Compensation: Léger asks cabinet to name disaster area

Record News Services

SHERBROOKE — Quebec Environment Minister Marcel Léger said yesterday he will recommend to the cabinet that parts of the Eastern Townships affected by heavy weekend flooding be declared disaster areas, making them eligible for full government compensation.

In Ottawa, Liberal Parliamentary House Leader Yvon Pinard said the federal government is willing to pay half the compensation if the Quebec government asks for help.

Léger said individuals would get 100 per cent of their losses compensated if the cabinet, and especially Justice Minister Marc Andre Bedard, agree.

Léger said such compensation can only be given if the towns are declared disaster areas. Otherwise, victims would have to be looked after by special decrees from the Quebec cabinet, as was the case last year in Richmond.

In the meantime, Léger is advising all victims to photograph the damage before repairs begin, for valid proof to claim compensation. He also recommends that victims contact their local Quebec Civil Protection office to make sure what they intend to claim reparation for is eligible.

Léger also said that under the disaster area plan, municipalities could get up to 50 per cent compensation for damage to town property and equipment. But at yesterday's press conference, he said incorporated businesses get help under a separate plan not yet announced.

"Private businesses are included in our plan but as persons, not as companies," Léger said.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Sherbrooke MP Irene Pelletier asked the Privy Council member in charge of emergency measures, Yvon Pinard, what emergency action would be available for areas of the Eastern Townships damaged by flooding.

While the federal government is looking into possible action, Pelletier indicated local MNA Real Rancourt (St-Francois) had planned to ask the provincial government to declare the areas of Richmond, Lennoxville and Sherbrooke a disaster area.

Pelletier outlined the three criteria to qualify for emergency funding:

—The areas have to be declared disaster areas by the province;

—Damage has to be at least $1 per inhabitant in the province (or in Quebec over about $6 million); and —Quebec must ask for help from the federal government to pay 50 per cent of the damage.

Since damage estimates have already reached more than double the $6 million figure and are still rising, it seems likely that provincial and federal governments combined will compensate flood victims for 100 per cent of the damage caused by the weekend's flooding.

Meanwhile, the Sherbrooke weather office is predicting at least 25 millimetres of rain for today. With temperatures still high and more than two feet of snow remaining in many wooded, mountainous areas, another surge of water will hit the area's rivers and lakes tonight.

Lake Aylmer near the headwaters of the volatile St-Francois, has not yet reached its spring crest and is still covered with ice. Environment Ministry water specialists are watching closely and will be making radio announcements of any new danger.

"Let me look at that map of the Falkland Islands again."

Economy slows PQ anglo plan

MONTREAL (CP) — The worsening economy has stalled government plans to increase the number of anglophones and members of other minority groups in the Quebec civil service.

Public Service Minister Denise Leblanc-Bantey now says it is highly unlikely the government will achieve its goal of raising minority representation in the civil service from the current 2.7 per cent to 9.5 per cent by 1987.

About 21 per cent of Quebec's population is not "dyed-in-the-wool Quebecois," according to a 1976 census.

"It is clear," Leblanc-Bantey says, "that in a period where we are reducing the number of permanent employees, the (hiring) program will move more slowly than expected."

This year the provincial government intends to fill only 40 per cent of vacant posts. The vacancy rate itself is dropping — to two per cent last year from five per cent two years ago — and Quebec intends to trim its 68,650-member civil service by two per cent this year.

Yet austerity is not the only explanation for the government's failure to meet its goal of increasing the number of non-francophone civil servants.

The province's Recruitment and Personnel Selection Office has no non-francophone recruiters and the government has no way to keep track of the non-francophones it hires because application forms don't ask candidates to identify their mother tongue.

Changes in both situations are still under consideration.

Critics say the government is not providing English-language schools with enough information on civil service careers.

"We phoned up (the selection office) in Montreal on behalf of anglophone universities and (junior colleges) to get them to come around to the schools and they told us they didn't have anybody whose English was good enough," said Anton Chow, who belongs to a committee watching over the interests of 25 provincial minority groups.

But other people counter that anglophones have traditionally shown a preference to work for the federal government or the private sector.

Leblanc-Bantey maintains the hiring situation will change.

Last month the government introduced a new affirmative action program aimed at giving preference to minorities, women and the handicapped who score high in civil service exams.

Leblanc-Bantey says department heads who don't select from among the three groups "will have to explain to us why. That's how we hope to force a change in mentality."

The new policy means non-francophones are competing chiefly with women, who account for 33 per cent of government jobs, but only four per cent of the high-paying, managerial posts.

Commons unruffled by protester

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs returned to Parliament Monday after a 10-day Easter break and were immediately reminded that all is not well in the country.

A young man bellowed an outraged protest from the Commons public gallery barely twenty minutes into the spring sitting as Finance Minister Allan MacEachen defended his economic policies against Progressive Conservative attack.

"That's a lie," the man shrieked before being dragged from the gallery by two security guards. "The banks don't run this country."

Michael Charette, who has created similar disturbances in the past and run for office in several elections, also yelled "Let me go" and "Freedom of expression" as he was hauled from the gallery for questioning. He was later released.

Sherbrooke mopping up after worst flood ever

By Bobby Fisher

SHERBROOKE — Local residents and businessmen still reeling from the worst floods to hit the Sherbrooke area in living memory, yesterday rolled up their shirt-sleeves and began clean-up on their homes and businesses.

Water, with levels that reached their highest peak ever Sunday afternoon, covered much of the downtown Sherbrooke area with up to 10 feet. All main businesses hurt were closed for the day yesterday as store owners sifted through the muck to try and salvage what they could of their water-damaged stock.

Most of those affected were busy trying to assess their losses and although they said they did not have a total yet, almost all agreed their totals would be in the high tens of thousands of dollars at least.

One person who did give an estimate of his possible losses was Mario Theriault, who came back from St. Jovite to find the restaurant he co-owns with his brother, L'Oncle Ho on St. Francois Street, under eight feet of water. Theriault says his losses will be at least $40,000 and he won't know for sure until everything is tallied up. Theriault was asked if he had known about the added risks of buying a business in an area well known for its springtime floods.

"In 42 years we have never seen anything like this and there is nothing you can do about it. Sure the water comes up in the spring, but it never does anything like this. I hope the government can help but there are so many others like us." He says that with the help of friends and employees he should be

Communication Quebec headquarters on Grandes Fourches was victimized by Saturday night's record-breaking flood. Public relations official Bernadette Doyon reported that on Sunday, the water-level reached the office ceilings. All documents and files were destroyed. To make matters worse, the wall between the office and the neighboring vegetable store, Le Vegetarien, collapsed adding a flotilla of various fruits and vegetables to the mess in the office. The headquarters will soon be moved temporarily to a new location.

Haig heads home as London rebuffs latest peace proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Alexander Haig was homeward bound today with London rebuffing his latest peace proposal for the Falkland Islands and Argentina seeking hemispheric defence sanctions against Britain.

Hours after Haig ended his four-day talks in Buenos Aires Monday, Argentina said it will ask the Organization of American States to impose collective provisions against Britain under a 1947 treaty.

And the British government reacted swiftly to Haig's latest peace proposals

Monday night, saying they do not, at first sight, "meet the requirements strongly expressed by Parliament, particularly on the need to regard as paramount the wishes of the islanders."

The OAS planned to meet here today to take up Argentina's claim that the British pledge to retake the islands by force represents a "grave and imminent danger" to hemispheric security.

The British have a fleet steaming toward the South Atlantic. The lead vessels in the naval armada may be within striking distance of the Falklands this weekend.

In Buenos Aires Monday, Haig warned that time "is indeed running out."

Haig opposed the Argentine move at the OAS, saying the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance, also known as the Rio Treaty, is not a proper tool for dealing with the Falklands crisis. He also noted that in addition to its commitments under that treaty, the United States has long-standing treaty obligations to Britain.

RECORD/STEPHEN McDUGALL

Larry Speakes said Haig would meet with President Reagan sometime today.

The key clause in the Rio Treaty states that "an armed attack by any state against an American state shall be considered as an attack against all the American states."

If two-thirds of the 21 states eligible to vote go along, the OAS could impose economic, diplomatic or even military sanctions against Britain.

Mauroy visit could fuel internal 'red-carpet' war

QUEBEC (CP) — Even though Quebec and Ottawa appear to have ended hostilities in the "red carpet war" surrounding Pierre Mauroy's visit to the province this week, it appears the French premier will still have to watch his step.

If past visits to Canada by French politicians are any indication, both Quebec and Ottawa will be ready to use anything Mauroy does or says — or doesn't do or say — as ammunition in their ongoing guerilla war.

Mauroy's visit to Quebec is the first by a French premier since the Socialists took power in France last year, and only the second since the governments of Quebec and France agreed to regular exchange visits between the two premiers five years ago.

The last French premier to visit here was Raymond Barre in February, 1979.

With the change in French government since then, observers will be watching keenly to see whether Mauroy shifts away from France's longstanding policy of "non-interference, but non-indifference" to Quebec

Like Premier Rene Levesque's visits to France in 1977 and 1980, Barre's trip here in 1979 resulted in the signing of several concrete agreements and, on an economic exchange level, was considered a success.

But Mauroy would do well to look back at accounts of that trip, which was fraught with several diplomatic near misses as both Levesque and the federal government attempted to use Barre and his presence for their own purposes.

As this year's visit approached, another round of diplomatic one-upmanship referred to here as the "red carpet war" broke out when it was rumored Ottawa would demand that a federal minister accompany Mauroy at all times during his visit to Quebec.

Quebec immediately threatened to cancel the Mauroy visit.

Rural areas clean up; damage estimates keep rising

RECORD/CLAUDIA BOWERS

In the midst of the flooding, a bridge built in 1976 was practically washed away on the North River road while a 100-year-old covered bridge downstream was still standing with minimal damage.

ered bridge downstream was still standing with minimal damage.

By Claudia Bowers

COMPTON COUNTY — Although first estimates of flood damage seemed realistic Sunday night, at first light Monday as flood waters slowly receded, the picture emerging was much worse than first predicted.

Yesterday road repair crews worked frantically to open main arteries, filling previously hidden washouts with crushed rock. Graders tried to rebuild the shoulders of many roads the flood had undermined as deeply as the roadbed.

Bell Canada repair crews travelled to many out of the way nooks and crannies, checking underground cables and aerial lines, and restoring service to many areas affected by the flood.

Sixty-one head of holsteins lay helter-skelter, legs awry, already stiff with rigor mortis at the Beaulieu farm near Lennoxville. Friends and neighbors began the grisly task of removing the carcasses early yesterday afternoon.

"It's just awful," neighbor Doug Herring said, as he ferried Hydro Quebec workers back and forth through still deep flood water yesterday morning. Tractors could barely navigate the driveway, causing another delay in clean-up operations at the stricken farm.

Agriculture Ministry officials were on hand, together with friends of the Beaulieu family and officials from the Union des Producteurs Agricoles and the Sherbrooke farm Co-op. A tow truck stood by as the largest farm tractors available hooked chains on the dead animals' legs and hauled them across a small sea of mud and water. Semi-trailer trucks came to haul away the animals, the operation finally finishing at 6 Monday evening.

Gravel roads in the Cookshire — Sawyerville — North River area are extremely treacherous. Washouts are made more serious by the present thawing condition of the roads. Hills have lost their entire gravel tops, and rocks and stones can be seen strewn across cultivated fields where deep gouges have been carved out by the rushing torrents after Saturday's rain.

A bridge on the North River road, built only in 1976, was washed completely away from one river bank. Not far downstream a 100 year old covered bridge stands proud and safe over the same river.

People affected by flood waters were still amazed that all had happened so quickly. At a trailer park in Cookshire, owners of about 20 mobile homes were trying to estimate damage to their home. Others had already started clean-up operations, attempting to deal with the inches of mud and silt accumulated in every corner of their trailer. Several mobile homes stood at weird angles where the water had washed away their footings; others are considered a complete loss.

In spite of the catastrophe which has affected hundreds of people and caused at least $10 million damage in the St. Francis River Basin, the atmosphere was hopeful and encouraging. A joke or smile appeared as friends and families turned out to help. Mops and pails were everywhere, clothing was hung out to dry, and cars and pick-ups hurried about town to a speed wash or laundry. A clothesline hung with cushions waved gracefully in the sun at one location, while a miniature bucket brigade of children — out of school for the day — did their best to help.

According to Environment Ministry officials, floodwaters will recede much more slowly than they rose, making clean-up a long and tedious job. Farmers, whose usual work at this time would be sugaring or fencing, are faced with long hours of cleaning up debris in their fields. Many industries will be closed for weeks, and in some cases months, before a return to normal.

Juel Weideman of the continuing education division of the District of Bedford Regional School board, forwarded this notice. "A new fitness program has recently started in the Bedford Community. The idea was initiated by Margaret Chevalier as an opportunity for people to become fit while their children were well cared for at the Pre-School.

The program has been in operation for three weeks and already between 15 and 20 women are meeting each morning for exercises. The objectives of this activity are to promote a total sense of well-being through exercise. Physically, the exercises contribute to toning and strengthening muscles. Once an individual has achieved a certain level of fitness, a sense of mental well-being will also be achieved. A person can cope with stress better and is able to relax more easily.

"For the best results regular or near regular attendance is preferable. The class is at Butler Elementary School, 19 Rix Ave., Monday to Friday from 9 to 9:45 a.m. the instructor is Murray Reynolds and there is a nominal charge. For further information call Margaret Chevalier at 248-7706 or Adult education services - Monday, Wednesday and Thursday at 248-4141. Drop by and join us."

Cowansville town manager Goerges Grenier cracked up last week when we asked him if the town is drilling for oil in Davignon Park. He admitted some black gold would be a nice way of lowering the municipal debt. He said they were looking for artesian wells to supplement the drinking water supply, especially when heavy rains stir up abnormal amounts of silt in the Lac Davignon reservoir — a not infrequent event last summer and over the past weekend.

Provincial health authorities closed the Elm St. springs last year due to a high coliform count. "If we can get good fresh water which meets government standards in the center of town it will be a great help in the future," Grenier added.

He then confirmed the new municipal library will open to the public on April 26 although the official opening will be held sometime in July.

Spring officially occurred about 4:15 Saturday afternoon — at least in the Brasserie du Sportif who finally held their local cabbage finals. Charlie Gauvin got a bye when Elise Girouard failed to appear while Lorne Murphy and Jean-Louis Fontaine cancelled each other out when they had to work in lieu of determining whose hand was faster than the eye.

France Ouellette swept Pierrette Gauvin 2-0, Gert Rousseau etched out Lise "two-two" Roberte 2-1, while Paul Larocque busted Doris Boomhower by the same score in the opening round. Charlie topped Gert 2-1 in the semis while Paul took France 2-0. ## Townships talk SHERBROOKE (SM) — Motorists travelling from Montreal to Sherbrooke on the Eastern Townships autoroute are being warned by the Quebec Transport ministry that the Richelieu river bridge will be closed from now until June 18.

According to the ministry office, the bridge is closed for reconstruction. Work will be done to rebuild the bridge's expansion points and do some repaving.

The office says traffic will be rerouted onto the Montreal bound lane of the ET autoroute. Motorists are advised to slow down when approaching the bridge detour due to the numerous workmen who will be present and the congested traffic.

Richmond's seen it happen before: 'It's not so bad'

By Steve McDougall

RICHMOND — When searching for the expressions on the faces of Richmond flood victims yesterday, one could see either detached, empty or frustrated looks which have replaced the initial shock when flood waters started to rise early Saturday morning. Richmond residents have seen this happen all before, and they know from experience there is little they can do about it.

For many, there had been optimism that Richmond would be untouched by flooding this year, so everything looked good.

It was already April, and last year's flood occurred in February.

There was no more ice jamming the river at shallow and narrow points, and the spring thaw was noticeably slow this year — necessary for such a temperamental river which can bring the wrath of God if at any hint of change in conditions.

But Lady Luck left town and bad times came back. Richmond can be thankful it suffered slightly less damage than last year, due to efforts organized by the town police and firemen and hundreds of volunteers who got some warning from Environment Quebec as the weekend rain began coming down.

"We started advising people to leave their homes Saturday night at around 11 o'clock when the river level was around 14 feet," said constable Claude Lupien of the Richmond Police. "Though a lot of the people didn't believe the level would get any higher, many didn't start leaving until they actually saw water in the streets."

Richmond councillor Albert Dunn says giving residents prior warning meant many of them could store their possessions upstairs in buildings or take valuables with them, but he conceded that some businesses with important machinery and other capital stock were caught as this year the level surpassed last year's record.

"Over at the Ewing Furniture factory, they'd just bought some new machines from Germany," said Dunn, who is in charge of coordinating emergency rescue and clean-up activities for the town.

"They hung those machines four feet off the ground because that's how high the water was last year. Unfortunately, the water came up three feet higher this time."

As other stories were being passed around yesterday, people went about their business, wearing rubber boots, pumping out basements, inspecting damage and trying not to slip on the ever-present slicks of mud and furnace oil left by the receding water.

Downtown, the ugly stench of the furnace oil, which comes when flood waters fill up basements and get into houses' storage tanks, was everywhere. For outsiders, the stench was quite noticeable, but for residents, the smell was taken for granted along with the rest of the disaster.

"That smell stays in your house for most of the summer," said Paul O'Donnell, 28, co-owner of Richmond Hardware with his younger brother Mark. "You more or less have to learn to live with it until it dissipates," he added.

Meanwhile, over at the St. Famille Parish church, just a few doors from the floods line, Romeo Boutin, a 43-year-old Transport Ministry employee, sat by a portable police radio, monitoring any calls for victim assistance.

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — Robert Dawson, of Cowansville, changed his option and pleaded guilty to five counts of breaking and entering dwellings, one of possession of stolen goods, one of willful property damage and one of simple theft.

"After consultation with the defence we agreed the interests of justice would be well served with 15 months, concurrent on the indictable charges, and another concurrent sentence at the discretion of the court on the others," Crown attorney Claude Noiseux said.

Judge Guy Genest concurred and handed Dawson 15 months, concurrent on the indictable charges, two months concurrent on the others, and bound him over to keep the public peace for two years.

Since Saturday, two days previous, he has only received six hours sleep. With most of the estimated 197 victims they've put up and relocated over the weekend now gone, he is still prepared just in case firemen patrolling the flooded Main Street find any residents too scared to leave their homes.

For the moment everything is quiet, and other victims who have not been relocated are playing cards and drinking coffee.

They are fortunate to have this place this year.

Last year, with no organization set up by the town to look after victims, many people forced from their homes had to find refuge in a halfway house for alcoholics and addicts, only to find that the town was in the process of evicting residents from that house.

"There is less chewing of the rag this year," says Albert Dunn at the town hall. "When we set up this emergency organization, we had to make sure everybody would be able to find a place quickly and with few hassles."

But even Dunn admits the organization did not go as smoothly as expected when the floods came on Saturday. Organizers found they had no list of home owners willing to take people in. But Dunn passes the problem off as one of the bugs of any organization, and looks at this year's flood with optimism and relief.

"It wasn't as bad this year," he said, "at least we didn't have to tackle icebergs on the Main Street to get to the victims."

Pump rental business thrives during clean up

By Bobby Fisher

SHERBROOKE — Not all people were suffering from financial losses in the wake of this weekend's floods in the Sherbrooke area.

Some rental companies — the ones specializing in gasoline pump rentals — were doing their best business in recent memory.

After waters of the swollen St. Francis River and its tributaries began to subside the call for vacuum cleaners, carpet steam machines, fans, and rubber hip wader boots went out.

Also in large demand were electrical generators, as most areas affected by the floods were without power, and will continue to be until wires are dried off.

Marc Martineau, owner of Location Martineau in Sherbrooke, said he usually keeps about 200 pumps in stock. Yesterday, he said, "Almost all of them rented out. The biggest problem is that most places keep only four or five pumps in stock because there is usually not a large demand for them. But today everyone is looking for them."

Martineau rents his pumps out at prices ranging from $8 to $40 per day. He said he is saddened by the misfortune that has befallen so many people. He opened his store on Sunday so customers could come in and rent equipment while listening to the tune of his cash registers ringing.

Sense of outrage

There was a sense of public outrage at the attempt on policeman Michel Tremblay's life last weekend. The outrage was manifested by people not only in Cowansville but in the surrounding area as many observers say the death penalty should be reinstated. One element which appeared surprising was the number of young adults supporting capital punishment. This was the first time in collective memory that a Cowansville municipal policeman has been wounded in the line of duty. Peace officers place their lives on the line each day they work protecting society. But the wanton disregard for a human life over a noise disturbance proved to be a shock to the community at large.

The public was dismayed when the late Georges Perron, the former Bedford police chief, was slightly wounded by flying glass in the spring of 1973 when he managed to foil a major bank robbery. Three heavily-armed men managed to escape with some forty dollars from the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce after missing the day's deposit from the licence bureau and the Torrington payroll, which was then in cash. Yet they could equate that incident as being part of a policeman's job. Mr. Perron was subsequently presented with an award from the Canadian Bankers Association as a tribute to his bravery.

Two Cowansville QPF detectives, Gary Budge and Irene Dion faced the same trio armed only with detectives' standard Colt Cobras which had an effective range of about 30 feet and hold only five rounds. They emerged unscathed following an exchange of fire and eventually took part in the arrests following a shootout at Pigeon Hill. One of the bandits died the next day and the others eventually pleaded guilty and were sentenced to penitentiary terms.

The mood over the weekend, thinking back to the Tremblay incident, was similar to QPF Sgt. Albert Lizacek's statement to Lawrence and Labonte when the Pigeon Hill duo appeared in court: "If I'd been there 15 minutes earlier this would have been a coroner's inquest, not a preliminary hearing."

Passive attitude lets Nazis live

LOS ANGELES (CP) — For most Canadians, swaggering, jack-booted Nazis are just figures from the past — not much more than images on a television screen, as often comic as menacing.

Yet the Canadian government acknowledges some former Nazis live in Canada — old men now, but with bloody deeds on their hands — and that more might be allowed into Canada as other nations root them out.

This passive official attitude, particularly on the part of the Liberals who have dominated Canadian federal governments since the Second World War, infuriates organizations and individuals who keep alive the memory of the war's six million dead Jews.

One example is Simon Wiesenthal, famous for tracking down dozens of Nazis who fled Europe after Hitler's fall. He still refuses to visit Canada because he considers it a haven for war criminals.

"Think about that," says Rabbi Marvin Hier, dean of the modern Simon Wiesenthal Centre in downtown Los Angeles. "He goes freely to West Germany and yet he won't set foot in Canada."

ATTITUDE 'PUZZLING'

For men like Hier, keepers of the Holocaust flame, the attitude of the Canadian government and members of it such as Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan, are "puzzling and very disappointing."

A gut-wrenching tour through the basement Holocaust museum of the Wiesenthal Centre helps explain the strong feelings. In it are bits of faintly stained clothing from Jewish prisoners, photos of gas chambers, emaciated faces, a lampshade made from human skin by a death camp guard 40 years ago.

Two recent developments in Canada particularly disturb the Jewish community, Hier says. Despite lobbying, the Canadian government has refused to set up an office like that in the U.S. Justice Department for prosecuting war criminals, and "persistent rumors" suggest former Nazis ordered deported from the United States might be accepted into Canada.

Last December, Justice Minister Jean Chretien announced the Liberal government would not include legislation to permit prosecution of Second World War criminals in an amended and patriated Canadian constitution. Instead, Canada will co-operate if other countries seek extradition of alleged former Nazis still on the loose.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa, Solicitor-General Kaplan took a supporting stand. Though he said during an April, 1980, visit to Washington, that there are undoubtedly former Nazis in Canada, Kaplan said he now agreed Parliament has no business passing laws to create retroactive crimes.

Kaplan repeated that Canada would co-operate in extraditing suspected war criminals to other nations if asked, and added he personally visited The Netherlands and West Germany to father "a fair list of names" of suspected former Nazis. The RCMP now is investigating whether any on the list are in Canada.

"Whether there'll be any success, I don't know," said Kaplan.

The solicitor-general also confirmed Hier's claim that U.S. and Canadian officials have discussed possible entry into Canada of Valerian Trifa. The 67-year-old Detroit-area resident is accused of inciting the massacre of hundreds of Romanian Christians and Jews before fleeing to Nazi Germany during the Second World War.

Falkland invasion a badly planned junta diversion

Alexander Craig is a freelance writer based in Sherbrooke. He was formerly the Buenos Aires correspondent for the Guardian as well as other British newspapers. Dr. Craig received his PhD in Manchester after writing a thesis on the Argentine armed forces and their role in politics.

"Fit for neither man nor beast." Charles Darwin's observations on the Falkland Islands failed to deter the Crimean veterans who settled there over a hundred years ago. These desolate and wind-blown islands, the size of Jamaica but with a population only one-third that of Lennoxville (or less than one-sixth that of the Magdalen Islands) are now the potential cockpit for war between Argentina and the United Kingdom. Each country is raring to go, but in the cold, hostile waters of the South Atlantic only the fittest survive.

The islands were first discovered by Breton fishermen from St. Malo (hence the term Malvinas) in the 18th century. Then Spain and Britain fought over their possession. In 1770 the British prime minister, Lord North, engaged Dr. Johnson to write a pamphlet in an effort to persuade the Spaniards the islands were of no consequence, an erroneous assumption still shared by some. Henry Kissinger, for instance, a man not given to any concern over the major problem facing the world, the North-South gap, sneered when asked about the strategic importance of Argentina and Chile: daggers, he responded, pointing at the heart of Antarctica.

Which gets to the core of the matter. There is much that is diversionary in the Argentine military dictatorship's lunge for the islands. It is in some sense a 19th century comic opera gunboat farce that masks 21st century aspirations. The potential resources of Antarctica, let alone probable reserves of oil and fish around the Falklands, are immense. Furthermore, any difficulties with the Suez or the Panama Canals make control over the South Atlantic of great strategic significance — as the U.S., South Africa, the Soviet Union and other powers know full well.

The situation is replete with ironies. The Argentine government promises to protect the human rights of the 1800 Falkland Islanders — this from a government whose backers, the armed forces, have been responsible for the deaths and 'disappearances' of between 15,000 and 30,000 Argentines since the military overthrew Isabel Peron in March 1976. Prime Minister Thatcher roars icily, in would-be Churchillian style, against 'dictators', although, like Ronald Reagan, she has apparently worried not a jot previously about right-wing military dictators.

A great dilemma faces the Falklanders. They are in many ways 'super-Brits', having fond images of a strong, reliable and distant Imperial guardian. Yet they have seen repeated Argentine attempts to consolidate its perceived 'national unity' and 'territorial integrity' for a long time now. In September 1966 for instance (one of the first stories I filed from Buenos Aires as Guardian correspondent), while Prince Philip was visiting Argentina, a 'free-lance' invasion by Argentine nationalist youths who had hi-jacked a plane took place. Various other such attempts have taken place over the years, and governments in Buenos Aires have never been in a rush to put pressure on or prevent such assertions of sovereignty.

The Argentines like to think they honed their nationality even before grabbing independence from Spain in 1816. The British occupied Buenos Aires from 1806 to 1807, until repelled by local forces. The British embassy was, until recently, on Reconquista (Re-conquest) street, just round from Defensa street. Military governments love to hammer home old memories in large part to cover current inadequacies, such as disastrous economic policies, with savage inflation and severe social unrest.

Yet Argentina and Britain have had a close love-hate relationship since that time. The Buenos Aires Herald is the largest foreign-language daily in the world, serving many of the over 100,000 Argentines of British stock which is itself the largest English-speaking settlement in the world outside of Britain's former colonies. The British also built the ports and railways, needed to serve the pampas and the food industries. In fact, Britain needed Argentine meat and grains so much during World War One that a British cabinet minister said "We can lose Canada before we can afford to lose Argentina."

Then in World War II, Britain, over the objections of Roosevelt and Cordell Hull, helped Argentina remain neutral until just a few days before the end of hostilities. To become a founding member of the UN, however, Argentina had to formally join the Allies (which meant it was the last country in the world to sign a formal declaration of war). When Eva Peron visited Europe in 1948, however, she was received by the Pope and the President of France, but not by the British royal family.

More recently Anglo-Argentine relations suffered another setback with bitter soccer disputes. In 1966 the World Soccer Cup took place in England. The home country became the champion, but only after some nasty encounters with the Argentine side, whose team was described by the English trainer, Sir Alf Ramsey, as 'animals'. It may seem insignificant (as long as you weren't an Argentine player or supporter) but it still provides ready fuel for demagogic rabble-rousing.

And now there are some Argentines killed in action. These undoubted 'heroes' are the first Argentine soldiers and sailors to be killed in a fight with a foreign enemy in over 100 years. The Argentine armed forces have occasionally fought, and murderously, among themselves, but this newest battle will be incredibly rich material for nationalism. Argentines, unsure members of an intensely divided and frustrated society, share few common feelings but one of these is that "Las Islas Malvinas son Argentinas".

It can only be hoped that the U.S., possibly together with Brazil and other countries, can bring the two sides together before, in Clausewitz' expression, war becomes "the continuation of politics by other means."

The present Argentine government is keen to fend off internal war by external war. Fifty years ago, until the armed forces began their repeated interventions in politics in 1930, Argentina's level of development, and prospects, were as good as Canada's or Australia's. The latest conflict distracts attention from what Argentine generals have said they may do when, with the aid of CANDU reactors, they build their own nuclear weapons. Argentina is profoundly envious of the now much larger and booming Brazil. Within Argentina, political freedom and individual rights continue to be in great danger.

The Falklands crisis thus carries within it the seeds of a much wider conflict. The present Argentine junta is neither long nor soundly established, nor, probably, very united. The potential for division and disagreement, and thus concession is there, in Buenos Aires as in London. It's up to other countries to prod Anglo-Argentine relations back towards the underlying healthy end of the enduring rivalry.

Argentina neglected but never abandoned Falklands

(The following is a condensed complete history of the Falkland Islands, written by a native Argentine Certified Professor of History, Mrs. Margarita Farias-Pitt, now living in North Hatley, Quebec. Translation by John Pitt.)

"The talks between Argentina and England, concerning the Falkland Islands, have today reached another stage of expression, without so much as a glimpse of any progress toward their solution" reported El Diario de Parana of February 25, 1981. And so once again, the position of the adversaries has not gone beyond the stage of words.

Here we have a disputed claim that has been repeating itself since the expulsion and dispossession of Captain Jose Maria Pinedo from his post as Military Commander of Buenos Aires in 1833, and which concerned the entire group of islands adjacent to Cape Horn, including Tierra del Fuego (Land of Fire) and Islas Malvinas — Falkland Islands.

It was the English Captain John Onslow, on board the frigate "Clio" who presented himself at Port Soledad (one of the East Falkland group) in 1833, and whose military superiority obliged the Spanish occupants to surrender. This date of 1833 signifies the beginning of continuous litigation and its winding road of diplomatic confrontations in the annals of the history of Argentina.

Argentina claims her sovereignty over the Falklands based upon historical facts, and by the geophysical aspects of the land upon which is found the archipelago.

The Vicissitudes Of The Past

The legal claim to the lands discovered by Spain remain indisputable after the Papal Bulls of Alexander VI. The Pope, in dividing the world and in defining the spheres of influences of each conquering country, simply used a right of jurisdiction inherited from the Middle Ages. Hence the Treaty of Tordesillas (June 7, 1493) which divided the world by an imaginary line from Pole to Pole, awarding to Spain all the lands discovered and to be discovered, west of the Tordesillas line. This established the jurisdiction of Spain over Las Malvinas (Falklands) which later passed to the new government of Argentina, born of the Revolution for Independence from Spain.

The Discovery

The 1529 map of Diego Ribero shows for the first time the archipelago under the name of Islas Sanson (Samson Islands). They were perceived by Sebastian Elcano, a member of the scattered expedition of Ferdinand Magellan. Ribero probably obtained this historic information from a narrative of Elcano himself.

The general supposition for the past three hundred years suggests that an Englishman, John Davis, was the first to discover the islands, in 1592; however, this must be taken with a grain of salt because, in effect, Davis at that period, was in the South Seas. Also the tale is weakened by its lack of precision. Two subsequent documents confirm this: The Maritime map of Richard Hakluyt, of London, in the year 1599, upon which is shown the Samson Islands but without mention of the voyage of Davis, and a book entitled "A Prospect of the Famous Parts of the World" by author Speed, in 1631, which contains no reference to the English mariner Davis.

However, we do find the name of Sebaldines Islands, apparently indicating those formerly called Islas Sanson. (Ricardo Gaillet-Bois, "El descubrimiento de las Islas Malvinas", Historia de la Nacion Argentina, Vol 1. Buenos Aires, Plaza y Janes, 1966).

In referring to the Sebaldines, historians agree that the Netherland sailor Sebald de Weert, at the helm of the ship "Greef" in 1600, was the discoverer. He told tales of his passage amidst a group of islands, henceforth called the "Sebaldines".

In about the year 1690, an English seal hunter, by the name of John Strong, approached in the open sea the coast-line of a large group of islands in the South Atlantic the aforementioned "Sebaldines". He discovered a channel which separated two of the largest islands, and in memory of his Benefactor, Lord Falkland, Lord of the Admiralty, he named it Falkland Sound. For Latin Americans, it is called the San Carlos Channel. (M. Cawell, "The Falkland Islands", Macmillan & Co. Ltd. p.11). (See also: Jose Raed, "Rosas y el Consul General

The First Establishment In The Archipelago

I quote verbatim from an excellent article in the Montreal Gazette of April 7, 1982, by Mr. Charles Lynch, with which I am fully in accord:

"The history of the islands contains a couple of Canadian footnotes, one ancient and one current.

The first settlement there was made in 1764 by two families from Acadia, now Nova Scotia, sponsored by the French navigator, Louis-Antoine de Bougainville, whose base was in St. Malo. He christened the islands Les Malouines, after his home port, and it is the Spanish translation of that name, Las Islas Malvinas, that is used by the Argentines and throughout Latin America.

ARGENTINA and the South Atlantic Islands

Oil and history are the basis of the conflict between Argentina and Britain over the Falkland Islands and dependencies. Argentina claims the barren, sparsely populated islands as an inheritance from colonial Spain. Britain claims them by right of possession and settlement since 1833. Recent geological exploration has raised hopes of a major oil strike in the waters between the Falklands and the Argentine mainland. Britain is using the mid-Atlantic island of Ascension as a supply base for its naval forces.

"The Acadians quit the islands after France sold her claims to Spain, and when Argentina won her independence she claimed the Spanish succession, retaining a presence until her forces were peacefully expelled by the British in 1833.

For Britain, the Falklands became an important coaling and watering station — in 1849, the year of the California gold rush, 777 ships called there on their way from New York to San Francisco."

Therefore, we must consider as the First Establishment, that of Bougainville, who established Port Louis there on September 12, 1764. But the colony did not live long, because Spain reclaimed the rights of possession and Bougainville was obliged to leave, but he received a strong indemnification of 603,000 pounds. (Bougainville, "Voyage Autour du Monde, Paris, 1771).

Establishment Of The Spaniards At Port Soledad
At the base of the former French colony, the Representative of the Spanish Crown, Governor Felipe Ruiz Puento, founded the first Hispanic establishment. The French population was easily assimilated by the newcomers.

Fort Louis took the name of Port Soledad. (To the north of the present-day Port Stanley). From that moment onward, a series of Governors succeeded, until the arrival of the English Frigate "Clio", guided by John Onslow.

Establishment Of The English On The Falkland Islands

England became very powerful after the Treaty of Paris in 1763. The transfer of New France and the acquisition of other French colonies (Acadia, Canada, Newfoundland, Cape Breton, etc.) contributed, together with the soaring economies of the Industrial Revolution, to her search for new outlets. Henceforth England organized her expeditions to establish new strategic points; one of these was the Archipelago of the Falkland Islands. Because it was a key site for navigation in the South Atlantic and also was an exceptional port for provisioning, replenishment, refueling etc. England's Foreign Office fought for this site on two fronts: - by the ending of expeditions, and through her diplomats in Buenos Aires, who displayed brilliant political tact on her behalf and to her profit.

To continue our narrative, reference must be made to the expedition of John Byron — within the framework of one of the expeditions mentioned above. Byron, (grandfather of the poet) was sent to the Falklands and in 1765 anchored at one of the Islands called Saunders. (This island is at the north of West Falkland).

On this site, Byron founded an establishment that served as a safe port free from the violent local winds. It was named Port Egmont — the first English colony on the Archipelago. Thus we find in 1765, two establishments: one was Port Louis which soon thereafter became Port Soledad (under Spanish domination), the other Port Egmont — under the guardianship of English expeditions.

This new English Port Egmont aroused the ire and distrust of the authorities in Buenos Aires. The Governor General, Francisco de Paula Bucarelli, organized a flotilla to oust the English and on June 9, 1770, the garrison of Port Egmont was vanquished.

However the winds of fortune changed the check-board of European politics and Spain agreed to the English claims at Port Egmont, which then was restored to its founders. (N.B. — the above-mentioned Spanish permission applied only to Port Egmont.)

Influence Of The English Diplomacy On The Argentine Government Of The 1800's

England, which sought commerce with the Spanish colonies in America — denied her prior to 1810 because Spain exercised a monopoly over these colonies — found a way to successfully achieve her desires by aiding the colonies in their battles for independence. After the 1810 Revolution, the first English diplomatic envoy to Buenos Aires was a Mr. Woodbine Parish.

Following his appointment Parish exercised a great influence on the government of Buenos Aires, even to the point of affecting certain important decisions in the political sphere. At the request of the mother country (England) in 1829, he patiently gathered together all documents and information concerning the Falkland Islands, and also important data concerning the future plans of the government of Buenos Aires regarding these islands.

About the year 1830, Argentine disintegrated in battles of fratricide. The government pursued a policy of silencing all opposition to its political leadership, and neglected the colonization of the Falkland Islands — an exceptionally fortuitous event for the British. The Falklands were, at that time, ripe for a possible invasion. Parish organized historic antecedents and other data in order to present a plausible justification for the establishment of sovereignty over these islands. England sent a flotilla under the direction of John Onslow in 1833, for this purpose. Mission accomplished!

Upon the then-government of Buenos Aires must be placed the blame for having too easily neglected or abandoned the Falkland Islands. More precisely, this disaster can be attributed to one of the most tyrannical governors in all of our past history — General Juan Manuel de Rosas. (Jose Raed, Rosas y el Consul General Ingles. Las Condecoraciones. Ed. Devenir, Buenos Aires 1965).

Conclusion

In conclusion, it is hoped that this brief account will enable the reader to form his own opinion concerning the present-day status of the Falkland Islands.

Farm and Business

'Hi-tech City' thrives on computer industry

KANATA, Ont. (CP) — A few years ago this area only 12 kilometres from Ottawa's city centre was largely fields and farm country. Today the population is 20,000. Tomorrow, it may reach 100,000.

Kanata, on the western border of Ottawa, deserves the nickname of hi-tech city — without the industry, it probably wouldn't exist.

Mayor Marianne Wilkinson said in an interview even the handful of high-technology millionaires have no intention of moving to Ottawa's exclusive Rockcliffe Park, peopled by politicians and bureaucratic mandarins.

"There's no move to Rockcliffe Park — the crime rate here is low, kids can be allowed to go places safely and that's the kind of thing that's important," Wilkinson said.

She's lived here since 1968 when there were fewer than 3,000 people. Now, there are 20,000 of whom 1,500 are in the rural part, and she said she expects that number to grow to 100,000.

Mitel Corp. is one of 30 high-technology companies headquartered in the industrial park. Of the 7,000 jobs created by Kanata's industries, 6,000 are in high technology.

BUILD BIGGER HOUSE

Mitel vice-president Terry Matthews, one of the new millionaires, "is looking for land to build a bigger house here because he wants his kids to stay in their schools," said Wilkinson.

Wilkinson, an urban geographer, said the city is made up of five clusters of residential housing crisscrossed by pedestrian paths — there are very few sidewalks.

The city is planned to allow children to ride tricycles within a cluster without the parent worrying.

"People in Kanata use bicycles — in winter, we walk," she said, fresh from an early-morning fitness class attended by 40 other women.

The city has fewer than 6,000 households and at least one in three has someone working in high technology. Still other employees travel from Ottawa, creating reverse traffic flow.

"It's beneficial because it balances traffic flows and that's the best use of roadways," she said. But she worries about the tax base.

"We have to plan for 100,000 people that we'll get eventually on the 20,000 we have now.

DEVELOPERS HOLD ON

It can be tough — developers resist paying taxes on unbuilt land at residential rates and find it profitable to fence it in for cattle grazing to take advantage of farm rates.

"It pays," she said wryly. "One developer has spent $100,000 on fences."

The population is mostly low-to-high-middle class — "what we don't have is the really poor and we don't have a lot of rich."

"There are people who are millionaires now, at least on paper, and I'm trying to encourage them to invest here," she said. "What's important for hi-tech and their families is the service we provide because hi-tech can go anywhere."

Wired to the world by computers, high technology can operate from any location it prefers.

But enthusiasm has its own price — "Mitel is buying up everybody else's buildings," she said. While there's talk of building multi-use facilities and renting out modules, rising construction costs would mean high rents.

MANY HIGHLY TRAINED

While the city has a diverse population, "we have a much higher proportion of electrical engineers than elsewhere and a higher percentage of people with a university education."

The hi-tech way of life is contagious. Wilkinson and her husband, a high-school teacher, have a home computer.

The only services the city can't provide yet is a hospital and a university, but she is working on getting a hospital within 10 years.

When services became strained, residents chipped in to help pay for sports facilities for themselves and their 7,200 children.

They also volunteer to run activities such as hockey leagues and maintaining cross-country ski trails.

"We have seven community halls that are always busy, three sets of outdoors pools and a dozen outdoor rinks," Wilkinson said. A major headache is finding the playing fields for the 1,200 ball and 800 soccer players.

SCHOOLS JAMMED

Schools catering to 2,000 high schoolers and 3,000 grade school pupils are overcrowded trying to keep up with a population growth of up to 10 per cent a year.

"We have portable classrooms for the overflow — little boxes in the schoolyard," said the mayor. "One new school opened last September for 150 kids, so we got rid of a box, but it was back by December."

Neighboring Nepean, where Mitel's Mike Cowpland lives, and the western part of Ottawa are where most of the rest of the hi-tech population live.

Andy Haydon, chairman of the Regional Municipality of Ottawa-Carleton, said the region of 550,000 people — 330,000 of them in Ottawa proper — is generally coping with the influx.

The only complaint is the industry is concentrated in the west of the region, but Haydon said he is confident it will expand to the east eventually.

Mayors in the area are all aggressively cooking up new schemes to get federal and provincial money for development. For example, the Ontario government recently pledged $28 million for a microelectronics centre in Ottawa to research, develop and build the made-to-order chips the companies want.

Dangerous train cargo worries Truro residents

TRURO, N.S. (CP) — Truro has long billed itself as "the hub of Nova Scotia" but now the town is casting a wary eye at the steel and asphalt spokes that radiate from it.

With rail lines running out in four directions and with two of the heaviest-travelled highways in Nova Scotia meeting nearby, thousands of freight cars and tractor-trailer units roll through Truro every week.

The trains and trucks carry everything from tinned pineapple to steel girders, and transportation is big business in Truro.

But it's also a worry. Because among the thousands of carloads and truckloads of freight is a sprinkling of potentially dangerous cargo — poisonous gases, dynamite, rubber cement, ammunition, radioactive medical equipment, and even cigarette lighter fluid.

No one — not even Emergency Measures Organization officials — knows how much or what kind of hazardous cargo goes through here on the Trans Canada highway between New Brunswick and Cape Breton and on Highway 102 which swings south out of Truro to Halifax. No regulatory body keeps track of what trucks carry.

WANT EMERGENCY PLAN

The Canadian National Railways is a different story.

The publicly-owned railway has precise records showing, for example, that 6,079 rail cars carrying cargoes officially classified as dangerous travelled in 1979 along rail lines that run through the dead centre of town, passing within metres of shopping centres, schools and hospitals.

The dangerous cargoes included a variety of gases and potentially lethal liquids along with various acids and pesticides. There were even seven cars carrying fireworks.

Truro is well aware of the potential hazards and it was the town fire department which sought — and got — the CNR breakdown on dangerous cargo transported through town.

A new town emergency plan is now being drafted, and town planner Peter Nelson says the study is looking closely at the rail and highway freight that goes through here every day.

Manitobans stay put

WINNIPEG (CP) — Three years ago, people were leaving Manitoba in record numbers.

Today the flow is only a trickle.

"It's not that they think it's so wonderful here," Greg Mason, a University of Manitoba economics professor, said in an interview. "It's just that they have discovered it's not so wonderful elsewhere."

Concern about Manitobans leaving the province began in 1978 when Statistics Canada reported the province's highest-ever population loss. When the difference between people moving in and out was calculated, Manitoba had lost 10,493 residents — mostly to Alberta, but also to Ontario and British Columbia.

When Statistics Canada reported a net loss of 15,457 Manitobans in 1979 and 13,533 in 1980, a trend seemed to be emerging.

TIDE BEGAN TO TURN

But, suddenly last year, the tide began to turn. Although figures for the last quarter of 1981 are not yet available, losses in the first three quarters are considerably lower than for the same period in the three preceding years.

Between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30, 1981, only 5,183 more Manitobans left the province than arrived. That was 2,100 to 4,800 less than for the same period in 1978 through 1980.

Mason, director of the University of Manitoba's new Institute for Social and Economic Research, said he is not surprised by the apparent turnaround.

"Two or three years ago, most of the (media) stories were overblown," he said, adding that demographic studies show that half the people leaving their home province eventually return to it.

Only basics are taught in skills exchange center

TORONTO (CP) — A little learning is no dangerous thing in Norman Ringel's school of thought. His teachers expound only on the rock-bottom basics of knowledge, leaving the frills and extras to others.

Ringel is executive director of the Skills Exchange Centre for Adult Learning, a concept that reaches out from a tiny downtown location to more than 50,000 students of almost any educational or recreational subject imaginable.

You'll find his courses — short and to the point — ranging anywhere from career-planning to horsemanship, ballroom dancing to windsurfing, exotic brunch-cooking to weightlifting, comedy workshops to real-estate selling, to divorce-getting, to auto maintenance.

"Of course, we don't do everything," says Ringel with a seeming touch of modesty. "We don't pretend to teach brain surgery in six hours. If we did, I wouldn't want to be operated on by that doctor.

"But what our teachers do is separate the wheat from the chaff, demystify a subject and apply it to practical experience."

Ringel's theory is that there are "relatively few pivotal things to understand about anything." Those basic points should give a person enough understanding of the subject to know whether he would want to pursue it further.

SCREENS TEACHERS

"For example, if a teacher wanted to teach marketing for me, I would ask him or her to tell me five of the most important points or pillars about marketing. If that person replies only that everything is important, I wouldn't want that person teaching our course. I would want somebody who is able to separate the wheat from the chaff in a relatively brief period of time."

Relatively brief might be an understatement. For example, one single-day seminar crams into six or eight hours the basics of house inspection or an introduction to microcomputers. And that's the end of the course — unless, as the teacher hopes, the student continues it elsewhere.

Other courses, such as social dancing, follow a different format. They might consist of two-hour or three-hour sessions one night a week for four weeks.

The skills exchange, a non-profit, independent organization, pays its expenses entirely from student fees, which average about $40 a course. The courses are taught in various areas of the city, depending on the teachers, most of whom are part-time. For example, legal expertise may be taught in a lawyer's own office or art in the artist's studio.

NO REAL EXCHANGE

Ringel agrees the name Skills Exchange might be a misnomer since there is actually no mutual exchange of knowledge, but rather an "educational buffet" for people to partake of. The centre's name was derived from Ivan Illich's book Deschooling Society in which the author discussed bartering of goods and services.

The centre — founded in 1978 by Jeffrey Hollander, who later moved on to open a similar organization in New York — has had phenomenal success since the beginning, Ringel said.

"While universities and colleges are suffering from lack of government support, we find our self-help and introduction to do-it-yourself programs are getting fantastic response. Many, many people are looking for alternatives in their lifestyle and turning more and more to self-directive learning."

Ringel also recalls some interesting alumni of the centre, especially four students of the wine-tasting course.

One got a job at a wine agency. Another got a job at a wine bar. The other two got married, to each other.

Shortage of skilled workers in Canada

If you're a highly skilled worker, either blue collar or white, you don't have to worry about finding employment, despite the current severe recession and the 1.2 million other Canadians who are out of a job.

Right? That's the way usual thinking goes, but a recent study published by the Economic Council of Canada on meeting demands for skilled workers suggests it's not quite that simple.

There are two obvious conditions that have to be met for even a highly trained person to land a job.

First, the skills have

FIRMS SURVEYED

The council examined about 1,350 firms of varying sizes across Canada in late 1979 for their experiences with skilled labor and their outlook to 1984.

Although it has taken two years to assimilate the data, the conclusions remain valid today.

The study found that half the firms had trouble hiring needed skilled workers in the two years before the survey started, and nearly as many expect further problems during the next two years.

The most severe shortages were found in some manufacturing areas, especially mechanics to repair machinery, in mining and in certain professions such as engineering.

Not surprisingly, in view of their stronger economies, the western provinces experienced the greatest shortages of skills.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the comments from your readers who were fed up with kids yelling and throwing tantrums in restaurants. May I add my nickel's worth?

Kids who misbehave in public behave that way elsewhere. The reason -- their parents are unwilling to expend the energy to keep them in line. While the kids get the glassy stares, it's the parents who are to blame. For example:

I worked all day Sunday preparing a gourmet dinner with all the trimmings. When ten of us sat down to a beautiful meal, the nine-year-old daughter of friends began to pout and whine because she didn't like anything that was served. Her mother begged her to at least try a few dishes. The child refused and crawled under the table. The mother, a college-educated woman, crawled under the table with her. I heard the mother say, "It's all right, Honey -- if you don't want to eat anything we will buy you a hamburger on the way home."

Our children are far from perfect, but from an early age they were taught how to behave when they ate in the homes of relatives and friends, and we have never had any trouble with them in restaurants. -- It Happened In K.C.

Dear K.C.: I feel sorry for that youngster. She is going to have real trouble in school with both teachers and classmates. And her mother will probably wonder why the girl has no friends.

Dear Ann Landers: Please help me with a problem. It's my fiance. He wore a ponytail when we started to date in the '70s. It was not so unusual at the time. He told me he would get his hair cut when his parents celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary -- as a present to them. (They also disliked his long hair.) Well, he changed his mind and gave them a picture he painted himself.

He still hasn't cut his hair. Can you imagine how long it is? I have to beg him to shave once a week when we go out. A bigger problem is that he hates to bathe. Sometimes weeks go by and I know he hasn't been near soap and water. Once I put a clothespin on my nose to make a joke of it. He became very angry and told me I had to take him the way he is or not at all.

Another problem. Dirty language. I hate it, and he won't quit using it. Please tell me what to do. -- Terre Haute Trouble

Dear Trouble: There's a lot more involved here than looks. Your fiance sounds seriously maladjusted. I hope you will urge him to get some counseling. If he refuses, call off the engagement. Life with that weirdo would be a nightmare.

Mayor to address Canadian Club

The Women's Canadian Club of the Eastern Townships, Inc., will hold a dinner meeting at 6:30 p.m., April 22 at the Holiday Inn. The guest speaker for the evening will be Ruth Taylor, Mayor of North Hatley.

Taylor is a third generation member of a family born, raised, and educated in North Hatley. She obtained a B.A. from Bishop's University, majoring in French and Latin, and in Education in the fourth year. She taught in East Angus for two years before joining the Canadian Women's Army Corp, for whom she worked as an X-ray technician in Saskatchewan.

When the war ended she took a secretarial course and worked for 19 years as branch cashier for an insurance company in Sherbrooke.

In 1966 she took a position as manpower counsellor with the Manpower Centre in Magog, from which she retired in July 1980.

She became a Municipal Councillor of North Hatley in 1973, a position she held until December 1980, at which time she became mayor.

Her topic for the evening is to be "Women in Municipal Affairs."

Just as we can look back with pride on our past, we can now look with pride to our future.

Canada now has its own Constitution with the traditional rights and freedoms we once took for granted.

Today we can truly say, the future belongs to us.

Obituary

RAY FLETCHER JONES
of Knowlton's Landing

Ray Fletcher Jones passed away in Knowlton's Landing on March 24, 1982 in his 76th year, leaving to mourn his wife Daisy, son Dannie, daughters Alice (Beek) and Evelyn (King), seven grandchildren and sister Hortense (Dolly) Fryer.

Ray Jones died just as he lived, peacefully, unhurried, doing what he loved to do, in the place he loved to be and with his beloved and loving son, Dannie, at his side. The funeral was held in Mansonville on Saturday, March 27. Interment in the Mansonville Protestant Cemetery.

The many cards and donations to the Heart Fund attested to the esteem in which Ray was held. To know Ray Jones was to love him, for he was possessed of a quiet, unassuming nature, a devoted husband and father and a loyal friend.

To understand Ray Jones is to learn a little bit more about the secret which seems to have alluded many of us, the secret of being happy with who you are, where you are and what you have. His word was his bond. He was a just, charitable and honourable man at peace with God, the world and himself. Ray was not a man to verbalize. His finest legacy would be the example for which he will be well remembered and the immortal Kipling penned the words which so aptly describes the type of man which Ray aspired to become.

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue, Or walk with kings, nor lose the common touch, If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you, If all men count with you, but none too much, If you can fill the unforgetting minute with sixty seconds worth of distance run, Yours is the earth and everything that's in it, And what is more, you'll be a man, my Son.

May he rest in perpetual peace with his Creator.

Canadian Cancer Society campaign

COWANSVILLE — Mrs. Cecile Decelles, Daughters of Isabella Regent of Cowansville, has accepted the presidency of the Canadian Cancer Society financial campaign which will be held from April 16 to April 29 in Cowansville and vicinity.

Mrs. Rose-Ange Champigny, representative of the Society in Cowansville, is delighted with Mrs. Decelles' participation. She is confident that Mrs. Decelles' well-known dedication to various causes will inspire the Daughters of Isabella who have undertaken the arduous task of going from door to door calling upon your generosity.

Is it necessary to call to mind the work of the Canadian Cancer Society? Let us mention briefly that the Society contributes greatly to the fight against cancer through its public education programme and its involvement in scientific research. This necessitates much time and money. Answering its call will surely help the Society in pursuing its humanitarian endeavour.

ANAF Card party

LENNOXVILLE (MD) — On April 14 the card party held at the Hut was a real success with twenty tables in play and three left over.

Ruby Berry welcomed all and mentioned we had some new comers, and hoped they'd enjoy themselves and she also went over the rules again and reported on the sick, saying she was glad to have her husband home and that Annie Fletcher and Dorothy Hadenko are both still in hospital. We wish Fred Berry a speedy recovery, also the rest.

We were glad to see Chester and Millie Caswell back from Florida. I think Chester must have been playing cards as well as enjoying the sunshine, as he won a prize today.

When Elizabeth Wray arrived she was wearing a black band around her arm, of course we inquired about it, and found out she was in mourning for the "Montreal Canadiens" who had lost on Tuesday evening. She is sure a great fan of the Canadiens!

Fred Walker looked after the score cards as usual, and then took Fred Berry's place, and gave out the prizes. Before doing that, he read a thank-you note from Fred Berry, also gave out some card parties to be held in the near future, and a Flea Market to be held April 24 from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. in the Brompton Community Hall.

First prize score 7440, Arlene Whittier, Second prize, score of 7200, Chester Caswell, Consolation score 2940, Lillian Learned - Nine diamond bids went to Myrtle Sage with her name down three times, and tricks with four of spades went to Beth Cullen with her name down three times.

Noel Humphries was looking after the draw and asked Liz Wray to draw the ticket, winning it for Hazel Provis. Thanks to all who helped in any way before, during and after the card party. As usual some of the men were helping with dishes, also thanks to all who bring food, as it is always needed.

WILLEY, Willis (Bob) — At the BMP Hospital on Sunday, April 18, 1982, Bob Willey, in his 76th year, beloved husband of Lillian Aiken, dear father of Linda (Mrs. Bruce Fowler), Lorna, Betty-Ann, Barbara, Julie, Jane, grandfather of Sarah and Emily. Resting at the Desourdy-Wilson Funeral Home, Knowlton. Funeral service on Wed., April 21 at 2 p.m. from Holy Trinity Anglican Church, South Bolton. Interment in South Bolton Cemetery. ## In Memoriam

WINSLOW — In loving memory of mother and my three brothers. Mother Gertrude who passed into rest April 20, 1978. Arthur who passed away November 23, 1973. Stanford who passed away October 22, 1974. Odell who entered into rest July 20, 1980.

I often sit and think of them
When I am all alone,
I look at their pictures
And wish I could go home.
To your graves I travel
And flowers place there,
But no one knows the heartache.
As I turn and leave them there.
Lovingly remembered by
MAYOTTA
(daughter and sister)

ATTENTION: Agriculture Producers in Cow-Calf Operations:

April 30, 1982 is the deadline for registering under the Income-Stabilization Program for Cow-Calf producers for the 1982 season.

During 1981, producers paid $22.00 per cow for the stabilization insurance. They are now receiving compensation amounting to $158.37 per cow.

For every premium dollar by a producer, the provincial government pays $2.00 into the fund.

Crop Insurance which is handled by the same Board is also funded by the government, which pays dollar for dollar whatever premium the producer is charged.

Confident Team Canada rolls over West Germany

HELSINKI (CP) — Playing with newfound confidence, Canada snapped back from a tie and a loss in its previous two games to register a 7-1 victory over West Germany at the world hockey championships Monday night.

Unlike its first three games — including the 9-2 victory over Finland — the Canadian team turned in its most impressive performance to date with both a solid offence and defence.

Spearheading the attack was veteran Bill Barber of Philadelphia Flyers who scored three goals to give him four at the championships. Barber narrowly missed a fourth goal when half-way through the second period he was sent on a breakaway off a perfect pass from Wayne Gretzky and snapped a wrist shot off the post.

Brian Propp, Rick Vaive, Darryl Sittler and Dale Hawerchuk also scored for Canada. West German Erich Kuehnhackl, who stands 6-foot-6, scored his team's lone goal at 7:02 of the opening period to give his team a brief 1-0 lead.

The victory was tempered by the loss of left winger Ryan Walter, who suffered a separated shoulder midway through the second period when he was slammed into the boards by Horst-Peter Kretschmer.

Walter, perhaps Canada's top player in the tournament to this point, was replaced on his line by a series of wingers as Coach Marshall Johnston continued to employ four lines.

Gilles Meloche of Minnesota North Stars, who faced 20 shots, came close to stopping the one by Kuehnhackl in the first period as the quick wrist shot from the slot hit his arm and barely trickled into the net.

Barber brought Canada even at 10:18 when he picked up a rebound of a shot by Paul Reinhart and fired the puck along the ice and through the legs of Winnipeg native Karl Friesen, one of three Canadian-born players on the West German team.

Just 17 seconds later Propp batted in a rebound of a Darryl Sittler shot at the side of the net to put Canada on top for good.

Gretzky worked his magic on Barber's second of the night in the final minute of play of the opening period to give Canada a 3-1 lead.

"Gretzky made just a fantastic play," said Barber. "He drew two of their guys over at the blue line, laid it over to me and I shot it on the go."

"It was a great play. It even had the goalie over and all I had to do was shoot it into an empty net."

Vaive, Barber and Sittler scored in the second period — Vaive on a power-play deflection while Dale Hawerchuk snapped a shot past Friesen at 4:49 of the third period to account for the scoring.

The victory lifted Canada's record to 2-1-1 in its quest to advance into the final four after the end of the eight-country round-robin tournament.

Christenson holds Expo offence to three hits

MONTREAL (CP) — There's good news for the Phillie Phanatic and other followers of Philadelphia Phillies.

The National League baseball team may be off to its worst start since 1971 but better times are ahead. Just ask left fielder Gary Matthews, who singled home one of two first-inning runs Monday that lifted Philadelphia to a 2-0 National League baseball triumph over Montreal Expos.

"The big danger is getting down and saying this is the end and wait 'til next year," said Matthews referring to the Phillies 3-8 won-lost record. "But it's just a matter of everything jelling and having a few hits drop in."

"You can't ever get down, whether it's early or late in the season. Last year in August, I drove in only two or three runs the entire month. But I just kept thinking things were going to turn around and I ended up driving in 33 runs in September."

Matthews entered the game on a five-game hitting streak but also carried a woeful .186 batting average. The first of his two singles drove in Pete Rose, who hit the first pitch of the game from Expos starter Scott Sanderson, 1-1, for a triple off the centre-field wall.

SCORES RUN

After stealing second and taking third on George Vuckovich's single, Matthews scored the only other run when Bo Diaz drilled a single to centre.

Sanderson then retired 17 batters in succession and yielded only two more hits — one in both the seventh and eighth inning.

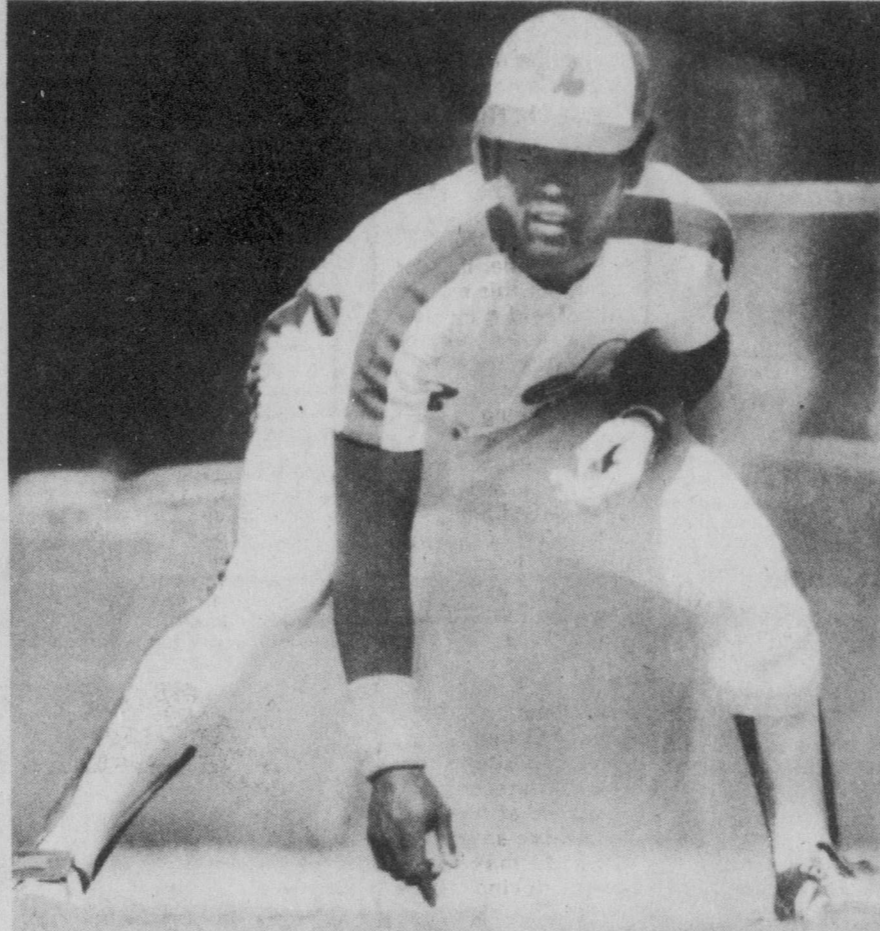

But the damage was done, and the Expos could do nothing to repair it against Philadelphia starter Larry Christenson, 1-1, who stopped them on three hits before needing reliever Ed Farmer to record the final two outs for his first National League save.

Before Rowland Office delivered a pinch-hit double with one out in the ninth, Christenson had retired 21 of 22 batters. The injury-plagued right-hander, relying mainly on a mixture of curves, sliders and changeups, has rarely pitched better.

"Sometimes I don't remember much at all," he said when asked if he could remember tossing a better game. "I've had strings now and then."

"I think the big thing for me now is having confidence in throwing other pitches when I'm behind in the count. I seem to have more strength and I'm not worried about little injuries that come up."

Steve Rogers of the Expos and Philadelphia's Mike Krukow, both with 1-1 records, meet in the second game of the series today.

Rodney Scott... 'Cool Breeze' had one of the few hits.

Nordiques even series with rout of Bruins

QUEBEC (CP) — There was nothing clinical about the analysis offered by Boston coach Gerry Cheevers after Quebec Nordiques whipped the Bruins 7-2 on Monday night to tie the best-of-seven National Hockey League quarter-final series 2-2.

"We gave Quebec a chance to open up and they took it," said Cheevers. "We can't do that back in Boston."

The Bruins return to the friendly confines of Boston Garden for the fifth game Wednesday night. The game starts at 7:30 and will be shown on the CBC television network.

"Give Quebec a lot of credit," said Bruins defenceman Mike Milbury of the Nordiques blitz. "Once they get a lead, they're tough to come back against. We would take one rush and the puck would be in our net." There was only a touch of hyperbole in Milbury's comments. The Bruins made a number of mistakes on the game and paid dearly.

They were fortunate to emerge with only a 2-0 deficit in the first period as Marian Stastny and Wilf Paiement beat rookie goaltender Mike Moffat in a 34-second span just past the eighth-minute of play. Paiement not only beat Moffat — he left him red-faced with embarrassment when his sharp-angled shot from the left-wing boards escaped Moffat's grasp.

"The turning point was maybe that second goal," said the Nordiques Peter Stastny. "It might have shaken up Moffat, a bit."

Your Birthday

April 21, 1982
This coming year you should do quite well in enterprises or ventures that require unique methods or techniques. Don't treat lightly any inventions or concepts that you may conceive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Proposals that appear to offer you something for nothing today could prove misleading. Test the water carefully before jumping in. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in each of the seasons following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In agreements with friends today, you may have to give a bit more than you get in order to maintain good will in the relationship. All will even out later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Career-wise, try to avoid situations today that could cause you to compete with others. Instead, do all that you can to sustain harmony.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There's a possibility you could be a bit too impatient today with people who do not grasp that which needs doing as quickly as you. Be tolerant.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be on the alert in joint ventures today, especially if there are expenses involved. Poor judgment could cause you to pay more than your share.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If possible, avoid making snap judgments today. Your first thoughts could lead to wrong conclusions. You get smarter after you study matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is one of those days where you may not work too well if pressured. Keep people who aren't essential to your projects at arm's length.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This should be a rather pleasant day, provided you avoid pals who are too demanding or dictatorial. Seek chums who are as fun-loving as you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try not to bring outside problems or pressures into your home today. They could disrupt family harmony and create unnecessary friction.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You may have to deal with someone today who is a bit more temperamental and argumentative than usual. Don't give him any reason to lean on you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) In situations affecting your finances or security, you are likely to be better off today if you are able to operate independently.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Rely more upon your mental resourcefulness today than on trying to muscle things through. Good ideas will succeed. Strong-arm tactics won't.

Mr. and Mrs. Garth Peasley of Waterloo were recent evening guests of Mrs. Daisy Johnston at Hemlock Ridge Farm.
Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Jones and two children and Mrs. Daisy Johnston spent Sunday at a sugaring-off party, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Mahannah in Frelighsburg. There were between 60 and 65 guests present and a most enjoyable day was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Foster returned recently from visiting their son-in-law and daughter, David and Donna Cousens at Medicine Hat, Alberta, and their daughter Elaine and her husband Goldwyn Cote at Carlsbad. While in Calgary they also visited Mr. Foster's cousin Mrs. Frank Haddock and her husband, and Ken and Shirley Doiron, Shannon and Tina and several other relatives there. Mrs. Elaine Cote accompanied her parents home and was joined a few days later by Mrs. Haddock who came specially to be here for maple sugar operations - she had not seen the sap run since 1936 and enjoyed it all tremendously. The two returned to Alberta last Monday after spending two weeks with the Eric Fosters. Mrs. Haddock visited her cousin Mrs. William Gallagher of Waterloo while here, also Mrs. Janet Mizener, Mrs. Maureen Ashton in Brome and other relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ling, Mrs. Paul Sherrer and son Derek of West Hill, Ontario, were luncheon guests of Mrs. Malda Inglis. Mr. Tom Inglis of Hilton Head, South Carolina, was an overnight guest of his mother, Mrs. Malda Inglis.

Mary Camber of Austin was calling on the Glendon Frizzles. Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Foster of Smiths Falls, Ont., were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Glen Frizzle and Mrs. Flossie Fuller.
