

Debate prolonged as tempers flare

RECORD NEWS SERVICES

In an apparent bid to keep the peace, all three political parties have agreed to prolong the mandate of the joint Commons-Senate committee on the constitution beyond its deadline this Friday as tempers flare over differing versions of a meeting last summer between British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

The basic question is whether Trudeau actually told Thatcher he would press ahead with unilateral patriation in the light of provincial opposition. According to Thatcher, no such warning was given, while the PM's office says it has a letter from the British leader assuring her full support in obtaining all possible pressure for patriation even in the event of provincial opposition.

In Ottawa, a spokesman for Prime Minister Trudeau voiced surprise that Thatcher's office was not aware of the letter.

Patrick Gossage, Trudeau's press secretary, said the document was received in early December and had been sent by Thatcher to introduce British Defence Minister Francis Pym who was on his way to Ottawa for a short visit.

INCLUDES ASSURANCE

Gossage said the text of the letter included assurances that the constitutional package would be submitted to the U.K. Parliament, but he said diplomatic protocol dictates that it is up to Thatcher to release it.

"It's their letter," he said. "It's up to them to release it."

Opposition Leader Joe Clark, meanwhile, stopped short of calling Trudeau a liar, contenting himself with the comment that the PM should "learn to tell the truth".

Yesterday, Trudeau publicly challenged Thatcher to confirm that he told her June 25 — just before the last, futile First Ministers' Conference in Ottawa — that the federal government planned to patriate the constitution with or without provincial consent.

Speaking in the Commons, Trudeau said he "hereby authorizes her (Thatcher)" to break any commitments to keep their conversation secret and to confirm his account of his meeting with her at 10 Downing St. in London.

Trudeau admitted that he was putting on "a show" for reporters when he emerged from Thatcher's home and said there had been no discussion between the two leaders on the possibility of provincial opposition to patriation.

In fact, Trudeau said, he told Thatcher "quite likely we would not get unanimity" from the provinces.

Trudeau still maintains that Thatcher gave a commitment the British Parliament would pass a joint resolution from the Canadian Senate and Commons on constitutional change.

TALKS HADN'T STARTED

At the time when Trudeau visited Thatcher in London, negotiations had not yet begun between the federal and provincial governments on a constitutional package.

To have stated publicly that the federal government was pessimistic about the result of the negotiations would have been "a provocation", Trudeau said.

The negotiations collapsed in September and the following month Trudeau unveiled his plans for unilaterally patriating and amending the constitution.

Environment Minister John Roberts and External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan then visited Thatcher to brief her on the package, and MacGuigan says that while the letter did not specifically say Thatcher would enforce party discipline to push the package through Parliament, it did not hedge on a previous commitment to quickly pass it.

However, the British spokesman said that despite checks, "I have no knowledge of such a letter," expressing concern lest the remarks be interpreted as a slur on MacGuigan.

All three political parties agreed to prolong the mandate of the joint Commons-Senate committee on the constitution beyond its deadline as "a small price to pay to keep peace," as one Liberal MP on the committee put it.

The MP, who asked to remain anonymous, said the three party House leaders — Yvon Pinard of the Liberals, Walter Baker of the Progressive Conservatives and Stanley Knowles of the NDP — are to meet today to ratify the agreement reached by a sub-committee of the constitutional committee after several hours of negotiations.

The Liberals, who hold the majority on the committee, gave three conditions for acquiescing to the Conservative members' demand for an extension, to which the NDP approved.

Fox MDs hope for miracle

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Doctors at Royal Columbian Hospital are hoping for a miracle to cure one-legged runner Terry Fox. More conventional medical treatments all have failed to stop cancerous cells from spreading through the young man's body, hospital spokesman Dr. Ladislav Antonik told a news conference Monday.

Fox did not attend. He was later discharged from the hospital and returned to his Port Coquitlam home nearby.

Antonik said the tumors in Fox's lungs are growing into his abdomen and have spread into the lymph glands surrounding his aorta, the main artery which distributes blood to most parts of the body.

All attempts to stop the growths, including eight courses of chemotherapy, have failed, Antonik said, and surgery and x-ray treatment have been ruled out.

The only possible treatment left is the drug Interferon, an expensive derivative of white blood cells, developed by British scientists in 1957. Doctors have used it since with mixed success.

Davis leadership faces March test

TORONTO (CP) — Leadership, performance and economics became the key words for the Ontario election campaign Monday after Premier William Davis said another session of the legislature would be a sham and called a March 19 vote.

Davis, Progressive Conservative premier for 10 years, said it would be futile to recall the house only to have Liberals and New Democrats fulfil their promise to defeat his 58-seat minority government.

Joint action by the 34-member Liberal caucus and 33-member NDP caucus could have easily toppled the Davis administration.

But, given a new mandate and the majority that has eluded him in the last two elections, Davis said he could draw up a specific agenda for at least the next four years to keep Ontario sound.

It quickly became obvious that the Tory campaign will make the election a contest among potential leaders and stress the experience gained during the party's uninterrupted 38-year reign.

But Opposition Leader Stuart Smith, who enters his second campaign since his 1976 election as Liberal leader, said in Ottawa that all voters should care about is the Tories' dismal performance.

OFFERS CHOICE

The choice is between Conservative policies that have left Ontario in last place among provinces in economic growth and Liberal plans that would make the province a leader, Smith said.

He dismissed the NDP, saying "we have a two-way race and a clear shot at the government for the first time in my lifetime."

But there was strong disagreement from NDP Leader Michael Cassidy, entering his first campaign as leader since succeeding Stephen Lewis in 1978.

Cassidy, a journalist who represents Ottawa Centre, said morale and money are at an all-time high in the NDP which took 33 seats in the 1977 election.

Meanwhile, the illegal strike by Ontario hospital workers has apparently ended after nine days in all but two large communities — Hamilton and Sudbury. CUPE national president Grace Hartman said the strike's end was a defeat for the union. Union committee members decided in a conference call to return to work.

One student was concerned that the polarization — that left the Parti Quebecois losers in the referendum on sovereignty-association — might influence the election.

MEMORIES FADING
 But the premier said the PQ has checked since the Christmas holidays and traces of the referendum are disappearing: "The problems of today are more important." He did not say how the check was made.

The premier spent about 90 minutes at the south-shore college, meeting students and staff members in an election-style swing surrounded by reporters.

He made no formal speech, sticking instead to individual conversations and urging them to sign the petition opposing the unilateral federal action. But several times he first had to explain what the issue was all about.

He said at one point he was discouraged people aren't more aware. "When you reach people, they do sign, once they're aware of it," he told reporters.

Petrofina purchase all but complete

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians from coast to coast may soon be able to buy their gasoline at flashy red-and-white gasoline stations sporting a maple leaf emblem and the name Petro-Canada.

Analysts say public image is one reason the federal Crown corporation is in the process of buying Petrofina Canada Inc., the Canadian subsidiary of the Belgian multinational Petrofina SA.

It would also make Petro-Canada Inc. the second-largest oil company in Canada, in terms of assets.

While Petrofina said Monday it is in the final stages of negotiations for the sale, which could tally up at $1.46 billion, a Petro-Canada Inc. spokesman from Calgary said: "It's not at all clear that the deal would go through."

In Ottawa, Energy Minister Marc Lalonde said Monday afternoon that he expected a response from Brussels within 48 hours on whether the takeover bid is accepted or rejected.

While Petrofina executives would not discuss terms, Jerry Slovacek, a vice-president of the United Oil Workers of Canada local representing Petrofina refinery workers, said he had been told by management that the deal would give Petro-Canada majority interest immediately and total control later.

An inch in 12 hours

Non-blizzard deluges ET

SHERBROOKE (JD) — What would have been the worst blizzard of the season fell as rain throughout the Townships yesterday, with about an inch of rain flooding streets and basements in a 12-hour period.

Police reported numerous storm-related accidents, the first early yesterday when a tractor-trailer rig loaded with logs skidded off Route 243 between Knowlton and Bolton South. The truck jackknifed, sending its load of pulp into the woods and leaving the driver shaken but unhurt.

Ice loading on the wires and gusts of up to 80 kph are blamed for numerous power outages from Sherbrooke to La Patrie Sunday and yesterday. Subscribers in Bury, Scottstown, Lingwick, La Patrie, Chartierville and Notre Dame des Bois were without power until yesterday morning, when Hydro-Quebec crews succeeded in restoring it.

Road crews worked overnight, clearing storm sewers of ice buildups which threatened to close numerous low-lying roads throughout the area and applying salt to some of the worst-hit areas, but the state of many range roads and country secondary roads was such that not even school buses nor milk trucks could get through until sanding contractors passed.

Quebec Police Force detachments, maintenance contractors and Voirie switchboards recorded scores of calls from irate rural dwellers demanding that their roads be sanded before an emergency situation occurred.

According to an Environment Canada weather office spokesman, the temperature will be dropping to as low as 35 below zero tonight, freezing much of the runoff and returning most roads to their icy state.

More snow is expected later this week, but ski hill operators and cross-country organizers say at least a foot of snow is needed across the Townships if there is to be any spring skiing. Most slopes and cross-country trails are extremely icy, with a fair number of bald spots to trip the unwary.

Phil: Six weeks more

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — Punxsutawney Phil, the famous weather forecasting groundhog, yesterday, poked his head out of a burrow atop Gobbler's Knob, saw his shadow and predicted six more weeks of winter, said his interpreter. "So-co-colese; eeny meeny miny mo." Phil is reported to have told Charles Erhard, president of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club, and the only man who claims the ability to translate the groundhog's predictions.

"At 7:27 a.m., the king of all weather prognosticators seemed temporarily confused by the unpredictable nature of the winter thus far," said Erhard, after rapping on the door of Phil's heated burrow.

Chrysler union workers vote to take pay cut

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers union members at Chrysler Corp. have voted by a 3-to-2 margin to take another pay cut, removing one more road-block to final approval of $400 million in U.S. government loan guarantees to the No. 3 automaker, the union said Monday. A Chrysler spokesman had no immediate comment on the vote.

Marc Stepp, the union's vice-president in charge of Chrysler matters, said 26,942 workers voted in favor of a revised contract that drops the average wage by 13 per cent starting in March. Some 18,859 workers voted against the contract. The margin of approval — 59 per cent — was far less than the 68 per cent in favor in October, 1979, of the current contract, which puts workers behind their counterparts at other Big Three companies for the first time. In January, 1980, when the UAW swallowed further concessions to help establish the loan guarantees, 79 per cent of the workers gave their approval to the pact. ACCEPTED PROPOSAL The 11,000 Chrysler Canada workers eligible to vote, including 4,000 on indefinite layoff, voted by a narrow margin last week to accept the rescue proposal. The vote was reported to be slightly over 50 per cent in favor of acceptance.

In the U.S. about 61,000 active and 49,000 laid-off workers were eligible to vote, according to recent company figures. The UAW gave the eligible total as 120,000. There was no immediate explanation for the 10,000-worker discrepancy.

"If any company thinks this is an opportunity to take advantage of UAW members and the gains they have won over the years, they are in for a shocking surprise," Stepp said.

"We did what we did at Chrysler because Chrysler was on the edge of bankruptcy. I imagine the same rule, the same principle would apply to General Motors (Corp.)."

He did not mention Ford Motor Co., which along with GM said it would ask the UAW to re-open contracts if Chrysler won more concessions.

The chief sacrifice approved by the Chrysler workers was the elimination in March of cost-of-living allowances earned since September, 1979 — $1.15 an hour in December and estimated to reach $1.37 in March — and a freeze in base wages, currently averaging $9.47 an hour.

Those measures were estimated to save $450 million, with other provisions bringing the UAW total to $622 million. Similar measures from other workers were to save $161 million more.

"We have not abandoned, nor do we intend to abandon, the concept of COLA," Stepp said.

Among the measures accepted by Chrysler was a commitment to negotiate a profit-sharing plan that would give workers at least 15 per cent of all profits over 10 per cent of new worth. The provision means nothing at the moment, for Chrysler will not make money until 1982, according to U.S. government estimates.

Skilled worker shortage forces recruiting

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada will continue to face shortages of skilled workers in the 1980s and be forced to recruit abroad despite high levels of unemployment at home, members of a parliamentary committee on employment were told Monday.

Serious shortages of engineers are likely to develop soon, yet universities are being squeezed by provincial governments tightening funds, McGill vice-principal Gordon MacLachlan said.

He also said the choice of students during the 1970s for job-related applied programs has left university officials worried that there will not be enough professionals with theoretical grounding to teach future students.

Spokesmen for Montreal-based aerospace companies told the committee studying employment opportunities in the 1980s that they are unable to train enough workers to meet demands.

As a result, they said, they have had to go to Europe to find skilled machinists, engineers and tool designers.

Companies such as Canadair, Pratt and Whitney and Canadian Marconi have been working with the Quebec education department to improve and expand courses at colleges and universities, but not enough young people are being attracted to skilled trades.

Blue collar skilled trades have a bad public image in North America, Canadair spokesman Gordon Campbell told the committee.

"That image is out of date," he said. "These are damned good jobs, well paid and not dirty."

Companies which maintain their own training programs often find their people pirated by companies in the United States or related industries elsewhere in Canada, Campbell said.

Applied technology programs in universities are saturated with students and some, such as computer science, are finding their resources strained to crisis proportions, said George Farnell, McGill University engineering dean.

Canada may again have to turn abroad for university professors, as it did 20 years ago, he said.

Future employment opportunities in industries, such as shipping and textiles, which have been able to train for their own needs will depend on government policy in coming years, the committee was told.

Andrew Boyle, a spokesman for the Seafarers International Union, said government action in recent years has reduced the ability of Canadian shipping to compete even within country.

In the short term, employment opportunities can be improved by enforcing regulations which require those shipping within Canada to hire Canadian crews, he said.

Some companies wait until the last minute to request seamen and demand unusual qualifications. This way, the shipping firms can claim skilled sailors are unavailable and are able to hire foreign crews at lower rates, he said.

Training facilities exist in Canada to supply crews with any skill, provided sufficient notice is given, Boyle said.

News in brief

CBC plan would duplicate service

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC would put a heavy drain on the number of radio frequencies available to private radio stations and duplicate services already offered by the private stations if it is permitted to go ahead with its 20-year radio plan, says the Canadian Association of Broadcasters.

And the association said in a release today the CBC shouldn't be allowed to get away with it.

Money good in nuclear repair

SAN ONOFRE, Calif. (AP) — They're called "sponges" because of the amount of radiation they absorb on the job. But the 600 workers repairing leaks inside an aging nuclear generator here say the pay is too good to refuse. "It's boring work, but it's more money than I've ever made before," a 22-year-old college student said of the $600 a week he earns.

"It's hot inside the plastic suit we wear, but you aren't in there for more than two minutes or so," said a 29-year-old construction worker.

Lawrence: Examine gun control

OTTAWA (CP) — Gun control legislation needs a thorough public airing to see if the law is reducing violent crimes, Allan Lawrence, solicitor-general in the former Progressive Conservative government, said Monday.

"It seems to me to be a cumbersome, awkward and expensive system," Lawrence told the Commons. He doubts it is working.

Observers patrol ceasefire

LIMA (AP) — Teams of foreign military attaches patrolled the border battle front between Peru and Ecuador today to supervise a ceasefire agreed to after five days of skirmishing.

The U.S., Brazil, Chile and Argentina sent the military observers Monday from their embassies in Lima and Quito, the Peruvian and Ecuadorean capitals, to criss-cross the disputed area in the Condor mountain range by helicopter.

IBU workers seek injunction

MONTREAL (CP) — International building union leaders plan to seek a court injunction this week to stop a union affiliation vote which could strip them of the right to represent many Quebec construction workers.

The provincial government has ordered a special vote later this month asking 70,000 Quebec construction workers — members of international union locals which until recently were affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labor — to choose which of the two will represent them in contract talks.

Blenkarn-Extend bond program

OTTAWA (CP) — If the government doesn't extend its small business development bond program beyond the end of March, virtually no one will be able to take advantage of it, Don Blenkarn, deputy Progressive Conservative finance critic, said Monday.

Blenkarn, MP for the Toronto area riding of Mississauga South, told the Commons the program — originally due to expire at the end of 1980 — could be extended again at no cost to the government.

Energy efficient home program

MONTREAL (CP) — A new program to encourage contractors to design and build energy-efficient homes was formally launched Monday by the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

HUDAC officials said the program could save homeowners up to $500 a year in heating costs, depending on where they live and the type of heating fuel that is available.

The program has received an enthusiastic welcome from Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove.

Tris sleepwear still available

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Children's sleepwear treated with Tris, a flame retardant chemical banned in the U.S. in 1977 after it was linked to cancer, has been discovered in flea markets and discount stores in two states, officials say.

The sleepwear — estimated at 150,000 pieces — was to have been made into rags for industrial use after being recalled four years ago.

High costs should be welcomed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian manufacturers would welcome higher energy costs as long as they could be assured of adequate supplies, J.E. Newall, president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, said Monday.

Newall said manufacturers are suffering because of problems between Ottawa and the producing provinces over revenues from oil and gas. He said governments should be "pulling out all the stops to develop self-sufficiency in supply" in order to make the manufacturing sector more secure.

Speaker appeals to Khomeini

BEIRUT (AP) — The speaker of Iran's parliament, reacting to a new attack by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr on the clergy-led government, appealed to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Monday to intervene in the political power struggle.

Bani-Sadr stepped up the political strife over the weekend with an interview in the newspaper Enghelab Islami. He was quoted as saying there should have been a national debate on freeing the 52 American hostages to determine whether it was "a great service or high treason." He also accused the clergy-dominated parliament of trying to exclude him from political decisions, the paper said.

Limerick case ends

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ruby Limerick case came to an end Monday as the Supreme Court of Canada granted an order quashing her appeal.

The appeal arose from a 1975 raid on her home that led to heroin conspiracy charges against Limerick and two other persons.

Strikers and government meet

WARSAW (Reuter) — Strike leaders in the southern Polish province of Bielsko Biala met government negotiators today for talks on ending a crippling week-long industrial stoppage.

The local branch of the independent free trade union Solidarity said the government team arrived in Bielsko Biala late Monday night for the talks that began today.

Guns silent in Ecuador

LIMA (AP) — The guns fell silent Monday along the disputed border separating Ecuador and Peru and, a Brazilian official said, representatives of the two South American countries agreed to accept a frontier peacekeeping commission that would include U.S. representatives.

No fighting was reported Monday by either Peru or Ecuador, after five days of battles over three remote border posts on the Cordillera of the Condor, a mountain range on the western edge of the Amazon jungle about 1,300 kilometres north of Lima. Both countries reported heavy losses during the fighting, but gave no specific casualty figures.

Chickadee Checkoff in Iowa

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The donkey and the elephant already have their own checkoffs in Iowa. Now there's a bill labelled the "chickadee checkoff" that would give aid and comfort to wildlife via state tax returns.

The Natural Resources Committee gave the checkoff unanimous approval Monday, but members pointed out the bill is somewhat different from the checkoff that designates funds for the Iowa Republican and Democratic parties.

Maternity benefits under UIC

OTTAWA (CP) — Employment Minister Lloyd Axworthy said Monday the government may introduce legislation respecting maternity benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act following a detailed departmental review.

But he told the Commons that such legislation will not be considered until the government has solicited public opinion when the results of the study are released, possibly in the spring.

Klan preparing for race war

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — The Ku Klux Klan is preparing for an "unavoidable race war" in the Vancouver area and members are arming themselves with rifles, handguns and survival equipment, says the group's chief B.C. organizer.

"I'm not afraid to admit it," said Dave Cook, 40, a fisherman. "We're preparing ourselves for an attack. We don't intend to do the attacking, but when the race war comes, we want to be able to defend ourselves."

Private sector can handle housing

MONTREAL (CP) — The Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada and Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove appeared to be on the same wave length Monday, agreeing that most of Canada's housing needs can be met by the private sector.

At a luncheon on the first day of HUDAC's annual meeting, the group's new president, Klaus Springer of Calgary, went so far as to introduce the federal minister as "an ally and a friend."

Whelan: Marketing questionable

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Monday he may order an inquiry into alleged questionable practices in the marketing of potatoes in Eastern Canada.

He said his officials are studying charges made by the National Farm Products Marketing Council in a report which recommended creation of a marketing board for potato growers in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

Matapedia residents want jobs

AMQUI, Que. (CP) — Matapedia Valley residents will continue to press the federal and provincial governments for jobs in this chronically depressed region, a spokesman declared Monday.

"We aren't going to let the train pass us by," said Jean-Pierre Morneau, a development officer with the Matapedia county council, a group representing the 24 small municipalities in the valley.

Woman wonders who she is

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The polite young woman in the South Florida State Hospital says she wonders as much as anyone else who she was before September, when a park ranger found her naked and filthy, too weak to cry for help.

Jane Doe, as she now is known, says she doesn't know how she got to Birch State Park here, or why she was emaciated, dehydrated, covered with dirt and near death when she was discovered Sept. 19.

Rose's lawyer appeals

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul Rose's lawyer has gone before the federal court to try to overturn a decision of the national parole board which has refused to release the member of the now-defunct Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Lawyer Robert Lemieux told the court Monday that refusing Rose an early release from his two concurrent life sentences is "a flagrant violation of human rights and an unjustified persecution."

Editor freed after three months

TORONTO (CP) — The managing editor of a small weekly newspaper was freed Monday from spending three months in jail on a contempt of court charge for refusing to divulge sources for a news story.

Robert Johnston won his fight to maintain the confidentiality of his sources when the Ontario Labor Relations Board — just hours before he was to either reveal the names or begin serving his sentence — withdrew its complaint in Divisional Court.

But Johnston, 32, wasn't at the hearing that cleared him. He was busy putting together the next edition of the Georgina Advocate, based in Georgina Township, about 70 kilometres north of Toronto.

Pravda criticizes Reagan

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union — stung by Reagan administration claims that the Kremlin is in league with international terrorists — has struck back angrily at what it calls an "anti-Soviet campaign" in the United States.

A statement, carried by the official news agency Tass, began: "Soviet leading circles have taken note of a new anti-Soviet hostile campaign being unfolded in the United States."

Council to go ahead with Festival Lenn grant

By PATRICIA TRACY

LENNOXVILLE — The Lennoxville Town Council will go through with their promise of a grant to Festival Lennoxville, it was announced last night. Mayor Cecil Dougherty had earlier questioned the validity of financially supporting a festival that was losing money. Amusement taxes have been received from Festival and the town will simply remit the taxes. Meanwhile, Mayor Dougherty refused a dinner invitation at the Sherbrooke Cathedral in March in connection with Prison Week. Guest of honor at the dinner will be the Hon. Robert Kaplan, Solicitor-General of Canada. "I'd rather spend six months in jail," said the mayor as he refused to delegate any council member to attend.

Although the long-awaited report on police activities during 1980 was out yesterday, councillors refused to discuss it because it had not been studied. Secretary-Treasurer Jules Gervais indicated both the annual report and the monthly summary for January may be ready for the next council meeting in two weeks.

Negotiations for the renewal of the labor contract with La Fraternite des Policiers de Lennoxville are progressing slowly, police committee chairman Constant Chailier reported. Another meeting between the two parties will be held today.

Although no fire department report was tabled, the fire committee announced the firefighters would participate in another one-week training course during the spring. Councillor Duncan Bruce announced inspection of public buildings was beginning, but private homeowners wanting their houses inspected for fire safety would have to approach the department individually.

The police and roads committee of the council will begin study on the traffic lights at the intersection of Queen, College and Belvidere streets. The town has been faced with constant confusion at that intersection because of poor lane indication. Mayor Dougherty suggested the only solution to the problem was overhead lane indicators.

The Parks and Recreation Committee has announced Mayor Dougherty has accepted an invitation to act as honorary chairman of the Quebec Special Olympics Winter Games to be held at Alexander Galt Regional High School

February 20 to 22.

The council received a report from the surveyor on the land they own in front of Perrette's store and the post office. Although Perrette's owners have been restricting parking space in front of the store to shoppers, the property is not theirs and is open for town parking. The council will soon apply municipal parking bylaws, restricting stopping to two hours.

Council received a reply from MP Irene Pelletier following a request for mail delivery service at the Office Municipal d'Habitation de Lennoxville. Because of Pelletier's support, mail delivery has begun at the town building.

Hydro-Quebec replied to the council's request that they take over the lighting on the town's bridges. Lennoxville will continue to have responsibility for lighting on all bridges, including the Fairview Bridge, where three people have lost their lives this winter.

And, for the first time, the council passed a bylaw in French without an English version last night. The bylaw concerns the financial participation of ratepayers in future permanent works and/or improvements bylaws.

Jury acquits Thomas in Dragon death

GRANBY (JM) — An eight-man, four-woman jury acquitted Denis Thomas following lengthy deliberations which ended here late Friday afternoon.

Thomas had been accused of having hurdered Robert Dragon in the parking lot of the Orford Hotel in Magog on Sept. 20, 1979.

Crown attorney Claude Melancon based his arguments on the article 21 of the criminal code which states: "Where two or more persons form an intention in common to carry out an unlawful purpose and to assist each other therein and any one of them, in carrying out the common purpose, commits an offence, each of them who knew or ought to have known that the commission of the offence would be a probable consequence of carrying out the common purpose is a party to that offence."

Jean Pierre Rancourt argued the crown had not proven beyond all reasonable doubt his client had premeditated the crime with an accomplice and called for his acquittal. The jury returned on Thursday night with a verdict of second degree murder and when they were individually polled one stated she felt there had been no premeditation on Thomas' part. Rancourt then called for a mistrial.

Mr. Justice Georges Savoie demurred and put aside the jury's decision and ordered them to resume their deliberations. They sat until 9:30 p.m. on Thursday, resumed at 9 a.m. Friday and rendered their final verdict shortly before 4 p.m.

Bruno Jacques, a co-accused in the stabbing death, was found guilty of second-degree murder in the District of St. Francis when he was handed the mandatory minimum life term and told he could not apply for parole until he has served 15 years firm time. Rancourt obtained the change of venue stating the publicity surrounding the Jacques trial would not enable him to prepare a full and adequate defence for Thomas.

Butters builds in Brome

BROME LAKE (JM) — The keys to a brand new building in Knowlton Ward were turned over to the Butters Centre recently and it will be utilized as a workshop for the mentally handicapped. The building was built by the Butters Foundation according to specifications provided by the Butters Centre at an overall cost of approximately $68,000. Trainees in the workshop will complete their apprenticeships, learning and developing skills which will help them find other work and integrate into the community.

The foundation, a non-profit organization, was incorporated to encourage and support the development of readaptive services for the mentally handicapped in the area and the needs are great. "Credit for this project, as well as all other Foundation projects, should properly be attributed to individuals, associations, clubs and corporations whose generous annual donations help finance the activities," Foundation chairman Edward Luke said.

Any person requesting information about the foundation is requested to call Mr. Michael Mather on Mr. Marcellin Dallaire at 819-843-5212 or write the Butters Foundation, 109 William, Cowansville, Que., J2K 1K9.

Townships talk

SHERBROOKE (AR) — The Petites Soeurs of Ste. Famille of Sherbrooke have confirmed that Pope John Paul II has signed a decree signifying that the founder of the convent, Mother Marie Leonie, has been given the title of venerable in the Catholic church. This title is the lowest of the three orders of sanctity bestowed by the church. John Paul II signed the decree January 31, 1981.

SHERBROOKE (AR) — The Ministry of Education has given the University of Sherbrooke $475,000 for the creation of a bio-organic chemistry laboratory which will be concerned with the research and development of new pharmaceuticals. The new lab will work with McGill University in its research. Professors Pierre Deslongchamps and Bernard Belleau will be in charge of the new facility.

SHERBROOKE (CB) — An 86-year-old man was the victim of a beating by a 15-year-old boy he caught breaking into his house early Sunday morning.

The boy entered the Island Street home of Bruce Harkness through the bathroom window, causing enough noise to wake him up.

In spite of the difference in their ages, Harkness tried to collar the boy in the kitchen, but during the struggle he fell bumping his head.

The boy fled, but left his tuque and an "Adidas" bag. Meanwhile, Harkness, his head covered with blood, called city police.

Harkness was treated at Sherbrooke Hospital and released after a few hours. The boy was turned over to the Youth Protection directorate.

BROMPTONVILLE (SM) — Two townships companies have been graced with DREE grants of $191,400 to expand their operations and employment.

Les Meubles Rowe Canada Ltd. of Victoriaville, received $131,400 for expansion of its furniture plant, which is expected to create 25 jobs and investments of $588,000.

Machinerie Agricole Bois-Francis Inc. of Warwick received $15,000 for its farm machinery plant and will create three new jobs and investments of $75,000.

SHERBROOKE (AR) — The office of Planning and Development of Quebec has given a grant of $87,500 for the enlargement and renovation of the Jacques Cartier Pavillon and the L'Atelier Theatre.

The work will begin in September 1981 and will continue for about one year. The building will receive further insulation and be generally renovated to make it more comfortable. Certain parts of the building such as the washrooms will be altered in order to accommodate the handicapped.

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — Judge Bernard Legare ruled there was sufficient evidence to cite Eastern Railway Siding Construction Ltd., of Ville St. Laurent, to trial on a charge of criminal negligence causing the death of Guy Gagne in West Brome on June 21, 1979. Joseph Mouskatel, who represented the company, said they had no defence to offer at voluntary statement and the firm was cited to appear at the spring term of the local assizes on April 13.

Gilles Barrette, of St. Eustache, the former object of a bench warrant, earlier appeared in Granby when he renounced his rights to a preliminary hearing on the same charge and he was cited to the assizes.

Barrette was driving an Eastern Railways truck when he slammed into the rear of Gagne's semi-trailer which was halted to allow an eastbound CP Rail freight train pass the level crossing. The impact killed Gagne instantly and derailed 17 cars some of which contained volatile and toxic substances which polluted the formerly pristine South Branch of the Yamaska River and forced evacuation of the village.

Serge Bouchard, of St. Armand, changed his option and pleaded guilty to two charges of receiving stolen goods. The crown then said it had no proof to offer on a charge of breaking and entering and it was dismissed. "My client has begun a new career working on a hog farm and I humbly suggest his sentence should be continued to an ulterior date," defence lawyer Guy Arsenault said. Judge Bernard Legare continued the sentence to July 17 and asked police to keep regular checks in the interim.

Jacques Henry, of Montreal, changed his option and pleaded guilty to counts of armed robbery and use of a firearm in a crime of violence in Sutton during the summer of 1980. Defence lawyer Daniel Giard told the court of certain extenuating circumstances which were upheld by Crown attorney Claude Noisieux.

Judge Legare noted the minimal participation of the accused and handed down the sentence suggested by the crown of one month on the first count and the minimum one year, consecutive, on the second. Henry was then ordered to abstain from owning any firearms, ammunitions, or explosive devices for five years following his release.

Mario Boucher, of Cowansville, who had been remanded in custody on Oct. 21, 1980, following no plea to charges of conspiracy with one or more persons to commit burglaries in commercial establishments, and to having broken and entered Bob's Amusement Parlor in Cowansville three times during the summer of 1980 with intent to commit crimes, was given his conditional release to June 23 pending sentencing.

Daniel Vaillancourt and Regis Tardif, both of Cowansville, who earlier pleaded guilty to single charges of breaking and entering the pool room with intent, were each handed suspended sentences and were bound over to keep the public peace for two years.

Robert Tetreault, owner of the pool room, was convicted on a charge of having received approximately $175 in stolen gold chains during the summer of 1980. Representations for sentencing will be heard on Jan. 30.

Michel Leduc, of Sherbrooke, found the price of Cowansville pizzas slightly excessive after he pleaded guilty to a charge of theft. Crown attorney Noisieux told the court local restaurants had been plagued with calls which landed up in losses. "They'd call and order a small pizza for one address then call a minute later and order two large at a nearby fictitious address. When the driver was delivering the first they'd steal the other two." He then asked the accused if he was still on probation and Leduc told him it terminated in October 1981.

"Was it for a similar offence?" Judge Legare queried. "Yes," Leduc replied. "You're on probation and you still haven't learned," exasperated Judge Legare remarked. "Seven days and you are also fined $100 and costs, in default of payment to 15 days additional, in other words the equivalent of one month."

Luc Laflamme, of Boucherville, the object of a bench warrant when he failed to appear as a crown witness in a preliminary hearing on Dec. 30, 1980, had his sentence for obstructing justice continued to April 13. He was released after being informed by the court he could have been held for 30 days for the infraction.

ORFORD GROUP OPENS BOG SURVIVAL ISSUE

MAGOG (CB) — Fed up with the silence of minister Lucien Lessard, the committee for the integration of the Brompton Lake bog with Mount Orford Park has decided to re-open the subject of the bog's survival.

According to committee president Robert Therrien, there is no doubt that the minister of recreation, hunting and fishing has little interest in the group's efforts to assure the existence of the "only swamp with a high wildlife potential" in the Eastern Townships.

The committee presented a report to the minister over five months ago and has since sent him at least two other documents, says Therrien, "but the minister hasn't bothered to send us anything at all."

The government has stated that it intends to annex the bog and make it part of the park, but the committee believes that this will be useless if the area around it isn't protected as well.

Therrien says that for example a major logging company has already started clear-cutting near the bog, compromising its natural condition.

"We think it's important that the government modify its original proposition and add a strip of lots totalling 700 acres in the uninhabited areas of the bog."

The association of geographers of the Universite de Sherbrooke presented the minister with a brief proving beyond any doubt the need to annex the surrounding land to protect the swamp's wildlife.

Slashers at work

In government budget-cutting times, there is a tendency to slash those programs affecting the least number of voters, whether or not those programs are more valuable than some others.

Such is the situation with the Ministry of Education. Thursday, directors of school boards from across Quebec will be meeting Education Minister Camille Laurin at his offices in the former women's jail on Fullum Street in Montreal to learn just how they'll be expected to meet the minister's demands for budget cutbacks.

The righteousness with which the ministry is proposing to follow the letter of Bill 101 at this stage in time is the merest of excuses. Furthermore, it's not fair to the younger brothers and sisters of those now attending the welcome classes.

There is an element of truth to the ministry's complaint that the Bourassa government's shoddy bookkeeping practices led to the 500 million floating debt the ministry says it's facing, but why did they wait three years before making a move?

In short, the welcome classes are one of the best features of the Quebec education system, combining daycare, French instruction and an integrated program in a very popular, inexpensive form of preparatory schooling. And what better form of education is there, than bringing together children of all races and nations? Prejudices we've all grown up with don't stand a chance in that type of environment.

What difference does it make which system a child goes into once he or she has graduated from the class-d'accueil program? And how cynical does a bureaucrat or politician have to be to save a few easy bucks at the expense of so very much? If you agree, write your school board, call up your parents' committee, petition and make yourself heard.

Backtalk

Several regular readers and crossword fans have called to complain that The Gazette is now publishing the same crossword as The Record. We called the Toronto Star Syndicate, which supplies both of us, and asked them to send us another (they publish three different crosswords). We'll be starting it in next week's papers. We had our version first, but what can one do? Thought you'd like to know...

Concerning several grave pasteup and proofreading errors over the last few days: We know they look bad and read worse, and we'll try to do better. Helen Evans, our proofreader, is doing the work of three people and it's not her fault. Our typesetting staff is second to none, but we're asking them to work miracles 15 minutes before deadline. It just doesn't work.

So bear with us, try to figure out the mistakes and remember — all newspapers make mistakes all the time. The good ones admit it.

Canadians have less fear of authority

VANCOUVER (CP) — Most Canadians are less fearful than Americans of authoritative bodies such as police forces, says Chief Justice Allan McEachern of B.C. Supreme Court.

McEachern told a conference on police accountability the U.S. is primarily concerned with protection of citizens' rights, even if that concept may protect the guilty.

For example, the U.S. constitution forbids use of improperly obtained evidence in a criminal trial, while Canadian courts allow such evidence.

This concern for citizens' rights, he said, springs from "an innate mistrust of authority" in the U.S., while the Canadian approach is based on more trust of authority.

On the proposed charter of human rights and freedoms which the federal government wants to enshrine in the constitution, he said the provision guaranteeing fundamental justice may not affect admissibility of evidence.

His comments came at a conference at which speakers complained that police in Canada aren't fully accountable to the citizenry.

One solution suggested was to form community policing advisory groups to which police would be accountable.

Alan Grant, an Ontario law professor and former police inspector, said the existence of RCMP in many provinces results in an accountability gap. He said RCMP come into the province as municipal police on contract, but retain all the federal trappings of a national police force.

Grant said all police procedures, not just their accountability, should be examined. "Most policemen spend their careers pursuing overt, predatory crime of a relatively minor nature," he said. "And most detectives spend most of their time on cases which experience shows will not be solved."

Grant also said there is a lack of higher education among police chiefs.

But Vancouver Police Chief Bob Stewart, who said he would be opposed to outsiders controlling the good order of his force, wasn't intimidated by Grant's remark.

"I got my doctorate in the school of hard knocks," he said, to loud applause from an audience which included many policemen.

Letters

Editor:

The disabled are finally recognized. 1981, the year of the Disabled started badly with the failure of the Government on January 12, when presenting its amendments to the Constitutional Resolution, to recognize the rights of the disabled.

January 28 that omission was corrected when all members of the Joint Committee agreed to amend a Non-Discrimination Rights clause (section 15) so that now everyone has the right to equality before the law and to equal protection of the law without discrimination because of not only race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, age or sex - but also mental or physical disability.

This is an important step in the process of recognition of the rights of the handicapped by all Canadians. We have argued before that the disabled have the right to education, work and proper working conditions; and access to buildings, social assistance and government services. Often in the past when these rights have been denied or excuse for delaying implementation of programs for the disabled has been given those affected had no legal recourse.

If the Constitution is amended with the words recommended January 28 by the Joint Committee, the disabled will have a legal basis to demand before the Court the implementation of these rights.

Hopefully the disabled of this country will not have to seek recourse to the Courts.

The enshrinement in the Constitution of a recognition than no-one should be discriminated against because he or she is mentally or physically disabled should lead to a more human approach to the disabled of our country than ever before.

Mulroney: I'd sit down and take a look

MONTREAL (CP) — Brian Mulroney, who five years ago was fighting Joe Clark for the Progressive Conservative leadership, is working to make sure Clark keeps the job at the party convention later this month.

But if the party rejects Clark and "the job came open in a legitimate, normal way," Mulroney says, "then I'd sit down with my family and some friends and take a look at it."

Mulroney has taken a higher public profile in the last several months, drawing attention in one speech to the fact that Pierre Trudeau will soon have been in office longer than all the Conservative leaders since the First World War — combined.

He seemed to put some distance between himself and Clark when he said last fall that Parliament must act soon on the constitution, without waiting for unanimous consent from the provinces.

The first solid indication of Mulroney's intentions can be expected when a byelection is called to fill the Joliette seat being vacated by Roch

LaSalle as he takes over the provincial Union Nationale.

CAME THIRD

Mulroney, who came third in the leadership race five years ago, believes one of the reasons he lost was that he wasn't a member of Parliament and, though he has been in the party since 1955, was considered an outsider.

"I would look very carefully at Joliette, if and when the seat opens up," Mulroney said in an interview.

Mulroney, who gained prominence here in 1975 as a member of an inquiry into corruption and violence in Quebec's construction industry, was asked twice by Clark to run and bolster the Conservatives' weak contingent in the province. But Clark was turned down both in 1979 and 1980.

Mulroney, 41, said he told Clark he couldn't run because he committed himself to stay five years with the Iron Ore Co. of Canada, where he is president. The five years is just about up.

In the interim, he has kept up his contacts within the party. He organized a 1979 fund-raising dinner for Clark and has also been involved in organization of the Tories' Quebec wing.

In fact, waiting to see Mulroney after the interview with The Canadian Press was Michel Cogger, Mulroney's campaign manager in 1976 and now a national vice-president of the party.

PRAISES CLARK

The party's problem is not Clark, Mulroney argued. In fact, Clark "was on the right track" and contributed to the country by lowering the temperature in disputes with the provinces.

He said the Tories need to do better in Quebec before they can hope to win majority governments. Another problem was that the Tory leader was up against Trudeau, "a towering figure in Canadian history."

Clark should do better in the next election because Trudeau will be gone, presumably, and "Joe won't be running against a legend then."

Mulroney laughed at speculation that he is "waiting at the gate" to run for the leadership. "It's no bed of roses, running for the leadership. I've got the scars to prove it."

Anglo Quebecer Brian Mulroney finished third in the Tory leadership race five years ago.

Senate ignored shadows in Edwards' past

WASHINGTON -- Potentially embarrassing information on the background of Energy Secretary James B. Edwards was available to the Senate confirmation committee but was glossed over by all but one member in the "honeymoon" spirit prevailing on Capitol Hill.

More questions should have been asked if only to give the nominee a chance to clear up any doubts about his past conduct. The failure to pursue these matters reminded me of the treatment accorded Bert Lance four years ago. There, too, information was available to the Senate, but Lance was never asked to explain. The questions had to be answered later, to the much greater discomfort of Jimmy Carter.

The unpursued information on Edwards raises the possibility that he and his partners in a South Carolina land deal were spared prosecution by the Justice Department because Edwards was waging his successful campaign for governor at the time.

In July 1974, the Army Corps of Engineers discovered that Edwards' partnership had begun construction of an environmentally damaging dike on Hutchinson Island, S.C., which it owned. The purpose of the dike was to improve duck hunting on the island.

The Corps of Engineers obtained a cease-and-desist order against the partnership, but work on the dike continued. At that point, in October 1974, the Corps turned the matter over to the U.S. attorney's office in Charleston for possible prosecution.

Col. Harry Wilson of the Engineers' Charleston office explained at the time that the U.S. attorney, Ronald Hightower, didn't pursue the case "because the work had already been done -- he felt there was nothing to be gained."

But a handwritten notation on the transmittal slip that accompanied a summary of the case for Wilson's boss, Gen. Carroll Le Tellier, raises another possibility: "Col. Wilson wants you to know this," the notation from an unnamed Corps official said.

"I believe (that) Mr. Edwards is a candidate for governor and the U.S. attorney did not want to get involved prior to election date."

Edwards, through a spokesman, told my associate Tony Capaccio that he knew Wilson, but knew nothing about the note. Wilson didn't remember the notation either.

Hightower, however, recalled that the referral on the Hutchinson Island dike operation arrived "two or three days before the election," which led him to feel that it "stunk." The fact that he was a Republican, like Edwards, "had no bearing on me," Hightower said.

"I figured that if it was valid three days before the election, it would be valid after the election, so I sat on it," Hightower said. He added that his suspicions about the questionable validity of the case were confirmed when the Corps withdrew its referral several days after the election.

In fact, however, the Corps continued to press its case against the partnership. After two years, the partners finally took action to clear up the problem -- they asked for a retroactive permit for the dike work that would make it legal.

This request was denied, and eventually, in 1977, the partnership dynamited the dike, restoring the natural flow of the tide.

Meanwhile, as governor, Edwards vetoed a bill that would have placed tidelands areas -- including his partnership's Hutchinson Island -- under state land-use control.

And except for the cost of building and destroying its illegal dike, the partnership was never punished for its violation of the law.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, was the only member of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee who questioned Edwards about the partnership.

There's another interesting matter involving Hutchinson Island that was not mentioned at Edwards' confirmation hearing. In 1978, one of the then-governor's partners was caught using the island as a base for smuggling marijuana. He was caught with 19,000 pounds of the weed, valued at nearly $9 million.

Yet Edwards was never even questioned about the matter. It seems the federal prosecutor in charge of the case, Lionel Lofton, was an old friend of Edwards, and had been his legal adviser. Lofton told me he knew Edwards was a man of good character, so there was no need to ask if he knew anything about his partner's crooked dealings.

Footnote: A relatively minor matter bears mentioning, as it gives a clue to Edwards' imperial view of high office: His wife ran up $17,000 worth of taxpayer-funded air travel in 1977-78. Once, a pilot complained to me, she flew from the capital to Charleston and back to spend 30 minutes purchasing meat on sale at the Buy-Low supermarket.

SOMETHING TO HIDE?: While the CIA and the FBI may have legitimate reasons of national security for denying requests under the Freedom of Information Act, it's almost laughable to contemplate what excuse the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities have for clamping a lid on their operations.

But the House subcommittee on government information got so many complaints about the two endowments that the General Accounting Office was asked to look into the situation.

The still-secret GAO investigation concluded that the Arts endowment was slightly more forthcoming than the Humanities endowment, which issued numerous rejections of FOIA requests, often without even condescending to give a reason.

One congressional observer suggested that the people at both endowments are simply so intent on their self-imposed mission to "spread the arts" among the elite that they can't be bothered with such mundane tasks as telling the common folks what they're doing.

James Richardson Speaks Out Against The Trudeau Constitution.

The Honourable James Richardson, former Minister of National Defence in the Trudeau Cabinet, spoke out against the Trudeau Constitution when he appeared before the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on the Constitution on 16 December in Ottawa.

Because of the importance to Canada's future of the message contained in Mr. Richardson's presentation, Canadians for One Canada are reprinting here the text of his statement to the Special Joint Committee.

"Mr. Chairman:
It is more than four years since I resigned from the Federal Cabinet in fundamental disagreement with the plans for constitutional amendment that Prime Minister Trudeau was, at that time, planning to place before the Federal-Provincial conference on the Constitution in Ottawa on December 15, 1976.

In my letter of resignation from the Cabinet in October 1976, I said to Prime Minister Trudeau:
"I believe it is important that Canadians everywhere be made aware of the far-reaching implications for Canada contained in some of the proposals concerning the Constitution...
"Although I believe that we should bring the Canadian Constitution to Canada, I want to speak about the danger to Canada's future that I see in some of the proposed additions to the Constitution at the time of patriation, and about my strong opposition to the 'single-province' veto in the amending procedure that has been proposed."

Very little has changed since 1976. I could have written those words yesterday—not four years ago.
My deep concern about what is taking place has not diminished, except that today I am encouraged by the number of provincial premiers, and the increasing number of Canadians from all parts of Canada, who have serious doubts about the merits for Canada of Prime Minister Trudeau's constitutional proposals.

Even without the confirmation of the recent Gallup Poll, it has been apparent for some time that growing numbers of Canadians are opposed, not only to the unilateral process of constitutional change, but also deeply concerned about the content, and the substance, of the fundamental and far-reaching amendments which the government intends to ask the British Parliament to make to our Constitution.

Supremacy of Parliament

Our tradition as Canadians has taught us to believe in the supremacy of democratically elected Parliaments and Legislatures, and not in the supremacy of written Constitutions. We believe that in future years, Prime Minister Trudeau's proposed Constitution, with its rigid and inflexible amending procedure, could become a 'dictatorship of words' over-ruling the parliamentary system that has for centuries guaranteed our freedom.

The essential weakness of written constitutions is that they are inflexible. The courts that interpret a constitution must look at what the constitution says, and not at the political and social reality of the times in which the judgment is being made.

Parliament responds to human needs in a way that a court can never do, because a court is not being directed by human needs but by the dead hand of a written constitution.

I ask you, why are we today trying to lock up Canada's future in a written constitution? Why do we in this generation, in this day, in this brief span of Canada's history, believe that we have the answer for all time?

With Canada's future generations in mind, my warning to all Canadians continues to be: Do not give up the flexibility of statutory law for the inflexibility of constitutional law. Do not give up the supremacy of a democratically elected Parliament in exchange for the supremacy of a written Constitution.

Amending Procedure

Mr. Chairman, your Committee has had many representations about the amending procedure so I will limit my remarks, except to say that I was opposed to the Victoria amending formula, now set out in Section 41 of the Proposed Resolution, from the very first day I saw it, which was when it first came to Cabinet 10 years ago, before the Victoria Conference of 1971.

It wasn't until I had resigned from the Cabinet in October 1976 that I expressed my opposition publicly. In my letter of resignation to the Prime Minister, and in my statement issued the same day—more than four years ago—I said:

"I believe it is wrong for two provinces, Ontario and Quebec, to each be given a PERPETUAL VETO over changes in the Canadian Constitution. This is the most obvious kind of discrimination, because it creates for all time two classes of provinces—'first-class' provinces that have a veto, and 'second-class' provinces that do not have a veto.

"How can we say that we believe in equality when two provinces are each to have a veto IN PERPETUITY, regardless of the size of their future population relative to the other provinces?"

We hope that your Committee will recommend to Parliament that Section 41 of the proposed resolution be re-written to provide an amending procedure that treats all Canadians as equals, and that enables Canadians, when amending their Constitution, to express the national will.

Although we still have some reservations about the 'opting-out' provisions, we think that the Vancouver amending formula, requiring the approval of Parliament and seven provinces containing 50% of the population of Canada, is the best possible formula for amending our Constitution when it is finally here in Canada.

What Happened To National Unity?

I want to make it clear that I believe I am as aware as anyone of the very great contribution made to Canada by Canadians of French origin. My purpose and my hope is to recognize that contribution, together with the contributions made by all Canadians, to the building of a united Canada. I BELIEVE THAT CANADA IS A PARTNERSHIP OF ALL CANADIANS AND NOT A PARTNERSHIP OF TWO PEOPLES OR TWO FOUNDING RACES.

We should all remember that the whole process of constitutional review was started because we were told that it was necessary in order to achieve national unity. We have to ask ourselves what we have been doing wrong, because the country is now much more deeply divided than when the constitutional process began.

We started out on constitutional reform because it was said that Quebecers were not happy in Canada—now no one seems happy in Canada! Quebec is still unhappy, the Native People are frustrated, Newfoundland is enraged, Ontario is bewildered, Alberta is furious, and the whole West is fighting mad!

Why are so many Canadians angry? I believe that one main reason is because the Government is planning to ask the British Parliament to make fundamental and far-reaching amendments to the Canadian Constitution without adequate consultation, to say nothing about the approval, of the Canadian public.

Canadians are angry because these amendments could never be made in Canada using any of the proposed new amending procedures.

Trudeau Reveals His Purpose

The fact that amendments contained in the proposed resolution could never be made in Canada was confirmed recently by Prime Minister Trudeau when he was speaking in Quebec City on October 22nd. On that occasion he said:

"Speaking to you... as a Quebecer, I can safely say that if we do not today entrench fundamental language rights in education, and in other fields, in the Constitution, those rights will never become part of our Constitution. I know this because several provincial premiers have told me so, and have asked that these measures be imposed on the provinces because the necessary legislation could never be passed in provinces with small Francophone minorities..."

On that same occasion the Prime Minister had other revealing things to say. At a time when this Committee, and the whole nation, are trying to determine the merits of enshrining human rights in our Constitution, it is fascinating to learn from the Prime Minister why the whole package of fundamental rights was included in the proposed resolution in the first place. This is what Mr. Trudeau said to his Quebec City audience:

"I'll tell you something else; we also wanted to entrench language rights; unfortunately, I think it's true that, if we had done so, we would have seen certain people in the country fighting the project saying, 'there goes that French power government again, which only wants to help and protect Francophones'. IT WAS TO BROADEN THE DEBATE THAT WE WANTED TO ENTRENCH FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS.

"We knew that neither Mr. Levesque nor Mr. Ryan would oppose the substance of the move, and they didn't, and that the other provinces would be more likely to support the substance of bilingualism if they had fundamental rights protecting them in the fields of non-discrimination, democratic liberties and so on. That was our thinking on the subject."

It would appear from what Mr. Trudeau says that fundamental human rights were included in the proposed resolution as a kind of decoy to attract attention away from language rights, and to gain support for what the Prime Minister calls "the substance of bilingualism".

Bilingual From Sea to Sea!

Again, on the same occasion, while speaking about entrenching the Official Languages Act in the Constitution, Mr. Trudeau asked his Quebec City audience this question:

"Do you know that the Bill before the House proposes entrenchment of the essential part of our Act on bilingualism?"

And he went on to say:
"We want to entrench in the Constitution, since Quebec will have a veto, the fact that this country will be bilingual from sea to sea."

After reading the Prime Minister's Quebec City speech it is necessary for all of us to ask—Is the proposed Constitution trying to protect minority language rights, or is it trying to create a bilingual country from sea to sea?

If we are trying to protect minority language rights there will be general approval and, I would hope, very little opposition. But if we are trying to create, in Prime Minister Trudeau's words, "a bilingual country from sea to sea", reaction of most Canadians will be quite different.

Section 16 (1)

In this respect I would like to ask the Committee and the Canadian public to consider carefully the wording of Section 16 (1) of the proposed Constitution. It says, as you know, that FRENCH AND ENGLISH ARE TO HAVE "EQUALITY OF STATUS AND EQUAL RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES AS TO THEIR USE IN ALL INSTITUTIONS OF THE PARLIAMENT AND GOVERNMENT OF CANADA."

When your Committee comes to Section 16 (1) in your clause by clause examination of the Resolution, I hope you will give full consideration to the meaning of the words "all institutions". There are more than 400 Federal Government institutions operating in all parts of Canada and employing, when the Armed Forces are included, more than 600,000 men and women. When considering this matter it is vital for us to realize that a country expresses itself to the world and, in a very significant way, identifies itself at home, through its institutions. IF CANADA'S INSTITUTIONS ARE BILINGUAL UNDER ITS CONSTITUTION, CANADA IS BILINGUAL UNDER ITS CONSTITUTION.

This means there are serious questions that all Canadians must now be asked to answer.

Is Section 16 (1) really what Canadians wish to say in their new Constitution?

Have Canadians really been consulted and informed about this most fundamental and far-reaching amendment to their Constitution?

IS THERE ANYTHING CLOSE TO A CONSENSUS CONFIRMING THAT CANADIANS WANT CANADA TO BECOME A BILINGUAL COUNTRY UNDER ITS FUNDAMENTAL LAW?

Until these questions have been thought about and answered in the affirmative by Canadians from coast to coast, Section 16 (1) should not be entrenched in Canada's Constitution.

Patriate Without Amendment

Mr. Chairman, my purpose in being here today is to add my voice and the voices of more than 30,000 members of Canadians for One Canada, to the countless numbers of Canadians who are asking your Committee to recommend to Parliament that the Canadian Constitution be patriated without amendment. I repeat—without amendment—other than the inclusion of an amending procedure that treats all Canadians equally, and which enables Canadians to express the national will.

When that is done, we can then continue, here in Canada, to negotiate the substance of our future together. I believe that we will continue to be one country, and that it will be a great country.

The Canada We Believe In

To conclude, let me describe the kind of Canada we believe in—the kind of Canada that we are for.

- We are for the supremacy of Parliament.
- We are for One Canada, built on the Grand Design set out by the Fathers of Confederation.
- We are for a nation where minorities, large and small, are respected and their rights protected.
- We are for a nation that is united around its majority, and around the unifying symbol of its flag.
- We respect diversity and duality, but we know that if we enshrine diversity and duality in our nation's constitution, we do so at our nation's peril.

Our Constitution should be an inspiring document, reflecting the reality of Canada and expressing our pride in being Canadian.

Our constitution must enshrine our unity. It must enshrine our vision of a Great Northern Nation. It must enshrine our vision of a Great Northern People, who call themselves THE CANADIANS."

'I've seen girls fall flat on their faces'

Edmonton's Cinderella set gear up for deb ball

EDMONTON (CP) — One evening early in February, 48 Edmonton high school students will be transformed into Cinderellas and Sir Walter Raleighs to dance the polonaise and demonstrate the "politesse" they have been practising for the last two months.

Each winter, Charlotte Rekken takes 48 students and transforms them into dainty debutantes and debonair escorts who dance the polonaise at the Johann Strauss Ball.

There are all kinds of things a debutante — especially in North America — is not born knowing, such as which of five forks to use or how to walk up stairs in a long dress.

"I've seen girls go upstairs and fall on their faces and I warn them they'd better practise in long skirts," says Rekken, an elementary teacher from Stony Plain, west of Edmonton.

She also recommends running up and down stairs to strengthen knees.

"You have no idea what it's like to hold the grand curtsy for 12 counts."

NO GUM, NO ELBOWS
"No gum-chewing," she warned this year's team. "We don't even know what gum is. And definitely, no elbows on the table."

Without once putting her elbows on the table, Rekken explained Edmonton's debutante scene over lunch.

"It's kind of neat, fun, a real lark for the girls," she said, trying to dispell the snob image usually associated with debutante balls.

"It's the Cinderella thing, a chance for a girl to be transformed for the night. Of course, some parents take it more seriously."

Most of the girls' parents have "Plain Joe" jobs in Edmonton.

"But they have this certain noblesse about them that comes from a relationship with nobility that goes way back," she said.

While the girls learn to be Cinderellas, the men take Sir

Walter Raleigh lessons.

In fact, "Sir Walter Raleigh" sheets are mandatory accessories for the men on ball night.

Even if he's never made a bed in his life, every escort learns how to tuck a bed-sheet over a car seat and roll it down the running board to protect his lady's white dress from grease.

"It's hard for the girls to get into the chauvinist thing, to wait for men to do things for them," says Rekken. "But after a while they get to love it."

Most, except Carmen Debsey, one of this year's debs.

"I realize we have to step back in time for the ball, but it really bugs me," she said drily.

Rekken teaches the whys and wherefores of manners with tongue in cheek, but when it comes to the polonaise, the traditional dance of the original Vienna Opera Ball, she is deadly serious.

The polonaise is a slow, elegant walk, similar to the graceful figures performed in the French courts of old. Its success depends upon the precision of the dancers in forming the figures.

"It must be done right or it's a disaster," says Rekken.

The modern-day Vienna Opera Ball, held in Austria, has dispensed with the dance because it is too great a task to teach the figures to the 200 to 300 participants.

At a time when inflation is putting the damper on the American and British debutante season, Western Canada seems to be just catching on.

NOT EASY
"It wasn't easy at first in Edmonton," says Anne Leeb, one of the originators of the debutante ball concept here in 1967.

"It was hard to get debutantes. People didn't know what they were."

"At first we had to go out and look for them," says Elizabeth Swoboda. "Now they come to us."

Ignore advice on spouses' affair

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is a dentist. He has been having an affair with his dental assistant. She is the same age as our eldest daughter, and it has caused me a great deal of pain.

This has been going on for over a year and I have remained silent, hoping he would tire of her — or she of him. So far, no sign of it.

I don't want to confront my husband with what I know because I'd like to keep our marriage together — in spite of the fact that I am sharing him. He is good to me and the children. We have a lovely home, a pleasant social life and take nice vacations. I have no intention of asking him to make a choice.

Last week a boy in my son's eighth-grade class told him his father was fooling around with the nurse in his office. My son told his grandmother. She told my sister. Now both of them are pressuring me to tell my husband he must fire the woman. They also want me to talk to my son and his 13-year-old sister about this.

I am so confused I don't know what to do. Please give me some advice — Trouble In Dayton (Made-Up City)

Dear Trouble: You've already had too much advice. All bad. Hold your head up and handle this situation in the way that is best for YOU. If your mother and sister continue to pressure you, tell them to butt out.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 23 years old and live with my mother. The other evening my boyfriend and I had an argument. My mother was not home when the fight started. In the middle of the yelling, Mom came in.

I suggested that we resolve the matter privately, and we left. Both my boyfriend and I believe it is not prudent to argue in the presence of others.

When we returned, my mother asked me what the argument was about. I told her it was none of her business. She responded in a high-and mighty tone of voice, "As long as you live under my roof, it IS my business."

Is she right? I have been seeing this young man for a quite a while, and my mother likes him a lot. Please answer soon. We all want to know your decision. — N.Y. Daily News Reader

Dear N.Y. Reader: A 23-year-old woman is under no obligation to tell her mother what she and her boyfriend argue about — whether she lives under Mom's roof or not. So, cancel the guilt trip.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband's sister has spent the last ten years going from doctor to doctor.

If Doctor A tells her he can't find anything wrong she says, "He's no good," and she goes to Doctor B. If he can't give her the name of a disease she says, "He doesn't know anything," and goes to Doctor C.

Last year she had two operations and now she is complaining about adhesions. This morning she told me she might sue both doctors for malpractice.

Everyone in the family is fed up with her. What can be done with a person like this? I'd like to help her if I can. — Weary In Wilmington

Dear Weary: Your sister-in-law is a hypochondriac. People who believe themselves to be ill are often in pain or just as incapacitated as those who are clinically ill.

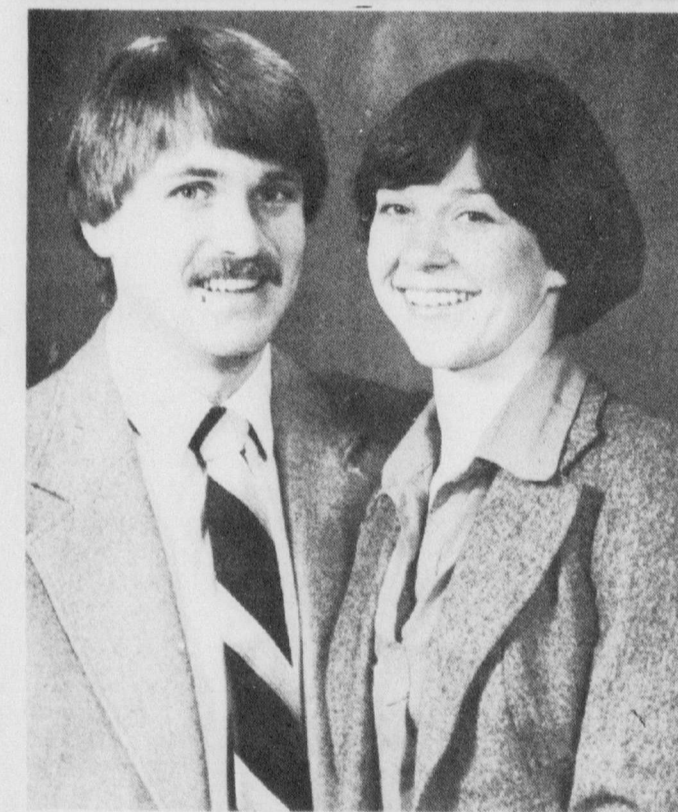

Be sympathetic and supportive. Don't say, "There's nothing wrong with you. It's all in your head." A chronic hypochondriac needs counseling. A good physician will suggest it and come up with the names of some competent therapists.

Helping Circle

ROCK ISLAND (DB) — The members of the St. Andrew South United Church Helping Circle met on January 19 at the home of Mrs. Doris Hartley in Rock Island.

The president Mrs. Madelyn Curtis opened the meeting and lead in devotion entitled, "Petitiness", followed by the Lord's Prayer.

The minutes of the December meeting were read by the secretary Mrs. Mildred Lawton. The treasurer Mrs. Vivian Davis gave her report and announced that the Christmas tea and sale, given by the three church groups was a success.

The roll call was answered by thirteen members and a guest, Mrs. Peggy Bliss.

Thank-you cards and phone calls were received for baskets sent to shut-ins locally and in the Wales Home.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Winter in New England: bulging wood piles, pungent wood smoke, thrifty Yankees snug by glowing wood fires. The stuff of a Norman Rockwell painting.

But in the cities — in tiny apartments and drafty old houses — old and poor Yankees are known to coax heat off kitchen stoves and ovens after fuel-oil tanks in the basement run dry.

Record-breaking temperatures and the $1.20-a-gallon cost of fuel oil have made real what was only feared a few years ago — thousands of people cannot afford to stay warm.

"It looks very bad this year; we have more people eligible for government help and more people signing up," said Sister Betty Murtagh, a Catholic nun working for the Massachusetts Association of Older Americans.

"We worry about elderly people dying of hypothermia. We have people leaving stoves and ovens on. We've had fires because of it."

CAN'T STOP HEAT
In some New England states, including Massachusetts and Rhode Island, natural-gas and electric companies are prohibited by law from turning off the heat during winter months if users can't afford to pay. But fuel-oil suppliers, whose product heats most New England homes, face no such restrictions.

"I expect I'll have my gas stove going for the rest of the winter," said Julia Thomas of Providence as she walked through the snow one morning to apply for government assistance.

The U.S. Congress voted to spend $1.8 billion this year in the Low Income Energy Assistance Program, authorized by the Crude Oil Windfall Profits Act.

But in a winter like this one, the coldest since 1885, the money isn't enough, government workers say.

Rhode Island received $11.3 million in heating aid to serve an estimated 18,000 families. In Massachusetts, the fuel-assistance program has $76 million to spend on as many as 441,000 eligible people. In Maine, the figure is $23.8 million for an estimated 60,000 people.

In Maine, the poorest family qualifies for up to $500 to buy fuel oil. In Rhode Island the maximum for the most needy is $450.

Myrtle Rebekah Lodge

LENNOXVILLE — Myrtle Rebekah Lodge No. 28 held its regular meeting in the Masonic Hall. The Noble Grand, Sister Jessie Pursell presided, extending a warm welcome to all, especially to Sister Ada Neeley, who has been unable to attend, owing to illness; and to Sister Luella Brady, who had recently been hospitalized, as well as to Sisters Laura Inglis and Alice Plaindin.

The minutes were read and approved. Correspondence included letters from the Royal Bank; the Planning Board; various thank-you notes for Christmas cheer; and acknowledgement of a donation to the Tiny Tim Fund.

Several cards were signed to send to ill members. Children's names for Camp Neofa should be in by April 1 this year. The camping dates are July 5 to August 1st.

An In Memoriam was voted to the Edith Kathan Home in memory of Mr. Cecil True, son of Sister Gwen True, P.P., and District Deputy President of District

No. 8. Sister Gertrude Beattie reported on the recent food sale which was most successful, and thanked all who donated food and money or helped in any way, with this project.

A Chinese auction is being planned for the second meeting in February.

On Saturday, February 21, Unity Lodge will sponsor an oyster supper in the Masonic Temple, Sherbrooke.

Sister Jean MacKeage reported that a gift had been purchased for Baby Elson.

It was decided to sponsor a Drill Team for the 1981 Conclave with Sister Thelma Picken as captain. Interested members may contact Sister Roberta MacMillan.

At the close, refreshments were served in the lower hall by the hosts, Brothers Don MacMillan, Calvin Picken and Herbert Pratt.

Christian prayer takes place in united atmosphere

Once a month I conduct a healing service at the Windsor Hotel. My approach to healing is not merely physical, nor holistic, but also environmental and eternal. My hope is that the people go home not only with a tangible blessing but possessing the Spirit of God that gave it. That way the greatest catastrophe will not leave them in the ruins of despair. At our January meeting a couple on holiday from Poland were present. Their nephew, who lives in Montreal, brought them and had to act as interpreter, for neither of them could speak French or English.

When I was introduced to them before we started the service I learned something of Poland's woes and the couple's need of physical healing. The lady, who was most gracious, had broken both arms at some time, but the bones had been badly set. The accident had left her stiff and she was unable to spread or raise her arms. The man was in pain from a deteriorating blood condition.

We welcomed them publicly when the time came to pray for all the new visitors. Both of them stood with an ethnic air of pride. They said they had enjoyed the first part of the meeting and felt the best was yet to come. They had never attended a religious meeting in a hotel before. I could tell that they were expecting something wonderful to happen to them. It did.

There, in front of the assembly, I began the ministry. Something started to happen to the woman even before I spoke a prayer. All I did was to ask her to take a deep breath and hold her chest high. As she did this, a look of amazement came on her face. From experience I knew she was feeling a wave of heat in her body. It is a sign that divine energy has been released. Everybody in the room could feel the healing power and peace. I asked her to try spreading her arms to the side. One arm was free to go right out straight, but the worst one took time before she could do the same.

I invited her to kneel down and say her own prayer of thanks to God. Gladly she did so, but I sensed her joy was such that she wanted to sing. I asked her to sing something. At once, almost forgetting where she was, she poured out her soul in song. It was a sacred song. She sang in her native tongue. The sound of her mature, resonant, voice moved us all to join her in an act of adoration. During the song she was free to stretch her arms heavenward.

As she fell silent she folded her arms reverently and bowed her head.

Finally I asked her to pray for Canada. She did so, with feeling. I do not know what she said, but I imagine it was to do with us keeping our freedom and our peace. After that I prayed for Poland and then she got us to stand by as we presented her husband to the Lord.

As I turned to him I noticed the dignified air he had at first had gone. He was as gentle as a lamb and quite ready to be helped. On request, he removed his shoes, for his feet were hurting, and then his tailored jacket. He could not be more obliging for he wanted to kneel down and worship the God that had been so kind to his wife. He went on to stretch himself on the floor, completely prostrate. Such humility. Such complete surrender. He lay there while some in the room prayed and others sang. At last he stood up, beaming. He did not tell us what had happened in those moments, but by the bright light in his eye I could see that the Spirit of God possessed him. He hugged one of my colleagues tightly and then conducted his wife back to their seats.

We do not have a medical doctor present at our healing services to authenticate the degree or completeness of physical healings that take place, but what remains indisputable is that when Christian prayer takes place in an atmosphere of unity, love and adoration God is present doing something as Jesus said it would be. Seedtime and harvest then, often, coincide to produce miracles. More than that, the effect of little explosions of God's goodness in the corner of a place such as a Montreal hotel may bear more fruit in a land far away than can be measured at the centre.

Let's hope so as my Polish friends return to the austerity and political kegs of dynamite that seem likely to go off and rip open their homeland. If the Polish workers Solidarity front is backed by the power of prayer the communist menace from the Soviet Union could be held back from the borders and God would heal their land.

American Motors has paid out almost $9 million in settlements on the Jeep CJ line.

CJ settlements near $9M

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. has paid almost $9 million in out-of-court settlements since 1973 in personal-injury claims involving its Jeep CJ line, says The Free Press. Previous reports have stated that AMC has paid substantial settlements in suits involving Jeeps, but the Free Press story reported an over-all dollar amount for the first time.

At least 17 lawsuits are pending against AMC and its subsidiary, the Jeep Corp. of Toledo, Ohio, said The Free Press, which based its report on the review of court files involving Jeep accident claims. AMC was the target of a two-year inquiry by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration in Washington for alleged instability of Jeeps and other utility vehicles it produces. AMC lost a record $155.7 million in fiscal 1980. Jeeps accounted for 20 per cent of AMC's domestic 1980 sales. The Jeep line has been the company's second-best-selling item since 1976, but in the fourth-quarter of 1980, Jeep sales fell 53 per cent. About 600,000 Jeep CJs are on the road in the United States today, said the company.

Investment rates low Tax tips

EDMONTON (CP) — Gold jewelry may enhance a person's appearance but it's not a good investment, says a Toronto expert in precious metals.

John Hartmann, manager of precious metals operations with Guardian Trust, told a recent Edmonton seminar on gold-and-silver investment that many Canadians confuse gold jewelry with gold investment.

He said gold is a soft metal which must be blended with other metals for durability as an adornment. This reduces its worth as an investment in the gold market.

In addition, the price tag on gold jewelry reflects much more than the amount of gold it contains. Workmanship, taxes and a steep retail mark-up send the price higher. "By far the best investment in gold is bars and wafers," says Hartmann.

The smallest bar in Canada now sells for about $115 and the largest for $270,000. Hartmann said a refiner will add a charge to the bar at the time of purchase and the rule-of-thumb is buying the largest bar one can afford. That is because the smaller the bar, the larger the refiner's charge.

When calculating taxable income you are entitled to deduct medical expenses paid on behalf of yourself, your spouse, or the dependents whom you are claiming. If both you and your spouse are filing returns it is possible for the one who may take maximum advantage of this deduction to claim all the expenses. Remember, that expenses for which you are reimbursed or are entitled to be reimbursed do not qualify and you may only deduct the qualifying expenses which exceed 3 per cent of your net income.

If you have realized capital gains in the year from investments, you may want to reduce the tax burden on these gains by disposing of some of your other investments by the end of the year on which you will realize capital losses. But beware, if you or your spouse acquire identical property in a 30-day period before or after the day on which the capital loss has been realized your loss on the original disposition will be deemed to be nil and thus you will not have obtained the tax saving you were expecting.

If you have made a contribution to a registered political party or to an official candidate at the time of an election, a portion of these contributions is creditable against taxes otherwise payable providing you have an official receipt and it is filed with your tax return. Remember however, that contributions to a federal political party or a federal candidate may only be deducted on your federal return and likewise a contribution to a Quebec political party or Quebec candidate may only be deducted on your Quebec income tax return.

Que.-Sherbrooke Presbyterian UCW Enrichment Day

The annual Day of Enrichment sponsored by Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbyterian United Church Women was held in two areas of the Presbyterian. The meeting place for Stanstead-Sherbrooke, Richmond, Scotstown and Quebec-Thetford was Plymouth-Trinity United Church, Sherbrooke, where the members met on January 21. Registration was in charge of Faith Fanous and Plymouth-Trinity U.C.W. greeted the members with hot coffee and doughnuts.

Laura Gaudine welcomed the members, after which Margaret Purdon led the opening worship. She spoke on the theme of the day, compatibility, and of the necessity for us to strive to live in harmony.

Miriam Fuller welcomed the members on behalf of Plymouth-Trinity U.C.W., after which the Presbyterian president, Zen Judson, introduced the members of the Executive. Lexie Rogers then introduced the two guest speakers, Rev. Jean Barkley and Mrs. Ann Squire, both of Ottawa.

After a get-acquainted time, Rev. Jean Barkley chaired a panel consisting of Ann Squire, Margaret Purdon, Marion Mayhew and Ileana Burns. The questions addressed by the panel were Christian commitment, sources of spiritual renewal, concerns for the church and how women can work at these concerns.

After lunch, with the hostess ladies providing hot soup, tea and coffee to augment the members' box lunches, there was time to browse at the Book Table, which was in charge of May Cunningham.

Zen Judson spoke briefly on Sisters in Other Lands, and suggested several ways in which U.C.W. members can help less fortunate women in other countries.

Ann Squire, who gave the main address on the theme of the day, Compatibility in the Eighties, used as her scriptural reference Ephesians 2: 11-22. She spoke of different types of incompatibility, the reasons for the lack of compatibility and ways we can work to overcome it. She stressed that United Church Women must move beyond their traditional roles as money raisers, Sunday School teachers, visitors of the sick and so on, and through their personal commitment to Jesus Christ become workers for the complete overhaul of society that is needed to bring justice to the world. This can only come about by breaking down the walls of hostility that separate us.

Mrs. Squire was thanked by Doris Walker, who also extended thanks to all who had worked to make the day a success. Faith Fanous reported an attendance of 57, an excellent turnout for mid-winter event. Singing throughout the day was led by Jessye Pierce, with Zen Judson at the piano.

Rev. Jean Barkley conducted the final worship, which was concluded with a Communion Service.

Massawippi Zone Dart Tournament

On Sunday, Jan. 25, the annual singles tournament was held in Lennoxville at the Georgian Hotel.

This tournament was for all dart players who have signed cards in the Massawippi Zone.

The prizes were trophies and money, with a large trophy which stays in the club of the winner.

In the ladies section the winner was Ma Beland. The runner-up was Lulu Bacon. Third and fourth place, Odette Bennett and Diana Bowers.

The high scorer was Elaine Beland with 103 score. There were no skunks.

For the men the trophy was taken by Wayne Gillam, with Alan Ross, the runner-up. Third and fourth place went to Johnny Way and Hugh Linton, and the high score prize to Bobby Harrison with 120.

Mike Hallam took the skunk prize.

The team standings after two-thirds of the games for the Massawippi Zone are: 1. Manoir I, 27; 2. A.N.A.F., 25; 3. Searchers, 17; 4. Drifters, 17; 5. Jokers, 10; 6. Aces, 8; 7. Additions, 4; 8. Manoir II, 2.

The Jokers and Additions have one game to make up before the season ends.

ANAF Card Party

LENNOXVILLE (MD) — The card party held on Jan. 28 had twenty tables playing and three left over.

Before Fred Berry gave out the prizes, he read a note from Mel McHarg thanking all for the card he received with all the card players' names on it. We hope to see you back at the card parties soon, Mel.

He also announced a card party to be held on Tuesday evening, Feb. 3, in the Masonic Hall, Lennoxville, 500, bridge, lunch and prizes.

First prize went to Rebecca Chute, score of 6320; second prize, Don Martin, score of 6190; Consolation, score of 1880, Marian Dewing.

Nine of clubs bid: several had their names down, so had to cut cards, with Rebecca Chute holding the highest card, as winner. Tricks taken with four of hearts had several names down three times, so had to cut cards, low card winning, claimed by John Learmonth.

Fred announced that food was needed for the next party.

Noel Humphries, who had been selling raffle tickets, took over for the drawing. First went to Dorothy Learmonth, second, Beth Cullen and third, Alison Watson. One special raffle prize was an end table, made by Ray Fearon and donated to the card club. Thanks, Ray.

Thanks to all who help in any way, and thanks to Dolly Nutbrown for giving her place to someone else, so she helped Ruby Berry fix the trays of food ready for lunch.

Another card party on Feb. 4 at 2 p.m. Everyone welcome. Bowling every Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m.

THE BLACK RHINO.
BUTCHERED INTO EXTINCTION
BECAUSE OF MAN'S SEXUAL PROBLEMS?

WOULD YOU SEND $20 TO HELP SAVE HIM?

If poachers can be kept at bay, he has an even chance for survival.

But we must hurry.

You can help. World Wildlife Fund wants to remove vulnerable rhinos to safer, better patrolled reserves. Your money is required to equip more men for special patrol groups to seek out poachers and arrest them. Ways must be found to expose the profiteers, who provide the market that tempts others to poach. And murder.

Your money will also help convince other governments to follow the examples of Hong Kong and Kenya, which have already banned all trade in rhino horn.

You might feel that any contribution you could make would be too small for the vastness of the task.

But if only you and other readers of this ad would each send us $20, it would be a very real help. And it might possibly save the Black Rhino from extinction. There's a lot that can be done; but only with your help. If you'd like to send more, or less, fine. But $20 would be a real help too.

The Black Rhino has a problem. His horn. Selling for $600 an ounce, it is powdered to make "love potions" or carved into dagger handles.

In the past he's been a victim of superstition, his horn was falsely believed to be endowed with great and magical powers to cure sexual problems. Today, most rhinos are killed for dagger handles.

Poaching gangs, operating like commando units, armed with machine guns and hand grenades, have murdered 90% of the Black Rhino population in the past 5 years! His poor eyesight makes him easy prey.

As his numbers continue to decline, the price of the horn increases and the mercenary poachers become more ruthless—killing both rhino and game rangers.

You probably know something of the work the World Wildlife Fund has done internationally. It is the world's leading independent organization for conservation. Although WWF (Canada) works almost exclusively in this country, the whole world is being asked to save the Black Rhino from total extinction.

Your Birthday

Sherbrooke Snow Shoe Club

Armed Services Night, January 28th, saw 100 members and guests from the Armed Services sitting peacefully at the supper table. The head table guests were paraded in to the tune of Robin Moore's pipes. After a silence in memory of fallen friends, Robin played a lament. Rev. Major Fairbairn said grace, and led by the Red and Blue parties, everyone attacked Mrs. Lacroix's excellent barley soup.

President Ed called on Grant Sheltus and Irving Richards. Grant 'n Irving, to lead a sing-song of wartime favorites. When we got around to Lili Marlene it could be heard in German at the head table. The sing-song went so well that the crowd kept right on singing after Grant 'n Irving stopped leading. Ed Smith introduced Rev. Ron Reeve, who told us stories from both world wars. The applause was loud and long. Fred Currier said the formal thank you to Rev. Ron. Ken Ross tucked his half of the half-and-half into his left pants pocket and said, thank you too much.

Captain Bob Davidson expects the secretary to make a good report after the bean supper next Saturday night.

Ivan Erdos who won the mixed pairs with Mary Jane Farell to help bring the United States the best national result.

Sitting South, he decided to try three notrump after Mrs. Farell bid three clubs. He won the heart lead since there was no reason to hold up, led his queen of clubs and rose with dummy's ace to drop the singleton king.

This wasn't too difficult a play. East had opened one heart and rebid. West had led the queen of that suit and the odds in favor of East holding the king had to be tremendous. Of course, it didn't have to be a singleton, in which case Ivan was doomed to defeat.

Ivan ran off all the clubs. East discarded two spades along the way and Ivan wound up by finessing against West's queen of spades to gather in an overtrick for a couple of extra match points.

We have been looking over the book of 1966 World Olympiad pairs. It is sad to see how many of the players have died in just those 14 years. One was to show the caliber of play in that tournament six other declarers — Desrousseaux (France) J. Jacoby (U.S.) Collings (Britain) Weil (Mexico) Versluis (Holland) and Portugal (U.S.) also dropped that singleton king though they were not all in notrump.

Regan family kicks off $2.4M Fitness Canada drive

OTTAWA (CP) — Sport Minister Gerald Regan got his family into the act Monday as he unveiled a $2.9 million study to find out how many Canadians have hopped aboard the fitness wagon.

Regan, his wife, Carole, and son Tom, demonstrated some of the tests in the Canada Fitness Survey that 40,000 Canadians in 82 communities will be asked to take in the next six months.

The voluntary study, which will include people between the ages of seven and 69, is intended to identify how active Canadians are, what their age groups are and what their lifestyle is.

"Then we can tailor the (fitness) message to groups who need it most," Regan told a news conference.

People will be asked to take a step-test to assess the efficiency of heart and lungs, squeeze grips that measure muscle strength and endurance, stretch muscles and do situps and pushups.

Participants get an evaluation immediately following the tests detailing heart rate, blood pressure and per cent of body fat along with recommended levels for his age, sex and body size.

OMJHL to honor whiz kids

OTTAWA (CP) — The time when junior hockey players could be looked on as dumb jocks appears to be a thing of the past — at least in the Ontario Major Junior League.

And to make the point abundantly clear, the league this year will present an award named after Bobby Smith, star centre with Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League who played his junior hockey with Ottawa 67s.

A scholastic whiz as well as a league-leading scorer as a junior, Smith is enthusiastic about the award, to be presented at the league's annual awards night Monday night in Kingston.

"I had the advantage of staying at home to play major junior hockey," he said in a telephone interview from Minneapolis.

"The people who really deserve the credit are the guys who are away from home and can still maintain their high averages."

The winner, to be chosen from among nominees from the 12 league teams by a three-member, non-league panel, gets an expenses-paid trip to Fort Lauderdale, Fla. An unusual aspect of league insistence on combining education with hockey is that last year 78 per cent of league players were attending high school, college or university while the provincial average for those between the ages of 16 and 20 was 52 per cent. This year it is even better with 79.1 per cent of league players in school.

And Ottawa has a preponderance of players among the nominees with five former Ottawas selected by their teams for the award — Doug Smith of the 67s, Ron Meighan of Niagara Falls Flyers, Andy Schliebener of Peterborough Petes, Jerome Dupont of Toronto Marlboros and Claude Loiselle of Windsor Spitfires.

Others nominated were Rick Wilson of Kingston Canadians, Brian Bellows of Kitchener Rangers, Mike Hickey of Sudbury Wolves, Mike Hoffman of Brantford Alexanders, Dave Simpson of London Knights, Dan Revell of Oshawa Generals and Dirk Reuter of Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds.

Hussey: We're in the driver's seat

By ANTHONY ROSS

LENOXVILLE — In three short years the Bishop's Lady Gaiters, have advanced to the number one ranking in Canada under the direction of coach Wayne Hussey.

One of the main reasons for this success is Hussey's philosophy of always recruiting the top players available. When Hussey came to Bishop's (from John Abbott College) four years ago, the team was the doormat of the QAAA. In his first year, they won the league and went on to the nationals. Now half-way through his fourth year and having been to the spring classic the last three, Hussey believes this year his girls can win it.

Without the benefit of athletic scholarships in Canada, coaches have to sell prospective players on the merits of their schools. "Girls who are thinking about going to a school have to consider more than just the basketball program. You have to get an education as well. At Bishop's, we can offer a number of things which has helped us with our recruiting over the years," said Hussey.

"Now we have one of the best programs in the country. Anyone who makes the team can be pretty sure they will play in the nationals at one point. We have an excellent schedule against top-flight competition. Our facilities are among the best anywhere and, depending on your academic discipline, we can provide a good education."

When Hussey started out at Bishop's, the team had won one or two games the previous season — but he took them to the nationals in his first year. "My philosophy has always been to recruit the best players available," Hussey explains. "If you can get the best then everyone else is starting behind you. Fortunately in the last four years we have been able to do that with Debbie Huband, Sue Hyland, Denise Dignard and Teresa Grant."

In his first couple of years, Hussey had to spend a lot of time recruiting but because of the club's recent success players tend to seek Bishop's out. "You could say we are in the driver's seat right now because of the success we have had over the last few seasons. We get a number of letters from girls who want to play for us. We have to be much more selective now because you can't promise someone a place on the team and then not deliver when they arrive or else the school gets a reputation as a bad recruiter," commented Hussey.

"Recruiting is an ongoing process so it wouldn't be right to say we don't recruit. But we don't pursue as many players as we used to. However, we do have a list of players who we keep in contact with and keep records of their progress. Some of the girls are as young as 15 or 16."

"Bishop's cannot offer a player must in the way of financial help except through academic scholarships and the occasional job. There aren't any athletic scholarships in Canada but we can offer some financial help. If the girl is smart enough, she can obtain an academic scholarship and the basketball team is allotted two jobs in the sports complex. Also, sometime we are able to get the players summer jobs through our own connections.

"However, I have lost players who were interested in Bishop's because they could get more at other schools. Sometimes a girl will phone up and ask what I can offer her. There are schools which hand out free room and board, jobs one doesn't have to appear at and various other financial perks but fortunately the institutions that do these things haven't taken over yet although they do alright," added Hussey.

Hussey believes girls basketball in Quebec is as good as anywhere else although the athletes are much taller in the west. "Quebec CEGEPs play a good brand of basketball and we try to have as many girls as we can from this area. The one advantage the western schools have is that the players are much taller. It doesn't make much sense to recruit in the US because any girl good enough to play for Bishop's will most certainly be offered a scholarship in the states and she wouldn't turn down a free ride there to play in Canada."

The Lady Gaiters still play a few recruiting games a year but not as many as they used to. "We still play three or four recruiting games against CEGEPs each year where as we used to have nine or ten on our schedule. You can't cut them out completely because you want to see the girls and keep in contact with the coaches but we do insist all the games be played in our gym so as not to cost us extra money or disrupt our schedule," said Hussey.

The number one goal for Hussey and his squad is to win the nationals but the coach is a little skeptical about his chances this year. "We have a very young team and I'm not sure they are mature enough to win this year. But I think I would be a fool if I wasn't a little skeptical."

Hussey believes only two teams in Canada have the ability to beat Bishop's if they are on their game. "The only two teams that should beat us are Victoria and Calgary."

Rookie Karen McCumber is another in a long list of choice recruits who have built the Lady Gaiters into the number one team in the country and will keep them at the top for at least the next couple of years.

MONTREAL (CP) — Five players shared the scoring for Laval as the Voisins dumped Shawinigan Cataractes 5-2 in the only Quebec Major Junior Hockey League game Monday night.

Steve Fulton opened the scoring for Laval at 15:59 of the first period. Alain Robichaud scored at 5:58 of the middle session and Claude Vilgrain added another at 9:42 to build a 3-0 lead before Michel Cote replied for the Cataractes at 13:14.

Michel Crispin and Serge Amyot added third-period goals for Laval, while Christian Thellend rounded out the scoring for Shawinigan.

Action resumes tonight when Quebec Remparts play host to Sherbrooke Beavers and Hull Olympiques take on the Draveurs at Trois-Rivieres.

MONTREAL (CP) — Five players, including highly-regarded infielder Tim Raines, have signed 1981 contracts with Montreal Expos. President John McHale said the five are Raines, third basemen Brad Mills and Chris Smith, catcher Bobby Ramos and outfielder Anthony Johnson. The Expos now have signed 26 of the 40 players on their winter roster.

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers acquired veteran goaltender Gary Edwards in a National Hockey League trade on Monday with Minnesota North Stars.

The North Stars received the Oilers' third-round draft choice in 1982.

Edwards, 33, had a 3.20 goalsagainst average in 26 games with Minnesota during the 1979-80 campaign but has not played in an NHL game this season as the North Stars went with rookie Don Beaupre and veteran Gilles Meloche.

SCHLADMING, Austria (Reuter) — Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden won a men's World Cup giant slalom ski race today, according to unofficial results.

Hans Enn of Austria was second and Switzerland's Jean-Luc Fournier was third, according to the results which were subject to official confirmation later.

Stenmark clocked times of one minute 19.56 seconds and 1:15.24 on the two runs, flagged out with 59 and 60 gates respectively, for a total of 2:34.80.

Enn clocked 1:20.04 and 1:15.67 for 2:35.71 while Fournier's times were 1:19.30 and 1:16.52 for 2:35.82.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Speed skater Eric Heiden, who set five Olympic records while winning five gold medals in the 1980 Winter Olympics, received the Amateur Athletic Union's Sullivan Award on Monday night as the outstanding amateur athlete in the United States.

Heiden, 22, who was a finalist for the honor in 1978, finished first in voting by more than 2,000 persons. Vote totals were not announced.

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali said Monday night he will not get involved in an effort to save a boxing show put in jeopardy when a promotional group that bears his name was knocked out of the picture.

Meetings between promoters and managers went on at Madison Square Garden, the scheduled site for a Feb. 23 event, and were to continue today in the wake of reports that Muhammad Ali Professional Sports Inc., was linked to a California bank embezzlement.

Townships rinks falter in Quebec curling openers

Record News Services
 QUEBEC — Townships rinks got off to a dismal start at the Quebec men's curling championships Monday. Tom Poulton's Sutton foursome and Asbestos' Marcel Duchesneau rink are both 0-2 after the opening day of the six-day provincial championships.

Jack Mitchell of Montreal-Glenmore, Richard Potvin of Kenogami, Andre Emond of Lachine and Jean Boivin of Quebec-Jacques Cartier each skipped their rinks to back-to-back victories. Mitchell's first-round victory, a 10-7 decision over Sept-Iles (skipped by Dennis Appleby), was followed by a 9-5 triumph over Michel St-Onge's Quebec-Victoria rink in second-round play.

Lachine got off on the right track with a 10-3 drubbing over Dave Moon's Ste. Anne de Bellevue rink in first-round play, and followed with a 9-5 victory over Asbestos. Boivin skipped his rink to a 9-6 triumph over Brian Ness's Howick rink in first-round action, then coasted to a 14-3 rout over Bruce MacDonald's Brownsburg rink.

Other first-round action saw Montreal McGill, skipped by Frank Kinahan, defeat Sutton 8-4. Amos downed Quebec Victoria 9-

4. Alain Guy skipped his Trois-Rivieres rink to an 8-4 victory over Asbestos and Riverbend, skipped by Serge Cote, trounced Brownsburg 9-2.

In second-round play, Murdochville defeated Sutton 9-7, Sept-Iles downed Montreal McGill 9-2, Ste. Anne de Bellevue outlasted Riverbend 8-6 and Howick tripped Trois-Rivieres 7-5.

Just a collision... maybe it hurt, but it was good for a few laughs.

Old Gaiters take another turn

LENNOXVILLE — The third annual Winter Homecoming attracted many familiar faces back to Bishop's University Saturday. There was a full day of events, centered around afternoon hockey and basketball contests.

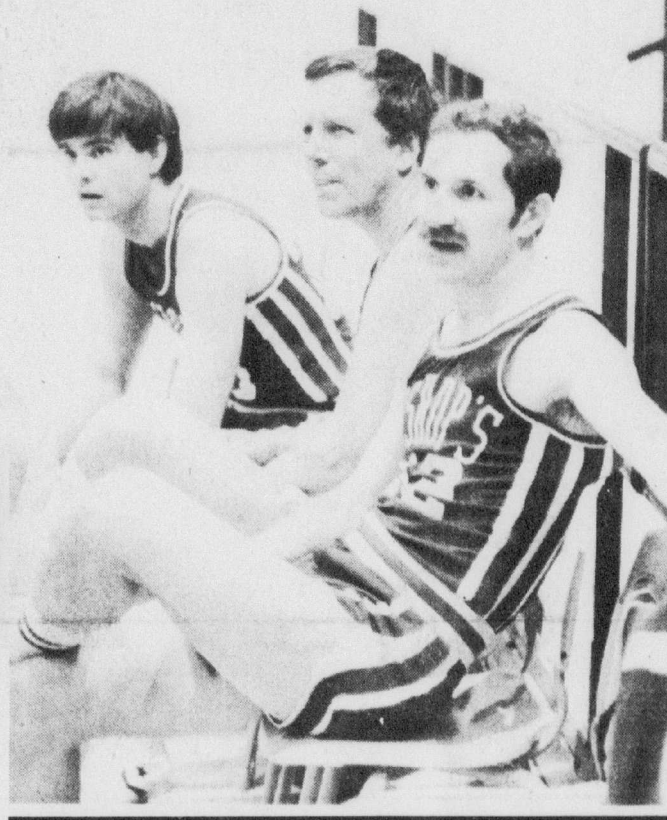

Alumni athletes were divided into 'East' and 'West' squads, but there was a fine measure of leniency when it came time to assign sweaters. The sides balanced out as a result and both games were extremely close. The West took both — basketball 86-83 and hockey 7-5.

In the b-ball, Ian McLean led the East with 27 points while Mike Dudgeon and Wayne Hussey topped West scorers with 22 and 21 points respectively. Other notable performances: Bruce Coulter had eight points, Robert "Squee" Gordon — the oldest player on the court — netted four while Garth Smith added four ("I got 'em when we needed them..."). The athletics were followed by a reception in the Faculty Lounge and a dinner-dance at Dewhurst Dining Hall. Informants tell us the rolls went over very well and were as deadily accurate as they ever were. A good time was had.

NHL:Freak goal gives Kings win

Canadian Press Billy Harris's winning goal was of the fluke variety but Mario Lessard's goaltending had no luck attached.

"It hit a stick, I think Dave Maloney's," said Harris, who scored with only nine seconds remaining to lift Los Angeles Kings to a 3-2 National Hockey League victory over New York Rangers on Monday night. "I just spun and fired and he deflected it in." Harris's goal — it trickled past Rangers goaltender Doug Soetaert after deflecting off the stick off New York's Maloney — was the big play but Lessard's steady goaltending had kept the Kings in the game. New York outshot Los Angeles 37-21.

"It's just a part of my job," said Lessard, who'll dress as the backup goaltender for the Wales Conference in the NHL all-star game Feb. 10. "We seem to get outshot a lot of the time and it's my job to keep us in the game."

HAWKS, NORDIQUES WIN Elsewhere, Chicago Black Hawks defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 8-4 and Quebec Nordiques downed Hartford Whalers 4-2.

lead, and two-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin failed on a short playoff putt that would have won it.

After all that, it was Cook, 23, who emerged the winner of the first five-man sudden-death playoff in modern golf history.

It was a thrilling windup to a much-troubled event that was rained out for two days, eventually was cut from 72 holes to 54 and finished a day late on six holes spread over three courses spaced along five miles of picturesque beauty on the Monterey Peninsula coast.

Cook wins five-golfer playoff

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — His expressionless face never betrayed it, but young John Cook admitted, "I was choking a little on those last few holes, trying to get in the playoff" for the title in one of golf's more confused, confusing but nevertheless spectacular events.

And when it was over, after he'd watched poker-faced while his amateur partner, actor Jim Garner, engaged in a shoving match with a boisterous spectator, then such names as Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson shot themselves out of it, and gritty Ben Crenshaw blew sole control of the
