Firefighters learn to leap safely off tall buildings

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

They call themselves Westmount Fire Flies.

The local firefighters may not be able to glow in the dark, but they're learning to rappel down buildings to rescue anyone caught above the reach of an aerial ladder.

"It could be someone trapped at a window by fire or a window washer whose scaffold is stuck," trainer Tony Lazar said. "I'm not saying we can do miracles, but in the case of someone suicidal, for instance, we might be able to tie ourselves off without danger to talk to them on a ledge."

The 40-year-old Westmount fire lieutenant was certified in November as an instructor in high-angle rescue by Seneca College in Newmarket, Ont. After the week-long course, he's now starting to teach members of his own shift.

He hopes to train the other three shifts so that every shift will have the expertise to respond when needed.

High-angle rescue is intended to move victims quickly to a nearby balcony or other safe place, he said; not to raise them up or down numerous storeys of a highrise building.

Westmount Fire Flies train from the three-storey No. 2 Fire Station at Victoria and The Boulevard. They've also been practicing on the city's old incinerator, a 10-storey building at Corporation Yard.

All firefighters may not want to rappel, Lt. Lazar said. "Hanging on to a small line off Westmount Square isn't the same as climbing an aerial ladder with a half-million dollar truck below you. I won't force anyone to do it." So far, though, he's proud that everyone in his shift has wanted to practice.

At 52, firefighter Bill Jacques was just as eager as fire academy student Normand Lapierre, a cadet some 30 years younger. "Sure, I went over the edge," he said proudly. "At the incinerator, too."

"The guys love it," Lt. Lazar said. "They've even done drill right through our lunch hour. They're really enthusiastic to do something new."

On June 30, Lt. Lazar is off to another course at Seneca College to learn rescue in confined spaces such as sewers, tunnels or large vats, including toxic environments.

Wall of officers keeps Stanley Cup riot out of Westmount

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

Westmount merchants were spared the vandalism and looting spree that followed the Stanley Cup victory Wednesday night last week. The only damage was to some parked cars and a bus shelter.

While hooligans stormed east from the Forum on a $10 million rampage, police used the commercial strip along St. Catherine Street in Westmount as a staging ground and public safety officers kept a close watch on revellers in the area.

It looked like an armed camp.

"Get away from the window," yelled public security sergeant John Everatt to people who strayed close to McNiece's sporting store.

The group veered into the street.

Local director was in charge

"We tried to keep a high profile and use common sense," he said.

But police working in sweep lines said people acted like animals, throwing bottles and bricks off rooftops, pelting officers with grapefruit and tearing out paving stones from the sidewalk.

"It was a brand new phenomenon to Montreal," said Montreal Urban Community police chief Pierre Vézina of Westmount's Station 23.

Mr. Vézina is in charge of the centre division for a month while its commander is on holiday. He was in charge of the police stations affected by both the riot and the Grey Cup parade the next day.

There were 49 police cruisers damaged, eight demolished, 47 officers injured and 100 people that went to hospital, he said.

A .38 revolver was found in the paddy wagon that brought 46 of those arrested to holding cells at Station 23, he said.

Cup parade the next day, he said, police were able to identify the same element but were prepared for them, with 1,200 officers detailed to the parade.

Revising Carifête

"Taking into account these two major events, I am revising my plans for the Carifête," he said. He has organized police security for the annual parade for the past three years. It goes west on Sherbrooke from Atwater July 3.

Dir. Vézina refused to say exactly how many police officers were assigned to the Stanley Cup riot ("We don't discuss numbers."). He said five are allocated to traffic duty outside the Forum after a normal hockey game.

"Our emergency plan calls for 20 to 50 officers," he said. "If you beef that up, you go to 100 and we had double and triple that. But how many is enough? I do the Carifête with 100, but how many will I need this year? I'm certainly revising my numbers."

After the Stanley Cup game ended about 10:30 p.m., crowds of revellers spilled onto the street. Westmount public safety officers closed Greene Avenue to traffic as a precaution.

Westmount's Public Security Unit had planned to have four patrol vehicles circling the blocks just west of Atwater to give the impression of numbers, Director Richard McEnroe said.

But when the crowd left the Forum at about 10:30 p.m., congestion soon made patrolling impossible, Sgt. Everatt discovered. Instead, he concentrated on reducing traffic jams and preventing damage.

By 12:45 a.m., an admitting clerk at the Reddy Memorial Hospital told THE EXAMINER the emergency room had already treated a dozen people for injuries, mostly cuts, related to the event.

"That's a big night for us," she said.

Ironically, it wasn't until the next night that McNiece's plate glass window was broken and its display of hockey sweaters and sticks stolen. Police did not count it as a Stanley Cup incident.

Reconstruction of Atwater bus terminal under way

By J. MARION FEINBERG

Although demolition at the Atwater bus terminal began unofficially with the Stanley Cup riot last week, the real work began this week, said MUCTC official Pierre Laporte.

Renovations are under way to give terminal a $1.5 million facelift and the work is likely to take six months, he said.

Several bus stops have been relocated while the work is being done, including the 90, 138, and the 144 bus lines which now leave from Tupper Street. The 63 can be found on Atwater below Tupper.

"Basically we're improving the waiting areas by demolishing the old ones and building new ones that are safer, more attractive and more comfortable," said Mr. Laporte.

Some of the new bus shelters will be heated and enclosed, with large windows to ensure that passengers are made to feel safe, he said.

The Metro entrance will also be renovated and upgraded.

Although no new bus lines are imminent for the terminal, one of the long-term plans is to concentrate most of the bus stops on Lambert-Closse Street rather than directly across from the Montreal Children's Hospital, he said.

"By reorganizing the bus traffic, it will make the hospital area a little quieter," said Mr. Laporte.

The project is being jointly funded by the Montreal Urban Community Transit Corp. and the Quebec Department of Transport.

Mom and daughter don grad robes

Mom won't stop now — she wants her doctorate

By J. MARION FEINBERG

LIKE daughter, like mother.

That's how Edgehill Road resident Myrna Saliba describes the relationship between herself and her 16-year-old daughter Adeline now that they are both donning graduation gowns this month.

"If I made it, it is because of her," said Mrs. Saliba. "I used to stay up until 6 a.m. to go to school at 10 a.m. At one point I considered quitting but Adeline wouldn't let me. She reminded me that I had not gone all this way just to quit. I felt I was letting her down, so I gathered my courage and continued."

Who's helping whom?

In fact, Adeline said it was her mother who originally taught her that once a goal is set, one should never give up until it is accomplished.

Adeline is graduating from Villa Ste. Marcelline on June 23 and Mrs. Saliba received first class honours in economics and finance from McGill University at her convocation Monday.

"In my mother's time women stayed at home and took care of the kids but now women are continuing their educations and finding jobs," said Adeline. "Even my grandmother tried to get my mother to quit but I said she should continue."

It wasn't easy at times to handle being a mother, wife and full-time student as well as a part-time gymnastics coach, said Adeline. But the whole family pitched in a bit more to help make things easier, she said.

Daughter wants to be astronaut

"I'm very proud of her," said Adeline, who plans to continue studying and eventually wants to get into the area of astrophysics to become an astronaut.

Mrs. Saliba said she originally thought she would help out in her husband's business when she graduated, but now says she want to continue studying economics at the Master's level and then on to the doctorate level.

Mrs. Saliba said McGill advisor Sharon Bezau also helped her achieve her goal by being supportive.

"She was behind me all the way," she said. "It's not easy to be a mature student, being older than the other students. I felt I didn't fit in and two years into my studies I began doubting myself."

Mrs. Saliba said she was also grateful for the company she found at McGill's mature students' lounge.

"Today it is all over," she added. "It means a lot to me that both my daughter and I are graduating at the same time."

Man beaten in dispute between brothers

Three young men armed with a crowbar and a baseball bat beat up a 20-year-old man when he ordered them to leave his flat on Prince Albert Avenue Tuesday last week, police said.

The victim was assaulted when he intervened in a dispute between the trio and his roommate, another 20-year-old man.

The three, identified as the roommate's brother and two of his friends, came to the flat about 1 a.m. trying to get the roommate to move back to his family home. The roommate refused, the victim told the men to leave and a fight broke out.

Mayor's letter to Régie timed for meeting tonight

By J. MARION FEINBERG

Westmount's resolve to support the Régie's waste management plan has been wavering recently. Now the tough questions that were raised in council have been put in a formal letter and were sent yesterday to Régie head and LaSalle Mayor Michel Leduc.

Mayor Peter Trent stated in the letter that he would rather work towards changing the Régie's direction than call for a moratorium on the plan.

The Régie intermunicipale de gestion des déchets sur l'île de Montréal plans to build a $317 million incinerator to burn suburban garbage. A recycling centre and a composting site are also part of the plan.

"Our objections and questions are meant to be constructive and are given in the spirit of cooperation," said the letter. "The Régie has pioneered a lot of good things over the past seven years. It is now the time to take stock and perhaps map out a new direction."

Mr. Trent said he wanted to establish Westmount's ground before tonight's public Régie meeting at the Town of Mount Royal city hall.

"Why can't we put reduction ahead of all other means of handling the garbage problem? We should put the emphasis on how garbage is created, not on how it is treated," reads one of the questions sent to Mayor Leduc.

"Basically the letter was a follow-up on council's request for Westmount to formally share its concerns with the Régie," said Mr. Trent, who said he also enclosed some THE EXAMINER columns he had written on the topic.

CHECKING THE NEIGHBOURHOOD

Whether you'll be buying a house for the first time or trading up to a better house in a more attractive section of town, you'll want to check the neighbourhood. After all, you'll be buying much more than a house and the land that goes with it. The location of the house, the general appearance of neighbouring houses and the school system, if you have children, should be considered.

Living in a house means living in a community. The community should meet the needs of you and your family. It should also give you a sense of pleasure and security to be living there. Once you've found a house that meets your space needs and your pocketbook, drive around the neighbourhood and the nearby shopping areas. Visit the school system. Get some idea about how you and your family would enjoy living there.

You should also look for house values. You want the most house for the money. Why not call us for an appointment so we can show you what we have to offer?

Central Trust transition to TD is smooth: local manager

The staff and management of the Toronto Dominion Bank at Sherbrooke and Claremont have been busy all this week in a special promotion welcoming customers from the now defunct Central Trust Guarantee, said TD manager Veronica Traynor.

Scratch-and-win cards were given out at the branch located at 5002 Sherbrooke, as well as bonus coupons for bringing in accounts from different institutions, she said. A similar welcome week promotion went on at the branch at Greene and de Maisonneuve last week.

The two Westmount branches of Central Trust Guarantee were merged with two local TD Banks (5002 Sherbrooke St. and 1289 Greene Ave.) last month, said TD regional manager Suzanne Poole.

The trust company has been in financial trouble for the past two years and their customers' accounts and services are now being transferred over to the TD system, said Ms. Traynor.

Customers' personal accounts as well as mutual funds, RRSPs, loans and lines of credit were given new TD account numbers and were brought on line with the TD computer system, said Ms. Traynor. On June 26, people who have guaranteed investment certificates will have their accounts converted to the TD system. All conditions of the GICs remain the same until they reach maturity, she said.

"Overall, the transition went very smoothly," she said.

Any former Central Trust Guarantee customers who have recently moved and did not receive information about the merger should contact their new TD bank.

Scrap metal recycling bin begun by city

The city of Westmount has found a way to keep scrap metal from getting into the general waste stream.

Public works director Fred Caluori said a new container is in place at the Corporation yard and has been designated to collect anything from water tanks to leftover piping.

"The idea is to eliminate as much as possible from going to the landfill," he said. "We're always looking for different ways to cutback on materials going to the dump.

"All we're doing is separating it and it will be sold to scrap dealers who will likely try to resell the metals," he said.

Boys wing rocks at park goldfish

A group of five youths caught throwing rocks at goldfish in Murray Park may end up in court over the incident, public safety officers said. Montreal Urban Community police were called to eject the boys aged 15 and 16, from the park when they refused to leave about 5:55 p.m., said PSO Chayne Barnes.

When another officer saw them still hanging around the spot two hours later, two were detained and turned over to police. When the pair began spitting on the ground and acting aggressively, one was handcuffed and arrested for disturbing the peace. Police said the others could be charged under municipal bylaw 96 for endangering animals. They live in Outremont and Montreal.

CITY COUNCIL CLIPS

City to buy fire rescue chute

Westmount expects to be the first municipality in Canada to own a rescue chute to lower trapped fire victims.

City council Monday approved a two-year-old request from the fire department to buy a $38,000 30-metre-long EVAC rescue chute. The device hooks onto an aerial ladder which raises it to a window or balcony. Victims can then descend in the tube-like chute as it is untwisted at the bottom by firefighters who regulate the rate of descent.

Its big advantage over standard ladder rescue, says director Jim Adams, is for rescuing the elderly or the handicapped. Once inside the chute, the victim is not likely to be as terrorized on the way down. The chutes, a relatively new concept, are in use all over the States, he says.

WAG dog run to double in size

Dogs and their owners using the run in the Westmount Athletic Grounds will soon have more room to romp.

Responding to a petition last year, council agreed to extend the run at a cost of $5,000. Landscaping, a skimpy cedar hedge, will be relocated further west. The area of the run will double to 460 square metres. Other plans are in the works to construct a comfort station, eliminate a public works storage area and lay out well-lit footpaths.

Pumper truck gets $64,366 spruce-up

The fire brigade's 1983 aerial-pumper truck is getting a $64,366 facelift. Council decided to have the truck's rusting chassis and body repaired and the truck repainted Monday last week in accepting the low bid of Tibotrac Inc.

Since the backup ladder truck is of 1966 vintage, a replacement is being rented for $500 a week from the Charles E. Thibault firm in Pierreville.

City calls, again, for paramedics

Westmount intends to join with a number of other Montreal Urban Community municipalities in calling on Quebec to recognize paramedics. After discussing the provincial government plan to phase out Urgences Santé doctors from the road starting next month, council members asked the city administration to draft a resolution on behalf of paramedical services.

The issue is not new. In March 1988, the city council of then mayor May Cutler adopted a similar resolution.

Council also wants costs on upgrading the fire department's first responder unit to provide advanced life support (ALS) emergency medical help. The present service provides only basic assistance.

Royal LePage shuts one of two offices

The Sherbrooke Street office of Royal LePage has closed in a corporate decision to merge it with its office on Greene Avenue, it was announced Tuesday.

"We're trying to realize economies of scale," said vice-president and Montreal regional manager Keith Collins.

Agents from the Sherbrooke office may relocate at the larger Greene office or the company's N.D.G. office, he said. As for longtime manager of the Sherbrooke office, James Quinlan, "There's always a casualty here and there. He's the only one."

The company has been moving toward having more agents at each office, and closing one of the two Westmount locations was part of that plan — as well as being a smart financial move, said Mr. Collins.

"Real estate is getting tough all over," he said. "There are fewer transactions, and great competition to get the market. We have to make economies.

"When Royal Trust and Royal LePage merged," he said, "we should have done it then, but we didn't."

Hair parade at Olivier's

Summer 1993 officially began at the Salon de Beauté Olivier last night with a fashion parade featuring 27 new hair designs, said promotions official Evelyne Neiman.

"The efforts of nine hairdressers, three colorists and two makeup specialists were united to present some of the trends in cuts, colouring and styling that will be turning heads this summer," she said.

The cocktail party was an early celebration for the beauty shop at 1347 Greene Ave., which will celebrate its 20th anniversary in 1994, said Ms. Neiman.

The event also doubled as a vernissage for artist Joyce Dupuis, bookkeeper and wife of salon owner Yvon Plante.

"Hopefully the event was a bit of a boost for the difficult year we have had in Quebec with such a long winter and tough economic times," said Ms. Dupuis.

Business briefs

Hogging the bases

Hogg Hardware has made its official foray into the Westmount community by sponsoring a local senior softball team.

"We've always been interested in spending money where it will be most effective," said part owner and manager Blair Tisshaw. "By getting involved with local teams and events we become part of the fabric of the community."

Softball team member Lorne Woods said he approached the store management in the fall for sponsorship and was taken up on the offer this spring.

The Hogg Hardware team, formerly sponsored by Zazou Video, began wearing the red sweaters and blue caps a couple of weeks ago, said Mr. Woods.

"All the other guys in the league are embarrassed because we look so good," he added.

A total of $500 went into the purchase of the 16 sweaters and caps.

Westmount's A.L. Van Houtte café-bistro celebrated its 7th anniversary all last week and gave away iced capuccinos and muffins Friday afternoon, according to owner Susan Stern.

"When you're in a community like Westmount, it is important to give back into it at least once a year," she said. "This is my way of thanking the customers and the staff for the years of loyalty."

About 600 muffins and several gallons of coffee were offered to customers who also enjoyed the jazz strains of the Jennifer Bell Trio.

Any words will do

Kim Campbell's acceptance speech on Sunday could have knocked our socks off. It didn't.

Instead, our next prime minister make a careful, unexciting speech crafted to push all the right buttons.

It was an easy choice, partway through, to grab the remote and wander over to Newsworld. Suddenly we were in Selma, Alabama, in 1966. We watched, rapt, as Martin Luther King addressed a crowd preparing to march to city hall to try to register blacks for the vote.

It was impossible not to compare Mr. King's gripping speech with Ms. Campbell's lacklustre effort.

Of course, an observer might say, Mr. King was a great orator. Such a person is rare and Ms. Campbell should not be expected to rival him.

After Mr. King's speech, the camera showed the marchers, led by a man who was confronted by the town's mayor. Town council had decided not to let the marchers continue. The mayor was sent to try to stop them.

The man confronted by the mayor was not a great orator. He was, however, committed to his cause and argued with the mayor calmly but earnestly.

That, too, was gripping.

So was an impromptu speech by a 19-year-old — one of many speeches by marchers during the long, dull days they waited in the street for the procession to be allowed to continue.

These people all did something Kim Campbell didn't. They spoke from the heart. They said what they believed to be the truth.

Speaking the truth is a risky business in politics at any time, and even riskier when the economy is doing badly.

When the country is flourishing, it is easy to speak candidly of all the wonderful things in store. When it is struggling with rampant unemployment and a $450 billion debt, a politician's message is, of necessity, grim.

It is either grim or a lie.

Voters, ever hopeful, like to be fooled with lies. Would Bill Clinton have been elected U.S. president if he had said during the campaign that he would raise taxes?

They can't be fooled for long, however. Did it surprise anyone that Mr. Clinton raised taxes?

There is no substitute for hearing politicians say what they believe and outline plans to do what they think is right.

Ms. Campbell showed no sign of revealing inner convictions either during her campaign speech or the acceptance speech. If she has any, they were kept well under wraps.

Again and again, she strummed the chord of job creation, deficit reduction and a changed political process. Her words were politically expedient, not heartfelt. They lacked conviction, and an explanation of the philosophical beliefs on which the ideas are based.

Our first woman prime minister squandered a rare opportunity for media coverage uninterrupted by television news time constraints.

Snuggled in a purely PC crowd, having won the leadership race, Ms. Campbell could have spoken freely. If she didn't feel comfortable enough to do it then, chances are we'll hear only well-scripted lines from her from now until the election is over.

Brian Mulroney, she said glowingly during her acceptance speech, "taught us to think long term."

He certainly did.

After all, our children and our children's children will be paying for the debt he racked up during eight years in office. And they will be governed by the slew of political appointees he rushed to give jobs to before leaving office.

'Nothing for girls' at awards banquet

My seven-year-old daughter was one of the recipients of an invitation to the Semi-Annual Recreation Banquet. This invitation was extended to her "on behalf of the Westmount City Council."

Since she had played soccer in the fall and had been an enthusiastic participant in the figure skating program from October to March, she was very keen to attend. I accompanied her and a girlfriend to this occasion on Monday, May 31. Their eyes lit up when they saw a stage full of golden trophies and a pile of certificates.

I would like to share with the community their comments towards the end of the evening: "There's nothing here for girls. How come the girls get nothing? Only boys can get trophies?"

That was my impression too. There was almost nothing there for girls. This is definitely not the message I want my daughter to receive — only boys can get recognition?!

Surely the department of recreation with the help of the larger Westmount community can come up with some creative solutions to this perceived inequality. In the '90s we shouldn't have daughters and granddaughters who think, "There's nothing here for us."

Holden is handy with a stiletto

Mr. Richard Holden, the Parti Québécois MNA for Westmount-St. Henri, has always been known as a pretty fair fencer, but with his column in THE EXAMINER last week he has shown himself to be a handy fellow with a stiletto too.

Mr. Holden mentioned in the most casual way that Jean Charest's name is spelled "John" on his birth certificate — and everyone knows what that means! When this story surfaced a couple of months ago Mr. Charest, whose mother is Irish, said the priest insisted on "John." Anyone who was around 34 years ago will recall that at that time the priest's word was law. Good thing Pierre Elliott Trudeau's mother, who was Scottish, didn't encounter the same clergyman: Peter Trudeau? Never! Never!

Perhaps in his next column Mr. Holden will remind us that Mr. Charest is known as "a good Canadian boy" in separatist circles. That's the code phrase for Uncle Tom, even for nice boys who finish second.

More and more I am beginning to believe Mr. Holden's spiritual home is the Parti Québécois, where a rose by any other name is probably a violation of the law.

Guaranteed funding needed for anglos

Access to English schools is a problem for the English-speaking people of Quebec and has been since the passage of Bill 101. Accessibility is only one among many problems non-French-speaking people of Quebec experience in seeking to educate their children for a future in Quebec.

The decline of student population in English schools started in the 1960s. It was not just a migration of English-speaking families that caused the drop in numbers. To have children in Quebec schools one must have parents living here. The parents of the children who were not in our schools had been steadily leaving the province for jobs and education for many years prior to this time. In 1976, the effect of Bill 101 was disastrous and a discouraged English business community declined in both numbers and wealth.

The English school system in Quebec was and is dependant on immigration.

After 1976 immigrants had to educate their children in French-language schools.

The law on access to schools clearly favours the French-language system and therefore in 1976 the majority of immigrants and the greater part of government funds have gone to French-language schools.

Yes, enrolment has declined in English schools, although the decline has slowed in the last two years. Yes, many English schools have been closed and if the government continues its brutal cost-cutting measures in education, we will see a reduction in the excellent English system both private and public.

Moreover, the Quebec government awaits a Supreme Court decision before it replaces the present confessional school boards with language boards. If English boards are implemented, funding will be a serious problem as the numbers slowly decline. On the other hand I do not believe the government will change Bill 101's access to school rules. This would anger school boards, parents, teachers' unions and school administrators as well as nationalists in Quebec and it would negatively affect the funding of the French schools.

The English school system and its allies should insist on financial guarantees — that would provide base funding separate from pupil population in order that good English schooling in smaller schools and boards continue.

In other words, it may in the future cost more to educate an English-speaking child than a majority francophone child in Quebec — but that would be the recognized cost of living within the Constitution and of reinforcing a multicultural democracy.

Sis-boom-bah

The achievements of Westmount High School are getting difficult to ignore.

Of the last eight issues of this newspaper, six contained stories that singled out WHS students, volunteer parents or its principal for their accomplishments.

This intensive coverage isn't the work of a newly hired publicist; the school has earned praise from the Quebec Federation of Home and Schools Associations, the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal, Reader's Digest, the Salon International Pepsi Jeunesse, the Greater Montreal Athletic Association and judges in the city's McEntyre Essay Competition.

No one person is responsible for all dence that this marks Richard Meades' fifth year as principal. This year's graduating class the first to have Mr. Meades as their high school principal throughout.
their high school principal throughout.

Mr. Meades has given the school stability, taking over from what had been a rapid succession of principals. That alone was an important first step.

He has fostered a feeling of community within the school, where students are encouraged to watch out for each other and take pride in each other's achievements.

He has been a parent of sorts to the students. He monitors what they wear (is it appropriate for school?), their hairstyles (ditto), their attendance (if you don't want to be here, you're out) and their weaknesses (you may want to be here but are having trouble, can we help?).

Young people take their cue from those in authority. At Westmount High, the message from the top down is that students matter. The students have got the message. With that firmly in mind, they can soar.

It's time to retire our country ways

To the Point

DUSTY VINEBERG

It must be perfectly clear to anyone who drives a car in Westmount that the city has too many stop signs. Not to mention infuriating speed bumps, speed limits suitable for the Model T, and a two-way bike lane along a busy one-way artery.

Such regulations seem to be based on illusion: that de Maisonneuve is a lane, instead of a major east-west road, that we in Westmount live in a village; that every wrong can be righted and all groups accommodated.

Or maybe we feel guilty: we don't have enough child care so we'll turn streets into playgrounds.

Around the turn of the century, people looked askance at my grandfather when he moved from a flat on Mansfield Street in Montreal to a house on Elm Avenue in Westmount. Was it really wise, they wanted to know, to buy a house in the country?

But Westmount is no longer the country, as it was in turn-of-the-century Montreal. Traffic ought not to crawl along a major thoroughfare like Sherbrooke Street at 40 km/h as it is now required to do. Nor should we have to stop mid-block or crawl up hills at speeds so slow our traffic head pronounces them "scary."

In 1967 when I moved into an apartment here, Kensington Avenue was a quiet place and there was always parking space on the street.

Nowadays, parking on lower Kensington is a competition. Reader's Digest offices are one street east on Redfern. Place Kensington seniors' residence is at the bottom of the street on St. Catherine. If you find a space, that means it's Wednesday between 1 and 3 p.m. when the city does maintenance. Don't park — they hand out tickets.

Our condition has changed and keeps changing. Not only the streets, but our lives, are busier, more complicated, less safe. It's a given.

Of course schools and residences for the elderly are special cases and every precaution that we can think of to protect school children and the elderly ought to be made.

Having said that, I seem to recall the history of the Kensington Avenue speed bump.

A group of parents in homes between Sherbrooke and de Maisonneuve counted their kids; there were a surprising number for such a short section. Especially in summer, they played on the street.

The parents said their children were endangered by speeding cars and complained to the city, which installed a stop sign and speed bump.

A crowd of children still plays on the street (and I do mean the street, not the sidewalk), as if there were no backyards and as if Kensington were not two blocks away from Westmount Park. The other day a parent, surrounded by kids, whacked a passing car (not mine) with a stick.

Are motorists substitute nannies? Suppose you slow traffic to 15 km/h and install a million speed bumps, isn't safety illusory if your child plays in the street? Parents should outlaw playing on city streets just as one assumes they insist on the wearing of helmets for bicycle riding.

This rigourous idea was never suggested. It was easier to install the stop sign and speed bump, and all the others on other streets, which the city now says are ineffective.

Every authority, it seems, appeases a determined special interest group, especially if the cause seems a good one. Often it might be a good idea to just say no.

Airlines need re-regulation

Under the policies followed by the Conservative government, competition and market forces are regarded to be the prime agents in providing Canadians with viable and efficient transportation services. Even as Canada's scheduled airlines have lost billions of dollars, the government has refused to consider the need to re-regulate the industry or manage competition.

The Liberal Party does not believe that market forces alone can prevail in a country like Canada. We believe that the federal government must review the need for regulation in areas like price, capacity and financial tests for entry into scheduled markets.

To provide an example, such tests might have prevented Nationair from entering into the Toronto-Montreal market in December and January at great cost to both Air Canada and Canadian and presumably to Nationair as well.

On May 27, the National Transportation Agency (NTA) published its ruling on the investment by American Airlines in Canadian. The decision was hailed by the employees and management of Canadian, signs appeared at ticket counters and airports reading "Thank You NTA." Air Canada took a far dimmer view and has appealed the NTA decision to the federal cabinet. The cabinet has 30 days to rule on the appeal.

The NTA is a federal regulatory agency. It does not make policy. Under the National Transportation Act, the agency could only determine whether Canadian Airlines would remain controlled by Canadians after the proposed investment by American Airlines. The agency did not address the need for re-regulation nor did it address the critical questions of whether the Canadian market is large enough to support two domestic network carriers and two international air carriers. As the agency put it, "These matters must be resolved by market forces coupled with existing and future government policies and not under the narrow confines of proceedings under Part VII of the National Transportation Act, 1987."

Indeed, competition and market forces are not just the prime agents in current povernment policy, they are the only agents. A policy change is long overdue.

If you wish to have a copy of the NTA decision, please call my riding office at 939-3452.

Editor's note: Two weeks ago, Mr. Berger's column was shortened because of lack of space, thus deleting his comments about the situation in Bosnia. If anyone would like a complete transcript of that column, they may call Mr. Berger's office at 939-3452.

Boys, 16, robbed at knifepoint

Two 16-year-old boys were walking in Westmount Park Monday last week when they were robbed at knifepoint by three young men aged 18 or 19, police said. The victims were talking to each other about 8 p.m. near Sherbrooke and Strathcona when one was grabbed by the throat and felt a knife on his face. The robber went through the boy's pockets, taking $4 from his jeans. Another suspect tried to take a watch off the other's wrist but abandoned his efforts when the third said, "Okay, let's go." The trio ran off along Sherbrooke. The victims live in N.D.G. and Lachine.

Four-tonne ball rolled down hill

A cement ball weighing 4,000 kilograms rolled down the hill from a construction site at 25 Forden Ave. and crashed into the side of a car parked in the driveway at 8 Forden Tuesday last week. The Saab sustained $2,000 damage, police said. Public safety officers said they had reports of union problems and harassment of workers at the location, fuelling speculation the act was deliberate. The ball was rolled down the hill sometime between 12:01 and 8 a.m.

Rottweiler bites boy

A 12-year-old boy was bitten on the left hand by a rottweiler Wednesday last week in the dog run at Lansdowne and St. Catherine, police said. He was walking his own dog about 6:30 p.m. when bitten. Both the victim and the rottweiler's owner are Westmount residents. The extent of the boy's injury was not detailed on a police report, said crime prevention officer Lise Bergeron.

15 cars vandalized

Vandals spraypainted 15 cars grey or black overnight Sunday, June 6, on Academy Road, Lansdowne Avenue and on Chesterfield Avenue, police said. All incidents were reportedly related. Some cars were marked with letters such as RMR and H. Others were streaked by a line along the side or hood.

Credit card fraud racks up $8,248 bill

A Westmount man returned from a holiday in Barbados recently to find two credit card charges totalling $8,248 for purchases he claims he never made, police said. One was from Visa, another from MasterCard on cards he still had in his possession. Both concerned items from companies in the United States. One involved 60 computer memory chips shipped to a firm in Lachine and picked up by someone who would have had to know an invoice number to accept the goods, police said. The alleged shipping company claims to have no record of delivering the goods to the firm. The matter has been turned over to the MUC fraud squad for investigation.

Break-in broken

Four teenaged boys broke into a house on Belvedere Place Saturday about 1:45 a.m. and smashed a marble table before fleeing, police said. When a young resident and his friend came up from the basement to investigate the noise, one of the intruders pulled out a jackknife and threatened to kill the friend. Two of the suspects were known to the victims and the incident is under investigation. Damage to the table and a broken window pane was $900.

Fight in front of Victoria Hall

Two men beat each other up Friday at 2:30 a.m. outside Victoria Hall, police said. One used a stick to attack the other, who was getting out of a taxi with a girlfriend. It was not known what provoked the fight though police said the pair had exchanged words when the taxi and a car driven by the other stopped beside each other. The victim, a 20-year-old Hamp[illegible]stead man, had a bleeding nose. A 27-year-old Verdun resident faces charges of assault and possession of narcotics. Three small bags of white substance weighing about 0.25 grams each were seized from him. He was also wanted on two arrest warrants for obstructing a police officer and driving with a suspended license.

Hateful message

Anti-Semitic graffiti was spraypainted on a wall at 82 Belvedere Rd. and traffic signs on the street, police said. The vandalism, including swastikas, stars of David and slogans, was discovered Friday morning.

Men brawl outside Buffalo Bill's

A scuffle between two men Friday evening ended with both facing assault charges and nursing swollen faces, police said. Both are Montreal residents, aged 22 and 28. The fight broke out on St. Catherine Street west of Atwater about 6:27 p.m. One man waited for his girlfriend to pick up her belongings from the Buffalo Bill restaurant where she used to work and was joined by a man from inside the place. The girlfriend and restaurant manager tried without success to break up the dispute and ended up calling police.

Mayor's annual blood clinic at Vic Hall on June 23

IT'S TIME to bleed a little to help amass 150 pints of blood during Westmount's annual mayor's blood donor clinic at Victoria Hall on Wednesday, June 23.

"We're really hoping to reach our objective," said organizer Maureen Kelly, exceutive secretary for the Public Security Unit.

Among door prizes being donated are tickets for two to Sunday brunch at the Château Champlain's l'Escapade restaurant. Other merchants promising prizes are Café Gourmet, the Fletcher Metro-Richelieu store, Félix & Norton, Westmount Florist and Westmount YMCA.

Ms. Kelly says public safety officers are contacting other merchants in hopes of receiving door prizes.

Mayor Peter Trent plans to be on hand for the opening of the clinic at 2:30 p.m. The clinic runs until 8:30 p.m.

The same goal of 150 pints was reached last year, when firefighters turned out in force, Ms. Kelly recalled.

Art for the love of it

Two local mature students part of Concordia exhibit

By ALISON RAMSEY

Westmounter Linda Kitchen casts a worried look at people milling around Concordia's Leonard and Bina Ellen Art Gallery.

An explanation of her painting, enviably hung to be the first artwork people see as they enter, has been left off the nearby card and she is afraid they'll miss the joke.

It merely says Site Specific; Nostalgia 1992, giving no indication it is a play on a Venetian painting. Aloof, serious-faced figures in robes gesture towards — a washing machine?

It also has a serious side. "What meaning, if any, do we get looking at ancient paintings these days?" says the artist.

Ms. Kitchen, 37, is graduating from Concordia's fine arts program, which she was strongly urged to enter by her Visual Arts Centre teacher Barbara Dickstein.

The Prince Albert Avenue resident, a trained buyer, turned to art at age 32. Her paintings are few; she prefers buying old beds at flea markets and filling them with things.

The beds, "souvenirs of the body," have been filled with mattresses of moss, water and flour.

"Anything that reminds us of our vulnerability," she says. Beds are important because they are "where people have their dreams, orgasms, that wonderful split second between conciousness and unconciousness, move from wellness to sickness, sleep to waking."

Another Westmounter, 58-year-old Nancy Dorey, also inspired by a Visual Arts teacher (Rita Briansky), has a painting in the exhibit that hangs alongside Ms. Kitchen's.

She has had many exhibits of her watercolour landscapes and still lifes at the library, but warns those who love those works that they are in for a surprise if they come to the Concordia gallery for a gander at her latest.

She now prefers acrylics, oils and wax as materials. The paintings are dark ("My husband died in December"), and abstract ("I'm still experimenting with geometric forms in an atmosphere").

Urged on by family, Ms. Dorey, of Grosvenor Avenue, plans to graduate in two years. "I just want to paint, but I'd hate my grandchildren to say, 'Nanny never finished — I don't have to.'"

Prize paintings at Kastel

The 55 Canadian paintings exhibited at the Société National des Beaux Arts Biennial in Paris in February will be exhibited at the Kastel Gallery, 1366 Greene Ave, today until June 27.

Kastel is the only place in Canada where the works will be on view.

Lack of funds cut short what was supposed to be a country-wide tour.

Other works by many of the artists will be exhibited at the same time by the neighbouring Galerie West End and Galerie de Bellefeuille, both on Greene Avenue.

Canadian artists won six of the 25 medals awarded in the Paris show, in which a total of 750 artists from eight countries participated.

Local filmmaker shoots in The Priory

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

Westmounter Katherine Kasirer, who is co-directing a short dramatic film about overcoming the stigma of stuttering, took a film crew into the Grade 5 classroom at The Priory Friday to shoot a 45-second scene. Among those acting in A Breath Short of Less is Roslyn School student Tara Lazanis.

The 10-minute film, written and co-directed by Leila Marshy, is slated for release in February at the Local Heroes Festival in Edmonton. The women won a $6,000 award last year in a National Screen Institute of Canada competition to make the film.

Louise Agar's annual salmon fishing trip to the Gaspé with her husband Bob is a special one this year. She's being honoured Saturday at the Salmon Festival. "This year, they are going to honour a woman," she said proudly. "I've been fishing with the guys for 25 years."

Student torches school books

A fire in a locker at Ecole Internationale, 11 Côte St. Antoine, last Thursday was attributed to end of year book burning, fire officials said. A 15-year-old N.D.G. boy is suspected of setting it.

Books and pieces of wood were set on fire in a locker near in the basement. The blaze was discovered about 10:40 a.m.

Friends...

She got hooked to the sport by her husband and now "my two loves are salmon fishing and politics." Mrs. Agar, who ran former Westmount MNA Richard French's riding office, recalls one fishing trip when she met then governor general Rolland Michener on the river. She bet him $1 she would catch more salmon than he, despite all his guides. "He got none. I got two. And he presented the dollar to me at the festival," she said.

Jeanne and Jack Randle returned home recently from [illegible] o months in Australia and New Zealand to find their basement worm farm "in great shape."

They had left it with some concern. They cultivate the worms, which are used to help break down compost in the winter, and have hundreds. "I just repotted them to make sure they're alive and kicking," she said. While away, they were able to visit friends they made while living in Brazil 30 years ago.

Judy Cutler is organizing the interfaith ceremony taking place Tuesday when His Holiness Tenzin Gyatso, 14th Dalai Lama of Tibet and 1989 Nobel Peace Laureate, comes to Montreal. The service at St. Joseph's Oratory starts at 6:30 p.m. Ms. Cutler is the step-daughter of former Westmount mayor May Cutler.

Rabbi Leigh Lerner of Temple Emanu-El Beth Sholom and Rev. George McDonald of the United Church, based at Lansdowne and de Maisonneuve, will take part in the ceremony.

Councillor Herbert Bercovitz hesitated only 10 seconds when offered the chance to visit the James Bay development project two weeks ago in Mayor Peter Trent's place. The public relations junket by Hydro-Québec was planned for decision makers and people who could spread the gospel, he said, and it was mind-boggling.

"I must say, seeing the place, you get a very healthy respect both for what Hydro-Québec is doing and for what the Inuit are trying to block. Hydro-Québec are taking extraordinary measures to restore the land. But I don't know," he said. The LG-2 dam is so immense that it dwarfs the cement mixers working beneath.

"It's scary," he said.

De St-Léon

Deux préoccupations majeures sont à l'ordre du jour des conversations à St-Léon-de-Westmount: l'installation d'un système de sécurité-incendie dans l'église et l'effondrement définitif de l'orgue. Les deux problèmes nécessitent des solutions urgentes et coûteuses auxquelles les paroissiens sont invités à réfléchir.

La paroisse St-Léon adopte l'horaire d'été pour ses célébrations. A partir de dimanche prochain, il n'y aura qu'une seule messe à 10h30. Le samedi, la messe de 17h subsiste. Pendant la semaine, un seul office sera célébré à 17h15.

Football field being groomed for more sports punishment

By J. MARION FEINBERG

The city's main football field in Westmount Park is in for a deluxe treatment next week to compensate for weeks of players pounding the turf.

City horticulturist Claudette Savaria said they plan to aerate the earth, put on a top dressing of soil, reseed and fertilize over two days starting Monday. A similar process will be repeated in September.

"Last year we concentrated on fertilization but because of how much the field has been used this year, there has been a lot of compaction," she said. "It's not only players but also the regular traffic walking through that part of the park."

The public works department is responsible for the upkeep of the fields and cooperates with the sports and recreation department, whose job it is to keep the fields busy.

"It's meant to be a playing field, not a showpiece of magnificent grass," said sports and recreation director Robert Aiken. "It will never be that."

He said, however, that a playing field has to have some grass or it just becomes compacted clay and therefore more dangerous when players fall.

"It could mean a nice raspberry," he said.

A "Field Closed" sign has been up throughout the spring to deter non-Westmounters from playing pick-up games.

"The public security can then point to the sign to tell people the field is closed," he said.

Even the use of the field by Selwyn House was cut by about half. The school's teams now play on the Westmount Athletic Grounds behind Westmount High School or Murray Park to help protect the field, said Mr. Aiken.

He pointed to the example of the Concordia University field, which was closed for a year and a half, to show what it would take to really get the field in shape.

"We can't close it for that long," he said. "With 400 soccer players playing on Saturdays, we need a lot of field to accommodate them."
