Demers chosen as new FMQ Chair

SHERBROOKE

Sainte-Catherine-de-Hatley Mayor Jacques Demers has been elected as the new Chair of the Federation of Quebec Municipalities (FQM).

Demers, who also serves as Prefect of the Memphrémagog MRC, was chosen by the federation's Board of Directors during its first meeting and took advantage of his first public release to present the FQM's priorities of the for the year 2018, during which this fall's provincial election will take centre stage.

"As major players in local and regional development, municipalities and MRCs are directly affected by choices made by the Government of Quebec," Demers said in his initial speech. "As part of the general election, political parties will have to consider our demands and needs if they really want to develop the regions of Quebec."

Beginning in March, the new president will make a tour of all Quebec regions to consult municipalities and MRCs on the issues they would like the FQM to address during the campaign. At the end of the tour, the FQM will establish a platform of demands that it will adopt during the Assembly of the MRCs of Quebec City, in June.

"By having our platform in hand at the beginning of the summer, the competing parties will have ample time to become familiar with the needs of the regions of Quebec," he added. "At our Annual Congress in September, we will call on the political parties to position themselves on our platform of electoral

Sherbrooke CDEC taking anti-food waste message to local schools

By Gordon Lambie

The Sherbrooke community economic development corporation (CDEC) and the École internationale du Phare launched a pilot project this past week aimed at getting students to think about reducing their food waste. Called the "Pèse-Gâchis," or waste scales, the project involves targeted sorting of student lunch waste into different identified bins and then weighing the contents of each bin as a way of being more aware of what students are throwing away.

"It is about changing consumer habits," said Sondès Allal, socioeconomic revitalization agent with the Sherbrooke CDEC, describing the project as a cousin of the "Frigo Free-go" public-access refrigerator project that now has several locations across the city. Both the "Pèse-Gâchis," and the "Frigo Free-go" have at their heart the idea of reducing food waste, Allal explained, although this new project takes a more education-based approach by attempting to make the 850 students

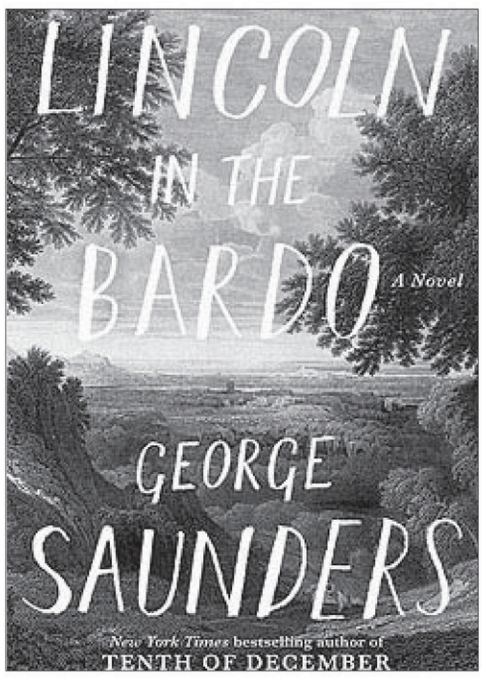
Lincoln in the Bardo by George Saunders

Good Reads

Lennoxville Library

Lincoln in the Bardo, the 2017 winner of the prestigious Man Booker Prize, is one strange book. A first novel by well-known American short story writer George Saunders, it is virtually uncategorizable, although probably the closest designation is satire. Called "original, transcendent and moving" on the Goodreads book review site, it takes place over the course of one night in the cemetery where 11 year old Willie Lincoln, older son of President Abraham Lincoln, has just been laid to rest.

The story, such as it is, brings the reader face to face with Lincoln's profound grief following the loss of his son. His younger son, Tad, is also at home, sick with typhoid fever; his wife, Mary, has been left incapacitated by the tragedy of Willie's death. To make matters even worse, it is 1862, the Civil War is still in its early stages, and already Lincoln has been inundated with bad press regarding the toll the war is taking, as well as his leadership deficiencies. Taking place in "the bardo", a Buddhist concept referring to the intermediate space between death and rebirth (similar to the notion of purgatory), it seems that the bardo in this particular graveyard (Oak Hill Cemetery in suburban Georgetown) is positively riddled with other "souls in waiting", all of whom have much to say about the newest denizen and his famous visitor.



Chief among the deceased commentators are Hans Vollman, Reverend Everly Thomas, and Roger Bevins III, but many more appear as the novel progresses. Not all the spirits feel so benignly about seeing a new face, but the three principals find themselves behaving in a protective way toward young Willie, especially as his condition deteriorates. Since they have the remarkable ability to inhabit, and commune with other spirits (as well as the President, the only one actually drawing breath in the crypt), Vollman and Bevins take it upon themselves to board Mr. Lincoln, and bring the him back into the crypt when he leaves. In this way, they hope to bring Willie "into" his father, and interact directly with him.

"We wished the lad to go, and thereby save himself. His father wished him to be 'in some bright place, free of suffering, resplendent in a new mode of being.'

A happy confluence of wishes.

It seemed we must persuade the gentleman to return with us to the white stone home. Once there, we must encourage the lad into the gentleman, hoping that, while therein, having overheard his father's wish, he would be convinced to— Vollman

A fine idea, I said, but we have no method by which to accomplish it... It is simply not within our power to communicate with those of that ilk, much less persuade them to do anything. Bevins"

After debating the merits and historical accuracy of this argument, the pair do take some desperate measures—and enlist the help of their fellow spirits—to accomplish their task, especially in light of Willie's increased rate of decay.

Much of the enjoyment I experienced in reading this book centred on the very graphic depiction of the other bardo residents. Their appearances in this realm coincide with their behaviour when alive, but in a much exaggerated form which can fluctuate dramatically, depending on their task at hand. Vollman, for example, is typically naked, with an oversized and unwieldy "member", while Bevins' form consists of multiple arms, legs, eyes and other physical features. Only once, toward the end of the book, do we see them as they actually appeared in life, and this occurs shortly before they experience the "familiar yet always bone-chilling firesound of the matterlightblooming phenomenon" accompanied by a rain of their clothing, signifying departure from the bardo.

Some other memorable characters include the libidinous Mr. Reedy and the Crutchers; the profane Eddie and Betsy Baron; Thomas Havens, who is privileged to merge with the President (and his horse), as they ride away from the cemetery; the wildly prejudiced Lieutenant Cecil Stone; Mr. Collier, "compelled to float horizontally, like a human compass needle, the top of his head facing in the direction of whichever of his properties he found himself most worried about at the moment." And these are but a few.

Interspersed with chapters that relate the progress of Willie and his companions in the cemetery are chapters filled with quotes, some of them apparently fictitious, regarding such topics as: the physical appearance and mental state of Abraham Lincoln, the unpopularity of his administration, his neglectfulness in respect to his children, the preparations for an ill-timed White House party, and the agonizing death of Willie, among other topics.

Saunders is clearly a very original talent. His wizardry with words and fantastical concepts takes this book into the realm of the great, although it is not a novel that one is likely to pick up and page through at one's leisure. The themes of death, grief and the human condition are powerfully drawn, but the off-the-wall humour he brings to the characters and situations kept this reader ping-ponging between laughter and sadness. Read it to enjoy a master wordsmith at his craft, but don't expect a story in the conventional sense.

George Saunders teaches in the Creative Writing program at Syracuse University. In 2013 he was named one of the world's 100 most influential people by Time magazine.

Sherbrooke teen faces criminal charges over theft of grandmother's car

By Gordon Lambie

Sherbrooke Police patrolling in the city's north end were busy for several hours after a car ran a stop sign on Quebec Street Wednesday afternoon prompting a chase. According to SPS spokesperson Martin Carrier, the initial incident took place around 2:30 p.m.

"The driver was able to escape, but the officers tracked down the vehicle using its license plate number," Carrier said, explaining that the car was owned by an elderly woman on Bellevue Street. Upon arriving at that address, however, police encountered a young woman of 17 and two men in their early twenties with the vehicle.

The spokesperson explained that although officers were initially concerned for the wellbeing of the owner of the car, it later turned out that she was out of town on vacation with her daughter, and that the 17 year old was actually her granddaughter.

Carrier described the granddaughter and the two men with her as being uncooperative with police and explained that the responding officers ended up spending several hours at the young woman's home on Malouin Street attempting to get to the bottom of the matter. In the end, it became clear that the granddaughter had taken her grandmother's car without permission

As a result of their actions, the 17 year old and the 22 year old driver will be charged with theft of the car, dangerous driving, fleeing the scene of a crime, and instigating a police chase.

Bishop's hosts Winterfest this weekend

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

This weekend, the Bishop's University Students' Representative council will host another edition of Winterfest on campus. The most significant day of festivities will be Saturday, February 3. This year, Winterfest will see the traditional snowboard and ski Rail Jam (12-5pm) in the Quad followed up by an outdoor concert (8pm-12am). This concert, featuring Toronto hip hop artist Jazz Cartier, as well as Montreal's CJ Flemings, will be a first for Winterfest, as traditionally the après-ski was hosted in the on-campus bar, The Gait.

Given the growing student population at Bishop's University and the rather limited capacity of The Gait, organizers have instead opted to continue the festivities into the evening with the acts performing on an outdoor stage. Lennoxville citizens should be aware that some noise is expected to travel outside of the enclosed quad, however the outdoor event will be wrapped up by 12:30am at the latest.

This celebration is just one of many events during the year held on campus to create a controlled, safe environment for the students of Bishop's University to have a good time while minimizing the disturbance to the Lennoxville community.

Magog man sentenced to a year for theft

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

Bertrand Lee Buzzell of Magog was sentenced to a year behind bars on Wednesday after pleading guilty to charges including theft, trafficking in stolen goods, and narcotics charges in Sherbrooke following the theft of chicken breasts in Magog.

With a long history of theft and narcotics offences, Buzzell, 37, was arrested in October 2017 following a theft of chicken breasts from the Chich Taouk restaurant on Principale St. in Magog. He has been detained since the fall of 2017.

Buzzell pleaded guilty before Judge Helene Fabi of the Court of Quebec on Wednesday to breaking and entering a business to commit theft, the trafficking of chicken breasts, illegally storing various items including food, simple possession of narcotics, and obstructing police work.

Following the theft, Memphremagog Police were able to establish that Buzzell was reselling the food he had stolen from the restaurant.

The sentence stems from a common recommendation from Crown and defense counsels.

at the school more aware of their own habits.

According to the revitalization agent, at the end of this first week the students will tabulate the final results and use that information to create an action plan for food waste reduction

"The more schools that get on board, the further the message will spread," Allal said, noting that a second high school in another part of the city is already on the way to starting a "Pèse-Gâchis," of its own.

"This highlights an important reality we live with," said Patrick Levasseur, principal of the École internationale du Phare, speaking of food waste in a high school environment. "the goal of the activity is to have a clear idea of the severity of the issue."

As of the start of Thursday's lunch period, fruits and vegetables were leading the waste pile, having made up just over 7.5 kilograms of waste over the previous three days. With 15.45 kilograms of total food waste weighed over the same period, that makes fruit and vegetables nearly half of all the food that the student body has thrown away.

The "Pèse-Gâchis," project was carried out with the help of Festivals et événements verts de l'Estrie (FEVE), who provided the containers needed for sorting.

SPA investigation into Stanstead dog at a standstill

By Matthew McCully

The Société pour la protection des Animaux (SPA) Estrie's investigation into the complaint about a dog in Stanstead that was allegedly left outside to freeze to death during the extreme cold between Christmas and New Years is at a halt because of no tangible evidence or viable witnesses, spokesperson Geneviève Cloutier said.

"The complainants were well-intentioned, but they were not real witnesses," Cloutier said, explaining that no one who saw the dog in question with their own eyes has come forward.

The complaint was filed by community members who had learned of the situation through second and third hand accounts, none of which the SPA can confirm without evidence.

The unofficial report of the alleged abuse first circulated on Facebook, suggesting that an owner left her dog outside and went out of town during the extreme cold snap during the holidays. It was said that her son went by after a few days to check on the dog and found that it had died, likely due to the cold.

Cloutier was unable to share the details of the investigation. What she could say, however, was the person thought to have been the owner of the dog was interviewed.

While on the premises, SPA investigators were able to confirm there had been a dog on the premises, but they did not see a dog, living or dead, while there.

"We don't have a body," Cloutier said. "We don't have enough proof to go further." She added that there was no dog registered through the municipality to the property owner.

"The law is the law," Cloutier explained. In order for the investigation to continue, an eye witness would need to confirm that the dog had died. The SPA would then need to determine if the cause of death was the result of negligence and related to extreme cold.

"This situation was supposed to have taken place between Christmas and New Years. We only heard about it on January 8 or 9," Cloutier said, adding that if people knew the dog was left out in the cold they should have called the SPA immediately.

"Even if you're not sure it's better to call," Cloutier said. Even if everything is fine, at least the SPA was able to confirm the well-being of an animal, she said.

"Everything is confidential," Cloutier stressed. "People shouldn't hesitate to contact us."

Anyone who would like to report animal abuse or offer information about the incident in question is asked to contact the SPA at 819 821-4727 ext. 5.

Animal abuse can also be reported by calling the Quebec Animal Abuse line at 844-264-6289.

Magog to install water meters in some residences by 2019

Record Staff
Sherbrooke

Several Magog residences will be equipped with water meters by 2019 as part of the Québec Drinking Water Strategy.

In total, some 380 properties will be chosen, according to various criteria in different sectors of the city. The meters will collect data to establish a statistical profile of water consumption in each neighborhood. The ultimate goal of the exercise is to develop awareness tools to encourage residents to use less drinking water on a daily basis.

According to Mayor Vicki-May Hamm, municipalities are required to meet standards set by the provincial government. The first objective is to reduce the water leakage rate in the network to less than 20 per cent. The second is to reduce per capita consumption to 410 liters per person per day or less. Right now, according to Hamm, Magog's average per capita consumption is around 450 liters a day.

Unlike large water users in the industrial sector who pay for the volume they use, homeowners affected by this measure will not receive any additional bill as citizens are already paying for their water through the financing of the filtration plant.

Additionally, noting the concerns that the Magog community had about so called "smart" hydro meters, the mayor pointed out that the water meters to be installed are digital, but they do not emit long-range waves.

It is still too early to know the costs of purchase and installation of these devices in residential areas. For ICI and mixed-use buildings, $1.1 million was set aside in the last budget. However, this cost might be lower than that, since some are already equipped with meters.

The issue of rail transportation of hazardous materials will be the subject of a national conference to be held March 23 in Lac-Mégantic. The issue of municipal taxation will also be of concern to the new president.

"We are nearing the end of the tax agreement that we signed with the government, so we will be working this year to renew it." He said. "How can it be improved so that municipalities can count on the revenue needed to fulfill the many responsibilities that come under their jurisdiction?"

In closing, Demers made a point of recognizing Richard Lehoux for his involvement with the FQM over the last sixteen years, including four as chair of the board of directors.

"These will be huge boots to fill, Demers said. "His dedication to the regions of Quebec must be an example to follow. I also want to thank the members of the board for giving me their trust. It is an immense honor and privilege to be the spokesperson for nearly 1,000 municipalities and MRCs across Quebec, who work tirelessly to ensure the health and vitality of their territory.

Joining Demers on the Board of Directors are MRC Kamouraska Prefect Yvon Soucy as First Vice-chair, Îles-de-la-Madeleine Prefect Jonathan Lapierre as Second Vice-Chair, Larry Bernier, Mayor of Lac-Édouard, Guy Saint-Pierre, Mayor of Manseau,. Gaston Arcand, Mayor of Deschambault-Grondines, and Chantale Lamarche, Prefect of the MRC de la Vallée-de-la-Gatineau.

Murray weighs in on school boards, sewers and student tranfers

By Matthew McCully

After bouncing around outside the jurisdiction of the Eastern Townships School Board (ETSB) in recent weeks to cover education topics in neighbouring boards and provinces, The Record decided to check in with ETSB Chairman Mike Murray to gauge the impact locally.

Murray on the Maritimes

Regarding the Nova Scotia government's decision to accept a recommendation to eliminate the elected school board trustees at seven of the province's eight boards, Murray explained that education governance systems in the Maritimes have long been in flux.

"People who won't read history are doomed to repeat it," he said, adding that New Brunswick abolished school boards at one point, only to find the alternative ineffective and eventually returning to the previous system.

Murray does not see the proposed elimination of school boards in Nova Scotia as having a direct impact on the ETSB, saying the situation here is very different.

"One size doesn't fit all," Murray said, pointing to the importance of a local body to evaluate the needs of different schools in a territory.

According to Murray, the ETSB is small enough to be able to deal with things on an individual basis, to identify and serve the unique needs of each school and centre in its district.

"Bureaucrats of any stripe have a challenge being flexible enough to allow each local part of a system to do its own thing," he said.

While the CAQ is currently campaigning on a platform to do away with school boards, Murray pointed out that they serve an important purpose, especially during any decision-making process, serving as a buffer between the province and schools.

The edicts passed down from the government are often unrealistic when applied to a territory, Murray said, suggesting that if the provincial legislature had to answer to parents and schools directly regarding its decisions, the situation could become unmanageable quickly.

Bury student transfers

Last week The Record reported that roughly 50 students enrolled in the French Hauts-Cantons School Board (CSHC) living east of Route 108 in Bury could be transferred to École Saint-Paul in Scotstown at the beginning of next school year because of overcrowding at Le Parchemin school in East Angus.

The CSHC held a meeting on Jan.30 and following testimonials from concerned parents opposed to the transfer, held a brief period of deliberation and then voted unanimously in favour of transferring the students to Scotstown.

Annie Duhaime, head of the parent's group opposed to the transfers, said some of the parents concerned are considering moving out of Bury or exploring home schooling rather than sending their children to Scotstown. While they have nothing against the school, Duhaime said the road to get there is dangerous, especially in winter, and parents would prefer exploring other options.

Among them was the idea of a shared bilingual school in Bury.

ETSB Chairman Mike Murray confirmed that the board had been contacted by parents about the idea, but no formal talks with the CSHC had taken place.

"We have occasionally discussed the concept," Murray said, explaining that the ETSB is certainly open to the idea.

Sutton Elementary School is an example of a shared school, Murray said. While the classrooms are separate, all other aspects of SES are blended with French and English students interacting in the hallways and playground.

Murray said the board is currently exploring the possibility of a similar model in Mansonville.

"These things can take time," he said.

Sewer trouble at Parkview

Over the weekend the city sewers in Granby backed up due to flooding.

Murray confirmed there was infiltration into Parkview Elementary School.

Maintenance crews were dispatched immediately to begin the cleanup, Murray said.

Monday was a planning day so no students were in the school. Even so, many teachers and staff found the situation intolerable and were skeptical whether the school would be clean enough to accept students the following day.

Murray said a thorough clean-up and disinfecting of the school was done and school went ahead on Tuesday as planned. The playground, however, was closed when it was discovered there had been sewer leakage outside.

A note was sent home to parents telling them to inspect their children's' outdoor clothes and boots.

Murray said Parkview is lucky enough have a 10-acre park beside the school, so students were able to play there during recess and lunch hour.

"We're still working with the city," Murray said, to make sure the playground is completely clean before students are allowed to return.

"My enthusiasm is for the crew that worked so effectively and avoided the inconvenience of closing the school," Murray said, "their reaction time was really good."

Murray did say that the board received a letter saying that the students shouldn't have been allowed to eat in the cafeteria because of the strong smell of sewage combined with bleach.

"We're certainly aware and monitoring the situation," Murray said.

GLIMPSES OF THE PAST

André Tessier Fonds. Sherbrooke Historical Society

In the 19th century, most of the land in Deauville was the property of the British American Land Company, which was selling land at such a steep price that interest in the region came to a halt until the beginning of the following century. The first hotel in Deauville, Lake Park, was named after the train station next to it and became a hub for tourists and businessmen. The versatility of the hotel was unmatched. In addition to housing the post office, Lake Park boasts the most beautiful beach on the lake. Circa 1925, a huge 10-meter high slide was installed on the shore, dropping right into the lake. The golden age of the hotel ended with the unfortunate fire of May 1978.

NCC has protected wetlands across the country for the benefit of wildlife and people for over 55 years

Wetlands are disappearing fast. Urgent action is required

By Dan Kraus

Editor's note: The following editorial is from the Nature Conservancy of Canada to mark World Wetlands Day, February 2, 2018.

Canada is home to 25 per cent of the world's wetlands, which are important for the health of Canada and the health of our planet. In Quebec, we see proof all around us. From the Lac Saint-Pierre Archipelago and theTourbière-de-Venise-Ouest Nature Reserve to the Malbaie Salt Marsh in the Gaspé Peninsula, these are crucial ecosystems for plants and animals, and great recreation spots.

However, these ecosystems are disappearing very quickly due to residential and commercial development, conversion to agriculture, invasive species and pollution. Every day, important wetlands are being lost across Canada.

Here in Canada, we have seen wetlands disappear in the places where we need them the most. Over 72 per cent of wetlands in southern Ontario and 65 per cent of Atlantic Canada's coastal salt marshes are now gone. In British Columbia's South Okanagan, only 15 per cent of the area's original wetlands remain.

Since 1900, over 64 per cent of the world's wetlands have been lost, with nearly 50 per cent of this loss happening since 1970.

As we lose these places, we also lose both nature and the crucial ecological services that healthy wetlands provide.

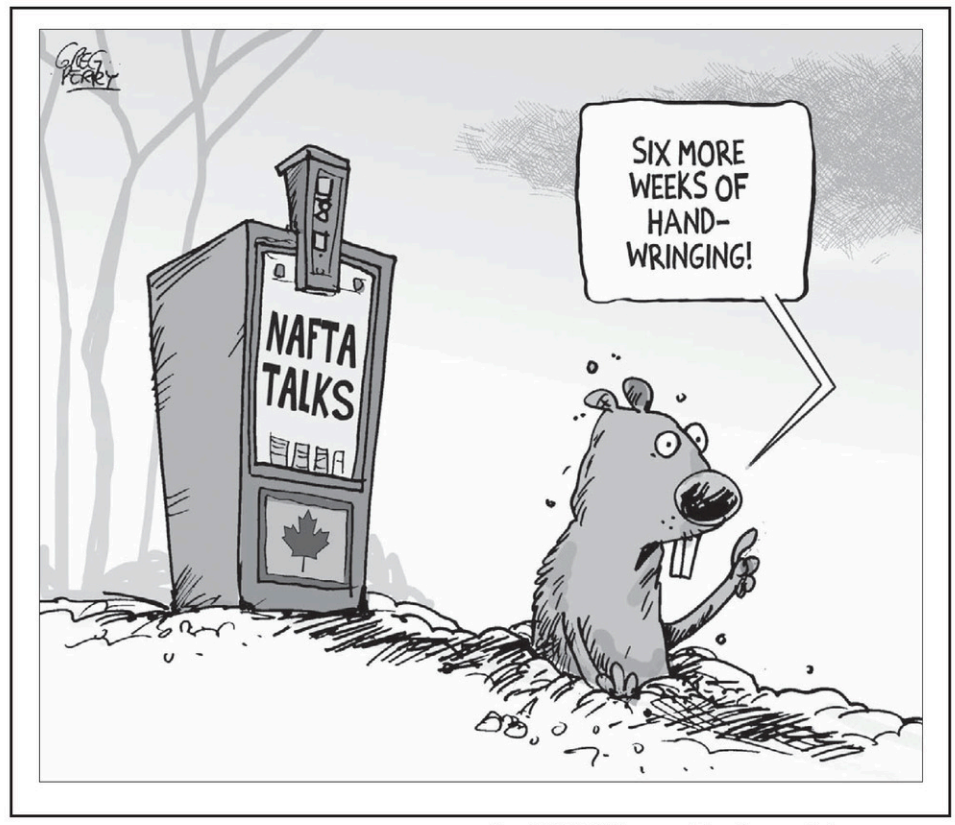
Many wildlife species rely on wetlands. They provide vital nesting and feeding grounds for waterfowl and many other animals. When wetlands disappear, species that depend on these habitats have nowhere else to live. Some species become endangered, or no longer occur in Canada.

Wetlands are disappearing so fast that urgent action is needed to conserve the ones that are left. Wetlands are among the Nature Conservancy of Canada's (NCC's) most important habitats that we are working to conserve. We also work to restore wetlands that have been degraded, to improve these natural spaces for migratory birds, amphibians, fishes and other wildlife. NCC is currently carrying out a restoration and enhancement project of the Grondines wetlands in the St. Lawrence's freshwater estuary. With the planting of more than 2500 trees on a fallow section, the community will be able to recover its ecological integrity.

NCC has protected wetlands across the country for the benefit of wildlife and people for over 55 years. We identify and map Canada's most important wetlands, and focus on areas that most urgently need conservation. We then partner with private landowners, communities, governments and other organizations to conserve these important habitats — including wetlands, floodplains and shores.

To date, NCC has secured over 379,000 acres (153,375 hectares) of habitat for migratory birds and other wetland species under the North American Wetlands Conservation Act.

Wetlands play an important role in the health of our country and our communities. They play a critical role in absorbing and storing carbon pollution. They also remove sediments, excess nutrients and even bacteria from our drinking water. Like a giant paper towel, they absorb and hold water to buffer our cities and farms from floods and droughts – both of which are growing more common and extreme in recent years.



In addition to their importance for nature, many of NCC's wetland areas inspire Canadians to connect with nature. Wetlands provide recreational opportunities such as walking, hiking, fishing, wildlife viewing and canoeing, along with educational opportunities, for people of all ages to learn and explore.

The federal government has been an important partner of NCC and other conservation groups in helping preserve wetlands, through the Natural Areas Conservation Program. By continuing and encouraging this investment in nature, we can protect vital habitat and services that wetlands provide to Canadians.

Canada has committed to protecting 17 per cent of its land and inland waters by 2020. We need to focus this conservation on the places that matter most for nature and matter the most for people. Private land conservation helps both by conserving places that are important for species protection, and for local communities.

Each of us can help Canada be a world leader in saving wetlands, helping address climate change and build a natural legacy for our children and grandchildren. By supporting conservation efforts, sharing your thoughts with friends and various levels of government and the business community you can help make every day a wetlands day.

Rights of the majority

Dear Editor:

The Record's article on February 1, concerning the abolishing of elected school board commissioners at seven of eight school boards in Nova Scotia, brings to mind the widely-reported words of Premier Couillard on January 29, 2016.

Reinforcing the benefits of the Liberal school board reform Bill 86, which also proposed scrapping school board elections, he said:

"It's important that the classroom, the school, the teachers and the parents become front and centre of what we do in schools."

He emphasized: "There's complete stability in our orientations, in what we want to achieve, which is to help our kids to succeed, give more power, more importance to parents, teachers and school principals."

Twelve weeks later, the bill collapsed. Those who loudly complained about "minority-language education rights," got their way.

Fortunately, now, a political party, the CAQ, has an education policy quite similar to Bill 86.

Actually, it's been their policy since the party's inception in 2011. As The Record states: "...the party's education platform includes doing away with school boards."

Simply put: The education plan focuses on the rights and wishes of the majority.

COLUMNIST

Let us reclaim "Wow" in it's childlike simplicity. Let's look around at the beauty of the world and the accomplishments of people and utter this one simple word of praise.

ONE COLUMN, FOUR VOICES

Opening to the Spirit

Today's word: WOW!

By Revs Mead Baldwin, W. Lynn Dillabough, Lee Ann Hogle, and Carole Martignacco

1) When is the last time that something made you say "Wow"? A few days ago, on a pastoral visit, I witnessed a group of six trumpeter swans swimming along the shore of the St. Lawrence River. A thaw had opened a passage of open water in which the swans were so gracefully swimming. Then, one by one, they pulled themselves up on the icy bank and stretched out their wings. The parishioner I was visiting described how she gets to witness their mating dances in the spring. "It is just like Swan Lake" she said, and we both went on to marvel that the ballet was based on this real thing with such accuracy. She could not say which she had enjoyed more, but both of them made her say "Wow".

I am sad that "Wow" is now so often said in irony. When someone does something we think is wrong or stupid or outstandingly bad, sometimes the response is "Wow", said not with joyful amazement, but with contempt and judgment.

Let us reclaim "Wow" in it's childlike simplicity. Let's look around at the beauty of the world and the accomplishments of people and utter this one simple word of praise. When the first crocus rises through the snow in a couple of months: Wow! When we take the time to notice a sunrise or sunset: Wow! When we look around at each other and see how beautiful we are and witness the beauty we can create: Wow! And, if by chance, we get to see a swan, or a bear, or just our own furry pet snuggled up by our side, let us take time to thank the Creator. Wow is probably all we need to say.

2) Wow is a wonderful word to use when we want to express exhuberance and joy. It may not be eloquent or sophisticated, but some experiences stretch past our ability to describe and leave us speechless. In those instances 'wow' conveys a sense of being awe-struck combined with just a touch of humility.

The stillness of the lake that evening at camp last summer – wow! The overwhelming feeling of holding my newborn baby in my arms for the first time – wow! The setting sun out my back window this evening – wow! This week's demonstration of care and concern for the victims of last year's massacre at the Quebec City mosque – wow! Albert Einstein famously said there are only two ways to look at life. We can look at it all as absolutely predictable and ordinary. Or we can welcome every event of the day as though it was a miracle, a 'wow' moment.

To be born at this time, in this place is such a privilege. To have the opportunity to contribute to the human project to better the life of those around me, in whatever small way possible, to expand my mind, and strengthen my body and enrich my soul by an earthly experience: all these things I receive as precious gifts. When I think about it deeply, it's enough to turn all my words into 'wow's.

3) Once as a young voice student I was standing on stage during a performance of Fiddler on the Roof with the chorus, singing "Wonder of wonders, miracle of miracles..." Right in the middle of those lyrics it struck me that ~ wow! It can't get much better than this - being here, part of the scene, lights flashing, colourful costumes, a full orchestra, and my own just one voice among the many. I was lifted up to a place at once both ordinary and special, whirling in the dance, swept up in the happy crowd. It occurred to me then, as now, that wow could be an acronym for "wonder of wonders."

Or sometimes it can mean "with-out words." I stop speechless, breath held in the half-open door, as the slender blue heron who occasionally graces our back pond lifts with a sudden whoosh on spindly legs, spreading its powerful wings and glides out of sight. It happens in the art gallery when with astonishment I am suddenly aware of the creative genius of an artist friend. Listening to music provides countless wow moments. Just recently I sat captive and awestruck as a young Chinese girl on video - before an audience of millions - played Bach with such ease and grace, the notes just fell from her fingers.

Wow is different for everyone. My partner finds it's not the arts so much as sports. Amazing feats - sometimes in the very last seconds of a game - esp., he said, whenever his home team back in Britain actually wins a game.

It can even happen on a regular Sunday morning. A few years ago we hosted a workshop for service leaders at our church called, "The WOW of Worship." We explored the essence of ritual and how to create that one pivotal moment - again, perhaps different for everyone present - that strikes the spirit and rings us like a bell. It may be an insight, a flash of intuition, or a piece of the puzzle that suddenly, silently slips into place to create a whole.

What blows you away, transports you to realms of incredulity? Whatever your "wow" moments, wherever you find them, I wish you many. Best of all, they cost nothing but a willingness to be inspired with wonder and awe.

4) As I write, people are preparing for a Super Blue Moon Eclipse on Wednesday night. This rare occurrence will be seen better in some other locations but I hope to catch a glimpse of the blue moon that night. WOW!

I have memories of putting out lawn chairs on my front lawn, waking up my kids, and watching an awesome night of shooting stars around 2:30 am. WOW! Once years ago I was on a trip across Canada. I slept out one night on the outskirts of an Alberta town and awoke to see the most graceful antelope leaping over hedges with amazing dexterity. WOW !

Of course, not all my Wow moments have taken place in the world of nature. As a teenager I travelled to a missionary conference on a university campus in the States. One of my favourite Christian authors at the time, Rev. John Stott, led a communion service in the gymnasium with over 15,000 students in attendance. When I remember singing a favourite song all I can do is say WOW!

I was sitting at the back of our congregation a few years ago. The guest preacher finished the children's story and sent the children off to Sunday school. A six year old said, "Wait! We haven't said a prayer." (I usually do an echo prayer with them.) When she said there wouldn't be one that day, he boldly led one himself. Dear God, he began, and the rest of the kids echoed him perfectly. WOW!

One of my favourite writers about spirituality is Annie Lamott. She wrote a book entitled "Help, Thanks, Wow", where she describes three basic types of prayer. We are used to prayers of gratitude and prayers where we ask for something from God. We all have our "Wow" moments. . I wonder how often we use the "Wow" prayer.

One word, four voices - now it's your turn to reflect: What makes you want to say WOW?

Rev. Mead Baldwin pastors the Waterville & North Hatley pastoral charge; Rev. Lynn Dillabough is now Rector of St. Paul's in Brockville ON. She continues to write for this column as a dedicated colleague with the Eastern Townships clergy writing team; Rev. Lee Ann Hogle ministers to the Ayer's Cliff, Magog & Georgeville United Churches; Rev. Carole Martignacco is Consulting Minister to UU Estrie-Unitarian Universalists in North Hatley.

School bus cameras on the way?

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

Transport Minister André Fortin left the door open Tuesday to the possible installation of photo radar cameras on school buses to punish drivers who fail to stop when flashing lights are on. Fortin was speaking at a Fédération des transporteurs par autobus press conference launching the 30th School Bus Safety Campaign.

In 2015, a pilot project allowed Ottawa to install cameras on the stop arms of certain school buses and the project found that there was an average of five offenses per day on each bus route. With the project report in hand, the federal capital announced in November that six cameras, costing between $16,000 and $18,000 each, would be permanently installed on school buses.

Luc Lafrance, President and CEO of the Fédération des transporteurs par autobus, admits that the number of rule violations is currently much higher than the number of tickets issued by police.

"According to the figures of the Quebec Automobile Insurance Corporation, only 1000 tickets are issued annually in Quebec for ignoring flashing lights on the 10 000 school buses that carry more than half-a-million schoolchildren, which average 20 million kilometers a day." Lafrance said, adding that he was aware that manufacturers of these cameras had applied to the Quebec Government for a pilot project similar to the one attempted in Ottawa.

Fortin, for his part, mentioned that the province's road safety record has improved significantly for school buses in Quebec.

"But even if the bottom line has improved, a single accident can lead to a tragic end," he said.

Fortin says the last case of a student dying inside a bus involved in a car accident dating back to 1986 while Lafrance pointed out that another accident in 2006 involved a student who had just gotten off the bus.

Last November 27, a 17-year-old girl died after being struck by a school bus in Saint-Eustache, and in September, a 61-year-old cyclist was killed in Montreal after being struck by a school bus. In 2011, a collision between a van and a school bus left four people dead and four seriously injured in Sainte-Geneviève-de-Berthier, in Lanaudière.

According to the Automobile Insurance Corporation, 292 people were injured in school bus accidents in 2016, 29 fewer than in 2015. Of these, 276 were slightly injured and 11 seriously. Five adults, one occupying a school bus and four occupying another vehicle, were killed. These figues cover all accidents related to school transportation in the broader sense and that a bus was not necessarily involved in the accident.

Mousquiri organizers celebrate 46 years of success

By Claudia Villemaire
Richmond

With forty-six successful years under their belt, organizers of this year's Mousquiri Atom hockey tournament decided it was time to celebrate such an outstanding record. Last Saturday, January 27, the group chose to present an evening of music and fellowship at the Centre d'Arts here in Richmond, just two days before upwards of seven hundred Atom hockey players began the oldest national Atom hockey Tournament in Quebec.

One can only imagine the planning and programming needed to present a schedule that includes Classes A, B, BB and C. During the thirteen days of the tournament teams from across Quebec, Ontario and at least three States south of the border come together to compete. President Guillaume Cayer-Richard, in his ninth term of office, heads up an enthusiastic team of organizers supported by over 200 volunteers, many of whom are second generation folks following the example set by parents and/or family members nearly fifty years ago.

This is an organization that does not forget the loyalty of its supporters. Aside from the official program of games, the tournament also includes special events such as awarding Volunteer of the Year Awards. This year the awards went to Michelle Nadeau and Robert Dalton, who are also Honorary presidents of the tournament.

This year, Richmond is proud to welcome three Atom teams to the competition from every corner of Quebec as well as two teams from New Hampshire and one from Pennsylvania. Also important on the program are the finals with the BB's facing off on Sunday, February 11th. The three other categories play their championship games on February 18.

Another special event, an exhibition of photos, will give visitors to the exhibition hall at the Centre d'Arts a glimpse of the history of this outstanding and popular event. The exhibition opens Saturday, February 3, and will continue until February 18.

Tickets and programs are available at various locations in Richmond or at the door where folks can also find souvenirs and enjoy refreshments or a snack. The official opening is Friday, Feb. 9th with a special appearance and presentation by Sherbrooke University's Drumline Corps beginning at 6:30 or as soon as the current game ends. Usually this event draws a full house with the flags marched in by members of the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 15, the 'red' carpet traditional introduction of VIPs, prayers in French and English by Atom hockey players and the usual 'dropping the puck', team introductions and of course, the president's address.

Sherbrooke

Constantly on the lookout for new trends, the Agricultural Business Management and Technologies (GTEA) program at the Cégep de Sherbrooke is innovating once again by incorporating an organic approach and crop trends into courses in horticultural specialization.

Organic production, which was initially restricted to a small handful of fervent producers and defenders of this school of thought, has rallied more and more followers over the years. At the same time, the number of certified organic vegetable farms has also increased significantly and farmers' expertise has also kept pace.

The Cégep's GTEA program has chosen to make this new shift so as to stay as close as possible to the reality faced by agricultural enterprises. To that end, the program will now allow students to meet some pioneers in organic farming in Quebec, as many of the first certified organic farms originated in Estrie.

Organic in the classroom

The greenhouse production course and the field vegetable production course will include guidelines for certified organic processes and will encourage students to learn about different practices favored by the organic approach. Greenhouse and field seedlings will also be grown according to organic certification standards.

The Fruit and Alternative Crops course is also part of the change and the theme of emergent crop production will be discussed. Students will have the opportunity to explore the production of Saskatoon berries, hops, nut trees, non-timber forest products, milkweed, sea buckthorn, elderberry, dwarf cherry, and saffron. This course hopes to open the door to a wide range of new opportunities in agriculture.

The Sheltered Crop and Field Crop Course, in turn, will encourage students to carry out the main stages of planning a crop from selection to the development of a schedule. Finally, the first two stages of the program will be carried out primarily on certified organic farms.

A Project for the Future

The Cégep's horticultural production specialization courses will, now more than ever, encourage students to use concepts acquired in class and apply them to a process of reflection that will lead them to submit a agricultural plan. This work is often used as a template for their business plan or to launch a micro-enterprise project.

According to 20-year GTEA instructor Nathalie Lanoix, "This new mode of teaching will allow students to develop close links with the organic farming milieu and to draw inspiration from them to create their future project.

The animal production specialization also includes a new approach in sustainable agriculture that will allow students to develop skills in food, genetics, reproduction, and diversified farm management, with a constant concern for animal well-being, health, and safety.

Restless Heart to begin yearlong 35th Anniversary Tour

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE PELLETIER AULIS

February has just started and the country music industry is in full swing. Many albums coming out, tours are kicking off, while there are also anniversaries and awards ceremonies being planned.

Restless Heart, the legendary country music group has announced the first round of live concert dates for its '35th Anniversary Tour.' This will be a yearlong celebration that will take the band across the country performing the hit songs that launched them into stardom more than three decades ago.

Over a dozen of performances have been announced with stops in Texas, Florida, Tennessee, Georgia, and Kentucky, with more to come.

"35 years... far more than we could have ever imagined or hoped for, and still an absolute privilege to share the stage with all of our original members," says Restless Heart's Dave Innis in a press release. "That is something to be grateful for and it's in thanks to all our amazing fans, old and new, who have become friends and family to us throughout the years."

Larry Stewart, the band's lead singer, adds, "I'm so honored to hit the stage with my original bandmates every night, and I believe we're as good as we've ever been. To see our fans continue to support us and to see so many new fans attend our shows, it's humbling. Thank you to our RH family for remaining loyal fans!"

John Dittrich, Greg Jennings, Paul Gregg, Stewart, and Innis, the five original men who make up Restless Heart, have enjoyed one of the most successful group careers in country music history.

The band has placed over 25 singles on the charts with six consecutive No. 1 hits, four of their albums have been certified Gold by the RIAA and they have won a wide range of awards from many organizations, including the Academy of Country Music's 'Top Vocal Group.'

New lead singer for SteelDrivers

Chris Stapleton announced in April 2010, that he was leaving the band to focus on a solo career. He was replaced by former Mercury Records artist Gary Nichols on lead vocals and guitar for a while.

Now The SteelDrivers announced that Kelvin Damrell has officially joined the group as lead singer and guitarist. The Grammy winning Rounder Records act had a record year in 2017, touring across the country and selling out six shows in Nashville alone. The band shared this message on their Facebook page:

"Hello folks. We have some great news to share tonight. We are officially announcing that Kelvin Damrell will be our new singer and guitar picker! Most of you know that we had to part ways with our longtime partner Gary Nichols last year.

"It took us a while to heal up and get it together. To be honest, we didn't know for sure if we'd ever be able to replace such a massive talent. But we eventually found this young fella from the hills of Kentucky who can absolutely rock the grass!

'We're thrilled to have Kelvin join us. We've done a handful of shows with KD so far and those who've seen him have loved him. He got a rousing standing ovation on his very first show! We hope you will welcome KD into the SteelHead Nation. He rocks Kelvin Damrell y'all."

A native of Berea, Kentucky, Damrell grew up in a family of bluegrass gospel singers, but he says his father, who worked in construction, is his greatest musical influence. "I started out as a drummer but quickly switched to guitar once I found out my dad and I could jam together. I found my voice as a child in a little country church. My first song was 'I'll Fly Away,' sang hidden behind Juanita Hounshell's piano."

Damrell added, "I was a big fan of The SteelDrivers before I got the call. Coming on board with such amazing musicians is an honor and a dream come true."

The SteelDrivers is composed of Mike Fleming, Tammy Rogers, Richard Bailey, Brent Truitt, and recently Kelvin Damrell. They are a talented group of seasoned musicians, each distinguished in his or her own right.

The group's bluegrass roots combine with country and soul influences to create a refreshing, contemporary sound. This is new music with an old feeling.

The SteelDrivers released their fourth Rounder Records album, The Muscle Shoals Recordings, in 2015. The band will soon be back in the studio to work on their next project.

Reba as Colonel Harland Sanders

Kentucky Fried Chicken announced that it has selected the first ever globally known music superstar to play the role of Colonel Harland Sanders. Beginning January 28, ads featuring multiple Grammy Award winning entertainer Reba McEntire will air on television and computer screens nationwide to promote KFC's new Smoky Mountain BBQ fried chicken.

An iconic entertainer, Reba McEntire is the first female celebrity to play the role in KFC's rotating Colonel advertising campaign. The multi-faceted 'Queen of Country' is a lover of fried chicken and has plenty of Southern charm, making her the perfect fit to promote Smoky Mountain BBQ.

"I grew up with Kentucky Fried Chicken. It's part of my story, and I'm so excited to now be part of theirs," said McEntire in a press release. "I've held a lot of roles in my life — sort of like the Colonel himself — but this is certainly the most unique one yet."

For more information, please visit: http://www.kfc.new-media-release.com/reba_mcentire/.

I can honestly say that this left me speechless! But as usual, no matter what Reba does, she does it perfectly.

Just a reminder for local shows

February 3, they celebrate Valentine's Day at Burrough's Falls dance hall from 1 until 6 p.m. Great live country music, dancing, and good food.

February 8, Canadian country music singer Gord Bamford and special guest Aaron Goodvin will grace the stage at Centennial. Don't miss anything! I'll see you there!

Harry Potter audiobook can improve focus on long, boring drives: study

By Liam Casey
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Harry Potter's power appears to extend beyond the page, as recent Canadian research suggests listening to an audiobook from the popular fiction series can improve focus on long and boring drives.

Lana Trick, a psychology professor at the University of Guelph, wanted to look into areas that could help improve driving performance, given that 40 per cent of collisions can be attributed to in-car distraction, she said.

While much of scientific research has focused on the deleterious effects of distracted driving, she sought to look into "good distractions."

The problem with driving, she explained, is the load the brain carries. Too little stimulation — dubbed mental underload — can be just as bad as the opposite, or mental overload.

"It's like nature abhors a vacuum," she said. "If you have an empty brain, you can doze off or your mind wanders or you find another way to distract yourself, like grabbing your cell phone."

The key, she said, is to find the sweet spot between the two for the brain — that's where audiobooks come in.

"Audiobooks can be cases where a little bit of distraction can be useful," she said.

For the project, Trick's team wanted an audiobook that featured an interesting, relatively popular story, and the novel featuring the boy wizard and his friends fit the bill.

"Harry Potter is engaging and exciting," Trick said, "but also something you can have in the background and not too complex."

Her research, recently published in the journal Accident Analysis and Prevention, showed drivers who participated in her study had better "hazardous response times" — braking faster in response to hazards — while listening to "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows" compared to those who drove in silence.

Trick recruited undergraduate students at the University of Guelph as test subjects who used a driving simulator at a specialized laboratory. The DRiVE Lab — named for Driving Research in Virtual Environments — is a state-of-the-art facility where researchers can test various scenarios without the risks of driving on a road, Trick said.

The lab has a car — a convertible Pontiac — that is surrounded by screens. Sounds of driving and "force feedback" — such as the vibrations of a moving car — add to the feel of driving, Trick said. For her study, participants drove both complex and simple routes while listening to parts of the Harry Potter audiobook or driving in silence.

The researchers first scored students on their working memory. Those who had strong working memories, as in those who could hold a number of ideas at once, saw a particularly strong benefit to listening to an audiobook while driving long and boring routes, Trick said.

"Those drivers that have the highest memory load are the most challenged by dull, simple drives and an audiobook seemed to help them," she said.

The audiobook did, however, have a slightly negative effect on drivers with poor working memory on particularly complex drives. The research shows the audiobook had no effect on drivers' speeds.

"What this means is that it could help when you're driving along the boring 401 with no change of scenery for miles and miles and miles," she said.

One other notable finding, Trick said, came with what's known as "standard deviation of lateral position," which means how much a car moves from side to side in a lane. At times, those who listened to the audiobook showed more variance in their lanes, she said.

"When people are excited they tend to shift around a little bit more," Trick said. "We were going through an especially exciting period of Harry Potter and it was possible they were getting into it."

Trick said she hopes to test other drivers, especially those who have experience commuting, to expand her research. She said she is also studying the effects of audiobooks on different aspects of road complexity.

"What we're trying to do is find ways to reduce the number of collisions on the road, especially those from distracted driving, which has become a major problem."

"Our team is capable of scoring three tries in five minutes ... and we need to try and bring that this week."

Canada without 2 key backs ahead of crucial Rugby World Cup qualifier in Uruguay

By Neil Davidson
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada will be without injured backs Connor Braid and Jeff Hassler when it faces Uruguay in the second leg of a crucial Rugby World Cup qualifier in Montevideo on Saturday.

Uruguay won the opener of the two-game total-points series by a 38-29 margin last weekend at B.C. Place Stadium. So Canada has to win by 10 points to book its ticket to the 2019 World Cup in Japan.

Canada coach Kingsley Jones hopes his team will harness a cauldron of emotions.

"The challenge is to take our frustration into a positive, improved performance this weekend," he added.

There is little time to get better. The team has only had three training sessions, with Tuesday's workout more about acclimatization than anything else.

And after travelling 11,250 kilometres south, Canada has had to battle the heat. Jones said the Canadians trained twice Wednesday in 34 Celsius conditions.

Jones did not have the team practise Thursday to rest some "bruised bodies."

The Canada coach said his team has to improve on both offence and defence.

"If we improve our performance by 30 per cent, then I believe we can get the result we need," he said. "It's just making sure the guys don't lose confidence, understand that we underperformed and we can improve in a week."

He said he liked what he saw in training.

"But training on Wednesday morning is not the same as Saturday. We trained reasonably well last week and didn't perform in the field."

One goal is to improve line speed on defence, with Jones saying a full-time defence coach is needed in the future.

Canada was already without the injured Matt Evans, Conor Trainor, Kyle Baillie, Ciaran Hearn, Connor Braid, Andrew Coe and Matt Tierney. And the injury list grew in Vancouver.

Braid limped off with a high ankle sprain while Hassler suffered a fractured cheekbone.

Shane O'Leary, who missed the first game through injury, replaces Braid at fly half while Tayor Paris shifts from fullback to wing to fill Hassler's spot. Brock Staller comes off the bench to start at fullback.

Jones says while O'Leary has not played for several months, he has trained well. He will take over the kicking duties.

Jones expects the Uruguayans to "bring a Cup final performance," while trying to control the ball and play in Canada's half.

"Our team is capable of scoring three tries in five minutes ... and we need to try and bring that this week."

Currently ranked 21st in the world, Canada has never missed a Rugby World Cup. But it failed in its first attempt to qualify for the 2019 World Cup, losing to the 17th-ranked U.S. Eagles.

That showing cost Canadian coach Mark Anscombe his job.

Jones says his team's focus Saturday will be on the win, approaching the game like any other _ at least for the opening half. Tactics will be reviewed after the first 40 minutes.

If beaten by 18th-ranked Uruguay, Canada would have one more chance to qualify via a world repechage tournament.

Canadian luger says it's a 'dark day' after Russian doping ban reversal

By Melissa Couto
THE CANADIAN PRESS

An international tribunal's decision to overturn lifetime suspensions and reinstate results for 28 Russian athletes accused of doping is a low point for fair play in sport, says a Canadian athlete who stands to lose an Olympic bronze medal because of the decision.

Calgary luger Sam Edney didn't mince words Thursday after learning about the Court of Arbitration for Sport's ruling that sanctions against the athletes should be annulled and their individual results at the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi be reinstated because of insufficient evidence.

"Above anything else, this is a very very very dark day for the Olympics," Edney said via Twitter. "AND, this is a very very very dark day for Clean Sport ... if there is such a thing anymore."

With just a week to go before the Pyeongchang Olympics, the 33-year-old Edney and teammates Alex Gough, Tristan Walker and Justin Snith are poised to lose what would have been Canada's first Winter Games medal in luge.

The Canadians finished fourth in the team event four years ago in Sochi but learned in December they would likely be upgraded after Russians Albert Demchenko and Tatiana Ivanova were stripped of their results by the International Olympic Committee and received lifetime bans due to doping accusations.

Both Russians had their suspensions reversed and results reinstated by CAS on Thursday.

The IOC said it had taken note of the CAS decision "with satisfaction on the one hand and disappointment on the other" because of the impact it could have on the future fight against doping in sport.

"Afraid it may be the beginning of the end for Olympics ... if the IOC rolls over on this one," Edney tweeted.

Pyeongchang will likely be Edney's final Olympic appearance. He capped his World Cup career over the weekend with a sixth-place finish in the team race and a disappointing 31st in the men's singles event in Latvia.

"It's not the end to my World Cup career that I was looking for," Edney said on Saturday.

Olympic gold medallist Beckie Scott, who serves as the chair of the World Anti-Doping Agency's athlete committee, said Edney has "every right" to be frustrated and called the CAS ruling a "massive setback" in the general fight against doping.

As someone who had an Olympic medal upgraded _ twice _ the Canadian cross-country skier can sympathize with Edney.

Scott had her bronze medal from the Salt Lake City Games in 2002 upgraded to silver when Russia's Larisa Lazutina was stripped of second place for doping. That silver was then promoted to gold after it was revealed first-place finisher Olga Danilova of Russia had tested positive for doping during the Games.

Eleven more Russians were ruled Thursday to have been guilty of doping but had the lifetime bans imposed by an IOC disciplinary panel two months ago cut to a ban only from the Pyeongchang Games.

Scott said she was "very disillusioned and fully disheartened" by that decision, especially after the IOC last year banned 43 Russians for doping offences at the Sochi Olympics, ruling they had been part of a state-sponsored scheme to dope.

"We have proof of a state-sponsored system that allows athletes to cheat through the Olympic Games and there's not going to be any consequences for this?" she said, adding that anyone involved in the promotion of clean sport "should be raising their voice and asking what's going on here."

The Russian government vehemently denies ever supporting doping.

Christiane Ayotte, director of the Montreal dope testing lab, said she was disappointed but not surprised at the court's ruling..

Ayotte said that the while initial investigation into Russian doping by Richard McLaren was looking for widespread cheating, "on an individual basis, the evidence (CAS) had may not be enough to find an athlete guilty."

Edney, who remained hopeful that "clean sport will prevail," also called for people to speak up.

"Clean athletes must be louder and demand a fair place to compete," he tweeted.

Four-time Olympic gold medallist Hayley Wickenheiser called for "full transparency from CAS on this decision," asking that evidence and transcripts from the ruling be presented to athletes.

"I feel for the Canadian luge team who have lost a medal because of this decision," Wickenheiser said in a statement emailed to The Canadian Press. "I feel for all clean athletes of the world right now."

Death

Zdenka Anna (Mohorovic) FONDA
January 31, 1926 - January 27, 2018

Zdenka Fonda passed away peacefully in Knowlton, just days short of her 92nd birthday.

Born in Zagreb, Croatia, she grew up on the island of Brioni, a place that, during her last years, she returned to nightly in her dreams.

On April 23, 1945, she married Carlo, the love of her life, and settled in Trieste where her first two sons were born. She arrived in Canada in 1955 with her husband and children. A third son was born shortly after while she was living in Estevan, Saskatchewan. The family moved to Port Arthur (now Thunder Bay), before moving again to Sault Ste. Marie and finally Montreal. For almost two decades, Zdenka and Carlo had a hobby farm near South Durham. In her forties, she earned a Master's degree in Library Science from McGill University, after which she ran a model library at Marymount High School. After retiring, she and her husband moved to an idyllic property in Potton where she remained until the last year of her life.

A very active and talented woman, Zdenka considered herself fortunate to have had a life that was so rich and varied in experiences. She was a superb cook and an exceptional baker, as well as an enthusiastic gardener with a legendary green thumb. She was artistic and dabbled with notable success in painting, sculpture, pottery and quilting.

She was predeceased by her parents Anna Sandak and Antonio Mohorovic, and by her husband Carlo Fonda. She is survived by her sister Olga, her brother Sergio, her children Nick (Francine Beaubien), Dave (Jayne McBryde) and Dan (Marie Gélinas), her grandchildren,Karine, Marc-Alexandre and Kristine, her niece Marina and her nephews Alessandro and Luca.

A kind, loving, thoughtful and profoundly spiritual person, who never lost her sense of humour, she was serene and gracious till the end. She touched the lives of a great many people during her lifetime, and she will be missed by all who knew her.

The family extends heartfelt thanks to the staff and caregivers at Manoir Lac-Brome for their very kind, loving and outstanding care.

A memorial service will be held in the spring. In lieu of flowers, the family would ask that a donation be made to a favourite charity or that a tree be planted in her memory.

Taking too many vitamins can lead to unnecessary side effects

ASK THE DOCTORS
By Robert Ashley, M.D.

Dear Doctor: How about a warning about the effect of too many vitamins? One example: B6. I recently checked my daily vitamin formula and found that it had more than twice the recommended B6. This is on top of what I get from my daily "health drink" and my healthy diet. My B6 level recently tested five times above the suggested level.

Dear Reader: Thank you for the opportunity to explore this topic. As you might imagine, I encounter many people who are dubious of the medications, treatments and advice that doctors have to give, but who also take remedies that haven't been studied or who take vitamins at excessive dosages with a blind disregard to potential side effects.

Let's begin with vitamin B6. This crucial vitamin is involved in metabolic processes that help the formation of glucose, heme, niacin and neurotransmitters in the body. Many foods contain B6, including pork, turkey, beef, eggs and potatoes, breakfast cereals, bananas, nuts, beans and peas. Deficiency of B6 is rare, but when it happens it can lead to inflammatory conditions of the mouth, irritability, confusion, depression and, rarely, nerve dysfunction in the legs and arms. People with severe deficiency can develop seizures. Some medications (Sinemet for Parkinson's disease, hydralazine for high blood pressure and isoniazid for tuberculosis, for example) can lead to B6 deficiencies, as can alcoholism, diabetes, asthma and lymphoma.

Requirements for B6 vary for different age groups, from 1 milligram per day in children to 1.7 milligrams per day in men over the age of 50. If you have a balanced diet, you should be able to get this daily intake of B6 from the foods you eat. B complex supplements can contain 2 to 10 milligrams of B6, with some people taking formulas containing ridiculously high levels. That may not seem like a big deal, but too much B6 can cause nausea, dizziness and nerve dysfunction in the legs and arms, leading to burning, tingling and numbness.

Another B vitamin, niacin, can cause liver and muscle inflammation when taken at doses greater than 3,000 milligrams.

Keep in mind that the list of potentially problematic everyday vitamins neither starts nor stops with the B vitamins.

Vitamin C: In those predisposed to kidney stones, vitamin C at high doses increases the risk of them.

Vitamin D: The recommended intake for vitamin D, which is important for bone mineral density and overall health, is about 600 to 800 units per day. However, manufacturers make — and some practitioners recommend — doses up to 10,000 units daily. Unfortunately, chronic intake of high doses of vitamin D can lead to a loss of bone density, calcium deposition in the kidneys and muscle pain. Those who take even higher doses of vitamin D can have severe elevation of calcium in the blood, which can lead to confusion, vomiting, poor appetite and muscle weakness.

Vitamin A: This vitamin is necessary for visual health, and deficiency (rare in the United States) leads to night blindness and even complete blindness. Recommended daily intake of vitamin A is 2,300 to 3,000 units. However, some people take more than 30,000 units per day, which can lead to liver toxicity, muscle and bone pain, vision problems, and coordination and balance difficulties.

This is just a starter list of examples of toxicity linked to high vitamin doses. If you have an illness that can lead to vitamin deficiencies, checking your blood vitamin levels — and potentially adding supplements — is appropriate. But most people need a reminder that blindly taking high doses of vitamins can lead to unnecessary side effects; you're to be commended for looking for information on labels. When it comes to vitamins, more is not always better.

Robert Ashley, M.D., is an internist and assistant professor of medicine at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Three's a crowd

Dear Annie

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 2018

Dear Annie: I am either in a predicament or being overly sensitive, and I trust you to tell me the truth either way. I am in my 40s and in what I thought was a very healthy relationship with a stable, responsible man who has a very good job, "Luke." I've never been in this type of relationship before, as I previously chose to be single and focus on work. I also have an extremely good job. I have never been treated so kindly in my life. He has been amazing to me. We have been together for almost two years, but I am very cautious.

For the past several months, Luke's good friend/co-worker "John" has been living with him. I truly like John; he's a very funny and likable guy.

Because Luke and I live over an hour away from each other, we usually only see each other every other weekend. We have opposite schedules, so it is impossible to see each other during the week. John has his own house but opts to live with Luke 24/7. They work side by side and then live together side by side.

Neither shows any sign of attraction to the other. However, Luke and I had a chance to go on vacation together a few weeks ago (very rare for us), and seeing as they spend so much time together, I jokingly said, "Well, might as well invite John!" Anyone would have known I was being a smarty-pants, but Luke immediately asked John whether he would like to go on vacation with us — to a romantic secluded cabin in the mountains.

I feel so insecure and dumb for writing this, but seeing as they are together 24/7, I feel awkward. Am I being dramatic, or is it possible they have their own special relationship? — Need Advice

Dear Need Advice: It's possible they're more than friends, sure, but I don't think you can say it's probable just based on the evidence you've cited. What I can say for certain is that their constant closeness bothers you; otherwise, you wouldn't have made a "joke" about inviting John on that romantic getaway. Tell Luke that you want future trips to be just the two of you, and have a larger discussion about the issue of John and their close relationship. Emphasize that you like John and consider him a friend but you don't want to feel like a third wheel in your own relationship. Opening up the conversation will close the door on any misgivings you have, assuming they're off base. By the way, I hope your joke's backfiring encourages you to be more upfront about your feelings. They're not something to laugh at.

Dear Annie: Not long ago, you emphasized the importance of locking up or hiding one's Social Security card and number for security reasons. It raised a concern for me. I was under the impression that when people turn 65, they should always carry their Medicare card with them. My Medicare card has my entire Social Security number printed on it, and I assume other people's do, too. How should we handle this? — Confused

Dear Confused: The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services has announced plans to begin rolling out new Medicare cards this year that don't include Social Security numbers. All existing Medicare cards will eventually be replaced. Read more about these new cards at https://www.cms.gov/medicare/new-medicare-card.

Your Birthday

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 2018

Work alongside people with whom you have something in common or something to offer in return. Learn from the best and offer what you can to those willing to support your efforts. If you volunteer your time this year, you will make interesting and valuable connections. Make love a priority.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — A partnership will lack trust. Emotional manipulation or ulterior motives may help you initially, but in the end you will be exposed if you aren't honest and open.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Take the plunge and invest in yourself. Believe in your ability to create something unique. Think big, but proceed frugally. If you get the most for the least, success will be yours.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — When it comes to contracts, legal matters, money and health, you are best off listening carefully. Someone will mislead you or withhold information. Get your facts and figures straight before you proceed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Listen and learn. You will pick up valuable information that will help you outmaneuver someone trying to lead you in a direction that would be costly financially as well as emotionally.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Do your own thing. Learn from experience and stay focused on making changes that will help you be the best you can be. Don't give in to emotional manipulation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Home, family and personal relationships should be your top priorities. Make plans that will bring you closer to loved ones. Share your insights and do something creatively challenging.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Deception is apparent when it comes to how you handle your money. Don't let your generosity overpower your sense of reason. Concentrate on making money, not on spending it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Do your best to help the older and younger people in your life. Exhibit understanding and offer kindness and solutions that will encourage others to take greater initiative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Keep your secrets tucked away someplace safe. Someone will pry into your personal affairs if you aren't careful. Look inward and do your best to make physical improvements and healthy lifestyle changes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — You can be creative without breaking the bank. A moderate approach to what you want to pursue is a good place to start. Avoid temptation and indulgent behavior.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Emotional deception is apparent. Be realistic when it comes to acknowledging the limits of your capabilities. Don't take on something that will set you up for failure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Get your ducks in a row. Knowing where you stand legally, financially or with regard to your health will help you make important decisions that will shape your future.

The first Christmas question answers

By Phillip Alder

Today and tomorrow, we will look at the answers to last December's reader competition.

1. How should South plan the play in four hearts after West leads the club king?

The original declarer played a diamond to dummy's queen, but East won and shifted to his trump. When South finessed, West took the trick and returned a trump. Declarer won on the board and played a diamond to his jack, but West won with the ace and led his last trump. Then South had to lose one heart and three diamonds.

Declarer must make it too expensive for East to gain the lead to push his trump through. South should cross to dummy at trick two with a spade, then lead the diamond three.

If East rises with his king, declarer loses only one heart and two diamonds. Or, if East ducks, South's jack loses to West's ace. If West shifts to a low heart, declarer takes that trick and leads another diamond. When East wins, he has no trump left, and South can ruff a diamond in the dummy for an extra winner.

2. Suggest a bidding sequence with South as the dealer and assuming East-West pass throughout.

	North	02-02-18
	♠ A K 7 4 3 ♥ J 5 2 ♦ Q 3 ♣ 9 8 2
West		East
♠ 10 6 ♥ K 4 3 ♦ A 9 5 2 ♣ K Q 10 7		♠ Q J 9 8 ♥ 7 ♦ K 8 6 ♣ J 6 5 4 3
	South
	♠ 5 2 ♥ A Q 10 9 8 6 ♦ J 10 7 4 ♣ A

Dealer: South
Vulnerable: Both

South	West	North	East
1♥	Pass	1♠	Pass
2♥	Pass	3♥	Pass
4♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ♣ K

The first three bids are clear-cut. Then, based on the Losing Trick Count, North would pass, given his nine losers. But point-count outranks the LTC. Basically, it will depend on whether the diamond queen is useful or not. Finally, although South has only 11 high-card points, he has just six losers, which is one fewer than a minimum opening bid and the LTC advises going one level higher.

Your Birthday

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 2018

Don't spend what you don't have. Learn by observing how others respond to situations. Don't let anyone talk you into something that will cause stress or disrupt your personal life. Keep the peace and offer suggestions, but don't go overboard or take on more than you can handle.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — If you want to help someone, take on physical, not financial, responsibilities. A practical approach when dealing with others will help you avoid being roped into something you don't want to do.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — A financial opportunity will not live up to your expectations. Dig deep and you'll discover any flaws that could alter your progress. Consider the pros and cons before moving forward.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Good fortune and opportunity will be dependent on how hard you work. Call in favors if it will help you secure your position or ensure that you are dealt with fairly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — It will be easy come, easy go if you don't protect what you have and refuse to get involved in risky ventures. Avoid joint ventures and people making unrealistic promises.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Listen to what others have to say, but also be reluctant to stand in someone else's shadow. Trust in your abilities and put your energy into reaching your goal, not into promoting someone else.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Working alongside someone who feels the same way you do will encourage positive changes at home and to your lifestyle. A creative endeavor will bring you great pleasure.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Talks will lead to new beginnings. Express your ideas to someone you love to get a sense of the best way to move forward and accomplish your personal goals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Take care of your work responsibilities and do your best to get along with your peers. An energetic approach to home improvement projects will encourage you to host a party.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Don't stifle your feelings when you can let them inspire you to strive for bigger and better results. Use your intuitive intelligence to help you make wise changes that will improve your personal life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Honesty will be required when dealing with your view of yourself and your capabilities. Ask a trusted friend to evaluate your skills.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Keep your personal thoughts and information a secret. Someone will take advantage of you if you are too open about your feelings. Don't give in to emotional blackmail.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — If you put more energy into establishing your personal and professional positions, you will find a path that will ensure that you reach your goals.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 2018

You'll have plenty of charm and your popularity will grow this year, but that doesn't mean you should be frivolous and carefree when it comes to spending and indulging. An intellectual approach to legal, financial and medical matters will ensure that you make gains instead of suffering losses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — A partnership needs to be built on solid ground. If you or someone else is uncertain, it's probably best to walk away. A secret endeavor will turn into a fiasco.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Help is on the way, but before you accept it, find out what's expected of you in return. Don't let anger or stubbornness stand between you and the achievement of a personal goal.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Get together with old friends. You'll be offered information that can help you make a decision regarding your future. Celebrate your plans with a loved one.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You'll be mystified by someone's charm. Take a step back and focus on the facts, not on the promises being made. Control your emotions and keep your money locked up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Your ability to manipulate situations will come in handy. Don't give others a chance to dissect what you say. Rely on others' gullibility to help you outmaneuver rivals and spin things in your favor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You'll have trouble making a choice when it comes to financial, medical or legal matters. Try not to let your emotions or someone else's opinions interfere with what's best for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — If you cultivate a good rapport with a loved one, you will be able to turn your intentions into a reality. Romance should be a priority as you make long-range plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Check out the online job market and you'll find something of interest. A change looks promising if you have the qualifications and experience for a position that offers more pay.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Share your time and passions with someone close to you. Whether you spend time with children or a loved one, make the most of your day by offering your undivided attention, affection and loyalty.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — The past will come back to haunt you if you have left relationships, situations or goals unfinished. Revisit where you left off and tidy up loose ends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Use your intelligence and strength to get what you want. Do your own thing to gain respect and recognition. Romance will improve your personal life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Don't let temptation get the better of you. Say no to anyone who is pushing something without giving you the facts and figures or the lowdown on what's expected of you in return.
