Search is on for hot new filmmakers

National Screen Institute-Canada's annual search for hot, emerging filmmakers from across Canada is underway. Writer-producer-director teams have until Nov.19 to send in their entry for the Drama Prize 2000 professional development program. Six teams will be chosen from across Canada to receive up to $30,000 in training experience, $6,000 cash and $6,000 in services to make a short film - and a name for themselves.

Selected teams will be announced at the 2000 Local Heroes Festival, where the films made through the Drama Prize '99 will receive their world premiere. Last year, 106 applications were received from across Canada - a 30 per cent increase over the year prior.

WHAT IS DRAMA PRIZE 2000?

Drama Prize 2000 is a professional development program for emerging film writers, producers and directors who want to increase their skills, give their careers a boost, and make a name for themselves.

Drama Prize 2000 participants will receive:

- * Intensive, hands-on training with Canada's top filmmakers in workshops and other hands-on experiences.

- * Up to $30,000 in training experience, $6,000 cash and $6,000 in services to make a short film.

- * The chance to have an experienced filmmaker act as their mentor.

- * A premiere at NSI-Canada's prestigious 2001 Local Heroes Festival, where they will have a chance to meet and make contacts with leading independent filmmakers from across Canada and around the world.

- * Ongoing, online support through our new Online Producers Workshop at www.screentradecanada.com

HOW TO APPLY?

The deadline to apply for Drama Prize 2000 is Nov. 19, 1999. Full details and applications are available at www.nsi-canada.ca/dramaprize or by calling (800) 952-9307.

NSI-Canada's Drama Prize program is supported by a number of public and private-sector investors who recognize the incredible training opportunity the program offers.

Movies

Baseball was popular actors first career choice

Instead Kevin Costner is making baseball movies

By Louis B. Hobson
SUN MEDIA
NEW YORK

Growing up in Compton, a working-class community in California, Kevin Costner dreamed of becoming a baseball player. There was just one problem.

Until he was in his 20s, Costner was only 5ft 2 inches tall.

"Every coach I had said I was too small to be a professional athlete but I never gave up trying," recalls Costner who was named the top football, baseball and basketball star in his school.

After high school, Costner earned a degree in business and worked for just under a year in a marketing job. Around the time he sprouted to 6ft 1 inches at university, Costner began acting in amateur plays.

He also married his college sweetheart Cindy Silva and, with her encouragement, actively pursued a career in film. The rest is history.

In the 17 years since he made his first film, Costner has become one of the most powerful and popular actors of his generation. Even if just vicariously, Costner has fulfilled his dream of becoming a baseball player. Not once but three times. This Friday, Costner adds For Love of the Game to Bull Durham and Field of Dreams which still rank as two of his biggest screen successes. Bull Durham turned Costner into a major sex symbol while Field of Dreams imbued him with mythic qualities turning him into a icon of Americana which he cemented with his crowning achievement Dances With Wolves.

In For Love of the Game, Costner plays Billy Chapel, an aging star pitcher whose professional and personal life is crumbling at the same time he is poised to pitch a perfect game.

"Baseball pictures have been good to me but that's not the main reason I wanted to do For Love of the Game. I saw it as a relationship movie. It's as much the story of a man and a woman as it is about baseball," Kelly Preston plays the journalist who wins Billy Chapel's heart only to break it in an attempt to salvage her own life and career.

After the greatest day of his professional career, Billy Chapel sits alone in his hotel room crying.

"I have so much in my life but I don't have a partner so I don't feel my life is complete."

Costner is not talking about companionship. He hardly lacks for that. Even when he was married he was a notorious womanizer and these past six years he has had an endless string of affairs.

His earlier dalliances took their toll on his marriage. After 16 years and three children, Costner and Silva divorced in 1994. "I never asked or expected the press to ignore my divorce. There are some very mean people in the press who have savaged me while leaving other celebrities alone for doing exactly the same things.

"I have never asked God to fight my fights. I just want him to make the playing field fair and often it hasn't been. 'There have been so many vicious things written about me and my films,' reflects Costner.

"I honestly believe that history will bear me out. These are movies that will stand the test of time. My movies are like my children, I love them all equally." That includes his most maligned child Waterworld.

"Not once when certain writers are taking a strip off Waterworld do they bother to mention that it ended up grossing $500-million US worldwide. That hardly qualifies it for an epic disaster.

"I've become something of a whipping boy for the press but none of these people ever whips me to my face and that's what hurts the most." To show just how much negative press Costner receives at the expense of the whole truth, he cites stories about the perks he received while filming For Love of the Game.

"There were all these stories that I had trainers, nutritionists and sports masseurs. It's all true but they were all essential to get me and keep me in shape for this film.

"I'm almost 45 years old. I do most of my own pitching in the movie and that took an enormous toll on my arm and my body.

'My movies are like my children, I love them all equally' - Costner

"I had just come out of knee surgery the week before we started filming and I had put on extra weight. I owed it to the movie to get into shape." Costner insists he couldn't pay for these professionals out of his own pocket.

"I'd already given up my salary to get this movie made which means I was out-of-pocket quite a bit."

Just weeks before For Love of the Game was scheduled to begin filming, Universal Pictures balked at the $70-million budget.

"They said that baseball movies don't perform well in foreign markets so I said I'd forfeit my ($20-million) salary and they agreed to let us go ahead," explains Costner.

"That was never part of the stories about my star treatment on the film." According to director Sam Raimi and producer Arnyan Bernstein Costner needed his trainers and masseur.

"After a day's shooting, you could see how much pain Kevin was in because he insisted on doing all his own pitching, catching and running," recalls Bernstein.

"Eventually we had to schedule shooting so that Kevin never had to pitch two days in a row and the moment he was off camera he was either icing his arm or doing cooling down exercises."

Raimi notes that Costner insisted on scenes being filmed showing his character experiencing the same kind of physical pain the actor endured. "Kevin is an actor void of vanity and that's rare in this business. He's aging and he's not afraid to show it. That's a great deal of his appeal."

For his part Costner feels that "when you are who you are, people like you. People know that I'm not nipped and tucked." Even if For Love of the Game isn't as huge a hit as Bull Durham and Field of Dreams, Costner won't be disappointed.

"In the game of life, sometimes you score and sometimes you strike out but none of that matters. It's how you played the game that matters and I gave my all to For Love of the Game."

Couple shares passion for painting

TANYA TKACH/CORRESPONDENT

By Tanya Tkach
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
KNOWLTON

A love of painting brought Ruth and John Quinlan together and they are co-exhibiting for the first time at the Brome County Historical Society Museum. They are dedicated to their passions for each other and their art.

The setting of their initial meeting reads like a Harlequin romance.

In 1992, Ruth, who had been widowed for five years, was touring Mexico after completing a trek in Nepal. She traveled to San Miguel to study art.

"I started painting while doing a Masters Degree in English Literature at Sonoma and Berkeley Universities and was writing a novel for my thesis," said Ruth.

She became hopelessly lost on her way to San Miguel and asked John for directions to the art institute in San Miguel d'Allende; John was sitting by the roadside painting a group of Mexican women doing their laundry.

"I thought she was pretty attractive, but felt I had to keep my focus and so gave her directions while I continued painting," said John, who had recently retired from a government position in Human Resources in Ottawa in order to live and study painting in San Miguel.

During Ruth's four-month sojourn in San Miguel, their love for each other blossomed gradually through frequent contact at vernissages, art shows and symposiums.

"It was an emerging love of her, but yes, also the love of painting," said John.

"When you fall in love with painting, it's a passion," Ruth said. "I've had some good instruction from Californian painters and teachers, taken workshops at the Fechin Institute in Taos, New Mexico, with David Leffel and Sherrie McGraw, and also with Michael Lynch and Clyde Aspevig."

"It's a movement in the U.S. where artists do these workshops all over the country," added Ruth, whose paintings hang in private collections in France, Washington, California and Knowlton.

The beauty of visits to Nepal and Mexico touched Ruth deeply, inspiring her to write poetry.

"Painting and writing work hand-in-hand," said Ruth, who now does morning writing sessions followed by painting in the afternoon with John and which often conclude with dancing in the evening.

After four months, John decided he'd better marry this lady. "To tie her down," rather than follow her from California (where some of her children live) to France (to visit her son and grandchild) to Nepal and Mexico.

They tied the knot on New Year's Eve 1993 in a little town on the Ottawa River named L'Original, near Hawkesbury, Ontario, to avoid the 12-month waiting list for a marriage in Ottawa.

"We went off by ourselves to a French justice of the peace in L'Original casually dressed in ski sweaters, I was wearing a pair of swamp boots. One of my friends from the Treasury Board in Ottawa who stood up for me showed up in proper dress for a marriage, he's very British, and gave me royal hell for being dressed in an Irish ski sweater," said John, who had planned to celebrate his new wife with friends and champagne at a cottage in the Gatineau region that evening.

"Ruth said that it was a very romantic place and that she cried through the ceremony. Since both have a love of mountains and water, they decided to settle in John's neck of the woods."

"We were debating whether to settle in Canada or the U.S. and a lot of economic factors came into play - the dollar and the Medicare system. I remembered this area as a teenager, my aunt lived in Foster and I had a cottage on Lake Selby. I used to visit the Timmins' Farm," added John, who persuaded Ruth to start house hunting in 1994.

They say they have met many wonderful artists - Gordon Ladd, Mary Martin, Liz Davidson and John Ballantyne - who have helped them tremendously.

John, who is known for his cartoon caricatures while studying at McGill and St. Francis Xavier Universities and at the Montreal Museum of Fine Art under Gerry Tondino, is finally combining his drawing and painting skills.

His recent portrait of the former Prime Minister hangs in the University Gallery of Nova Scotia.

"I knew that I could draw and painting is opening up a new world - a world of colour and colour harmony," he said.

Their participation in Bill Hunt's workshop in Puntney, Vermont, has inspired both artists to work from their imagination, which has resulted in the current joint exhibition featuring Ruth's series of sacred spaces and landscapes combined with John's figures and vignettes of remembered places.

"This vernissage celebrates our happiness and our first year anniversary of living in the Townships," said John.

"A lot of very interesting people live around here and discovering the whole area has been a joy," Ruth added.

Stratford 2000: A season of millennial proportions

Staff

From ancient Greek tragedy to the world premiere of a new Canadian work, the Stratford Festival playbill for 2000 spans nearly 2,500 years of theatrical repertoire.

A season "fit for the dawn of a new millennium" was announced by Stratford Festival artistic director Richard Monette last week.

"The 2000 season celebrates some of the greatest accomplishments of the western canon in the past millennium - and beyond," said Monette at a news conference. "In the 24 centuries since Euripides wrote Medea in 431 BC, the journey of humankind has taken us from the highest peaks of creation, artistry and discovery to the dark abysses of war, intolerance and genocide; and the dramas that have come down to us through the ages have reflected all the turmoil and excitement of that wide-ranging journey."

The 11 productions in the 48th season will play in repertory in the Festival's three theatres: The Festival Theatre, the Avon Theatre and the Tom Patterson Theatre.

The season will officially open on May 29 with a production of William Shakespeare's Hamlet. Last mounted at the Stratford Festival in 1994, "Hamlet is arguably the world's greatest play," said Monette, "and I was very fortunate to get Paul Gross (of TV's Due South) to play the title role. He's a tremendous theatrical talent."

Oscar Wilde's satirical examination of English society, The Importance of Being Earnest takes the place of the previously announced production of The Ruling Class.

"I selected Earnest in honour of the 100th anniversary of Oscar Wilde's passing in 1900," Monette said, "and we have discovered a four-act version of the play which, to our knowledge, has never before been performed professionally in North America."

Elizabeth Rex, a new play commissioned by the Festival, was written by acclaimed Canadian author Timothy Findley with Paul Thompson. Set in 1601 during the Earl of Essex's trial for his unsuccessful revolt against Queen Elizabeth, the play will have its world premiere at Stratford. It depicts the Queen spending a long night before the Earl's execution with William Shakespeare and his troupe of actors.

The Three Musketeers, Alexandre Dumas's swashbuckling tale, is also on the bill.

"This is our 'family experience' costume drama," said Monette. "And it continues the series of adaptations from novels we've done lately: Pride and Prejudice, Dracula, Little Women and The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie, to mention a few. These adaptations are a way of introducing young people to theatrical narrative that has some substance and yet is very accessible to them."

Stratford Festival artistic director Richard Monette... plays reflect 'turmoil and excitement' of 24 centuries.

Another family show is the well-loved musical Fiddler on the Roof, with book by Joseph Stein, lyrics by Sheldon Harnick and music by Jerry Bock.

"Based on stories by Sholom Aleichem, Fiddler on the Roof follows in the style of 'book' musicals we've been doing recently: Musicals based on literary sources, often with a darker undercurrent: Camelot, Man of La Mancha and West Side Story," said Monette. "It's a wonderful musical, one of the most poignant and moving ever written."

As You Like It, one of Shakespeare's best-loved romantic comedies, will be mounted at the Avon Theatre for the first time.

"Of all Shakespeare's comedies," Monette said, "this is the one that most overtly depicts women as the educating, civilizing force of male emotion. Rosalind is the longest female role in the canon. She is also one of the most popular of all Shakespeare's heroines and proof that he anticipated the feminist movement by nearly 300 years."

Set in Nazi-occupied Amsterdam during the second world war, The Diary of Anne Frank re-enacts the two years Anne Frank and her family spent hiding from the Germans in a cramped attic.

"When I was looking at the millennium's events, I wanted war and the Holocaust, a defining event of our century, to be represented in the playbill," said Monette. "This is a great anti-war play, without dealing with direct political issues. In this new adaptation, which was a hit on Broadway, Wendy Kesselman incorporates the recently discovered unpublished portions of Anne's diary."

"The theme of war and atrocity which has been so prevalent in recent times was also why I chose Titus Andronicus, Shakespeare's first Roman play and his first tragedy," said Monette.

Titus is Rome's most honoured general, who returns from wars against the Goths with their queen, Tamora, as prisoner. When he sacrifices her eldest son, he incurs her desperate wrath. Titus and his family suffer rape, mutilation and murder until at last Titus has his own revenge.

Rounding out the bill are Molière's famous high-spirited comedy Tartuffe, about a religious hypocrite who dupes a religious zealot and plots the downfall of his whole family; Medea, telling the tale of the legendary sorceress of Greek tragedy, a woman whose passion leads her unchecked into violence; and Collected Stories, by Donald Margulies and starring three-time Tony Award-winning actor Uta Hagen, a drama about the relationship between an accomplished writer and a gifted graduate student.

Awaiting Redemption is upbeat and reflective

George Strait is also a fan of Jim Lauderdale

Here are the albums I have picked for you this week:

HAL KETCHUM: Awaiting Redemption (Curb)

Here's good news for Hal Ketchum's fans. Awaiting Redemption has finally been released from the label's warehouse after almost two years. It is good because it's either a sign that country music is broadening or that nothing could keep a good artist down.

Ketchum wrote this album in the midst of a divorce and recorded it in 1997. Awaiting Redemption could have been a dark album filled with despair. Instead, it is happy, reflective and especially redemptive.

The key to Ketchum's success as a songwriter is that he gets to the point and stays on target. Some of the songs included here just might be some of his strongest material to date.

Even though the production is not as slick as on previous recordings, the quality of the material makes up for it. The blues-gospel title track is a gem, with the artist providing one of his most forceful vocals to date. He is very convincing through his quivering, sometimes shouted vocals.

Three of the songs here were features on his 1998 I Saw The Light album: "Love Me, Love Me Not," "The Unforgiven" and "Long Way Down." Some newer tracks such as the sure hit "Days of Wonder," are very impressive.

There's also "Slow Down Sunset," with a Johnny Cash-backbeat and from the Celtic-folk "Turn of the Wheel" to "Long Way Down," a Chuck Berry-reminder, and the bluesy feel of the slow, "When Blue Was Just a Colour."

Awaiting Redemption was not recorded for commercial reasons but rather for personal reasons. It had to be done, it had to be said.

JIM LAUDERDALE: Onward Through It All (RCA/BMG)

Did you know that Jim Lauderdale happens to be George Strait's favorite songwriter (Strait has cut 10 of his tunes)? This is quite a compliment coming from the Frank Sinatra of Country Music!

Although Lauderdale may be best known as a writer, this new album, a solid set of 16 songs, dramatically displays his range and demonstrates his potent singing ability. The album offers many potential singles and there's something for everyone. "Calico," has a haunting chorus, while the title song is a refreshingly delicate ode to a special woman.

Lauderdale sings, "Missing a lonely girl lost in a lonely world/ She is magnificent and doesn't even know it." He makes it sound so real that if you close your eyes, you can see that girl.

Country to the core, "Please Be San Antone" was co-written with Emily Erwin of the Dixie Chicks. Lauderdale pitched the love plea to the Chicks, but it didn't work so he found a good place for the Chicks' reject on this album.

"We Really Shouldn't Be Doing This" will sound familiar since George Strait took it Top 5 last year. But Lauderdale's forceful version is very different from the light Strait treatment.

Ashley Cleveland lends her voice to one of the highlights, "What I Want You To Say," co-written with Jamie Hartford. The song's tender lyrics and soaring production are evidence of one of Lauderdale's most passionate performances.

"The One That Didn't Get Away" is a powerful love number, even if it was meant as a tribute to a guitar. Reminiscent of the best of Leonard Cohen, "Understanding Everything" is a slow, almost mystical poem.

Lauderdale teamed with Kim Richey to co-write "It's Just Like You." Steel guitar being Lauderdale's favorite instrument, there's plenty to bring "Almost Next To Nothing" to life with a pulsating rhythm.

The whole album proves that the artist has honed his craft very well. The North Carolina native has been playing gigs in New York, Los Angeles and now Nashville. The different styles blend to perfection to offer fans a beautiful and dynamic package.

Both of the above albums are country music with an edge more than what people today call New Country. But they are both very distinctive.

EDDY RAVEN: Live at Billy Bob's Texas (Smith Music Group)

Recorded at the world's largest honky-tonk, the album brilliantly captures Eddy Raven's live show.

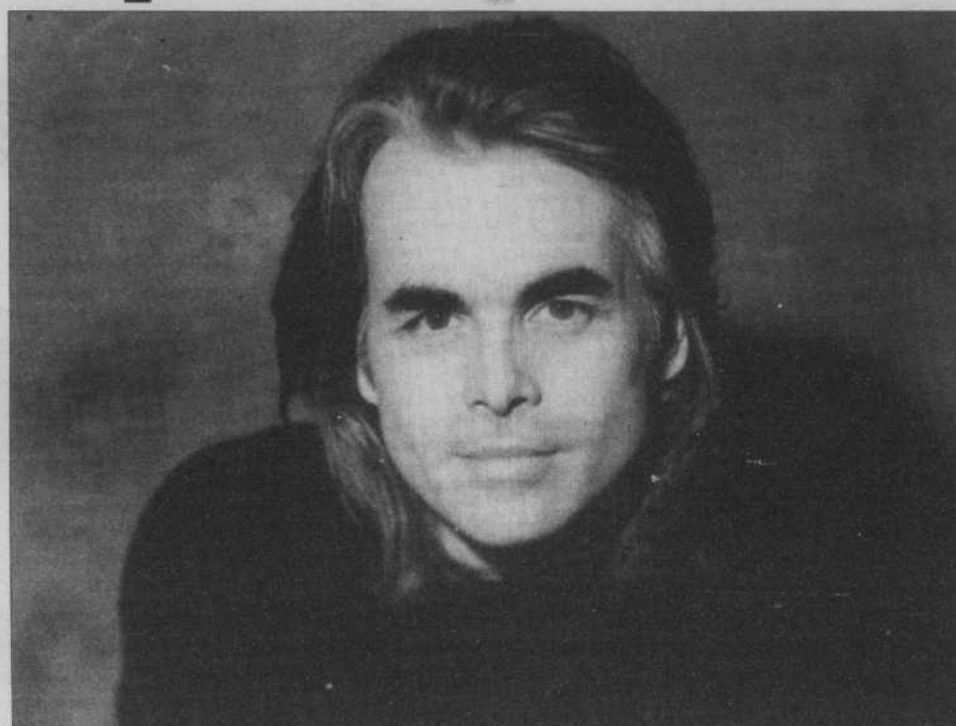

He's always been one top-notch songwriter who knows how to both write and deliver a country song. This album featuring his own hits as well as tunes he penned for others, comes as a feast. By the time it's over, it has proved very satisfying.

The Lafayette, La., native offers some Cajun-flavoured songs with "Joe Knows How To Live," "I Got Mexico" and "Bayou Boys." Then he switches to a more Caribbean style with "Shine, Shine, Shine," "Operator, Operator" and "Island." In "In a Letter To You," "Sometimes a Lady" and "I Wanna Hear It From You," he sounds more like Elvis than a bayou boy. Raven combines "I Should've Called"

Despite a recent divorce, Hal Ketchum is remaining upbeat and staying focussed.

with Who Do You Know In California" in medley form and he does a Oak Ridge Boys' number with "Thank God for Kids."

This is an enjoyable journey through Raven's career that has produced 18 Top 10 hits and 6 No.1's. You'll enjoy this live recording to the fullest. It's always nice to hear someone with such distinctive talent.

Have a great week and keep that country state of mind!

Beginning next week, watch for Country Connection in its new slot in Wednesday's Record.

Brandt Names

TVDATA

Alberta's Paul Brandt, who is nominated in five categories, hosts this year's Canadian Country Music Awards telecast Monday on CBC Television. The awards show previously aired on CTV, and with its new network comes a new site as well: Ottawa's fan-friendly Civic Centre.

According to Canadian Country Music Association President Tom Tompkins, the association couldn't come to terms with CTV on a new contract this summer. CBC was happy to take over the program, which attracts as many as 1.6 million viewers annually.

Tompkins says the deal-clincher was CBC's commitment to promote the show. "It was always a great lack, and we could never get that commitment out of CTV," he explains.

The evening's host is Alberta's Paul Brandt (pictured), who is up for five awards this year, including best male singer. He's also slated to perform, along with fellow nominees Clark, Prairie Oyster, Julian Austin and the Wilkinsons.

Wright also will be back, Watt says. "I think Michelle is the only performer who has, in fact, sung a song on each of the 12 shows. She's obviously a fan favorite whose music is terrific and is very accessible."

For the first time, the awards show will be held in an arena instead of a theater. The two-hour show will be broadcast from the fan-friendly Civic Centre in Ottawa. With its new location and network, and the solid state of Canadian country music, Watt is upbeat about the show, saying "I'm looking forward to a very raucous, loud and exciting time in the arena."

Emmys Laugh It Up

TVDATA

Television is so pervasive that it sometimes seems as if it has been around forever. Yet it has only been 55 years, notes Don Mischer, executive producer of The 51st Primetime Emmy Awards, airing Sunday, Sept. 12, on Fox. "But it has dealt with everything in the millennium, so we will go back and see how television has treated history," he says.

The result will be a montage of comedy clips, from Sid Caesar and Johnny Carson sketches to Saturday Night Live.

This year's show, hosted by Jenna Elfman and David Hyde Pierce, will also look toward the future of television in the age of cyberspace, Mischer says.

While performers are trying to come up with pithy acceptance speeches or deciding which designer gown to sashay down the aisle in, Mischer spends his time worrying. He worries about whether an earthquake will jolt the Los Angeles Shrine Auditorium. (Firefighters are on standby to evacuate the hall should the Richter scale rock.) He worries about losing power. (There are emergency generators, but that would severely curtail the show.)

"Because it is live, you never really know what will happen," he says. "It depends on the exuberance and spontaneous moments."

There are some tough races this year, particularly in the categories of best actress in a comedy series and best actor in a dramatic series. Vying for the Emmy in the former category are Elfman, Dharma & Greg; Calista Flockhart, Ally McBeal; Patricia Heaton, Everybody Loves Raymond; Helen Hunt, Mad About You; and Sarah Jessica Parker, Sex and the City. Competitors in the latter field are Dennis Franz and Jimmy Smits, NYPD Blue (pictured); James Gandolfini, The Sopranos; Dylan McDermott, The Practice; and Sam Waterston, Law & Order.

Watership Down - The Movie

TVDATA

The rabbits of Watership Down are on the move again. A generation ago, Hazel, Fiver, Bigwig et al. turned their cottontails on their threatened warren and set off over hill and dale in Richard Adams' now-classic piece of fantasy literature. This time their travels take them much further: from England to Canada to Southeast Asia and back again. That's the production route of the new 26-part animated series Watership Down, which premieres Thursday, Sept. 16, on YTV. The idea was to make a series that would appeal to children, but the book and the film had a strong dark streak that made them too intense for a very young audience. Producer Beth Stevenson was loath to undermine the book's integrity. Fortunately, the writers found just the right balance, she says. "The serial aspect of (the series) has allowed us to build in some story arcs. ... It's not like some of the things (children) are used to watching today. It's very epic and dramatic." The new animation is more colorful than that of the movie, and the characters are more Disneylike, but the series retains some of the feel of the original, even introducing bits of the rabbits' unique vocabulary and elaborate mythology.

New York guitarist-composer Mordy Ferber is "a powerful contemporary guitarist with an attitude, energy and pluck all his own. And with a batch of riveting originals and plenty of zing per string, Ferber is clearly his own man," says Jazz times. Ferber has performed and recorded with jazz greats like Michael Brecker, Jack DeJohnette, Eddie Gomez, Peter Erskine and Nana Vasconcelos. This Israeli-born sensation displays readily apparent technical fortitude and more importantly a confident sense of when and how to flex his talents. Mordy has been touring the world in places like Porgy and Bess in Vienna, Boston Globe Jazz Festival, Jerusalem Amphitheatre Israel, Montreal and Greece. Ferber brings his attitude and energy to Les Beaux Dimanches, 256 Dufferin Street in Sherbrooke on Wednesday, Sept. 15, accompanied by sidemen Andre Leroux on saxophone, Artur Kell on bass and Magella Cormier on drums. Call 562-9328 for information and reservations.
