THE RECORD, MAY 13 - MAY 19, 2005

From the streets of Manila to the Townships

By Thomas Ledwell
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
SHERBROOKE

A world music troupe of a different brand will be passing through the Townships.

The young women who make up the Kaibigan vocal ensemble have travelled a long road, both literally and figuratively. Kaibigan has come from The Philippines to tour Quebec and parts of Ontario.

The 10 members in the group have come from abject poverty. They've risen from the slums of Manila to become flag bearers for the Kaibigan Ermita Outreach Foundation, the organization that gave them a brighter future.

The Foundation is the work of a Canadian. Twenty-five years ago, Alain Pronovost arrived in The Philippines to work with the poorest of the poor.

"When I first went to The Philippines," says Pronovost, "I found out that many children were neglected, abandoned, on their own, and I decided to do something about that. That's how it started."

Pronovost started the Foundation from scratch. The goal was to help get children off the street, and now provides shelter and education to hundreds of children in Manila's red light district. The choir was born of the Foundation.

"Arts are a fantastic way to rehabilitate, to give an opportunity to the youth to acquire confidence in themselves, to express themselves. That's how the choir came into the picture," he says.

From those humble beginnings, Kaibigan has taken off. Each year, in the lead up to Christmas, the choir is in high demand to sing at home.

They toured Canada in 2001, and several European countries last year. Kaibigan once again arrived in Canada two weeks ago.

"It's been non-stop," Pronovost says. "We've performed in concert halls, churches, community centres, schools, and it's going to go on like that for one more month."

Kaibigan helps raise money for the Foundation. Pronovost says it also raises awareness of the problems facing so many children.

"We're hoping that it will change something some how, I mean, in the long run," he says, "I've got no illusions, after working with the poorest of the poor for 30 years, but I still believe we can make a difference."

Pronovost has seen his fair share of disappointment as children have "vanished or disappeared" from the ranks of the choir. But Kaibigan has made a difference for many members of the choir.

The present members are all in school, or have already graduated from university.

Pronovost says that is one mark of Kaibigan's success.

"For young adults like them who have always been neglected, exploited, so disappointed, and not very well taken care of, they have learned how to express themselves," he explains. "They have learned how to acquire self-confidence. They have broadened their horizons."

KAIBIGAN WILL BE SHOWCASING ITS TALENTS AT THE UNITARIAN UNIVERSALIST CHURCH IN NORTH HATLEY MAY 20 AT 8 P.M., JOINED BY CHORO MONDO. KAIBIGAN WILL ALSO PERFORM AT THE SALLE ALEC ET GÉRARD PELLETIER IN SUTTON ON MAY 21 (ALSO AT 8 P.M.).

The Kaibigan choir will showcase its talents at the Unitarian Universalist Church in North Hatley May 20 and the Salle Alec et Gérard Pelletier in Sutton on May 21 (both shows 8 p.m.).

Lorne Elliott to launch season at The Piggery

By Wendy Denman
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

Funnyman Lorne Elliott will launch Townships Stage's 2005 Season of Laughs at The Piggery Theatre in North Hatley on May 21. His one night only show is a benefit for the second-year company.

"The launch is also our major fundraiser of the year," explained artistic director Sunil Mahtani recently. "We held our fundraiser last year towards the end of the summer. This year we decided to do something different and hold the fundraiser as a launch.

"We're delighted Lorne Elliott is performing, it shows his support for Townships Stage and what we are trying to accomplish here."

Mussels with Thai spices bring a zing

Dining

Here I go again, borrowing other people's ideas. Last weekend I was treated to a steaming and aromatic bowl of Thai-style mussels prepared by Pat Webster, a multi-talented weekend cook.

She apparently found the recipe in a book, but wasn't sure which one. The broth might have been a bit too hot for some at the large table, but not for me. I was in dinner heaven, and mopped up every bit of the spicy sauce with chunks of nice crusty bread.

Webster was nice enough to share the recipe with me, but I, after three glasses of Sancerre wine, misplaced the slip of paper where I had written her instructions. So, in my usual improvisational fashion, I decided to make the dish from what I remembered her telling me, and see what came of it.

The result was just as excellent, I must say — so perhaps the Sancerre didn't blur my memory after all. These mussels are a snap to prepare, and make a hearty meal when paired with a slice or two of nice country-style bread.

Just be sure to check the harvest date of your mussels on the label that comes with the bag, and buy ones that have been out of the water for no more than eight days. And if you're not a fan of spicy food, reduce the amount of green curry by half.

1 tbsp. soy sauce
1 tbsp. fish sauce
1 tbsp. green curry (I use the one which comes in a paper package, by A Taste of Thai)

ALEX'S PANTRY

1 red pepper
1 green pepper
1 can coconut milk
1 cup loosely packed fresh basil leaves (tip: buy a potted basil plant, pick off its leaves, then plant it in your garden so leaves grow back).
same measure (1 can) of water
1/3 cup vegetable oil
4 lb mussels, scrubbed and beards removed

Directions: Put the mussels in a big bowl full of cold water and shake them around. Discard the water and fill up the bowl with water again. Then scrub each mussel and remove their "beards", those little funny strings that they use to attach themselves to the bottom of the sea. And if you want to be really thorough, knock each partially-opened mussel against your kitchen counter and make sure you feel it responding, and slowly shutting its shell (this I learned from another foodie friend, Olivier van Lier).

In the biggest pot you own (it does have to be huge, or else you'll have to use two, as the mussels expand when cooked), warm up the oil and the curry paste over medium heat, stirring so they blend together.

In the meantime, core and chop up the peppers, then add them to the pot, with the coconut milk, the fish sauce and the soy sauce. Let it boil for about five minutes, then turn the heat off until you're ready to serve dinner.

At dinner time, heat up the Thai broth and add the mussels. Cover and let it boil for six to eight minutes, until the shells open. Serve immediately and remind your guests not to attempt eating the unopened ones.

A great barbecue begins with great seasoning

By Ron Eade
OTTAWA

More than once I've been asked by friends for my secret mix of herbs and spices that I rub onto chicken, pork, beef and ribs before tossing them on the barbecue.

Like the Colonel and his proprietary blend that makes Kentucky Fried Chicken so distinctive, I have — until now — been reluctant to part with my recipe. I find it's always better and more mysterious to whisper, "Oh, but it's a family secret my father passed on to me after I swore never to divulge it to anyone. Care for another beer?"

My friends nod knowingly, but if they whimper I'll offer them a sample to take home and try on their own barbecue.

Well, today I'm going to tell all.

No, I don't pay $5 or more for a tiny bottle of name-brand dry seasoning with someone's famous face on the label. And I don't carefully measure exotic ingredients to reproduce exactly the same taste time after time.

My secret is this: I go to a discount store where the price of everything is $1 or $2. I head straight to the herb and spice rack, where plastic bottles of seasoning typically sell in the $1 price range. (Each is roughly 13/4 to 5 ounces by weight, or 49 to 142 grams, depending on the spice.)

I grab whatever seems appropriate, then I go home and dump everything into a big mixing bowl. (No leftover half-bottles of seasoning for me.)

When blended, I have a year's supply of secret family heirloom barbecue rub for less than $10, which I pack and seal in two plastic yogurt tubs. I carefully store them under controlled temperature conditions (yeah, right!) in the kitchen cupboard beside the instant coffee.

And that's it.

As barbecue aficionados know, dry rub makes all the difference between ordinary food and superlative food. Simply massage the rub into meats before cooking, and guests will think you're a genius.

A rub is a simple mix of salt, sugar, spices and herbs that add flavour to the meat.

There are two ways to use a dry rub: Either sprinkle it on food just before grilling, when the rub acts as a seasoning. Or apply it up to a day in advance, in which case the rub both seasons and semi-cures the meat. The second way gives you a deeper flavour. To apply, simply sprinkle it over the food, then gently rub it in with your fingertips.

You typically use one tablespoon (15 mL) of dry rub per pound (500 grams) of meat. I use it on rotisserie chicken, too.

There are many different rubs, each with its own flavour characteristic. For example, Kansas City Ribs are covered in a thick, sweet rub that usually contains brown sugar. Memphis Style Ribs have a spicier rub, but use no or very little sugar.

Finding the right barbecue rub for your taste isn't difficult. Start with something simple: If you like sweet, add granulated sugar; if you want to spice things up, add maybe a teaspoon of cayenne pepper to the mix, along with some chili powder.

My secret formula always includes a few basics from the discount store: powdered garlic (not garlic salt), powdered onion, paprika, chili powder, two tablespoons (30 mL) of ground pepper and cumin. This year I threw in a 4 1/2-ounce (127-gram) plastic jar of Cajun seasoning, and a 5.6-ounce (160-g) container of something called "Soul" seasoning, which contains salt, sugar and a little MSG.

I also tossed in one heaping teaspoon (5 mL) of cocoa powder and a teaspoon (5 mL) of dry mustard. Next year, I may even add a little cinnamon.

Try it at home, and I'm certain you'll be satisfied with the result. (Unless you do something silly, like adding a whole bottle of fire-hot cayenne pepper, you can hardly mess it up.)

Use this rub on whatever meat you fancy, and you can smile knowingly, basking in accolades, as King or Queen of the barbecue this summer.

A taste of Broadway comes to Stanstead Theatre

By Nancy Nourse
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

A taste of Broadway will be available to theatre lovers Saturday at the Haskell Opera House in Stanstead.

Inspire Me! Songs of Inspiration from Broadway is an original compilation of music from shows such as Oklahoma, South Pacific, The Producers and Wicked, specially prepared in Montreal with musical theatre talents from both sides of the border.

Stephen Pietrantonio will not only be filling the shoes of producer/director, he will also be performing in this one-performance only, cabaret-style concert.

Readers may remember Pietrantonio from his roles in The Great Houdini, with the Yiddish Theatre at the Sayde Bronfman Centre, Company at the Centaur or when he produced, directed and played in Oh, Coward! at The Piggery Theatre last summer.

He has also performed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and recently produced a mini CD entitled Broadway Baby.

"We are offering this concert free of charge to the public as a pilot project to see how the audience reacts to the concert-style approach when it relates to songs from musical theatre," he explained, adding that the program will be a blend of traditional and less traditional interpretations by a total of 15 performers. "Adding to the energy of the evening will be the use of both the upright and baby grand pianos. Hosting will be Yvette Ghattas, whom I have a tendency to describe as a one-woman United Nations of Comedy."

Ghattas has performed in theatre, musicals and radio commercials for many years, acting as emcee at special events and creating a one-woman stand-up comedy show called Fresh Off the Boat based on her immigrant parents.

Included in her many talents is the ability to speak five languages and kickboxing. She recently launched Multiply Inc., a company that trains non-profit organizations how to fundraise more efficiently.

COURTESY STEPHEN PIETRANTONIO
Director/producer/actor Stephen Pietrantonio checks out the acoustics in the Haskell Opera House.

Performer Burney Lieberman's deep, enticing voice has graced many stages over the years, performing numerous leading and supporting roles in such Gilbert & Sullivan operettas as The Mikado and touring internationally with the Yiddish Theatre in their production of the musical revue On Second Avenue.

When not performing, Lieberman is an active volunteer, devoting time every week at the Jewish General Hospital and pursuing a parallel career in found art and portrait photography.

Joining Lieberman will be Neil Napier, one of the busiest theatre actors in Montreal. His recent credits include Into the Woods, The Shape of Things and The Foursome with Townships Stage.

He will be returning to the Eastern Townships this summer to perform in the musical Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change, once again with Townships Stage in North Hatley at The Piggery. He has also appeared in a number of horror films including Slashers.

"I like producing and directing as much as I do performing — spreading the power of words and music. Even though we are in the 21st century, we must try our best not to lose that human connection when many around us are turning to technology," said Pietrantonio. "This show has something for all ages and types. It is more than a recital, but not quite a full musical, featuring theatrical staging and live musicians, in an attempt to revive the connection between people."

"It is about exciting people about new opportunities, making opportunities when there seems to be few available, creating an alternative to the latest carnage on television today."

This group will not only be celebrating years of Broadway musicals but also commemorating something that is even closer to Pietrantonio's heart than his love of music. Special guest of honour for the evening will be Pietrantonio's mother who will be celebrating her 80th birthday by coming to see her son perform.

June Pietrantonio has been a lifelong supporter of live theatre, served on the board of directors of some community theatres and been a stage performer herself.

Artist from ex-Yugoslavia has first local exhibit

By Vanessa Lee
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

Marko Kovacina recently jumped at the opportunity to show a very special collection of his works in Sherbrooke.

"I wanted to show paintings that told a story about my departure from my native country of Yugoslavia, to Canada, the country that adopted me," said Kovacina, who is currently living in the Ottawa region.

Among the 30 or so paintings that will be displayed this weekend is one entitled My Friends, which he said could have easily been named The Fishermen.

A passionate fisherman himself, Kovacina was inspired by images of the sea, whether it be calm or agitated, as well as an old fishing boat abandoned close to the shoreline.

Dubrovnik also shares a similar theme.

"It's where I spent many vacations," said Kovacina, who has been painting for 30 years. "It's where I found refuge from the daily grind, and an oasis of inspiration."

Among his landscapes, Au Fond Du Vallon is one of his most recent works.

"Upon my arrival to Canada, I began observing all the colours in my surroundings, and I discovered another palette of greens, yellows, blues and reds. I was fascinated by the beauty, the richness, and the intensity of the colours of autumn, and the harmony of winter landscapes," said Kovacina.

Since then, his art has captured forests that are vibrant red and golden yellow, snowflakes floating in the air, snowcrystals reflecting in the light, and sugar shacks held in the heart of deep and removed woods.

When it comes to dead nature, one piece he mentioned is Les Grenades (The pomegranites).

"It represents the time in my childhood when grenades were growing freely, and in abundance. The picture evokes the warmth of a climate that is calm and serene, and the nostalgia of a past memory that is not forgotten."

Kovacina, who is an electrical engineer by trade, said art has always been a hobby that has inspired him to no end.

"I have taken advantage of every minute I have to dedicate to my paintings," said Kovacina. "My style has gradually crystalized. Those who know my work recognize my unique techniques and subject matter that is personal to me."

Proceeds from the show will go to Vuk Karadzic, a Serbian folk group in Sherbrooke.

THE MARKO KOVACINA EXHIBIT TAKES PLACE SATURDAY FROM 11 A.M. TO 8 P.M. AND SUNDAY FROM 11 A.M. TO 5 P.M. AT 162 WELLINGTON SOUTH IN SHERBROOKE. ADMISSION IS FREE.

Trésors d'ici open for business in Knowlton

'A central place was needed to expose these special crafts to the public' — owner

By Wendy Denman
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

Seeing there was a need to promote and expose the work of local artisans full time, Gillian Tenneson opened Trésors d'ici last December in Knowlton.

"This is the perfect place for artists and artisans. The countryside inspires us, the atmosphere nurtures us, the way of life offers the necessary calm and serenity to create," she explained. "But I discovered that apart from short-lived art tours and craft sales, most studios were off the beaten path and a central place was needed to expose these special crafts to the public. So I opened the boutique."

Tenneson returned to Quebec last fall after years working in advertising and related fields in Toronto.

"I just got tired of Toronto. I grew up in Montreal and we always came to the Townships for holidays. I needed a change, I needed a rest," Tenneson added.

"I had friends in Knowlton so I decided to settle here. I have owned businesses before, but never a boutique. I always wanted to run a craft boutique, but the opportunity never presented itself. Space opened last December where ReMax use to be and I decided to jump at it."

Among the many items on display and for sale are some of Tenneson's own crafts — satin pillows, beaded jewelry and découpage plant pots.

"I have a great variety in the store — wood items, pottery, hand painted cushions, a painting on slate, embroidered tea towels, needlepoint, handmade lamp shades. At the moment I have a wonderful quilt in the tulip pattern — every stitch by hand," said Tenneson.

Most of the items are on consignment and most are made locally, although Tenneson does buy from outside the region.

"I have gotten to know the artisans mostly through networking and visiting various studios. My prices vary, but it's mainly medium to higher priced," she explained.

"Artisans create because they want to not for the money, that's the fact. In many cases it takes hours and hours, in the case of the quilt months to create, you will never get the true time value. It's unfortunate but true."

Like many merchants in the region, she has found the last few months difficult. "It's a little scary out there. I keep the boutique open seven days a week — I have to, to draw in what customers there are," she said.

Vestiges of her background still in play, Tenneson and two other Knowlton merchants have put together a Shop the Village Brochure that is just being printed and is expected to be available by Victoria Day weekend, the first big promotion of the season. The new brochure will give visitors a chance to see what is available.

"Most of the town merchants wanted to be part of it, so the brochure is pretty inclusive," Tenneson concluded.

BRIEF

Seafarers

A recent NFB documentary film entitled Turbulent Waters about the daily lives at sea of seafarers working on merchant ships using Flags of Convenience (flags of countries with the lowest labor standards) will be presented at Stanbridge-Station's La Maison du Livre on Tuesday, May 24, at 7 p.m.

Following the film, Rev. Brian Evans, who for many years served as chaplain with the Canadian Seafarers, will lead an informal discussion on the ethical issues raised in the film.

Admission is free. For more information, call 450-248-3388.

LORNE:

Elliot, a Canadian broadcaster, comedian and playwright is well known for his one-man act of crazy skits and down-home pieces, accompanying himself on his guitar to such ditties as 'Morris the Moose', 'Shovelling Snow' and 'The Great Mosquito Hunt.'

His boyish grin and hallmark long, frizzy electrocut hair belie a wealth of creative talent. Though a Quebecer, living on the family farm near Hudson, Elliott is probably better known outside the province thanks to his frequent tours and radio shows.

"We are performing Lorne's play Tourist Trap (Aug. 24-Sept. 4) as our third show of the season," explained Mahtani. "This is the Quebec premiere. It's very funny, a real tour de farce. The main character is trying to rent his old cabin to tourists, with lots of tourist jokes — very appropriate for a summer season!"

Townships Stage took over the professional season at The Piggery last year and continues to do it on a year-to-year basis. Mahtani sees his commitment to the company as a long term investment.

"I want to make at least a 10-year commitment. It takes three to five years for a new company to get into stride and then you want to enjoy it!" he said. "I really believe in what we are doing here. We are working with la crème de la crème of Montreal actors, we have wonderful support. I really believe we are creating a mini Stratford right here in North Hatley."

Mahtani added that everyone involved with Townships Stage learned a lot in 2004.

"I am very happy with our upcoming season, I think it's better than last year, and we were happy with our first season. But we want to keep improving," he explained. "We are presenting three comedies and they're all very good. We found out that comedy is what the summer audiences really want — that's the purpose of Townships Stage, to give audiences at The Piggery the plays they want to see."

The 2005 summer season begins on June 22 with the musical I Love You, You're perfect, Now Change.

"It's a phenomenon. The musical has been running in New York City for eight years. It's hilarious," Mahtani said. "This is very safe theatre. It's our biggest play of the season and we're presenting it first to start off with something really, really great. Due to our success last year with Norm Foster's golfing comedy The Foursome, we're bringing another of his plays to the stage this year — The Love List (July 27-Aug. 14). This hysterically funny comedy warns you to be careful what you wish for."

Last year, one of the biggest challenges for Townships Stage was to build a professional theatre company without government support, relying on individuals to help launch its season. With the help of some firm believers and an enthusiastic audience, over 4,500 people attended the plays. Tickets for the fundraiser on Saturday, May 21 are $30.

"This evening will be accented by a lovely reception, complete with wine and hors d'oeuvres. The reception will include an opportunity to wine and dine with Lorne Elliott and a silent auction with items for every taste and budget," he concluded.

TICKETS FOR THE LORNE ELLIOTT CAN BE RESERVED BY CALLING 819-565-4957 OR TOLL FREE 1-866-565-4957.

Revenge of the Sith pulls viewers to the dark side

By Katherine Monk
MOVIE REVIEW

If you rearrange the letters in Sith, you get a mighty good idea of what's steaming down the pipe in this latest, and mercifully last, instalment in the once mighty Star Wars franchise.

Like the previous two bloated Star Wars reels overladen with special effects, digital images and some of the worst dialogue ever written, Revenge of the Sith is an anemic script pumped up on so many cinematic steroids, it's lost all sense of dramatic finesse.

One minute, we see our one-time hero Anakin Skywalker (Hayden Christensen) show tender love and vulnerability to his wife, Padme Amidala (Natalie Portman). The next, he's swinging his light sabre through children, or as they're known in Jedispeak 'Younglings.'

It's quite the transformation, and Anakin's famous metamorphosis from light to dark is the pulsing thematic core of the entire epic, not to mention the very essence of this particular episode.

We all know Anakin will emerge as Darth Vader in this chapter, the only thing we don't know is why. Why would this brave and righteous Jedi knight suddenly lose patience with his Jedi masters? Why would he betray everything he became in order to serve a morally bankrupt leader? Why use his powers for evil instead of good when he's got a beautiful, pregnant wife who loves him?

The script attempts to give an answer that we can buy, but from the moment this addled ride begins with the familiar trumpet blast and the receding, overwritten precis, it struggles with motivation.

The flaw shows up early because Anakin betrays character in the opening few scenes as he kills off Count Dooku (Christopher Lee) in order to save Palpatine (Ian McDiarmid). Though any audience member can see Palpatine bears a creepy resemblance to the holographic Sith lord who pops up throughout the franchise, these things are hard for Anakin to see — despite his special blood and 'chosen one' status.

He kills Dooku on the spot at Palpatine's urging. Had he enjoyed this ritual execution carried out in the heat of battle, we might have bought his further seduction to the dark side and the movie could have suckered us into the painful, but unstoppable, downward spiral of Anakin Skywalker's destiny.

The whole movie hinges on Anakin and his mental state, but Lucas — who consistently finds more enjoyment in creating manly battle sequences with glowing light sabres — fails to find the discipline to keep Anakin at the fractured centre of his frame.

Every five minutes, there's a new distraction featuring computer-generated creatures and characters from the other films. There's even a whole subplot with Wookies and Yoda, but to be completely honest, I had no idea what the purpose of that plot was — other than showing us Chewy in his pre-Solo days.

Clearly, for people who have not seen the other movies, watching Revenge of the Sith will be a fruitless exercise. Without knowledge of the backstory, the movie makes no sense. Those familiar and fanatic about the franchise may have an entirely different reaction, because so much of Revenge of the Sith feels like it was made for idiots as a result of bad dialogue, oversimplified explanations and that critical lack of directorial finesse.

Stranger still, the scenes don't always match up emotionally. Some don't even look like Lucas was calling the shots, with two completely different directing styles emerging in the action scenes and the dramatic moments.

Apparently, Lucas had help from Steven Spielberg in the storyboarding process, and the Spielberg touch is palpable in the use of extreme close-ups and manipulated poignancy. These 'Spielbergian' moments are actually some of the strongest moments in the movie, even if they don't match the tone of the surrounding context, because we're actually getting the story — not a seizure.

Though the dialogue is terrible, the acting stiff, the action sequences contrived and the delicate emotional tone manhandled into mush, this is still the strongest of the three prequels.

AUTOLUX
Future Perfect
(Red Ink)

Autolux claims to "know a lot about the future." If the cover art isn't enough to conjure up thoughts of futurism, the music will send you tripping into space. Autolux has polished off an album that moves from ethereal vocals to guitar dissonance and back. The album is true to the musicians' post-grunge, indie rock roots. The music has moved into the new age with countless layers of instruments, vocals, and electronic breaks pierce through melodies. Autolux landed a label deal with a five-song demo recorded on an 8-track. By the time they left the studio, they had a highly mastered album that attempts to capture the energy of the band's live performance. It's hard to put a label on the sound. Autolux claims, "We are pop music."

AMERIE

(Sony Urban Music/Columbia)

Critics of Amerie's first album wrote her off as just another bombshell with a nice enough voice to carry a tune. Reviewers claimed record execs were trying to use her mixed heritage — Korean-American and African-American — as a way to sell R&B to a wider audience. The reviews may have gone too far too fast. Amerie didn't have a hand in writing songs for her debut album. On Touch, she raises the stakes. Amerie's fingerprints are all over the album. She has once again teamed up with producer Rich Harrison. Harrison has become renowned since writing and producing Amerie's first album, and has worked with R&B superstars Beyonce, Destiny's Child, and Jennifer Lopez. Touch is marked by a number of choice samples ranging from '70s funksters the Meters to Earth, Wind, and Fire. If cuts from the first album were enough to launch Amerie to the Top 40, this second effort should make waves.

LOUDON WAINWRIGHT III
Here Come the Choppers!
(Sovereign Artists/Fusion 3)

Singer-songwriter Loudon Wainwright returns from the grim self-examination of 2001's Last Man on Earth to find humour again on Here Come the Choppers! The title track conjures a helicopter attack on L.A., where they attack Staples, Blockbuster and Office Depot and, my god,

"They're strafing Ralph's/ Attention shoppers/ Get out of the store/ Here come the choppers!" Wainwright assembles a crack band that includes jazz guitarist Bill Frisell, guitarist and pedal steel player Greg Leisz, bassist David Piltch and drummer Jim Keltner.

SWEATSHOP UNION
United We Fall
(Battle Axe/EMI)

On its third full-length, the seven-member Vancouver collective Sweatshop Union combines boombox playability with individuality. Rhyme topics include intoxicant excess, societal injustice and motivational crises. Beats dip into rock and jazz while maintaining bounce. This is a plenty-solid album, fusing hooks and thoughtful lyrics, without bandwagon-hopping.

WEEZER
Make Believe
(Geffen)

The 'Beverly Hills' single released prior to the album was cause for concern. The song so misguidedly merged current radio-friendly, vapid frat boy rock schlock with a disrespect for comprehensive song structure it made Gwen Stefani's 'Hollaback Girl' sound like genius. Thankfully, the rest of the album isn't nearly so limiting. It actually contains a couple of smartly crafted tunes that harken back to Weezer's glorious Green album days, when big jangly guitars and Rivers Cuomo's brokendown boy vocals were dispensed with personal yet tongue-in-cheek musings about girls and drugs and the more mundane aspects of life. The album remains true to loyal Weezer fans who got their kicks from old songs like the 'Sweater Song' or 'Buddy Holly', with fuzzy guitars and ridiculous lyrics and tempo changes that add up to a lot of shiny, guitar-fuelled pop songs with Cuomo's crazy edge.

AIMEE MANN
The Forgotten Arm
(SuperEgo Records)

The relationships — they're not working out again. Mann gathers the gluttons for punishment for another album. Her eye and ear remain trained for the lonely, badly used love victim locked in a cycle of need and shame. Love as addiction remains her metaphor and theme, which all the inner contradictions of her songs try to redeem. "Loser" is a word that recurs amid the nearly too-perfect rhymes, but Mann has a road-house, roots sound to open up her folk essence.

OSCAR PETERSON (DVD)
Solo '75

(Eagle Rock Entertainment)

We have a tendency to take our national treasures for granted, believing they'll always be around, even if mortality tells us otherwise. Oscar Peterson, Montreal's gift to the art of jazz piano, has been slowed by health problems these last few years, and that make us want to experience his music once again when he was at the top of his game, as he was when he played this solo piano concert at the 1975 Montreux jazz festival. Early in his career, Peterson was seen as a protege of the great Art Tatum, because he could play at the breakneck tempos Tatum made famous. He does that a few times here, most notably on 'Indiana.'

DVD of the week

By Katherine Monk

Hoop Dreams: The award-winning documentary comes to special edition DVD just in time for the National Basketball Association playoffs, and it's the perfect antidote to all that ego and airball theatrics.

Years in the making, filmmakers Peter Gilbert, Steve James and Frederick Marx follow two high-profile contenders as they move from high school towards the NBA draft. Arthur Agee and William Gates are two very different kids with similar life tangents — or so it seems. Just two of thousands of hopefuls, the filmmakers follow each one through the painful, often heart-wrenching process to offer a rare glimpse into the backstory of professional sport.

No Time for what you'd like to be doing?

By Rebecca Wigod

Heather Menzies teaches one course a year at Carleton University, but don't call her an academic.

"I'm a writer first and foremost," she protested recently. "Ninety per cent of my time, I'm working on books or writing magazine articles."

Menzies has seven non-fiction books to her credit. Her only academic credential is a BA, but recognizing her accomplishments and the seriousness of her inquiring mind, professors pay her the compliment of calling her a scholar.

It took her six years to write her latest book, No Time: Stress and the Crisis of Modern Life, a detailed exploration of how our society, full of busy, stressed-out people, is starting to fracture at the institutional level.

Publisher Scott McIntyre, of Douglas & McIntyre, would have had to wait even longer for it if she had a full-time university teaching job, she said. "I couldn't have written this book if I'd been multitasking. I had to go for long walks and just sit by myself and cogitate."

Menzies called her book No Time because that's the sighing answer her friends give when asked if they've read a certain book or seen a certain play.

Yet she widens her inquiry well past the effects of stress on individuals. She went to Walkerton, Ont., to talk to Lisa Stroeder, a 27-year-old clinical nurse in a seniors' home there. Although Stroeder wasn't in a position of authority, she started giving the seniors bottled water, instead of tap water, as soon as she suspected there was a problem with the town's water supply — and before officialdom acted.

"What's amazing is, it was real to her," Menzies said. "It wasn't data on a screen.

The water was right there, and she knew that that water in the jugs, ready for the 4:30 (dinner) sitting, was going to go down the throats of those seniors."

Menzies is convinced that health professionals and other white-collar workers have become so accustomed to working with disembodied data on computer screens that they are losing the ability to attack problems with common sense.

Until Stroeder took action in Walkerton, the townspeople had been "silenced bystanders," she said. "That's what I worry about — we're all being turned into silenced bystanders."

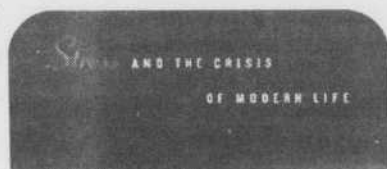

Menzies has a philosophical turn of mind and feels honoured when other writers call her a humanist. She said she's exploring difficult ideas in No Time, but she wrote it as engagingly as she knows how so that lay readers would want to engage with the ideas.

The average person is intelligent, she said, and "willing to take on complex ideas, if you can render them in everyday terms."

However, Menzies also hopes to get through to society's decision-makers.

"I'm addressing this (book) to decision-makers at policy levels in government and industry. I want the people running schools and hospitals to pay attention to this," she said.

What movie stars are saying about tobacco

By Jay Stone

The glamour of Hollywood life? Just picture actress Lara Flynn Boyle, a dedicated smoker who says you can get one good puff of a cigarette in an airplane restroom, "then you have to exhale into the toilet and flush the butt all at the same time."

Boyle is just one of the characters in Hollywood Speaks Out On Tobacco, a new book that compiles a library of movie star quotes as part of a long-running initiative to reduce the impact of tobacco use in films.

It was written by Curtis Mekemson and published by Grassroots Solutions Inc., a non-profit organization based in California. Mekemson is a 62-year-old Sacramento writer and activist with the American Lung Association who also created the Hackademy Awards, an annual project that catalogues tobacco use — 72 per cent of 286 movies monitored between June 1, 2003, and May 31, 2004, contained tobacco — and chastises the movies that feature the most smoking.

The book quotes a Dartmouth University study that says smoking in movies is responsible for half the children and teens who start; a University of California researcher concludes that 1,070 children start smoking every day as a result of smoking in the movies. It quotes a Philip Morris marketing study as saying "most of the strong, positive images for cigarettes and smoking are created by cinema and television."

Boyle, who is quoted from a 1999 magazine interview, is one of 88 celebrities who make it into the book in various forms, both as unregenerate smokers (Johnny Depp wants to start his own airline, called AirSmoke, where "smoking would be mandatory") and reluctant users (Teri Hatcher says she hates to be asked to light up for a role. "It's difficult to refuse, but I wish I could.")

The book also includes examples of tobacco-related anti-social behavior — Britney Spears dumping an ashtray full of cigarette butts off the balcony of her Los Angeles apartment, littering the street below — and minor tragedies: Angelina Jolie refused to appear in a scene in Tomb Raider in which she was supposed to show her naked bottom because she was out of shape due to smoking and drinking (a body double was used).

Some celebrities started to smoke involuntarily. Salma Hayek smoked her first cigarette when she starred in Frida, the movie biography of Mexican artist Frida Kahlo, and "I really got hooked." (Hayek eventually quit, but she admits to a cigar habit.) John Travolta chewed tobacco for the first time in Urban Cowboy, and is quoted as saying: "I wouldn't mind having it again once in a while."

Mekemson outlines some of the unconventional strategies that stars use to quit. Elizabeth Hurley tried sucking on a baby pacifier, while Drew Barrymore — who began smoking when she was 9 1/2 years old — hired a therapist who used "bioenergetics" by waving his hands over her while exhaling loudly.

For Mekemson, the Hackademy Awards and this book are strategies to fight smoking by deglamourizing it and showing the reality of smoking as it affects famous people whose opinions matter to young people.

"I can talk until I'm blue in the face about addiction to young people, but when Ozzy Osborne talks about it, it's a little different."

Mekemson argues there should be no tobacco in child-oriented movies and its use should be reduced in R-rated films, but he is discouraged that after 10 years of effort at educating the entertainment industry, there is no noticeable decline in tobacco use in films.

Jet Li about more than violence

Movies

By Jamie Portman

Jet Li has this dream. The former world martial arts champion turned international movie star wants to do a film which has no action — a film which is solely driven by drama and character.

But he knows that the big movie studios in Hollywood and Asia will do everything possible to prevent him from fulfilling this dream.

"The reality, the truth, is that whether the studios are in Asia or America, they are a business. They look at you and you've already proved you can do action films, so you do action films — continue continue — until one day that you prove you can do more than action."

He proves that he can do a lot more than action in his new film, Unleashed, which opens Friday. To be sure, it's still one of the most violent movies he has ever done with a pulverizing opening sequence in which he brutally eliminates several opponents who are out to kill him.

But he also sees this decidedly off-beat story as an important transitional project because it requires him to deliver a performance of genuine emotional depth — a performance which reveals a new and vulnerable Jet Li — and it was this aspect which scared off every Hollywood studio when Li, in his capacity as producer, sought financing.

"When we sent it to the studios, nobody wanted to make it. So that's why I went to Europe to make this film — to try to find a little bit of opportunity to prove I can do more than just fighting."

So he returned to France and to writer-producer Luc Besson, with whom he had worked earlier on Kiss Of The Dragon and who had come up with the unusual plot for Unleashed — a plot that in Hollywood's eyes made the film unmarketable.

And the project did come together in Europe and it eventually found a North American distributor in the risk-taking Rogue Pictures.

"Unleashed pushed me beyond my limits in a number of ways," Li says.

Jet Li (left) is Danny, a slave who has lived his whole life without any sort of normal human education, with the mind and personality of a young child, with only one lesson learned: how to fight. His master is Bob Hoskins.

When he first discussed the film with Besson, he said he wanted to do a more serious movie which showed that violence is not the only solution to life's problems.

"Then two days later Luc gave me the idea. He says: 'What about you play dog saved by music?' I go: 'Dog save by music? Okay. cool.' I like it very much."

Li's highly abbreviated plot description is essentially what Unleashed is about.

Set in the gritty underside of Glasgow, it features Bob Hoskins as a ruthless gangster who maintains his frightening power over rivals through his enforcer Danny, a robot-like agent of destruction played by Jet Li.

Danny is one of the emotionally wounded: he has been under this vicious mobster's control since childhood, and has been conditioned to act violently on command.

He lives in a cage like a dog and wears an iron collar around his neck: when Hoskins' "Uncle Bart" removes the collar it is a cue for Danny to attack people and if necessary kill them.

Danny's life changes when he has an accidental encounter with a kindly blind piano tuner (Morgan Freeman) and the old man's stepdaughter (Kerry Condon), and they give him shelter and show him the transforming power of love — and music.

But when Danny's underworld keepers track him down, he finds himself once more forced to fight to save himself and those he now cares about.

Director Louis Leterrier (The Transporter) says Unleashed, which is already a hit in Europe, was an important gamble in Jet Li's career.

"For the first time he acted in a register that he had never before attempted. He had to be vulnerable, emotional, destabilized, fragile. A real acting performance had to be added to the physical performance. He had to be believable as a lethal weapon and as a poor soul who discovers the world."

The mercurial Li has shown up for his interviews this morning looking incredibly boyish under a black baseball cap.

It's initially hard to believe that he is 42 years old, the father of four daughters ranging in ages from 17 down to 2, and that he has been a huge martial arts star for 25 years.

He talks rapidly and enthusiastically, and sometimes his English lets him down as the ideas keep pouring out.

It becomes clear that he had a firm grasp on what was needed of him if he was to be credible in this film and that he knows he owes a debt of gratitude to seasoned costars like Freeman and Hoskins, who gave him advice and support, as well as the "wonderful" English acting coach who worked with him for two months prior to actual shooting.

Many fans thought Li had reached the summit of his career with last year's hit, Hero. But he's still troubled that North American filmgoers, especially the younger ones, have an almost knee-jerk reaction to his name.

"They think: 'Jet Li — oh cool! Kick ass!'" He used to be happy with that reaction but lately it's been bothering him.

"That's the only message I give to young kids? I hope that I can give more than just that."

"That's why I wanted to make this film so that younger people see that violence is not the only solution. Look at Danny. He's physically very strong — he can knock out 20 people in a few seconds — but he's an animal."

"He doesn't care about others. Humans care about others — that's the difference. Something cooler than action, cooler than martial arts, is love."

Johnny Reid knew he'd make it

Music

Johnny Reid will be performing a benefit concert at The Piggery Theatre in North Hatley. Reid is one of the newest rising stars in Nashville, but many of us are not familiar with the young man.

Back when he was a Bishop's student, it was a common thing to see Reid on the streets, in restaurants or again to catch him playing a gig in one of the local bars. Back then, the goal was clear in his mind, he wanted to pursue a musical career.

He was going to Nashville and he would put his talent to use. Many believed it was almost impossible to accomplish that and that Reid was in for big time deception. The young singer/songwriter has a positive attitude and a lot of determination. Nobody heard from him for a while until he popped up on CMT with his first video.

Again, many said they weren't surprised while others felt happy for the one-time resident of small town Quebec. Now, he's coming back to town with a brand new album and two hits under his belt. His dream came true and I am happy to see that his huge talent was recognized.

Well, we are proud of you, proud to be the crowd you entertained back when all this was only a dream.

Reid will be performing Friday, May 13 and Saturday, May 14 at 8 p.m. at The Piggery. There are a few good tickets left. Don't miss this wonderful performance and if you remember, Reid was always an entertainer with a lot of energy and soul to spare.

Another newcomer is Keith Anderson, who recently released his debut album, Three Chord Country and American Rock & Roll. This is a very impressive debut album by a young man who was already known as a prolific songwriter.

He wrote 'Beer Run,' recorded as a duet by Garth Brooks and George Jones and nominated for a Grammy. He also wrote 'The Bed' recorded by Gretchen Wilson and Big & Rich.

Anderson has been involved with the Muzic Mafia a lot and you can feel the influence. Just take notice of the guitar-oriented production, which can be compared to what you hear on Wilson's debut album. It is raw and rootsy as can be, filled with gems. The album offers a lot of boogie tunes, set to heavy guitar work, infectious fiddles and rollicking pianos. There's a lot of energy invested in this collection and everything suggests that it must be a blast to see Anderson perform live.

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

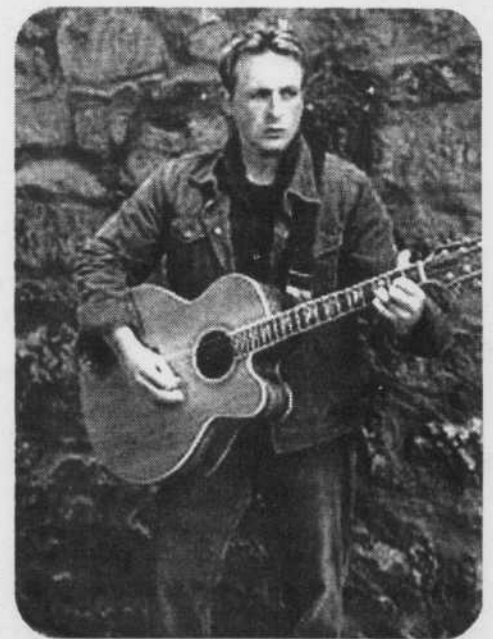

There are a few ballads such as 'Lazy With Your Love' and the terrific, heartfelt 'I'll Know It When I Get There'. Noteworthy is 'Podunk', which captures the feelings of excitement of someone who leaves his small hometown.

There's also the love tale 'Every Time I Hear Your Name' and 'Plan B' about moving on in life. 'Pickin' Wild Flowers' is the first single, a very flirtatious number while 'XXL' is an anthem for big boys.

The whole album is a bit edgy but also trendy and bound to stand out. If his sophomore effort follows the path of the debut, Anderson holds the promise of a great career as a recording artist.

Born and raised in Oklahoma, Anderson moved to Nashville in the spring of 1998, hoping to pursue a career as a singer/songwriter. He looked-up George Ducas that he had met a couple years before at a football game.

Ducas introduced him to other songwriters and that's how Anderson started co-writing. This opened a lot of doors for the young performer. In 2002, Anderson and his group won the Jim Beam Country Band Search which led to his Arista contract.

This debut album is outstanding, his growl is irresistible but somehow his music is refreshing. He's not just another clone.
