

Juror breaks security; murder trial postponed

By BERNARD ST-LAURENT

SHERBROOKE — The jury was dismissed and a new trial ordered yesterday after a juror left custody of the court which is trying Andre Chouinard, 18, of Lake Megantic, for the murder of 48-year-old Paul-Emile Fecteau of St. Gedeon.

Assizes court judge Wm. S. Mitchell dismissed the jury and ordered selection of new jury. The new trial will begin Nov. 24.

A court official said a juror left custody to go to the washroom, but didn't return for an hour-and-a-half. The incident occurred while jurors were attending a movie at the Granada Theatre on Wellington St., under supervision of a court official.

Crown Prosecutor Stanley Steinman said this was the first time, to his knowledge, that a Canadian murder trial has had to be cancelled for this reason.

The juror was called "irresponsible". One of the court officials in charge of staying with the jury said the man was seen playing with the flag outside the window of the jury room during a brief recess in the trial on Monday and had a case of beer in his room at the Magog House, where jurors stay when they are required to remain together.

Jurors are kept from public contact for the length of a trial to avoid possible prejudices that might occur from newspapers, radio or through conversation.

Other jurors were amazed at the turn of events.

"I thought we were being dismissed because we talked too loud during a card game in one of the juror's rooms," said one.

Another said he was sure the man who caused the dismissal was sitting beside him throughout the performance at the theatre.

When questioned about his whereabouts, the juror in question said he didn't know what the questioner was talking about. When he was later informed that the trial was cancelled, he said: "It's the least of my worries. I have a lot of work to do at home."

The delay will cost the province about $3,000.

Mr. Steinman said: "We have 27 witnesses that come from Beauce County, and the jury has to be paid. That's $3,000 of wasted taxpayers' money just because one person decided to leave custody."

Chouinard was arrested June 14 after Fecteau's body was found alongside Route 24, about four miles from St. Ludger.

The trial was previously delayed due to the death of Judge Louis Philippe Cliche.

Monday's testimony will have to be reheard. Most of it was given by experts from Quebec Provincial Police homicide squad, based in Montreal, and the Montreal Medical-Legal Institute.

School shuffle in Montreal

QUEBEC (CP) — Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal Tuesday introduced a bill in Quebec's national assembly which would reorganize the public school system on Montreal Island along non-denominational lines.

The bill, officially designated Bill 62, would establish 11 school districts, each governed by an elected school commission, to replace the 45 existing Roman Catholic and Protestant school commissions on the island effective July 1, 1971.

The new school commissions would administer the education of Roman Catholic, Protestant and other pupils in their respective districts.

Four of the six commission members, who would serve four-year terms, would be elected by all qualified voters in the respective districts. The others would be chosen by parents' representatives.

The method of choosing members of existing school commissions varies.

In Quebec City and Montreal, half the commission members plus the chairman are appointed by the government and half are chosen by religious authorities. Elsewhere, members are elected by local property owners.

The bill would also give parents a voice in administration at the individual school level. A parents committee would be formed in each school to maintain the quality of education in the school.

The parents committees would be elected by the parents and would in turn choose the members of an electoral college which would exercise the parents' right to choose two of the members of the district school commission.

The school commissions' activities would be co-ordinated by a 15-member school council appointed by the cabinet. Each commission would have at least one representative on the council.

The school council would be legal owner of all school property, collect necessary taxes and provide the school commissions with the necessary facilities and services.

Teachers agree, 3-year contract

QUEBEC (CP) — The first province-wide contract for Quebec's 70,000 primary and secondary school teachers was signed Tuesday by government and teacher representatives.

Signing of the three-year agreement ended more than two years of negotiations between the teachers on one hand and the provincial government and the province's school boards on the other.

Salary, fringe benefits and teachers' duties were principal issues in the negotiations.

The talks were marked by strikes, threats and demonstrations.

Final agreement on contract terms was reached two weeks ago, ending 28 months of intermittent talks.

The contract replaces more than 300 contracts between teachers and individual school boards.

"The agreement contains all the elements necessary to permit a new start in teacher school board relations, a start based on collaboration among all those involved in education," Mr. Masse said.

CYC shakeup

Four fired, one quits

OTTAWA (CP) — An Oct. 19 directive banning partisan political involvement has resulted in the resignation of one Montreal volunteer in the Company of Young Canadians and the ejection of four others, a Commons committee was told Tuesday.

Jack Johnson, chairman of the CYC council, said two volunteers who asked for an extra six months working period were refused and two trainees were being refused volunteer status because of political activity.

Mr. Johnson said the directive was in response to Montreal Executive Chairman Lucien Saulnier's allegation Oct. 11 that subversive elements in the CYC were responsible for some of Montreal's troubles.

Mr. Saulnier's blast led State Secretary Gerard Pelletier to ask for a special inquiry by the Commons committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts.

The committee began an intensive schedule of hearings Tuesday by:

—Hiring Claude Armand Sheppard, Montreal lawyer active in civil rights, as counsel at $250 a seven-hour day, plus $25 hourly overtime, plus expenses.

—Wondering how it will handle any allegations of specific criminal activity by witnesses such as Mr. Saulnier, who has said he will be happy to testify.

—Rejecting a suggestion that former prime minister Lester Pearson, spiritual father of the CYC in 1966, be called as a witness.

John M. Reid (L.—Kenora-Rainy River) is in India with a parliamentary delegation and Pierre de Bane (L.—Matane) was in the chair.

He called a closed meeting for Thursday at which all MPs on the committee will be invited to discuss its objectives.

Benson warns of credit controls to help fight Canada's inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Tuesday the federal government might impose controls on credit to help fight inflation.

He said the government would be reluctant to try compulsory restraints on prices and incomes.

However, he told the Commons finance committee he believes interest rates have reached a peak.

Interest rates have been pushed up by inflation generally, but "I would hope that next year we will find interest rates moving in the opposite direction," he said.

Answering questions during the committee's investigation of high interest rates, Mr. Benson said limiting the spread between the rates at which banks and other institutions lend money and the rates at which they borrow funds might well be considered as part of a package of controls on credit. The minister said he believes the federal government could impose some modest controls on credit without any constitutional problems about impinging on provincial jurisdiction.

USE PRESENT POWERS

Controls on credit and adjustment of tariffs to curb inflation would be an extension of existing federal powers to impose restraint through control of the money supply and curbs on the federal budget, he said.

However, compulsory controls on prices and incomes would be difficult constitutionally and hard to administer. "I look at them as a long way down the line... an emergency situation."

After Mr. Benson expressed support for efforts by the federal prices and incomes commission to organize voluntary restraint on prices and incomes, Alastair Gillespie L.—Toronto Etobicoke said a voluntary system has the ring of "a pious euphemism — a King Canute-like quality as the tide of inflation rolls in."

Mr. Gillespie suggested the time is long past when the government should have told the public what it considered a proper measurement of restraint.

Mr. Benson said the government did not like to suggest guides while the prices and incomes commission is trying to work out a system. The government has told the commission it will co-operate fully in a system of voluntary guides, Mr. Benson said.

Bourassa here Sunday

SHERBROOKE (CJ) — Robert Bourassa, Liberal MNA for Mercier, and one of the three announced contenders for the Quebec Liberal Party leadership, will be in the Sherbrooke district over the coming weekend.

Mr. Bourassa will arrive at the Sherbrooke municipal airport shortly before noon on Sunday and will have lunch with a group of his local organizers. This will be followed by a press conference and a visit to Bishop's University early Sunday afternoon.

At 4:30 p.m. he will meet Liberal supporters from the counties of Sherbrooke, Stanstead, Richmond and Compton at a reception at the Sherbrooke Reform Club.

Monday he will be the special guest on the early morning show on the local TV station.

Two amendments Language bill passes second reading, 86-5

QUEBEC (CP) — The people who often describe themselves as representatives of Quebec's moderate majority spoke up Tuesday night.

The national assembly of Quebec voted 89 to 5 to endorse the principles of the Union Nationale government's language bill.

The Liberal Opposition joined with the government to vote second reading of Bill 63, target of several student demonstrations in Quebec.

The vote was the first by the assembly guaranteeing Quebec parents the right to choose English or French schools for their children.

This principle has been under attack since 1968 when a school board in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard made a move toward French-only instruction.

The assembly is expected to resume study of the language legislation Thursday and a procedural battle is in the offing.

MAY BE OUSTED

The five dissidents in the 108-seat house included two rebel government backbenchers whose negative votes could cost them their party membership.

Antonio Flamand (UN—Rouyn-Noranda) and Jerome Proulx (UN—St. Jean) ignored party policy to vote against the bill.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand told reporters that the bill represents government policy and that the caucus would decide what to do with the rebels.

Others who voted against the bill were Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois, Yves Michaud (Ind—Montreal Gouin) and Gaston Tremblay (Ind—Montmorency).

Mr. Michaud, a 39-year-old journalist, quit the Liberal caucus last week rather than vote for the bill during second reading.

Mr. Flamand, a 36-year-old teacher, said the bill would only speed up the process of Anglicization of French Canadians.

CHANGES HIS MIND

Mr. Proulx, 39, another teacher, somersaulted politically, first announced he would vote for the bill, then said he would vote against it.

His self-described confusion arose from Premier Bertrand's announcement that there will be two government amendments.

One amendment would empower the Office de la Langue Francaise to encourage Quebec employers to make French the working language in industry.

The other amendment would invite immigrants to choose schools of Quebec's Frenchspeaking majority.

Apparently satisfied, Mr. Proulx said he would vote for the bill. But less than two hours later he changed his mind.

Two other dissident backbenchers, Denis Bousquet (UN—St. Hyacinthe) and Fernand Grenier (UN—Frontenac), walked out prior to the vote.

APPLAUD VOTE

The vote in favor of Bill 63, an act to promote the teaching of French in Quebec, was accompanied by desk-thumping applause of most members.

Immediately after the vote, Mr. Michaud presented a motion, seconded by Mr. Levesque, to refer the bill to the constitutional committee.

Speaker Gerard Lebel said he would announce his decision on the acceptability of the Michaud motion Thursday.

The dissidents can be expected to wage a procedural battle in an attempt to delay or block passage of the bill.

The Liberal Opposition plans to introduce amendments to elevate French to a position of priority over English.

Will discuss government's school costs

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial officials will meet Thursday and Friday with State Secretary Gerard Pelletier to discuss how much the federal government should contribute to the cost of "official language minority schools."

Provision for education in either English or French for minority groups within the provinces was a prime recommendation of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

In its volume on education issued last December, the commission also recommended the federal government accept responsibility for the extra costs.

Ottawa has refused to say just how much responsibility it is prepared to accept but Mr. Pelletier is expected to present a cost-sharing formula to the provincial education ministers or their representatives at the meeting.

The royal commission proposed that the federal government pay grants to Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick based on the number of students being educated in the minority language and amounting to 10 per cent of the average cost per pupil of education in the province.

Larger grants per pupil were recommended for the seven other provinces.

The commission also called on Ottawa to contribute to the cost of training teachers for minority-language schools.

Treatment Regimen For Raynaud's Disease

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q—What are the cause and symptoms of Raynaud's disease? Is there any cure for it?

A—This disease is characterized by a blanching of the fingers of both hands, usually followed by a bluish tinge then, with the return of the circulation, the fingers become very red. The cause is a spasm in the small arteries of the fingers followed by a dilation, but the underlying cause is not known. Nervous tension may be a contributing factor. Exposure of the hands or the body to cold will trigger an attack.

Since there is no cure, the treatment must be aimed at preventing attacks. Although there is no evidence that smoking is a cause, it may aggravate the disease. For that reason the victim should give up smoking.

In cold weather the victim must protect himself from becoming chilled and should take special care not to chill his fingers. Always wear gloves when removing anything from the refrigerator. Massage the hands with Polysorb Hydrate Lotion every night at bedtime. Avoidance of nervous tension is also an important part of the treatment.

A 1/200-grain nitroglycerin tablet placed under the tongue 10 minutes before going outside in cold weather will prevent the arterial spasms. Recent studies show that methyldopa, a prescription drug, is effective in controlling this disease. Reserpine injected into the main artery of the arm is helpful in severe cases with impending gangrene of the finger tips.

Q—On cold days my finger tips become numb and white. It takes about 15 minutes for them to get back to normal. What causes this? Is it serious?

A—This sounds like Raynaud's disease, although you did not mention the typical redness following the blanching. Other possible causes include ergot poisoning and Buerger's disease. If you have Raynaud's disease associated with scleroderma, it may be progressive and disabling.

Q—In a recent column you recommended methylpolysiloxane for excessive intestinal gas. What trade name is it sold under?

A—Mylcion, Silain or Phazyme.

Your Horoscope

JEANE DIXON

FOR THURSDAY, NOV. 6, 1969

Your birthday today: The pressures you now begin to encounter are mostly toward closer cooperation with larger groups of people, bigger work teams, increasing personal responsibility. For the very young, this is an extremely challenging, exciting year. Today's natives have a fondness for secret activities, unsuspected sidelines.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your unmoderated, immediate reaction to vexation tends to break up relationships. Wait for explanations, fuller information. Strive for cooperation; matters improve in the later hours.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Unsettled conditions are to be expected today. Pursue your work serenely; accept sudden switches of direction and changes as part of the scene. You can still achieve much, despite changes in sequence of your routines.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Early excitement lapses into drift. Stick to your overall plans rather than stray with the distractions which began in the morning. Important ventures begun today tend to run into difficulties in the next few weeks.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An early push of energy fizzles. Avoid critical remarks in the impatience of the morning. Later hours become calm.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Early plans get mixed up by passing circumstances. Small, scattered matters can be rounded up readily with a little extra reaching or short trips this afternoon and evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accounts and budgets are more important than major changes. Once the impatience of the morning settles, dig into the backlog of neglected routines; get the decks clear for better perspective and more room to operate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Impulsive moves in the earlier hours upset the rest of the day and perhaps several days to come. You are on your own now, with no special pressures in your slant or direction. Meditate tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Today marks another step toward some personal goal. Concentrate steadily on plans already made. Don't skip any details as you will have little chance for later revisions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Friendships run into unplanned stress so be reserved in your comments. Error-hunting routines or search for misplaced items take up much of the later hours. Reflect occasionally to allow intuition a better chance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Gaps are bound to show up in the way your work is organized, no matter what you have done to avoid them. Wait for things to evolve while you take on the simpler corrections first.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Self-improvement is the key for success today once you get past the early resistance of less fluent, less flexible people. Line up your accounts, travel plans. Compare notes with mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The day can be relatively easy with much pleasant conversation. Morning news may include extreme views, unfounded rumor. Concentrate on the constructive approach; avoid recriminations.

An over-pessimistic duplicate player would perhaps try the same safety play and would come up with a top score this time, but a good duplicate player would bang out the top diamonds and wind up down one if the defense did its job properly.

Why would he do this? Because he would be in a normal contract and would play for as many tricks as possible. Overtricks mean little in rubber bridge. They mean wins in duplicate play.

The diamond jack will drop 54 per cent of the time, so he starts with a 54 per cent chance of making five diamond tricks. Then, if the diamond jack fails to drop, he can still bring home nine tricks if the clubs divide 3-3. In addition, West will have to make two discards on diamonds. He had better throw away two spades and hang onto all his clubs and hearts if he wants to keep South from making a third trick in one of those suits.

If all this happens to him, South can re-ason that he shouldn't have gotten out of bed that morning and look forward to a better day.

For and about Women

A SHAPELIER WORLD—Founder and president of Weight Watchers Inc., Mrs. Jean Nidetch is shown, a former size 41 who slimmed to size 12. She has trimmed a world wide membership of Weight Watchers by 17½ million pounds. Sherbrooke citizens will be offered the opportunity to follow the program at the St. Jean Baptiste Church, 280 Conseil St., every Tuesday night at 8 p.m. Initially conducted in French, English courses will be instituted if there is a demand.

On the lighter side

A Weight Watchers class opened in Sherbrooke on Tuesday evening in the St. Jean Baptiste Church basement, 280 Conseil St. The program begins at 8 p.m. weekly, with a weigh-in followed by a lecture by Henri Benorari and a group discussion.

Initially classes will be conducted in French. If there is a demand from the English speaking population, similar ones will start in English.

Weight Watchers originated in 1961 with a 214 pound housewife, Mrs. Jean Nidetch. She lost 72 pounds in a year after attending the Obesity Clinic of New York City's Board of Health, later becoming the founder of Weight Watchers Inc. It has grown to a membership of 2½ million throughout the world, who claim to lose weight happily by sharing the experience with others.

Only those who have at least 10 pounds to lose are accepted as members.

In a 2 years the program has amassed 20,000 followers scattered among 50 classes in Montreal alone.

Pounds drop through a re-education of eating habits, according to Mrs. Marilyn Reich, director of Weight Watchers, who was in town on Monday. In fact it is the Prudential Diet, conceived in the 30's by Dr. Norman Joliffe, combined with sharing a common problem that "lightens the load". There is no calorie counting, no injections, no pills and the member may eat a lot, providing it is the right kind of food.

Anyone interested is invited to attend the session at the St. Jean Baptiste Church any Tuesday evening. Other groups will be instituted as the numbers increase.

MAPLE COPSE CHAPTER, IODE

At the well-attended October meeting of Maple Copse Chapter IODE, the regent, Mrs. Pearl E. Staples presided. A visitor, Mrs. Dorothy Barnett, was welcomed.

Correspondence included four letters of thanks from recipients of citizenship prizes at the Lennoxville High School's final exercises. The Marthe L. Stewart Memorial bursary was awarded to Miss Sheila R. Clarke entering Bishop's University. In her acknowledgement she stated her plan to proceed, after two years, to study physical education at McGill.

A letter received from Mr. George Rothney, Principal of the Lennoxville High School, in which he thanked the members for all the help extended over the years by the Chapter to the high school, now absorbed by the Alexander Galt Regional High School.

Mrs. A. E. Roodhouse and Mrs. Louis Moore represented the Chapter at the semi-annual meetings in St. Johns, the latter bringing back a consignment of IODE calendars which were on display. Those not purchased by the members will be given to local schools. Mrs. Roodhouse reported that the Provincial Chapter is supporting the Katerie Memorial Hospital at Caughnawaga which is in need of supplies of all kinds. She also mentioned that the Clarenceville Home for the severely retarded was asking for old linen, men's white shirts or any other garment which the resident seamstress turns into hospital gowns, and one-piece pyjamas.

Mrs. George Sutherland reminded the members that Christmas gifts for the Douglas Hospital and for the children in the North should go to Montreal at the beginning of November. She asked that these be brought to her house as quickly as possible. Some lovely baby sweaters were on display and she reported having received very good used clothing from a member.

Mrs. Leandre Parent announced that the October bridge marathon lists had gone out with 34 couples enrolled. A number of previous players who had not played expressed a wish to be included when another marathon was organized in the New Year.

The treasurer, Mrs. Darcy Bennett was authorized to buy a wreath for Remembrance Sunday and to pay an outstanding bill for prize books.

It having been agreed that a fall rummage sale be held, the regent had reserved St. George's hall for Saturday, November 15. Members were requested to solicit rummage from their neighbours and to be on hand on the day of the sale. Mrs. Austin Scott and Mrs. Stanley Pearson agreed to collect on Saturday morning and asked to be notified when contributions were to be picked up.

The meeting closed with the usual ceremony. Mrs. Rupert Atto, Standard bearer, raised the flag and Mrs. Leandre V. Parent accompanied the singing of the National Anthem. Hostesses for the tea which followed were Mrs. Charles T. Herring and Mrs. George Sutherland.

Richmond Regional PTA

The next general meeting of the Richmond Regional Parent Teacher's Association will be on November 10. It will be parents' night and parent-teacher interviews will begin at 7 p.m. and end at 9.

Parents are reminded that November is membership month. Coffee will be served after the interviews.

Mrs. J. Adamson, sister-in-law of the groom, represented the groom's mother, who was unable to attend due to a serious illness. Mrs. Adamson wore a pink dress with black accessories and white carnations.

After the wedding ceremony, the couple was driven from the church to the reception at the Wayfare Restaurant in a 1935 Brough Superior, a rare English antique car owned by Mr. Roy Elliott of Como.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Adamson left for a short trip to Ontario. The bride travelled in a tangerine wool dress with a matching plaid cape with brown accessories and a corsage of white carnations. En route they visited Mr. Adamson's parents in Belleville.

The many guests included people from Ottawa, Belleville, St. Thomas, Athens, Stanstead, Sherbrooke, Lennoxville, North Hatley, Hartford, Vermont and East Haven, Vermont, and Chibougamau.

Mr. and Mrs. Adamson are living in Chibougamau.

The sergeant came home early from Viet Nam—too early PHU LOI, South Vietnam—(NEA)—They shipped Platoon Sgt. Robert Demgen home early the other afternoon.

Too early. The 27-year-old Detroit soldier wasn't supposed to leave for a few weeks. His unit, Bravo Company, 1st Battalion, 305th Regiment of the 82nd Airborne, is one of the elements being retired from the war—but its pull-back isn't expected until November.

The sergeant's outfit received word of the withdrawal decision while in the field—the field being a tortured plain of scrub and elephant grass some miles north of headquarters.

The men were elated. Toasts were given with canned water and soda pop. Dust clouds sprayed from the backs being slapped. Great smiles split open from behind hairy upper lips and faces soiled with sweat.

Sgt. Demgen said it for everyone.

"Just great. God, it's just great."

His feelings were understandable. He had been here for seven months. He had a wife at home in Michigan. And he longed to return to the States to get going on a normal life.

Celebration, however, was brief. The war for B Company wasn't over yet. And the order was to remain in the field and continue the job until further notice.

The job was a grubby one. Bravo, as well as other forces from the 82nd, was engaged in another of the war's thankless, often fruitless labors—rooting an undetermined number of unseen enemy from unknown hiding places.

The hiding places in this instance were tunnels—the same elaborate, elongated dugouts that have been alternately destroyed and rebuilt in this nation since combat began nine years ago for Americans and more than 20 for Vietnamese.

Such tunnels, some many levels deep and stocked with supplies, are not only ingeniously constructed, they are ingeniously effective. Dug beneath the camouflage of thicket, they have entrances and peep holes which are secreted in irregular patterns over many hundreds of yards of terrain.

When troops probe the tunnel regions, they can find only some of the peep holes.

They walk by many others. In such surroundings, soldiers are constantly exposed to possible sniper fire from any direction.

This was the case with Sgt. Demgen and Bravo Company. They had moved above an elaborate tunnel network and were assigned to outline as much of the system as possible, then blow it.

For a time, everything went well. No particular problems. No enemy to be seen. And the search progressed.

Then, trouble.

Sgt. Demgen and several others had moved to the front of the probing force and discovered a new tunnel opening. It was the same as all the others—a two-foot-square hole buried in brush and covered with a mossy-wood trapdoor.

The sergeant motioned his people to stay low while he investigated the find. He did so carefully. At the crouch. Step by step. Looking for booby traps. Watching for shadows.

And suddenly, a shot. Across from the tunnel hole, not 10 yards from Sgt. Demgen, a Viet Cong guerrilla opened up with an AK-47 rifle. Demgen fell immediately. He groaned but said nothing.

SMOKE BOMBS are one way of dealing with ingenious Viet Cong tunnel system, deadly feature of Vietnam's landscape for 20 years.

CELEBRATE 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. Burton Shonyo of 521 McDonald Street, Magog, cutting their 50th wedding anniversary cake. (Record photo: Charles Catchpaugh)

Canadians uneasy with "Sons of Beelzebub"

Canadians really got a jolt when they looked at their papers on October 20th, 1864 — just one hundred and five years ago.

There, in bold headlines, was fresh cause for strained relationship with their big neighbor to the South — the USA. And it all started in a little Vermont town, only sixteen miles south of the Quebec border.

At the time, Canadians were well aware that the Federal Government in Washington was locked in a life-and-death struggle with the Southern Confederacy. They also knew that Toronto was swarming with agents of the rebelling states, directed by Colonel Jacob Thompson, a close personal friend of Jefferson Davis, the Confederate President. More than one hundred of the South's most daring men had been sent in civilian attire into Canada with orders to do as much damage as possible to the North, whether by raids or setting fire to property.

Somehow, the Lincoln Government in Washington got wind of what was going on, and their men, too, came chasing across the border. That Davis's plan did not work out was not due to any lack of his agents' scheming, but because, in both Canada and the United States, the two Governments finally combined forces against these efforts to upset long standing friendly relations.

On October 20th, however, the news which the Canadians learned, filled them with dismay. The day before, the little town of St. Albans, Vermont, was normally busy for an autumn afternoon. People passed in and out of the stores, stopping to exchange the latest news or inquire after some neighbors in General Grant's army far to the south in Virginia.

Already a chill hung in the air, for winter comes early in the northern country close to the Canadian border. Over the whole town rested a sleepy inertia.

But, at exactly three o'clock, many St. Albans residents must have felt like rubbing their eyes! Sprung up from nowhere — so it seemed to these quiet people — twenty-one Confederate soldiers in uniform faced them in the very heart of their town. Stuck in the belt of each man in gray was a pair of Navy sixes.

The young leader of the band, Lieutenant Bennett H. Young, a Kentuckian, spoke briefly and to the point. St. Albans, he said, had been captured by this force of the Confederate States of America. The villagers must all go to the public square and not make any fuss if they knew what was good for them.

Several persons made the mistake of taking the orders as a joke. When they held back and dared to taunt the "invaders", the Confederates drew their pistols and let them have it. When one Vermonter was wounded, the rest did not hesitate any longer. The square was soon filled with an angry, milling throng.

Over the surprised crowd, a few of the Confederates stood guard, holding them at bay with their drawn guns. But the rest scattered as if by a carefully-laid plan. One group rushed to the banks and, at pistol point, relieved them of $200,000 in United States bills. Another made for the livery stables and was soon back with horses for all the raiders.

The Confederates were all carrying incendiary equipment, and this was used against St. Albans' public buildings. By the time the others had returned to the square, smoke was rising from several nearby structures.

But the Vermonters had become aroused. Shots began to come from second-story windows, and three of the raiders were hit. The Confederates returned the fire, and a St. Albans man was killed.

There was no time for the gray-clad group to fight it out. They knew the ranks of the villagers were being swelled every minute. After dashing the last of their combustibles on houses surrounding the square, they mounted their horses and bolted northward toward Canada.

Swept by a great wave of anger, the Vermonters rushed after them. Some travelled in wagons and others leaped upon horses. At the village of Swanton, where the Confederates were held up by a hayrack crossing the long, narrow bridge across the Missisquoi River, it looked as if the raiders might be overtaken.

But the Southerners, quickly dismounting, turned their guns upon their pursuers. Then, to make escape doubly sure, they set the hay upon the bridge, setting fire to it behind them.

By late evening all the raiders had reached the border.

Here they put on civilian clothes, turned the St. Albans horses loose upon the highway and started walking northward into Canada.

The sudden raid made a great stir throughout the USA. It aroused especially bitter feeling against Canada and some fast talking by a British officer were these new "invaders" persuaded to turn their prisoners over to the Crown.

Nothing came of the United States government's efforts to have the Southerners extradited. The State Department at Washington would not allow that the raiders were soldiers, but charged them with robbery and arson — both crimes for which men might be given up under the Ashburton Treaty's terms. But after two Confederate agents managed to bring proof of the prisoners' military status back from Richmond to Montreal, the extradition proceedings collapsed.

Suspicion confirmed — by a lady

TORONTO (CP) — Pat Curran, public relations director for the Ontario Motor League, says women drivers tend to be over-cautious, probably because they have inferiority complexes about their driving.

She says the too-cautious driver confuses and annoys other drivers.

"Surveys have shown that women who go to work or who are active in their community make better drivers than the stay-at-homes."

"These women have greater awareness, and awareness is the key to safety in driving. The active woman is more geared to what is going on, and thinks quickly."

Statistically, women have a good driving record. Last year, Ontario figures showed men were involved in more than 220,000 accidents, while women shared in only 37,269.

Miss Curran says that women, like men, should realize that most accidents involve persons who have been driving for more than 10 years and have not glanced at a motorist's handbook to review the rules of the road.

"The greatest weakness of all drivers is that they occasionally go through stop signs, or only come to a 'rolling stop' at the signs when they should make a full stop."

NEED SAFETY CHECK

She says women do not need to become mechanics to know how a car works, but they should read the owner's manual to become familiar with basic car operations.

She also suggests that car owners have their cars checked periodically for safety features.

If a woman runs into difficulty on a highway, she suggests that a handkerchief be tied to the door handle as a distress signal and that the doors be locked. At night, the woman driver should not get out of the car.

When a good Samaritan comes along, roll down the window and ask him to phone for a tow-truck, the police or whatever is needed, she advises.

As for parking, she says no one should park at night on a dark street, but rather at a well-lit lot with an attendant.

Plastic house a hit

TORONTO (CP) — About 15,000 people recently saw a show at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds called Plastics '69, featuring a plastic house.

It was sponsored by the federal department of trade and development, the government of Ontario and the plastics industry of Canada.

They decided not to produce a house of the future but to show what can be done today, so the house was more a showcase for building products and furnishings than a model home.

For the exterior, polystyrene-foam blocks were used as form-work for poured-concrete walls. Instead of removing the forms when the walls were dry, the foam blocks remained as permanent insulation. The foam surface can be covered in a variety of materials, interior and exterior.

Plastics House 69 showed a synthetic stucco finish and some horizontal siding of polyvinyl chloride. The front door of the house, looking like any other front door, was actually filled with polyurethane, an insulating material.

In the conventional modern interior, there was a wide range of plastics products.

WINDOWS TINTED

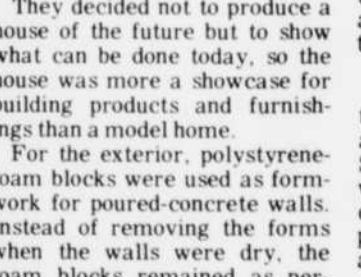

All the windows were made of tinted acrylic, as well as a series of skylights.

In one bathroom walls, bath, floor, and ceiling were made of glass-fibre-reinforced plastic.

ANNUAL OYSTER PARTY — The Kiwanis Club of Waterloo staged their annual oyster party at the Legion Hall on Oct. 23. The large turnout, including women, made the affair an enjoyable one for all. From Hollywood Fantasy come true is a schocker

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — For Godfrey Cambridge, this is a fantasy come true. It doesn't mean much now, except that it is a good part in a picture which could be very big. But there was a time when the fantasy—the dream of turning into a white man—was always there.

"I've ripped doors off cabs when I was a nobody," Cambridge says. The anger, the frustrations started long before when he wasn't big enough or strong enough to rip doors off cabs.

"We all had the fantasy of wishing we were white," he says. "As a kid, ten or maybe 11, I was in Truro, Nova Scotia, on a railroad platform. My folks was coming to meet me but they hadn't gotten there yet. I was all alone.

"A bunch of bullies came along. They pointed at me. 'Hey, look at the nigger. Hey, look at the gorilla.' I was just a kid. Terrified."

He wanted to be white that moment. And there were other moments. Then, lately, the pride in being black has almost eliminated the fantasy.

But now he has a chance to be white. He's starring in a movie, "The Night The Sun Came Out." It's about a white man who turns black overnight. Cambridge is playing the man, before and after.

For the scenes where he is white, make-up artist Ben Lane has done wonders. Cambridge doesn't look like a black man masquerading in white face.

"I look like me," Cambridge says. "But a white me."

He wears a wig and make-up that creates the illusion of natural-born whiteness. He tried contact lenses, too, but quit after a few hours of constant crying.

"I've walked on the street in my white make-up," Cambridge says, "and people don't give me a second look. We both just keep on walking."

He is enjoying it. And he's curious about his own reactions.

"It's a shock," he says. "All kinds of thoughts go through your head. Like if I had on this make-up, I wouldn't have to take all the stuff I've had to take. And you let go the hidden demons we all have. Like you say, 'Hell, man, I can go out to Glendale and do whatever I want to do.'"

He thinks that the picture has to say—although everybody concerned with it emphasizes that it's a comedy, not a message film—might help.

"This picture," Cambridge says, "is, in many respects, every white man's nightmare. And it might have a residual effect. A white cat might see it and say, 'What a spot!' It could happen."

The film is being directed by a black man, Melvin Van Peebles. Since it is being filmed right in Hollywood, at the Columbia studio, it thus becomes the first black-directed Hollywood picture. (Gordon Parks' "The Learning Tree" was shot entirely on location.)

Van Peebles, every inch the proper director in blue jeans, boots and dark glasses, stresses it is not a serious picture.

"It's a comedy. It's not a racial picture. Color is just a joke here. It could have been done with a tall man who becomes a short man overnight."

"Race isn't a joking matter. If people want to read a message into this film, that's their hang-up."

Most black directors, crusaders at heart, want to make their film debut with a picture that says something.

"I'm doing it for the money," Van Peebles says. "That's all. I'm being facetious—but maybe I'm not. Money is pretty much an end in itself."

Cambridge, however, sees more than money or comedy in "The Night The Sun Came Out." He thinks it may do some good.

"It talks about the duality," he says. "You know what we always say—different strokes for different folks."

MAKE-UP ARTIST Ben Lane begins transforming Godfrey Cambridge for his role in "The Night The Sun Came Out." The black comedian says the make-up job is so good that "I look like me, but a white me."

Recreation Ancient hunting art and intriguing vocabulary

One hobby must live on if only for the strange and beautiful words which are a part of it.

Granted, rockhounding isn't bad when it comes to words that glitter and flash like the gemstone collections gathered together by these hobbyists. Cabochon... tourmaline... amethyst... chalcidony... beryl... azurite. And many others.

A lovely assortment, but the art of falconry, or hawk-hunting, has an even more enchanting vocabulary associated with it.

"Ruffer" — that is the training hood covering the bird's head to keep it from flying. "Jess" — the leather leg thong that straps it to its perch ("block"). "Tiercel" — a male hawk.

An enduring period of time has passed since man first dominated a fierce hawk and trained it to dart through the air at the master's will, seizing quarry and remaining with it until commanded to relinquish the game. It has been time enough to accumulate a treasury of glittering jewels of words, smoothed and polished like bits of glass rolled and polished on the beach.

"Varvels" are small metal hoops fastened to the jesses, often engraved and inset with semiprecious stones. Also frequently ornamented are the tiny bronze bells which are attached with a leather thong, a "bewit."

A light line called a "cre-

"Pounces" — the bird's claws. "Sails" — its wings. "Jonking" — sleeping. "Bating" — beating wings with impatience.

The word "mewing" is molting and the word "mews" lives on in England as the name for certain rows of houses, a reflection of the original use for the apartments where birds were kept while the feathers replaced themselves.

"Stoop" — the dive of the bird with almost-closed wings (swoop).

Birds taken as fledglings from nests and trained are "eyas." Mature birds trapped during migration are "passagers."

The training given is called "manning"—a simple directness.

Taming a bird takes patience and careful adherence to methods as encrusted with tradition as these ancient words. This extends all the way from "copping" the beak and talons with clippers to the amazing "imping," which means repairing the bird's feathers with the use of a sailmaker's needle, waxed linen thread and a feather from a previous year's molt.

TRAINED HAWK sits on shoulder of Michael Benson, an Australian.

ance" attaches to the bird's leash to limit flight in training ("luring").

"Austringers" are those who train hawks only.

Falconry was the favorite recreation of aristocrats in the Middle Ages though surely it was known in China 2,000 years ago.

Even the names of the birds are musical — the peregrine falcon, gyrfalcon, goshawk, kestrel, merlin, shaheen, berkute.

Falconry was a method of hunting and the birds were used almost like shotguns before such firearms came into being. Hunting nowadays is so closely restricted and regulated that such falconry as does persist in the western world is a faint and lingering echo of the noble sport.

Nevertheless, the beautiful nomenclature can still be taken out and the words carressed.

Derby Line

Mrs. Lillian Cargill of Derby Line was hostess for the October meeting of the Universalist church AUUW meeting at her home, with 16 ladies attending.

The president, Mrs. Lola Kelley presided at the meeting, when a Hunter's food sale was planned, of home cooked foods hunters like to take with them. It will be held at 2 p.m. on Nov. 6 at Caswell and O'Rourke's Store, Derby Line.

Every Sunday a coffee hour will follow the Sunday morning church services. Mrs. James Stevens, Jr. offered to be convener for the month of November.

There was brief discussion about the cook book project and suggestions were made for fund raising events which will be further discussed at the Nov. 18 meeting at the home of Mrs. William Hutchinson.

Mrs. Cargill, during the social hour, served refreshments.

Rosemount downs Beavers 5-2

The Sherbrooke Beavers were downed to defeat at the hands of the Rosemount Nationals last night 5-2. The Beavers posted a 1-0 lead at the end of the first period of play but fell back helplessly after that, as the Nationals surged ahead 3-1 after 40 minutes and snowed the visitors under in the third frame.

Keon sparks Leafs' 5-2 sweep over Oakland

OAKLAND (CP) — seconds of play. Toronto Maple Leafs scored three goals in the second period and then played defensive hockey the rest of the way to whip Oakland Seals 5-2 in a National Hockey League game Tuesday night.

Oakland's Doug Roberts scored for the West Division from Ron Ellis and Jim McKenny added another one about 12 minutes later with help from Norm Ullman.

Ted Hampston scored his first goal of the season for Oakland at 11:19. Bill Hicke assisted.

The victory moved Toronto to within two points of the fourthplace Montreal Canadiens

FIRST FEMALE GOALIE — Billed as the first semi-professional female hockey player in America, 18-year-old goalie Karen Koch says she's not interested in boys, just hockey. Karen, a freshman coed at Northern Michigan University, has already beat out

NHL franchise price too steep for some

NEW YORK (AP) — The $6,000,000 price tags which the National Hockey League has attached to its next two expansion franchises get their first real test Dec. 1 when groups planning to bid for the new clubs must make formal applications and down payments.

There are indications that the numbers may be a bit too steep for many of the groups originally interested.

In Vancouver, Cyrus McLean, president of the Western Hockey League Canucks, said Monday the NHL's price had scared off five groups interested in buying his team and entering the franchise bidding derby.

Since the $6,000,000 price was announced, McLean said, the only group to show any interest in entering the bidding has been the Medicor Investment Corp. of Minneapolis and no talks have been held with Medicor since early last week.

"All they did was check our status," said McLean. "We never had anything settled. We don't expect to hear from them too soon, because they're busy doing other things."

Groups in Baltimore and Cleveland have announced that they were stepping out of the bidding because of the steep price.

'INVITES DISASTER'
 Zanyvl Krieger, chairman of the board of the American Hockey League Baltimore Clippers, said the franchise price "would invite financial disaster," and removed the Clippers from bidding competition last week.

Nick Mileti, owner of the AHL Cleveland Barons, also bowed out last week, saying the quality of players available would not justify the price.

Buffalo's Knox Brothers, Seymour and Northrup, are expected to make a bid for that city despite the price.

The NHL added six new teams three years ago with the franchise price set at $2,000,000 each.

League president Clarence Campbell said in a telephone interview Monday night in Montreal that he thought he $6,000,000 for the 1971 expansions was not too high and the $2,000,000 paid in 1966 "was much too low," considering the success of at least four of the six West Division clubs.

FRANCHISE PROSPERS
 Nowhere has major league hockey caught on as well as in St. Louis where the Sidney Salomen family has built a flourishing franchise.

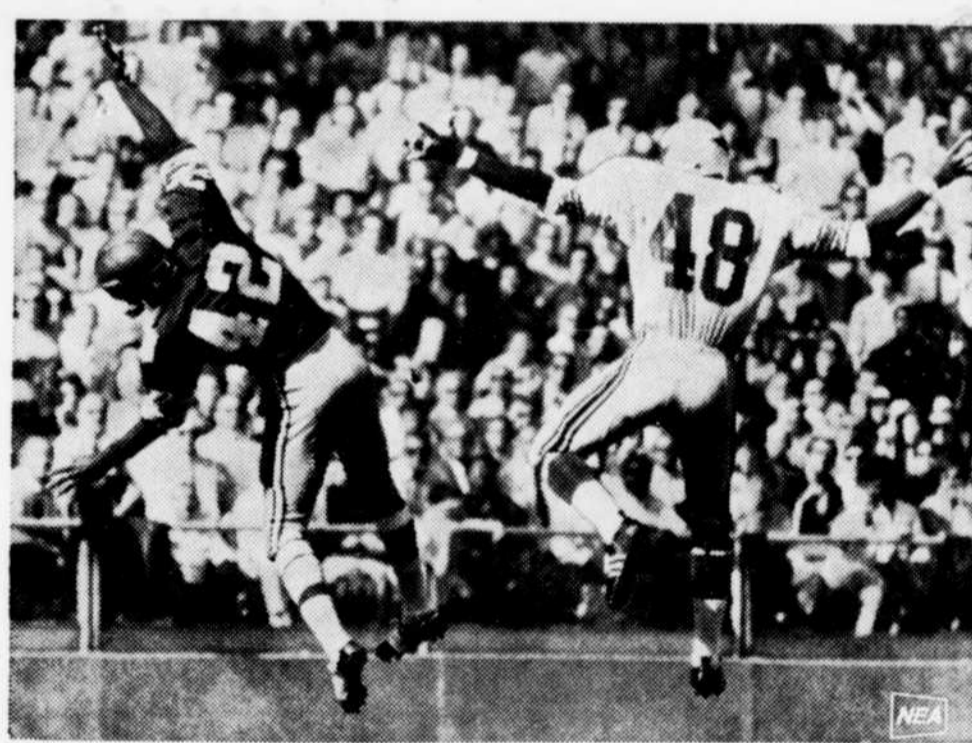

"We've got 13,000 season subscribers," said Gus Kyle, a former NHL defenceman who serves as the Blues' director of sales. "And there's a waiting list of about 1,100 for season tickets."

The Blues have averaged more than 16,000 fans a game in their first five home games this season and had 10 sellouts last year when they won the NHL's West Division title and reached the Stanley Cup finals for the second straight season.

"Selling tickets," said Kyle, "is a breeze." The success of the Blues on the ice, of course, has helped the club's box office. Hockey games in St. Louis have become social events much as they have been for years in Montreal and Toronto.

"There is a personal involvement by our owners," Kyle said. "The Salomons want things done right. Off the ice and on it."

The enormous success of the Blues is the bait prospective franchise bidders are sniffing on that expensive NHL hook. The question is whether that hook is simply too expensive.

NO, WASHINGTON'S Charley Taylor (42) and St. Louis' Bob Atkins (48) are not testing the effects of weightlessness for a future space flight. They were after the same pass—and missed.

Jackson, Reed nominated outstanding players

MONTREAL (CP) — The field was cut to five Tuesday in the balloting to choose the top football players in Canada in three categories.

Nominators, Canadian Football League writers and broadcasters voting on behalf of the sponsoring distillery, cut the field from 27 with the naming of three candidates from the Western Conference and two from the East.

It was Ottawa all the way in the East, with quarterback Russ Jackson nominated as outstanding player and Canadian player of the year. The nomination as lineman of the year went to Riders' Billy Joe Booth, all-star defensive end in his eighth year with the club.

In the West, it was fullback George Reed, Saskatchewan Roughriders, for outstanding player; flanker Jim Young, British Columbia Lions, as Canadian player of the year, and defensive tackle John Lagrone, Edmonton Eskimos, for lineman of the year.

The final ballot, which goes to nominators today, will be returned to a trust company. All five finalists will be brought here for Grey Cup week.

The awards will be presented Nov. 28 at 5 p.m. EST in an "academy awards" type of ceremony.

B.C. Lions gave up defensive end Dick Fouts and halfback Bill Symons to Toronto for the Canadian rights to Young.

Symons turned out to be Canada's outstanding player last season.

Lagrone was named outstanding WFC lineman in 1967, his rookie year, and was the lone Eskimo picked to the 1968 all-star team selected by the Football Reporters of Canada.

Hull, Black Hawks confer -but no decision yet

CHICAGO (AP) — Bobby Hull and Chicago Black Hawks were in conference Tuesday night but no decision was expected immediately in the squabble between the high scoring left winger and the National Hockey League club.

Hull, who scored a record 58 goals for the Hawks last season, announced his retirement before the present season started because of a contract hookup.

Although Hull last year signed a four-year contract at an annual $100,000, the Golden Jet has complained the Hawks have not lived up to certain agreements outside the legal pact.

Hull conferred with his counsel, Joseph Crowley, Tuesday morning and later in the day met with legal representatives of the Black Hawks.

Final details were expected to be ironed out but not until later in the week, said an unidentified source.

Hull has missed the Hawks' first nine games during which they have won two, lost six and tied one. The Hawks are home against New York Rangers Wednesday night but Hull is not expected to play even if the dispute is settled.

Sport briefs

EDMONTON (CP) — The Journal says Neill Armstrong, head coach of the Edmonton Eskimos, probably will leave the Western Football Conference club to become athletic director at Oklahoma State University.

The newspaper says Armstrong, coach for six years, left Tuesday for interviews at the university, where he formerly played and was an assistant football coach.

Eskimos were eliminated Sunday from the WFC playoffs in a 27-25 loss to first-place Saskatchewan Roughriders. A tie would have put the Eskimos alone in third place, the final playoff position.

They ended in a third-place tie with British Columbia Lions, who got the playoff birth on the basis of two victories over Edmonton in three season encounters.

NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran centre Orland Kurtenbach, who underwent spinal fusion surgery last year and still is rounding back into shape, was assigned Tuesday by New York Rangers to their Buffalo farm club of the American Hockey League.

Kurtenbach, 33, in his 10th season in the National Hockey League, had played in only eight games this season without a point after playing in only the first two games last season.
