Petroleum prices will increase

OTTAWA (CP) — A new petroleum pricing program announced Tuesday will raise the prices of everything from gasoline and heating oil to plastic garbage bags, fertilizer and food.

Gasoline and heating oil will increase by four cents a gallon Sept. 1 and a further 2 1/2 cents March 1 under new prices unveiled in the Commons by Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie.

The price of natural gas also will rise 15.5 cents a thousand cubic feet July 1 and by a further 10 cents Jan. 1, Mr. Gillespie told the Commons.

It will raise the annual cost of heating a home with oil by $48 a year and with gas by an additional $40, based on a national average calculated by the department of energy.

The increases result from a decision to boost the current $8 a barrel domestic crude oil price by $1.05 July 1 and a further 70 cents Jan. 1. But the increases will not be passed on to consumers until 60 days after those dates, allowing time to use up oil company stocks of lower priced products.

EFFECT WIDESPREAD
 Aside from the immediate impact on gasoline and heating fuel prices, the increases will be reflected later in just about anything a consumer buys since it affects the cost of all manufacturing and transportation.

Ottawa says the increases are necessary to provide the oil industry with cash to fund additional exploration for new supplies, especially in the north.

But the announcement drew fire reaction from the opposition in the Commons, who described it as both arbitrary and unjustified with no guarantee if it will lead to more exploration.

Beryl Plumtree, vice-chairman of the federal anti-inflation board, said in Fredericton that the price increase was necessary, but it will lead to more inflation problems in the country.

Ottawa officials of the board declined comment on the increase which amounts to 22 per cent in six months. Wages and salaries are being held to between eight and 12 per cent in the first year of the anti-inflation program.

INCREASE DIVIDED
 For every $1 increase in price, the provinces get roughly 44 cents, Ottawa three cents and the companies the remaining 53 cents—if they invest half the money in exploration. If they don't reinvest, Ottawa's share could rise to as much as 27 cents.

Mr. Gillespie told the Commons he still hopes to get agreement on the prices from the producing provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia. But he made it clear if no agreement is possible Ottawa will move under the price-fixing powers of legislation passed last year to unilaterally set the increase.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, who had been looking for a boost of $2 a barrel, said in Edmonton he is willing to go along with the staged increases in domestic price, but only if the price of natural gas exported to the U.S. is increased to $2 a thousand cubic feet from $1.60 by the end of the year.

Mr. Gillespie said the export price will be rising, but the amount yet been decided. The federal cabinet is considering the increase and discussing the issue with U.S. government representatives.

Work slowdown escalates

Fewer policemen on beat today

SHERBROOKE — The work slowdown campaign initiated yesterday by the city's 130 policemen who have been without a contract for six months, escalated today as only 13 percent of the officers reported for duty for each shift.

Mayor Jacques O'Bready, meanwhile, reiterated his administration's position not to meet the demand until negotiations with the employees of other municipal services progress further and results become available.

By ROBERT MACPIERSON
 (Record Reporter)

All police vehicles, both marked and unmarked, were in use, except for two cruisers which were being repaired.

Cruisers and motorcycles on the streets had their flashers operating, a gesture intended to attract the public's attention to the situation.

The slowdown began yesterday at midnight, after officers at a general Association meeting voted 90 percent in favour of the pressure tactic.

It involves having only a reduced percentage of men reporting for duty in each eight-hour shift, with that percentage declining each day the city does not meet the demands. Usually, about 30 to 40 percent of the force is manning a given shift.

The decline will not mean an eventual total walkout, however, Mr. Provencher — who was in uniform and working yesterday — said rather the decline will stop at a point where it is felt that adequate services can be maintained. He would not elaborate on what this point would be. (By the province's Labour Code, policemen are prohibited from taking strike action.)

A refusal to work overtime and to respond to all but emergency calls are also part of the slowdown tactics.

The collective agreements between the city and most of its 1100 employees — including policemen — expired on December 31, 1975. Since then, negotiations have been held at different tables for blue collar, white collar, Sherbrooke Hydro, fire department and police (See Police slowdown on Page 3)

And even fewer will be on the beat tomorrow unless City Hall meets their demand to either support or reject a conciliation report presented April 30, Sherbrooke Police Association president Paul-Andre Provencher said yesterday.

There were no serious incidents reported yesterday when 16 per cent of regular on-duty officers worked. A general survey of the situation by Record reporters found few abuses of the law by motorists, and traffic, although heavy, was not seriously disrupted.

Orion deal collapses

OTTAWA (CP) — Government plans to acquire 18 Orion patrol planes from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. for more than $1 billion collapsed Tuesday night after months of controversy for lack of hard cash to finance the project.

The deal, years in the making, fell apart when the government reversed itself and decided not to provide the cash Lockheed had failed to borrow from Canadian chartered banks.

Canada now is liable only for the $16 million already spent on special studies.

The money would have been used to get production going on the Orion anti-submarine aircraft, specially-built to replace the aging Arguses, due to go out of service at the end of the decade.

Prime Minister Trudeau apparently brought about the collapse to heal a cabinet split over the deal.

Final word of the death of the project came Tuesday night from Bill Wilson, vice-president of Lockheed, who said in an interview that Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer would give the company no more time to attempt to keep the project alive.

sight are either more expensive or inadequate.

The death of the plan also is a blow for the Canadian aero and communications industry, which stood to make at least $500 million as a result of the contract.

Just when the company and government were about to sign a contract in January it was discovered that Lockheed could not finance the early stages of the project. The government had made clear from the start it could not make major payments for the first three years of the contract and that Lockheed would have to borrow money, with the government paying the interest.

BANKS BACK OUT
 Lockheed and Canadian banks talked for months in an attempt to reach a loan agreement but the banks never got the assurances they wanted from the financially-troubled company, which owes $600 million to a score of U.S. banks.

It was clear Monday that the banks would not come through for Lockheed. The cabinet decided the government should pay for the project out of regular appropriations.

But the cabinet was split and on Tuesday Mr. Trudeau refused to accept the decision.

Talking with reporters Mr. Trudeau made clear if Lockheed could not find financing the deal was off, that Canada was not going to increase capital spending at a time when it was in the midst of a program of spending restraint and that the government had exhausted attempts to find financing.

Allan McKinnon (Victoria), Progressive Conservative defence critic, said Tuesday night that "it looks like the government played a joke on Mr. Richardson and sent him out to buy a plane without any money."

He said the cabinet let Mr. Richardson down and the minister had made a fool of himself in front of NATO allies and should resign.

Sees support for general strike

BLOW TO COMPANY
 The government decision is a bitter blow for the trouble-plagued manufacturer, which was looking forward to its first major contract since it was hit by bribery and commission more than a year ago.

It was an even harder blow for Defence Minister James Richardson and armed forces chiefs who had been banking on the Orion to provide for Canada's coastal patrol, northern sovereignty patrol, and NATO anti-submarine commitments starting in 1978.

Defence officials said Tuesday night the only other alternatives to the Orion in QUEBEC (CP) — If Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) leaders issue a general strike call "the support will be there," congress leader Joe Morris said Tuesday.

He was commenting on Labor Minister John Munro's statements in Ottawa that average workers agree with the anti-inflation program because they know it is only a temporary measure. Mr. Munro also said the CLC cannot muster enough support to hold a general strike.

On Monday, an overwhelming majority of more than 2,400 delegates to the CLC national convention backed a resolution that gives their executive authority to call a general strike or strikes when they see fit.

In addition to supporting the general strike proposal, delegates backed a manifesto demanding an equal voice for labor, with business and government, in the formation of future social and economic policy.

Shirley Carr, executive vice-president of the CLC, said Tuesday she hopes the government becomes fully aware of the labor movement's position of total opposition to the federal controls program.

Inmates transferred

MONTREAL (CP) — Two prisoners involved in a hostage-taking incident at the maximum-security Laval Institute near here were sent Tuesday to the maximum security federal penitentiary at Dorchester, N.B., Laval warden Bienvenue Marcoux confirmed.

Mr. Marcoux said prisoners Real Brousseau and Fernand Beaudet left from the federal reception centre at nearby Ste. Anne des Plaines where prisoners are normally processed before transfer to another institution.

The prisoners were to be accompanied by four guards on a flight to the Maritimes, but no further details were available for security reasons, Mr. Marcoux said.

Four other prisoners not directly involved with the incident were transferred to Archambault Institute, another maximum-security penitentiary in Ste. Anne des Plaines.

Mr. Marcoux said he was not sure how long Beaudet and Brousseau would be allowed to stay at the Dorchester penitentiary.

"I can't guarantee what the authorities will decide after studying the case," he said.

DEMAND REJECTED
 Mr. Marcoux has rejected demands that no legal reprisals be taken against Brousseau and Beaudet, who released guards Mario Rodrigue and Serge Thibeault unharmed at about 3 a.m. following lengthy negotiations with two outside mediators, a lawyer and a radio reporter.

The prisoners issued a list of 14 written demands concerning, for the main part, what they termed "inhuman" living conditions at Laval Institute.

The four prisoners transferred to Archambault were Eddy McCaffrey, David Foster, Bertrand Janvier and Larry Sauve.

Beaudet was serving 12 years for armed robbery while Brousseau was serving seven years for his part in a hostage-taking incident at a service station following a bank robbery in February, 1975.

School cutbacks seen

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec school system will have to make do with fewer guidance counsellors, librarians and administrators this year following education department budget cuts, a union executive said Tuesday.

Pierre Tellier, vice-president of the 1,800-member Quebec Association of Non-teaching Professionals, said at least 81 non-teaching posts—four per cent of the total—will be abolished.

Mr. Tellier said student services will be the hardest-hit area, losing 62 non-teaching professionals in 1976-77. The other abolished posts are administrative, he said.

Library, audio-visual staff, pedagogical and social guidance posts are among areas cut back.

The personnel cuts affect 32 of Quebec's 225 French-language school boards, in the Montreal, south shore, Gaspé and Saguenay-Lac St. Jean areas.

Controllers set strike

OTTAWA (CP) — A national strike of air traffic controllers has been ordered for 11:59 p.m. EDT May 31, but union leaders have left the door open for further talks with the government and a chance to avoid a walkout.

A strike by the controllers would shut down commercial air traffic across the country.

J. M. Livingston, president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association (CATCA), said at a news conference early today that in a country-wide vote, 77 per cent of controllers rejected the government's last contract offer and 75 per cent favored a strike. More than 1,950 of 2,200 controllers voted.

But in Quebec, controllers voted strongly for the contract offer and against a strike, reversing the national trend. Of the 316 who voted in Quebec, 78 per cent were against striking.

This deepens a split between Quebec controllers and the national union leadership that has been developing for some months. Jean-Luc Patenaude, the union's Quebec regional director, has said that if a strike is launched he will move to decertify CATCA in Quebec.

OPPOSE POLICY
 The union's national leaders have opposed government policy of expanding the use of French in Quebec airports where it now is used. They also object to using French in instrument flight operations, which apply to commercial airliners, as well as in visual flight conditions.

While the national leaders talk about air safety being undermined through the use of two languages, many Quebec controllers say there is no safety problem.

One of the reasons cited for the request for a strike mandate from controllers was CATCA dissatisfaction with the terms of reference of a public inquiry into bilingual air control announced by Transport Minister Otto Lang last week. CATCA leaders said the wording was too narrow.

There were no immediate reports of casualties but frightened people rushed into the streets in the towns of Medellin, Manizales, Cali and Quibdo when the quake struck just after midnight local time.

A federal conciliation board recommended last week that an independent public commission should be established to "examine all questions of language use and safety in air traffic control."

Mr. Lang responded by naming John Keenan, a Montreal lawyer, to head a public inquiry into the safety and monetary aspects of bilingual air traffic control under instrument flight rules.

Second annual Canadian petroleum caravan is ready to roll again

The petroleum caravan, OUR PETROLEUM CHALLENGE, is gearing up for its second Summer Tour to take the story of Canada's petroleum industry to the public. The innovative information caravan, which is operated by the Calgary-based Petroleum Resources Communication Foundation, is preparing for its second Eastern Canadian tour, which will begin in Halifax on July first.

Canadians last year, OUR PETROLEUM CHALLENGE is a completely self-contained, mobile exhibition, presented free of charge of the public. More than 150,000 visitors toured the exhibit during its 1975 Summer Tour.

The caravan consists of four, 45-foot display vans and two audio-visual tent theatres. Through slide shows and imaginative displays and exhibits, the story of exploration, production and transportation of oil and gas in Canada is told.

The emphasis is on straight-forward information, presented in an interesting, entertaining manner — like the game which demonstrates the risks involved in drilling. On a map of actual Arctic well locations, the player has one chance in ten of picking a successful well. As in real exploratory drilling, most of the wells are dry holes, and the only reward for that choice is an oily voice gushing "Honey, let me tell you, this is not your game!"

Adults and children alike are also intrigued by the opportunity to touch and smell oil-laden tar sand from Athabasca, just one of the many, often thought-provoking exhibits in the display vans.

Outside, the centre of attraction is a large service rig, which gives demonstrations of its operation. On leave from active industry service for the summer, the service rig, with its towering 69-foot mast, provides a close-up look at the oilfield equipment.

The 1976 Tour schedule for the caravan will start with a one-day appearance at the National Petroleum Show in Calgary on June 8th. Following is the schedule of public appearances in Eastern Canada: Halifax, Nova Scotia (Halifax Shopping Centre) July 1-11 inclusive; Saint John, New Brunswick (Parkway Mall) July 16-24; Quebec City, Quebec (Place Laurier) July 30-August 11; Toronto, Ontario (Canadian National Exhibition) August 18-September 6.

For its exhibition tour, the caravan will travel with a staff of twenty-nine people, which includes twenty-two attendants who act as tour guides for visitors. The attendants for the 1976 Tour have been recruited from universities and technical schools across Canada and have an almost 100 percent bilingual capability. Prior to the 1976 Tour start-up, the students will be in Calgary for a one-month orientation program, which is centered around field trips to a variety of oil and gas facilities in Alberta. The orientation program is designed to give the attendants first-hand knowledge about Canada's petroleum industry.

SERVICE RIG, with its towering 69-foot mast, is the centre of attraction of the OUR PETROLEUM CHALLENGE display, designed to take the story of Canada's petroleum industry to the public.

BUDDING OILMAN dons a hard hat before trying his luck drilling in Canada's North. Drilling game players soon find they're playing "the riskiest show on earth", sub-title of our PETROLEUM CHALLENGE.

Canada-US post offices issue a joint commemorative stamp

The U.S. Postal Service and the Canada Post Office recently announced they will jointly issue commemorative postage stamps with nearly identical designs in observance of the Bicentennial of the United States.

The stamps, each featuring a likeness of Benjamin Franklin, will be issued June 1 in Philadelphia at INTERPHIL '76, the Seventh U.S. International Philatelic Exhibition. Franklin has the distinction of being the first Postmaster General of Canada and the United States.

The lettering on the Canadian stamp reads: "Canada, United States Bicentennial, Bicentenaire des Etats-Unis."

The Franklin stamps will be the second U.S.-Canada joint stamp issue. Stamps commemorating the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway were issued in Massena, New York, and Ottawa, Ontario, on June 26, 1959. They were identical except for the caption and the denomination.

The image area of both Franklin stamps measures 36 mm x 20 mm (1.42 x .79 inches). However, the overall size, from perforated side to perforated side of the U.S. stamp is 41 mm x 25 mm (1.56 x .99 inches). The Canadian stamp measures 40 mm x 24 mm (1.58 x .94 inches).

The master engraving of the Franklin portrait and of the place names.

The U.S. modeler was Esther Porter and the engravers were Albert Saavedra (lettering and numeral) and Joseph S. Creamer Jr. (vignette). All three are with the U.S. Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The Canadian stamp will be printed by British American Bank Note Co., Ottawa.

Requests for first day cancellations for the U.S. stamp should be addressed to Benjamin Franklin Stamp, Philadelphia, Pa. 19104.

In the left background is Reilander's interpretation of an engraved map of North America published in 1776 by R. Sayer and J. Bennet in London and reproduced in Rand McNally's current U.S. road atlas. Philadelphia, New York, Albany and Boston are positioned on the map, as well as Quebec and Montreal. Also shown are Lake Champlain, Trois Rivieres and portions of the Great Lakes.

The stamps differ in language, denomination, and slightly in size. The designs feature the same portrait of Franklin against an adaptation of an early North American map. The U.S. denomination is 13 cents and the Canadian is 10 cents.

Both stamps were designed by Bernard Reilander of the Postage Design and Development Division, Canada Post Office. He based the likeness of Franklin on a marble portrait head by an anonymous Italian sculptor, who based his work on a 1777 terra cotta bust by Jean Jacques Caffieri. The marble bust belongs to Harvard University.

the upper left corner of the U.S. stamp appears "USA" in blue letters. Below that, in two lines of blue is "Bicentennial 1776-1976" and, in the lower left corner, is 13c. The lettering on the map is also in blue as is the Franklin portrait.

Business brief

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson said recently multinational corporations are forging a new world economic order that could benefit both rich and poor nations.

In remarks prepared for delivery to the 1976 Chicago World Trade Conference, Richardson lauded multinational companies for "internationalizing" production and said this process "will, in time, do for the less developed nations what the industrial revolution did for the developed nations."

He endorsed the idea of an international code of conduct that would promote investment by multinational companies in developing countries.

He said such a code, devised in an international forum and properly enforced, could dispel the distrust that now inhibits cooperation between developing countries and multinationals.

He said a heavy infusion of foreign capital is the only way to establish self-sustaining production bases in developing countries and said multinationals had the greatest potential for such investment.

Arts, crafts sale set

LENNOXVILLE — The fourth annual sale of arts, crafts and antiques will be held in Lennoxville United Church Hall on Friday, May 21 from 2 to 9 p.m. and Saturday May 22 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

This popular event features more than 24 artisans and dealers selling paintings, small antiques and interesting and unusual crafts. These include pottery, jewelry, woven and beaded belts and purses, wood sculptures, macramé, leather goods and braided rugs. The ever-popular arts of enamelling on copper and tile painting will be featured and a new addition, bread dough art, will be displayed. Hand-made pots complete with plants should make excellent gifts, as would a selection from the work of the well-known Valley Weavers, or a charming stuffed toy or doll.

In addition, there will be small antiques on sale in the Upper Hall, along with the work of several established artists. Visitors will also enjoy a demonstration of rughooking by a local expert. A delicious assortment of home-baking will be on sale from 2 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, and tea will be served from 3 to 5 p.m. on Friday. For the first time, visitors will be able to enjoy luncheon on Saturday by phoning 563-9436 or 562-4221 for reservations, and light refreshments will also be available. The public is urged not to miss this unique opportunity of inspecting and purchasing the work of many outstanding craftsmen and artists from the Eastern Townships and other areas of the province. A small admission fee will be charged.

Consumer Chronicle

GROUND BEEF. For most families ground beef is a regular purchase at the meat counter. Therefore it is very important to make an intelligent purchase. Ground beef must be prepared from beef muscle and the fat which normally adheres to it. It is illegal to add other fats or any non-beef by-products. It is sold in three categories: ordinary ground beef that contains at most 30 per cent fat, semi-lean ground beef that contains at most 23 per cent fat and lean ground beef that contains less than 17 per cent fat. This means that for example 16 ounces of ordinary ground beef could lose up to 5 ounces in fat when cooked. An advertisement for "no-fat" ground beef may be very enticing, but false: beef is always marbled with fat. This "no-fat" ground beef is more often lean ground beef that the consumer pays at a higher price.

Ground beef is not subject to any classification. It is neither red nor blue and is rarely made from red category beef. At most one can allude to the colour of the meat as being red. In fact, ground beef will be redder as it is leaner. At the time of purchase one must pay attention to this coloration because it may depend on the lighting in the store.

Most consumers think that a bright red colour is an indication of the freshness of ground beef. Practically, this is not the case, especially if this coloration persists a long time after the purchase, because fresh ground beef rapidly turns brownish soon after being ground. A persistent excessively red colour could be a sign that a preservative such as sulfite has been added. It is illegal to add any colour preservatives to meat.

An elastic texture or a pale colour may be a sign that vegetable protein of equal nutritional value to, but cheaper than beef, has been added and has not been indicated.

If your ground beef greatly diminishes in volume and leaves a puddle of molten grease in your frying pan, then it was very fat.

When buying ground beef, then, there are three points to consider: colour, texture and cooking characteristics. It is better to buy smaller quantities more often, and to examine them at the store and at home, in order to be sure your meat cutter is selling you good quality ground beef.

Engineers to meet

NORTH HATLEY (TT) — The Sherbrooke Branch of the Order of Engineers of Quebec, the Engineering Institute of Canada and the Canadian Society for Mechanical Engineering invite their members to a joint annual meeting on Friday, May 28, at the Hatley Inn, North Hatley, beginning at 6:30 p.m. Meanwhile, a nominating committee of OEQ-EIC (Eastern Townships) joint executive has proposed the following for nominations as officers of the 1976-77 period: Chairman, Raymond N. Leclair; Vice-Chairman, G. Emile Prince; Secretary OEQ, Jacques Aubert; Secretary EIC, Nicolas Galanis and Treasurer OEQ-EIC, Guy Carrier. Committee members would be Guy L. Donahue, Conrad Lauzier, Marcel Thibodeau, Pierre Claude Aitein, Normand Brochu and Paul Lambert.

Did you know...

That the Sherbrooke Hospital's business of health — as discussed in Dr. W.E. Hume's broadcast 25 years ago and reported in the Sherbrooke Daily Record's issue of March 12, 1951 includes operating a laundry.

The following is a quotation from Dr. Hume's remarks: "The hospital is in the Laundry business. Its laundry is comparable to that of a substantial commercial plant. A large portion of its work must be not only washed but sterilized. It averages 14 pounds of laundry per day per patient."

Mr. Armand Gauthier, Sherbrooke Hospital laundry manager, contends that his department is "the heart of the hospital" — and he supports this statement by saying that no operation can be performed without his clean linen on the operating table and when the patient is returned to his room clean bed linen is waiting to receive him. In 1975 the Sherbrooke Hospital processed 625,315 pounds of laundry.

Wellington Street no longer centre of Festival activities

SHERBROOKE (SB) — After being closed for the two previous Festival des Cantons, Wellington Street North will remain open to traffic as usual when this year's festivities are underway, Mayor Jacques O'Bready says. "Activity on the main street will be limited to a massive flower display and perhaps a parade or a street dance some evening," the mayor remarked recently. All activities which last year took place on the busy street will this year take place on Depot Street, from the CN station to where Depot street meets Wellington South. This includes the dances, booths and the beer concessions. The city's decision to move the activities to Depot Street and leave Wellington North open to both pedestrian and motor traffic was based on protests raised by downtown merchants after the two previous festivals. The festival last year closed the main street before, during and after the eight day cultural event, which according to downtown merchants cost them significant losses in sales. The merchants' complaints also included the mountains of garbage left by the thousands of festival revelers. The city this year also passed a special bylaw prohibiting the use of glass objects during the festival. All beverages will be served in either paper or plastic cups and anyone caught with a glass or bottle anywhere in the designated festival areas is subjecting himself to a $100 fine. The city hopes this will cut down on injuries and the amount of broken glass on city streets.

Meanwhile, municipal police intend to crack down on underage drinking, one of the most obvious problems of last year's festival, though the age limits were strictly enforced at the festival's designated concessions. The minors were reportedly purchasing the alcohol from downtown corner stores, and drinking it on the streets. With opening ceremonies for Sherbrooke's annual cultural festival less than two weeks away, and sales just starting of the official souvenir booklet, it would seem that the city has successfully calmed the waters for the area's most publicized event, the Festival des Cantons.

department employees. In an interview with The Record yesterday, Mr. O'Bready said that agreement in principle has been reached with the blue collars' union, that an entente is near with the white collars, and that the Hydro and fire department cases are being referred to conciliation shortly. For the police, conciliator Paul Desharnais' report proposed salary increases of 17 percent in the first year and 8 percent in the second year of a two-year collective agreement.

However, Mr. O'Bready said, the city is bound by the federal government's anti-inflation legislation not to provide salary increases higher than 12 percent in the first, and eight percent in the second years, thus making the conciliator's first-year proposal unacceptable. Also, a mere one percent increase in salaries for the complete city payroll would result in an extra $150,000 added to municipal expenditures, he said. The payroll is currently about $15 million a year, including fringe benefits.

With these two points in mind, Mr. O'Bready, in accord with the eight councillors, has chosen not to comment on the conciliation report until final results of negotiations with those other unions with whom no agreement has yet been reached become available. Mr. O'Bready also rejected a statement by Mr. Provencher to the effect that the police department is not to be compared in terms of importance with others, and therefore should receive priority. "Why should we treat the Police Department differently from other departments?" Mr. O'Bready asked, indicating that the outcome of other negotiations may have a bearing on the final policemen's contract. When asked about public security, the mayor — who had returned from an engagement out of town and had no further knowledge of the slowdown than what he read in the papers — said no reprisals against the police were being considered at the moment, and that a meeting with police chief Jean-Paul Pelletier may be called to discuss the situation. He added that there is no intention of asking the Quebec Police Force to enter the picture.

WAITING GAME — Sherbrooke police today escalated their work slowdown in protest to an impasse in contract negotiations. In the photo an on-duty policeman stands under a traffic signal that seems to indicate the police's stance for the past year in anticipation of a new and more lucrative contract offer. Activities at Galt

By Joanne Brown

This week elections for next year's Student Government Executives were held at Galt. Of the five positions, four candidates were acclaimed. The members of the Executive for 1976-77 are: President - Jacques Hebert; Vice-President - Kevin Brown; Secretary - Robert Whitley; Treasurer - Habib Massoud; and Activity Chairperson - Adrienne Chinn.

Next year these people will have quite a good deal of work to do. Until now, Galt has had an Activities Co-ordinator (presently Bill Rourke). But now, because of a union decree, a person cannot earn teacher's wages unless he has a teacher's work load. Thus Mr. Rourke has lost his job as Activities Co-ordinator. Those people who do not yet realize how valuable this position is will find out next year when there is no one to take care of the technical aspects of things such as buses, clubs and activities, sports, student billeting, and any number of such activities.

The school's radio station, CJRR, has been holding open-air dances of late, when possible. These open-air dances, held in front of the gym, are held outside on nice days, and seem to be quite popular. So far there have been two such dances.

On Friday a large campaign was started in the school to get students to sell subscriptions to the Townships Sun. The grant on which the Sun was working was withdrawn, and to maintain publication, they must receive 5,000 subscriptions over the present 500. If a student sells 10 subscriptions, their name goes into a hat for a bicycle; after that, there are prizes such as record albums, and the top sellers receive $20 gift certificates.

April arrives in May

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS (GA) — Our traditional April showers seem to be coming in May this year with a record rainfall to date of 37.5 inches compared to 31.2 inches last year at the same time, according to M. Desjardins, a meteorology technician at the Sherbrooke Environment Canada weather office. Persistent rains are causing considerable lowland flooding and lawns and yards are practically saturated to capacity, delaying this year's seed planting. The flats south of Lennoxville are flooding and a strawberry farmer there, who was pumping water from the Massawippi River is now letting nature work for him as the swollen river is spilling on to his plowed field.

Rotten apples in paradise

The Swedish paradise seems to be full of rotten apples. Not apples of knowledge but of overweening bureaucracy, punitive taxation and laws of Byzantine complexity. One prominent Swede, film director Ingmar Bergman, has now departed the paradise which, as a socialist, he had helped to build. Another, Astri Lindgren, the author of children's books and also a former supporter of the ruling Socialist party, has written to Sweden's premier, Olof Palme, that 102 per cent taxation was not her idea of socialism.

Mr. Bergman's statement on leaving his native land, after his arrest at rehearsals by policemen sicked on him by the tax authorities, was symptomatic of what happens when an anaesthetized public allows bureaucracy to have the upper hand. Referring to his backing for Sweden's Socialist party, Mr. Bergman said: "With honest passion, I have embraced the ideology of grey compromises. My awakening was a shock, partly because of the nearly unbearable humiliation, partly because I realized that anyone in this country, any time and in any way, can be attacked and vilified by a particular kind of bureaucracy. This bureaucracy grows like a fast-spreading cancer. It is in no way schooled for its difficult and delicate task, and society has armed it with powers which the individuals wielding this power are by no means mature enough to handle."

The power, including that of arrest, entry into residence and office and the right to seize any documents — not unlike the power of Soviet officials — has been used against Mr. Bergman, who was arrested on the stage of Stockholm's Royal Dramatic Theatre, interrogated at length at the police station, had his apartment ransacked, his passport confiscated and ordered not to leave Stockholm. Eventually, the state prosecutor decided that the taxmen had no case against Mr. Bergman, but this was after Mr. Bergman had suffered a heart attack brought on by the police treatment.

Mr. Bergman has no recourse against the police for false arrest and the damage done to his reputation. Indeed, he left behind all his savings merely to escape Sweden's oppressive atmosphere. Nor has Miss Lindgren any recourse against her 102 per cent tax. Today Sweden is ruled by an arrogant bureaucracy, by socialist bosses and labor union bosses, the new class exempt from all the rigors of the law that fall on the rest of the citizenry. Parliament is powerless, but what is perhaps most pernicious is the loss of will by the Swedish public, too preoccupied with the hard task of earning a living to react against their masters' pretensions.

In Sweden, tax evasion is a more serious crime than a crime of violence, and the 40 years of Socialist rule have conditioned the Swedes to accept the proposition. In the eyes of the average Swede, Big Brother is always right, and there was no outcry even among the opposition parties over either the Bergman or the Lindgren cases.

To present-day Swedes security and egalitarianism have become a way of life — far more so than to the Russians, who are still determined to beat the system, if only by passive resistance or go-slow tactics. Freedom comes very low on a Swede's list of priorities, certainly far below his right to get drunk on cheap Schnapps. The opposition parties know it and their demoralization mirrors that of the public at large. The "fast-spreading cancer," of which Mr. Bergman speaks, has sapped the fibre of the population, and the Opposition is resigned to remain where it has been for two generations: on the opposition benches.

It is a horrid example for Canada, where our "social engineers" are busy constructing a similar "paradise", with drink, drugs and sex as the only outlets for an individual's creative energy.

Haitians live on the verge of survival

By Ira Berkow

PORT-AU-PRINCE — (NEA) — Under a queerly half-flattened yellow moon, some of the people of Haiti lay sleeping in their rags on the sidewalks and curbs in this muggy, squalid capital city; and those who had walked shoeless down from the mountains now lay on the burlap bundles of home-grown bananas or oranges or onions that they had carried all that day on their heads.

They would market the produce at dawn, and then lumber back up-mountain with a dollar or so. The luckier of the simple folks sleep in shacks with four and five to a room, plus perhaps a dog or pig or chicken that wanders in.

Yet even at midnight there is still activity here in the heart of the chief city of the country which its public relations people call "the Pearl of the Antilles."

(However, Haiti, one of the poorest countries in the world, one of the most densely populated, with over four-fifths of its people illiterate, an overwhelming number of its children suffering from malnutrition, tetanus, tuberculosis or gastro enteritis, has also been called "the horror of the Western Hemisphere.")

The streets of the dark marketplace are here and there lit by the glow of little fires. A black-shawled old lady is cooking bits of pork called "griots" in a small charcoal pit. A few men stand at a wobbly table and play at a dice game called "zo," the dice being rumpled in a hollow goat's horn. The players laugh softly or moan, and chatter in their native Creole.

Drums beat quietly in the night. This is the land of voodoo, the land of black magic, and these are the sounds that the people of this small black nation inherited from their African forefathers. The rhythmic, hypnotic drumming can chill a foreign visitor's spine.

On the widest of the streets is a railroad track on which is run the sugar cane train. There are a few parked produce trucks, with the traditional, primitive, lively scenes of Haitian life painted on the sides.

People sleep inside; two small naked children with distended stomachs play around a truck.

An old man with white scraggly beard sits before a bucket of water and bathes slowly, spending what appears luxurious moments soaping long black feet with tawny soles.

A bundle of sheet plastic on the curb crackles suddenly, as if a rat is rustling inside. Two eyes peer out. It is a woman awakened by a passerby. No danger: she draws her turbaned head back into her bedding.

There are rows of stores under columned archways. There are lights on in only a few. In one, meal and flour are poured in sacks by three teenaged boys. They look up at a passerby and smile in the shadowy light, their black faces caked a macabre white. One extends a blanched palm and says in English, "Got dime for me, mister?"

The smell of dirt, of pigs along curbs, of donkeys, of onions, of garbage, of pork burning is pungent. Suddenly, there is a stronger smell. Fire! The people stiffen with animal instinctiveness, then hustle off to see what's up.

A fire was quickly gutting a mess of shacks in the nearby Cour Calabassee between the Rue du Champ de Mars, the Grand Rue and the Rue du Magasin de l'Etat. Flames lit the sky; the closest palm trees bent slightly from the billowy smoke.

From the neighboring houses, people come running out and dragging their most valuable possessions, their beds. A siren heralds the unveiling of the town's newest fire engine. An uncertain bunch of militiamen with bulletless rifles are deployed to keep order. People care only to watch, however, and not to loot.

These militiamen, in fact, are the only uniformed soldiers that visitors to Haiti see. The infamous Ton Macoute, the secret police of the late dictator Francois ("Papa Doc") Duvalier, is no longer visible under the more benign reign of Duvalier's son, Jean-Claude.

The fire is soon under control. Life around the marketplace returns to normal. A young man, home for vacation from Boston where he studies business at Northeastern University, explains to a visitor, "The fire was accidental. A kerosene lamp fell over. It is not like New York or Chicago or Boston — people here like each other."

He left Haiti where he said it is impossible to get a good college education. And he was fortunate to have his parents — small business people — help him financially. "But some of the people here are born losers," he said.

"Keep both eyes open and read it all."

Supershrimp is alive and well in polluted East Coast Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — A wily, rare crustacean is alive and thriving in the polluted sea floor off Canada's East Coast.

The influential Science Magazine says Axis Serratus, alias Supershrimp, has been discovered in large numbers in polluted regions of the Strait of Canso.

The report in the May 21 issue is signed by George Pemberton and Michael Risk of McMaster University, Hamilton, Ont., and Dale Buckley of the Bedford Institute of Oceanography, Dartmouth, N.S.

The authors do not speculate on the future of Axis Serratus but they say Supershrimp has been hiding for years deep in the ocean floor.

"The shrimp may live deeper than three metres in the sediment," they write. "Burrows are kept open to at least 2.5 metres."

"The shrimp occurs in areas subject to heavy discharge of industrial pollutants, makes extremely deep burrows and is associated with sediment having altered physical, geotechnical and geochemical properties."

A causeway was completed between mainland Nova Scotia and Cape Breton Island about 22 years ago. The construction created a year-round deep-water harbor. Industry moved in with resultant pollution.

"During the summer of 1973, a team of scientists and technicians began an integrated multidisciplinary study of the impact of man on the marine environment of the Strait of Canso."

Off Eddy Point on the south side of the causeway, a live shrimp was found intact in its burrow 10 centimetres below the surface of the cored sediment.

"All the cores taken south of the causeway contained shrimp burrows," the magazine says.

"However, no shrimp burrows were identified from cores taken north of the causeway."

This, the scientists say, suggests that the shrimp has invaded the relatively more polluted habitats south of the causeway.

The shrimp was identified as Axis Serratus Stimpson 1852, a species noted only five times from the Atlantic coast of North America.

It's all in who you know

WASHINGTON — Courty, capable Rep. Joe Evins, D-Tenn., lives by the philosophy of his Smokey Mountain district: kinfolk take care of each other.

The congressman and his cousin, businessman James E. Rice, have been taking good care of each other, albeit at the expense of the taxpayers.

Rice has made a fortune by taking advantage of a Small Business Administration program intended to help fledgling minority entrepreneurs. He has been aided by the influence of his cousin, Rep. Joe, who happens to head the House Small Business Committee.

In return, Rice has helped his cousin the congressman. When Joe Evins was looking for a buyer of his family's controlling stock in the First Central Bank of Smithville, Rice came up with the purchase price. At the time, Rice was vice chairman of the bank and Evins was chairman.

Evins and Rice haven't kept it all in the family. They have included Howard Greenberg, the former staff director of Evins's committee, in the cozy relationship.

As a former deputy director, Greenberg knew the right people at the Small Business Administration. His position as the House Small Business staff chief also gave him a special influence over them. He used his influence time and again to help Rice with his Small Business problems.

Our associate, Jack Cloberty has now discovered that Greenberg has had a $20,000-a-year consulting agreement with Rice since January. Yet Greenberg didn't leave the Small Business Committee until the end of March.

Despite the pressure from Capitol Hill, meanwhile, the Small Business Administration began taking a closer look at Rice's operations. A confidential SBA audit charges, for example, that the congressman's cousin "diverted approximately $15,000 to his personal account that belongs to the stockholders of Best (Services)."

Best Services is one of several "minority" firms which Rice has sponsored. These firms are able to gain nonbid contracts with the armed services for kitchen and janitorial duties because of their "disadvantaged" status.

The same SBA audit disclosed that Best Services, controlled by Rice, made a net profit of $886,336 handling KP at Fort Benning, Ga., for 17 months. And this whopping profit didn't include another $244,487 consultant's fee, which Best paid its "sponsoring" firm, Worldwide Services. Rice also controls Worldwide Services.

This sponsoring arrangement was intended by SBA to help minority firms get off the ground. The Big Brother firms were supposed to provide some working capital and management expertise. Then, in the spirit of giving minority businessmen a break, the nonminority firms were supposed to bow out when the new businesses got rolling.

Instead, Rice used the program to set up minority fronts with the real control remaining in his hands. This became an all too common practice under the setup.

The General Accounting Office found that the sponsoring firms simply "used former employees as stockholders and officers" of the sham minority firms and then provided goods and services to the new firms for a fancy fee. Many sponsoring companies also held up to 49 per cent of the stock in the new businesses.

Yet even this understates the extent to which the sponsors pulled the operating strings. Many sponsors, including Rice, exercised far more control over their "minority" firms than the paperwork shows.

The GAO interviewed 23 "minority" firm presidents and found that many "lacked even a basic understanding of routine business matters and were not aware of very important matters specific to their own businesses."

For example, GAO found that "one disadvantaged secretary-treasurer signed corporate documents and checks with an 'X'. He stated that, as an officer of the firm, he cleaned up around the office."

When SBA officials tried to revise the rules to give the genuine minority businessmen control over their own operations, the move was squelched with the help of Rep. Evins and his staff director.

Rice was profiting mightily, meanwhile, from setting up these phony minority enterprises. At one time, he was involved in six of them. His Superior Services received nearly $5 million in government contracts. Supreme Services got at least $2 million and Quality Food collected another $1 million. Best Services received about $1.5 million.

Rice's Worldwide Services, as the sponsoring firm, siphoned off huge management fees from these operations. These usually amounted, GAO found, to about 15 per cent of the firm's gross incomes. In addition, as part owner, Rice would get a cut of the profits that the "minority" firms earned.

The SBA rules require that any firm exceeding a limited "size standard" would lose its right to small business contracts. This posed a problem for Rice, whose firms kept reaching the upper limits of the size standard.

Enter Rep. Evins and Howard Greenberg again. "Every time one of Rice's firms approached the size standard limit," a former SBA official told us, "Greenberg would come in and fight to have it raised."

This may help explain why the small business size standard has been raised several times since 1970.

The SBA is now taking steps to monitor the sponsors of minority businessmen, including the congressman's cousin. With Evins retiring from Congress this year, Rice will also lose some of his influence. But he still stands to make millions, our sources say, when he divests his "minority" firms.

All in all, he has done rather well with the help of his kinfolk. The losers are the taxpayers — and the disadvantaged businessmen who were supposed to get the benefits that Rice obtained.

Footnote: Rice and Greenberg refused to talk with us. Rep. Evins claimed he helped Rice not as a relative, but as a constituent and small businessman only.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Olympic achievement discouraged

To the Editor:

It was only recently that I learned that Steve Badger, an Olympic qualified athlete of Winnipeg, was declined opportunity to compete at the Olympic Games by our government. Steve Badger came to Canada from Australia on a one way ticket to study law, and applied for citizenship as a landed immigrant whereupon he would be eligible to compete in the Games. It appears that the law provides that only exceptional circumstances may sanction such a grant of citizenship. The government says that Steve Badger is not such a case.

Steve Badger, to attain the level of competence in swimming that he has achieved, must have spent many long hours of training and denied himself many little pleasures to meet the high standard. This marvelous effort to attain an extraordinary yet wistful objective — Olympic competition, has been snuffed.

In these days of murder, robbery, scandal, and extortion, when so many seek an easy fortune, it is difficult to understand why anyone would embark upon the difficult pursuit of excellence when alternatives appear so promising and less obstructed. This nation was once a place of hope to where an individual could travel from afar, and by and in proportion to the sweat of his brow, achieve grand hopes.

Now it appears that the wonder of Canada so frequently spouted in '67, has been smothered. No longer is the demonstration of achievement sufficient. Inadequate is special performance. If this government can so easily squash the cherished dreams of these people of such endeavour, what chance have we who lack such character? What is this character worth in the first place, that it has so little merit? This is not a matter of great policy changes. It is a matter of remembering that life is more than a selection of rigidly set alternatives.

The government file of Steve Badger may be dead, but this is one ghost that will and must return like Morley to haunt Mr. Pelletier and fellows. Callousness will deserve such chain rattling on the next eve of election or spirit is dead!

Respectfully,
 W. SANDERSON

The family

Goudreau-Masse

A very pretty early summer marriage was solemnized on May 8 at St. Therese's Church in Beebe at 3 p.m. when Lise, only daughter of Mrs. Eva Masse of Beebe, became the bride of Paul Goudreau, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Goudreau, also of Beebe, in a double ring ceremony performed by Father Alfred Thibault.

Mrs. Denise Gaudreau presided at the organ playing the traditional wedding music and accompanied the singers, Mrs. Raymonde Lecours, Mrs. Helen Gaudreau and Mrs. Henrietta Daignault.

Yellow and white floral arrangements adorned the church.

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Merrill Masse, was lovely in a floor-length gown of white sheer over bridal satin, skirt falling into a cathedral length train. At the side seams of gown were deep insets of lace, edged with eyelet lace through which narrow yellow ribbon was threaded. This extended around the hemline of the train and gown, with small yellow bows at several points. The waist line and bib effect of lace were both edged with yellow ribbon through eyelet lace, as well as the high lace ruffled collar.

The long, full, sheer sleeves were fastened at the wrist in deep satin cuffs. A four-tiered veil of nylon net was held by a bandeau of lace and simulated pearls. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses and baby's breath with long yellow streamers. White shoes completed her attire.

Mrs. Guy Labbe, as matron of honor was in a floor-length gown of yellow with yellow matching cape, the yellow matching the trim of the bride's gown. She carried yellow and white daisies with white streamers. White shoes completed her attire.

Guy Labbe was best man for the groom, and the ushers were Robert Goudreau, brother of the groom, and Wayne Sheldon, cousin of the bride. The groom wore a yellow rosebud and greenery boutonniere. The best man and ushers wore white carnation boutonnieres.

Mrs. Masse, mother of the bride, chose a soft pink floor-length gown in polyester having long sleeves and high neckline, trimmed with lace. She wore a long gold chain necklace, the gift of the married couple and her corsage was pink and red variegated carnations.

Mrs. Goudreau, mother of the groom, was in a light blue floor-length gown of polyester having long sleeves, with a yellow carnation corsage.

Following the ceremony, the reception for the immediate family members and a few close friends was held at Salon Bavaurois, where dinner was served to 57 guests.

Each table was centered with peppermint carnations. Centering the head table was a three-tiered cake, two top layers being on posts, iced in white, having silver angels and silver bells on streamers, topped with a bride and groom.

On one side of the wedding cake was a heart shaped cake iced in white with the name, Lise, and on other side of large cake was an identical one with the name, Paul.

White candles in silver holders flanked the cakes, which were made and decorated by Mrs. Horace Doyon of Stanstead.

The goblets from which the toast was drunk, were gifts, each having a name inscribed. Lise on one, Paul on the other.

In the evening, the reception continued when relatives and friends assembled to shower the happy couple in the form of a Jack and Jill shower. Dancing was enjoyed to the music of Les Estriels of Magog.

The happy couple left on a trip to Florida where they will visit points of interest. For travelling they chose matching slacks suits of navy blue slacks and brown jackets and matching accessories. The bride wore a white carnation corsage.

The bride tossed her bouquet and it was caught by Miss Helene Gosselin, while the bride's garter was caught by Denis Belleville who chauffeured the couple for the day.

Bouquets were presented to Mrs. Masse and Mrs. Goudreau from the couple in observance of Mother's Day, which was the day after the wedding.

The happy couple will take up residence in Moosenee, Ont., where the groom is employed.

Guests attended from Rumford, Me., Montreal, Sherbrooke, Coaticook and the border communities.

Ann Landers says:

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are both in our mid-twenties. We have been married for 15 months.

Fred loves to eat — especially meat. We can't afford meat every night (who can?) but when we do have it, Fred eats very fast so he can get about 80 per cent of what's prepared. His hoggishness is disgusting. Besides, he's beginning to look like Mr. Five-by-Five.

Last night Fred worked the swing shift and I got a ride home from the office with a gal who lives near us. She had her sister in the car. On the spur of the moment I invited them in to have supper with me. I was mortified to discover that Fred had eaten every bit of the meat. So the three of us had salad, gravy and vegetables. We laughed about it, although deep down I didn't think it was very funny.

Fred is a good kid, but kids have to grow up some time. Will you tell him, please—Honey-moon's Over.

Dear Honey: Tell him what? That he's an inconsiderate slob? It wouldn't do any good. Fred's eating habits are severely neurotic and he's not about to change.

Divide the meat — take your fair share, and let him know he doesn't have to rush.

When Fred works the swing shift, cut the meat before you leave and put a little note on your portion saying, "Don't touch under threat of death" — or something equally subtle.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 28-year-old career woman engaged to marry a terrific man. 42 Bob will have to pay alimony and support his three children.

What are the chances for promotion after 40? Do you have any statistics on this? What is the average earning capacity of a man in this age group? Has he topped out, perhaps? If he decided to leave the United States and not pay alimony or child support are there laws that could bring him back? (His wife comes from a rich family.)

Bob tells me he has three bank accounts under different names. Is this legal? Could his ex-wife get hold of any of this money if he falls behind in his alimony and support payments?

How can I find out for sure what his salary is and how much he is worth? Bob is a nice person and good company. — Information Needed

Dear Info: The faint praise with which you damned poor Bob takes your letter out of the human relations category and places it under Financial Inquiry.

You should have written to Dun and Bradstreet and the FBI. The whole thing sounds like forget it — and I hope you will, for Bob's sake as well as your own.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

At Home

DANVILLE — A surprise "At Home" will be held for Mr. and Mrs. Millar Scott at their residence - 63 rd Ave., Danville, Que., on Sat., May 22nd, from 1-4 p.m.; on the occasion of their 35th wedding anniversary. Relatives and friends are cordially invited to attend.

Tips for freezing fruits, vegetables

Fresh fruits and vegetables from the garden or market may be frozen or canned. The choice is yours!

Fruits that freeze well are berries, sour cherries and rhubarb. Peaches, apples and apricots require special treatment to prevent discoloration. Powdered or crystalline ascorbic acid (that's simply Vitamin C) may be added to the fruit to prevent this discoloration. Pears don't take well to freezing — they become soft and mushy.

Vegetables such as asparagus, green or yellow beans, peas, spinach, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower and whole-kernel corn are particularly good when frozen.

Celery, cucumbers and other vegetables usually eaten raw don't freeze well — use them in pickle and relish recipes.

Squash and pumpkin freeze well — cut them in pieces, remove the seeds and package, or steam or bake them and freeze the mashed cooked vegetable.

Store root vegetables such as carrots, beets, onions and parsnips in a cold storage room — if you don't have adequate storage, freeze them.

Most vegetables that are to be frozen must be blanched, otherwise the naturally occurring enzymes in them will cause undesirable changes in flavor, texture and color of the frozen vegetables. Blanching times vary, according to the vegetable. The blanching process simply involves scalding the vegetables in boiling water, for 1 to 4 minutes for most vegetables. Then, remove them from the boiling water and chill immediately in cold running water or in ice water. Drain thoroughly and pack immediately in plastic bags. Place these in the freezer immediately and freeze as quickly as possible.

Don't stack the packages — place them against the walls or shelves of the freezer, one layer deep. Food should be thoroughly frozen within 24 hours. Frozen fruits and vegetables may be stored up to one year if kept at 0 degrees F or lower and if adequately packaged.

If you don't own a freezer or you need the space for other foods, canning is another alternative. It is important to follow safe canning procedures, besides selecting freshly picked, tender, young vegetables and firm, ripe fruits as is the case for freezing.

Fruits that can well in a boiling water bath are apples (and applesauce), apricots, peaches, pears, plums, tomatoes and tomato juice. Use ascorbic acid to prevent discoloration of peaches and pears.

For the boiling water bath in which to process the fruit, use almost any large kettle with a rack and a tight-fitting lid. It should be deep enough to allow at least two inches of boiling water over the top of the containers. This method is recommended for fruits and tomatoes only because of their natural acidity.

Religious articles ideal for art fair

By Jean Barnes

More and more collectors are growing wary of sharing their collections for fear of theft or damage. It's understandable. A collection represents more than an investment of time and money. It often contains objects that cannot be replaced at any price.

Several years ago a large metropolitan church sponsored one of their most successful community programs — a week-long religion art fair. It was an excellent and secure way to share private collections and it makes even more sense now.

The chairman for the event was a well-known and reputable authority on antiques and collectibles. He was knowledgeable about collections and collectors in the area and was able to provide valuable contacts for his committee.

Members of the church, collectors and churches of the area were canvassed for the loan of objects for display. For a week the galleries were opened to the public. Evening hours also were observed so that those with working hours would have ample time for browsing and study.

Many of the churches established before the turn of the century loaned objects having local historical significance — communion cups, crosses, statuary, vestments, baptismal fonts, candle stands, altar cloths and paintings.

The (Catholic) diocese was very generous with us and loaned very rare and fine things from their vault," the chairman said.

Virtually every art medium was represented. Fine enamels, oil and watercolor paintings, hand carvings of wood and ivory, objects of silver, pewter, gold and brass, some set with precious and semi-precious stones, handblown crystal and stained glass.

For centuries, he reminded us, man has spent his best efforts to express his love for God.

Security was not the problem there that it would be now, he said. "But we insured everything

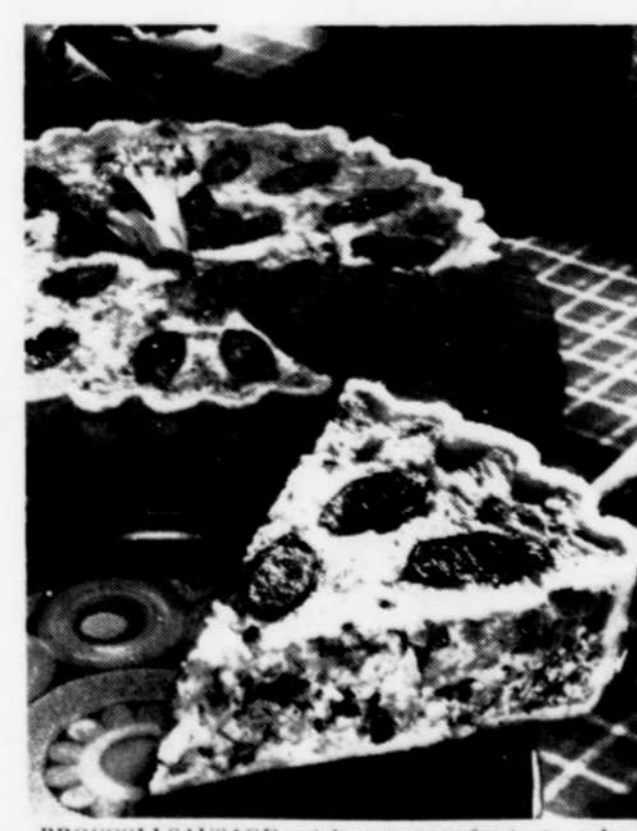

Broccoli brightens brunch

By Aileen Claire NEA Food Editor

Brunches are a popular way to entertain well and with a limited menu. Everyone seems to enjoy this form of dining with friends or business associates, especially on a Saturday or Sunday when all want to relax. A broccoli-sausage quiche, served with a fresh spinach salad, prepared brochies or pecan rolls and a fresh fruit compote, taxes the energy of the hosts and their guests very little. For even less work, set a buffet with colorful decorative paper plates.

- BROCCOLI-SAUUSAGE QUICHE
- 2 (10-ounce) packages frozen chopped broccoli
 - 4 smoke-flavored frankfurters (5 ounces)
 - 6 eggs
 - 2 cups milk
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon onion powder
 - 1/2 cups grated Swiss or Gruyere cheese
 - Pastry-lined pan
 - 1 tablespoon butter

Cook broccoli in a small amount of boiling salted water until crisp-tender, about 5 minutes. Drain well. Slice frankfurters slightly on the diagonal. Beat eggs until blended and mix in milk, salt, onion powder, cheese and broccoli. Pour into pastry-lined pan. Arrange sausages decoratively on top. Dot with butter. Bake at 425 degrees 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 375 degrees and bake 25 to 30 minutes longer, or until set and slightly puffed. Let cool a few minutes on a rack, then remove pan sides. Cut in wedges. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Pastry-lined pan. Mix together one and one-fourth cups all-purpose flour, one-half teaspoon salt and one-half cup butter until mixture is crumbly. Add one egg and mix until dough clings together in a ball. Pat into the bottom and sides of a 10-inch flan pan with removable bottom and two inch sides. (Must have two-inch sides.)

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Part of top-flight competition in any game includes the thrust and counterthrust of measures designed to embarrass the other side.

East's five-club opening was designed for that purpose. It worked far beyond his wildest dreams. South's double was primarily for penalty, but North decided a seven-card heart suit was worth a slam bid.

South should have passed at six hearts, but the solid spade suit was too much temptation. He went to six spades.

East won the first trick with the king of clubs and decided to shift to a trump. Three trump leads accounted for the trump suit while two hearts were shed from dummy. Then South cashed his ace of diamonds and went into a huddle to end all huddles. East surely held eight clubs. He had played three spades and a diamond. Was his other card another diamond or a heart? Finally South decided to play for a 4-0 heart break. He led a heart, stuck in dummy's nine and had thrown away a slam.

If South had thought clearly he would have realized that East would have doubled six spades to call for a heart lead if he didn't hold any hearts.

Ford, Carter, Brown win in two primaries

Republican voters in Michigan and Maryland have given President Ford the victories he needed to slow down Ronald Reagan's dash for the U.S. presidential nomination.

Gov. Edmund Brown of California, meanwhile, has become the second late entry in the Democratic race to defeat Jimmy Carter.

Carter barely made it in Michigan over Representative Morris Udall.

Ford, loser to the former California governor in five of the last six primaries, got a landslide victory of almost 2 to 1 from voters in his home state of Michigan.

The president also defeated Reagan easily in Maryland, a state where neither did much serious work. But Ford still trails Reagan in the overall delegate count.

Among the Democrats, Brown did in Maryland what Senator Frank Church of Idaho did a week ago in Nebraska—made his primary debut by defeating Carter, although the former Georgia governor won the bulk of the delegates because Brown filed too late to have any delegate slates.

CARTER EDGES UDALL

And in Michigan, Carter won by a hair over Udall, who has made a career of finishing second. Udall described the close race as a victory and said he is in the best position to win the nomination if Carter falters.

Here is how they stood:

Republicans

In Michigan, with 96 per cent of the voting districts reporting: Ford 672,986 or 65 per cent for 55 delegates; Reagan 151,734, 34 per cent for 29.

In Maryland, with all the votes counted: Ford 94,784 or 58 per cent for all 43 delegates; Reagan 68,916 or 42 per cent.

Democrats

In Michigan, with 99 per cent of the voting districts reported: Carter 305,902 or 44 per cent for 69 delegates; Udall 303,585 or 43 per cent for 58.

In Maryland, the final count was: Brown 283,856 or 49 per cent; Carter 216,687 or 37 per cent.

In separate balloting for delegates, Carter won 32, Senator Henry Jackson 10, Udall seven, and four were uncommitted.

FORD STILL TRAILS

Ford, who picked up 98 delegates Tuesday to 29 for Reagan, still trails in the delegate count, but he narrowed the gap significantly. Reagan now has 514 and Ford 432, with another 383 uncommitted, many thought to be Ford backers who would be encouraged by the president's showing on Tuesday. A total of 1,130 is needed for nomination.

Carter built on his lead in Democratic delegates. He now has 712 of the 1,505 needed for nomination to 274.5 for Udall, who moved into second place. Jackson, who has stopped active campaigning, is third with 222 and Wallace is fourth with 145.

Brown, who says he expects the backing of uncommitted slates in New Jersey and Rhode Island and hopes to do well in the western primaries, said his Maryland win is the beginning of a drive to the nomination.

BY GUM, it's a smile dromedary style. A resident of New York's Bronx Zoo gives a flash of the old ivory to other-side-of-the-fence visitors.

Canada ends nuke co-op with India

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has decided to make permanent its suspension of nuclear co-operation with India. External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Tuesday.

The minister announced in the Commons that further cooperation with India in the nuclear field is not possible.

Nuclear co-operation with India was suspended in May, 1974, when that country exploded a bomb made from plutonium produced by a small Canadian-supplied pilot reactor.

Since then, negotiations have been conducted here and in New Delhi with hopes of getting India to agree to safeguards against use of Canadian-supplied material for nuclear explosions.

However, Mr. MacEachen's statement shows the government has given up on this.

Opposition spokesmen welcomed the announcement, but said it is only the first step toward a moral nuclear sales program.

Mr. MacEachen said last year he would not resume full nuclear co-operation with India no matter what the outcome of negotiations. STIPPLES WITHHELD

Tuesday's cutoff means Canada will not send what has been described as a bit of plumbing and heavy water to complete the RAPP II reactor it already has sold to India. RAPP I, another Canadian reactor, is in operation.

The Indians now are using Canadian technology to build other Canadian-style Candu reactors in Madras, without Canadian assistance.

The RAPP reactors have been tied down by safeguards weaker than those Canada is seeking from current customers.

In negotiations with India, Canada attempted to strengthen those safeguards. But it was unable to get India to agree to put a small Cyrus reactor that provided the plutonium for the Indian explosion under the same safeguards.

India made plain any new reactors it built could not be covered by Canadian safeguards.

Mr. MacEachen said the government "has decided that it would agree to make new nuclear shipments, only on an undertaking by India that Canadian supplies, whether of technology, nuclear equipment or materials, whether past or future, shall not be used for the manufacture of a nuclear device.

SAFEGUARDS REQUIRED

"In the present case, this undertaking would require that all nuclear facilities involving Canadian technology in India would be safeguarded.

"We would be prepared to reach agreement with India on this basis only."

Since negotiations started in New Delhi in late 1974, it was clear India would not include Cyrus under any safeguards.

PM persistent in noose debate

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau stood firm Tuesday on the government's bill to abolish capital punishment, telling the Commons he wants no exceptions to the proposed law.

Mr. Trudeau, responding to a suggestion from former prime minister John Diefenbaker that the death penalty be retained to discourage terrorism at this summer's Olympic Games in Montreal, said if some exceptions were made, the list could grow indefinitely.

Mr. Diefenbaker, an abolitionist, said the government should consider removing provisions of the bill which would do away with the death penalty for high treason, for killing or attempting to kill the Queen, and for the use of violence to overthrow governments.

"Many abolitionists in general would be retentionists in particular," Mr. Trudeau replied. "This is the case with much of the correspondence I have received from people who do not like capital punishment but feel it should be kept in this or that case."

The exchange came during the eighth day of debate on the contentious capital punishment bill.

HAVE FREE VOTE

MPs are to have a free vote on the issue, meaning they will not have to follow party lines. But the 28-member cabinet is committed to support the bill.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand discounted a U.S. news report that the Olympics are a planned target for terrorists. The federal government is spending $90 million on security for the games.

Mr. Allmand said the RCMP, the Quebec provincial police, the Montreal police and the armed forces have found no evidence of such a threat.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark, also an abolitionist, said outside the Commons that he disagreed with Mr. Diefenbaker's proposal because there was no evidence the death penalty would deter terrorists.

But he said Mr. Diefenbaker had made a reasonable request. Because the vote is free, it was appropriate that MPs air their feelings.

Beirut fighting ebbs

BEIRUT (AP) — Fighting in the Lebanese civil war diminished today but no truce appeared near in the tangle of internal politics and Arab diplomatic rivalries.

The shelling of residential districts on both sides of the Moslem-Christian front lines died away to an occasional round, but police said 45 persons were killed in Beirut street fighting and clashes around a Christian enclave north of the capital.

Still a major stumbling block was the awaited resignation of right-wing Christian President Suleiman Franjeh.

Elias Sarkis, a moderate Christian, has been elected by the House of Deputies to succeed Franjeh, but Franjeh refused again Tuesday to step down unless the leftist Moslem forces and their Palestinian allies stop attacking the Christian enclave.

Kamal Jumblatt, leader of the Lebanese left, wants a decisive military victory to force Franjeh out and end Christian opposition to his reform plans. He is demanding that the Moslems, with a majority of 60 per cent of the population, gain more political and economic power from the dominant Christian minority.

Jumblatt's hard line is opposed by some moderate Moslems, including Premier Rashid Karami, who told reporters that Jumblatt is mentally unstable and "adding to the catastrophe."

Syria, which has sent troops to Lebanese border areas and Syrian-controlled Palestinian units into several Lebanese cities, also opposes Jumblatt's drive for victory.

Palestinian guerrillas, fearing Syria's growing grip on Lebanon, have joined Jumblatt in his demand for a complete Syrian withdrawal.

Wine & Cheese Party

SUTTON — A very successful Wine and Cheese Party, sponsored by the A.C.W. of Grace Church, was held in the Auditorium of the Elementary school, Saturday night, May 8, under the sponsorship of Mrs. H. Hill and Mrs. G. Dyer and their very capable committee. Approximately 180-185 attended.

The Hall was very prettily decorated with kerosene lamps and lanterns, and the auditorium walls by Swiss motifs and banners representing each County of Switzerland.

QUAA takes steps to reduce violence

MAGOG — The Quebec Universities Athletic Association (QUAA) has taken steps to reduce brutality in hockey for upcoming seasons through rules adopted at its annual meeting held here last week.

The large portion of the ruling to be used next season had existed in previous years, but was dropped after being termed too extreme. When cases of intimidation, bench-clearing brawls and deliberate attempts to injure opposing players arose this past season, athletic directors with teams in the QUAA began to think seriously about clamping down in the collegiate circuit.

Basically what the new rules do is eject players who fight from that immediate game and for the next scheduled contest. While fighting is one of the main points in the crack-down, those players who receive any other major (five minute) penalties, usually involving injury or an attempt to injure, will also be handed game misconducts and be suspended for the following game. Bruce Coulter, Director of Athletics at Bishop's University, was one of the first to complain about excessive brutality involving QUAA clubs and sent a notice of motion to the association requesting the aforementioned rulings.

"What we're trying to do in the QUAA is develop our own hockey program. We're not trying to fill up our arenas like the professionals do, so the players don't have to go out to please the fans. We would like to keep our players playing hockey rather than trying to imitate the pros just to make a spectacle."

Coulter stated that a rule concerning fighting was introduced into the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Athletic Association (OSLAA) for three years and that the QUAA, which replaced it, continued to enforce it. For the past two seasons though, the rule was lifted because new Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) rules were becoming stricter and would apparently compensate.

In the 1973-74 season, only 10 major penalties were given by officials in the QUAA. The following year, that figure rose to 28 majors, and last season, the total increased again to 40.

The imposition of the new rule follows the current trend by many leagues in violence and brutality in hockey at all levels today.

Maybe the most important aspects of the ruling is that referees will be instructed to be on the watch for the aggressor or instigator of a fight to ascertain which player, as happens in many cases, wanted to start the altercation. It should certainly cut down on the incidents where "goons" go out looking for fights with the better players on the opposing club to put him out of action for five minutes.

Thanks to the unanimous vote bringing the rule back into force, university fans may enjoy watching some good amateur hockey next season without thinking they were viewing major junior or pro teams in action.

Robinson's freak homer gives Pirates win

Bill Robinson surprised not only himself but just about everyone else in the ballpark Tuesday night when he blasted a three-run homer in the ninth to help Pittsburgh Pirates beat St. Louis Cardinals in a National League baseball game.

To tell the truth, he really wanted to bunt.

St. Louis relief ace Al Hrabosky forced Robinson to swing away after getting two strikes on him and later admitted it was a mistake pitch.

"You get by if you've got location," said the left-hander known as the "Mad Hungarian" for his flamboyant manner. "The pitch was just where I didn't want it."

In Tuesday's other National League games, Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-0, Atlanta Braves stopped Houston Astros 3-2 and San Diego Padres trimmed San Francisco Giants 7-6 in 11 innings.

Rain prevented games at New York between the Mets and Philadelphia Phillies and at Montreal between the Expos and Chicago Cubs.

HITS 2-2 PITCH

Robinson hit a 2-2 pitch following a walk to Richie Hebner and a single by Al Oliver. Hrabosky, 0-3, struck out Willie Stargell and Richie Zisk before Robinson connected for his third home run, which went high over the left field wall.

Rick Rhoden pitched a three-hitter for his first major league shutout and had three hits and Joe Ferguson slammed a three-run homer as Los Angeles beat Cincinnati. Rhoden scattered three singles, walked four and struck out three for his third victory of the season without a loss.

Jim Wynn's run-scoring single in the 10th inning provided Atlanta with its victory over Houston.

Dave May led off the Braves' 10th with a double to rightcentre field off Houston reliever Mike Barlow, took third on Jerry Royster's single into centre and scored when Wynn's hard-hit grounder bounced off

Dave Winfield hit a one-out double and scored on Fred Kendall's force-out grounder in the 11th inning, lifting San Diego over San Francisco.

Winfield doubled with one out off loser Randy Moffitt, 2-2, and, after Doug Rader was walked intentionally, Kendall grounded to Speer. His throw to second forced Rader but the relay to first was late and Winfield, running all the way, beat Willie Montanez' throw home.

Hull and his Jets on hot spot

HOUSTON (CP) — Montreal Canadiens did their part. Now it's up to Bobby Hull and Winnipeg Jets.

Hull, a superstar first in the National Hockey League and now in the World Hockey Association, said earlier this season that if Montreal and Winnipeg emerged victorious in their respective leagues, it would be good for hockey.

His reasoning was that the Canadiens and the Jets are symbols of how the game should be played—with fast skating, sharp passing, good teamwork and a minimum of violence.

Montreal swept the Stanley Cup, losing just one of 13 playoff games, so it's up to the Jets. The WHA Canadian champions have lost only one playoff game this season, the fourth game of the Canadian final with Calgary Cowboys.

The Jets open the best-of-seven WHA final here Thursday night against the defending champion Aeros. The second game follows Sunday night, before the series shifts to Winnipeg for games next Tuesday and Thursday.

"I said it before and I'll say it again, to have Montreal and us win would be good for hockey," Hull said prior to the Jets' departure from Winnipeg on Tuesday night.

"It would help to prove to people that playing the game the way it should be played can still be the best way. It doesn't take violence to be victorious."

Hull speculated that Houston probably will be gunning for the Jets' top line of Hull, Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson.

Houston tried to slow down that line during the regular season, but in their four encounters, the Jets' high-scoring threesome accounted for a total of 16 points, with Hedberg getting six points while Nilsson and Hull had five each.

The clubs, who split the four games, haven't met since Jan. 14.

Houston will be minus the man who did the most damage against the Jets this season, Larry Lund. The fine playmaking centre, who has practically owned the faceoff circle against Winnipeg, scored four goals and had three assists in the teams' four meetings.

Lund injured his shoulder during the U.S. final against New England Whalers and will not be back until next season.

Yanks rally to nip Indians in 16

Billy Martin said the big play came in the 10th inning. Frank Robinson said there shouldn't even have been a 10th inning.

New York Yankees, trailing 6-1 after eight innings, scored five runs in the ninth, then came up with five more in the 16th to beat Cleveland Indians 11-6 Tuesday night in the longest American League baseball game so far this season.

Sandy Alomar and Thurman Munson had two-run singles for the Yanks in the ninth and Lou Piniella finally snapped the tie with a two-run single in the 16th.

But the big play, according to Martin, the Yankees' manager, came in the 10th when with two runners on base New York third baseman Graig Nettles dove to his right to knock down a line shot off the bat of George Hendrick and turn it into a forceout.

DIFFERENT VIEW

Robinson, the Indians' skipper, took a dimmer view of the matter, fuming about the walks his pitchers gave up that contributed to New York's ninth inning rally.

In Tuesday's other American League games, Boston Red Sox beat Detroit Tigers 5-3, Kansas City Royals defeated Texas Rangers 3-1, Chicago White Sox blanked California Angels 5-0 and Minnesota Twins edged Oakland A's 4-3 in 11 innings.

Rain at Baltimore prevented a game between the Orioles and Milwaukee Brewers.

Sparky Lyle, 3-1, pitched six scoreless innings of relief to get the New York victory in a four-hour, 28-minute marathon.

Alomar walked to lead off the 16th and took third when Roy White was safe on a throwing error by Cleveland pitcher Jim Kern. Alomar was thrown out at the plate on Munson's grounder. Chris Chambliss walked to load the bases and then Piniella looped his tiebreaking single to centre.

DRIVES IN TWO

Rick Miller, getting a chance to play regularly because of Fred Lynn's shoulder injury, drove in two runs with a basesloaded single with two out in the ninth inning to lift Boston over Detroit.

The Tigers had rallied for three runs in the bottom of the eighth—their first runs in 31 innings—to tie the game. Rick Burleson hit a three-run homer in the fifth for Boston, which has won six of its last seven games.

Kansas City's Amos Otis hit his seventh home run of the season to tie Cleveland's George Hendrick for the American League lead and Al Fitzmorris scattered seven hits to improve his record to 5-0 for the Royals, who moved into first place in the Western Division, 10 percentage points ahead of the Rangers.

Bart Johnson stifled California on three hits to record his first complete game of the year for Chicago and his first victory since his initial appearance of the season.

Dan Ford singled home pinchrunner Steve Brye in the 11th inning with the winning run for Minnesota. Twins starter Dave Goltz went all the way, scattering seven hits.

Wrestler Antonio Inoki would like tougher rules when he fights Muhammad

NEW YORK (AP) — Wrestler Antonio Inoki is angry.

He doesn't like the light-hearted attitude heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali has taken towards their June 25 bout in Tokyo.

"I am offended by his attitude," Inoki snapped. "He calls me 'that wrestler,' as if he doesn't even know my name."

"There is no reason for that. He doesn't seem to take our match seriously. But I can assure you it is serious to me and the people of Japan."

When Ali signed for this match, he took one look at the Japanese wrestler's prominent chin and immediately tabbed Inoki "The Pelican."

But the champion may discover that this pelican bites. On a tour of New York to promote his bout with Ali, Inoki took time out Tuesday to take some verbal swings at the champion.

"I see where Ali has signed to fight Ken Norton in September," Inoki said through an interpreter. "I think he will find that is a hasty and premature decision."

"After I get through with him, Ali will be in no condition to fight Norton or anyone else." TAKEN SERIOUSLY

"In Japan, our fight is a main topic of discussion. It is regarded seriously by me and my people. I have trained seriously for it and I hope for Ali's sake that he does, too."

Part of Inoki's training, he said, was to strengthen that prominent chin.

"I have done special training for my chin after he talked about it."

What was his chin training technique?

"I have had other wrestlers step on it," Inoki said quite matter-of-factly.

Ali isn't likely to kick Inoki in the chin, although the wrestler wouldn't be terribly upset if the rules of the fight allowed it. Instead, the rules will be more similar to boxing than wrestling.

"I feel the rules are very lenient," said Inoki. "I'd like tougher ones."

"I'd like rules that would allow one of us to finish the other. Really finish him, so that he would be no longer able to continue the fight."

The wrestler said his technique against the champion would depend on developments on the ring.

"For 17 years, I have found that a plan or formula vanishes when I enter the ring," he said. "Then it's animal instincts and automatic responses."

Curtis Stranger holding lead in North-South event

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — The favorites—including defending champion Curtis Stranger—continued to dominate during second-round action Tuesday in the 76th annual North and South amateur golf championship.

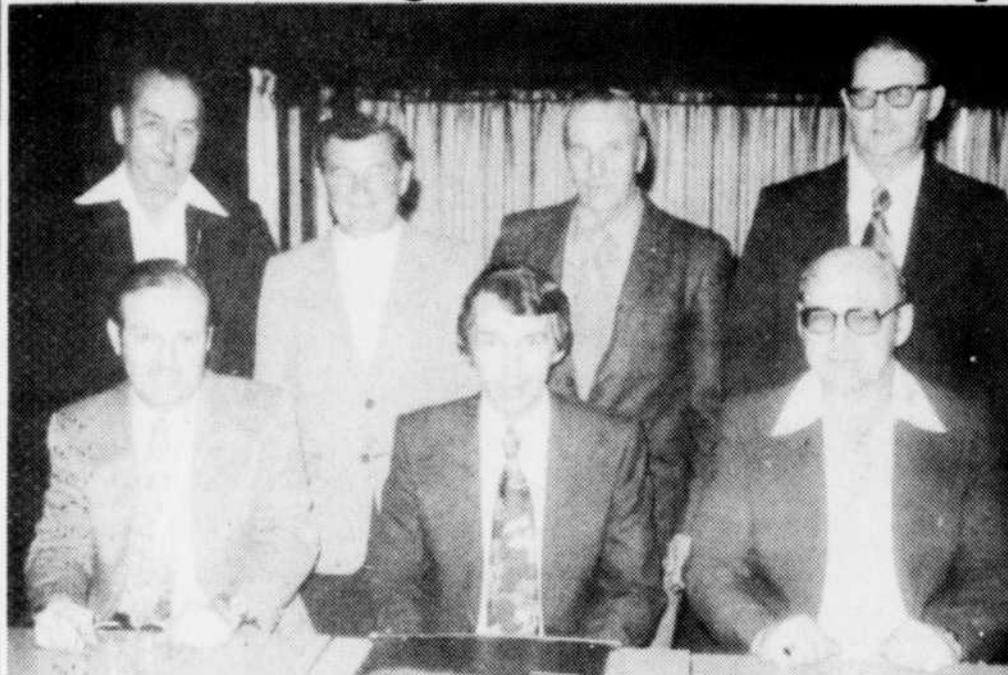

Strange, British amateur champion Vinny Giles, Fred Ridley—defending United States amateur champion—and veteran Dale Morney posted victories and advanced into today's double round that will trim the field to eight.

Strange, of Virginia Beach, Va., was challenged to the 18th hole by James Hamilton of Reading, Pa. Strange was three-over-par inousting Hamilton, 1-up.

Giles also was unhappy with his play after taking a four-up advantage at the turn over William Buttner of Plymouth, Mass., and the University of North Carolina.

Giles, of Richmond, Va., posted a 4 and 2 win. Morney, 56, of High Point, N.C., took a 4 and 2 win over David King of Beltsville, Md. Ridley was under par for the 14 holes it took to eliminate Bryan Beymer of Huntington, W.Va.

The 16th annual Early Bird Tournament is slated to take place on Saturday, May 29. This is open to members only. The Classic will commence May 30 and the Handicap event on June 12. The annual Men's Field Day will take place on the weekend of June 19-20.

President Martin has named Gerald Farrow and Francis Holland to the match committee while Arnold McVeay and Lloyd McTavish have added to the house committee. Robert Alger and George Joyal will attend to the greens department.

The W.A.G. League games start May 19 and the first buffet supper will be June 9. Dances are a part of the social action at the club and the first was held May 8 with Johnny Sciotte's orchestra playing to a record attendance.

The next dance will be on June 5 and Arnold McVeay says he has an excellent orchestra lined up.

The membership this season is increased which is always encouraging to those who work hard to make each year an outstanding one.

This year there is a new cook at the club house, Mrs. Alberta Rolleston, who is proving an asset and all meals are tasty and well served.

Canada's chances good in judo

When judo was introduced as an Olympic sport in Tokyo in 1964, no one doubted that Doug Rogers would win a medal for Canada. True to form, he earned a silver in the heavyweight division.

Twelve years later, Canada is stronger all round in the traditional Japanese sport. But Harishi Nakamura, the national team coach, is by no means certain of having any Canadian in the top three in Montreal. He rates middleweight Rainer Fisher of Waterloo, Ont., and light-middleweight Wayne Erdman of Kitchener, Ont., as the two best hopes.

Both were gold medalists along with lightweight Brad Farrow of Delta, B.C., at the Pan-American Games in Mexico City last fall.

All three have been named to the Canadian Olympic team along with Joe Meli of Lethbridge, Alta., a right-winger with Lethbridge Broncos of the Western Canada Hockey League, who surprised the experts by beating Chris Preobazenski of Toronto in the light-heavyweight class at the Canadian championships.

COMPETITION TOUGH

Fisher and Erdman "have a chance for a medal but the competition will be very good," says Nakamura.

"With Rogers, you knew when the competition began he was going to win a medal, but there are so many good fighters now."

Nakamura says the strongest teams are the Japanese, who won three golds in Munich in 1972, and the Russians, who won a gold and two silvers.

He says he would rate Canada about 10th in the world although no formal team rankings are issued.

The Canadians have been tuning up for the Olympics with tours of France, Japan and Cuba in the last few months. In Japan, on the most recent trip, "we lost a few but weren't too bad," he says.

"Our conditioning is good. We work twice a day—4½ hours total."

Perhaps more important, the team has worked on achieving a balance between technique and mental and physical conditioning.

SACRIFICES NEEDED

"You can develop the kind of mental toughness it takes to win with good hard training. A guy knows when he goes out on a date on Friday night that he is going to fight the next day. He has to watch what he eats, what he does. He knows that if he wants to win he has to make sacrifices."

Three Red Sox players are not talking about final club offer, to hold meeting with players

DETROIT (AP) — Fred Lynn, Carlton Fisk and Rick Burleson of Boston Red Sox maintained a stony silence Tuesday about the status of their contract negotiations, refusing to accept what the baseball club called final offer.

"The players are not saying anything about the talks," said a team spokesman. "They are not even talking to the Boston baseball writers on the negotiations, although they do talk to them about other things."

None of the players could be reached during the afternoon.

The spokesman said the next step is up to the players or their lawyer, Jerry Kapstein.

The offers to Lynn, Fisk and Burleson expired at noon Tuesday, the club said.

been withdrawn. START AGAIN

"We will start again and next time we will demand that the players be present," he said.

The Red Sox were in Detroit for the last two games of a three-game series with the Tigers. The Red Sox spokesman said there had been no recent face-to-face negotiations between the players and the club.

"Jerry Kapstein has been in either New York or Virginia and our people have been in Boston," said the spokesman.

He said the Red Sox wanted the three players to sit in on the talks, but said it would not necessarily mean all three would have to be present at the same time.

"I think the next step will be to arrange a meeting, either in New York, where we will be over the weekend, or in Boston the first of the week," he said.

Minister Jan Opperman out to win Indy 500 for funds to help out youngsters

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The name of his car is Spirit of Truth, and Jan Opperman, the self-styled hippie of auto racing and an ordained minister, is using his own experience with drugs and then religion to help troubled youngsters.

"I was a dooper for 20 years. I wasn't ashamed of it then, so I'm not ashamed to talk about it now," the 37-year-old driver said Tuesday in an interview in his Gasoline Alley garage.

Opperman, who qualified his Eagle-Offenhauser racer at 180.045 miles per hour on Sunday, was an admitted drop-out of the 1960s.

"I was disappointed with society the way it was and with my own life," he said. "I was really into drugs."

"Then I discovered the Christian way of life, which I found was remarkably better than both other life styles put together."

BUILDS LOG, CHURCH

Opperman became an ordained minister in 1975 and purchased a 155-acre ranch outside Noxon, Mont. All his winnings have gone into his Church of the Solid Rock, a 40-by-60 log structure where he helps young people strung out on drugs or alcohol.

"First of all, you listen to their story to see where they think they're at; then you tell them your story. Right away they see the similarity and realize I was nothing more than they are.

"Then they see what I've been able to do. We do lecture, but I try to do is introduce them to Him."

"Once they decide to do this, I tell them, 'I'm gonna be your boss for a while.' They like that. It's kind of like having a dad, totally committed to them."

PAYS FOR CHURCH

Opperman, who finished 21st in his only other Indy race in 1974, said he enjoys being a "mountain guy" more than racing, but that racing helps pay for his other work.

However, he added, racing "is rather spiritual in itself because man enjoys giving more than receiving."

"But in racing, you're giving a total physical and mental effort, and the results of failing are death or injury. This tends to be an exhilarating and cleansing profession because you have more on the line.

"So there's a tremendous emotional outpouring. You know all these people are pulling for you. You have a responsibility to them and to the Lord and that outstrips any other sport."

US Congress to create special committee to investigate all aspects of the baseball story

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to create a special United States congressional committee to investigate professional sports, especially baseball, was approved without dissent Tuesday in the House of Representatives.

The House took less than 10 minutes to pass the measure, sponsored primarily by Representative B. F. Sisk (Dem. Calif.), who told the body the legislation is aimed at major league baseball.

The measure sets up a 13-member special committee "to conduct an inquiry into the need for legislation with respect to professional sports."

"The committee's primary concern is baseball," Sisk said. "We have had football hearings. We are not going to re-do those hearings."

Sisk was in charge of a congressional committee that sought unsuccessfully for the last five years to return baseball to Washington.

After major league baseball rebuffed the committee last month by refusing to expand to Washington and instead granted an expansion franchise to Toronto, Sisk and other congressional members said they felt the owners had broken their promise and the legislation is the resulting action.

PRIME TARGET

Sisk indicated that baseball's anti-trust exemption will be a prime target of the new committee. "They (pro sports) are private enterprise, but they are permitted to do things under the law that are not permitted in other business," he said.

The committee, to be in existence for the remainder of the current session of Congress or until Jan. 2, 1977, will be able to hold hearings and has subpoena power to obtain documents it deems necessary in its inquiry.

Spring a time for exploring wildlife in the Townships

DIGGING LEEKS — Leeks growing wild in a sugar bush are gathered in May to be added to salads or cooked with potatoes to make a delicious soup. This wild plant of the lily family is much stronger in taste than the cultivated leek. The leaves appear before flowers develop and are broadly elliptical.

(Record photos by Barbara Stevenson)

FIDDLEHEADS — May is also the month to collect fiddleheads which are the unfurled fronds of the ostrich fern, a perennial which prefers rich soil near riverbanks, on fertile slopes or in woods. They should be picked before they reach the height of five to six inches and are delicious raw in salads or boiled briefly and served with melted butter.

Says consumers must pay more for beef

Stewart Brown, First Vice President of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, said recently that Canadian consumers must be prepared to pay more for beef if they wish to see the beef producers remain in business.

Brown, who farms and feeds cattle near London, Ont., said that the low beef prices of the last two years mean that producers have lost an average of about $50 per head. Much of this loss is being carried by the cow/calf operator and as a result he is cutting back on production.

Once demand starts to catch up with supplies, beef prices will rise to more realistic levels says Brown. Consumers have been enjoying a beef bonanza for the last two years but hopefully most of them realize that it has been at the expense of producers and will not object when prices start to increase as they must.

Brown pointed out that recently beef prices have been as low as they were in the spring of 1973 and that many cuts have been sold at prices well below those of five or ten years ago. Cheap beef has been the leader in the fight on rising consumer costs.

Now it is time for some other segment of society to lead that fight as producers can no longer afford to do so. The vice president said that his association predicts a steady rise in beef prices through the summer, with perhaps some modification in the early fall and then a further increase in the early winter.

If producers are to get back into a stable position, the average price of a pound of beef to the consumer will have to increase by about 30 cents. This will be the first meaningful increase in beef prices since the fall of 1973 and will still amount to less than 10 per cent per annum said Brown.

Brown pointed out that price levels alone don't tell the story of the producers' difficulties. Beef prices did not rise at all between 1974 and 1975 and in fact fell 5.5 per cent according to official Statistics Canada reports, and fell still further in the first three months of 1976.

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS (BS) — Spring in the Eastern Townships is a season to fill with saiks in forests and fields where the wealth of wildlife can be explored.

It's a growing time, when our knowledge of nature can grow as do the plants and flowers at this time of year. And while plants are taking their sustenance from the soil, we too are renewed and refreshed by experiencing what surrounds us.

After a winter of whiteness, a refreshing sight can be the yellow warmth of marsh marigolds set against the brilliant green of their leaves. Nearby will likely be a stream with the soothing rhythmic sound of water flowing over rocks and fallen branches.

Spring sounds nourish the spirit too, whether they be the haunting, wild cry of geese, the flute like chorus of frogs or the mosaic of various bird calls.

Spring, too, has its own distinctive tastes for the collector of edible wild plants. Wild leeks are the first plants to show in sugar bushes as they push up through last autumn's fall of maple leaves. Sautéed in butter and then pureed with boiled potatoes, they make a delicious soup.

It's difficult to say which is more fun — gathering fiddleheads or eating them. A sunny day spent collecting them by a fast running stream rivals the delicious taste of the unfurled fronds of the ostrich fern when boiled and mixed with salt and butter.

Birdwatchers also find this the busiest time of year for viewing different species as they establish territories and nests to rear their young.

The St. Francis Valley Naturalists' Club is currently holding its series of annual spring field trips. Bird watching is the main activity on these Wednesday and Saturday expeditions to various areas of the Eastern Townships, but one field trip is set aside on June 12 for viewing spring flora. The trips are organized for club members and information may be obtained by calling Ruby and Stuart Robinson at 567-0288, Pauline van Lier at 842-2308 or Fred Smith at 569-2918.

FIELD NEST — Four spotted brown eggs, likely those of the Wilson's Snipe, are seen in their nest which is set in long grass of a farm field. The bird is brown, with a striped back and an extremely long, slender bill. With birds building nests and raising their young now, birdwatchers are busy with plenty of subjects to view.

MARSH MARIGOLDS — The golden yellow flowers of the marsh marigold light up the streams and ditches where it grows and blooms in May and June. The fresh young green leaves can be eaten, but must be well cooked. The roots, when boiled, have been used for curing sores. The flower, also known as the cowslip, is a member of the buttercup family.

Canadian dairy cattle aid India increase production

OTTAWA — Canadian dairy cattle are helping India achieve increased milk production.

Research indicates that offspring of native Indian cows and Canadian dairy bulls produce eight times as much milk as native cattle. Three cross-bred cows can lift a marginal Indian farmer above the poverty line.

Two shipments of dairy heifers made the 8,000 mile air flight this winter from Toronto — one each to Bombay and Delhi. The Canadian Hunger Foundation, an affiliate of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, sent the heifers — and enough semen to service them at maturity — to two non-profit Indian organizations for local herd improvement programs.

"These are projects to better the lot of marginal farmers," says Catherine Harvey, project officer with the Canadian Hunger Foundation here.

The Canadian heifers will form the basis of a purebred breeding herd from which the progeny tested male offspring will be kept for semen collection. Semen from these bulls will be used for artificial insemination services and dairy herd management extension programs in rural areas by Indian veterinarians. Sale of milk from the female progeny will help support the foundation breeding herd.

Establishing purebred breeding herds in India is less expensive than importing Canadian semen for herd improvement on a massive scale, Mrs. Harvey says.

FAMILY PORTRAIT — Alia, left and her mate, Zeus, are St. Bernards belonging to Cindy Lvall of Labonte Road in Sand Hill who believe in a large family. They proved it by producing a litter of 16 pups. Three of the pups died. However, the remaining 13 six-week-old pups are happy and healthy as they frolic on the couch behind their parents in the above photo. The pups, the first litter for the pair consist of seven females and six males, assorted long and short haired.

Increased pork supplies expected

Though hogs on farms are still down the latest Statistics Canada report indicates some expansion is underway. However, it appears it will be into the fall months before increased pork supplies, compared to a year earlier, hit the Canadian market, the Meat Packers Council of Canada reports in a press release.

At April 1 Statistics Canada reports total pigs on farm at 5,323,000 head, down 5 per cent from a year ago. Western numbers were off 7 per cent, with the East down 5 per cent.

In the market pig category it is reported pigs over 3 months at April 1 were down 12 per cent. These are the pigs that normally provide the bulk of marketings for the current April - June quarter.

For market pigs under 3 months on April 1, the federal statistical collecting agency places numbers on a par with a year earlier. They report Eastern numbers are up 2 per cent from a year ago, with Western numbers down 3 per cent.

Farmers reported intentions to farrow 2 per cent more sows in the April June '76 quarter than in the same period a year ago. This was made up of a 5 per cent gain in Eastern Canada and a 1 per cent drop in the West.

Looking to the summer months it is indicated farrowing may rise 7 per cent in the West and 2 per cent in the East for a national gain of 4 per cent compared to last year.

The latest report indicates some modest expansion is likely underway, the hog and pork industry has considerable ground to make up. It appears 1976 gradings may be around 7.5 million head compared to the 10 million head marketed in 1971. To the end of April this year gradings were running about 14 per cent below a year earlier.

MEAT OUTPUT

The USDA recently forecast world meat output will rise by about 2 per cent this year. Some brief highlights for some countries covered in the report follow.

Australia - Production of beef and veal for 1976 is forecast at 1.75 million metric tons, up 5.6 per cent from 1975 and substantially above the 1.3 million reported in 1974. Cattle numbers in Australia appear to be levelling off, though the potential production of beef and veal remains high.

New Zealand - Beef and veal output for New Zealand is placed at 475 thousand tons in 1976, down 6 per cent from a year ago. The decline would be even greater if it was not for the anticipated kill-off in the South Island where there is a back-to-sheep raising trend. On the other hand, if grazing conditions deteriorate and/or the North American boneless beef market strengthens further the decline in slaughter may be less than currently predicted.

Argentina - Beef production rose 16 per cent in 1975, and a further rise of 8 per cent this year is anticipated. Argentine cattle numbers are expected to decline 1 to 2 per cent in 1976. Beef consumption in the Argentine rose to almost 200 lbs. per capita in 1975.

European Community - The 1976 pig crop in the EC is expected to rise about 4.4 per cent with 1976 pork output up about 3 per cent at 102.1 million head. Cattle slaughter for the EC is expected to decline about 7 per cent.

Japan - Pork output is forecast to recover about three-fourths of the 5 per cent decline of 1975. Imports in 1976 will likely be down about 25 per cent from last year's level. Domestic beef and veal production is expected to drop about 20 per cent, accordingly imports are expected to rise, with Australia continuing as the major supplier.

U.S.S.R. - Production prospects for 1976 indicate beef output will increase and pork production will decline.

Bonnyburn Farm to hold open house for new barn

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A friend may offer you a deal today. It could be a good one, but make certain you'll not be asked to bear the lion's share of expenses.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Beware of being unyielding or having too fixed an opinion today. You must be prepared to make changes to win your goal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't look for only the negative today, or you'll be stopped cold. It's better to light your one little candle than to curse the darkness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can tolerate most any type of person today, but you can't stand tightwads. Avoid those who don't pick up their end of the tab.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It usually rubs against your grain to go, hat-in-hand, seeking favors. Today, circumstances may force you into this awkward position.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Set aside for the time being tasks that you dislike doing. You won't do them properly and you'll irk others with your grumbling.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you're at your best in social situations. Today you tend to come on a little too strong, much to others' annoyance.

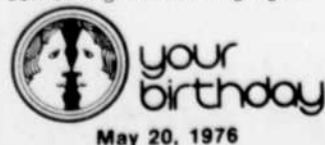

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your mate could be a problem today if you try to push him into something against his will. Treat him with kid gloves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) At times you have a way of saying things that you feel to be frank and honest, but that others find harsh and blunt. Be careful. Words can wound.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Lock-down in advance arrangements for any work or services you're having performed today. Otherwise, the size of the bill could floor you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Family members may give you good reasons to lose your cool today, but it's to your advantage to be extra-patient. Tomorrow they'll thank you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's not like you to hold a grudge, but today you're liable to put someone down for something he did long ago.

Your prospects for the coming year look very encouraging, but your progress may not be as rapid as you like. Keep in mind: Good things often develop slowly.

Satirical 'Short Ribs' stands alone

SHORT RIBS

by Frank Hill

By Bill McCoy

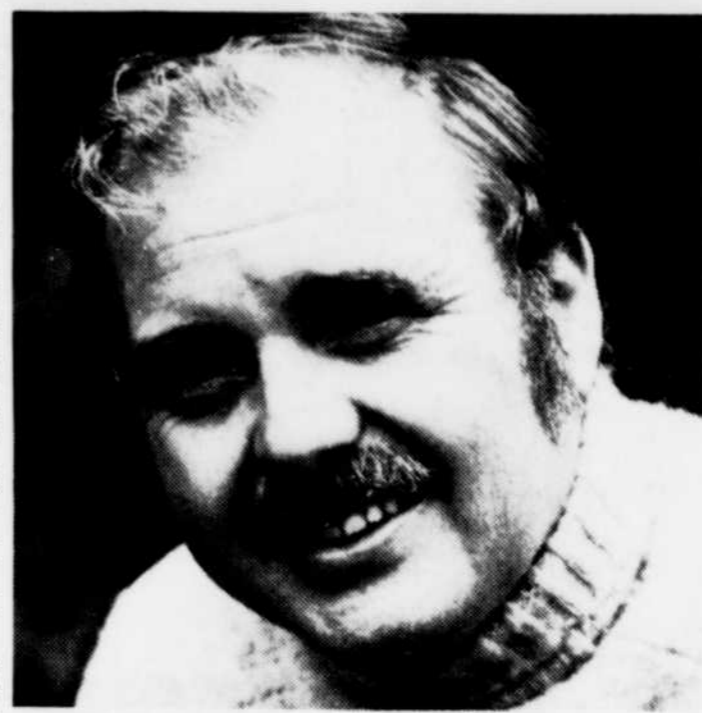

If you go in for classifications, you could say there's a class of newspaper comic strips that includes new, bright and very funny creations that even dare to comment on the social and political reality around us.

Short Ribs belongs in that class, but in its format it stands alone. Its cast includes a king and his court, two travelers from a distant planet, the populace of a western frontier town and several Soviet commentators. "The fact that Short Ribs is not locked into a strong central character gives it flexibility and makes the directions in which one can go seeking humor endless," comments its artist, Frank Hill.

Short Ribs gives one the opportunity to develop social and political comment in a subtle way," says Hill. "Having the characters in a different time frame than the readers allows people to laugh at themselves painlessly."

Hill took over the strip from its creator, Frank O'Neil, who retired in 1973. While in California schools, Hill says his strong point was drawing little pictures in the margins of text papers, in an effort to distract the instructors.

Bill McCoy is a writer for the Cheyenne, Wyoming Eagle.

Frank Hill: Short Ribs gives one the opportunity to develop social and political comment in a subtle way.

He graduated from the San Francisco Academy of Art after Navy duty during the Korean War. Then he became a package designer, and went on to design toys, games and greeting cards and to illustrate children's books. He then served as an art director for advertising agencies and publishing houses.

Hill worked full-time for O'Neil from 1960 to 1967 and contributed material periodically until O'Neil's retirement. He also worked with Hank Ketchum on Dennis the Menace and Half Hitch, and developed comic book versions of many animated characters on Saturday morning TV.

"I hope to make only the changes that I think will keep the humor of Short Ribs at a high level and in step with the times," he says.

Readers may have noticed a change Hill has wrung gags out of women's lib, high-powered recruiting in college athletics and corruption in high places.

The humor level of Short Ribs has always been consistently high, and Hill is sharpening it up. If you consider that the daily funnies may be one of the last remaining strongholds of genuine satire, it makes reading Short Ribs all the more worthwhile.

The art in Short Ribs has always been simple and functional. There is usually not a lavish attention to detail such as in background landscapes, and there is little shading used in the strip. Although all the characters are squat little people, the women have acquired some "cute" facial features lately. It's perhaps the only noticeable change that Hill has made in the art work.

Short Ribs is fairly new in comparison with some of the incredibly long-running strips such as Dick Tracy. But it fulfills a need on the comic page for a format with a variety of characters and settings. It gives the artist a wide range of material to work with, and the strip is never predictable. It is a continually refreshing strip and genuinely funny.

Among those present were Mr. Stanley Beerworth who acted as M.C. for the events, Rev. Ken McQueen of Ayer's Cliff, Rev. Ron Coughlin of Mansonville, and Rev. Wilson, a student minister in Baldwin's Mills.

He pointed out there is vast wealth there, where families are living in high rise apartments on the sea coast, while poor families are living in wooden huts on the mountain side just a few miles away. His pictures as he explained them made us all feel as though we were on the trip ourselves. Mrs. Evans thanked him very graciously.
