Heads up for Skylab!

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just hours before Skylab's expected death-dive, the U.S. space agency started the huge station tumbling through space today to try to increase the likelihood it would drop its tons of debris in the Indian Ocean rather than on North America. "We think this is the safest and most prudent action we can take at this time to give us the absolute minimum probability of casualty of any sort from Skylab," said Richard Smith of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

A radio signal was sent at 3:47 a.m. EDT today to fire nitrogen gas thrusters which started the 77.5-ton craft "wobbling and rolling" as it passed through an altitude of 147 kilometres.

Confirmation that the manoeuvre worked came 30 minutes later when Skylab passed within range of a tracking station in Madrid, Spain.

NASA spokesman Bob Gordon reported: "The rate is not as high as anticipated at this time, but indications are that Skylab is beginning its final entry to earth."

DELAY SOUGHT

The action was intended to delay Skylab's fiery re-entry about 30 minutes, until about noon EDT. On that timetable, the tons of Skylab debris that did not burn up would fall harmlessly into the Indian Ocean.

The decision to start the craft tumbling was made after the North American Air Defence Command, which has been tracking the spacecraft, issued a revised re-entry prediction at 12:35 a.m. EDT today. It forecast Skylab was likely to re-enter over the

ASBESTOS MOVING TO THETFORD?

MONTREAL (CP) — Asbestos Corp. would lose at least $3,630,000 if the assets of the company were illegally expropriated by the Quebec government, a senior corporate officer indicated Tuesday.

George McCammon, vice-president for finance, testified that most of the money would be spent to change the trademark of the company and transfer the head office from Montreal to Thetford Mines, Que., where the main mine of the company is located.

Another cost would arise from a requirement that the company provide copies of some of approximately 10 million documents to the government after its more than $100 million in Quebec assets were transferred to the government, he said.

McCammon was testifying at a Quebec Superior Court hearing at which company lawyers are trying to prove that expropriation would harm Asbestos Corp.

The company is trying to stop a government takeover until the courts have finished dealing with a separate case in which the company is challenging the constitutionality of the new expropriation law in Quebec.

The government said earlier it would not expropriate the company, the second-largest asbestos producer in Quebec, without giving warning during the hearing.

McCammon gave a series of figures for the individual costs of a state takeover but would not give a total.

His figure was based on the assumption that Asbestos Corp. would be taken over and that later the government would return the assets after the expropriation law was declared unconstitutional.

But if the company lost its constitutional case, the cost would be $2,230,000, McCammon's figures indicated.

The cost of changing the trademark would be $900,000, he said, and the figure would double if the company won back its assets and the trademark was changed again.

Similarly, if the government moved the head office to Thetford Mines, Que., it would cost about $500,000, McCammon said. If the company won back its assets, it would spend another $500,000 moving the head office back to Montreal, where banking, financial, brokerage and consulting services were more readily available.

Asbestos Corp. hopes to prove that Quebec laws giving the government the power to expropriate its assets are unconstitutional. The company is currently seeking a court order to block the takeover.

Last week the premier criticized Asbestos Corp., saying: "All they've done in Quebec is dig holes and export profits."

Rebels threaten new attack on capital

MANAGUA (AP) — The Sandinista rebels threatened a new attack on this Nicaraguan capital as President Anastasio Somoza hung on and his army made no progress against the guerrillas.

The guerrillas' Radio Sandino said the attack on Managua would begin Tuesday, but the offensive did not take place. However, the national guard sent extra soldiers to the eastern slums, which the guerrillas occupied for 18 days and then evacuated two weeks ago under heavy attack.

The guard said it shot down a twin-engine plane bringing ammunition to the guerrillas in Rivas, 100 kilometres southeast of Managua, and said its planes continued bombing rebel positions.

MIND THAT LOADER, SWEETHEART

The Pan Am Games might take a back seat to some of the athletic activity going on in Lennoxville these days as residents try to cope with construction that has ripped up Belvidere Street. Reports of people having to hurdle the railing in front of the Addition Store to avoid diving into a trench have been heard as well. A few second thoughts are also being taken before maneuvering around a hedge and four-foot drop facing the downtown area.

Numerous elderly residents have also experienced difficulty in attempting the hill-climbing necessary to get through the area. Many others are happy about the improvements being made to the street, saying it will benefit from being wider than before. Complaints have been received from local businesses and one shopkeeper complained that since construction began, he has lost a great deal of business because he is more isolated than other stores in his Belvidere Street location.

The construction, carried out by Desourdy Construction of Sherbrooke for about $700,000, is expected to be completed in late August with work already progressing ahead of schedule. Part of a three-year program, the construction is designed to separate old sewer and water lines.

Landry backs economics

QUEBEC (CP) — After years of blaming federalism for Quebec's economic woes, the Parti Quebecois government plans to take the offensive to persuade voters sovereignty-association would pay better, says Bernard Landry, the province's economic development minister.

"It's economically that Quebecers have the most to gain with independence," Landry said Tuesday in an interview with The Canadian Press.

The key to Landry's strategy is a report now being prepared by the Quebec government for release this fall. It argues in favor of a sovereign Quebec linked to the remainder of Canada by an economic association.

Part of the study, intended "to help Quebecers make a choice during this year of pre-referendum reflection," will be submitted to Landry shortly for editing.

"Canadian economic federalism is incapable of effectively tackling regional disparities — it makes the rich richer and the poor poorer," Landry said.

He added that the Atlantic provinces, as well as Quebec, have suffered because of Confederation.

Landry said the PQ's economic ideas have met with "unhoped for," favorable reaction from researchers at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., and the University of Toronto. The unidentified researchers have shown that "even if Quebec separated completely from Canada the economic losses would be reduced to a minimum."

Among the public works projects are completion of the roof of Montreal's Olympic Stadium.

Not until fall...

Work is still underway on the Joffre Bridge viaduct which will increase traffic flow to four lanes when completed. Started at the beginning of March, the work is being carried out by the firm of Dorilas and Grenier of Sherbrooke for about $1,773,000. Beams are being erected this week and half of the bridge is now done with the other half expected to be completed next week. Following that, concrete slabs will have to be installed over the beams, approaches will have to be finished, paving done and lighting added. Construction is expected to be completed by mid-October. At the present time, the thoroughfare is closed to traffic.

ARTHUR FIEDLER ...50 years as Boston Pops conductor.

Arthur Fiedler dead at 84

BOSTON (AP) — Arthur Fiedler, the stocky, white-haired maestro who commanded the Boston Pops for a half-century and whose recordings sold tens of millions of copies, died at his home of cardiac arrest Tuesday. He was 84.

In tribute, the orchestra planned a performance of Stars and Stripes Forever at Boston Symphony Hall — without a conductor. The John Philip Sousa march was a favorite of the conductor, whose death was mourned by his native city, music colleagues and music lovers around the world.

President Carter, in a statement issued by the White House, called Fiedler "a courtly man who introduced millions to the infinite variety and pleasures of music."

"The Fourth of July concerts (observing U.S. Independence Day) he originated ... became a part of our national tradition," Carter said. "He gave us the best-loved classics with a joyous mixture of country, jazz and popular works."

Fiedler died six days after the 51st annual July 4 concert on the Esplanade on the Charles River.

UNABLE TO CONDUCT For the first time since the orchestra started the outdoor concerts in 1929, Fiedler was unable to conduct the Pops himself. In a final interview, he told reporters, "I feel a little melancholic. I regret I'm not with them all."

Fiedler, whose love of march time, fireworks, fire hats and fire engines gave him a pixieish image, was a shrewd showman. In his later years, he cashed in on his celebrity image to endorse a restaurant chain and other commercial items and earned over $200,000 a year waving his baton throughout the U.S.

He remained vigorously active until he was hospitalized last November for exhaustion and underwent brain surgery in December to correct difficulty in walking. The illness forced him to cancel a planned televised celebration Dec. 17 on his 84th birthday.

Fiedler returned to the podium May 1 to conduct a nationally televised Pops concert. A few days later he had a fainting spell, was hospitalized for three weeks, and did not again appear on a public podium.

Fiedler was found dead at about 7 a.m. Tuesday on the floor of his bedroom in nearby Brookline, Mass., by his wife, Ellen Bottomley Fiedler.

Harry Ellis Dickson, Fiedler's assistant for 25 years, quoted Mrs. Fiedler as saying, "What a relief for Arthur" after the maestro's death.

"I can't imagine the Pops without him," said Dickson. PLAYED BEATLES' MUSIC

The world of music mourned Fiedler, one of the first conductors to play the Beatles' music in a symphony hall.

"Arthur Fiedler was a tremendous force in making millions love music," fellow conductor Andre Kostelanetz said. "He was heard and seen probably by more people than any other conductor."

His weekly TV program, Evening at Pops, had the largest audience of any program distributed by the Public Broadcasting Service.

Bathurst police still off job

BATHURST (CP) — This northern New Brunswick community is without police services again today as a strike seemingly settled overnight continued through a seventh day with new bitterness.

Negotiators for the city and the police returned to the bargaining table shortly before dawn amid union charges of trickery on the part of the city concerning a contract clause on police rank structure.

Blair Boucher, chief negotiator for the policemen, announced shortly after midnight Tuesday night that police had ratified a new three-year contract and that the strike was over.

The 26 members of the force then donned riot gear and moved to the downtown section to stop vandalism and violence that has torn this city apart the last five nights.

At about 3 a.m. local time, after the street mobs had been dispersed, the officers were told by Boucher a vital clause concerning rank structure had been dropped by the city in the memorandum of agreement.

"It was just as if the city had never heard of the clause even though it had been referred to during negotiations," Boucher said.

MEMBERSHIP UPSET "The membership blew up when I told them."

"We cannot believe the city would cheat and lie as they did."

Leopold Arsenault, the representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees and bargaining agent for the police, said the rank structures designed by the city would dictate steps of promotion within the force.

A spokesman for the city said a council meeting would be called today to consider the turn of events.

"The ball is now in their court," Arsenault said in reference to city council.

Quebec annual liquor sales up

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Liquor Corp. sold $575.8 million worth of wine and spirits during the year ending last March 31, up 14.2 per cent over 1978, the corporation announced at its annual meeting Tuesday.

The corporation said profits reached $198 million. Its sole shareholder is the Quebec revenue department.

Wine sales rose 21.5 per cent over the previous year, to a total of 54.4 million litres, while spirits dropped 2 per cent, with 34 million litres sold.

Over-all wine sales increased when independent grocery stores were authorized last September to sell wine supplied by the corporation.

Carter and Muzorewa meet

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Carter and Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa of Zimbabwe Rhodesia hold an unprecedented meeting after staking out public positions that gave little hope for improved relations between their countries.

Bishop Muzorewa will call on Carter at Camp David in nearby Maryland today in what is the first meeting between a U.S. president and a leader of the breakaway British colony.

Canada registers productivity gains

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada ranked third among the world's seven leading industrial countries in manufacturing productivity gains registered during 1978, the U.S. labor department reported Tuesday.

The productivity of workers in Canadian manufacturing industries, a key factor affecting inflation, rose 4.2 per cent.

US crime rate soars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States crime rate is soaring this year, with large increases in murders, rapes and robberies, the FBI reported Tuesday.

The FBI, which bases its statistics on reports from most local and state police, said violent crime surged 17 per cent during the first three months of this year with the same period a year ago, and property crimes rose by 11 per cent.

Carter won't lift gas price controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has decided not to lift government price controls on gasoline and says it is too soon to consider using tax cuts to counter the anticipated recession, the chief presidential spokesman said Tuesday.

Jody Powell said lifting controls on gasoline prices would do more to spur inflation, boost unemployment and damage the economy than almost anything else Carter could do to deal with energy problems.

Vance argues for SALT II

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Cyrus Vance said Tuesday that U.S. Senate rejection of the new strategic arms limitation treaty would lead to "unlimited nuclear competition and a serious increase in U.S.-Soviet tensions."

Vance testified for the second consecutive day before the Senate foreign relations committee on SALT II, which would limit long-range nuclear missiles and bombers in the U.S. and Soviet arsenals through 1985.

Ghana elects new president

LONDON (AP) — Former ambassador Hilla Limann was elected president of Ghana in run-off balloting Tuesday, Accra radio reported. He now must begin the delicate task of restoring civilian rule under the watchful eyes of a military junta.

The broadcast from Ghana's capital said the other contender, former foreign minister Victor Owusu, conceded defeat and congratulated Limann on his victory in this west African country.

West to take 250,000 refugees

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — A UN official said Tuesday that Western countries will accept another 250,000 Indochinese refugees for permanent resettlement, which still would leave 100,000 in temporary camps in Asia.

Malaysian officials said Vietnam has indicated 1.2 million Vietnamese are seeking permission to leave the Indochinese country — the equivalent of virtually all southern Vietnam's ethnic Chinese minority.

Jupiter's atmosphere called stable

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Jupiter's atmosphere is basically stable, despite the swirling clouds that envelop the planet, scientists said Tuesday after Voyager 2 passed within 720,000 kilometres (450,000 miles) of the solar system's largest body.

And although certain features vary dramatically from time to time, there is a basic, unchanging pattern to the Jovian clouds, said Andrew Ingersoll of the imaging, or photography, team.

Famous cat burglar sentenced

LONDON (AP) — Cat burglar David Brewster, known respectfully at Scotland Yard as the King of the Mayfair Rooftops, was sentenced Tuesday to 10 years in prison. Old Bailey criminal court jurors heard tributes to Brewster's skill, daring and professionalism before convicting him of two burglaries involving $157,620 (U.S.) worth of jewels.

Khomeini overrules Bazargan

TEHRAN (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini slapped Premier Mehdi Bazargan's government down again, overruling its order dismissing the head of the military police.

Defence Minister Taghi Riahi conceded that the religious leader of the Iranian revolution "is above the government and the ministry of national defence" after Brig.-Gen. Seif Amir Rahimi rejected his dismissal by Riahi and the ayatollah supported the general.

German report discusses neo-Nazis

BONN (AP) — Neo-Nazi groups in West Germany are adopting terrorist tactics to try to overthrow democracy, says a government report issued Tuesday.

Some of the crimes attributed to neo-Nazi groups were seven robberies, at least six thefts of NATO arms, 13 assaults and a plot to assassinate prominent Germans. The names of the potential victims were not disclosed in the annual report of the interior ministry on domestic security.

Feds see anti-refugee backlash

OTTAWA (CP) — Politicians here see signs of anti-refugee sentiment, amidst a fresh wave of grassroots humanitarianism, as the government ponders what to do about the Southeast Asian exodus.

Immigration Minister Ron Atkey says he is worried about a possible "backlash" among some groups of Canadians if the government allows too many of the refugees into the country. The government-sponsored quota now is 8,000 this year.

Bell, union resume talks

MONTREAL (CP) — Contract negotiations will resume here today between Bell Canada Ltd. and its 15,000 technicians in Quebec and Ontario, a union spokesman said Tuesday.

However, rotating strikes may intensify depending on what Bell has to offer, Jacques Reid, a national representative for the Communication Workers of Canada, said in a telephone interview. He added that a work slowdown and a ban on overtime will also continue.

Quebec Liberals put off convention

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Liberals have decided to put off a special fall convention on the constitution until February to allow discussion of a party report on the federalist option for next spring's referendum on independence.

Party leader Claude Ryan told a news conference Tuesday the report will be made public in early November for discussion in the period leading up to the convention in Montreal, expected to attract about 3,000 delegates.

Radiation, leukemia link studied

TORONTO (CP) — A nuclear power plant worker exposed to the maximum amount of radiation allowed in a year doubles his chances of leukemia or genetic damage, a U.S. researcher said Tuesday.

Dr. Irwin Bross, director of biostatistics at the Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, N.Y., told an Ontario legislature select committee investigating nuclear power plants that exposure levels accepted for nuclear plants "do not provide adequate protection for the health and safety of either nuclear workers or the public."

Teamsters' boss gets 20 years

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Former Teamsters union boss Anthony (Tony Pro) Provenzano was sentenced Tuesday to a maximum 20-year prison term for racketeering by a judge who said Provenzano was addicted to abusing labor unions and immune from rehabilitation.

"We ask that Mr. Provenzano be given the maximum penalty so the cancer he is in the labor movement may finally be removed," said U.S. justice department attorney Jeffrey Speiser, the prosecutor.

Ban sought on bottles

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers' Association of Canada has demanded that the federal government ban sales of all brands of 1.5-litre soft drink bottles.

Association President Yvonne Miles said in a statement Tuesday that a voluntary recall urged by Consumer Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence has failed and that only an immediate prohibition of sales will sweep them from the shelves.

Lawrence made the request at a June 28 news conference at which he announced that new bottle design standards will be created by the end of the summer.

The association said at the time that the recall might help the department move rapidly towards the new standards without having to institute a ban requiring extensive technical justifications under the Hazardous Products Act.

He also reiterated statements by Yves Berube, natural resources minister, pledging to take special care enforcing environmental and safety laws against Asbestos Corp.

At a news conference, Ryan said the premier was taking a "discriminatory approach" by saying the laws would be applied against Asbestos Corp. more strictly than against other asbestos producers in Quebec.

"He is using laws for political advantage," the Liberal leader said. "I hope he will retract it." Ryan added this could set a precedent for retaliation against enemies of the government through the law.

The Liberals have consistently opposed the plan to take over Asbestos Corp. but when asked Tuesday, Ryan would not say whether he would halt the expropriation if his party wins the next election.

"We'd study the situation," he said, commenting that the policy of a future Liberal government on a takeover plan that is still up in the air was a "very hypothetical question."

tions in Rivas and Masaya, 32 kilometres south of the capital.

The guerrillas said they ambushed guards in Ciudad de la Paz Central, west of Managua, and the northern towns of Tipitapa and Santa Ana.

The Sandinistas have battled the national guard to a standstill at Rivas and in the last six weeks have won control of 26 other cities and towns, forming a noose around Managua. They also control a stretch of territory along the southern border with Costa Rica, which served as the launching pad for their latest offensive.

Somoza held a news conference in his fortified headquarters in Managua and implied he would resign and leave Nicaragua if the survival of the national guard and his Liberal party were assured. But he said he would "fight to the end" if they were not.

He said his departure depends heavily on U.S. talks in Costa Rica with the provisional junta that the Sandinistas named. He said he trusts in the strength of the United States to work out an acceptable agreement with the junta.

north Pacific, posing a potential threat to North America, primarily Canada.

Starting at seven this morning, Skylab crossed Nova Scotia and continued on towards St. John's, Newfoundland. At about 9 a.m., it crossed over Sault Ste. Marie, continued on near the St. Lawrence Valley and traversed north-west of Newfoundland. An hour later, it continued across the American frontier near Manitoba and crossed the centre of Ontario and Quebec to head towards Newfoundland again. At 11:30, Skylab crossed near Seattle and cut across the northeast point of Alberta, passing near Regina and Winnipeg to continue east to Quebec, over Quebec City and Trois Rivières. This afternoon about one, Skylab went over the northern point of Vancouver Island, back over the southern tip and then out to Alberta to swing back over the United States.

Emergency Canada has advised people living in the path of the space station to stay tuned to their local radio stations for bulletins on its progress. They also said that people should stay indoors for maximum security.

An official at Emergency Planning Canada in Ottawa said:

"We can't stop it from falling, but everything is in place to minimize the damage should it come down in our region."

The earlier predictions had placed the most likely re-entry area in the south Atlantic or Indian oceans, far from land.

The latest NORAD prediction said Skylab would re-enter between 8:48 a.m. and 1:48 p.m. EDT, with the midpoint, or most probable re-entry time, at 11:18 a.m.

MIGHT HIT CANADA

At that midpoint, Skylab would start dumping its debris in the central Pacific near the equator and spread it over a trail 6,500 kilometres long and 160 kilometres wide in a northeasterly direction. If the re-entry occurred 10 minutes after that time, the debris could be dropped on the portions of the state of Washington and Canada.

NASA emphasized that even if parts of the giant station hit land, the chances of injury or damage are slim. If news reports indicate fragments are headed for particular areas, the agency suggests people take no special precautions except perhaps to stay indoors.

Ayer's Cliff taxes: Quebec policies change constantly

By JASPER MEYERS
AYER'S CLIFF — Provincial government policy affecting the granting of subsidies to municipalities for public works projects "changed two or three times between the passing of bylaw 165 in 1973 and bylaw 179 in 1976 and has changed at least twice more since 1976," says A.Y. Donaldson, a Sherbrooke engineer who has been involved in contracting work resulting from bylaws 160, 165 and 179 in Ayer's Cliff. Donaldson said that as far as he knew the current government policy involves three factors:

—The number of users of facilities supplied by a works project per square acre must be looked at, with the minimum requirement for a grant from the Ministry of Municipal Affairs being two users per square acre.

—The regular taxes paid over and above the special tax to be charged towards payment for the works project must be considered in order to determine the amount of the grant. An average of at least $180 must be paid by all ratepayers in an area applying for a grant. The lower the regular tax rate, the lower the subsidy the municipality can expect to receive, said Donaldson.

—The government will only subsidize up to 75 per cent of the cost of a particular project. Donaldson noted that the government had paid close to 90 per cent of the bill for the work undertaken under bylaws 160 and 165. Less than 70 per cent of the spending authorized by bylaw 179 has originated from government funds.

Cowansville merchants laud reopening

By NELSON WYATT

We could open with a pun about the controversy over the reopening of Cowansville's Main Street reaching a dead end, but we won't. However, it seems that the continuing saga of one of the most talked-about stretches of land in town is far from over. Though former mayor Roland Desourdy, whose administration was the author of a three-stage urban renewal plan that bore the shopping centre, has launched a court action to halt the reopening, the local government has pressed on with plans to reopen the avenue.

The Cowansville town council, with local merchants at their back (either for support or impetus), decided to span the gap in front of the Domaine du Parc with a 30-foot-wide prestressed, precast concrete overpass while the Desourdy action contends the Cities and Towns Act requires that streets be 66 feet wide, numerous people contacted vehemently contended that Main Street was never 66 feet wide — even under the Desourdy regime.

Town Manager Georges Bernier confirmed the city's determination to press on, in spite of the proposed hurdles and emphasized in a telephone interview yesterday that the town will go through with its plan no matter what. Contracts have also been given out recently, with Sadar Construction of Montreal getting the nod for the job, estimated to cost in the area of $240,000. Construction is expected to begin within the next few weeks.

Cowansville's disputed Gaza Strip, where the town intends placing a pre-cast prestressed concrete overpass to re-open Main Street. The building at the left rear of the photo is

Reaction to the move has been swift. A number of merchants in the shopping centre made no attempt at masking their pleasure, expressing confidence that as soon as a steady traffic flow began to wend its way past their doors, business would begin a steady climb to former levels.

"It's essential that the Main Street be reopened," said one, "even if only to reunite the town. The way it is now, the most valuable piece of real estate in town is dead. There's no traffic circulation and the merchants are suffering for it. If the street is reopened, it will breathe new life into the financial district, encourage people to buy here and even to open more businesses." "Let's face it," he went on, "if you cut a main artery, you're killing yourself. People want to be able to get from point A to point B without having to go through points C, D and E."

Fred Tanner, a town councillor and an insurance broker located in the Domaine du Parc, echoes this. While he said he already benefited from an established clientele, he said the reopening of the street would be a plus. "It hasn't helped Cowansville to have Main Street cut in two," he pointed out.

Time will tell who is right in this matter, but despite the boon the overpass will reap for shopkeepers, one cannot help but notice that the whole thing is an attempt to turn the clock back about 10 years to bring Main Street back the way it was. It is unfortunate, though, that while commercial well being may be regenerated, no amount of overpass construction or other such efforts can bring back the greenery — both botanical and monetary — that went under the bulldozer's blade or the stately and colorful houses that were expropriated and torn down, that gave the street so much of its character.

Oh well, like they say — that's progress.

Finally, this week's tip of the stetson goes to 18-year-old Sylvie Gingras of Granby. The local high school student copped a bronze medal during the roller skating event in the Pan Am Games currently underway in Puerto Rico. Nice work.

Sweetsburg Ward

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — Marc Dubois pleaded guilty to a charge of having been illegally at large from the Cowansville

Penitentiary on June 1. His lawyer said he returned of his own accord and suggested a minimum additional term of imprisonment. Crown attorney Claude Noiseux said he would be satisfied with 15 days additional and Judge Guy Genest imposed the sentence suggested by the Crown. + + + Serge Boutin, of Farnham, pleaded guilty to a breach of a probation order in Farnham on May 27. Jean Paul Couture told the court his client called the police when a fight broke out in a bar and suggested a fine would amply serve the interests of justice.

Crown attorney Noiseux objected to the suggestion of a fine. "The probation order explicitly forbade him from entering any drinking establishments. Furthermore he's here too often," the Crown said.

"I'll give you a last chance," Judge Genest said. "$100 and costs, in default 30 days." He then allowed Boutin 60 days to pay the fine and costs.

Michel Algier, of Farnham, pleaded guilty to a charge of having operated a motor vehicle when he had consumed .130 mgs. of alcohol. He was fined $130 and costs, in default 30 days. He then pleaded guilty to charges of having disturbed the public peace and simple assault.

Claude Hamann told the court all the crimes were committed at the same time and suggested a fine of $50 per count would adequately serve the interests of justice. Crown attorney Noiseux said they were minor problems, but suggested Algier should be placed on two years probation.

"It's time you stopped at your age," Judge Genest said. He then fined Algier $50 and costs, in default eight days, on each count, and bound him over to keep the public peace for two years.

Bench warrants were issued for Andrew Forster, of Cowansville, when he failed to appear for sentencing on three counts of fraud.

— Judge Guy Genest issued a bench warrant against Joyce Little Bailey of Knowlton in sessions court here yesterday when she failed to appear before sentencing on charges of theft and fraud against her former employers, the Bank of Montreal.

Townships talk

Cemetery committee set up

SUTTON TOWNSHIP (PG) — A committee has been set up by the Sutton Township Council to supervise the maintenance of pioneer cemeteries in the area as former caretaker Lyndon Royea of Sutton prepares for a well-deserved retirement.

Royea, who chose the restoration of the cemeteries from their former deplorable condition as a personal hobby by since his retirement, is the past president of an association formed for the purpose of restoring some semblance of order to the 15 burial sites in the townships.

Among the cemeteries to be looked after are the Bennett Vault; Pettes Cemetery; Grimes Cemetery; Morse Cemetery; Sweet Cemetery and Westover Cemetery.

Truck kills two-year-old boy

SHERBROOKE (FJM) — A two-year-old boy died under the wheels of a truck yesterday morning in Garthby, on Route 161.

It appears that the child was playing underneath the vehicle when the driver got into it and drove away, crushing the child.

The accident occurred at the house of the boy's grandfather, Ernest Cloutier. The grandmother was babysitting the three Leblanc children, while their parents were on vacation in the Laurentians.

Michel Carrier, 28, got into his heavy dump truck parked in the Cloutier yard after having eaten his lunch and said he felt a slight bump under his tires when he turned out towards the road, thinking it was a stone on the driveway.

All's quiet in Lennoxville

LENNOXVILLE (NW) — Local police have released the statistics for the past two months on crime in Lennoxville.

Police Chief Leo Hamel said that during May there were six break-and-enters with theft; two break-and-enters without theft; eight common thefts for a total value of $4,390; one attempted robbery; one case of public mischief; two impaired driving cases; one trespass and 18 accidents involving a total of 29 cars for a total damage tally of $6,650.

Chief Hamel said that there were 67 other complaints reported to the force and 6,243 miles were put on the town's police cruiser.

In June, deemed by the Chief to be "the most quiet month since January", there were three break-and-enters with theft, two vehicle thefts, involving a bicycle and a motorcycle; one attempted robbery, two frauds; one public mischief case; one case of disturbing the peace; five impaired driving cases and 18 accidents. These involved one fatality, one with injury and 16 with damages only. A total of 31 cars were involved with a final damage tally of about $10,000.

Forty-nine other complaints were received and a total of 5,400 miles was put on the patrol car.

Hatley bodies sent to Montreal

SHERBROOKE (FJM) — The bodies of two people who died in a fire in Hatley Township yesterday were sent to Montreal this morning for autopsies which will hopefully establish their identities beyond any doubt, said Jean-Marc Ducharme of the Coaticook QPF detachment.

The two people, believed to be a couple in their forties, died in a blaze which levelled a single-storey wood chalet on Beaudet Road yesterday morning.

Ducharme said a full-scale investigation into the causes of the fire is underway, but that there is no initial reason to believe that arson was involved.

City Council debates prison site

SHERBROOKE (FJM) — Sherbrooke City Council was not able to reach a consensus on whether to approve the proposed Talbot Street site for the construction of a new prison in Sherbrooke.

The question will be taken up again on July 30. Last night Councillors Claude Dallaire and Gerard Deziel from the East Ward, in which Talbot Street is located, continued to oppose the proposal.

The director general, Richard Fabi, said the Ministry of Industry and Commerce would not accept a counter proposal that the prison be built in the industrial park. Mayor Jacques O'Bready noted that the government considered the fact that it already owns the Talbot Street property, a great asset.

The mayor also said that a group led by Abbe Bruno Dandenault carried out a study in the residential area around the Talbot Street site which showed that very few people were in fact opposed to having the prison built near their homes.

Weaving marks celebration

UPPER MELBOURNE (SH) — Canada celebrated its 112th birthday here with a demonstration of the ancient art of weaving, carried out in the Upper Melbourne museum by Mrs. Jose Fontaine, of Kingsbury.

Spread over a five-day period spanning June 27 to July 1, the display was the idea of the Richmond County Historical Society. Sitting in a room in a house older than Confederation, Mrs. Fontaine demonstrated a skill that turned out many a vital garment for pioneer Canadians. The museum, which sits on a road that used to be a former stagecoach trail, had a number of its rooms occupied with many types of practical and decorative woven articles. Chairs, clothing and coverlets were on display, woven of cotton, wool, linen or synthetic materials. Placemats were set around the dining room table, making a fitting background for the old dishes that the table was set with.

Guests to the exhibit at the former inn were met by Mrs. Fraser Converse and Mrs. Mary Frances Enright, who also served as guides.

Anti-nuke sentiment worries U.S. utility companies

NEW YORK (CP) — Growing sentiment against nuclear power is causing concern to utility companies in the United States.

There have been protests against atomic power before, but the entire question has become overheated in the aftermath of the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg, Pa., this spring.

That mishap still is under investigation and is a subject of shrill debate by spokesmen on both sides of the question. If nothing else, though, the Three Mile Island incident has provided the anti-nuclear lobby with a rallying point.

Across the U.S., opponents of nuclear power, often including cadres trained in the anti-war protests of the '60s and early '70s, are gathering their forces.

The vocal groundswell against nuclear power has already had some effects in Washington. A House of Representatives committee has proposed a six-month moratorium on new construction or licensing and a Senate committee has voted in favor of a resolution calling for the closure of all plants which do not produce an approved evacuation plan within six months.

The utilities find themselves in a potentially disastrous bind. Some 40 companies now have an estimated $50 billion invested in partially-completed reactors. They fear these projects may be hit with demands for millions of dollars in new, mandatory safety equipment — necessitating design changes and further delays in the already long lead time for nuclear plants. The projects may even be halted completely by the nuclear lobby.

There is already a de facto moratorium on new construction. No new reactors have been ordered for about two years.

FACE SERIOUS PROBLEM

Companies stuck with halfbuilt reactors will face serious financial problems if they are forced to revamp them or abandon them.

Britain's two incidents didn't require evacuation

LONDON (AP) — Britain has had nuclear power since the late 1940s, but there have been only two major British nuclear incidents in that time. Neither one was like the Three Mile Island breakdown last March in Pennsylvania.

The British incidents — at the Windscale plant in north-west England and the Chapel Cross plant in southern Scotland — required no evacuations. But the incidents have helped keep alive the controversy over the safety of nuclear installations in this country.

There also have been a string of minor mishaps. Of these, a British Atomic Energy Authority spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said in an interview: "We wouldn't say they were serious incidents, but we take any incident connected with the nuclear part of a plant very seriously indeed, so that we may learn and profit accordingly."

The first major incident occurred Oct. 10, 1947, when one of two reactors producing plutonium for military purposes overheated at Windscale, which overlooks the Irish Sea.

The Atomic Energy Authority explained in a statement the next day that some of the uranium cartridges in the centre of Windscale's No. 1 pile, which had been shut down for the routine discharge of spent uranium and for maintenance work, had become "overheated to the point of red heat."

Some radioactive material went up the chimney. Windscale crews injected water into the chimney from above and lowered the temperature.

The authority denied local speculation there had been an explosion and large amounts of radioactive substances released into the air.

"The amount of radioactivity released was not hazardous to the public, and what there was was carried out to sea," the authority said.

However, the authority announced on Oct. 13, 1947, that tests of milk from cows in the Windscale area showed that the radio-iodine content had risen to six times the permissible level.

This was considered of possible danger to children, but officials insisted that an adult would have had to drink the milk every day for a lifetime before being harmed.

Distribution of milk from nearly 1,000 farms around Windscale was halted, but resumed a few weeks later.

INSTRUMENTS FAULTY

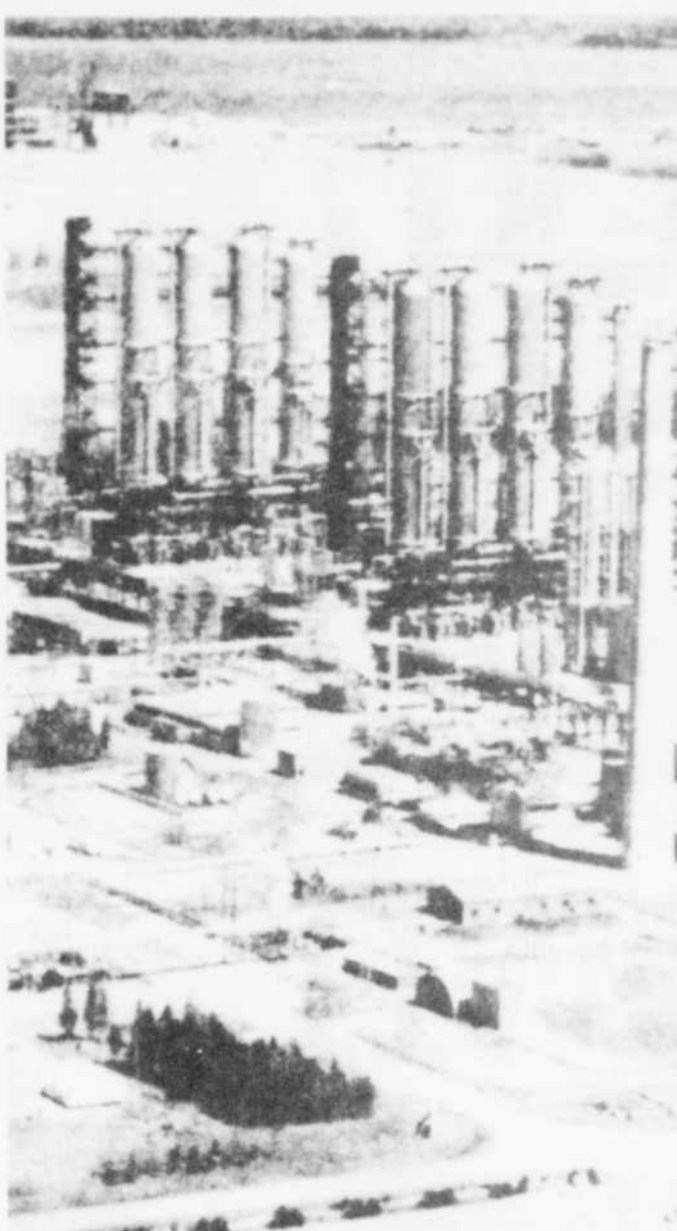

The authority concluded that the cause of the accident lay "partly in inadequacies of the instrumentation provided for the maintenance operation that was being carried out . . . and partly in faults of judgment by the operating staff."

Overheating was also cited as the cause of the 1967 incident at the nuclear electricity generating plant at Chapel Cross on the Scottish-English border.

Fuel elements overheated in one of the 1,696 channels in the No. 2 reactor. The fault showed up on instruments and the reactor was immediately shut down.

No radioactivity was reported to have been released. The faulty reactor was repaired and is working along with the three other reactors at Chapel Cross.

The closed-down piles at Windscale were dismantled, and the buildings that housed them switched to research. It was decided the piles would require too much modification and they were nearing the end of their useful life. Defence nuclear requirements were being met from power-producing plants.

Two accidents occurred recently at Ontario's Bruce nuclear station.

...while support comes from uranium mining area

GRANTS, N.M. (AP) — The nuclear industry in Canada and the U.S., harassed by lawsuits, protests and government investigations, has found an energetic citizen's lobby in Grants Uranium Belt.

About 40 per cent of U.S. uranium is mined from the reserves near this central New Mexican community. Mining has transformed the town from a stagnant, dishevelled crossroads with 4,000 people and few prospects into a bustling city of 15,000.

Awakened by attacks on the nuclear and uranium industries, the people of Grants have adopted a new slogan: ProNuke.

The town organized Energy Day on April 29 — one month after the nuclear reactor accident at Three Mile Island — and the political fiesta was so successful that Jean Fisher of the local Chamber of Commerce says attendance rivalled the annual July 4 celebration.

Several miles away, an antinuclear protest fizzled at the Mount Taylor uranium operation of Gulf Mineral Resources Corp. Police Chief Ed Bell says demonstrators were "polite and well-behaved, but you don't draw much of a crowd at an antinuclear rally in Grants."

AWAIT PROSPERITY

Residents are awaiting the prosperity that will accompany an expected tripling in uranium production over the next decade, but many fear Grants is a boom town whose boom may be in trouble, squeezed by problems that could blunt the need for uranium fuel.

Most of the dangers to the industry involve mistrust of reactors as too much of a health hazard, too expensive or too much of a threat to the environment. New Mexico has no nuclear plants, so these concerns are more abstract to the people here.

However, a recent lawsuit that threatened the mining industry caught Grants' attention. Last December, Friends of the Earth and a group of Navajo Indians filed suit to impose strict environmental controls on uranium mining, a move that could slow the growth of mining operations.

Nacho Salazar, a young man who runs a drilling and exploration firm, says: "We had expected 1979 to be a very good year for drilling, but the lawsuits created uncertainty and nobody was getting any work. I talked to the mining companies and they were very worried; things were slowing down."

In January, Salazar and 400 others created the Energy Association of Taxpayers to forge a community lobby to block or reverse setbacks to uranium industry autonomy.

Sewer tax mess

One clear fact emerges from the muddle of the Ayer's Cliff sewer-tax mess, and that is that Quebec's shilly-shallying is responsible for the whole thing.

We have no doubt that local officials took advantage of the confusion to establish a tax map which favors the business and year-round residential sectors of town, and this shouldn't be. Elected officials are responsible to all their electorate, not just to sectors of town which support them, and we find this sort of favoritism particularly reprehensible, since the residents of Sector C — hardest hit by the sewer tax — have no representation.

No taxation without representation was one of the most hallowed principles of North America over 200 years ago, and it's just as true today as it was then. We will refrain from commenting on the legal aspects of the Sector C case, since it is now before the courts. But surely Quebec should make an effort to clarify the situation once and for all, since so much bad feeling has been raised on account of policy shifts?

Chinese shakeups: Who now holds the reins of power?

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

Oh, duckling!

We are all aware of the tale of the ugly duckling. Another aspect of their lives was brought home here recently when a lonely duckling, obviously very frightened, was seeking help from some of his peers swimming in the Yamaska River when his cries for help went unheeded.

Seven of them swam out of his path completely ignoring him — he became a typical boatperson from Viet Nam. The obvious urgency of his plaintive calls were completely ignored.

The duckling, when we last saw him, was swimming for shore where a cat lurked in hiding. We have never disputed the Darwinian theory of survival of the fittest and this was a typical example.

The personal hell of the little duckling is reflected in our attitudes today when we treat people as numbers, such as those who have been expelled from Malaysia who may well die a lonely death at sea.

The balance of nature existed long before Darwin. It's up to us to see the balance of humanity exists for many generations to come.

As an old friend from Vassar once said: "ashes to ashes, dust to dust, if the atom doesn't get you, the hydrogen must!"

JOHN McCAGHEY

WASHINGTON — Red China is the despair of Western intelligence experts. If, as Churchill observed, Russia is a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma, mainland China is a fortune cookie wrapped in an egg roll inside a bowl of fried rice.

Our China watchers are not only in the dark about what is going to happen in Peking, they often don't even know what has already happened there. A measure of our experts' befuddlement is the fact that they didn't learn of Hua Guofeng's appointment as acting premier until weeks after the event — and then only by reading about it in a Hong Kong newspaper.

"According to a Western press report, a Chinese foreign ministry spokesman said today that Public Security Minister Hua Guofeng has been appointed 'acting premier,'" a U.S. intelligence report states. This intelligence scoop was classified "Top Secret," naturally.

Trying to keep track of fluctuations in what intelligence insiders jokingly call the "Peking Order" is a baffling and frustrating task. Although it sounds like an attempt to handicap a horse race, trying to unravel the complexities of Chinese politics is a deadly serious exercise. The direction taken by the most populous nation on earth can be of crucial importance to the rest of the world, and any signposts pointing toward that direction cannot be ignored by our policy makers.

The ups and downs of recent months — abrupt reversals of economic and ideological policies — have convinced the intelligence community that Red China is experiencing one of the most volatile periods in its turbulent 30-year history. On the dog-eat-dog tradition of Communist regimes, someone must be saddled with blame for the "failure" of policies that have now been declared mistaken. But intelligence sources told our associate Tom Rosenstiel they still haven't figured out who will be the scapegoat this time around. Our experts think it's possible that current kingpin Deng Xiaoping — remembered by most Americans as the genial little man in the big white cowboy hat — will lose some of his power in the current shakeup. This will be nothing new for Deng, described by one intelligence source as "acerbic, hard-driving and undiplomatic." He already has been purged twice and rehabilitated twice.

The keenest speculation centers on Hua, whose rise to power so astonished the Western experts. One secret analysis frankly called Hua's appointment in 1976 as acting premier a "revelation." According to an intelligence rundown the year before, Hua was considered a possibility for top leadership only "over the longer term," since he had come to Peking from the hinterlands only a year earlier.

American China watchers, who had expected Deng to be named premier, quickly developed 20-20 hindsight after Hua's appointment. "In retrospect," says another secret CIA report, "it is obvious that Deng's ascension to power was opposed at every step by the left." Indeed, in some respects Hua Guofeng would be a better man for the premiership than Deng. Next to Deng, in fact, Hua is the most logical candidate for the job.

Hua's greatest asset is considered to be his ability to avoid identification with any one faction in the deadly tong wars of Chinese Communist politics. While this deprives him of a power base, this weakness is believed to be offset by his acceptability to all factions as a compromise leader.

Whether Hua's tightrope-walking skill will get him through the current crisis is not at all clear to our intelligence experts. But then, it's probably not clear to the Red Chinese leadership, either.

Washington Whirl: One of the continuing complaints about Jimmy Carter and his White House staff is that, after two years, their relations with congressional leaders are still amateurish to the point of chaos. In an effort to counteract this prevailing impression, Carter has let it be known that the White House "leg men" on Capitol Hill — the special assistants who handle the nuts and bolts of co-ordination — have access to the Oval Office. Every morning, when Carter meets with his chief congressional liaison man, Frank Moore, he invites Moore's House and Senate assistants, William Cable and Danny Tate, to sit in.

While Robert Strauss was struggling to work out a trade agreement with the Japanese that would give the United States a better position in the market, little did he realize that a wily Japanese toy maker was already undercutting his efforts, and using President Carter to do it. A new windup novelty that's becoming popular in Washington is "Jimmy, the Walking Peanut". The 4-inch toy is a yellow plastic peanut with a grinning Carter face and two little feet. "Just wind him up and let him go!" the instructions say. Jimmy inches his way across a flat surface at a slow, deliberate pace, but the slightest obstacle stops him cold. Are the Japanese trying to tell us something?

The softball season is in full swing in Washington. As a well-intended effort to let the Central Intelligence Agency work out its hostilities toward the press in a harmless manner, we challenged the spookies to a game on the Washington Monument grounds. Shortly before game time, CIA spokesman Dale Peterson called and cancelled because of rain. It was, he said, pouring at CIA headquarters in suburban Langley, Va. But it's not raining in town, we told him; surely the CIA, with all its sophisticated equipment, could tell what was going on five miles from headquarters. Nope, replied Peterson, that would constitute "domestic surveillance."

Animated advertising: Beyond Saturday cartoons

TORONTO (CP) — Cartoons are moving from Saturday morning television to primetime advertising. "Everybody loves animation," says Cynthia Taylor, production manager of Nelvana Animated Commercials, a division of Nelvana Ltd. of Toronto.

"People don't want the hard sell. They want to be entertained. The challenge is to sell the product, but to do it in an entertaining way."

The parent firm has been producing half-hour animated holiday specials for several years, but recently set up a separate commercial division in response to growing demands for animated advertising.

Among the firm's clients are McDonald's Restaurants of Canada Ltd., Imperial Oil Ltd., Hudson's Bay Co. and Ontario Hydro.

The advertising business is just starting to realize the potential of animated commercials, Taylor said. "Many abstract ideas are difficult to convey in live action. If a company is after a certain look or style, often graphics are the only answer."

She said the humor in many animated commercials appeals to the consumer who doesn't "like to be preached at" when watching television.

COSTS VARIES
The cost of an animated commercial varies according to the amount of time spent on drawing. The firm's average price for a 30-second spot is between $15,000 and $30,000.

Live-action commercials can be produced in less time, but with actor residuals, sets, location shooting and special effects often cost more than animation.

"We can do commercials for $5,000, but don't ask for 101 Dalmatians at that price," said Bob Fortier, president of the commercial division.

Fortier criticizes the type of animation seen in many modern cartoon shows, preferring the fuller style typified by Walt Disney productions.

"It's also very important for us to be eclectic. When a client comes to us, we have to be able to offer him an original look."

The firm uses about 30 freelance animators as well as its five full-time production staff.

Fortier claims viewer recall of animated commercials is often better than live-action spots, making them more attractive to advertisers.

"The graphic image tends to stay with the viewer longer. He is charmed by the animation, and his defences are down. In contrast, those ridiculous housewife commercials often alienate people."

Perhaps this boatload of refugees can look forward to re-establishing themselves in Canada.

Canadian supermarkets thrill boat people

TORONTO (CP) — Less than two weeks ago Sam Thi Nguyen, 48, was lining up for food rations at Malaysia's Pulau Bidong Camp for Vietnamese refugees.

This week the mother of five joined other new immigrants making their first trip to a Canadian supermarket. Their eyes popped as they wandered around looking at all the food.

Hesitant at first, they gradually got excited and soon were scrambling all over the store buying rice, fish, vegetables and fruit.

Their faces showed the thrill of buying what they wanted to eat after four months in the camp bulging with 42,000 Indochinese refugees. They touched the sweets, squeezed the cheese and grabbed the rice.

The trip to the supermarket was the start of an orientation program provided by the provincial government's Ontario Welcome House to help the Vietnamese refugees adjust to a new way of life.

PAYS FOR ESCAPE

The immigrants, including children, fled Vietnam in wooden fishing boats, each paying 10 or 12 taels of gold — worth about $4,000 — for their escape.

They are given a food allowance ranging from about $10 to $25 a week for each person, depending on age.

Living costs are being subsidized by the federal government until the immigrants find suitable accommodation and get their first job.

Sam Thi Nguyen, a widow who owned a grocery store in Saigon, bought $14.70 worth of groceries, including rice, milk, eggs, bread, apples, butter, cabbage, pork hocks, a roast of beef and doughnuts.

She was anxious to get back to cook supper for her five children waiting for her in their small apartment at a downtown hotel.

In Gulf of Mexico

Oil blowout still rages

CIUDAD DEL CARMEN, Mexico (AP) — The worst offshore oil well blowout in history is still spewing oil into the Gulf of Mexico more than a month after it exploded, and most experts say the fiery eruption will continue for at least two more months.

The rogue well, Ixtoc 1 in oil-rich Campeche Bay, has defied repeated efforts by an international team of troubleshooters, including Mexican, U.S. and European engineers. In the 37 days since it blew out, it is estimated to have spilled nearly 45 million gallons of crude oil. In two more months at that rate, the total loss would be more than 120 million gallons, or about 15 per cent of the average amount consumed by the U.S. in one day.

Two relief wells should be finished in September. The engineers expect them to siphon off some of the gas pressure on Ixtoc 1, permitting the runaway to be plugged.

Ixtoc 1, about 80 kilometres off the shrimp port of Ciudad del Carmen, blew out when a bubble of high-pressure gas shot up the three-kilometre-deep hole at 3:30 a.m. June 3.

CONTINUES TO BURN

A spokesman for Pemex, the Mexican government oil monopoly, said the runaway is pouring about 1.2 million gallons of oil into the gulf each day. Pemex contends at least half the oil is consumed by a fire that is burning on the water's surface five metres above the leaking wellhead.

But the fire, about 23 metres across produces little of the black smoke characteristic of burning oil. One veteran oil man said only natural gas was burning. He said the oil, bubbling up through the centre of the inferno like percolating coffee, mixes with sea water and spreads into the growing oil slick.

The reddish-brown oil is inches thick for several kilometres west of the blowout. The smell of oil hangs heavy throughout the area.

But the U.S. National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration says the slick stretches at least 480 kilometres along the gulf coast. The well is about 800 kilometres from the Texas border.

North Sea oil estimates reduced

LONDON (AP) — The British energy department reduced its estimates of oil production in the North Sea during the next three years, yesterday, citing technical delays.

In its annual report on the development of Britain's oil and gas reserves, the department said the delays will lead to larger production than previously predicted for the late 1980s.

The department now forecasts Britain's continental shelf oil production at 70 million to 80 million metric tons in 1979, rising to 85 million to 105 million in 1980 and 95 to 115 million tons a year later.

These estimates are revised downward from the figures which appeared in last year's report, which said production would total 80 million to 95 million tons in 1979, 90 million to 110 million in 1980 and 100 million to 120 million tons in 1981.

DISSIDENT MOVEMENT TROUBLED

MOSCOW (AP) — A year after their convictions, Anatoly Shcharansky has headaches and eye trouble, Yuri Orlov is weakening from the strain of hard labor, Alexander Ginzburg is free in the U.S., and the Soviet dissident movement is in poor health.

The 1978 trials of the three men came after a crackdown on critics of the Soviet system — stepped-up surveillance, harassment, arrests and trials — that began at the start of 1977.

The climactic moment occurred at 4 p.m. last July 14 when Shcharansky, a 31-year-old Jewish activist, was convicted of espionage and sentenced to 13 years at hard labor after refusing to ask for mercy.

Ginzburg, a charter member of the Helsinki human rights group, was sentenced the day before to eight years at hard labor. Orlov, the founder of the Helsinki group, had been sentenced the previous May 18 to seven years at hard labor and five years of Siberian exile for anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

Last April, after nine months in a labor camp, Ginzburg was exiled to the U.S. in a prisoner exchange.

The three were the best-known of the imprisoned dissidents, and the U.S. and other Western governments protested their trials and convictions.

CITES VIOLATIONS

But Amnesty International, the Western organization that monitors political prisoners around the world, counts a total of 321 human-rights activists in the Soviet Union who have been imprisoned, exiled to Siberia or given forced psychiatric treatment since the Soviet government and 34 others signed the Helsinki Accords in August 1975.

Orlov and other dissidents organized the Helsinki group in May of 1976 to publicize their government's violations of the human rights provisions of the accords. They became the chief target of the government crackdown.

News about those imprisoned is scarce. It comes either in the rare, censored letters they are allowed to send their families or by word of mouth from other prisoners who are freed.

Shcharansky is reported weaving potato sacks by hand in Chistopol Prison 760 kilometres east of Moscow. He is said to be in poor health but maintaining the high spirits he managed to display during the final tense weeks before his arrest in March 1977.

There have been occasional reports that the government might agree to release him as it did Ginzburg, but there has been nothing official tending to confirm this.

Orlov, a 55-year-old physicist, is reported working at a lathe in a labor colony. The work exhausts him to an unusual degree, informed sources say. But he is said to have aroused the respect of other prisoners by his personal concern for them and his sparring with camp officials over regulations.

Refugees fled 'miserable situation'

RED DEER (CP) — Four recent refugees from Vietnam say the plight of the boat people is beyond the comprehension of many Canadians.

"It is a very, very miserable situation" back home, says Le-duc Tung, 31, who came from Qui Nhon. He grew up in a country where war was a way of life, and left his wife and child when he decided he could no longer stand the communist regime.

Cong Quang Nguyen, 23, and brothers Tran Van Mihn, 28, and Tran Dac Hue, 22, agree with Le-duc that many Vietnamese want to leave the country so badly that they will risk their life doing it.

Le-duc left Vietnam April 12, 1978. He said he had thought of committing suicide but decided to take his chance through escape.

He finds it difficult to think back to his old life.

"When I got a letter from my wife, and my baby's picture, I wept. I cried. But what could I do?"

Le-duc's parents forbade him to take his wife and child when he escaped because they were afraid they would die at sea or be caught and killed.

MANY KILLED

Cong, a native of Saigon, now Ho Chi Minh City, said Vietnamese soldiers fired at the boat in which he and 32 others made their escape to Malaysia. During his eight-day voyage he saw bodies of many escapers on the sea.

Tran Dac Hue said five families contributed 20 ounces of gold each to buy a boat to leave the country and the escape was planned for 12 months.

After spending 10 days at sea, five without food or fresh water, they were picked up by a vessel from Singapore and accepted as refugees by Canada before landing in Malaysia.

Le-duc said religious belief was one factor in their decision to escape.

"Cong is a Buddhist. They (the Tran brothers) are Buddhists too. And as for me, I am Confucian. All of us believe in God... (but) communists don't believe in God."

HUMAN RIGHTS

Le-duc, a lieutenant in the South Vietnamese army before the reunification of the country, said another factor was the lack of human rights in their native country.

He was called up to go to a "re-education camp," and while he was there, his father's farm was seized and his family forced to make a living by weaving.

Tran Van Mihn, who owned a small store and was a private in the South Vietnamese army, said he was severely taxed by the new government and required to work as a laborer for 30 days each year without pay, building roads and dams and cutting wood in the jungle.

The men have found work with a local firm and are looking forward to a new life in Red Deer.

But they still have to fight the sadness of leaving their families and their homeland.

Adoptee's search for real parents ends in success

CALGARY (CP) — As an adopted child, Larry Kjos always wondered who he was.

Last August, with the discovery of his blood family, he found his answer. His mother had died, but he found an older sister and aunts and uncles in Calgary and Vancouver.

"I felt like a ton had been lifted off my shoulders," the 46-year-old Edmonton man said in a recent telephone interview. "I knew for the first time in my life who I was and that I had a blood family. It helped explain things about me."

Kjos discovered, by reading an adoption order he got from the government, that his family name was Rottaire. After three hours of studying old city directories, he had found an uncle.

His search was easier than it is for many. In Alberta, a 1966 ruling meant future adoption orders would no longer include the original name of the adopted child - merely a file number.

The only other information the government makes available to children seeking their families is some general material on such things as physical characteristics, education and ethnic origin of the biological parents.

Grant Notley, leader of the Alberta New Democrats, recently introduced a bill in the legislature that would allow an adopted child or the adoptive parents to trace the child's natural parents.

It would allow adopted children of the age of majority to obtain information from original birth registration documents.

But the provincial government is concerned that this would mean reneging on an earlier commitment to protect the privacy of the natural parents, said Don Alexander, provincial supervisor of adoptions.

In Ontario, a bill to be enacted this summer would enable reunions between parents and children, but consent of the adoptive parent would be required.

In Saskatchewan, a government-operated registry puts registered adoptees and birth parents in touch with each other.

But Alexander said most provinces are more restrictive.

Penny Callan, the president of Parentfinders, an Alberta group lobbying for changes in legislation, said adopted children need open access to birth records.

"The need to know your roots is universal to both adopted and natural children."

Many adopted children used Parentfinders as an intermediary when tracing birth parents.

Virtually all the birth parents reached welcomed the contact with their children because it assured them the child was alive and happy, she said.

Ann Landers says

Don't make kids feel guilty

Dear Ann Landers: I've read many letters in your column from parents whose children have broken their hearts. Very little is said about the reverse situation. It's time someone spoke out.

My mother was an alcoholic and my father was a workaholic. She was never sober and he was never home. Miraculously I survived a hellish childhood and I'm still beleaguered by their problems. I get incoherent calls from Mother about Dad. I get calls from Dad begging me to "do something" about Mother. They both beg me to come home and "straighten things out." It's not as if I live next door, Ann - I'm thousands of miles away!

For years I've tried, without success, to help them. It's useless. Yet they continue to cause me untold grief by trying to draw me into their disputes. Any suggestions? — Anguished Son

Dear Son: If you're urged them to get counseling - suggested AA for her and Al-Anon for him - you've done as much as any child can do. The rest is up to them. Parents can guilt-trip children in a very subtle manner. Don't let them booby-trap you.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a male homosexual in my very late teens who would give anything in the world to be straight. I refuse to have physical relations with members of my own sex although the desire is strong. The thought of it disgusts me and goes against my moral and religious training.

My friends are all heterosexual. No one suspects I have this problem. I have no feminine mannerisms - not a single clue that I am not perfectly normal.

I've tried so hard to change on my own, but it hasn't worked. Please tell me, is it humanly possible to cure this sickness? Has anyone ever done it? I pray that you can help me. — Your Friend In Virginal

Dear Friend: Some homosexuals have been

"cured", but they must be strongly motivated and lucky enough to find the right therapist.

If you have not tried counseling, I urge you to do so. Write the American Psychiatric Association headquarters for guidance: 1700 18th Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20009. If you can't change, therapy can help you understand your dysfunction and accept yourself as you are.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 20 years old and would love to have a baby. My boyfriend says he likes the idea, too. We both have good jobs. Mine pays for all hospital expenses and there is a neat clause for maternity leave. I wouldn't cost my folks a penny.

The only thing that worries me is how they would take it. But then I keep telling myself I have to live for ME, not my parents. Please give us the go sign, Ann. We really want this kid. — In Love

Dear Love: Do you both want the kid enough to get married? If not, my advice is forget it. You aren't mature enough to be parents.

Dear Ann Landers: Concerning the letter from "Fed Up" who asked if there are any decent men left in the world: you wanted to know what she was doing arguing with a guy in his apartment until 2:00 a.m. Well, Ann, she was probably trying to get him to drive her home.

I've been in the same boat, sometimes till 4:00 a.m. In our small town there's no such thing as taxi service and the only alternative is to hoof it. It's a long, scary hike on dark roads.

Is it wrong to expect a guy to keep his hands OFF, especially on the first date? I'm 23, attractive, intelligent, hard-working and pleasant. I've never been asked out to dinner. I've been treated to a movie exactly twice.

I hope you have a better answer for "Fed Up" before she becomes a bitter and cynical as I am. I guess the decent men must be on the other side of the moon. They're sure not here where I live. — Thoroughly Disgusted.

Dear T.D.: You are 23, attractive, intelligent, hard-working and pleasant. You've never been invited to dinner by a guy and only twice to a movie? Maybe if you weren't willing to go to a man's apartment on a first date, he might take you someplace else. Try it.

CONFIDENTIAL to Please Repeat, I Want to Clip It Out: My definition for tact is making people at home - when you wish they were.

Got those wedding bell blues over cost... guest list... what to wear... and other details? Ann Landers' completely new "The Bride's Guide" will help. For a copy, send a dollar, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (15 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

ROSE READY TO SET ALL-STAR MARK

PETE ROSE...fifth position played

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Rose will have the chance to set an all-star game record by playing at his fifth different position in Tuesday night's game at the Seattle Kingdome. The Philadelphia Phillies first baseman was among 13 reserves named to the National League squad today by all-star manager Tommy Lasorda of Los Angeles Dodgers.

It will be the seventh straight all-star game for Rose, who will back up Steve Garvey of the Dodgers at first base.

Rose, who has already appeared at second base, third base, left field and right field in his 11 all-star games, was joined on the list of reserves by second baseman Joe Morgan of Cincinnati, third baseman Ron Cey of Los Angeles, shortstops Dave Concepcion of Cincinnati and Garry Templeton of St. Louis, outfielders Lou Brock of St. Louis, Jack Clark of San Francisco, Gary Matthews of Atlanta, Dave Kingman of Chicago and Lee Mazzilli of New York and catchers Bob Boone of Philadelphia, Gary Carter of Montreal and Johnny Bench of Cincinnati.

Four relievers including fireballing Jim Kern of Texas Rangers and rookie Mark Clear of California Angels were named to the American League pitching staff for the 50th all-star baseball game against the National League scheduled for next Tuesday night in the Seattle Kingdome.

Other bullpen specialists selected by American League manager Bob Lemon and announced by league president Lee MacPhail are Don Stanhouse of Baltimore Orioles and Sid Monge of Cleveland Indians.

The AL also chose Boston's Bob Stanley, who is used as both a starter and a reliever by the Red Sox. The regular starters chosen were New York Yankee teammates Tommy John and Ron Guidry, Nolan Ryan of California Angels and Dave Lemaczkyk of Toronto Blue Jays.

1981 all-star game to Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland will play host to the 1981 baseball all-star game, Cleveland Indians president Gabe Paul announced Tuesday.

Paul said he promised American League officials that "we would pack the stadium" for the July event.

Sixteen strikeouts not enough as Giants win

By TERRY SCOTT

MONTREAL (CP) — In a baseball game that featured some strange developments, it was ironic that the outcome was decided in the 13th inning.

On the surface, San Francisco Giants' 11-7 National League victory over Montreal Expos was like any, but a deeper look reveals an unusual set of events.

The Giants won in spite of watching 16 batters retired on strikeouts by four Montreal pitchers.

Next, there was Joe Strain. The second baseman, playing in his 12th major league game, clouted a ninth-inning home run to provide the Giants with a temporary 7-5 lead.

Then, it was winning relief pitcher Tom Griffin, 4-4, hitless in nine plate appearances this season, stroking a solid single to key the 13th-inning heroics.

Last, the game was decided when Woodie Fryman hit batter Terry Whitfield with a pitch while the bases were loaded.

In spite of the oddities, Expos manager Dick Williams was more disturbed over the squandering of a 5-1 lead by starter Scott Sanderson.

RAN OUT

"He just ran out of gas," Williams repeated. "I don't know why. There was no reason for it."

Solo homers by Larry Parrish and Gary Carter, along with triples by Rodney Scott and Carter that produced one and two runs respectively, staked the Expos to a 5-1 margin until the fifth inning.

Sanderson was then shown a hasty exit after Jack Clark delivered an RBI double and huge Willie McCovey hit a three-run homer, his 14th of the season. Rudy May came on to blank the Giants until Strain shocked an Olympic Stadium crowd of 21,055 into silence with his two-run shot.

"I was just trying to hit it hard somewhere," said Strain. "It was a low, inside fastball and I knew right away it had a chance to go out. The bullpen retrieved the ball and gave it back to me."

The Expos used back-to-back singles by Parrish and pinchhitter Jerry White, along with a run-scoring double by pinch-hitter Dave Cash and Scott's sacrifice fly to force a 7-7 tie in the ninth.

Elsewhere, Philadelphia edged San Diego 6-5, Pittsburgh beat Houston 4-3, Cincinnati defeated St. Louis 4-2, Chicago Cubs downed Atlanta 7-3, and Los Angeles beat New York 7-4. In the American League Tuesday, Detroit edged Minnesota 6-5, Oakland nipped Baltimore 7-6, Seattle beat New York 5-1, Cleveland defeated Kansas City 7-4, Chicago downed Texas 6-3 and California trimmed Boston 4-2.

Senior men take to tee

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. (CP) — The competition and the course will be tough when 211 golfers tee off today to start the Canadian senior men's golf championship, says defending champion Herb Carnegie of Richmond Hill, Ont.

"Any one of 15 or 20 fellows could come up with it," Carnegie said Tuesday after shooting practice rounds in the low 70s on the par-71 course.

He forecast that someone — he could not say who — will be shooting in the mid 60s on the course. But he doubted if anyone could sustain that kind of play for three rounds on the tricky greens.

Club pro Clayton Van Tassle said he does not expect a lot of low scores.

"I've heard of a couple of 68s in practice rounds but I think par rounds will win the tournament."

"It's not an easy course — rolling hills and rolling greens."

Van Tassle and Carnegie said weather could be a deciding factor.

Witness testifies at Bostock trial

CROWN POINT, Ind. (AP) — The sister-in-law of a Gary man accused of killing California Angels outfielder Lyman Bostock testified Tuesday that she saw him pick up a "long, dark object" just prior to Bostock's shooting.

Bostock was shot Sept. 28, 1978, while he was sitting in a car on a Gary street. Bostock's uncle, Thomas Turner, Barbara Smith and her sister, Joan Hawkins, were also in the car.

Mrs. Smith is the estranged wife of Leonard Smith, who is on trial here on a charge of first-degree murder.

Miss Hawkins, 23, of Gary, testified for the prosecution in Lake County Superior Court that she could not identify the object. Both Miss Hawkins and Mrs. Smith, 26, said they saw Smith riding in a car near theirs at the time of the shooting.

Turner told the court that after Bostock was shot, he heard Mrs. Smith say, "Tom, I seen him. I seen him. Go get him. That's my stupid old husband."

Track stars will once again grace Olympic Stadium

By MATTHEW ELDER

MONTREAL — The massive Olympic Stadium has seen plenty of action since it was turned over to Montreal's Expos and Alouettes. But the 70,000-seat facility hasn't since been used for one of the main events it was designed for — track and field.

World Cup II is the second meet in what will become a regular event every few years. The first World Cup was held in 1977 at Dusseldorf. Two months later, International Amateur Athletics Federation president Adrian Paulen announced that the organization had accepted Montreal's bid for the world track and field meet.

Two weeks ago, Paulen was in Montreal to inspect the preparations for the meet, set for the weekend of August 24-26.

"During my stay in Montreal," Paulen said, "I was able to find all the ingredients for a positive report on the general sectors of organization as well as in the technical areas."

"I was also able to appreciate that World Cup II, which is an IAAF event, is in the hands of an organizing committee worthy of our complete trust and total confidence."

One of the World Cup II organizing committee's main concerns was the disrepair of track facilities, unused since 1976. The synthetic-surface track has suffered damage during these three years, except the areas covered by the astro-turf on the playing field.

After inspecting the stadium, the IAAF delegates said they were satisfied with repairs made to the track and with the general grooming of the competition area.

Paulen and his colleagues were especially pleased with the innovative 'fall zone' where projectiles for the throwing events will land. Local organizers have devised a synthetic covering instead of the traditional grass or earth for the fall zone.

Facilities required for the running of World Cup II include modern dressing rooms, rest areas, massage rooms and physiotherapy areas for the athletes as well as a complete 400-metre training track and practice facilities for all athletics events located immediately adjacent to the stadium.

There are also rooms and technical equipment for officials, coaches and judges, including closed-circuit television employed as spy-in-the-sky to give officials complete control of track environment security.

Television coverage is facilitated by over 1,000 quartz and metal-vapour lamps illuminating the competition area to international standards for colour broadcast. There is also a complete television control room and studio permanently installed as well as broadcast facilities in the athletes' interview room.

The format for the competitions is unlike other meets. First of all, the event is held every two years, the year preceding the Olympics and the year that immediately follows.

All events are final — no heats will be required to determine finalists. This should guarantee that each event will be exciting. However, such Olympic events as the marathon, pentathlon, decathlon and walk are excluded due to reasons of time and space.

Eight athletes per event will compete. One athlete will come from each of the five continents — The Americas, Asia, Oceania, Africa and Europe — as well as the United States and Europe's top two nations. The winner of each individual event scores eight points; athletes that follow score one point less, from seven down to one.

Defending champions are the European men's team and the East German women's squad. The individual teams coming from Europe this year will be decided at the Europa Cup meet in Milan, Italy, in early August.

Qualifying meets, which will determine participants of our national team are the Pan American Games, currently being staged in San Juan, Puerto Rico, and on the weekend of August 11-12 in Canada.

Asia and Oceania have already selected their teams. The Asian team has been bolstered by the addition of a strong contingent of Chinese and the addition of that nation could well lift Asia from its last place finish at World Cup I.

China was admitted to the IAAF last year. Apparently, in anticipation of being able to join the international track and field community, the Chinese have been in serious training. After its long isolation, the level of its recent success represents a considerable accomplishment.

Overall, however, Japan still dominates the Asian track scene. Of the 31 individual events to be contested at World Cup II, Japanese athletes won 17. China qualified the next highest total of individual winners with six. Iraq, Korea and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea won two events each, while Thailand Kuwait and India each had one victory.

The Oceania team is comprised solely of Australians and New Zealanders. It is led by David Fitzsimons, an Australian who finished third behind Miruts Yifter and Marty Liquori in the 5,000 meters in World Cup I, and his countryman Peter Farmer, who took third place in the hammer throw in that competition, ahead of Olympic Champion Yiriy Syedikh.

Recruiting for the organizing committee was concentrated on those with proven business and sports organizational backgrounds. Those chosen have been involved with the 1976 Olympics, Commonwealth Games (Edmonton, 1978) and Pan American Games (Winnipeg, 1967) as well as the various provincial and regional championships.

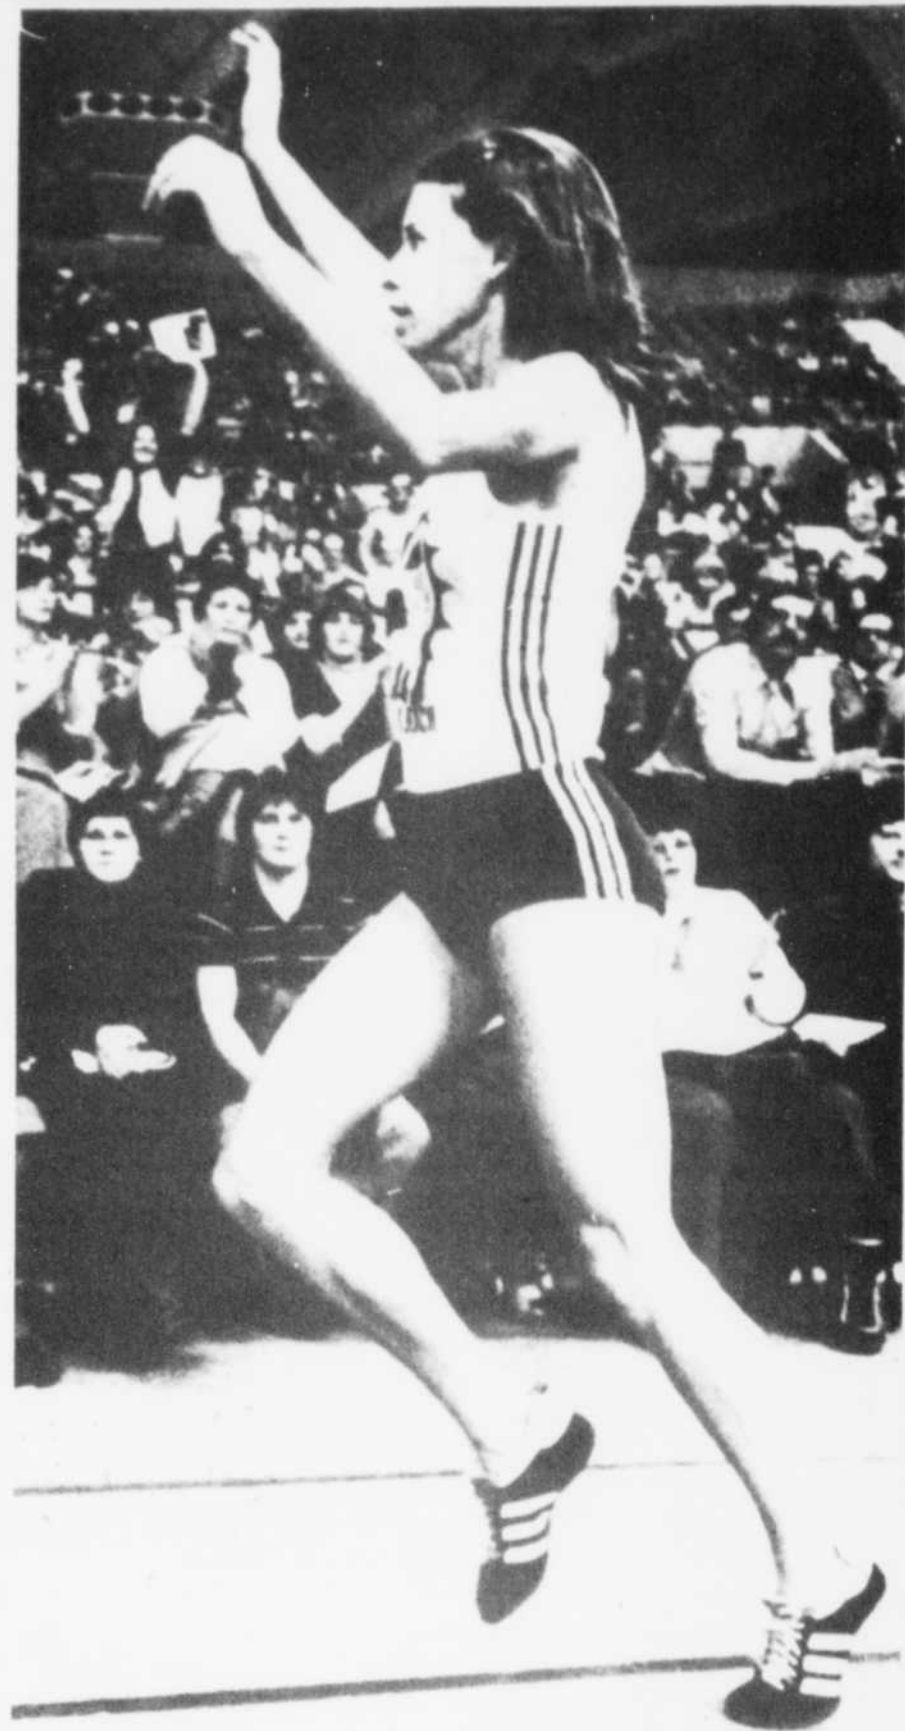

General Jacques Dextraze succeeded Robert Boyd, president of Hydro-Quebec, as World Cup II president last year. Boyd resigned due to commitments with the public utility, but still remains on the events board of directors. Dextraze is also chairman of the board of Canadian National and enjoyed a successful military career before joining CN.

"We are already assured of the best quality in performance because," Dextraze says, "we will have, in Montreal, the best track and field athletes from the five continents. It is now our duty to create around them an event befitting their stature and to create also an ambience of brotherhood so that everyone feels at home in Montreal."

Heading the executive level is veteran Montreal track and field organizer Larry Eldridge. He is directly responsible for the permanent staff required, a position similar to what he held in 1976 when he was director of athletics at the Montreal Olympics.

Eldridge points out that the schedule is structured so that there is all but absolute certainty of at least one event per day resulting in exceptionally high quality performance. There will be 35 events overall — 20 for men and 15 for women — and each of them will be a final.

Tickets have been on sale since May 22 and are available locally at Sherbrooke's Eaton store at Carrefour de l'Estrie or at the TRS counter at Miracle Mart in Place Belvedere. Tickets go at $20, $15, $12, $8 and $5 — expensive, but nevertheless well worth while for first class sporting entertainment.

Als edge Argos 11-9 in sleeper

TORONTO (CP) — The football bromide states that defence wins championships and offence sells tickets.

If that's the case, Tuesday night's Canadian Football League game between Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts should have been played for the Eastern Football Conference championship in front of 167 fans.

The EFC opener, won by the Als 11-9, left 42,108 fans bored to the point of a catatonic state but had the two head coaches raving over the defensive display.

Another sports bromide says statistics are for losers. In this game, however, it told the story. Montreal, led by quarterback Joe Barnes in the first half and Gerry Dattilio in the second half, could direct the club to just 259 yards net offence. But that was more than double what Argonauts' Tony Adams could generate in his CFL debut as Toronto managed an embarrassing net total of 113 yards.

There were just two offensive players able to beat the superb defences — and both were Alouettes.

Running back David Green pounded away for 107 yards on 22 carries and in most cases was the player responsible for putting field goal kicker Don Sweet within range.

KICKING GAME DECISIVE

And as it so often happens in tough defensive battles, it was the kicking game that decided the outcome.

Sweet connected for field goals on three occasions, from 17 and 24 yards in the first and second quarters and from 47 yards in the fourth quarter to put Montreal ahead for the first time in the game.

The less said about the Toronto kicking game the better.

Ian Sunter attempted three field goals and was wide on two of them from distances of 43 and 35 yards. Both misses went for single points.

Another attempt from the 45-yard line never got off the ground as the high snap ended in Sunter's hands.

Another high snap on a kicking situation ultimately gave Montreal the margin of victory.

On a third down punt situation, centre Tom Davis sailed the ball over Sunter's head into the end zone 40 yards downfield. Sunter had no choice but to concede a safety at 4:59 of the second quarter.

LONE TOUCHDOWN

The Argonauts created a false sense of offensive effectiveness on their opening possession when they moved the ball 48 yards in six plays for the lone touchdown of the game, a one-yard up-and-over dive by Terry Metcalf.

Except for Sunter's misses, that was it for the Toronto offence.

The Alouettes were led by an impregnable front four backed up by an active secondary and linebacking crew. In all they sacked Adams on four occasions and hurried his errant throws on numerous other occasions. And they shut off the Argo running game, limiting Metcalf to 37 yards and forcing Adams to scramble for 48 yards.

Adams could hit on just 10 of 26 attempts for 89 yards and he also coughed up two interceptions. It was his worst performance after a respectable pre-season effort.

Eskimos 28 Bombers 10

WINNIPEG (CP) — Tom Wilkinson threw two touchdown passes to Brian Kelly to lead Edmonton Eskimos to a 28-10 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Western Football Conference season opener Tuesday night, before 24,024 fans.

Wilkinson directed a number of long scoring plays against a spotty Winnipeg defence, and the Edmonton defensive unit stopped the Bombers cold for most of the night.

The biggest moment for the Bombers came on the last play of the game, when quarterback Dieter Brock fired a 42-yard touchdown pass to Mike Holmes.

Edmonton's defence came up big on two plays in particular, stopping a third-down gamble deep in their territory in the first quarter, and accounting for one of the three Edmonton touchdowns.

Middle linebacker Dan

Kepley pounced on a blocked Winnipeg field goal try and ran 60 yards for the score in the third quarter.

CUTLER CONNECTS Dave Cutler, who gave Edmonton a 3-0 first-quarter lead with a 12-yard field goal, also kicked three converts and added a 37-yard field goal near the end of the fourth quarter.

The other Edmonton point came on a 57-yard single by punter Hank Ilesic.

Bernie Ruoff rounded out the Winnipeg scoring with a 41-yard field goal and 59-yard single. He missed other field goals from 48 and 42 yards out, and had one blocked.

Edmonton's defence came up big on two plays in particular, stopping a third-down gamble deep in their territory in the first quarter, and accounting for one of the three Edmonton touchdowns.

The track hasn't been used since the Olympics, but will be given a face lift for the August meet.

Games midpoint: U.S. lead less than 1975

SAN JUAN (CP) — After a quiet day at the Pan-American Games — the equivalent of baseball's all-star break, a midterm report indicates that, while the United States is still the dominant athletic power of the hemisphere, other countries are nibbling away at the American's lead.

In terms of gold medals, the U.S. won 85 of the 174 awarded in the first 11 days of the games. Cuba, with Maria del Risco's victory in women's individual foil fencing, the only final on Tuesday's schedule, was second with 50 and Canada held third place with 20.

But the substantial American lead takes on a different perspective in comparison with the results of the 1975 Pan-Ams in Mexico City where the U.S. carried off 117 golds to Cuba's 57 and Canada's 18.

The Americans would have to win virtually every remaining event on the card to match their 1975 total, while the Cubans are virtually assured of equalling their Mexico City gold harvest and the Canadians have already surpassed theirs.

Despite the lack of progress by its swimming team, held to one gold for the second time in a row, Canada was running eight golds ahead of 1975 in the 11 sports.

The big Canadian breakthrough was in gymnastics, good for four golds this time against none in 1975. The synchronized swimmers, shooters and cyclists were two ahead of their Mexico City totals and both the wrestlers and oarsmen improved by one.

Lou Lefave, director of Sport Canada, said Tuesday he was generally happy with Canada's performance in the Pan-American Games, a showing that has the country about 15 medals ahead of predictions.

Canadian pair pulls tennis upset

SAN JUAN (CP) — A Canadian pair knocked top-seeded Pedro and Crissy Gonzales out of the mixed doubles of the Pan-American Games tennis tournament Tuesday and discovered that the island's hospitality to visitors wears thin when its favorites are losing.

Joseph Brabanec of Vancouver and Wendy Barlow of Victoria survived questionable line calls by local officials and the noisy hostility of the spectators to defeat the Puerto Ricans 6-3, 7-5 in their quarter-final match.

Our softballers can't be hit

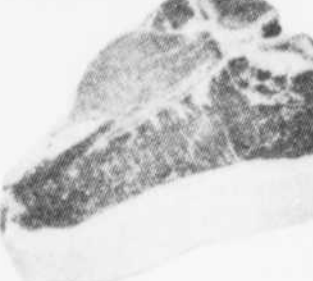

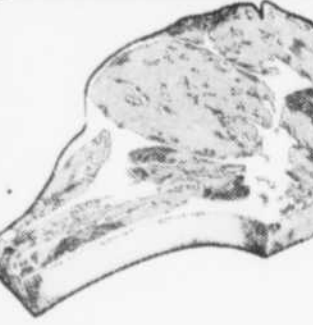

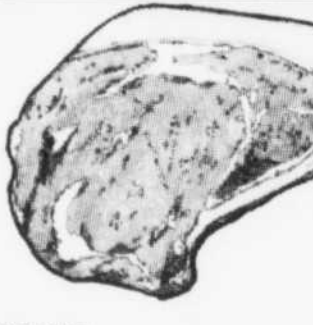

SAN JUAN (CP) — Dave Wilson struck out 13 Colombian batters on the way to a no-hit 3-0 victory, the fourth straight game in Pan-American men's softball that Canadian pitchers have not allowed a hit.

Local artist Gordon Ladd and his wife Phyllis, below, proudly display one of Ladd's own creations, currently hanging in his Gallery in Knowlton. The duo have been involved in a search for information on Italian painter Valentino Molina and in recent months have tracked him from Toronto to Lennoxville. Two of Molina's paintings — titles unknown — are reproduced below.

On the trail of Valentino Molina...

KNOWLTON — Where is Valentino Molina?

It was a case that would baffle the greatest of detectives. A missing Italian artist, trail of clues that reaches from Toronto to Lennoxville and a local artist and his wife who took to the search in the best Sherlock Holmes-Dr. Watson tradition. Kojak would have been baffled; Sam Spade stumped and Columbo would have probably hung up his trench coat — but Gordon and Phyllis Ladd press on undaunted.

It all began about a year ago. Gordon Ladd's interest was piqued when a client showed him three canvases by Molina. A trip to Toronto last September inspired some follow-up but the few leads that did materialize had to lie dormant until a return journey could be taken this spring. Queries were posed to interested art auctioneers in the hope of culling some more facts about the paintings and the painter and increasing the value of the artwork, but this drew a blank. However, not all was in vain. An earlier tip had Molina being born in Savannah, Georgia in 1880 and studying at the Academie Julian in Paris under Jean Paul Laurens and Lucien Simon. The National Art Gallery has one of his paintings.

A flurry of telephone calls and letters followed the Ladds' return to the Townships. Though all the replies aren't in, they found that Molina lived in Lennoxville about 1916 and has one of his paintings hanging at Bishop's University; that the painting possessed by the National Art Gallery is a seascape titled "Morning" and acquired in 1915, the same year the painting was exhibited at the Royal Canadian Academy with "Children of the Sun", the latter also being shown in Winnipeg in 1917. They also found that the artist was associated with the Milch Galleries in New York City from 1918 to 1921 and had an exhibition there in 1921.

Then — nothing. The trail dried up. Molina faded into the shadows and once again, it was time for Gordon Ladd to adjust the brim on his imaginary detective's snap brim fedora and squint a little harder into his magnifying glass and hope for the best.

Mind you, if anyone out there happens to know anything about Valentino Molina, the Ladds would be glad to hear from you. You can contact them by calling collect at 514-243-5195.

Enough about the quarry though. What of the detective?

A native of Bondville, Gordon Ladd was the youngest of six children. Left alone with his elderly parents at the age of 12, Ladd spent most of his time observing nature when not doing farm chores. He joined Bell Canada in 1948 who transferred him to Waterloo in 1950 where he met his wife Phyllis. Though he initially took up photography as a hobby, many of his nature and countryside shots now appear on canvas. He had done no painting until 1967, but he had always had an interest in it and joined the art courses at the Granby Community School, under the direction of Canadian artist Ron Davies.

Showing a natural aptitude, Ladd enthusiastically completed many paintings and when the 10-week course ended, he enrolled in Davies private courses, continually striving to develop his own style ever since. Ladd picked up where Davies left off when he moved away and began teaching for the Granby Community School and the District of Bedford Continuing Education Department in Granby and Waterloo. He quit teaching at the end of 1977 to devote more time to his paintings.

With successful exhibitions at the Cowansville Art Centre and the Brome County Historical Society's Archives Building under his belt, Gordon Ladd and his wife decided to find a permanent location where Ladd could exhibit his paintings.

Settling on a house in Knowlton, the Ladds set about major renovations when they moved in, from Granby, in 1972. Neutral-colored burlap was draped on the walls, chairs and benches were added so that visitors could study the paintings at their leisure and special spotlights on tracks were added. All the time that the renovations were underway, Ladd was preparing to be the exhibiting artist at Festival Lennoxville, a show that would see seven of his works taken in a still-unsolved theft.

The Gordon Ladd Gallery has been in operation for a year now and has proven to be an interesting and rewarding experience for the couple. With Mrs. Ladd handling the sales, bookkeeping and all aspects of the business end, other services offered by the gallery include the framing and rental of paintings and the evaluation of older paintings to determine market value. With his next major exhibition slated for the Eaton's Art Gallery in November, Ladd has also displayed his paintings at Au Coin des Arts in Montreal; the Village Square Art Gallery in South March, Ontario and at Beloeil, St. Bruno, Mascouche Heights, Pierrefonds and Granby. Associated with the Sutton Valley Council and their Saturday Market, he exhibited at the Sutton Market in 1978 and in 1979 and is one of the artists participating in the Painter's Corner. His solo exhibit was held June 16.

Termed a "one-subject" painter who concentrates on local landscapes and historical locales, Ladd often zeroes in on a particular aspect of the scene and emphasizes a single object to bring it to prominence as the subject of his painting.

Most visitors to the Ladd Gallery are surprised and express pleasure at the presentation of the paintings. They sign the guest book before leaving and upon browsing through the pages one notes addresses from many parts of Canada, the United States and England.

The Ladds' policy is always to keep their customers happy and all paintings are sold with a total "satisfaction or money back guarantee" during Gordon Ladd's lifetime. Should a customer wish to exchange one of the Ladd paintings toward the purchase of another, that can be arranged.

Ladd often does paintings on commission and recalls one recently that gave him a great deal of satisfaction. Several clients came to commission him to do a painting for their employer who was resigning and moving to Toronto. This gentleman had spent his summers as a youth at Brome Lake and after some discussion it was decided that it should be a painting of the old Mill House at the Outlet. When it was presented to the boss, it was learned that this building brought back many memories to him. It seems that he used to go fishing by the dam, carrying some beer with him and that he used to hide behind that building while enjoying his beer. The gift turned out to be more appropriate and meaningful than the ladies had ever expected.

At home, Ladd is an avid gardener and since taking up residence, his grounds are becoming further proof of his artistic nature. Neighbours are watching his garden develop into a spot of beauty with keen interest and expectation.

Gallery Gordon Ladd has no specific hours as such. If in Knowlton and wishing to drop in, by all means do so. However, if making a special visit, it would be advisable to telephone for an appointment.

Poetry evening

MANSONVILLE (BN) — Mrs. Thelma Wilkins, Mansonville, and Mrs. Frances Aubry of St. Luc spent a few days in Toronto where they attended a poetry recital which was given by Mrs. Wilkins' youngest daughter, Devon. During the past ten years Devon's poetry has been published many times in this paper.

The Evening of Poetry took place on Tuesday, June 19th at 7:30 p.m. in the Bakerwood Auditorium, 1929 Bayview Avenue, at the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Marlene Oliver, from Radio Station CKFM, emceed the evening. Mrs. Helen Wade provided musical interludes on piano.

and an old schoolmate of Devon's, Mr. Ken Buxton, sang two selections. The recital was climaxed when the audience was asked to stand while Ken sang Devon's poem entitled Remembering Confederation to the tune of The Maple Leaf Forever.

The purpose of the recital was to promote Devon's new book of poetry, Pennies for Your Thinking.

Lotta Dempsey of Toronto Star's Inside Story Writes: "I have been privileged to write the forward to a charming book of poetry; Pennies for Your Thinking, by Devon Wilkins. No need to tell those who have enjoyed Devon's other books, Inbetweensville and The Life of a First Aid Instructor, what a delight this new volume is. Although Devon long has been without physical sight, she has an inner view which can be illuminating to many of us who think we can see."

Pennies for Your Thinking may be ordered at a cost of $3.75 plus 35 cents for postage, by writing to: Devon Wilkins, c.o. Mr. and Mrs. F.C. Raymond, R.R. 4, Orangeville, Ontario, L9W 2Z1. Copies may also be obtained from Mrs. Thelma Wilkins, Mansonville, Quebec.

ACW Meeting

SOUTH DURHAM — The A.C.W. of St. James Church met at the I.O.O.F. Hall on June 7 with eight members present.

Meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. R. Matthews and a hymn was sung.

Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. As Miss Irene Montgomery, Treasurer, had resigned, a new treasurer was elected, namely Mrs. Muriel Duffy.

Plans for the Ice-cream-Strawberry Social were discussed.

A letter read from the Sec'y of South Durham I.O.O.F. advised us that the Hall is up for sale, therefore the kitchen furnishings, chairs, etc., belonging to the A.C.W. have to be disposed of. Mrs. Helen Carson is to contact Mr. Curtis Chute, antique dealer, to give a value on the lot.

With this business taken care of, prayers were given by Rev. Matthews and the meeting adjourned.

Rev. Matthews invited all to the Rectory on June 20 where she would show slides of The Holy Land.

Successful dinner at playground

FOSTER — On Saturday evening, June 23rd, a barbeque Beef Dinner was held on the playground at Foster when over eight hundred persons were served by the organizers. It was a great success in spite of the inclement weather, as the amount cleared was $3,700.00. Many thanks to the following people who had helped to make the playground with their heavy machinery, all free of charge: Terry Heatherington, Allard and Allard, Ben Menard, Town of Brome Lake and Mr. C. Racicot.

Golf Club opens season

DUFFERIN HEIGHTS (IH) — The first social event at the newly-renovated Dufferin Heights Golf and Country Club House took place the evening of June 30 when the annual barbeque steak dinner was held.

The weatherman provided the usual weekend inclement showers, but this did not keep the steak chefs, Royce Martin and Doug Henderson from barbequing outdoors 185 delicious steaks to perfection as requested by the members and their guests.

Other delicious food was served from the new kitchen and members of the Club served the people at long tables set up in the enlarged dining room.

Later, the Sundown Country orchestra arrived and dancing was enjoyed well into Canada's 112th birthday. The entire evening had been a success and the directors are most appreciative to everyone who supported this project.

Many events are planned before the close of the golf season. One is the auction taking place on August 4, on the Club-house lawn. The committee of Fran Holland, Chairperson, Derby Line; Fred Lilley, Ayer's Cliff; Les Pettigrew, Sherbrooke; James Parrish, Beebe and the Club House are inviting friends to donate worthwhile items. The monies raised will be used towards Clubhouse furnishings.

Sutton Market displays impressive local talent

SUTTON (KT) — Not too good weather perhaps led to a slightly smaller Sutton Saturday Market on June 30. The Painters' Corner continued to enjoy increasing popularity. People are visiting this section and becoming aware that there are some extremely good artists in their midst. They are really looking at the paintings with keen interest and are commencing to recognize the work of a particular artist at first glance. This last Solo Exhibition was by Ron Davies of East Farnham who has recently returned to the area. Mr. Davies studied at The Museum of Fine Arts, Montreal, and exhibited in the United States where he lived for a time. He now exhibits in Montreal on a permanent basis. His work is mainly landscapes with some still life and is characterized by his subdued, soft colours. He is one of the participating artists in the forthcoming Art Auction which will be preceded by an Exhibition on August 18. The two previous Markets were both highly successful and blessed with good weather. On June 16, Gordon Ladd of Knowlton was present with a solo exhibition in the Painters' Corner. Mrs. Eve Gossage, Publicity Director was interviewed by Radio Station C.J.A.D. in the course of the afternoon.

tapestries are handwoven and each pattern has its own meaning - with this overall intensity and brilliance of colour permeating their work.

There were also some hand-carved wooden fruits, some in wood tones but mostly in colour, all finished painstakingly in French polish - pieces that would prove most decorative arranged in baskets.

Among other odds and ends were some dolls making an interesting display of items she described as "quite difficult to bring as much as one would wish home." The proceeds were given by Mrs. Gossage to the Community Events Calendar.

The Solo Exhibition on July 7 was by Denise Gagnon of Cowansville. Her paintings are mainly winter landscapes in pastels in delightfully soft colours. She has a gallery in Montreal.

Many of the exhibitors showing at the Market are competent and serious painters who have outlets other than the Sutton Market, having individual shows or being affiliated with galleries elsewhere.

There was Beetal also at the Market on July 7, which have been bred in the area and proved of interest to visitors.

MORNING PRAYER

God, grant me the gift of patience
When patience is needed.
Let me be able to say the right words
When someone is waiting to hear them.
Give me a sense of humor that perhaps
I may rouse a smile from one who has
Not much reason to smile.
Let me be gentle with those that are old and infirm,
Remembering that one day,
I, too, may need someone who will give me care and understanding.
This, Lord, is my morning prayer.

J.M.B.,
Richmond

IN A POND

I can't say I've seen it all
I felt mornings that wouldn't start
Seen bad bad times that bother
But, hell, don't take it all to heart.

I've worried for my grey hairs,
But when I needed a place to think,
I could see my strange reflections
Where night life comes to drink.

I don't know how I mean this 'Cause the words do slip away,
But the more you get in trouble,
The more God comes your way.

So don't worry about the situation,
If you feel it's wrong don't fall
Trust just like a blind man
And some day you'll see it all.

Straggler

TO YOU FROM ME

As I sit here and look at your picture,
I wonder how good things can be,
Because I know that you know I love you,
That's one of the good things that happened to me.

Since the very first time that I saw you,
I knew that you were meant just for me,
And through the years the feeling grows stronger,
That's one of the good things that happened to me.

I know you feel you can't love me,
But looks speak louder than words,
And when your arms are around me,
I'm lost in a far away world.

Perhaps you think I am crazy,
But that is all right with me,
For being crazy means that I love you,
You're the best thing that's happened to me.

J.E.B.P.,

"NOT GUILTY"

"Not Guilty," said the prisoner,
As they led him from his cell,
"Not guilty, though I killed her."

"She said she never loved me,
Even on the day we wed,
So help me God I loved her,
And now I know she's dead."

"She said she wanted money,
More than she wanted me,
I worked to give her everything
Though nothing she gave me."

"She lied to me and cheated,
No children would she bare,
She brought her lovers home with her,
And said she didn't care."

"I took a knife and killed her,
Her life is on my head
But still I say not guilty,
Praise God I'll soon be dead."

"Not Guilty though I killed her
For she deserved to die
May God forgive me for my sin
I'm ready now -- to die."

BABY SHOES

One tiny baby shoe, preserved with care,
Made of leather, thin and soft and very fine,
Wrinkled, yes, and scuffed from constant wear,
Cared for by loved ones, down through time.

Tiny anklet strap, with button small and round.
A hole chewed by teething gums, in little toe.
Small stitches, where a buckle once was found.
One little shoe, whose mate was lost long, long ago.

Tiny feet, which pattered in uncertain tread,
Marking footsteps in the sands of time.
If I could trace a day, where these busy feet once led,
If, by this shoe, I could but read some sign.

These little feet grew to a man's full size,
And faithfully they served their three score years and ten
Long, work-filled days were taken in their stride,
The happy, living years passed oh, so quickly then.

Tiny baby shoe so worn-endearing to the heart.
My father's baby shoe - Impossible! I say, but true.
Memory-tugging, thought-provoking, from the start,
And mark his babyhood, long after his lifespan was through.

WI Meeting

MELBOURNE RIDGE — The July meeting of the M.R.W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Ernest Wilkins with Mrs. Dianna Taber and Mrs. Neil Fowler as co-hostesses.

The meeting was opened by repeating the Collect in unison. Motto: "When you listen to two witnesses to a car accident, you begin to wonder about history."

Roll call: Tell a reason why you like living in Quebec, which was answered by 14 members, the main reasons being the scenery and the two cultures.

The minutes were read and approved.

Correspondence was thanks for sympathy extended to Billy and Shirley Nelson and from Irene Kerr for a card, also a letter from the Richmond Young Farmers with a request for help for their banquet for the exchange students from Saskatchewan. It was agreed to give them $20.00.

The treasurer's report was read.

Cheer committee, Marg Smith reported sending three cards and two cards were signed by members for shut-ins.

Convenors reports were as follows:

Citizenship - Shirley Johnston had several leaflets and magazines which she gave to members.

Home Economics - Joan Morrison read the outline and asked if members would bring punch recipes without alcohol to the next meeting.

She had a bilingual neck scarf that she passed around with the address to order one if anyone was interested. She reminded everyone to bring their quilted cushion for the inter-branch competition to the next meeting, to be judged.

Publicity - Shirley Fowler read an article about the ways Supermarkets get customers to buy groceries, in the "Protect Yourself" magazines. Noreen Wilkins and Dianna Taber gave a report on the Wales Home birthday party.

The president read a letter from Save the Children asking for sweaters and cardigans to age 16. Also any remnants are welcome.

An outing for the day, on Aug. 15 was planned. It will be to the Dunkin Pottery at Dunkin, Que. All members will take something for a picnic and it will be put together, for a joint lunch.

Members were asked to think of something for the inter-branch competition for 1979, to bring to the next meeting.

Susan Morrison and Wendy Wilkins were given $10.00 each, as they are planning to continue their education.

Pennies for friendship were collected.

Marg Smith read her write-up on Ruth Driver for the History of Pioneer Women, which is being compiled at Macdonald College.

Joyce Gilchrist finished reading her report of the convention at Macdonald College. A member of this branch, Shirley Fowler, won 3rd prize in the J & P Coats competition and 3rd prize on a crewel embroidered picture.

The next meeting will be our annual picnic with members bringing guests, and will be held in Kingsbury at Marion Kerr's.

At the close of the meeting, lunch was served by the hostesses.

Guild meets

FOSTER — The June meeting of the St. James Evening Guild met at the church hall on Thursday evening, June 14.

The president opened the meeting with prayer and welcomed the nine members who responded to the roll call.

Following the reading of the minutes, the treasurer gave a most encouraging report. $243.55 had been realized from the May rummage sale. The card party on May 11th brought in the sum of $128.15 and the dessert card party of May 18th netted $67.55. Mrs. Whitehead handed in $10.00 for the use of the hall for a family gathering.

The president read a letter from Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mann, thanking the Guild for the evening held in their honor. A letter was also read from the director of Camp Garagana. Mrs. Whitehead reported that she had received a cheque for the use of the hall as a polling station in the recent election. She also presented a bill of $10.22 for a new lock on the church.

The July meeting will be hosted by Mrs. Frances Johnson on the 12th.

Mrs. Ethel Marsh won the lucky draw. Mrs. Doreen Gibbs moved the adjournment of the meeting, after which the hostess for the evening, Mrs. Ethel Marsh, served delicious refreshments.

Myrtle Rebekah

Lodge meets

LENNOXVILLE — Prior to the regular meeting of Myrtle Rebekah Lodge 28, an impressive memorial service conducted by Sister Irene Hadlock, in memory of all departed members, was held in Malvern Cemetery on June 20. The flowers were arranged and placed by several Sisters of the lodge.

The readers were Sisters Jessie Purcell, Leslie McLeod and Dorothy Geddes. The prayer was given by the chaplain, Sister Gertrude Beattie. This service in its beautiful setting will long be remembered.

The Noble Grand presided for the regular meeting, welcoming all members, especially Sisters Jeanne Elson and Beatrice Grady.

Correspondence read by the secretary, Sister Luella Brady included an invitation to attend a reception for the Grand Master, Brother Freeman Grant on June 30 in Shawville. Several Thank-you notes were read.

A donation was voted to the Crippled Children's Camp in Ayer's Cliff.

Following the meeting a social hour was enjoyed in the lower hall. Sister Audrey Pratt, a July bride-to-be was presented with a china cake plate from the lodge. With Sister Audrey at the head table were her parents, Bro. Herbert and Sister Rhoda Pratt and members of the executive, Sisters Luella Brady, Dorothy Geddes, Irene Hadlock, Marsha Ross and Glenna Speck.

The heart-shaped cake, iced in pink and white which centred the table was topped with a bridal figurine. Sister Audrey graciously thanked the members for their thoughtfulness in remembering her.

Bernice Bede OsolYour Birthday

July 12, 1979

There will be a more "profitable" than usual market for your talents and knowledge this coming year. You'll know where to find it. Advancement is likely in your chosen field.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to devote some time today to artistic or creative projects. Tasks of this nature will afford you a tremendous amount of pleasure and satisfaction. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If your friends appreciate you even more than usual today, it will probably be due to the fact that you see only their virtues and not their faults. Good going.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Partnership arrangements should prove very fortunate today. Doing things in tandem with your harmonious allies, you'll accomplish what can't be done on your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your willingness to be of service will outdistance your competition. Obligate others to do something nice for you in the future, although this won't be your reason for aiding them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone you know socially can be very helpful in opening doors for you today that you couldn't budge on your own. This person will be delighted to help if asked.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something important you want to have finalized today can be accomplished by using the soft sell. Lay on the charm.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Co-workers will be extremely cooperative today, because they'll know you are willing to do more than your fair share in any endeavor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep a weather eye peeled today. There is financial opportunity about you. Something good could develop from an unexpected source.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your leadership qualities are very strong today, because you lead by example which others are eager to emulate. They know a good thing when they see it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Let your heart, rather than your head, guide you today. The results will benefit everyone, including yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Friends will be looking out for your best interests today. In fact, something very pleasant could occur which might benefit you materially.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your charm and wit are your greatest assets today. Properly used, they could help you easily overcome any competition.

Smile and say nice things.

North decided not to convert his partner's takeout double into a penalty double by passing. After all he was vulnerable and East and West weren't. When play was over he rather wished he had passed because South went down one trick at four spades.

Family reunion held

STANSTEAD (DB) — On Saturday, June 30, the Dewey family held their tenth annual get-together at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Dewey, Stanstead, with 43 attending.

Tables were set up on the porch and after Mrs. Dewey gave the blessing everyone enjoyed a delicious meal of assorted salads, ham and turkey with fresh fruit cups and squares for dessert.

During the afternoon a surprise shower was given Randy Dewey and his fiancée Miss Cate Dowsett when Mrs. Doris Belanger on behalf of the family presented them with a barbecue from Randy's aunts, uncles and cousins.

Mrs. Yvan Bolduc

presented her brother and future sister-in-law with a folding red-wood picnic table and benches and two folding chairs from his parents, brother and sisters.

There was also a shower cake made and decorated by Mrs. Horace Doyon of Stanstead. It was iced in white with pink roses and had a miniature bride and groom on top. Randy expressed his thanks to everyone. Many pictures were taken during the day.

Those attending from a distance were Mrs. Winifred Bilodeau from Bromptonville, Mrs. Bernard Forcier and son Sidney Colin of Rome, N.Y., Mr. Randy Dewey, Miss Cate Dowsett, Miss Anne Belanger and Mr. Terry McKeigue, all of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs.

APIIDAE II-42

Bees belong to the 3rd largest insect order, which also includes wasps and ants. Together these creatures pollinate crops, turn over the soil more efficiently than earthworms, and, in the case of the bee, furnish food in the form of honey. Even more importantly, some members of this order play an other insects, which is the single most important factor in keeping the earth's insect population in check.

The bee's eyes, like those of other insects, differ greatly from man's. They consist of a pair of compound eyes, made up of numerous or sided facets (28,000 in some dragonflies, 4000 in house flies), plus a simple eye, despite which their vision is believed to be sharp only for a distance of about 1 m. Bees, however, are capable of seeing ultraviolet light, which is invisible to man, and since many insects attract their courses by means of the sun, the bee is capable of pinpointing the sun's location, even on a cloudy day by the ultraviolet light thrown off from it and which penetrates the clouds. Honey bees also use the sun as a reference point to communicate to other bees the angle of flight to be followed to arrive at newly discovered nectar-bearing flowers.
