Cowboys and Aliens make for genre mash-up

By Jay Stone
Postmedia News

COWBOYS & ALIENS
Starring: Daniel Craig, Harrison Ford, Olivia Wilde
Directed by: Jon Favreau
Parental advisory: violence
Running time: 118 minutes
Rating: Three stars out of five

The main problem with the nutty adventure film, Cowboys & Aliens, is that there are aliens in it, although you could probably find some who would argue that it's the cowboys who are redundant. Either way, it's a mash-up that diminishes, rather than enhances, the genres, at least until the wild cowboys-vs.-aliens climax. At that point, there's nothing to do but sit back, drink it all in, and consider how Hollywood sure has a lot of money to spend on stuff.

It starts as an interesting western, a kind of John Ford knock-off: The Searchers meets The Thing. Daniel Craig stars as Jake Lonergan, a tough desperado who awakens in the desert with no boots, no horse, no gun and a strange, alien-looking bracelet attached to his wrist. Jake can't remember how he got there or what happened, but there's something in Craig's pinched scowl that makes you think anal probes may have been involved.

In any event, he soon vanquishes three passing cowboys and rides into nearby Absolution, Arizona, a town packed to the gunwales with types: a feckless bartender (Sam Rockwell), a decent sheriff (Keith Carradine), a quiet Indian tracker (Adam Beach), the bullying son (Paul Dano) of the sadistic tyrant who runs the town, and the sadistic tyrant himself, Dolarhyde (Harrison Ford, looking crankier than ever).

Jake is not a man to fool around with, however - he's reminiscent of the Viggo Mortensen character in A History of Violence in his facility for mayhem - and Cowboys & Aliens is heading for an epic showdown (or at least a monumental scowl-off) between Jake and Dolarhyde when, without warning, Close Encounters of the Third Kind breaks out. Space ships begin strafing the town, stampeding horses and lassoing people into the air, sometimes right off their saddles: It's like Saturday night in Dodge City. The UFOs make a mockery of the puny cowboy weapons, at least until Jake's funny bracelet begins to glow and shoot death rays.

Even though it's the 1870s, the cowboys adapt quickly to the idea of flying machines piloted by humanoids, and the film takes on a classic feel as it moves across the plains, gathering iconography - an outlaw gang, a group of Indians - for the final showdown. This takes place among cliffs reminiscent of Monument Valley, Utah, where so many of Ford's westerns were set, the difference being that he was examining the founding mythos of the American imagination and Cowboys & Aliens is examining how to make explosions look cool.

To be fair, there's also character development: Dolarhyde turns out to be a sentimental old tyrant (Ford gives a gruffly emotional a speech about how, as a boy, he slit a man's throat with a keepsake knife) and Jake has a love story in his past that's so touching, it attracts a new-age hummingbird that flits around his head. That's some right purty filmmaking. Now it's time to kill me some aliens.

Black & white value

What is black and white, read all over and serves as a great teaching tool? The newspaper, of course.

Teachers can use the newspaper in a number of ways in the classroom to enhance students' education. They can cut several pieces of art from the paper and have young students just learning to write name them, or clip a feature story from the paper and have older students respond to it in an essay.

Whatever the activity, newspapers benefit students. When used in the classroom, they improve students' reading, writing and critical thinking skills, inspire them to participate in discussions and debates, and expand their knowledge of past, current and future events.
