in an efficient audit are: "Secrecy, despatch, accuracy." The report which the auditor makes after the checking of the accounts has been done, should be placed in the hands of the manager of a company alone. A company also should not deter the working of a business by being too long on the books. Rapidity as a requisite of good auditing is only second to accuracy.

THE GILBRETH SYSTEM AND THE
COST-PLUS-A-FIXED-SUM CONTRACT AND THEIR ADVANTAGES TO ARCHITECTS AND ENGINEERS

In every building operation there are three parties, the owner, the architect or engineer, and the contractor. To get the best results in any construction work it is evident that the architect and contractor must co-operate to the fullest extent. Proper co-operation is impossible when an architect is forced to work with a contractor who skimps his building or who employs inferior materials. Moreover, under such conditions, the structure is bound to suffer and the architect is sure to come in for a big share of the blame. Unsatisfactory results like these occur with great frequency in work done on the lump-sum basis, because the lump-sum contractor, to save himself from loss, often resorts to makeshifts at the expense of the architect's reputation and the owner's pocket. In other words, the lump-sum contractor often works against the interests of architect and owner.

The cost-plus-a-fixed-sum contract by eliminating this division of interest, assures co-operation between contractor and architect. The cost-plus-a-fixed-sum contract fixes the contractor's profit at the start and thereby removes from him all temptation to do any but the most satisfactory work. His interest is thus made one with the architect's, since both are trying to produce the best results. Naturally the owner reaps the benefit of this unity of effort.

The Gilbreth System has been developed to utilize the cost-plus-a-fixed-sum contract to maximum advantage. It is a system of organized co-operation perfected by years of experience. It is a system under which red tape is eliminated, the maximum of result is obtained, and speed, economy and efficiency are made dependable quantities.

Under this system the architect finds that the co-operation assured by the cost-plus-a-fixed-sum contract extends throughout the entire work of construction. This is why the Gilbreth System and the cost-plus-a-fixed-sum contract appeal so powerfully to architects and engineers, and also why any architect or engineer who has worked with us once is pleased to work with us again.

We solicit an opportunity to explain our system in detail to architects and engineers particularly and to owners generally.

The Little Letter "u."

Prof. Skeat's attack before the British Academy upon the "u" in the English spelling of "honour" and "labour" can be appreciated only by those who know the religious fervor of the English press and literary set in supporting the claims of that pesky little superfluity. As professor of Anglo-Saxon at Cambridge University, he possesses an authority of his own that will now serve him well.

Blames Women Teachers.

Rev. Dr. White, of the Board of Education in Chicago, thinks the lack of authority in the public schools is due to the "women sentimentalists who have turned the world upside down." Children do not mind reprimand, and suspension is a holiday. He thought that a child needing punishment should be sent, as of yore, to the principal, who would administer it with a soft hickory switch.

SENATOR LOUGHEED'S TIMELY PROTEST

Thought Usury and Other Bills Should Have Been Introduced Sooner.

THE IMMIGRATION BILL.

Amendment to Measure Providing for Deportation of Improvident Rejected.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, June 30.—On a motion to adjourn the Senate over Dominion Day, Senator Lougheed called attention to the approach of prorogation, and to the fact that a large amount of government legislation was still to come before the Upper House. There would not be time to give it proper consideration. Some of the legislation could have been introduced into the Senate a good deal earlier. The Sunday bill could well have been introduced in the Senate early in the session and discussed thoroughly. The Usury bill was another of the same sort that might very well have been given to the Senate for discussion during the early and least busy days of the session. The question of usury had been discussed in the Senate before, and it was therefore eminently fitting that it should have been entrusted with the inauguration of the act. It seemed to Senator Lougheed the only effective way for the Senate to effectively protest against being loaded with bills too late to discuss them was to refuse to pass the measures brought down during the last days.

Hon. Mr. Scott said this was his thirty-second year in the Senate and he had never seen the Government measures as far advanced as this session. Under the former Goverament he had seen half a dozen important bills brought down from the Commons on the last day of the session. The Sunday bill might have arrived at the Senate ere this if Senator Lougheed's friends in the Lower House had not interfered with its progress.

Senator Lougheed—"They have insisted upon not interfering with it. They have refused to have anything to do with it."

Senator Scott said it was a very contentious measure and could not be hurried. He thought the Usury bill might have been introduced in the Senate. However, the Government had not decided to put the measure through until a considerable portion of the session had elapsed.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell said the Opposition might do as Senator Scott had once done. The Governor-General was in the corridor, the troops were lined up in front of the buildings, still Senator Scott had persisted in opposing a Government bill which had come from the Lower House. The Governor-General and the troops had to be sent away and prorogation put off.

IMMIGRANTS AND IMMIGRATION.

The bill respecting immigrants and immigration was considered in committee. The provision for a chief medical officer was struck out. The Secretary of State explained that all the immigration doctors were of the same rank now. It was proposed to continue them so. Dr. Sullivan and Dr. Wilson thought the medical branch should have a head, who would be vested with all the authority of a head.

Objection was taken by Senator Power to the provision that a man who becomes a charge on the public funds within two years of arrival may be deported. He would reduce the time to six months.

Senator Ellis said it was a rough provision, and indicated that Canada was becoming rich and selfish. Senators Wilson and Edwards objected to it.

The amendment was declared lost on division, after the Secretary of State had declared that authority was needed to prevent professional beggars coming to Canada, and Senator Watson, had explained that it was necessary to protect Canada from a certain class of immigration that might come from the United States.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday.

This store will be closed all day Monday—Dominion Day.
On next Saturday we shall Close at 1 o'clock, and continue to close at that hour every Saturday during July and August.

HAMILTON'S

INAUGURAL JULY SALE

Commences Tuesday morning, July 3rd, at 8 o'clock, our store being closed Monday, the Dominion Day national holiday.

This, the first clearing sale in our new store, will largely exceed all our previous July sales in volume, variety of merchandise and in price reduction.

In view of our determination to make this store a model of progressive storekeeping, all goods must be cleared in the season in which they were bought for, this necessarily entails losses, but we count losses inevitable during clearing sales.

The quantity of goods to be cleared in this sale is too large to admit of more than a representative item taken here and there from our various sections throughout the store being accorded publicity. There are equally great reductions being made in each department that might be of even greater interest to you. Interestingly detailed announcements will be published from day to day. Read next Tuesday's.

CAME UP IN THE DARKNESS

Steamship Ottawa Found Her Way to Port Without Difficulty.

THIS CREATES PRECEDENT.

First Time a Steamer of Her Size Has Negotiated the Ship Channel at Night.

The Dominion Line steamship Ottawa has not only made a record for herself by an unusually fast run between Liverpool and Quebec, but she has performed the feat of negotiating the channel between Quebec and Montreal in the darkness.

The Ottawa arrived in the port of Montreal at midnight, having passed up what is considered the worst portion of the channel, that between Three Rivers and this city when darkness had set in, taking her bearings from the channel lights. This is the first time that a large passenger vessel has undertaken such a task, and should do away for all time with the contention that large steamships cannot use the channel after dark.

The Ottawa left Quebec shortly after two o'clock yesterday afternoon, after landing 600 steerage passengers. Before dusk Three Rivers had been passed and when night came on Captain Maddox proceeded without let or hindrance straight through to this city, taking advantage of the well-lit channel.

The performance is a remarkable one inasmuch as the Ottawa is 455 feet in length and is a deep draught ship for her inches.

MAN WHO WROTE "THE MAPLE LEAF."

All over Canada universal regret is felt at the announcement that came from Toronto on Tuesday night that Alexander Muir, the author of Canada's national song, "The Maple Leaf," had gone to join the vast majority beyond the grave. Not every man who teaches school is fated to be known and loved in every home in the land of his adoption. Alexander Muir, however, was so loved, for his verses are such as to rouse the patriotic ardor of old and young and incite them to a greater love for the young country and attachment to the old.

To-morrow, Dominion Day, the day of days for him, he was to have led the special patriotic service at Parkdale Methodist Church, Toronto. He has been called away, but in that church, as well as in every other throughout the land, on that day will be heard the lines which he penned:—

"God save our King, Heaven bless
The Maple leaf forever."

FAMILY OF SCHOOLMASTERS.

Alexander Muir was born at Lesmanahagow, Lanarkshire, Scotland, where his father before him taught school. He came to the land of his adoption, the land he was destined to give its national prayer, when a babe, and never again left its shores. He spent his childhood in Scarboro township, York county, whence he came to Queen's University at Kingston, where he graduated in 1851.

SUGGESTION FOR THE SONG.

The story of his song is a memorable one. In October, 1867, two men were strolling in a Toronto garden. A maple leaf fluttered from a tree on to the coat of one of them. He tried to flick it away, but the little leaf remained. "You have been writing verses," said his friend, when saying good-bye, "why not write a song about the maple leaf?" Two hours afterwards the lines which made the name of Mr. Alexander Muir famous were written. He repeated them aloud when playing with his children next day. His wife suggested that he should set them to music, so that he might sing them. So he resolved to compose a melody himself, and in a few hours he had the tune that is familiar to every Canadian, and has often cheered the heart of Jack Canuck when far away. Mr. Muir soon afterwards sang the song to a party of friends, one of whom was the late Edward Lawson, a well-known man in the local musical world. "That must be published," said he, and he took the composer to the Guardian office, where arrangements were made for publication.

The first edition of 1,000 copies was ... on sale. Greatly ... Mr. ... was called ... of the sol...

tion. The magnificent sum of $4 subsequently found its way to his pocket, so that he has been the loser by "The Maple Leaf Forever" by $26. Year after year the song grew more popular. Sales have been enormous and the profits large, but not a cent found its way to the pockets of Alexander Muir. But he did not regret his lack of financial gain, and that was refreshing in these mercenary days. He was happy that he had made so many unknown friends by his songs, and felt that he had been rewarded. He had written "When Canadian Boys Were There," a reminiscence of Paardeberg.

"A British subject I was born; a British subject I will die" were the words suggested by the chorus of another of Alexander Muir's songs, and adopted by the late Sir John A. Macdonald as his life's motto.
