News in brief

Responsible

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — A coroner's jury Friday night found Dr. I. W. Mann, 53, of Sarnia, and the publicly-owned Sarnia General Hospital jointly responsible for the Jan. 17 death of three-month-old Margaret Ann Langevin of Bridgen, Ont.

The jury recommended the removal of Dr. Mann's privileges as an anaesthetist. It said the girl's death was caused by "professional errors or misjudgment" on the part of Dr. Mann coupled with the neglect on the part of the hospital in permitting the operation to be undertaken under "less than ideal" conditions.

Portugal hit

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Speakers in the United Nations squared off against Portugal on two fronts Friday and Canada criticized her role in the "illegal" attack on The Congo by mercenaries operating out of the Portuguese-administered territory of Angola.

Under guard

TORONTO (CP) — Myer Rush, one of three men charged with a $100,000,000 stock fraud, remained in poor condition and under police guard in hospital late Friday following a gang-style bombing attempt on his life.

Released

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The Viet Cong "symbolically" turned over three captured U.S. sergeants to an American anti-war activist today. A U.S. document said the men had been through Communist brainwashing programs.

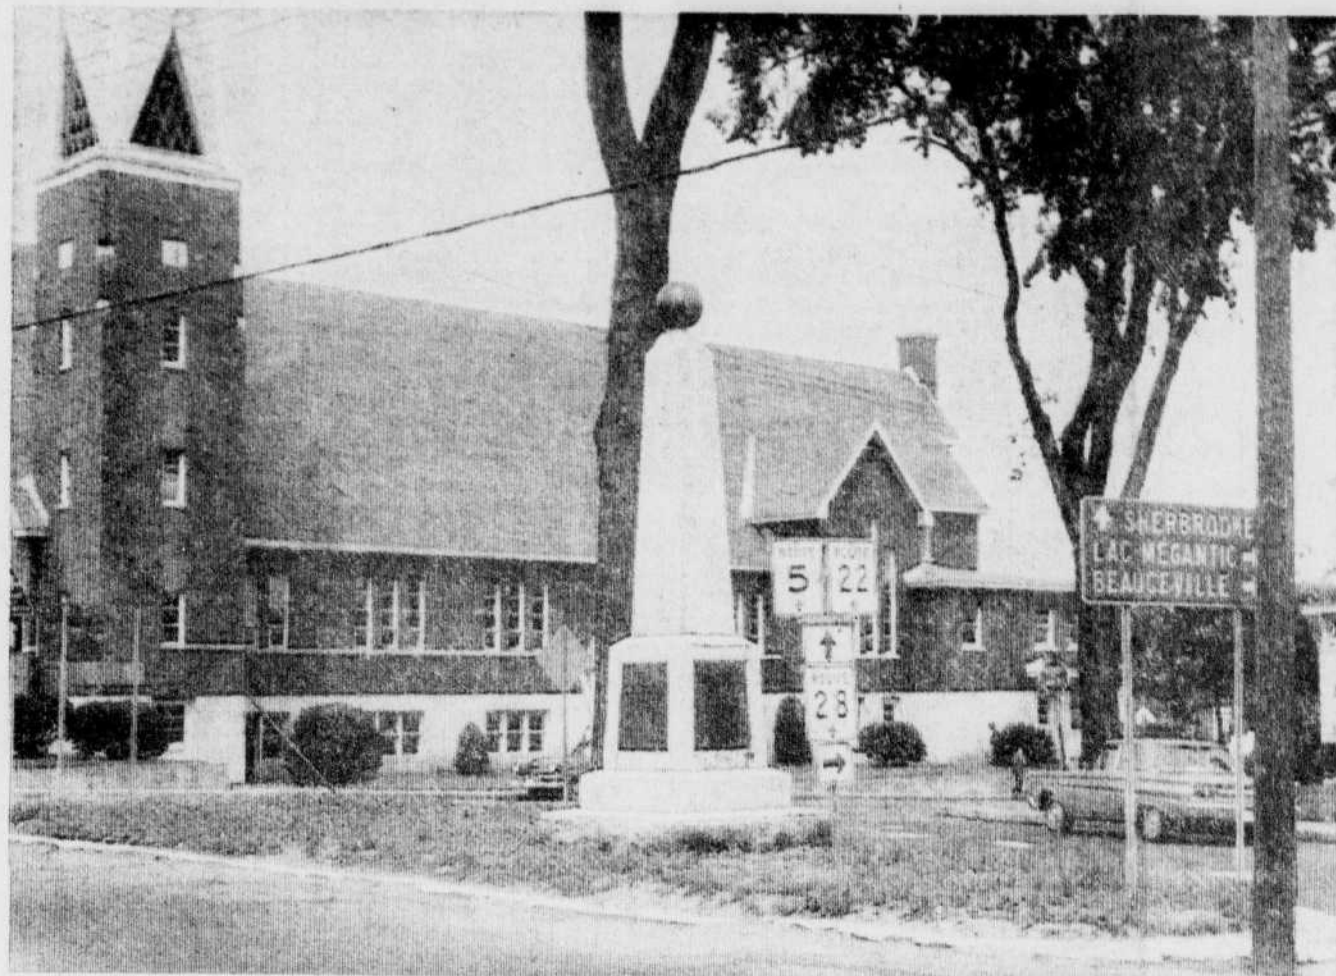

Tells of blast

MONTREAL (CP) — The Georges Lemay trial ended its second week with a key Crown witness in the midst of a lively description of a dynamited entry into the vault of a downtown Montreal bank.

Attack convoy

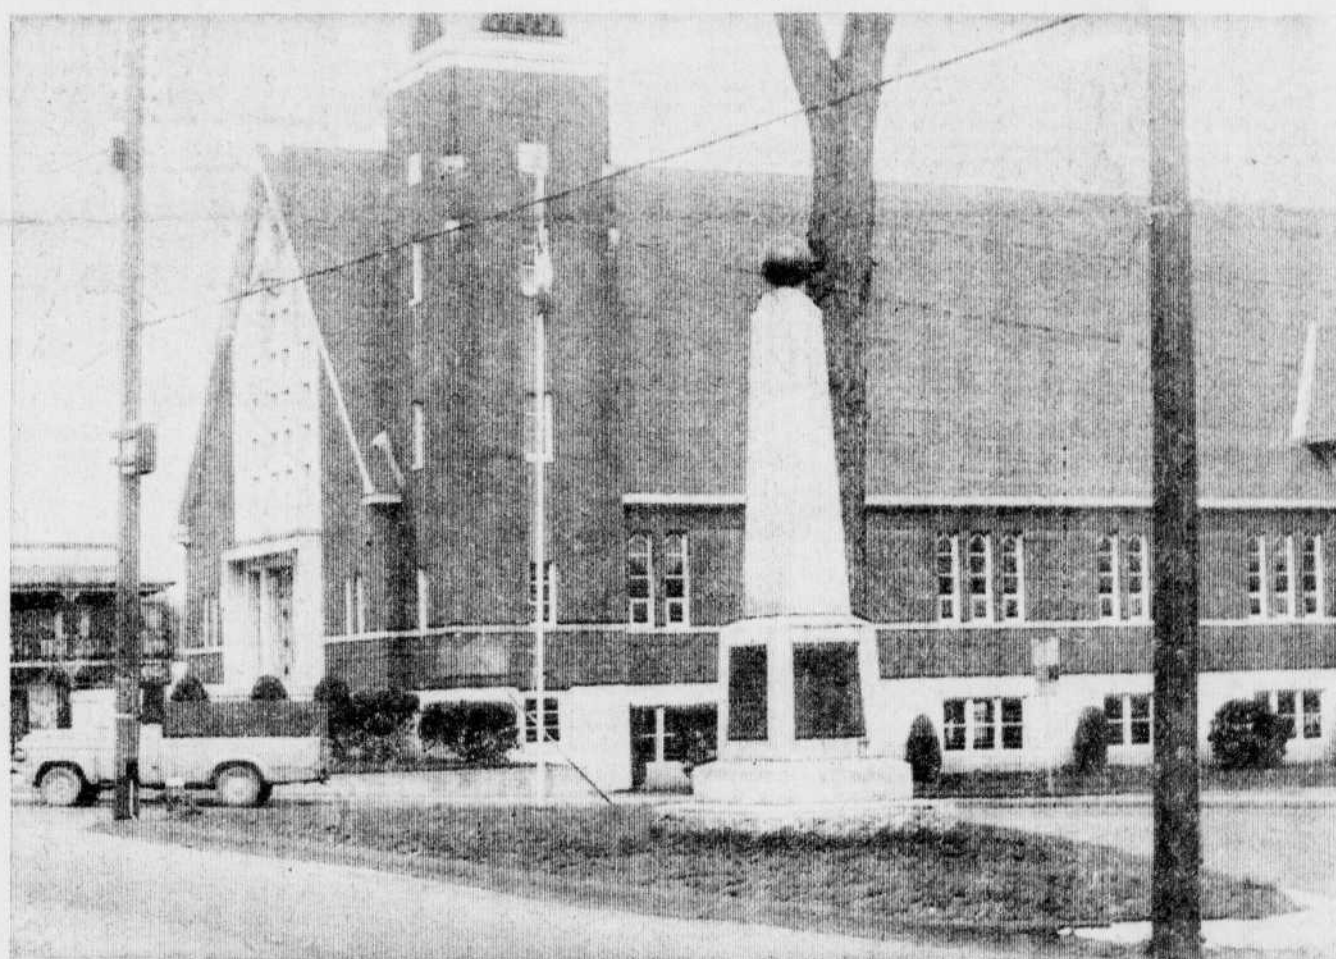

SAIGON (AP) — Communist troops attacked a U.S. armored convoy early today south of the Dak To fighting in the central highlands and within 15 minutes killed five Americans and wounded another seven.

A new trial is ordered for Yvon Dupuis

LAST YEAR — The view around Lennoxville War Memorial was cluttered with road signs of all descriptions for last year's Remembrance Day ceremonies. The Town Council did not want to have the same mess this year so they got busy and approached the provincial department of roads. The signs were removed last week in time for Sunday's ceremonies.

THIS YEAR — Those attending Lennoxville Remembrance Day ceremonies Sunday will not have their view hampered by road signs as was the case last year. The signs have been removed by the provincial department of roads and are now relocated at various points on Queen Street. Sunday's ceremonies begin at the Cenotaph at 12:15 p.m. Remembrance Day programs will be dispersed in the town's various churches Sunday morning.

Abortion laws liberalized by Yule or shortly after

By GARY OAKES

OTTAWA (TNS) — Canada's abortion laws will be liberalized in legislation introduced by Christmas or shortly after, but certainly not to the extent of Britain's wide-open legislation.

Justice Minister Pierre-Elliott Trudeau has said that changes in abortion laws will be included in his omnibus bill to amend several sections of the Criminal Code. His department is now at work on Health and Welfare Committee recommendations.

A poll of the committee shows that it will almost certainly recommend legislation permitting abortions if the life or physical health of the mother is in danger. But a key provision in the probable new law will be that a hospital abortion committee or at least two doctors must approve the abortion.

This roughly follows the proposals of a private member's bill introduced by Ian Wain (L-St. Paul's), who also calls for the approval of the husband, or the parents or guardian if the girl is single and under 18. He is not a committee member.

Several of the 24 committee members favor the recommendations of the Humanist Fellowship of Montreal but concede that the committee overall is not likely to go this far. In an Oct. 19 brief to the committee, the Fellowship said it should be entirely the woman's choice whether she wants an abortion, at least for the first three months of pregnancy.

Equally, the committee will steer clear of the radical abortion laws passed in Britain last week. A distinctive feature of the U.K. legislation is the so-called social clause which permits abortions if two doctors agree the birth would affect the "physical or mental health of any existing children." Under this clause, British doctors can consider overcrowding, inadequate housing and the mother's "actual or reasonably foreseeable environment."

The British bill also allows abortions if the child born from the pregnancy might "suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped."

This clause is similar to proposals contained in private members' bills introduced by Grace MacInnis (NDP-Vancouver-Kingsway), one of the two women members of the committee, and H. W. Herdige (NDP-Kootenay West) who is not a committee member.

Dr. Gaston Isabelle (L-Gatineau), a Catholic and the committee's vice-chairman, dismissed the British bill as "Hitlerism" and warned that it could lead to the creation of a master race.

Mr. Herdige's bill, which he said was inspired by the U.K. legislation, also approves abortions if the continued pregnancy would risk the future well-being of the woman "and/or the child or her other children." It also considers "the patient's total environment, actual or reasonably foreseeable."

A third of the committee — eight members — is Catholic but only two members are against changing the present laws which prohibit abortions except in the case of where it may be "necessary to preserve the life of the mother of a child that has not become a human being."

Maverick Liberal Ralph Cowan (York Humber), a Presbyterian, says bluntly: "I'm 100 percent against any change in the existing law."

Creditist MP A. J. Simard (Lac Saint Jean) agrees with Mr. Cowan but is much less adamant about it.

For the others, a change in the law is necessary, at least to the point of clarifying the existing legislation.

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal Friday ordered a new trial for Yvon Dupuis, former member of Parliament, who was convicted 18 months ago of influence-peddling in a move by a group to get a racetrack established in Quebec.

Justice G. R. W. Owen and Andre Taschereau agreed that Mr. Dupuis should be granted a new trial. Mr. Justice George H. Montgomery, in a minority report, said he should be acquitted outright.

Dupuis, 40, was convicted in Sherbrooke, Que., in April, 1966, of accepting $10,000 in 1961 in return for his influence in support of a group seeking to set up a racetrack in St. Johns, Que. He was fined $5,000.

The conviction for having conspired to use his influence was appealed in March this year.

Mr. Justice Montgomery, in his decision, said the Crown counsel at the trial, in professing to test the credibility of Dupuis, brought to the "attention of the jury various matters which had no direct relation to his guilt, but might be expected to arouse prejudice against him in the mind of one or more of the jurors."

NOT READY
He said that in his address to the jury special Crown Prosecutor Jean Bienvenue was not ready to let the facts speak for themselves. He quoted several selections of what he called Mr. Bienvenue's "misplaced eloquence."

Mr. Justice Owen agreed that Dupuis did not have a fair trial but he said he was not prepared to say that if the trial had been properly conducted the jury would have acquitted the former MP.

Mr. Justice Taschereau said it would be appropriate to order a new trial.

Dupuis first was elected to the Commons for St. Jean Ilerio-Napierville in 1958. St. Johns is in the riding. He was appointed minister without portfolio in the cabinet of Prime Minister Pearson Feb. 3, 1964, but left the cabinet in January, 1965, at the request of Mr. Pearson. He was defeated in the federal election later that year.

CALLED FOR ACQUITTAL
The appeal court took the case under advisement last March after a two-day presentation by defence counsel that called for acquittal on grounds the charges against Mr. Dupuis were not specific enough.

The defence also said the testimony of the main Crown witness had been "lame and contradictory" and had created a "hostile climate" toward the accused. It also claimed the trial jury had not been properly instructed by the presiding judge.

Mr. Dupuis was accused of having conspired with Roch Deslauriers and "other persons at present unknown" in attempting to gain the racetrack permit.

The defence argued at the appeal hearing that an indictment is "non-existent" unless the names of the alleged conspirators are specified before the Crown proceeds with the case.

The only one named in the case was Mr. Deslauriers, a St. Johns chiropractor, who testified at the trial he gave Mr. Dupuis $10,000 in 1961 in the hope of obtaining a provincial permit to operate a racetrack near St. Johns.

The Crown said at the appeal Mr. Deslauriers had "made mistakes" in his testimony but this did not mean, as the defence contended, that the witness was unworthy of belief.

Tar content to be on labels?

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government, under pressure to control cigarette advertising, may move first to require manufacturers to label their packages with the tar and nicotine content of their product.

Informants say that while the idea of some form of advertising regulation has not been rejected, especially for television, the labelling requirement appears to be closer to becoming a reality.

Even then it may be well into 1968 before this requirement is put into effect.

Such a step would be the first direct legislative action by the federal government against the cigarette manufacturers.

Federal activities to date have been a five-year educational and research program started in 1964 after publication of scientific proof of the links between cigarette smoking and such conditions as lung cancer, heart disease and emphysema.

The $400,000 education program has won international plaudits for the federal health department.

One of its features, an animated film cartoon in color, The Drag, was nominated for an Academy Award and was snapped up by Columbia Pictures for showings in theatres.

MAKING NEW CARTOON

A new cartoon, aimed at the elementary school audience, now is being prepared by the National Film Board, which made The Drag.

NFB also is producing a series of 60-second cartoons for television showing this fall and winter, a follow-up to a successful series of 29-second cartoons also produced for the health department.

The three aims of the education program were to tell the public of the health risks of cigarette smoking, encourage smokers to kick the habit and convince non-smokers, especially youngsters, not to start.

But when the program started, it was recognized that education might have to be supplemented by legislation. So the question of legislative sanctions was left open and reviewed periodically.

After three years of active federal participation in the anti-smoking campaign, the manufacturers appear in the eyes of federal authorities to have produced no evidence that they are moving in the direction of a safer cigarette.

Advertising spending by the industry has skyrocketed and the trend towards longer and longer cigarette packs has brought protests from within the medical profession.

ATTACKS INDUSTRY

In one of these, Dr. Norman C. Delarue, assistant professor of surgery at the University of Toronto, publicly accused the industry of "callous disregard for public safety."

Dr. Delarue proposed that the 100-millimetre cigarette be banned, that maximum tar and nicotine contents be fixed and that the package be labelled:

"Cigarette smoking is dangerous and may cause death from cancer or other diseases."

In the United States, the Federal Trade Commission has come to the same conclusion after a period of trying out a milder warning—that smoking is a hazard to health.

The American Cancer Society in October flatly recommended a ban on all cigarette advertising. It termed advertising as "too persuasive, too valid and too vital a part of our American life to be used in the sale of such lethal products as the cigarette."

In the Commons, longtime anti-smoking crusader Barry Mather (NDP—New Westminster) renewed pressure on Health Minister MacEachen for a ban on cigarette advertising. The minister promised to consider making a statement on the subject.

DISAGREE ON ADS

Informants say Mr. MacEachen prefers that the emphasis remain at present on research and education, except possibly to give the industry a spur toward a safer cigarette through the tar and nicotine-content requirement.

Some authorities consider it proven that cigarette ads provide a real motivation for people to smoke, except possibly insofar as they make smoking glamorous. This kind of advertising might be changed through an advertising code.

Refugees are haunting mankind's conscience

By REUBEN SLONIM

Refugees ordinarily do not make headlines; they are shadows, ghosts, wraiths who haunt the conscience of mankind. History has a way of bringing their problems to rapid solution.

So it was with 39 million refugees created by war and territorial partition since 1945. In India and Pakistan, in Korea and Vietnam, in Israel, in West Germany, in Finland and Turkey, enlightened self-interest facilitated the integration of the dislocated.

Finalnd, unaided, absorbed 400,000 Karelians; 8½ million Hindus and Sikhs left Pakistan for India; 6½ million Moslems fled India for Pakistan; 700,000 Chinese refugees found homes in Hong Kong; 13 million Germans from the Sudetenland, Poland, other East European states and East Germany relocated in West Germany, thousands from Bulgaria settled in Turkey; Israel welcomed 450,000 refugees from Arab countries and an equal number from the holocaust lands of Europe.

Finding an affinity of language, creed and national aspirations, the migrants adjusted to their adoptive environment.

Only the Arab refugees were refused integration into their host countries; only they were thrown to the mercy of international charity.

Apart from temporary international care for the Hungarians in Austria and Yugoslavia, every other refugee in the last two decades depended for the basic necessities of life upon the country of his asylum.

The Arab refugees, from the beginning, have been wards of the United Nations, the recipients of lavish aid.

They could long ago have abandoned refugee status, but their hosts did not permit it. They have been used as a powerful lever against Israel; nothing can be so powerful to an international community that regards itself as humane than the appeal to compassion, even if it is politically manipulated.

FRUSTRATION
The record of the United Nations Relief and Work Agency for Palestine refugees (UNRWA) has been accurately called "a clinical study in frustration."

"No agency," wrote Dr. Elfan Rees of the World Council of Churches in a survey some years ago sponsored by the Carnegie Endowment, "has been better led or more devoutly served, but the organized intransigence of the refugees and the calculated indifference of the Arab states concerned have brought all its plans to naught."

"By chicanery it is feeding the dead; by political pressure it is feeding the non-refugees; its relief supplies have been subjected in some instances to import duty; its personnel policies are grossly interfered with; and its constructive measures necessarily requiring the concurrence of governments have been pigeon-holed."

"The net result is that relief is being provided in 1957 to refugees who could have been rehabilitated in 1951 with homes and jobs without prejudice to their just claims."

In the last 20 years there were vast opportunities in the Arab world for the Arab refugees to build new lives, but Arab governments debarred them from these potentialities.

The plight of the refugee in the eyes of Arab leaders appeared not as a human or moral problem seeking merciful and realistic solution — had it been, they would have acted to relieve wretchedness — but as a political problem which they were determined to preserve intact, lest the whole structure of Arab beligerency be undermined at a central point.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

WRONG CARDS IN RIGHT SPOTS

Bea (Mrs. Howard) Schenken writes: "My sister, Mrs. Harold Goldberg of Gary, Ind., was in New York for a few days. I asked her what she would like to do and, strangely enough, her answer was, 'Play bridge.' It just happened that there was a duplicate game at the Cavendish Club and we played. Here is a top score to take dummy's king of trumps, lead a club and finesse her jack, draw the last trump and eventually get rid of her losing spade on dummy's fourth club."

The hand is interesting for a number of reasons. The first one is that the four-heart contract was rather ambitious but hard to stay out of. Actually, Mrs. Schenken had a minimum heart raise and Mrs. Goldberg a minimum jump to game.

Then the diamond lead was unusual but most effective in that it gave the defense the first three tricks. It also gave declarer a lot of information. The spade lead that came next showed that West had overcalled with very little. Surely he would have a singleton to justify his overcall, so that when the jack of hearts appeared

Mrs. Goldberg was able to finesse with confidence.

As for the club finesse and break, there was no other way to bring in four club tricks. It is a well-known principle of play that, when only one combination of cards will let you make your contract, you play for that combination.

About television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Carol Channing, former star of Hello Dolly, arrived at 21 at the peak of the lunch-hour rush in her working clothes. The guardian of her portals looked, recognized, gasped—and barred her from the dining area.

Miss Channing's work clothes were white wool plus fours, a matching Norfolk jacket worn with turtle-neck sweater, black woolen socks and white buckskin golf shoes.

The management of 21 enforces its ban on ladies in pants as rigidly as it does its regulation that gentlemen wear ties.

Miss Channing, however, is a woman of resource. She returned to her chauffeur-driven limousine and back she came in that, it was a simple matter that covered her discreetly from ear lobes to knees. A headwaiter led her party to a corner table.

Miss Channing's curious costume was part of her current job: drumming up interest in her forthcoming ABC special.

Carol Channing and 101 men next Wednesday night. The special is the first of six in three years she is to do under her ABC contract, sandwiched in between film commitments and, if plans mature, another Broadway musical.

INSTANT SUCCESS

Carol had an overnight success 17 years ago on Broadway with Gentlemen Prefer Blondes. Her Dolly was a sell-out and she left the Broadway cast to tour the country in the show. Next she did the film, Thoroughly Modern Millie. She has not had a vacation in years.

"My idea of a vacation is a change of occupation—like going from Dolly to Millie. You can have more fun working with a new company than just going some place and sitting around."

She is working in the special with Walter Matthau—in his variety debut—and her old teammate George Burns. Television, Miss Channing finds, is another sort of vacation.

"There's time to rehearse, time to work out new things," she said. "And if you don't like what you've done, there's time to throw it away and try it another way."

Formerly private concern

Government aids mentally retarded

By RICHARD NUTBROWN
(Record Staff Reporter)

The problem of education for mentally retarded children was once in the hands of private citizens but now the provincial government has taken over all the financial and educational needs of the School for Retarded Children in Sherbrooke.

Up to 1966 the School for Retarded Children was run by a private, non-profit making organization in Sherbrooke, which opened the school in 1957.

Tom Markey, the president of the Sherbrooke branch of the Association for the Help of Mentally Retarded Children, said in an interview the main advantage under the new government system is that now the association has in its immediate grasp any facilities it needs to help the children.

"Finally people are beginning to come out of the dark ages in regard to the problem," he said, "for now with government supervision, the problem will be put in public view and possibly the old 19th century stigma will be removed."

"But we must look forward," he said, "to the day when each and every retarded child will be taught in a way best suited to his slow mental capacity."

In answer to the question, "Are experienced teachers more valuable in the teaching of a retarded child?" he replied: "Yes, experience mingled with a degree of practical theory gives a teacher a chance at finding the total capacity of each child."

"We are getting young, well - educated, responsible young men and women to help us now where before the agent was only on experience," he said.

"New schools, better schools, more facilities and larger teaching staffs are just a few of the things we must be thankful for," he said.

The old school, on London Street in Sherbrooke, was really a large home where the children made use of three large rooms on the first floor.

Two of the rooms were used by English-speaking children and the other room was used by French-speaking pupils.

Now the school has a total of six classrooms with a room devoted solely to the help of retarded children who are actually too old to be attending the school at all.

These children would be forced into a life of recluses in their own homes or in institutions if it were not for the school.

In speaking of this problem,

Mr. Markey said, "Often when the parents of a retarded child either die or no longer wish to care for him, the child is left in a mental institution, a place which emotionally wastes away his life." He said this was the case too often and that it was time "for some type of government action in the form of suitable homes to help these children

when their parents no longer want to or are unable to." "Great things have been done," he continued, "but we

The retarded school in other years was run by the Sherbrooke Association for the Help of Mentally Retarded Children but this year, in accordance with Bill 60 passed by the Quebec Legislature, the children are under the financial and educational care of the Quebec government. This system has brought many new and needed facilities to the school and its teachers.

Three men in handcuffs and with manacles on their legs, from Montreal, appeared in the court of sessions in front of Judge Benoit Turmel yesterday and it seemed as though they had come to Sherbrooke for a visit.

Yvon Roy, 26, Raymond "Penguin" Patenaude, 34, and Florent Despris, 32, are charged with armed robbery and disguising themselves with masks.

They were brought to Sherbrooke to opt for a speedy trial instead of being tried in the Court of Assizes in February.

Their lawyers had written officials in Sherbrooke declaring the change of option and the three accused were brought to Sherbrooke to formally make the change.

However, when the time came to make the change, the men decided to stick by their first decision and be tried in Assizes next year.

The trio is accused of robbing the Canadian National Bank on King Street East in Sherbrooke with offensive weapons and of wearing masks while they did it.

The robbery occurred on Sept. 13, 1965, and the bank reported that an amount of $34,466.23 had been stolen. All the men in court yesterday seemed very cool.

One of them tinkered with his handcuffs during part of the proceedings and another beckoned to the reporters, by pantomiming a man writing on a pad, to take down what was said.

They were transported back to jail in Montreal and when they left the court room, the chains on their ankles jangled loudly as they walked.

Robert Dupuis, 21, of South Durham, pleading guilty to a charge of theft, was given a suspended sentence and ordered to post a $500 peace bond for two years when he appeared for sentencing in front of Judge Redmond Hayes yesterday.

He was accused of stealing a watch worth $35 from James Jelles, of Richmond. Crown Prosecutor Stanley Steinman said that the accused had been in the Brunswick Hotel in Richmond and had grabbed the watch from the owner and then asked for five dollars before he would give it back.

When Mr. Jelles said he wouldn't pay $5 and asked for his watch, Dupuis ran outside and disappeared.

The police were notified and they found Dupuis with the watch on his person.

Judge Hayes told Dupuis that he was very lucky to receive a suspended sentence because when he stole the watch, Dupuis was already under a $500 bond to keep the peace.

Judge Hayes said he gave Dupuis the suspended sentence because he was young and if he went for employment he could truthfully say he had no record, because in Quebec if a person is given a suspended sentence, he is considered as having no record.

The judge said that this was Dupuis' second suspended sentence and that the court's clemency for him had now expired and if he appeared again, he would get a lengthy jail sentence.

No justification for ending tolls

In rejecting an appeal to support the abolition of all tolls on the Eastern Townships Autoroute, the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce is acting logically.

When the provincial government agreed to construct the expressway, it made it abundantly clear to the committee working for the new thoroughfare that the Quebec finances were so constrained that such a scheme could not be carried out except as a self-supporting undertaking whose debt charges and maintenance costs would be covered, hopefully, by the tolls to be collected.

Apparently convinced of the tremendous advantages such a communications system offered to the economy of the district, the autoroute committee agreed without too much dissent to the idea of a toll road.

And if the provincial finances were in a difficult position when the autoroute was constructed, they are infinitely more acute today.

Any decision to remove all tolls on the autoroute would only place an increased burden on the provincial treasury which could be met only by increased taxation.

Something of a case might be made for the abolition of tolls on trucks in view of the importance of cheap transportation to the economy of the Eastern Townships but even here it must be remembered that the trucking associations were among the strongest supporters of the autoroute project although they were aware that it involved the imposition of tolls on all types of vehicles.

The Eastern Townships Autoroute has proved of inestimable benefit to the people of this district and it is logical that they be prepared to pay in part for the advantages received.

Motorists who do not wish to pay for these advantages still have alternative routes for travelling between Sherbrooke and Montreal.

Until the debt burden of the Autoroute has been liquidated or the position of the provincial treasury improves, there can be no justification for the elimination of tolls.

Our Girl Friday is a touch-typist. She's always touching us for lunch money.

Haydn S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR:

Homes were insulated with sawdust

Science has devised many insulating materials to conserve heat in the house. Half a century ago a farm lad knew his task on a pleasant late-fall Saturday. His job was to insulate around the foundation of the house so cold winter winds would not circulate around the floors.

Pioneers insulated roofs and walls with large sheets of birch bark. They heaped earth around log cabin foundations and first homes of sawed lumber. Research does not reveal when sawdust was first used for banking, but chances are that soon after the first sawmill was built in Berwick, Maine, countrymen began to use sawdust for foundation banking.

It wasn't a bad job. Planks and stakes were brought from their storage place beneath the west scaffold and set in place. Then a lad hitched the work horses to the big blue farm wagon and went to the mill for a load of sawdust. Sawdust is light material and it was easy work to fill the cart.

"Tramp it down well" father said. "Remember the winds of January." Two or three loads meant the trough around the house was filled and a banking of sawdust piled against the north side of the barn. Only occasionally does one see a farmhouse banked with sawdust today. But the countryman wishes all boys could know the fun of driving to a mill with a pair of lively Morgans and bringing home loads of sawdust to insulate a farm home against the time of snow and cold.

A rumor is like soft butter; it spreads easily, but just try and scrape it up.

Readers say:

Why is protest found only in West?

Dear Sir:
Pardon my asking — but why is it that movements for "national liberation" are found only in the Free World, while "Captive" nations are found only in the communist world?

Why have we seen no "peace" protests against Egypt for its "aggressions" against Israel, but plenty of them against Greece for preventing a communist coup?

Why have there been no demonstrations against the Bolsheviks talk of sending a guided missile into orbit around the world?

And why have loyalty and patriotism become dirty words while revolution and

"social change" are placed in a holy grail? Why is it OK to dissent while to dissent against the dissenters or their dissension is labeled Fascist? Why, oh why, in this great society is it considered so wrong to be right?

Yours truly
LEN ERICKSON

Expo should be made a multiversity

Dear Sir:
Now that we are pausing to reflect on the success that Expo 67, many of us have ideas regarding what should be done with the tremendous material assets which have been placed at the disposal of the City of Montreal. The suggestion of Mayor Drapeau that the site be retained as a permanent exhibition has been widely praised and equally widely criticized.

One wonders whether Mayor Drapeau has the concept of cultural exchange or of tourist dollar uppermost in his mind. Surely Expo would be cheapened if an attempt were made to retain it in the form, it displayed this summer. It was an almost unbelievable display of good will and a fantastic six-month party — but it's over.

Surely the exchange of plain friendship was beneficial to millions of people, but it would not be the same another summer. There is, however, one form which the site could take which could do much to further international good will and understanding.

The Expo site could, with relatively little cash investment, be transformed into an international, multilingual, multicultural institute of higher learning — a multiversity.

We are, after all, as Marshall McLuhan points out, living in "a global village," and surely a miniature version of our electronically united world would do much to act as a cohesive force by attracting top teachers and students from around the globe. Such an institution could be a project of the governments of participating culture, ideologies, and just countries, the number of admission on the basis of population.

There are sufficient buildings already on the site to provide both housing and classroom facilities, and excellent library facilities are within the distance of a fifteen minute bus ride.

This may sound like a fantastic dream, but let us remember that five years ago Expo 67 sounded like a fantastic dream, and it was only through dedication and hard work that it became a reality. Let us hope that the new Canadian identity and our new international awareness which we have gained from Expo 67 will give us the foresight and the courage to shoot for the stars.

K. W. DOUGLAS

How about launching Square Power?

Dear Sir:
We've got Black Power, Quebec Power, Peace Power, Indian Power and now Student Power. Everywhere people sitting, squatting, striking and standing on their heads for free speech, free love, freedom to smoke pot, peddle pornography, turn on or opt out. Our student newspapers and hippie sheets stink with jargon usually found on Skid Road lavatory walls — with disrespect for parents, teachers and the law.

There's only one answer. It's time to launch Square Power. Let's strike against paying taxes to support Universities wrecked by students who'd like to run them as they please. Let's boycott cooking meals, making beds, vacuuming and supplying free board, TV and car privileges. Let's freak out of maintaining transportation, fire police, ambulance, power, telephone and food services to those who reject our society.

He who pays the piper calls the tune. That means the tax-paying Square. After all, freedom of speech and civil rights aren't the exclusive property of Left Power, Black Power, Indian Power or Student Power.

er. As a minority group it's time that Square Power be demanding its share of rights — including the right to dissent against the dissenters.

Yours sincerely,
PATRICIA YOUNG

What Shall We Do About These?"

Adventures with God

Pearson, the dove in the den, looks back and remembers

If I were assigned to write a headline for this piece I would caption it:

THE DOVE IN THE DEN
But in deference to the editor, I shall tell the tale and leave the details to him.

It concerns the Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson, Nobel Peace prize winner, Prime Minister of Canada, and son of a minister. The preacher's kid was 18 years old when the First World War began.

A close associate recounts that 50 years ago young Lester was a lad with high hopes, high ideals, "a purpose firm" and a love for the swinging, challenging then popular sacred song:

Dare to be a Daniel! Dare to stand alone!
Dare to have a purpose firm!
And dare to make it known! (Chorus)

Today, two world wars later, neither the song or the Prime Minister is as popular as they once were, but their message is more needful than at any time in history. And the mellowed politician looks back on Remembrance Day, sadder and wiser, but not less dedicated to his peace-making and peace-keeping mission.

Like Daniel in the lions den, Mr. Pearson concedes, that without the intervention of Almighty God, and the co-operation and dedication of the people, he and his world may go up in smoke. But the aging Lester in the lions den is clinging tenaciously to his high ideals and hopes.

We salute the Dove in the Den for his continued effort to hold the fort until reinforcements appear, and advancing foes learn to live in peace with their neighbors. We join the hosts who pray on this Remembrance Day that the problems which engender wars may soon be resolved; the implements of war shall be moulded into ploughshares to feed the hungry.

Mixed reactions

Europe's image of US clouded

LONDON (AP) — In European eyes, the image of the United States is clouded and confused.

The war in Vietnam, a summer of riots and reports of an alarming crime rate have raised mixed reactions and emotions.

A Gaullist cabinet minister in Paris warns against "the Americanization of French life." British officials feel the U.S. is preoccupied with promoting its own interests, notably in Asia where the chief challenge has arisen.

On the economic front, there is concern that huge U.S. companies will gain control of science-based industries that hold the key to Western Europe's future.

Sir Paul Chambers, head of Britain's giant Imperial Chemical Industries and an advocate of British entry into the European Common Market, warned against U.S. domination becoming "a menace to the whole economy of Western Europe." Britons still look at the U.S. as the land of opportunity. But

and harassed peoples in Vietnam and elsewhere; that the Dove of Peace may return with an olive leaf in its beak; people shall learn war no more; and the Prince of Peace may reign. This ought to be the Centennial project of every church member (as it is the project of our Prime Minister), to make this dream come true.

The foregoing thoughts challenged me on a recent visit to Alta Vista Baptist Church in Ottawa. Rev. J. G. Wetherall, minister of the congregation, had written to members of Parliament asking them to state their favorite scriptural text, and as a Centennial project he had framed their letters as photographs and superimposed shots of the group examining the minister's display of VIP letters and photographs.

In his preamble, Mr. Pearson explained that he had changed his favorite text with changing conditions. But the pressures of the war years had crystallized his affection for Psalm 133:1.

It reads:
"Behold, how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments; as the dew of Hermon and as the dew descended upon the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore.

JANE SCOTT

Remembrance day dawns again on the mountains of Zion, which Allenby claimed in 1918 for Israel, but troops line the banks of the river and peace is a mirage. But the dream of the ancient Psalmist and the hopes and ideals of our Prime Minister and his admirers, sustain hope for the fulfillment of our dreams and aspirations for world filled with young men and women who have not only chosen the Word of God, but who follow the will of God, and dare to be Daniels in this age when the fiery furnace and the lion's den threatens them.

The Doves of Peace, shall one day triumph over this world, which today is a veritable den of lions, for the scriptures promise that: "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And they shall not hurt or destroy . . . for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord. Isa. 11: 1-9.

COMMENT

by Lubor J. Zink

OTTAWA (TNS) — Russia went through two revolutions in 1917.

Contrary to widespread popular misconceptions, the "10 days that shook the world" 50 years ago did not represent a spontaneous uprising against the intolerable autocracy of feudal czarism, but the destruction by a minority of professional conspirators of Kerensky's attempt to consolidate the democratic forces which toppled the czarist regime earlier in the year.

Although Lenin presented his coup as a culmination of the revolutionary ferment in Russia, the Bolshevik seizure of power was in fact a counter-revolution which established a new form of dictatorship, harsher and more cruel in its oppressive totalitarian methods than the old czarist autocracy.

After Lenin's death the Stalinist period of a full half of the 50 years of Bolshevik rule was so grim and inhuman that even Communists now find that bloody period highly embarrassing.

Together with the notorious mass purges and slave labor camps, the darkest chapter of that period was the "liquidation" (according to Stalin's own admission) of some 12 million peasants who were massacred or starved to death when they tried to resist forced collectivization of agriculture.

Crippling effects

To this day the Soviet economy feels the crippling effects of the fully pig-headed implementation of the Communist dogma of collective farming.

It was this doctrinaire obstinacy which, apart from bringing untold suffering to the bulk of the Soviet population in the 1920s and 1930s, turned the historical granary of Europe into a consumer of huge quantities of the world's rapidly dwindling food supplies.

Lenin's dream in 1917 was that "scientific socialism" would transform Russia into a model of rationally planned collective human endeavor which would set an irresistible example for the rest of the world to follow.

Dismal aftermath

At the moment the dismal aftermath of forced collectivization of farming (which, after World War II, was extended with equally disastrous results to the Communist-dominated half of Europe) is still manageable, because "capitalist" countries like Canada, the U.S. and Australia, produce more food than they need.

But in the context of the global problem of feeding the world's rapidly rising population, the failure of the Soviet system to feed at least its own people is alarming.

Available U.N. and other international surveys show that right now food consumption, with near-starvation in several of the have-not parts of the world, is exceeding production by 1.4 percent a year.

It is clear that as the gap keeps on growing, available stocks of food surpluses will soon be exhausted. At the same time the present rate of world population growth indicates that in three decades there will be twice as many mouths to feed as there are today.

In these circumstances less than optimum utilization of fertile soil and all other food-producing resources will be a crime against humanity.

From this point of view the consequences of the Bolshevik coup in 1917 are truly catastrophic, for only a tiny fraction of arable land within the Soviet orbit is under efficient cultivation. These are the so-called private plots (ranging in size from 0.7 to 1.2 acres) which the Red regimes allow the collective farmers to tend in their spare time.

In the Soviet Union, this "private" land represents four percent of the total acreage, yet it yields 46 percent of the total production of meat, 78 percent of eggs and 45 percent of milk. In Hungary, where 17 percent of agricultural land is outside the "socialist sector," the corresponding figures are 64, 90 and 60 percent.

These statistics indicate the contribution the countries behind the Iron Curtain could make to world food production if the Communist regimes were willing to free their farmers from the Red incarnation of serfdom.

Such a move, which would go a long way toward lessening the danger of an acute world food shortage, would of course mean that today's celebrations of the 50th anniversary of the Bolshevik coup would be the last, for perpetuation of the Soviet totalitarian system rules out any real liberalization and reform, even in this area of its greatest economic failure.

The PRAYER FOR TODAY FROM The Upper Room

Remember the days gone by, when, newly enlightened, you met the challenge of great sufferings and held firm. (Hebrews 10:32, NEB)

PRAYER: In times of prosperity, O God, fill us with gratitude. In hours of adversity, suffer not our trust in Thee to falter. Lead us this day in thanksgiving and in trust. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Says tax increase to fight inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — A temporary, inflation-fighting increase in taxes will soon be levied on Canadians, Finance Minister Sharp announced Friday.

His statement, unadorned and largely unexplained, broke budget-making custom and caused a storm in the Commons.

Mr. Sharp refused to say what the increases will be, or precisely how and when they will come.

Under later questioning, he appeared to narrow the field to an extra levy on personal income. Early speculation put the increase at 10 per cent.

It was not clear whether the increase would take effect when he introduces the measures or later, perhaps Jan. 1.

The opposition demanded details and warned of chaos in the stock market.

Mr. Sharp refused to elaborate and the stock market seemed to take little notice.

WILL REDUCE NEED

The finance minister included strong reassurance to the capital market, saying the added tax revenues will help reduce the government's need to borrow money.

Mr. Sharp said he made the statement Friday because he wanted a strong federal example of spending control to take into a meeting with provincial finance ministers next week.

But a compelling and immediate reason turned up within four hours of his statement: The announcement of a $3350,000,000 government bond issue.

Arrival of the issue at a time when the bond market was extremely weak suggested that Mr. Sharp had judged it urgent to reassure the market.

His statement said Ottawa would limit its borrowing in the capital market during 1968-69 to $750,000,000, half the government's requirements during the current year.

The tax changes would be part of an integrated program to check the inflation of prices and costs, said the statement.

SEES CHEAPER MONEY

Reducing borrowing demands on the market would tend to increase bond prices and reduce interest rates generally. Money for homebuilding and for industrial investment would be cheaper.

He hoped the tax changes could be introduced without formally bringing down a supplementary budget.

Cries of "resign, resign" flew at 8th government and the finance minister.

Furthermore, he said, total 1968-69 spending would be held to $10,300,000,000, not counting the medical care insurance plan and Expo deficits.

This would be an increase over the current year of 4½ per cent, less than half the rate of increase in any year since 1962-63.

New taxes would be raised as necessary to cover federal contributions to provinces launching medical care plans next July 1.

John Diefenbaker personally intervened to support an opposition bid for an emergency debate on the statement. It was his first Commons speech since he lost the Conservative leadership in September.

MPs of all parties charged that Mr. Sharp's statement indicated financial crisis and would bring chaos to the financial markets.

Mr. Sharp retorted that the statement would bring stability to the market. At later press conference he said this had already occurred, with bond prices showing an improvement.

"They the opposition were being political. They were deliberately trying to undermine confidence."

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield told reporters Mr. Sharp's announcement had further shaken the confidence of Canadians in the government.

He wanted a full explanation of the "extraordinary performance" in announcing tax increases without specifying what they would be.

"The people can't avoid wondering how serious things are."

Mr. Sharp told reporters he is anxious not to discourage private investment programs. This would seem to discount any increase in corporation taxes.

The alternative of a sale-tax increase would appear to be inflationary, working against the intent of the government.

Armistice services in Ayer's Cliff

AYER'S CLIFF — (Staff) — An Armistice Parade will be held in Ayer's Cliff on Sunday following services at the St. George's Anglican Church.

Remembrance services will be held at the cenotaph following the church parade at 11:00 p.m.

The parade will leave the cenotaph to march through the streets of Ayer's Cliff.

Lt. Harold Flanders from Manog will lead the parade.

Units from the Army, Navy and Airforce Association along with legion members from Stanstead, Derby Line, Fitch Bay and Ayer's Cliff will join in the ceremonies.

Three pipers from Lennoxville will provide the music in the parade.

Local Boy Scouts will also be in the parade.

Sidbec to negotiate for Dosco facilities

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson has authorized Sidbec, Quebec's government-backed steel company, to negotiate for certain steel-making installations of Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. Ltd., the premier's office announced Friday night.

The statement did not identify the installations involved but specified they are not situated in the Maritime provinces.

It said Sidbec would investigate the production value of the installations and make certain that they are suitable to Quebec's industrial aspirations.

After this "study in depth" by Sidbec, "the government will be in a position to authorize the negotiation of a price and other conditions of purchase."

Although the brief statement did not specify which installations were under study, observers believed the reference was to the Dosco plant at Contrecoeur near Montreal.

Dosco has announced the closing of its steel mill at Sydney, N.S., but the premier's statement made it plain that this plant was not being considered.

Sidbec, established some years ago, has never entered production but has acquired half in the area of Becancour, halfway between Montreal and Quebec City.

Armistice Day service held at Cookshire

COOKSHIRE — An impressive Armistice Day service was conducted in the town park on Sunday, Nov. 5 at 11:30 a.m.

The veterans, led by their president, paraded from the Legion Hut to the park, with the Sherbrooke Girls Band providing the music.

O Canada was sung, and two minutes of silence were observed in respect to the fallen heroes.

Mayor Donat Chapdelaine, Rev. J. A. Filshie and Rev. A. Fairbairn each gave a few remarks in English and in French.

R. G. Hodge read the names on the honor roll. Wreaths were placed at the base of the cenotaph by the various organizations. The Last Post was played, and members dispersed to the Legion Hut, where refreshments were served. A number of the members went to East Angus and joined in a service at 2 p.m.

FLOWER POWER — Only the camera can capture the split second mood of a 20th century pacifist youth as demonstrated above. A simple camera with fixed focus would have difficulty recording an accurate picture as the model was only four feet away from the camera. And fixed focus lens only give a sharp image from seven feet and beyond.

Camera choice poses questions

Once again the old bug-a-boo: What kind of camera should I get? I would like a better or more modern one.

A number of questions should be answered before making a choice.

First what kind of pictures do you wish to take? The family, kiddies and the like; if so a simple type with the least settings is the best.

This type of camera is easy to operate quickly, will use black and white or color and usually has a fixed focus. In other words you aim it at the subject and click, you have a good picture.

However, if you wish to do a little more than record shots

Camera talk by Doug Gerrish

such as pictures on dull days and available light, you require a camera with a fast er lens, one that will put more light on the film.

Also this camera has greater variety of shutter speeds, necessary when taking pictures of sports in order to stop action. You need shutter speeds up to 300 of a second or better for this.

This type of camera will have a focusing device to take pictures within three feet.

But in this class you will pay more for your camera and by paying a good deal more you could buy a precision one that has high quality lenses which also gives you sharp high quality black and white or color pictures and slides.

The more expensive cameras also allow you to use lenses of different types.

On the other hand if you don't know where and when to use such equipment you might as well use the more simple kind and work your way up to the others as your interest grows.

This is one of the rewards of photography as a hobby.

But whatever type of camera you use, remember, it's the man behind the camera that counts.

Fear of capture deters criminals

OTTAWA (CP) — The certainty that he will be caught is the only thing that can deter any criminal from commission of crime, Jack Bigg (PC—Athalbasca) told the Commons Friday.

"The moment of apprehension is what he fears," not what might come after that, the former RCMP sergeant said during debate on a bill to restrict the death penalty.

The RCMP's reputation for always getting its man probably was the greatest deterrent to crime in Canada, Mr. Bigg said during debate on Solicitor General Pennell's capital punishment bill.

The measure proposes a five-year trial period for abolition of hanging except in the case of murders of policemen or prison guards.

"It is very difficult for a sane man to see himself as a corpse," Mr. Bigg said. He was sure a murderer was unable to visualize himself as a dead man right up to the "rasping of the bolt" under his feet as he plunged him into the gallows trap.

murder, he said.

The British royal commission which studied the question for four years found no connection between the death penalty and the rate of murders.

There is always the possibility of a faulty conviction, Mr. Stafford said. Retentionists should ask:

"Can we afford to hang... when the possibility of error is always present?"

Retention of the death penalty for killers of policemen or prison guards was attacked by Terry Nugent (PC—Edmonton Strathcona).

"I'll have to vote in favor of the bill, although it burns me," he said. "I hope that in committee, we can get rid of the exception favoring policemen."

NO EVIDENCE OF DETERRENT

Harold Stafford (L—Elgin) said the onus is on those who ridicule by suggesting that a would retain capital punishment policeman needs a "psychologist" to prove their case. None of the 57 MPs who spoke for retention in a Commons debate 18 months here, who opposed the abolition had been able to show evidence that the death penalty deters anyone from committing an "ingenious compromise."

He said the government and all MPs are embarrassed that despite the law and the Commons vote last year no convicted murderers have been hanged. The present bill was a recognition of the facts and that was why he would support it.

Mr. Choquette also suggested the government might establish a court of commutation, or refer commutation decisions to the Supreme Court, rather than handling them itself.

POLICE NEED PROTECTION

But Bryce Mackasey (L—Verdun) said a policeman believes his death penalty protects him in the performance of his duties and "we shouldn't take away this psychological protection."

Mr. Nugent said the bill is actually holding police up to a court of ridicule by suggesting that a would retain capital punishment policeman needs a "psychologist" to prove their case. None of the 57 MPs who spoke for retention in a Commons debate 18 months here, who opposed the abolition had been able to show evidence that the death penalty deters anyone from committing an "ingenious compromise."

Ayer's Cliff Institute visits pottery shop

AYER'S CLIFF — The Women's Institute was pleasantly entertained Nov. 3 at the home of Mrs. Bernard Holmes on the Way's Mills Road.

Prior to arriving at Mrs. Holmes' home, the group went to Way's Mills where they paid an interesting visit to the Rozynska Wanda Pottery shop. They were shown how a lump of clay is fashioned into a bowl; the way it is glazed and baked and later the finished product, which takes many hours to complete.

Many beautiful items are on display. The Rozynskas, talented artists and congenial hosts, made the group very welcome.

Mrs. N. Pierce, co-president, chaired the meeting. Four guests were present.

A report was heard from the committee working on the Pioneer cemetery and considerable discussion took place about the project.

A sunshine basket was planned for a member who has just returned home from hospital.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Ruth Waite, Mrs. Pearl Berwick poured tea.

must not stop, we must continue to grow and learn so that someday these children will be productive for the society which is now helping them."

He said with the government now in the harness, the Association for the Help of Mentally Retarded Children will become a watch-dog.

"We will make sure the children are well treated," he said, "but up to the present time the new school has worked miraculously well, with both teacher and student enjoying the improvements made by the government."

"Money is no longer a problem," he said, "because since the government take-over the school's finances are totally in government hands."

In speaking to one of the teachers, Mrs. L. Buckman, several months ago, the subject of teacher's salaries was discussed.

She said now the salaries are the same as any other teacher in the province but that the government had sided with teachers with degrees.

"We are working in a highly specialized field," she said, "and I guess the government wants to pay top salaries in order to help in any way possible."

Tom Markey, in speaking about the role the Association will now play, said it now has more time to look for better methods of initiating new and better techniques of education.

"Speed, though," he said, "must never enter into the education of a retarded child because his mind cannot work fast and any attempt at rushing knowledge at him would be useless."

"I am not ashamed to say I have two retarded boys," he said, "and just through practical experience I know they can learn, along with most others, to become productive citizens provided they are kept in quarters emotionally suited to their slow mental capacity."

He said this was another reason why he was so pleased with the new school system; now possibly it will widen its scope by opening some type of workshop for retarded children.

"But with the way things are now," he concluded, "the Association cannot help being very satisfied."

Hospital lacks nurses

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Children's Hospital may have to curtail its services next summer unless it can get enough nurses. Hospital officials have launched a campaign to lure retired nurses back to work and are contemplating providing care for the children of nurses who return, part-time shifts and refresher courses.

The 200-bed hospital remained open last summer under what officials described as a "considerable strain." They said 40 full-time or 80 part-time nurses will be needed next summer to keep operating.

ST. PATRICK MISSION CIRCLE — Eileen Richards, Mrs. Justine MacDevitt, Mrs. Dorothy Taylor, Patrick Mission Circle was held recently in the Canon Fissette Memorial Library with Mrs. George Kinsley and Mrs. Arthur Stewart as hostesses.

The president, Mrs. Alberic Julien opened the meeting with prayer with special intentions for Miss Elizabeth Roy presently in hospital. Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

Further plans were made for the rummage sale of Nov. 9 in the church hall and for the Christmas salad tea, Nov. 18. A vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Frieda Adams for the donation of a doll and carriage to be raffled at the tea.

During the social hour which followed adjournment refreshments were served by the hostesses assisted by members.

The next meeting will be Nov. 20.

QUESTIONS READERS ASK

Q—I have arthritis in my wrists. Shouldn't I avoid red meat because it causes acid?

A—No, instead eat two servings of food from the meat group every day, advises "Diet Arthritis" published by the Arthritis Foundation. The meat group includes beef, veal, lamb and pork (as well as eggs, poultry, fish and shellfish). These foods are needed for growth and repair of body tissues. So unless a qualified doctor advises you not to eat them, include them regularly in your meals. There is no such thing as a special arthritis diet, despite what uninformed friends may have told you.

Overhauling is a term that cosmetics use when they describe a skin damaged by improper creaming, cleansing and make-up routines. A woman who scrubs vigorously with hot water and soap, then rinses with icy cold water is overhauling her skin. So is a woman who pummels and pulls at her skin in the mistaken notion that she is massaging it. Broken blood vessels, poor blood circulation, cracking and stiffness, all can be the results of overhauling. Always use care in cleaning, toning and conditioning the skin.

Sunday Sermon Subject for November 12, 1967

The value of each individual's own sense of identity and continuity will be considered at the services in all the Christian Science churches this Sunday.

In the reading of the week's Lesson-Sermon on the subject "Mortals and Immortals." Relevant Scripture will be highlighted by this verse from Psalms: "Know that the Lord hath set apart him that is godly for himself: the Lord will hear when I call unto him." Pertinent passages from the Christian Science textbook will include: "The spiritual man's consciousness and individuality are reflections of God. They are the emanations of Him who is Life, Truth, and Love. Immortal man is not and never was material, but always spiritual and eternal." ("Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy).

THE YOUNG DEAD SOLDIERS

The young dead soldiers do not speak

Nevertheless they are heard in the still houses; who has not heard them?

They have a silence that speaks for them at night and when the clock ticks.

They say: Our deaths are not ours; they are yours; they will mean what you make them.

They say: Whether our lives and our deaths were for peace and a new hope or for nothing we cannot say; it is you who must say this.

They say: We leave you our deaths. Give them meaning. We were young, they say. We have died. Remember us.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By ELISABETH GUSTAFSON

DONIZETTI: "IL CAMPANELLO", Melodrama Gioe-
so in one act, with Emma Bruno de Sanctis, Flora Raffa-nelli, Mario Guggio, Alfredo Mariotti, Alberto Rinaldi; Cherus and Orchestra of the Teatro La Fenice, Venice, under the direction of Ettore Gracis, Deutsche Grammophon Stereo 139123.

Opera lovers looking for a delightful new experience in listening will find it on this record. Donizetti is a well known name in the opera world, of course; his works have received periodical revival ever since the early part of the nineteenth century; such operas as "Lucia di Lammer-moor" and "La Fille du Regiment" are permanently in the repertoire of the larger opera houses — when singers adequate to fill the leading roles can be found. For Donizetti wrote in that florid, ornamental style of early Italian opera, a style which makes severe demands on interpreters except those few possessed of exceptional technical ability. But apart from this rare coloratura demand, this present opera remains one that is almost never mounted on music stages, at least in America. Here it is on this record, and a delightful hour's listening it is.

It tells the story of a June-September marriage interrupted by a young rascal. An old apothecary has married a young girl, Serafina; on the wedding night he is constantly interrupted by the ringing of the little night bell at his door ("Il Campanello di Notte", as the opera is also known). The fellow at the door demanding medicine, presenting himself in various disguises, is a former lover of Serafina, now renewing his suit.

The comic possibilities of the situation are obvious.
Equally obvious is the conclusion that not everyone can be left to "live happily ever after." Herein lies the explanation of that rather contradictory sub-title, "comic melodrama." But there is more mellow than drama — the delicious trifle is not to be taken seriously. The poor apothecary can hardly stand on his feet from having to answer that doorbell; the final chorus sings: "May your life always be as sweet as this night has been" — but Doni-zetti does not mean us to worry; nor does the gay, melodious music.

The amazing thing about this opera is that it was written in one week! The story goes that Donizetti sat down and penned the whole thing in seven days to save an impresario from bankruptcy. The astounding thing is also that case, that copious flow of melody, which those early Italian romantic composers commanded — Rossini, Bellini, as well as Donizetti. They wrote easily — perhaps too easily — but they didn't make things too easy for their singers.

It is display-writing: music full of cascades of notes, ornamentations, arias that challenge all but the most technically secure voices. Particularly the soprano's. Her music makes for delightful listening if well sung; if not,
for listening with the nerve-racking question constantly in it: "Is she going to make it?"

Emma Bruno de Sanctis is the soprano on this record. And one can relax. This soprano is technically secure, is on pitch, and, what is more, is possessed of a personality of great charm. Charm invests all she does. Opposite her is the baritone role of Enrico. Alberto Rinaldi sings the role to perfection; he not only sings well but at the same time achieves the speed and inflection required to put over the amusement of this role. The apothecary has the wonderful name of Don Annibale Pistacchio.

The character is sung by the bass, Alfredo Mariotti.
He, too, is wonderful. The whole record wins superlatives.
The recording was directed by Ettore Gracis in that jewel-box of a theatre, La Fenice, in Venice. What a delight it would be to sit there and hear this. Next best, is to have this record. An English text of the libretto is included in the record's sleeve.

The Israel Numismatic Collection composed of 28
display panels and including every commemorative coin minted by the Bank of Israel and all State medals struck by the Israel Government Coins & Medals Corporation, is now on display in Los Angeles, California. The display was assembled to enable collectors around the world to see the entire States collection and it is expected that it will be shown in Toronto at a later date.

Of particular interest are the three commemorative medals illustrated, honoring (left to right) the Tenth Anniversary of the Sinai Campaign, the Liberation of Israel and the Excavations of Masada, make up a small part of the collection.

A shortage of small change has become a serious problem for supermarkets in the Toronto area and it has been necessary for some of them to buy U.S. cents from American banks. In the Maritimes there is an acute shortage of 10 and 25 cent pieces and a bank manager in Fredericton, N.B. said it costs between $100 and $200 a week to ensure a reasonable supply of coinage to his tellers.

Various reasons are given for the current shortage, such as the unprecedented demand by Canadian and foreign collectors for the Centennial coinage and the requirements of Expo. With the closing of Expo, there could be a surplus of coinage, but banks and business firms will no doubt be stocking up for the Christmas demand.

Do you like to read your fiction or listen to it? If you are among the latter, it is to be hoped you have been tuning in to Anthology.

Called Centennial Short Stories, this series began on October 3 and will run until December 26. Selected and introduced by Robert Weaver and read by well-known actors, the stories are equally divided between English and French.

And the authors include such well-known names as — in the order of their appearance — Austin Clarke, Margaret Laurence, Mordecai Richler, Hubert Aquin, Andrew Langevin, Marie-Claire Blais, Hugh Hood, Sinclair
Ross, Hugh Garner, Gerard Bessette, Jean Basile and Andre Maillet.

Still thinking in terms of a union between the written and spoken word, any readers who plan a winter holiday in Bermuda might be interested in this report from Bluebell Phillips, reviewer for this page.

While in Bermuda recently, she "discovered" a Drama Workshop being held in one of the island's schoolhouses and was impressed with the literary-drama experimentation going on. Of the program she attended,
the first part was devoted to poetry, read very effectively with interpretive dancing
by members of the Bermuda
Ballet as an accompaniment.

The second part was a Theatre of the Absurd play,
The Bald-Headed Soprano
and the third part was a what-do-you-think session in which actors, readers, director and audience joined in an informal discussion.

Such indications as this Drama Workshop, the above-mentioned Anthology and the fact that poetry reading is still very much an "in"
thing, makes it pretty definite that for the future, appreciation of literature is going to involve a lot more than just "going to bed with a good book."

Marjorie Wilkins Campbell,
author of The Saskatchewan
and other well-known books
has received another financial grant, this time a Senior Art Award (Literary) which is enabling her to research a new book in England, Spain, Greece etc.

Dr. George Tait has a new book coming out. Called The Aztecs and the Conquest of Mexico, it is published by Ryerson Press.

Incidentally, Dr. Tait's
junior novel The Silent Gulls has just been filmed and will be shown on the CBC School Telecasts.

Congratulations are being extended to Fred Bodsworth
for winning the Doubleday
Canadian Prize Novel Award for 1966 with his book The Sparrow's Fall. Runner-up in the contest was Cicely Louise Evans for her The Newel
Post.

AS 15 by Raymond Souster;

While I am glad that I was brought up with the great
traditional poets and, indeed,
like most youngsters, spent
them in youthful outpourings,
I must confess that I now prefer the clean uncluttered work
of a poet like Raymond Souster
to many of the works
I used to love when time was endless and there were never enough words to fill the time
between then and eternity.

Souster reads the world —
God, man, nature, streets,
houses, society, problems —
and translates them in a style
to suit the readers of fast-
paced today, with a clear,
succinct direction yet not so
simple that one need not dig
below the surface for deeply
profound realities.

English woman outlines views of Canadian life

WE CAME TO CANADA
by Elisabeth Gerrard; Longmans; Pp. 261, $5.95.

Many readers, particularly those overseas, will be interested in this analysis of Canadian life by a recent British immigrant. Many of Mrs.
Gerrard's observations are common knowledge over here,
for example, the absence of emphasis on "accent" as a criterion of social and vocational success; the vast wildness of the Canadian landscape; the puzzling summertime tendency of Canadians to escape to "the lake," (the author for some time had the impression that this was one specific lake).

However, her book lacks the earthy anecdotes about people of all kinds which made "Roughing it in the Bush" a unique success. She appears to have travelled extensively across this country and the United States, but her contacts with people seem circumscribed. In fact, the kind of parties she describes, ('after-five' and 'after-nine' cocktails and buffets), are an indication of the upper-middle class social life she leads.

She manages to delineate
these "happenings" and to comment upon the sociological peculiarities surrounding them, without relating any of the amusing conversational exchanges or describing any of the foibles of those attending them. Mrs. Gerrard's style indeed, is neither as penetrating nor as funny as that of her fellow-immigrant, Richard Needham. This enthusiastic bird-watcher is a less-than-avid people-watcher!

Nonetheless, her remarks on education and the development of the arts in Canada are particularly valid. She is fair enough to point out the good and bad aspects of both systems. In her opinion, Canadian education is probably superior at degree and post-degree levels, while it is less efficient than the British system at elementary and secondary levels.

This results from the early specialization required in British schools, and its avoidance in Canada until about third year University. This system is what produces skillful British tradesmen and efficient workers superior in their own fields, but who lack general knowledge and culture by comparison with Canadians of similar status.

This writer labors at some disadvantage, since many Canadians dislike having Canada "explained" to them by a Britisher, unless the latter is a comic or humorist. Despite her defects, she has managed to pack a great deal of general information into this volume, which will be of assistance to her compatriots back home in gaining some elementary notion about us.

Souster's uncluttered work preferred

AS 15 by Raymond Souster;

Press; $4.75.

While I am glad that I was brought up with the great
traditional poets and, indeed,
like most youngsters, spent
them in youthful outpourings,
I must confess that I now prefer the clean uncluttered work
of a poet like Raymond Souster
to many of the works
I used to love when time was
endless and there were never
enough words to fill the time
between then and eternity.

Souster reads the world —
God, man, nature, streets,
houses, society, problems —
and translates them in a style
to suit the readers of fast-
paced today, with a clear,
succinct direction yet not so
simple that one need not dig
below the surface for deeply
profound realities.

He has sufficient command of language that he does not need to resort to the use of sloppy, obscenities to make himself clear; his work is sometimes whimsical, sometimes caustic, usually vigorous, and if not always musical — neither is life.

One dips into AS 15 to find things as they are; for example, The Immigrant is a passionate truth that is very moving:
'Each face has two ears
turned up deaf to catch each stumbling of my speech . . .
there's only one way up
for those such as me —
the death and burial
of the man I was:
only then will masks
lift, faces hold out their hands.'

'Into Night' is in altogether different mood, the simple eloquence of hope.
As you walk out deep into night
feel how trees are leaning over
to watch you on your way . . .
Hear dead leaves hiss and crackle . . .
Know without lifting your eyes
one star up there will burn brighter than the rest for you.

'Milk Chocolate Girl' is at once ridiculous, delightful and apt.

By now it's a wonder
someone hasn't eaten you,
ounce by ounce.
Being a woman, I might relate it to my granddaughter, not to a waitress, but what woman, grandmother or not,
won't see herself in 'One for Crealey'?

The fact of this man having made improper advances while disturbing you
has at the same time
given you a lift . . .
Good for morale, bad
for the morals.
Tid-bits cannot give more than a taste of the seasoning
but there is much to read, ponder, chuckle over, wonder at in AS 15 The volume ends with the lovely 'Quiet Evening.'

No lust tonight in my body.
I lie with you on this bed,
and your nearness is enough.
The warm slight sigh of your breathing
all to me. Words we don't speak
walk in our heads, are hands touching,

lips meeting.
And over us, hovering,
with the slow soft rustle of his wings,
sleep is waiting, patiently,
lovingly
to lead us by the arm
into the far green valley of his keeping.
Lovely, indeed.

THE STAMP EXHIBITION sponsored by the St. Francis Stamp Club was most successful and the attendance satisfactory. The displays of stamps were excellent and it is worthy of mention that they were much better than in previous years. This is in no way a reflection on those who showed their stamps before but rather on the methods of mounting them and the addition of informative material.
There were some novel displays which are always eye-catching and the originality of some was indeed startling.

The show this year was competitive and although there were several classes it would seem that this must include a few more classifications in future years. It is extremely difficult for those who act as judges to make the awards when there are insufficient groups. The Canadian material shown was good and the postal history items excellent. The straight displays of various topics were many and the subjects covered everything from space to religion on stamps. The officials of the club are to be congratulated for a job well done.

ART ON STAMPS has become the most popular topic for stamp collectors and some of the album manufacturers have published beautiful pages and binders.
It is unfortunate that some countries have issued stamps which cost a few dollars and have added sonvenir sheets. There are some sets issued a few years ago which now are difficult to find and are expensive.

There is no doubt that a collection of art stamps, paintings or sculptures, is colourful and attractive to everyone. Some collectors write-up their collections of paintings with information about the painters and the subjects, other add the postal cards which are available from the art galleries where the paintings are to be found. It is true that collecting habits change but a collection of world famous paintings will always be a thing of beauty.

A GREAT MANY COUNTRIES now issue Christmas
stamps and every year a few more are added to the list.
The variety of subjects used ranges from the traditional Stable scene to a talking parrot on the stamp from Guyana.
The Canadian Christmas stamps are in a group of their own and no other country has issued stamps to compare with ours, the colors are drab and the subject matter grim.

MALTA IS ONE of the countries collectors are now adding to their collections and the stamps from this small island are indeed beautiful. The long and varied history of this country means that the stamps reflect the heritage of the past. A look at the stamps will show you that the authorities are not afraid to experiment with the usual format and designs. You will find stamps of many shapes and the inclusion of a series of three stamps in different designs but printed together and then perforated into the three values will add another variety.

The stamps are in a symbolic design for the Christmas season. Some of the stamps from Malta have increased in value many times their original issue cost in a few years. This applies to comparatively new issues. It is these smaller countries which have been neglected that are now coming into the philatelic spotlight and when you read the quantities issued of many sets you cannot help but realize that the potential for increased value is good.

THE STRIKING QUARTET of semi-postals Switzerland will release on Dec. 1, for the benefit of its child caring programs, will feature four more of the small nation's wild animals to continue a theme introduced in 1965.

Designed by Celestino Piatti, a graphic artist of Riehen, a town near the Basel-Baden border, they are printed in natural colors by Courvoisier-Hello. The 10 centime depicts a roe deer, which is found in virtually every forest of Switzerland. The 20 centime, shows a marten, while the 50 centime features an otter, both of which inhabit the more remote and secluded woodland and streams. An Ibex, the largest animal native to Switzerland, dominates the 30 centime denomination. A member of the goat family, this chunky animal roams only the highest and most rocky of the Alps, notably the peaks of the National Park of the Grisons.

All of Switzerland's wildlife is strictly protected by conservation laws, although limited hunting seasons are annually announced for deer, chamois and ibex. Most sportsmen confine themselves to deer and rabbits for they are most readily available and require only tracking patience. Chamois and ibex are choice trophies for the more intrepid nimrod. They are remarkable animals with what seems like a built-in protection sense. During the rest of the year they will wander far down below the timber line to graze on the lush meadows, frequently joining herds of milch cows, goats and sheep.

Natives and tourists who leisurely take mountain walks during the summer frequently get close enough to the animals to photograph them without difficulty. In winter months it is not at all unusual for them to descend almost to the valleys and roam around houses and villages.
Karl Bicket, the stamp artist who lives high in the Churfirsten Alps, rarely passes a day in his studio during which some of them don't nibble at the meadow grass around his home and PAXMAL. Some of them, indeed have become nearpets, taking proffered vegetables from his hand.

But come the announcement of a hunting season,
and they disappear to the heights, visible only through strong binoculars. Hunters, therefore, have to scale to the uppermost granite, risking limb and life in the hopes of getting one into a rifle sight. Yet, once the season is over they again sense safety and return.

As usual, the surtax from the sale of these is earmarked for charitable works. The Pro Juventute Foundation receives 90 percent while the remaining 10 percent is given to other youth assistance work of national interest.

The set, which has a value of 38 cents, will be put on sale at all Swiss postoffices and the Philatelic Service Office, 3000 Bern, for the benefit of foreign collectors.
A specially engraved envelope printed by the Postal Administration Plant, franked with the four stamps and postmarked with a die which reproduces the deer design, will be serviced only on the day of issue, at 50 cents. Clients who have standing orders will receive these automatically,
but others may send orders accompanied by a remittance (via international money order, bank draft or dollar bills) to the Philatelic Service Office. Dealers' orders will be dispatched on Nov. 27.

Bishop's may join with UGEQ

Autumn is now little more than fond remembrances of smoky afternoons in September and the idyllic days of October when the sun still shone with an appreciable amount of warmth. Along with the change in season here, there have come the winds of change and these are attaining what amounts to near gale force on the Bishop's University Campus.

The pro-UGEQ bandwagon which was barely moving last year is becoming more populated every day and is rapidly gaining momentum as it moves along with all the subtlety of a runaway steam roller. Onlookers can expect practically a complete about face in the outlook of the Students Executive Council within a few months as well as a shake-up of the basic philosophy of student activity at Bishop's.

Staid and small, the university which has often been branded as the country club of the Townships may yet become a hotbed of radical socialism. One of the last strongholds of pure Anglo-Saxon education, the institution created in the hallowed image of Oxford, may soon plunge headfirst into one of the more militant movements of French Canada's quiet (and sometimes not so quiet) revolution.

The Bishop's ship will in all likelihood soon set sail on the stormy seas of syndicalism and the student body is girding itself to explore the canyons of cogitation. Collective action will become the word of the day and free tuition along with student salaries will be the basic foundations of the Utopia of the undergraduate.

The inhabitants of the institution will no longer be merely students, (a servile status imposed upon them by the reactionary forces of the establishment) but instead they will become known as intellectual workers, dedicated to wreaking profound changes in the structures of society.

Why all this sudden turmoil at a university which decided to drop out of the Canadian Union of Students because that organization was more concerned with the goings on in Vietnam than with organizing student exchanges? Why all the activism on a Campus which had been developing apathy into a fine art during recent years and why all the involvement at an institution where isolation and parochialism have been practiced to the Nth degree?

The answer lies in one described as a revolutionary movement.

Its syndicalist policy, which is one of the foundations on which the organization is built, reads something like a page out of Karl Marx. It entails a complete student takeover of the university system which syndicalists refer to as the means of producing expertise — a commodity vital to the survival of the state.

UGEQ stresses complete collective participation on the part of all students towards the achievement of this end. The organization was born in the midst of the turmoil surrounding the great educational upheaval in the French system. It was created with a great sense of urgency in mind and its success has so far been dependent to a great extent on the emotional catalyst which was produced by the rising tide of Quebec nationalism.

It is hard to see Bishop's fitting into this picture at the moment, but one thing is certain, if the university does decide to join UGEQ, it can be no half-hearted effort.

UGEQ demands total participation and dedication. Student leaders will have to commit themselves and speak responsibly for the students and make the fence sitting which characterized their relations with CUS a thing of the past.

Hunting and fishing

in the
E. T.

By NORM NICHOLL

THIS WEEKEND the deer hunting season will end for another year with the exception of Anticosti Island where the season runs until the end of January. From then on hunting will be restricted to rabbits, partridge and migratory birds. Which brings the question forward of what the statistics will be for the deer kill of the province. At present the deer kill in the Sherbrooke district is running ahead of that of last year by some sixty deer. In fact outside of three other districts which aren't considered to be good deer hunting territories in this area, the kill is up. On the subject of deer hunting and hunting in general the Brome Bolton F & G Club has come out with a bulletin regarding the damage to property and indiscriminate shooting that has been taking place in their area and in fact what is happening in many other areas as well. In their bulletin they cite several acts of shooting up buildings and the discharging of firearms in open areas and the shooting up of mail boxes. Plus the fact that their patrol wardens have been harassed by outsiders who claim that they have the right to trespass on any land since they hold hunting permits. But on the reverse side of the hunting license it is clearly written, "This license does not authorize you to hunt or fish on private or leased lands without permission."

A STREAMLINED program of hunter-farmer relations is required immediately by either the Quebec Wildlife Federation or by the government to keep what areas are left open to hunters. While it might seem that I compare ourselves to Vermont. I must however, point out that they have once again come to the rescue of landowners by some new laws for instance: Obstruction and use of private roads and lands by motor vehicles (a) shall obstruct a private driveway, barway or gateway, or (b) shall travel over a private road which is so marked or shall travel over privilege of trespass and parks his vehicles in such purpose of camping without permission of the owner or occupant shall be fined not more than $100. Get the number and description of the car and call the local or state police. He doesn't have to have deer in possession to be taken now! If the trespasser doesn't want to co-operate with the landowners than some form of drastic action must be taken to bring him into line to cover for the hunter who enjoys the privilege of trespass and parks his vehicles in such a manner that he doesn't interfere with the normal use of roadways.

THE PRELIMINARY report of the Molson Fishing Tournament has been released. The contest closed on October 31. However, entries will still be accepted up to November 15th. This year's contest has been a tight race with the Schefferville Club moving into first place and Lake Memphremagog following in second followed by the Lac Megantic Club. The race will still be in doubt until the final tabulation is made, by the judges on December 7. This year the contest had 300 clubs and associations enrolled of which 109 had winners. So any later results should be made before November 15.

THE LATEST DEER figures show that 4,115 deer have been taken showing that 1,657 bucks; 1,778 does and 680 fawns have been taken. Here in the Sherbrooke District the kill is as follows: buck-247; does-199; fawns-175 for a total of 621.

THE ISLAND BROOK F & G Club will be holding an oyster and bean supper tonight in the town hall Island Brook commencing at 5 p.m. until 8 p.m. so, if you like oysters or some good baked beans here's your chance. All are welcome.

THIS COMING TUESDAY evening, November 14, the Stanstead County F & G Club will be holding a general meeting at the County Building Hall. Ayer's Cliff commencing at 8 p.m. Since the deer season will be over it is hoped that a good turn out of members will be on hand.

QUEBEC WILDLIFE Federation annual meeting is slated for November 24 - 25th at Beauport, Quebec City.

Cowansville High School to sponsor basketball tourney, to be held at Chateauguy

COWANSVILLE — (Special) Cowansville High School is sponsoring their fifth annual High School Boys Basketball Tournament on December 8-9, with a centennial aspect that has been missing in the past.

In previous years the tournament has been restricted to Quebec entries. This year the organizers felt that it should become inter-provincial to help celebrate the centennial. Bill Busted, Physical Education Director, said that the journey for the visiting teams would prove educational, and provide valuable experience for the players.

The tournament, held in Granby in previous years, will be held at the Howard S. Billings Regional High School, Chateauguy, this year. Although Cowansville has acted as the sponsor of the tournament, they have never been held here, due to a lack of adequate facilities.

The participating teams will be Rosemere High School; Chester High, Chester, Nova Scotia; Brampton Collegiate, Brampton, Ontario; St. Stephen's High, St. Stephen, New Brunswick; Guysborough High, Guysborough, Nova Scotia; LeMayne High, Longueuil; Cowansville High, and the host team from Howard S. Billings High. Mr. Busted said that Rosemere, winner of the past four tournaments could expect some stiff competition from St. Stephen's High and Brampton Collegiate, both highly rated in their home areas.

The tournament will get underway at 4 p.m., Friday, Dec. 8, and wind up on Saturday, Dec. 9. The players will be billeted in the homes of Cowansville and Chateauguy.

Border Minor Hockey League to meet Monday

BORDER — A meeting of the Border Minor Hockey League has been called for Monday evening in the Rock Island Town Hall.

It is slated to get underway at 7:30 p.m. and plans for the coming season will be discussed. It is open to the general public and especially parents are requested to be on hand.

Coaches are required if the boys are going to play. With the new set up the league plans to have full season of hockey and this is the big reason why the demand for coaches is made.

Coach Sazio hoping Argos upset Riders

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Ralph Sazio of Hamilton Tiger-Cats is hoping Toronto Argonauts upset Ottawa Rough Riders in Sunday's Eastern Football Conference semi-final and he is half convinced they can.

"I think Toronto has a half-way decent chance of beating Ottawa and, personally, I hope they do," Sazio said Friday. "Anything can happen in a one-game shot."

The game, scheduled for 2 p.m. EST in Ottawa, will be televised by the national CTV network. The winner of the sudden-death playoff will meet Hamilton in a two-game total point final for the right to represent the East in the Grey Cup at Ottawa Dec. 2.

"I'd be lying if I said I'd rather meet Ottawa in the finals," Sazio said.

The Hamilton coach will scout the game Sunday, but he already knows where most of both clubs' strength and weakness lies.

JACKSON A PLUS

"When you talk about Ottawa's strength, you're talking about Russ Jackson. His ability and experience at quarterback gives Ottawa the big plus. He is long past the stage where he gets disturbed by a pass rush or blitz."

"I agree with the Argos coaches that the best you can hope for is that Jackson will have a bad day. He has them, but not too frequently."

Sazio sees Toronto's strength in its offensive line.

"Toronto's two tackles—Bill Frank and Danny Nykoluk—are first class. The improvement of their guard, Bob Swift, has been a major factor in the line's play. I thought Swift did a fine job against us in the last game."

Hamilton won the game 95 in Toronto last Sunday.

"Mel Profit gives the Argos tough blocking at tight end."

Sazio criticized Toronto quarterback Wally Gahler and the Argos defensive backfield.

"The execution of Gahler is what will decide Toronto's chances of beating Ottawa. I think that is obvious. I'm not going to reveal to Ottawa how we upset Gahler, but we did. I think he has all the ability. It's just a matter of coming up with a hot hand."

GET MIXED UP

"Toronto has a fine defensive backfield, but for some reason Jim Rountree and Dick Thorn-ton seem to get mixed up whenever Ottawa sends Margene Adkins and Walt Tucker on the same side."

PREPARING THE FIELD—Workers using heavy construction equipment continue the nine-day facelifting job at Lansdowne Park preparing for the Dec. 2 Grey Cup game at Ottawa. They will strip the sod from the field and replace it with thicker turf. Work began Sunday. (CP Wirephoto)

Beavers visit Vics Sunday while Nationals and Eagles clash, Tigers, Gauls meet

Drummondville Eagles and the Nationals square off in a two-game back-to-back series this weekend opening in Hull this afternoon to finish tomorrow night at 8:00 p.m. in Drummondville's Civic Centre.

In the other two games tomorrow evening Sherbrooke travels to Granby to tangle with the Vics while in the other Victoriaville Tigers move to St. Hyacinthe to take on the Gauls. All games are important as the race is close.

The Eagles seem to have things easy and at present hold a five-point spread over the Tigers. Jack Bowness' Nationals are in third, three points behind the Poliquin squad, and with a couple of games today things could change.

St. Hyacinthe are in fourth spot followed by Granby Vics with the Beavers in the cellar. Georges Roy's squad haven't posted a victory since their first game with Granby. They have two ties to go along with it to give them four points in the standings.

Fans must be educated to game, says Frank Selke, Seals not drawing, Hawks visit Montreal

Frank Selke Jr., who grew up in the National Hockey League, is finding it tough to sell the winter sport to a surfing society.

Selke, president of the Western Division Oakland Seals, doesn't think it's a problem of California's 90-degree climate as much as one of educating the Californians to hockey.

"They've had minor league hockey here for many years, but it's still primarily a foreign game that most of the people here will need time to appreciate," Selke says.

"In our fourth season, I expect that tickets will be hard to get and, once it catches on, we have 4,000,000 people to draw from."

Selke grew up with Montreal Canadiens. His father built the great Montreal scoring machine as it is known today and the younger Selke became an executive with the Canadiens before taking over the expansion league Seals this year.

Now, he admits it is an uphill struggle to sell seats.

The best turnout during the young season was 6,886 for the Seals' home opener and even Bobby Hull of Chicago failed to lure more than 6,553 into the arena when the Black Hawks appeared there last Sunday.

Another 4,749 turned out to see owner Barry Van Gerbig present a birthday cake to goaltender Johnny Bower of Toronto Wednesday night and watch the Maple Leafs wallop the Seals 6-1.

Selke also feels that having his playing arena on the wrong side of San Francisco Bay is a drawback.

"Although only about 15 per cent of the 4,000,000 people in this area live on the San Francisco side of the bay, it's not natural for them to drive to Oakland, whereas the Oakland people are used to driving to San Francisco."

Meanwhile, Selke's club hasn't been especially great on the ice.

They were in last place in the Western Division with seven points on two victories and three ties after the loss to the Leafs Wednesday—their 14th game of the season.

TO NEW YORK
The Seals play the Bruins in Boston today and travel to New York for a game against the Rangers Sunday.

Chicago Black Hawks also visit Montreal Canadiens today, while Toronto visits Minnesota North Stars, and St. Louis Blues travel to Pittsburgh for a game against the Penguins.

Montreal visits Detroit Red Wings, while Philadelphia Flyers travel to Boston, and St. Louis is at Chicago Sunday.

Selke also has an explanation for his club's poor showing.

He says the club concentrated on defence during the June player draft in Montreal and came up with veterans Bobby Baum and Kent Douglas of Toronto along with Larry Cahan, Autry Erickson and Bob Lemieux.

"But by the time we got around to picking our forwards there were only one-way hockey players left," Selke says.

"The kind we got go up the ice, but don't know how to come back."

Preferred Trot features Sunday card at local track, 151 to compete on weekend program

A Preferred Trot Sunday afternoon and a pace for non-winners of $1,300 in 1967 will feature the weekend card at the Sherbrooke Race Track. All dashes with the exception of the ninth this evening and in the eighth and ninth Sunday will have a field of eight starters.

In the ninth dash this evening five will go to the gate to battle it out for the top share of the purse. The class is a pace for non-winners of $1,300 in 1967. Charmante Frisco, Sep Will, Mystic Elm, Tino Brooke and Bengali will comprise the class.

In the claiming event on the card in the third only six have filled their entries but some good horses can be picked up. Dudley Counsel, Robbie Herbert, Hal Regent, Happy Gal, Miss Jessie Direct and Super Knight are listed as starters in the class.

The rest of the program this evening has eight going to the gate in each event and some pretty races should be witnessed. Three trots are on the card in the second, fourth and eighth while the others are all pacing events.

In the big dash tomorrow afternoon in the eighth seven trotters are listed as starters while in the ninth six are listed in the pace for winners of $1,300 or more in 1967.

The ninth dash will see Gallant Express, Ida Howard, Forgetful, Plain Bill W. Ozark, Plutocrat and True Gold fighting it out. Any one of this class could emerge as a winner and it should be a good fight the whole mile.

Larry Mosher with Ida Howard could cause plenty of trouble in this class as she can get away fast and finish strong. On the other hand some of the others can do the same which will make a very interesting dash. Last Wednesday Gallant Express was the winner in 2:11 while on Sunday Ida Howard came through the winner in 2:11 4/5.

The tenth race tomorrow afternoon brings together another good bunch of pacers. Aubin's Success Knox will be out after another win but Justa Witch, Donald Ibafe and Little Pete could make things tough. Damon Cole, G.M.W.C. Big Andy and Komo complete the class.

In the Preferred Trot seven will go to the gate with Pine Acres Scott, Lash Hanover, Nosedell Herman, Cloyd Hanover, Federal Agent, Kory and Red Top. Robert Jutras and Kory are slight favorites owing to his past performances along with Red Top. Nosedell Herman will be making his first start and is an unknown factor.

Peter Thomson leading Aussie PGA tournament

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Peter Thomson, who recently won the Australian Open title, fired a triple bogey 8 on the eighth hole today but maintained a one-stroke lead after 36 holes in the Australian PGA tournament. He finished with a 71 for an aggregate of 139.

At the eighth hole, a par 5 test of 320 yards, Thomson hooked his drive into a grove of trees and squandered three shots getting back to the fairway. The tourney is being played on the par 74, 6,999-yard Metropolitan Course.

CBC to cover Grey Cup events

On Saturday, December 2, the Grey Cup game will be played in Ottawa and CBC radio will be there to bring live coverage to fans across the country.

On the morning of the great day, highlights of the Grey Cup Parade will be described by commentators Bob Wilson and Bob Knapp, beginning at 10:30 a.m. EST on the radio network.

At 12:15 p.m. EST, a half-hour pre-game show by Bill Good will start the proceedings. It will be followed by a 15-minute warm-up prior to starting time at 1:00 p.m. EST.

During the game itself, Fred Sgambati will give the play-by-play and Bill Stephenson the color commentary. Guest expert will be ex-Argo Zeka O'Connor.

Remember when...

Sid Smith, 32-year-old left winger of Toronto Maple Leafs, signed 10 years ago today—in 1957—to play for and coach Whitby Dunlops, Allan Cup champions.

The high-scoring Smith played seven seasons in the National Hockey League and won the Lady Byng trophy for sportsmanship in 1952 and 1953.

Last year's champions, Sir George Williams has had it tanks severely depleted by graduations and Loyola now looms as the odds on favorite to take the title. There are now only eight teams left in the league after St. Pat's amalgamation with University of Ottawa.
