Union Votes $25. to be Used by Miss Barbara McNaughton in China.

The members of the Dewittville W.C.T.U. held their fifth annual social and bazaar on Friday evening at Miss Watt's lawn. The evening was perfect, calm and mild, and there was a large attendance. The booths were all tastefully decorated with evergreens, colored streamers, flags and white ribbon bows. While the fish-pond had a staging of cat-tail and cedar boughs. Every table was left bare before the evening was over, except the fancy work table, on which a few articles remained. The total receipts for the evening with cash from some goods sold later, amounted to $164.98. After all expenses are paid, there will be about $135 remaining. The programme for the evening in charge was Miss Irene McLeod, commenced at 9 o'clock, with Mr. W. R. Riddick as chairman. There were vocal solos, piano duets, violin solos, readings, quartettes etc. Every item on the programme was worthy of honorable mention, but space forbids any detailed comment. Thanks are due to Mrs. Gale, of Potsdam, N.Y., who brought with her a number of artists who added greatly to the merits of the programme. Also are thanks due to a number of people from Rockburn and other places, who responded to Miss McNaughton's appeal for assistance in making the programme a decided success.

A special meeting of the Union was called for on Monday evening, for discussing matters of business. Letters were read from Miss Barbara McNaughton of the Chinese Mission, Field. PERMANENT PACT URGED BY CORBETT

McGill University Dean Would Cover Canadian-American Relations.

Adoption of a frank treaty between Canada and the United States which will carry disputes of every sort to arbitration was urged by Dean P. E. Corbett, of McGill University, international relations expert, at the round-table conference on Canadian-American relations at Williamstown, Mass., Wednesday last.

"Under present conditions," said Dean Corbett, "there are many gaps in the treaty as they now exist, and certain types of disputes are not covered by any treaty. The lack of such a treaty as is proposed does cause a sense of anxiety in Canada, especially among business men, and those whose interest is divided between the two countries."

Public Knowledge.
The text and the nature of the proposed treaty should be familiar to every man in both countries. Then when a ship is sunk, as in the case of the 'Im Alone,' or a state or city refuses to cease violating an obligation, as in the case of the Chicago drainage system, the man on the street will say, 'Yes, I know we are at a dispute with the United States, but there is a treaty which will cover the matter. There is need for such a treaty to safeguard the feelings of the people, and there are times when in Canada there is a great deal of animosity against the United States.'

Referring to the possibilities of the Kellogg pact as covering the situation, Dean Corbett said that its agreed reservations are so little understood, and so much has been written on the matter that very few people have much confidence in it when it comes to specific matters.

OBITUARY

The Late Yvette Lemieux.

The sad death occurred at Valleyfield on July 20, of Yvette, aged 20 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lemieux, Chief of Police and Mrs. Lemieux. The deceased had been in failing health for the past few months, but her death came as a shock to the family.

A number of local clergymen were in attendance, among the soloists, Lucien Nantel, baritone, Gustave Longtin, tenor, and Arthur Michaud, tenor, from the Metropolitan Opera, who assisted the Valleyfield Choir; Fr. The deceased leaves to mourn her loss her father and mother, three sisters, the Misses O. A. and M. Lemieux, three brothers, J. R. Lionel and M. Lemieux.

The death prevents us from giving a list of messages of sympathy, but there were spiritual bouquets to the number of sixty-one; telegrams to the number of seven; ninety-five letters of sympathy; and thirty-six beautiful floral tributes.

Our sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved.

BOARD OF TRADE TO ORGANIZE BIG PICNIC

Picnic to be Held on Labour Day in Holmes' Grove, Port Lewis.

ORGANIZED SPORT.

Band Benefit Movie to be Held in O'Connor Hall in Evening.

On Friday evening a general meeting of the Board of Trade was held in the County Building. The purpose of the meeting was to consider the advisability of holding a Labour Day picnic at Port Lewis. It was unanimously decided to hold the picnic on Sunday, August 18th.

Mr. Robert Holmes of Port Lewis has very kindly granted the use of his beautiful grove to the Board of Trade for the holding of the picnic. It was decided that a number of public men and representatives of corporations and industries in Huntingdon be invited to be present and enjoy the hospitality of the Huntingdon people. The picnic is not to be confined to the Board of Trade members and their families but is to be a community event sponsored by the Board of Trade.

For the benefit of people who have not a way of driving to Port Lewis on Labour Day morning a committee of Messrs. D. J. O'Connor and A. A. Luman were appointed to look after transportation. People who have automobiles can be utilized for that purpose would greatly oblige the committee by communicating to that effect with them. People who would like provision made for them to drive to Port Lewis, would be well advised to communicate with either of the two gentlemen.

Sporting events of one kind and another are to be arranged by Dr. H. R. Clouston and Mr. S. D. Popeck. Races will of course be run and prizes awarded accordingly. The program as to be decided by Mr. J. E. Caxa, ex-President of the Board of Trade.

In all probability the Huntingdon people who are at Port Lewis for the summer will arrange to have boats available for the townspeople. Every effort will be put forth to make the day a real enjoyable one.

Mr. T. S. Gardiner was appointed to take charge of the refreshment booth. No admission is to be charged. It is to be hoped that at least 400 or 500 people will be present.

A Band Benefit.—Huntingdon has been without a band in recent years and the loss has been felt. Not only do we miss our music, but a number of the young men musically inclined have signified their desire to revive the band. The old band has about $25. in its treasury. A number of instruments are to hand as well as the uniforms. It is thought that with a comparatively small amount of money the band could be revived in September. Mr. C. M. Oney is arranging for an instructor and handmaster. On Labour Day evening a first class movie picture is to be screened in O'Connor Hall and the net proceeds from same will be donated towards the band fund.

Mr. J. E. Caxa is planning to the Labor Day picnic and the Band Benefit will be printed in the next issue of the Gazette.

A large company of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. Wallace Templeton, Scotch Concession, Riverfield on August 8th, 1929, to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the coming of the Templeton family to Canada.

For us who are privileged to enjoy the well cultivated farms with all the modern conveniences it is fitting to turn our attention to the days when our forefathers came from the Old Land, hewed out farms from the unbroken forests and settled in what is now a part of our fair Dominion. Many are inclined to say it is better to forget the history of those old days of hard toil and privation, but by doing so to quote the words of the immortal Sir Walter Scott. These early settlers would go down to their graves "unwept, unhonoured and un-sung."

Robert Templeton with his wife Margaret Dickie, his six children and his brother Hugh, came from Dalry, Ayrshire, Scotland, on the ship "Isabel" owned and commanded by his relative Captain Allan, who was the first of the Allan's in the now famous line of Steamships. Mr. Robert Templeton accompanied them to the ship never expecting to see them again.

The Templetons settled in Scotch Concession and endured many hardships common to the pioneers. Janet, their eldest daughter married James Craig; Margaret married James Carmichael and Jean married James McKel. Representatives from these families were present at the celebration.

Robert and John died in early manhood, James, the eldest son married Janet Carmichael and settled on the old homestead.

Of their nine children Jane, Robert and Marion died young. Elizabeth, the eldest daughter married Thos. Kerr; Margaret Dickie married Thomas Stewart and Janet married William Greig. John, the eldest surviving son married Mary Crutchfield and William married Christina MacGregor.

There was a large representation from the families present although of the fathers and mothers, all except two have passed to the Great Beyond.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC PROBLEMS.

A glance at the daily press during the past week shows that questions in connection with liquor have taken the prominent place in the thoughts of public and private individuals. The United States and Canadian governments have appointed representatives to consider the "Im Alone" case. It will be recalled that last spring this rum-runner was sunk far out at sea by a United States coastguard cutter. No one sympathizes with the rum-runner, but the case presented international legal complications which, if ignored, might later on create difficulties for many countries, therefore, two representative citizens have been appointed to arbitrate the question. Marine law is one of the most complicated of the international rules of jurisprudence and the arbitrators will deal with the question, not as involving a rum-runner, but as touching on the international right of pursuit and search.

The rum-running activities along the Windsor frontier continue to attract attention. While the United States prohibition officers are effectively dealing with the problems which have arisen on that frontier, the impression is developing that they are doing a considerable amount of window-dressing, more to convince those far from the border that they are closing up this illicit traffic, than actually scaring the rum-runners out of the business. Much as all hope such is not the case, and that the United States is out to enforce its law, a statement given out at Washington by a high official is rather discouraging. This gentleman claims that much of the liquor cleared through the Customs port of Windsor is brought back into Canada in order to avoid the heavy excise duties levied by the Dominion. Such practices existed some years ago, but on the recommendations of the Royal Commission of Customs, which was headed by Chief Justice Brown, the practice of duty-free exporting was prohibited and full duty is now collected before the goods leave our Customs control. It is obvious that the profits to a bootlegger are now so small when selling in competition with the Ontario Liquor Commission, that few will run the risk. There is also the current knowledge that the bootleggers, while reducing their activities on the Detroit front, are moving along to other ports of the border. In time the two countries will arrive at a satisfactory method of operation, but with the Government at Washington officially admitting that over 201 millions of liquor and drugs are smuggled annually into the United States, Canadians will remain sceptical, until satisfied that officers cannot prevent an illicit trade of such dimensions.

The third item which brings considerable comment is the summary prepared by the Bureau of Statistics on the liquor trade in Canada. This report is for the year 1928 and states the sales by the liquor commissions amounted to $107,694,384. The Dominion, including collections on liquor exports, received a revenue of approximately fifty million dollars in 1928 and the provinces about twenty-three millions. This shows that the drinkers paid $107,000,000 for liquor wholesaling at $34,000,000. The Province of Ontario did practically one-half of the total liquor business of the Dominion, the sales amounting to $49,995,591 in 1928. This statement of the Bureau of Statistics, while an important document, must necessarily err in one respect: it cannot sub-divide the sales between residents and visitors. In the year 1928 there were 11,600,000 American tourists in Canada, who were travelling by auto and in addition 1,600,000 came by rail. While it is true that a large number of these never entered a liquor store, it is undoubtedly true that others made large and frequent purchases. Consequently, our domestic record may not be so bad as the bald figures might imply.

TARIFF AND TRADE.

The present year has been a most active one in the United States in respect to tariff readjustments. Investigations were commenced in January and the inquiries have not been completed. As it is generally assumed that tariff adjusting brings unrest in business and a general slowing down until the matter is settled, it had been expected that business would slacken off. Such has proven to be a mistake, for business conditions in the United States are better this year than last. The explanation may be that the items under discussion deal with upward revisions only, but on the other hand, the sectional division of opinion has been so clearly defined that, with anything possible, everyone might be expected to stand pat until the Senate committee makes its report. However, recent representations made to the committee are to the effect that the most serious dislocation will be felt a year from now, not on the home markets, but abroad. By then the foreign nations will have completed their plans to divert their trade. Whether this is true or not, will remain unanswered until actual experience determines the situation.

LABOUR NOT SO DIFFERENT.

Recent events in England go to show that the MacDonald Government's policies differ little from past administrations. Naturally the present advisers of the King lean towards socialism of many national problems, but they deal with these problems not as destroyers, but as men to improve. Some months ago a Conservative minister refused to see an influential delegation and he was later rebuked in the House by Mr. Baldwin. It created somewhat of a crisis, yet the other day Miss Bondfield, Minister of Labour, had the police forcibly eject some labouring men from her office, and no one thought her action cruel or unconstitutional. Mr. Baldwin, leader of the wealthy political class in England, came to America some years ago and made a deal in respect to war debts which places on the British taxpayer a heavy burden for sixty years. Later, Mr. Balfour—a representative of the same group—made further compromises which added to the tax burden. Now comes Mr. Snowden, representing a Labour government, making a hard fight against the Young plan, declaring it was unfair to British capital and to British rights.

Another interesting situation is in connection with the House of Lords. Years ago it will be recalled Mr. Asquith forced a new division of the taxation fields through the House of Lords by the threat that new lords would be appointed if the existing members did not acquiesce. There was much in the papers about it, civil war even being hinted. To-day, Mr. MacDonald is considering the advisability of appointing a group of lords in order that Labour might have voting strength in the Upper House. Yet no one is objecting. Up to the present Mr. MacDonald has firmly stood by the Labour principal that no man should take precedence in law-making through chance birth, consequently, when called upon to make appointments to hereditary posts, he has always selected an elderly and childless man, thereby securing the abolishment of the title with the death of the recipient. This naturally limits the field of selection and keeps out many good men who would be a source of strength to him.

Times change like mankind and what is considered revolutionary in one decade is accepted as commonsense a few years later. England, having passed through a hot election, picked a group of men to run the country. These men are being given a fair chance to prove their worth and, by their actions up to now, it would appear they are prepared to deal fairly by all and to respect the rights of every group.

AN UNUSUAL LAW CASE.

An unusual law case has commenced in the Quebec courts. It arises out of an automobile accident last Christmas near Hull. A man with his children was driving in a sleigh, which was struck by an automobile, seriously injuring one daughter. One of the reasons for seeking this amount is the allegation that the daughter's chances for marriage are now past. The case has yet to be heard, in fact the defendant has not filed his reply, but if it does come to trial it will be interesting to know what importance the judges place on the matrimonial ambitions of the girl. In Quebec an argument of this nature will carry greater weight than in some other provinces, for in Quebec matrimony and child-bearing loom up larger than in the rule in some other provinces.

Eastward Bound Flight.

The Moncton Transcript recently reported that passengers of the "Homer" told the newspaper reporters at Southampton that when 900 miles off the coast of Ireland they had noted a swan "with neck outstretched and wings flapping, flying 100 feet above the water in the direction of Europe." If this bird started, as it would appear, from the North American coast, it was completing a long journey successfully. While it is hardly possible that the bird knew anything about it, the flight closely coincides with the annual census taking of swans on the River Thames. Twice a year a census is taken of these birds, the last showing there are about 600 birds of this species living in the waters of that noted river. About 300 of the swans belong to the King, the other three hundred being owned by the Dyers and Vintners. While the swans are not kept in captivity, each is marked with the official mark of its owner, and the duty of the census-taking party is to count and "mark" the young swans along with the old birds. The official registry shows over 900 official registration marks, the most noted being that of Eton.

A Real Boy Scout.

Among the 50,000 who attended the great gathering in England last week was a lad who has earned his badge and his trip to real scout work. The London Times describes him as a Doga lad, a Rajput in his own right. He is penniless but, being selected as one of the boys to attend the great gathering, decided that he would make the trip, so, packing his belongings in a bundle he "set off in the blazing heat of India and across almost trackless mountains on foot and successfully made the ninety-five mile journey from Hamirpur to Simola where he joined up with the regular contingent from his part of India."

Lloyd George Not a Politician.

The name is quite correct, and he is a resident of Wales, although not the famous Lloyd George of England. It happens to be his son, Major Lloyd George landed in Liverpool the other day after a tour around the world and the newspapermen asked him if he had not regretted being absent from England during the British elections. His reply rather astounded his listeners: "I was not sorry to be away from it. I leave politics to my father, my brother Gwilym and my sister Megan. Politics are not in my line; I am an engineer." Commenting on the railways of the world Major Lloyd George ranked the Canadian Pacific Railway second only to the more important British lines.

No Sweet-tooth on Isle of Skye.

Before the rural mail routes became general in this part of the country Mr. Stevens, of Dundee, was postmaster for the small post office which served the lake shore road of Dundee and it was officially known as the Isle of Skye post office. Recently when reading a Scotch paper the eye caught the word Isle of Skye and by following down the paragraph it was learned that Aird-of-Sleat at the extreme south of the Island of Skye has secured first rank in Scotland for the condition of the teeth of its inhabitants. The village is isolated and can only be reached by a footpath and, strange as it may seem, does not boast of a dentist. Mr. W. J. Inglis, dental officer of the Inverness-shire Educational Authority, made the official inspection of the teeth of every child attending the school and failed to locate a single tooth showing any decay or defect. In his report he makes this comment: "Many of them do not eat a single sweet from one year's end to another, and the contrast between them and town's children is so marked that it is impossible to overlook the moral."

$24,000,000 From Gasoline Tax.

The new 2 cents a gallon gasoline tax now in force in New York state, thus leaving Illinois as the only state in the Union without a gas tax. The New York authorities expect to collect $24,000,000 from the tax in the coming fiscal year. Of this amount 75 % goes to the State, 20 % to the city of New York, and the remaining five per cent to the counties adjacent to New York city. It cost the state of New York $50,000,000 last year to maintain the public highways.

An Ill-wind Blows Some Good.

Charles Grant owns a farm near Huycks Bay, Prince Edward county, Ontario. It is on the edge of Lake Ontario, and the high water this spring has flooded many of his fields. For a while it looked as though the fields would be a total loss, but Mr. Grant is getting an unexpected harvest. According to the Belleville Intelligencer, carp fish have come into the shallow water in the fields and Mr. Grant is spearing about 400 pounds a day of good fish. The largest fish weigh about 23 pounds. There is a popular demand for this new farm commodity.

A Huge Picnic.

It has long been the practice of New York city politicians to give parties to the children during the summer months and the other day when reading a New York paper, the report was met of such a picnic. At this picnic 20,000 children were the guests of the Monongahela Democratic Club. The children marched to the Park to the strain of eight bands. The report adds: "In the park the children scattered over the meadows, playing games under the direction of fifty-two captains. The children consumed tons of ice-cream, cake, milk, crackers and fruit."

Distance Grows Shorter.

The Hudson Bay Railway is going to make the world smaller according to a writer in the World's Work. He points out that it is 3,300 miles from Liverpool to Montreal, 2,900 from Montreal to Vancouver and 4,900 from there to Yokohama. That is a total of 11,100 miles. But if the trip is made via Hudson Bay Railway it will be only 8,600 miles as it is 2,500 from Liverpool to Churchill, 1,500 from Churchill to Stewart and 4,600 from there to Yokohama. If the same voyage were made via the Suez canal it would be 16,000 miles.

Who Will Rule?

An American solemnly warns the world that within the next 150 years the American continent will be submerged by a race of slaves. He claims that the number of those of slave origin now in the United States will so increase and hold their racial characteristics that they will swallow up all the other races. In another column another gentleman tells the world that 100 years ago twenty million people—spoke English, while 160 millions now speak English as a mother tongue, while an additional 60,000,000 can carry on conversation in English. French has increased from 32 million to 45 million, and German from 32 to 90 million.

Going Back to the Origin.

A few months ago a man by the name of Hebert died. His wife is now taking action against a man by the name of Guertin, a resident of Holyoke, Mass., for $25,000. In the statement of claim which has been filed with the court at Springfield, Mrs. Hebert alleges that the death of her husband was due to the fact that the defendant "sold liquor to her husband which caused him serious illness, resulting in death."

The Number of Missionaries.

The Student Volunteer Bulletin announced that the number of Protestant missionaries, sailing to foreign fields from the United States in 1928 exceeded the number of 1927 by over one hundred. The writer comments on the fact that 1,500 new missionaries are required each year, and that in the past the United States has contributed about four-sevenths of the total. Last year the outgoing missionaries from the United States numbered 697. Despite the increase in 1928 the Bulletin points out that "the average for the past three years has been 23% below the required replacement number."

The Schemes of Snugglers.

The police at Vancouver have been suspecting that drugs were coming off certain boats in the harbour but, for all their watching they were unable to discover the method. Men were searched, and all row boats and launches were watched. The solution was found to be simple. Two men manufactured a five-foot collapsible boat which, when not in use, was hidden up against the underflooring of one of the large docks. Finally the police got wise and as the man paddled under the dock with a cargo of 95 tins valued at $9,500 the officers grabbed him.

$7,900 For $5.00 Gold Coin.

Back in 1849 when the Gold Rush to California filled the imagination of the day, cash money was scarce and sometimes private individuals minted their own coins. Among them was one who engraved on the face a shield of a cowboy throwing a lariat, on the reverse a bear. This coin, while much admired, was valued at $5.00 and was accepted as such, bearing in mind the prices of that day, was not so much. The other day the same coin was put up for auction in New York and an expert, buying for a private collector, secured the coin for $7,900. That is a fairly good return for an investment, even on the basis of compounding interest.

The Age of Democracy.

The King of the Belgians recently paid a visit to the popular summer resort of Ostend and went for a swim in the sea at Mariakerke. Doubtless he had a good swim, but that is not the reason why the papers sent out a report. This is why: "When he returned to the Royal cabin it was discovered that someone had made off with his gold watch, a pocket-book containing 500 francs and a gold penknife." At last curiosity is satisfied as to the amount of money a king keeps in his pocket. The Belgian gold franc is worth about 20 cents.

It Was in Aberdeen.

The Border Cities Star reports this from Scotland. Twenty-one years ago a lady in Aberdeen lost her wedding ring. A diligent search was made over the field, but finally even Aberdeen had to give it up for lost. The other day some people who were working in the field came across the lost ring and have returned it to the owner. It had not been damaged in the long period of exposure and is now serving the purpose for which it was designed.

Alimony Comes High.

The Toronto Telegram reports that Policewoman Mary Phillips has been transferred to other activities. Commenting on Miss Phillips work the paper says that she "has been taking in money from husbands separated from their wives and paying it out to the wives. Ten years ago she handled $22,000 in this manner, and last year it had amounted to $113,000. During her term in the city hall, Miss Phillips handled over $750,000."

This Check Should be Good.

When Henry Ford visited Atlantic City recently to join a gathering commemorating the invention of the incandescent lamp by Mr. Edison he wanted to buy a special stamp. The stamp cost two cents, but Mr. Ford found he had no money on him. He was offered one as a gift, but he wanted to buy it, so borrowed the two cents from Mr. J. F. Quinlan, who was secretary of the celebration. Mr. Ford has now sent his personal check—the first he has written in five years—and it is for the sum of two cents. A man with a statistical turn of mind calculates: "assuming that Mr. Ford took four seconds to sign the check, his income during the time was $6.32, or 316 times the outlay. This computation would be based on reports that Mr. Ford has one billion dollars, which at 5 % would yield him an income of $136,986 a day, $5,707 an hour, $95 a minute and $1.58 a second." What makes it the more complicated, is the fact that Mr. Quinlan does not intend cashing the cheque, instead he is going to spend several dollars in having it framed.

A Double Traffic Summons.

This happened in Chicago. Dr. I. Val Freedman was speeding north in Halstead street to the bedside of a dying patient, when he was stopped by a motorcycle policeman Martyn. The Doctor explained he was hurrying to a patient, but it took an argument of twenty-five minutes before he was allowed to proceed. The patient died and the Doctor wrote a letter to the policeman inviting him to the funeral. The report does not say if Policeman Martyn attended the funeral, but it adds that Dr. Val Freedman was summoned to court and fined $25 for speeding.

Not Enough to go Around.

Washington figures published estimate that $30,000,000 worth of Canadian liquor entered the United States last year. This, no doubt, will be seized upon as an argument that if it weren't for Canadians, who are pandering to the appetites of poor thirsty Americans, there would be no trouble at all in enforcing the Volstead law. But it will be a stupid argument. Thirty million dollars worth of liquor at current prices represents, roughly, about eight million bottles. Considering therefore, that there are 120,000,000 people in the United States, how far would 8,000,000 bottles go—in a year? Actually they would supply about two drinks in twelve months for each American adult. The truth of course, is that the liquor that goes over the Canadian border into the United States comes from every point of the compass. And what they don't import they make. If anybody doubts this let him read some of the evidence about stills, and so forth, that was given before a senate investigating committee last year—Ottawa Journal.

Jasper Rockies Older Than Alps.

The mountains of the Maligne Lake, Jasper National Park, are older than the Alps, according to the findings of the Harvard University summer school of geology which has just closed five weeks' investigation in this territory. "It was the most successful course we ever held," said Prof. Kirtney F. Mather, who heads the group of 22 students. "This is a remarkably fine region geologically and we were faced with many interesting problems, particularly with regard to the glaciers."

Many Outstanding And New Features At C. C. Exhibition

Every Indication Points to Success That Will Surpass
All Previous Efforts. Some Of The Big Attractions.

For the Ottawa exhibition, which will open on Monday, August 19, for an entire week, the claim is made that there are more new and outstanding features than there have been in any previous year. In addition, grounds and buildings have undergone extensive improvements, and with the large number of entries received for the various departments, every indication points to a success that will eclipse all previous efforts.

Creators and his hand will be heard in two concerts daily from the grandstand, no extra charge being made for this stellar attraction. The programs are such as to appeal to all music lovers. Creator is unique as a band conductor. He dominates his band so that it plays as one immense organ, and in addition to Miss Pauline Palma, soprano, there are a number of instrumental soloists who will be heard during the programs.

Headed by five or six Indian chiefs, with their picturesque head-dresses of eagle feathers, about forty-five Indians will be seen in a typical Indian village, with birch bark tepees and the primitive modes of living. Papooses will be seen on the backs of their mothers or in swinging cradles. The tribes will execute war dances and, with the aquatics, will make all kinds of Indian handicrafts. This village has been arranged through the co-operation of the Department of Indian Affairs to give the younger people in particular an opportunity to see the Indians of whom they have read.

Gold and tropical fish will be on other novel and educational display. Anson H. Pratt will have seventy-five aquariums and a large pool in the Horticultural building, showing possibly the greatest collection now in Canada. The fish will range from gold fish twelve inches long right down to the mosquito fish, half an inch in length.

In Front of Grandstand.
The big music and dance revue will be the outstanding offering in front of the grandstand. This will be presented by a large cast of New York artists, mostly girls, with special costumes, stage, light effect and amplifying system. High class vaudeville and horse races will be included in the grandstand program, while for the closing day of the week the program will be augmented by sports. Phil Edwards, the fast Olympic star, will be among the entrants.

Capt. L. E. Maynard, instructor for the Ottawa Flying Club, will be seen daily in aerobatics. Capt. Maynard is in a class by himself as a daring stunt performer, and his maneuvers make spectators fairly gasp.

New Arrangements.
An entirely new arrangement for the midway is expected to be a marked improvement. Here will be found the latest in riding devices and high-class shows. Notable in the midway offerings will be Silver King, the motion picture dog.

In the other features may be mentioned the dog show, live stock and poultry, automobile show, pure food show, child welfare and baby show, experimental farm and government exhibit, Bermuda exhibit, farm and dairy machinery, hobby show, free horse show in the Coliseum, live stock parades, motor boat races, display by merchants and manufacturers, and handicrafts and arts.

There is an exceptionally large sale of coupon tickets, which give five admissions for one dollar, effecting a saving of seventy-five cents. These are now available at the exhibition office, in many stores, and in the various branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia, but will not be sold after the opening of the exhibition.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.
A series of happy surprises await the traveller on his first visit to the Maritime Provinces. Then he will see how well-merited is Prince Edward Island's title of "The Garden of the Gulf," then will marvel at the beauties of sea and sky and forest in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, thrill to the tug of war fish that abound in these waters, glory in the silver beaches and pine-scented breeze. There are ideal resorts here for all tastes in vacations, with comfortable hotel and boarding-house accommodation, foremost among which is the famous Pictou Lodge at Pictou, N. S.

Canadian National service reaches all points in the Maritimes. Consult any Canadian National Agent for details regarding hotels and train service.

GIVE ALL THE CHILDREN A CHANCE.

It is accepted in all civilized countries that every child should be given a chance to develop the physical and mental capacities with which he is born. Some children start out in life with a considerable handicap. If they are born into a poor family, food may be scarce or of questionable quality, the home may lack sanitary conveniences, there may be overcrowding, lack of play-space, and many other additional disadvantages. The children born into a wealthy home may be equally unfortunate, because we often find in the homes of the well-to-do, children who are not living healthy lives. This is chiefly the fault of the parents who spoil the child.

The best thing which can happen to any child is to have parents who know something about child training. Love of children and a desire to do the most for them do not take the place of knowledge. We would not think of entrusting the operation of a machine, or the erection of a building or bridge to a man who was merely ignorant, to run the machine or to build the structure. We place such duties in the hands of a person who has been trained to do the particular type of work.

Parents do not know by instinct the proper way in which to bring up a child. Some of them do gain knowledge from experience, and some of them are willing and anxious to learn from others. The upbringing of a child is a serious and, sometimes, a difficult matter. If it is to be done properly it requires training and preparation for the task. To the person who feels that our ancestors got along very well and reared families without training we can only say that the number of unhappy individuals, the number of criminals, the number of themselves to life, the many who find life a burden, the group who are a nuisance to others, to say nothing of the few who have real mental and physical health, are ample proof that the old system was not a success.

Parent Education is a real need; it is not a fad but an evidence of the importance of proper preparation in order to ensure that all children shall be given their chance.

HOWICK

A violent storm with rain, hail, thunder and lightning passed over this district on Sunday evening, without doing much damage, although it is reported that hailstones fell three inches in circumference. The rain was much required and will help the ripening grain and corn crop as well as roots.

Citizens in this section who are easily aroused from sleep were awakened on Monday morning about 6 o'clock by the tremor felt from an earthquake which seemed to continue for about a minute or more. A very indistinct rumbling sound was heard. The ground surrounding the new United Church building have been greatly improved by the removal of the old storage building from the front to the rear of the property, where it is out of sight from the front view. The property now shows a line of green trees, following the course of the bank of the English River from the Howick bridge.

With the prospect of a large yield of hay this season, most of the farmers have shipped their old hay and the number of stacks scattered through the district have disappeared. There are several fine fields of second growth clover to be seen here and there ripening for clover seed, which the bees are enjoying.

THE CANDY PARTY

For the centrepiece of your dining table, build a log house of sticks of candy. The end pieces and poles may be made of peppermint sticks, and the roof of peanut brittle, as it is brown, and will look more like a real roof. Scatter peppermint dolls about the table, and when the children leave, each one may have a candy doll to take home as a souvenir. These dolls are made of sticks of candy with a face painted on one end, and wear crepe paper dresses and bonnets. Any kind of a candy animal may be secured at a five-and-ten-cent store.

Home-made candies, of course, are the order of the day, an old-fashioned candy pull may wind up the party.

Game of Favourite Candies.

What candy is a favourite of a dairy-maid?—Buttercups.

What candy is a favorite of a debutante?—Bugs.

What candy is a favourite of a dentist?—Gumdrops.

What candy is a favourite of a flatterer?—Taffy.

What candy is a favorite of an historian?—Dates.

What candy is a favourite of a lover?—Kisses.

What candy is a favourite of a milkman?—Creams.

What candy is a favorite of a schoolmaster?—Sticks.

What candy is a favourite of a slangy girl?—Fudge.

What candy is a favourite of a treasurer?—Mint.

What candy is a favourite of old ladies?—Comfits.

BLACK SPOTS ON BEANS.

Anthracnose is a very common disease among beans, especially during a damp season. The fungus shows itself in black spots on the pods and does not add to the quality nor the appearance of the vegetable. One should keep away from the beans during wet weather, or when the dew is on them, as brushing past the plants at this time will spread the fungus. Removal of the affected pods when first noticed will help check the spread. The disease pods should be destroyed.

CALL YOUR DOCTOR EARLY.

(By Dr. Gordon Bates, General Secretary, Canadian Social Hygiene Council.)

A little boy sat beside a window, with his head on his hands. He seemed quite indifferent to the shouts of the other youngsters, at play in the street. He looked very miserable.

Now usually, when a little boy doesn't want to go out and play, his mother knows that something's the matter. If she is a rather careless mother she may just do nothing, and let him sit there, feeling miserable. Or she may give him a dose of castor oil, or send him to bed, or both. But if she is an intelligent mother she will send for the doctor at once, before her child has a chance to get very sick. By doing that, she may save his life.

Little Jim's mother was intelligent, and she loved her child. So before long a car stopped at the house and a big man came in with a little satchel. Several minutes passed, then "Now I don't think you have anything to worry about," the doctor said. "Diphtheria all right, but he'll come around thanks to your promptness in sending for a doctor. If you'd waited for another twelve hours before securing medical attention for him, it might have been a different story. As it is, his recovery will be much faster, thanks to your alertness."

Now this story, which happens to be absolutely true, about real people, has a moral. And the moral is, don't guess about disease. Don't take a chance. Think Safety First about disease just as you think it about accidents. How can you tell what a disease "feels like" may mean. Little Jim's mother didn't know he had diphtheria when she called the doctor. How could she tell? But she didn't take a chance. She called up the one man in the community who could tell what was the matter with her child—her doctor. And by her promptness she possibly saved that child's life.

When you get sick, get a doctor before you get very sick. Over a lifetime such a policy will save you money as well as misery—and it will be a longer lifetime.

Of course, Jimmy's mother might have done still better than she did. She might have absolutely prevented him from getting diphtheria, by taking him to a doctor months before, when he was perfectly well, and having toxoid administered to him, just as she had him vaccinated against smallpox. But failing to do that, she did the next best thing. She called the doctor early and saved a life.

This article is not written to frighten anyone. On the contrary, it is hoped that of those who read it, some at least will find new security, new protection against disease by cultivating the habit of calling upon their physicians when slight physical trouble begins to bother them, just as a sensible motorist takes his car to the garage when the engine develops a little knock, instead of waiting until the bearings are burned out.

Remember, a so-called "simple" sore throat may be the beginning of scarlet fever or diphtheria. A plain, ordinary little cough, or a high temperature may herald pneumonia, tuberculosis, or typhoid fever. A pain in the stomach today may mean acute appendicitis tomorrow. Any one of a number of "simple" little discomforts may be signs of the beginnings of any of a dozen diseases.

SEASONABLE GARDEN WORK.

This month all plants will need plenty of water, and where the water supply is limited, the ground should be kept well cultivated.

All clippings from the lawn should be used for mulching around large shrubs and trees, especially those newly planted. In watering the lawn, it is most effective if done in the evening, as then it does not evaporate with the heat and keeps the ground cool all night.

It is time now to begin feeding many plants with manure water, especially Marrows, Tomatoes, Sweet Peas, Cauliflower, and late garden Peas. House plants will benefit with a little plant fertilizer, and soot water will help keep the Ferns green. This is also a good fertilizer for house Palms, and most foliage plants.

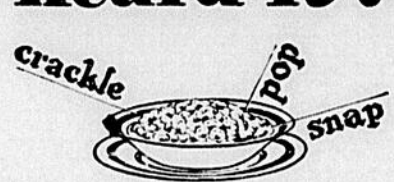

It is time now to layer good varieties of Carnations. Shoots are split with a sharp knife and pegged down, then covered with fine, sandy soil, into which they soon root. You can also layer Clematis now in the same manner, by pegging down shoots, or Roses, and many shrubs. Sometimes it is possible to root large branches by layering them into a box, and treating them as shown for Carnations.

Roses, Hydrangeas and many plants will root easily in a glass of water at this time. Have you ever tried this way?

Time now to root cuttings of Geraniums for flowering next Winter in the winter garden. Set this in a pot of sandy soil, water, and place in a shady spot to root.

Don't forget to make successional sowings of Lettuce, Radishes, Spinach and Cress. Choose a place where the soil is rich, so that there is quick growth, and tender salads. If the ground is very dry, open the drills with water, and let this soak into the ground, to get a quick germination.

In the store or on the phone, always ask for Christie's Biscuits The Standard of Quality Since 1853

Sow the seed in the wet soil and cover over. This is a good idea for all summer-sowing.

Do you plant American Land Cress in your garden? It is a fine salad, and you can sow seeds now for fall and next spring supply.

Water Cress is another thing you can grow in the garden, if you can give a good soaking of water two or three times a week. Grow this in trenches, same as celery, about six inches deep with rich soil at bottom, and keep watering it as much as possible, so that bottom of the trench is always moist then you will be able to get fresh Water Cress at any time. You can start your supply by getting a few roots from a stream, or from seed.

Another good salad is Mustard and Cress. A good way to keep this clean, and to get nice, tender Cress is to sow the seed on a piece of old sack, spread on the ground, and keep it well watered at all times.

Time now to begin seed sowing for next year. Sow seeds of Early Cabbage, Broccoli, Snapdragons, etc., for wintering through in coldframes, and shelters. It is still time to sow Perennials, Sweet Williams, Canterbury Bells, Iceland Poppies, and time to transplant early-sown seedlings.

If you are growing any Sweet Peas, it is a good plan to remove seed pods if you wish to get many flowers.

Lake Clear, N.Y., Hikers at Port Lewis—

Saturday saw to girls disembark from the N. Y. C. train. The girls with packs hiked for Port Lewis and camped in Mr. Holmes' grove. The unfavourable weather made it unpleasant, and they slept in Dubois' barn, declining to accept house accommodation. The hikers are those who call themselves camp at Lake Clear, N. The local staff of the Bank of Montreal entertained to a surprise party at Mr. Sparrow's camp, Wylie's Point, on Tuesday evening, the guests of honor being Mr. Emile Fournier, whose marriage takes place shortly. HOW ONE WOMAN LOST 28 LBS. OF FAT

This headline is exactly true and means just what it says. Read her own letter: "I take a daily dose of Kruschen and I have lost two inches round the waist and hips and 28 lbs. since last summer. I feel very well on it, and people tell me I look very fit. I am 5 ft. 4 ins. in height, 40 years old, and come of a stout family."

Miss E. L. If you are fat, first remove the cause. When your liver, kidneys and bowels can't throw off that poisonous waste material which is always accumulating in your body—before you realise it you are growing hideously fat. Take Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning. In three weeks you will get on the scales and note how many pounds of fat have vanished. Notice also how you have gained in energy and health. Your skin is clearer, your eyes sparkle with glorious health. You feel younger in body, keener in mind. Kruschen will give many fat people a joyous surprise.

VALLEYFIELD

Valleyfield young ladies visit Port Lewis for vacation. All we need to make Port Lewis popular is a board walk, dancing pavilion and talking pictures, then we are all set. In spite of facilities they may desire, there are splendid opportunities for bathing, and bungalow accommodation is very reasonable, even if they do pull up the sidewalks at night and take them in.

These Valleyfield young ladies, Misses Emily and Eva Talbot, Annie Mayoh and Miriam Ainsworth are spending two weeks at this growing health resort and doing all for themselves. However, the best laid plans of mice and men sometimes go wrong and so it happened that one good motor man brought news to Valleyfield that in the hurry to reach Port Lewis by special car some trifles had been overlooked. Trifles such as table-napkins, films, cheese and so on.

We certainly hope they have a good time and come back in high spirits much benefited by their experience.

DUNDEE

On Wednesday afternoon the members of the Dundee Women's Institute held their August meeting at the Community Hall. There was a good attendance of members and visitors.

It was decided to proceed at once with repairs to the school. The publicity convenor announced the beginning of a provincial publication for the Institutes and asked for a good response from the members for subscription. Conveners of Canadian Industries, Immigration and Home Economics reported features along their several lines of work. Mrs. McPhee read a paper on Our Labor Saving Devices. She contrasted the old methods of work with the new in all spheres of home life. In spite of these devices we are just as busy as ever were, but she stated in closing that none of us would ever go back to old systems or desired to do so.

Many members showed articles which they use in their kitchens which are of value to them. All members were dressed in their house dresses and many told the story of the making or obtaining of the different dresses. Mrs. Wm. Fleming demonstrated a wireless cooker and others recommended it to the women as of value. The roll call was responded to with One More Labor Saving Device. The meeting closed with O. Canada. Mrs. J. "After two?" Miss Manning repeated. "I did not wait until after two. I called at five minutes of two, and Mr. Borden answered the phone himself. He again promised to see his lawyer Monday."

"Just a minute!" McMann cut in sharply. "Suppose I tell you what happened! You came to the Star-bridge Building to see Borden again, after you made your first call."

"That's not true!" the woman cried. "Shut up and listen to me!" the detective commanded harshly. "You came here, knocked on Borden's door, he asked you if it was you, answered, he recognized your voice, refused to admit you, you determined to see him or talk with him somehow; you remembered that John C. Hayward's office lies directly across the airshaft from Borden's; you went to his door, possibly to ask him to use his phone, even to solicit his aid in forcing an interview for you with Borden!"

"No, no, that's not true! None of it is true!" Martha Manning cried passionately, rising from her chair in her excitement.

The detective's mighty voice plowed through her protestations: "You didn't find Hayward in but because his cleaning woman was careless; you found his door unlocked; you called, telephoned Borden, quarreled violently with him for two minutes after two until two-ten, learned that he would do nothing for you—wait!" He commanded roughly, and forced the agitated woman into a chair with ruthless hands. "I even know the exact words with which he refused your demands, Miss Manning! Harry Borden said to you: 'Who are you to tell Harry Borden what he can do and can't do?' A witness overheard Borden say those exact words, Miss Manning!"

"But not to me!" she cried, but she sat still again, except for those twisting hands, watching the detective's face.

"And then," McMann went on inexorably, "you remembered the in-exhaustible, 'you' which the bottom of Mr. Hayward's desk, the first time you were in his office, you called Harry Borden from Hayward's desk, the first time you were in his office. You called Harry Borden from Hayward's window, he stepped to his own window, after that, during the weapon with which he armed himself against an attack he evidently feared, and—you shot him, his bullet going wild and hitting the wall beside Hayward's window."

Oddly, as the detective's charge piled up against her, the woman became more and more calm. When he had finished his terrible harangue, she raised her head and her eyes met his fully, steadily, though her face was ghastly white around the route spots.

"Mr. McMann, you are merely trying to bully me into confessing a crime I did not commit. You cannot possibly have any proof to back your absurd charges. I will gladly face anyone who can bring forward who will say that he or she saw me in this building on Saturday. You know you cannot bring forward such a person, for I was not here."

At the supreme confidence behind those quietly emphatic words, the last of Ruth's hopes of this clearing the man she loved vanished—or almost vanished. For if Martha Manning had not so used Jack Hayward's office, who had?

McMann, tacitly admitted his lack of proof by not answering her challenge, considered for a long moment, then said, with a shrug of his massive shoulders: "Well, where do you say you were? Got your alibi all framed up, I suppose? First, where do you say you were when you made that second telephone call?"

"I called from a booth in a cigar store," Martha Manning replied calmly, and named it. "And I called at five minutes to two, as I told you. After my conversation with Mr. Borden, I was sure he would do as he promised, and I went directly to the park, where I walked or sat on benches reading, until half-past four, when I returned to the Acropolis, arriving about 15 or 20 minutes to five."

"Any proof that you were in the park? See anyone you knew? McMann asked sarcastically.

Martha Manning smiled— that strange, ironic smile that deepened the bitter lines between nostrils and mouth corners. "A lone woman, practically friendless, is not likely to encounter acquaintances in the park."

"I thought so!" McMann commented with grim ambiguity. Then he strode to the door and curtly requested Rita Dubois to enter.

The little dancer showed signs of the strain under which she had lived during at least 24 hours, but there was a trace of the old jaunty as she sauntered into the room.

"Old home week for Handsome Harry's sweeties, est pas?" she laughed, as her bright, young, black eyes took in the older woman.

"You recognize Miss Manning?" McMann asked quickly.

"No—just a natural conclusion," the dancer informed him. "Keep your feet, baby-face," she grinned at Ruth Lester, who had risen to offer her chair. "I'm sure Mr. McMann won't keep me long."

She was right. In a series of rapid questions McMann elicited the following story regarding Friday night: She had had dinner at the Carillon with Borden, and had seen Jake Bailey join her "sister" on the sidewalk before the restaurant. Borden had joined her at 10 o'clock at the Golden Slipper night club and had arranged with the manager for her to have the night off on Saturday, so that she could go away with Borden on the week-end trip to Winter Haven.

Throughout the questioning of Rita Dubois, the last woman to whom Borden had given his fickle love, Martha Manning sat with downcast eyes, and when the dancer had been sent back to Detective Covey, a tremulous sigh of relief stirred the bitter mouth of the older woman.

The detective sat for long minutes, making futile marks with his pencil on Borden's desk blotter. Then, at last, "I'm going to let you go now, Miss Manning, but I warn you if you try to leave the city you shall be detained and arrested."

"I shall not leave the city," Martha Manning promised quietly, and left, but not before she had smiled mistily, with her great tragic eyes and bitter mouth, at Ruth Lester.

"Nothing to hold her on—now," McMann grumbled in self-defense to Ruth. "But Lord! What's all the commotion?"

For the second time during the investigation into the murder of Harry Borden, Benny Smith, the office boy, tore open the door, stood swaying in the doorway, and said: "I've come to give myself up. I shot Mr. Borden!"

CHAPTER XLIII.

Ruth Lester was miserably ashamed later to remember that her first emotion upon hearing Benny Smith say he had shot Borden was one of relief. Jack Hayward was saved! But that emotion was almost instantly submerged in pity. And she was glad later to remember that she was conscious of no horrified shrinking as she ran to put her arms about the unsteady swaying body who had just confessed to murder.

"Here! Let me help!" McMann gruffly commanded the girl, and with as much ease as if he were lifting a baby the giant detective lifted the boy in his arms and carried him to the big, overstuffed leather chair from which the murdered man had manipulated his ruinous schemes and which for two days had served the detective in charge of the investigation into his murder as a vantage point from which to heckle, harass, bully and confound suspects.

When the boy was lying back weakly in the big chair, McMann whirled one of the straight-backed visitors' chairs to the desk and commanded Ruth Lester's services as a stenographer, to take down the confession. Her eyes were now so blinded with tears that she could hardly find her notebook and pencils upon which Benny himself had put such a fine brave edge just last Saturday.

"Ready, Miss Lester?" All right, Benny. Tell us all about it now," the detective commanded, almost gently. A glass of cold water from the tap in the outer office had been fetched by Benny, and he handed it to her. "Well, sir," Benny began, after a strange, wistful look at Ruth Lester, who waited with poised pencil. "I lied yesterday when I said I didn't come back. I did come back, but nobody didn't see me, 'cause I walked up."

"Why did you walk up, Benny?" McMann interrupted. "Cause I was sore at Mr. Borden, 'n I—I wanted to have it out with him," Benny answered, his adolescent voice going suddenly soprano on the last word.

"What were you sore about?" "Cause he—he bawled me out!" Benny cried, rolling his head from side to side against the brown leather back of the chair.

"Isn't it true that you were more sore at him because he'd 'got fresh' with Miss Lester Saturday morning?" the detective suggested.

"You keep Ruth's name outa this!" Benny protested shrilly. "I tell you—I was sore at Mr. Borden, 'cause he was always pickin' on me, 'n Saturday he talked to me like a dog, 'n 'cause I wanted to borrow Ruth's pistol for target practice."

"Then you were also lying when you said the pistol was not in Miss Lester's desk when you returned the first time—at half-past one?" McMann asked.

"Naw—I wasn't there, 'n say, I didn't come back up the second time to kill him—"

"But you walked up six flights of stairs so you would not be seen entering the building," McMann pointed out grimly. "Listen, Benny, now that you're confessing, make one clean breast of everything. Your actions prove you premeditated murder."

"No, I didn't!" Benny denied, his head rolling wildly against the chair back, as he made the denial.

"Well—go on!" McMann directed resignedly.

"I come back, like I said, and opened the door with my key," Benny began rapidly, and was again interrupted by McMann.

"At what time?" "I—I—Benny looked pitifully confused. "I don't know—exactly. Bout 2 o'clock, I reckon—"

"No—just a natural conclusion," the dancer informed him. "Keep your feet, baby-face," she grinned at Ruth Lester, who had risen to offer her chair. "I'm sure Mr. McMann won't keep me long."

She was right. In a series of rapid questions McMann elicited the following story regarding Friday night: She had had dinner at the Carillon with Borden, and had seen Jake Bailey join her "sister" on the sidewalk before the restaurant. Borden had joined her at 10 o'clock at the Golden Slipper night club and had arranged with the manager for her to have the night off on Saturday, so that she could go away with Borden on the week-end trip to Winter Haven.

Borden had had to pay in advance for Rita's substitute, but he had seemed in the best of spirits. No, he had not said a word to her about Martha Manning, or concerning a visit from a woman earlier in the evening.

"Then—" McMann said parenthetically and triumphantly to Ruth, "my theory that Rita Dubois robbed the body is correct." Then, remembering the mysterious telephone call, a fragment of which Bill Cowan had said he overheard when he had called Jack Hayward's number at 2:10 and was plugged in on a busy line, and Rita's corroborating story of Borden's line being busy from 2:05 to 2:15, the detective asked: "Have you any way of fixing the exact time of your second return, Benny?"

The boy looked at the detective suspiciously, even fearfully. Ruth thought—though what could he fear now, after confessing? "Naw, I don't know, I tell you, but it was about two o'clock. At all I know, I unlocked the door and came in and Mr. Borden was sittin' at his desk, 'n I—I come right in here, 'n we—we quarreled."

"What about?" the detective interrupted sharply.

"Aw—just about him pickin' on me, 'n—everything! 'N he picked up a—his fevered eyes roved over the desk and lighted upon the glass ink well, empty now, since McMann had used its contents with which to take Martha Manning's fingerprints—"that there ink well and started to throw it at me, 'n I grabbed Ruth's gun—"

"Wait! Just where was this gun?" McMann cut in.

"Lay on the desk," Benny answered. "Right—right here!" and he laid his hand in the center of the big green blotter. "The big stiff tried to beat me to it—'n I thought he was doin' it, but this time he said, 'I've come to give myself up. I shot Mr. Borden!'"

"After hitting you with the ink well?" McMann asked mildly.

"He—he put the ink well down," Benny amended desperately. "'N I—I pulled the trigger, 'thout knowin' what I was doin', 'n—the gun went off—'n 'at's all!" he concluded, seizing the glass for a long draught of the cold water.

"So you shot Borden while he sat at his desk," McMann said slowly.

"'Yeah, at's right!" Benny retorted defiantly.

"Then how do you account for the fact that his body was found away over there under the airshaft window?" McMann demanded.

"I—I forgot that," Benny confessed. "But—say, don't you go and try to make me say I didn't kill him 'cause I did! I—I did it in self-defense," he added, obviously a little proud of his use of a legal phrase. "After I shot him, he got up and walked over there and fell down—at's how I account for it!"

The detective extracted an official-looking typed document from his pocket. As he unfolded it, Ruth read the printed letterhead: "Office of the Chief Medical Examiner, Department of Police." McMann studied the detailed report in silence, then folded it slowly and returned it to his pocket.

"Now, Benny, you know it can't make any difference in the long run whether you shot Borden while he was standing at that window. Come, now—just where was Borden when you shot him?"

"Settin' at his desk!" Benny repeated stubbornly, and began to cry, like a small boy, and not at all like the 17-year-old young man-about-town that he fancied himself to be.

"And Benny," McMann's voice was very gentle now—how many times did you shoot Borden? How many bullets were fired?"

"Just one! I—I sorta come to when I see what I'd done, 'n I dropped the gun 'n beat it—"

Just one bullet! Ruth repeated to herself. And two bullets had been fired on Saturday, one imbedding itself in Borden's chest, and the other scarring a brick beside Jack Hayward's

But Benny's mother waited for no permission when I'd done, 'n I dropped the gun 'n beat it—"

The boy stared at her, frankly puzzled. "Naw—why should I?"

"I thought so! Oh, Benny! Why are you doing all this? For my sake, Benny?" the girl cried, her voice shaking. Jumping up from her chair at the desk, she abandoned her notebook and pencil and ran to the boy. "I know you're just making it all up, Benny darling! Why, why?"

"He—he—at detective"—Benny sobbed—"told me yesterday I'd better come clean, or you—you'd be arrested for murder."

"Oh!" Ruth cried, her blue eyes blazing scorn at the embarrassed detective. Then, to the boy, soothingly: "Dear Benny, I told you yesterday I was in no danger—"

"But after he'd sent you for Minnie, he said you was, 'n just didn't know it, 'n all last night 'n this mornin' I studied how I could get you out of it, 'cause I'm just a kid 'n they wouldn't letrocute me—"

The boy broke off, sobbing heart-brokenly.

The boy broke off, sobbing heart-brokenly.

The door opened. "Mrs. Smith's here, sir—"

But Benny's mother waited for no permission when I'd done, 'n I dropped the gun 'n beat it—"

The boy stared at her, frankly puzzled. "Naw—why should I?"

"I thought so! Oh, Benny! Why are you doing all this? For my sake, Benny?" the girl cried, her voice shaking. Jumping up from her chair at the desk, she abandoned her notebook and pencil and ran to the boy. "I know you're just making it all up, Benny darling! Why, why?"

"He—he—at detective"—Benny sobbed—"told me yesterday I'd better come clean, or you—you'd be arrested for murder."

"Oh!" Ruth cried, her blue eyes blazing scorn at the embarrassed detective. Then, to the boy, soothingly: "Dear Benny, I told you yesterday I was in no danger—" office window!

"So you dropped the gun, eh, Benny?" McMann asked gently. "Odd we didn't find it—"

"I—I picked it up again 'n stuck it in my overcoat pocket," 'n then I beat it down the stairs," Benny corrected himself feverishly, shrilly.

"I—gosh, I was scared! I—I wrapped the gun in a newspaper what I—I found on the stairs—I mean in one of them big sacks in the hall, what the cleaning women use to dump wastebaskets in—'n I—I chucked the gun in a—a big trash can on the sidewalk—"

"Where?" McMann interrupted.

"I—I don't remember. Aw, gee, Mister, what does all them things matter now? Ain't I told you I done it?" the boy pleaded, wiping his eyes on the sleeve of his coat.

"Benny, after you'd—shot Borden, did you go around to Mr. Hayward's office for any reason whatsoever?" Ruth interrupted with a question of her own.

these folks!" she scolded the boy sharply, but Ruth knew that the sharpness covered acute maternal anxiety. "I mighta known you'd pull some stunt like this, minute my back was turned!"

Then she whirled upon Detective Sergeant McMann. "Are you the detective, mister?" "Well, I hope you're satisfied! You and your third-degree have run my boy's fever up till it's something awful! I didn't get this poor child rave about keepin' Miss Lester out of jail! The doctor and my girl-friend, Mrs. Thompson, who helped me set up with him and hold him in bed, can tell you how he took on—'ravin' in fever, he was—about confessin' so this Lester girl wouldn't have to go to jail—"

"Please, please, Mrs. Smith!" McMann at last succeeded in stopping the torrent of words. "I'm very sorry indeed if anything I said to Benny yesterday gave him the impression that I was about to arrest Miss Lester. Now, I think we'd better call an ambulance and have this boy taken to the hospital. I'm afraid he's a pretty sick youngster."

After Benny, who had lapsed into a fever stupor, had been removed on a city hospital ambulance stretcher, the whole proceeding frantically recorded by newspaper cameras outside the Borden suite, a wet-eyed girl faced a flushed, penitent detective across the dead man's desk.

"Pretty rotten, I know," McMann admitted defensively, dropping his eyes to the sheaf of notes he was shuffling between his thick fingers, "but if the police didn't use old-fashioned methods occasionally, we wouldn't solve half the crimes we do. Don't like 'em myself, but—"

He paused and shrugged. "Leaves us pretty much where we were before Benny burst in on us, doesn't it?"

If you'll pardon my language, Miss Lester, this is a hell of a case! Of course I knew the kid was lying before he'd been confessing five minutes! Well, better go to lunch, child. It's after one—bye to George! It's half-past!"

Ruth rose, her notebook with its stenographic report of Benny's chivalrous lies held against her breast tenderly. She would transcribe every word of them, keep the record always. "And—may Mr. Hayward go with me?"

"Well, darling," Ruth said, after she and Jack Hayward had deposited lightly burdened against a table in a far corner of the cafeteria, "this has been a busy morning! Net result—a confession!"

"What!" Relief flared in the young insurance broker's eyes. "Why didn't you tell me as soon as we met?"

Contrition sobered Ruth's vivid little face. "For goodness' sake, I've raised your hopes, just to dash them. It was just Benny—lying like the darling little idiot that he is, because he thought McMann was going to ar-

"You're a siren and a candle snatcher," Jack told her severely. "It's a good thing I'm going to marry you and withdraw you from circulation. Any other developments this morning?"

Smiling delightedly, the girl told her sweetheart of Cleo Gilman's stimulating visit and his ludicrous effect upon poor old McMann. "I really believe, Jack," she concluded, "that if Cleo hadn't just married one of the most uppy of the Upper Ten, that our detective department's shining light would have tried to date her up. He may do it yet. But I wasn't making any idle boast last night when I said I was going to take charge of the murder investigation this morning." And then she told him of her visit to Mrs. Borden and to Minnie Cassidy, resulting in the discovery of the orchid-tinted letter in the secret drawer of Borden's desk.

She: "Are you going to take me for a ride tonight?"

He: "No, I'm sorry; I just had the car washed and I can't do a thing with it."

PROBLEMS FOR PARENTS

Do you know that you make your child nervous by talking to him about your own nerves oftentimes to enlist sympathy; by talking to him about his nerves and his nervousness, and worrying him about your own worries?

Do you know that you are responsible for temper tantrums in your child by scolding and nagging and often threatening him, when you are angry yourself, setting him the bad example of temper tantrums in the home; frequently reminding him of what a fearful temper he has; having little or no regard for rest for his nerves?

Do you know that if your child is timid, nervous, easily frightened, that you are largely responsible for it, or the home training at least, by resorting to threats, such as corporal punishment, going away and leaving him, or frightening him about the "bogey man"?

Do you know that you oftentimes are responsible for your child's disobedience by uttering useless or unreasonable commands, by threatening him and never carrying out the threat; refusing his requests even though they are perfectly reasonable, promising and failing to keep your promises, chastising him for trivial offences?

Dr. J. C. Hastings.

MATRIMONIAL

Bullock-Todd.

A quiet, but pretty wedding was celebrated at 2:30 on Saturday afternoon, August 10th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Todd, when their only daughter Margaret Eva was united in marriage to Mr. James Edward Bullock, of Montreal. The Rev. Mr. Sampson officiated, in the absence of the Rev. Dr. Maclean. The bride, who was gowned in white georgette, with pearl bandeau, and carrying a large bouquet of pink roses and lilies of the valley entered the room on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Jessie Bullock, sister of the groom. They were unattended, with the exception of little Willie Todd and Irene Cassidy, brother and cousin of the bride respectively, who acted as ribbon and flower-bearers. A table dinner was served the bride and groom left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a week's trip through the Laurentian Mountains. The bride travelling in a dress of navy blue silk crepe with hat and coat to match, trimmed with sable fur. After dinner the Rev. Mr. Sampson spoke a few words, which was responded to by the groom, and read a cablegram of congratulations and good wishes from Mr. Howard Sompkins, of Athens, Greece, a friend of the groom, who had been associated with Mr. Bullock in work for the Boy Scouts. They received numerous beautiful presents and a number of cheques, testifying to the esteem in which they were held. On their return they will make their home in Montreal.

WHY WORRY?
It is gratifying to find in a medical journal the suggestion that we are too much concerned over such things as vitamins, roughage, dietetic systems, periodical medical examinations, therapeutic dogmas and various other "isms." People have been worried so much about these things that they are getting to the point where they will never admit that they are in perfect health.

"There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so," said the philosophic Prince of Denmark, who perhaps remembered his Boethius. The influence of mind over matter has long been obvious.

There are ailments, of course, that force themselves on the attention. But the tendency of much health propaganda is to make even man a made-up imaginary. It is well that warning should come from medical quarters. Our artificial civilization may make the simple life impossible. But there is no occasion for making life needlessly complex. And nature, after all, still has some claims to attention.

MALONE FAIR

The Seventy-Eighth Annual Franklin County, or Malone Fair will open its exposition on the grounds in Malone on Tuesday, September 10th and run for a period of five days and four nights.

The 1929 exhibition is more stupendous in every department than heretofore, and will bring together a greater variety of exhibits to entertain and instruct than ever before in its glorious history as a North County institution.

As in years gone by, the race programme will be the big feature of the week and will bring together over two hundred of the fleetest pacers and trotters in the country. Eighteen thousand dollars in purse and prize money, and a dozen sterling cups are offered in the races, which will undoubtedly develop some new records for the fast Malone track. E. S. Mason is secretary of the races.

Mr. Mason also has charge of the horse show which will be held in front of the Grandstand both afternoon and evening. The entries for the horse fair far exceed those of last year and it is declared more than one million dollars worth of equine grace and beauty have already been entered. The horse show will include all classes of show animals including jumpers and hunters, saddle ponies, military mounts and scores of others.

On the last day of the Fair, Saturday, August 24th, in the way of entertainment has been provided by the arrangement with Leo Dandurand, Montreal sportsman and six fast running races by horses direct from the Canadian tracks. These races will be run under the auspices of weather conditions and promise an afternoon of genuine thrills. Several well known stables are represented among the horses and some real fast races are anticipated.

Entries in the live stock department are larger than in former years and hundreds of the finest cattle, draft horses, swine, sheep and poultry are included among the potential prize winning stock that will be seen.

The horticultural and arts and crafts exhibit will be augmented this year and as always will be a source of instructive diversion to thousands of visitors.

Among the free acts to be presented before the Grand Stand, afternoon and evening will be the noted He Wong Troupe of Chinese artists in a series of difficult equilibristic stunts; May Collier, world champion lady high diver who dives from an 85-foot ladder into a four-foot tank of water; the Four Useems, a novelty European feature act; the Aeroplane Girls featuring a gigantic airplane flying over the Grand Stand.

The night show on the first four days of the Fair will be climaxed by a brilliant fireworks display featuring the Battle of the Dardenelles. The same company that produced the fireworks display last year will again have charge with many new novelties and innovations.

Throughout the week Fair patrons will have another opportunity of hearing one of the world's greatest bands when the famous Weymouth (Mass.) Post American Legion Band will appear before the grandstand both afternoon and evening. This band broadcasts every Sunday evening from station WBZ and is familiar to all radio fans. At the American Legion Convention in Paris in 1927 the Weymouth Post band captured the grand prize in competition with hundreds of other American Legion bands.

Altogether the 1929 Malone Fair will be one of the most delightful ever attempted in the annals of Franklin County Fair history. It is anticipated that upwards of 75,000 people will be in attendance during the week.

THE UNspoiled WEST.

It would be difficult, now-a-days, to find within a few days' journey, a land so natural, so utterly unspoiled, as the great Canadian West. The Western trip is a continuous feast of beauty. And at this season of the year, particularly, the colours which Nature has painted so lavishly on her broad canvas present a glorious spectacle.

On your way, Jasper National Park beckons with its surprising golf courses set against primitive peaks and glaciers; Mount Robson with its proud height; Vancouver, Victoria and Alaska, the land of mystery.

Details regarding the most delightful vacation you have ever spent will gladly be supplied by any Canadian National Agent.

DAHLIAS AND GLADIOLI

To get the best results from dahlias, these plants must not be allowed to stop growing. Keep them well watered and trim off surplus side shoots and buds. Tie up to the stakes with wire should have been driven into the ground when the tubers were planted, with soft twine or raffa. It is a good plan now to mulch around the plants with grass clippings or straw and keep the soil moist.

The horticultural and arts and crafts exhibit will be augmented this year and as always will be a source of instructive diversion to thousands of visitors. RETAIL MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION EXCURSION TO TORONTO EXHIBITION, HAMILTON AND NIAGARA FALLS

The Mayor of Toronto as head of the Municipal Council extends a hearty invitation to the members of the Retail Merchants Association of the province of Quebec to visit the Queen City on the occasion of their trip to Ontario, August 27th to 30th, 1929.

The above is a copy of an official card addressed to all the Retail Merchants of the province of Quebec in connection with a trip organized by the Retail Merchants Association, the success of which is at the present time, most promising.

Official invitations of the same character have also been extended by the towns of Hamilton and Niagara Falls and these latter towns are vying in enthusiasm with the city of Toronto to make the stay of the Retail Merchants and their friends as interesting as could be.

The "bonne entente" spirit as resented into a "perfect understanding."

It might be noted that the official welcome to the Exhibition will be tendered by the Hon. M. Ferguson, Prime Minister of the province of Ontario. Thence will be moved by the Hon. LeDuc in the name of the province of Quebec and H. H. Mayor roudie in the name of the Metropolis.

Kind words will be followed by unmistakable tokens of kind hospitality. A special invitation is extended to them and they are assured of a wonderful trip in most pleasant company.

The journey will be made by special train of the Canadian National Railway, made up of all steel de luxe equipment including Compartment-Drawing-Room-Sleeping cars, Observation Car, etc., which will be at the disposal of travellers during the entire trip.

The schedule has been arranged in such a way that passengers will travel by night and visit by day without impairing their comfort. The trip is broken by sight-seeing tours and a beautiful sail across Lake Ontario before boarding the train again for Montreal. This excursion has been prepared with great care, studied in all its details with the co-operation of the civic authorities of the towns visited as well as that of the officers of the Canadian National Railway and offers a number of attractions which cannot be found in an ordinary excursion. This is an opportunity which a large number of people are anxious to avail themselves of.

The itinerary has been arranged in such a manner as to economize as much time as possible, the departure having been set for 11:45 p.m. Day-light Saving Time, Tuesday, August 27th and the return at 10:00 a.m. Day-light Saving Time the following Friday morning.

As it will be noted the fares are very low and from Montreal are as follows:

Lower Berth $45.00
Upper Berth $49.00
Compartment (2 persons) $55.00
Drawing Room (3 persons) $55.00
Proportionate lower rates from other points.

Owing to the accommodation being limited and reservations already numerous, we must insist that those who desire to make this trip with the Retail Merchants Association make their reservation immediately by depositing the amount of $10.00 with Mr. F. X. L. Kattley, Secretary, Retail Merchants Association, 180 St. Catherine Street, East, Phone: LANCaster 4022, who will gladly furnish all information upon request.

One of the most popular of Paris exhibitions is the Concours Lejeune, held in August and September. This is a show reserved to small inventors who exhibit their ingenious household devices and toys, hoping to gain recognition and wealth.

The journey will be made by special train of the Canadian National Railway, made up of all steel de luxe equipment including Compartment-Drawing-Room-Sleeping cars, Observation Car, etc., which will be at the disposal of travellers during the entire trip.

The schedule has been arranged in such a way that passengers will travel by night and visit by day without impairing their comfort. The trip is broken by sight-seeing tours and a beautiful sail across Lake Ontario before boarding the train again for Montreal. This excursion has been prepared with great care, studied in all its details with the co-operation of the civic authorities of the towns visited as well as that of the officers of the Canadian National Railway and offers a number of attractions which cannot be found in an ordinary excursion. This is an opportunity which a large number of people are anxious to avail themselves of.

The itinerary has been arranged in such a manner as to economize as much time as possible, the departure having been set for 11:45 p.m. Day-light Saving Time, Tuesday, August 27th and the return at 10:00 a.m. Day-light Saving Time the following Friday morning.

As it will be noted the fares are very low and from Montreal are as follows:

Lower Berth $45.00
Upper Berth $49.00
Compartment (2 persons) $55.00
Drawing Room (3 persons) $55.00
Proportionate lower rates from other points.

Owing to the accommodation being limited and reservations already numerous, we must insist that those who desire to make this trip with the Retail Merchants Association make their reservation immediately by depositing the amount of $10.00 with Mr. F. X. L. Kattley, Secretary, Retail Merchants Association, 180 St. Catherine Street, East, Phone: LANCaster 4022, who will gladly furnish all information upon request.
