'Easter fun week' big hit at Unity

By L. WILLIS

Not only bunnies were hopping at the Unity Boys' Club during Easter Week. The whole club was hopping with activity for "Easter Fun Week."

The festivities opened on Monday morning with "The Early Bird Breakfast" when the programs for the week were outlined. These included a "White Elephant Auction Sale" when Honest Tom Stephens auctioned old toys, games and funnies for funny money. Many homes saw a reshuffling of toys from one home to another.

Special Gym programs were scheduled during the week with the Annual Cross Country Run being featured. This consisted of laps being run by the contestants twice a day which eventually added up to the 3,000 miles from Coast to Coast. A Pet Show and judging was a popular feature and saw many strange looking animals appear at the Club.

There were Scavenger Hunts, Treasure Hunts, Egg Hunts, Marble Contest, Balloon Games, Crazy Krafts and a Jelly Bean Guessing Game. There were special guests and a Teen Bunny Hop. Something for everybody and something going on every moment of the day. Every participant in every event received a credit slip which was placed in a ballot box and drawn for prizes.

Entrance fee for the events was 1¢ and all money was donated to the Easter Seal campaign. As the paper goes to press early in the week it is impossible to list the winners of the various events. These activities were arranged and directed by Tom Stephens, Program Director of the Club. And a good time was had by all.

'Y' appeal hits 70%

"We have our sights set on 100% of our objective", said William Ridley, campaign chairman of the local YMCA fund drive.

"With diligent follow-up on all cards, if our new money holds at 16% and our friends continue with the same drive they had last year and continue to have this year, we will meet our objective $12,300. To date we have collected 90% of our objective," he said.

"The citizens of Westmount have been very generous but it will require a final all out push to get that last 30%."

"Four of the twelve teams have reached 80% or more with the following canvassers completing their cards since last report: Mrs. A. Kelly, D. Bremner, C. De Wit, R. Harisay, G. Burgess, Mr. Taggart, H. Osgood and Mr. Parkinson."

Engineering posts to McCavor, Gertsman

At its regular monthly meeting this week, City Council approved the appointment of Edwin A. McCavor as assistant city engineer. McCavor has been acting assistant city engineer since October 4, 1965.

Appointed at the same time was Stephen Gertsman. He was given the post of senior civil engineer. Like McCavor, he has held this position in an acting capacity since October 4, 1965.

First of three readings was given to 'by-law further to amend by-law no. 356 to prohibit the sale of alcoholic liquor.' This is due to the fact that Westmount has several grocery stores which have beer permits and several that are without. To allow these other stores to get permits the by-law must be amended.

Council approved the right of the city to take a census during the month of May for the purpose of ascertaining the number of citizens and for obtaining statistics regarding their social condition.

The city will buy a small piece of land at 4200 Dorchester. The area is only 55 sq. ft. and the object is to round off the corner at Greene and Dorchester. Cost of the land will be $550.

The Westmount Square and the Alexis Nihon Plaza were both given permission by the council to extend over their building lines.

The Westmount Square: Will go 15 feet over the building line on Western avenue in order to establish several 'Planters'. Planters, according to Norman Dawe, city manager, are large flower boxes or tree holders.

On Wood avenue, they will go 10 feet over the building line in order to build steps leading to the Square.

On St. Catherine street, planters will extend 8 feet over the building line.

The Alexis Nihon Plaza: On St. Catherine street a canopy and cupola above grade and 2 subterranean floors will extend a distance of 3 feet over the building line.

On Western avenue, 2 subterranean floors and an entrance to the basement shopping area will extend 15 feet over the building line.

St. Paul's news shorts

By LYNN CHAPMAN

Thursday, March 24, the debate sponsored by the Leaders Club was held at St. Leo's. Resolved that Canada should join the United States. Invited to listen in, were the high school and teachers of both St. Paul's and the St. Leo's.

The negative side was represented by Margie Thompson, Judy Keyes and Monique Bergeron. Andrea Tacchi, Nicole Gareau, and Jane Skelton gave arguments for the affirmatives. Rebuttals were handled by myself and Clare McManus respectively. Clare did an excellent job, considering that she had half an hour's notice to replace an absentee. Both sides' speeches were very well prepared and given.

All the girls were very smooth and calm, quite a feat for the first time! Judges decided the negative to be the winner. Best debater, counting material and delivery was Margie Thompson. The debate has certainly been a high successful and profitable experience.

Friday, April 1, was the Spring Fling. This bash was sponsored by Project Christopher. All proceeds were put into the kitty to finance trips to work with people all over North America. The Fling lasted from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Band in residence were The Weeds, an absolutely fabulous Westmount group! Eaton's Bandstand provided the recorded sound; Duncan Wray at the helm. Keith Randall, D.J. from CFCF radio, popped in to visit and give away records. The dance was open to Teens from all over Montreal. St. Leo's hall was packed and really jumping. Everyone had a blast! This was about the best dance we have ever had.

Our school paper, the Academy Journal, came out last Thursday. The issue was a real success, and much appreciated.

Trial route continues

The No. 130 bus will be continued on another 6-weeks trial basis but with a greatly reduced route.

The terminus will now be at the corner of Grosvenor and Westmount boulevard and the around-the-mountain route will be practically the same as before viz: up Grosvenor to Sunnyside, Upper Bellevue, Summit Circle, Oakland, Shornecliffe, Summit Crescent, Devon, Lexington, Devon again, Upper Belmont and down Edgell to the Boulevard and west to Grosvenor.

There will be a 15 minute service from 7:30 a.m. to 9:45 a.m. and from 3:30 p.m. to 7:15 p.m. Connections can be made with No. 63, No. 65 and No. 124.

Biography of Streets Prince Albert avenue

Albert, Prince Consort: Albert (Francis Charles Augustus Albert Emmanuel) (1819-1861), prince-consort of England, was born at Rosenau on the 26th of August, 1819. He was the second son of the hereditary Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha (belonging to the Ernestine or elder branch of the Royal family of Saxony) by his first wife, the Princess Louise of Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg (d. 1831) from whom the duke was separated in 1824.

His father's sister married the Duke of Kent, and her daughter, afterwards Queen Victoria of England, Prince Albert's wife, was thus his first cousin. They were born in the same year.

Albert and his elder brother, Ernest, were close companions in youth and were educated under the care of Consistorial-rath Florschütz, subsequently proceeding to the University of Bonn. There, Prince Albert devoted himself especially to natural science, political economy and philosophy; he diligently cultivated music and painting, and excelled in gymnastic exercises, especially in fencing.

The idea of a marriage between him and his cousin Victoria had always been cherished by their uncle, King Leopold I of Belgium, and in May 1836 the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and his two sons paid a visit to Kensington Palace, where Princess Victoria, as she then was, lived, for the purpose of making acquaintance for the first time.

The visit was by no means to the taste of King William IV, who disapproved of the match and favored Prince Alexander of Orange. But Leopold's plan was known to Princess Victoria, and William's objections were fruitless.

Victoria Liked Albert: Princess Victoria, writing to her uncle Leopold (May 23, 1836), said that Albert was "extremely handsome;" and (June 7) thanked him for the "prospect of great happiness you have contributed to give me in the person of dear Albert. He possesses every quality that could be desired to render me perfectly happy." No formal engagement was entered into but the situation was privately understood as one which in time would naturally develop. After the queen came to the throne, her letters show her interest in Albert being educated for the part he would have to play.

Prince Goes to Italy: In the winter of 1838-1839 the prince travelled in Italy, accompanied by Baron Stockmar, formerly Leopold's doctor and private secretary, and now the queen's confidential advisor. On the 10th of October 1839, he and Ernest went again to England to visit the queen, with the object of finally settling the marriage. Mutual inclination and affection at once brought about the desired result.

They became definitely engaged on the 15th of October, and on the 10th of February 1840, the marriage was celebrated at the chapel-royal, St. James'.

Prince's Position Difficult:

The position in which the prince was placed by his marriage, while it was one of distinguished honor, was also one of considerable difficulty; and during his lifetime the tactful way in which he filled it was very inadequately appreciated. The public life of the prince-consort cannot be separated from that of the queen.

The prejudice against him, on account of what was regarded as undue influence in politics, was never fully dissipated till after his death. His co-operation with the queen in dealing with the political responsibilities which devolved upon the sovereign represented an amount of conscientious and self-sacrificing labor which cannot easily be exaggerated; and his wisdom in council could only be realized outside a very small circle, which in later years the materials of the history of that time became accessible.

A Cultured Man: He was indeed a man of cultured and liberal ideas, well qualified to take the lead in many reforms which the England of that day sorely needed. He was specially interested in endeavours to secure the more perfect application of science and art to manufacturing industry.

The Great Exhibition of 1851 originated in a suggestion he made at a meeting of the Society of Arts, and owed the greater part of his success to his intelligent and unwearied efforts. He had to work for its realization against an extraordinary outburst of angry expostulations. Every stage in his project was combated.

In the House of Peers, Lord Brougham denied the right of the crown to hold the exhibition in Hyde Park; in the Commons, Colonel Sibthorp prophesied that England would be overrun with foreign rogues and revolutionists, who would subvert the morals of the people, filch their trade secrets from them, and destroy their faith and loyalty towards their religion and their sovereign.

Received Abusive Letters
Prince Albert was president of the exhibition commission, and every post brought him abusive letters, accusing him, as a foreigner, of being intent upon the corruption of England. He was not the man to be balked by talk of this kind, but quietly persevered.

The exhibition was opened by the Queen on the 1st of May 1851, and was a colossal success; and the realized surplus of £150,000 went to establish and endow the South Kensington Museum (afterwards renamed "Victoria and Albert"), and to purchase land in that neighborhood.

Similar institutions, on a smaller scale but with a kindred aim, always found in him warm advocacy and substantial support. It was chiefly at meetings in connection with these that he found occasion for the delivery of addresses characterized by profound thought and comprehensiveness of view, a collection of which was published in 1857.

One of the most favourable specimens of his powers as a speaker is the inaugural address which he delivered as president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science when it met at Aberdeen in 1859. The education of his family and management of his domestic affairs furnished the prince with another very important sphere of action, in which he employed himself with conscientious devotedness.

A Good Manager

The estates of the Duchy of Cornwall, the hereditary appendage of the Prince of Wales, were so greatly improved under his father's management that the rent-roll rose from 11,000 pounds to 50,000 a year. Prince Albert, indeed had a peculiar talent for the management of landed estates. His model farm at Windsor was in every way worthy of the name; and the grounds at Balmoral and Osborne were laid out entirely in conformity with his designs.

As the prince became better

Panellists set for Rotary meet

The Rotary Club of Montreal has announced a far-sighted community project, the first of its kind ever undertaken by any organization either in this country or in the United States.

Rotary's April 15-17 Conference on Human Resources, to be held at the Chantecler Hotel, Ste.

Adèle, is for the purpose of focussing widespread community attention on the greatest resources we possess: our people.

This pioneer venture has required a year of planning. Peter Kerrigan, 17 Anwoth Road, is conference chairman.

Dr. Robert J. Havighurst, a noted international authority in the field, and Professor of Education at the University of Chicago, will be the keynote speaker.

The Ste. Adèle panel, chaired by the Reverend Father Shaun Govenlock, director of the University of Montreal School of Social Work, will be composed of Jacques Brazeau, chairman of the Department of Sociology, University of Montreal; Stewart Sutton, Director General of the Vanier Institute of the Family; Stuart M. Finlayson, Chairman, Marconi Company of Canada, and Pierre Vaillancourt, Congress of Labor.

The panellists met recently in Montreal to make final their plans for the Ste. Adèle Conference, the practical aim of which is to discover ways and means best-suited to developing our human assets in the metropolitan area.

An attendance of better than 150 men and women who are leaders in government, education, community welfare, labor and industry is expected.

FARMERS ARE VITAL

Sometimes neglected (when considering means to feed the rapidly expanding world population) is the thought that we also have to preserve the sources of food supply we now possess. It is a matter also, of preserving the farmer . . . We can survive without many forms of human activity, but not without agriculture. — Chilliwack (B.C.) Progress.

We Say

Time for a third force in the land

FRENCH Canada's strivings to preserve its culture have many sympathizers and boosters among "the English."

After all, the double riches of two cultures we may not be able to share equally but we all cherish.

Unhappily there are those, French and English, who would deny this concept and blindly bar what they see as "encroachments" from the other side of a cultural fence which they themselves erect.

These people want mutual exclusivity — which is all very well and their right, so long as they don't deny to the rest of us a two-way traffic of the nation's two main wellsprings.

The examples are sadly all about us. Elsewhere in Canada it is particularly shocking in a studied indifference to the French "fact."

Here in Quebec, it is a petulant insistence on unilingualism: French only. The once commendable drive for bilingualism, which had the force of justice, common sense and favorable response from most of Quebec's half-million English-speaking citizens, somewhere along the line has been subverted into a narrow, sometimes sinister determination that Quebec shall be exclusively French, or nothing.

Such a course in the long run means the latter, nothing. Quebec cannot, in a shrinking world, cut itself off from outside.

Without its industrial, commercial and, yes, cultural links with the rest of Canada, North America and the world, it would become an anachronistic cipher, by-passed and alone.

Take the silly business of public signs, particularly on highways. Only a pea-brained bureaucrat (whatever his mother tongue) could have dreamed that signs not intelligible to all those using our roads could serve the interests of the some who could understand them — be it safety, the tourist trade, the long-haul trucking industry or simply the friendly stranger in our midst.

Does the store clerk insisting on "French only" really think he is furthering a cause? He's sitting his own throat!

Does the petty government official who snarls "Parlez français!" think he's making his Province a better place to live in? He makes it unpleasant all around!

We think that those of us who genuinely want the best of both worlds, French and English, are being held up to some form of unspecified ransom by the narrow-minded bigots on both sides.

It's about time for a third and unequivocal force to assert itself, in Quebec and across Canada:

This is of those Canadians, regardless of mother tongue or origin, who genuinely seek to understand, converse with and love one another.

Canada's power export likely to increase

YOU SAY

Foster caring underpaid

Sir: In the March 31st issue of The Examiner, a sympathetic and understanding letter was written by Mrs. Sheila Baxter, a foster parent. She was responding to a letter from a mother alone with four young children, who, in choosing to keep her children, received less support and fewer benefits than a foster parent with the same number of foster children would do.

Most of us would agree with Mrs. Baxter's kindly comments both in respect to the other mother's position and to the need for friendly counsel and encouragement.

Foster caring is certainly underpaid, as Mrs. Baxter states, but she points out that sharing one's home and affection with foster children brings joys and satisfactions which are more rewarding than any financial gain.

The need for foster family homes for children of all ages, race and creed, is so great that the child care agencies are constantly seeking foster parents like Mrs. Baxter. Anyone interested should telephone the Foster Home Recruiting Centre, 937-2589 for more information.

Wheelchairs needed desperately

Sir: This is an urgent appeal for wheelchairs... We have received many requests from people who have been stricken with Multiple Sclerosis asking us to help them get wheelchairs. These patients, most of whom are young adults, are desperate; they are obliged to stay in bed because they can not afford to buy them.

I am writing to you in the hope that you will print this letter so that the public will be made aware of the plight of these unfortunate victims.

Surely there is a wheelchair somewhere — in an attic or basement that is not being used. Please, won't you bring some happiness and encouragement to someone who is in need of that chair and help them get a new lease on life.

Being a victim of Multiple Sclerosis, I understand full well the frustration a person can feel when they must depend upon others to do things that they could do for themselves if they had a wheelchair available.

Now that Spring is here, and the weather is nicer, these people who have been shut in all winter would be able to be taken out if they only had a wheelchair at their disposal.

Just call me, Mrs. Evelyn G. Opal at 484-9028 or 482-4269 and I will make any arrangements necessary.

Mrs. Evelyn G. Opal,
President,
Montreal Association for Multiple Sclerosis.

Increasing exports of electric power to the United States appear likely within the next 10 years, along with the continued phenomenal growth in Canada's own use of power.

Canada already ranks sixth in the world in production of electric power and is second in production of water-generated electricity.

Water power accounted for 75 per cent of Canada's generating capacity in 1965. But it is expected for 75 per cent of Canada's generating capacity in 1975. It is expected that water power will be superseded by thermal plants as the main source of electrical energy at some time in the future, as total production increases.

The increase in exports of electric energy was made possible by a change of policy in 1963. At that time the Canadian Government abolished the export tax on electric energy and announced a policy for the development of large low-cost power sources within Canada and the encouragement of export of surplus power to the United States.

The new policy opened up large investment possibilities on three rivers, the Columbia in British Columbia, the Nelson in Manitoba and the Churchill River in Labrador.

It appears likely that within the next decade power from these locations can be made available to the United States markets on a firm basis and at prices which would be mutually advantageous.

Also involved is the international tidal development at Passamaquoddy, in the Bay of Fundy between Maine and New Brunswick.

For the future, growth in power consumption and close co-ordination of power systems are seen as the twin ingredients for further reductions in power costs.

A long-term downward trend in electric rates, made possible by technological progress, has been important to the growth in consumption.

There appears to be general agreement that the fastest growing market in the years ahead will be the residential market with its potential for space heating, air conditioning and greater use of electricity for appliances and improved lighting.

Large Increases

Generation of electric power in Canada increased from about 12 billion kilowatt hours in 1926 to some 48 billion kwh in 1950 and over 134 billion kwh in 1964. It is estimated that by 1975, Canadian consumption will reach 245 billion kwh.

Hydro and thermal generation complement each other. Thermal plants have certain clear-cut advantages:

- They can be built close to area of high consumption;
- They can produce additional security for services in areas now dependent on long distance transmission lines;
- They can quickly supplement generation from hydro-electric plants on rivers with widely fluctuating flows;
- Idle capacity in a thermal plant, even if it represents less revenue, means less costs since no fuel is used.

Apart from these considerations, the choice between hydro or thermal power is likely to be determined in Canada by the availability of water power.

More Power

It is estimated that if the Canadian rivers were regulated to provide a continuous flow of constant magnitude, available undeveloped power would be more than four and a half times the present developed water power. Much of this potential cannot be developed economically, however, partly because of location and partly because of the expense involved in regulating water flow.

In addition to actual facilities

Grenfell Mission invite artists to design card

GRENFELL MISSION INVITE ARTISTS TO DESIGN CARD

The Grenfell Labrador Mission (Montreal Branch), invites local artists to submit suitable designs for a Christmas card.

A fee of $35.00 to $50.00 will be paid for a card designed to sell for 10 or 15 cents; size not to exceed 4½ inches by 5 inches.

Entries, clearly marked on the back with the artist's name and address, should be mailed, not later than June 30th, 1966, to:

Mrs. C. G. FARQUHARSON,
 Chairman,
 Christmas Cards Committee,
 Grenfell Labrador Medical Mission,
 3539 Vendome Ave.,
 Montreal 28, Que.

Designs not accepted will be returned, if accompanied by a self addressed, stamped envelope.

The annual sale of these cards goes to support the work of the doctors and nurses of the International Grenfell Association, of which the Montreal Branch is a member. It also helps to maintain the hospitals, nursing stations, children's dormitories, etc., on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, in Quebec, and on the Labrador coast.

The Grenfell Labrador Medical Mission is believed to be the first group to sell charity Christmas cards in Montreal, having started in 1922 when a few cards were imported from England. To-day, these cards are designed by Canadians, printed in Canada, and sold throughout the country.

Are today's camps living in the past?

Is present day camping living in the present, or cruising along in the wake of a glorious past. What is the role of the camp in our community? Does it have a purpose, or is it just a stop-gap, designed to effectively free parents during the summer months?

This is the critical question that parents must ask themselves now, as the coming camping season approaches. How does one differentiate between the types of camps that constantly barrage us with material, literature and brochures? Parents would be well advised to investigate closely all camps that present themselves as "suitable" vacation spots for a summer holiday.

Camps, to have a valid plea to the custody of children for two months or less must be able to produce concrete plans to show that they are prepared to accept the child as an individual within a group setting and are ready to present a dynamic and provocative program designed to stimulate and foster Creativity within the individual.

Schools today are too crowded and do not offer enough chance for this essential ingredient in the development of the entire personality. Creativity must be organized in order that children are presented with the opportunities to search out and investigate new paths, new ideas and new avenues of thought. Camps that have not accepted this guiding thought may be considered to be living within the wake of the past. Yet, creativity does not develop in settings where the number of children becomes so vast that the individual is swallowed up in the mass of bodies present. Impersonalization tends to stifle creativity and individualism and thereby such camps can not be said to be truly twentieth century in outlook.

The key to the development of creativity, in the final analysis, lies with the staff. Staff, indiscriminately selected, with a weak cultural and educational background can not be expected to provide the essential stimulus required to build up creativity. Staff, poorly trained can not be expected to produce to its greatest and fullest potential. The crux of the matter lies within the selection of the staff and within the training program offered. Progressive camps are aware of the impact of the development and progress made in the field of human relations training and sensitivity training.

These understandings must be transferred to staff in order to cultivate in them a sense of belonging and of security. Combined with a true feeling of achievement and individual satisfaction, staff members may then be called on to act as resource and information personnel. Basic camping skills are a prerequisite and should be demanded of all staff. Training in these skills should be reinforcement and an extension of technique.

It is within this frame of reference that a camp must be called on to answer the question as to its function within our community. Does the camp just provide a setting away from home, or does it genuinely provide a setting where realistic creativity is encouraged? Too many camps have been content to take a backseat in this critical period of development of the youngster. Too many camps are not prepared to either subscribe to, or to effect any realistic attitudes towards this problem. As a parent, it is your responsibility and right, to demand from any camp reasonable proof that they are capable of providing positive leadership and a valid, responsible program, cognisant of the impact that they assume in the overall education of the youngster.

known, public mistrust began to give way. In 1847, but only after a significantly keen contest with Earl Powis, he was elected chancellor of the University of Cambridge; and he was afterwards appointed master of the Trinity House.

In June 1857, the formal title of prince-consort was conferred upon him by letters patent, in order to settle certain difficulties as to precedence that had been raised at foreign courts.

But in the full career of his usefulness he was cut off. During the autumn of 1861, he was busy with the arrangements for the projected international exhibition, and it was just after returning from one of the meetings in connection with it that he was seized with his last illness. Beginning at the end of November with what appeared to be influenza but proved to be an attack of typhoid fever and congestion of the lungs, he died on the 14th of December.

The grief of the queen was overwhelming and the sympathy of the whole nation marked a revulsion of feeling about the prince himself which was not devoid of compunction for earlier want of appreciation. The magnificent mausoleum at Frogmore, in which his remains were finally deposited, was erected at the expense of the queen and the royal family; and many public monuments to "Albert the Good" were erected over the country, the most notable being the Albert Hall (1867) and the Albert Memorial (1876) in London.

Birdland :

Spring brings birds back

By WINIFRED WILSON

Probably some Purple Martins left their winter quarters in Brazil last January, and certain Ducks started north soon after, but the majority of birds do not get to Canada until April is well on the way. Most arrive in May. Although weather plays an important part, it is usual for a species to keep pretty much to the same date each year. Naturally, the preferred food must be available upon arrival. Consequently, the Kingfisher cannot put in an appearance until ice melts, leaving some open water to make fishing possible. The Crested Flycatcher must wait for fly season, and the Hummingbird until there are blossoms from which to sip honey.

Migration is generally accomplished by keeping in flocks. This gives protection. Exceptions are birds like Swifts because others could not keep their pace, and Shrikes, because they are predators and others would fear their company. Some kinds, like Blue Jays, fly in very loose formation; others, like Geese, fly in a set formation. Birds of like habits often travel together, so that a flock might be made up of various kinds of Sparrows, Thrushes, and Warblers.

Some birds migrate only by day. Of course this is the ideal way to travel, but is impossible for the majority. Swallows are lucky, because their method of feeding is to catch flying insects as they themselves fly. When darkness falls they are able to rest and sleep. Seed eaters and those that depend upon ground insects are obliged to migrate by night and divide the daylight hours into eating and resting. A few have an advantage over the others by being able to choose when to land. Ducks, Geese, and, indeed, many species of wading and swimming birds fly either by day or by night.

Most migrants travel comparatively slowly — they may take a month getting from Florida to the Province of Quebec. Usually, they speed up as they come nearer to their birthplace, like a runner sprinting as he nears the tape.

Contrary to what we might expect, few birds fly very high. Those with a large wingspread, such as Cranes and Hawks, occasionally reach 5,000 feet, but this is not their ordinary height. Small birds find that lack of oxygen at great heights makes it impossible for them. Unfortunately, low flying for these night fliers adds to the risks of migration. They are apt to run into man-made obstacles, such as tall buildings. But for all migrants the great danger is spring storms which put them off course and often spoil their food supply.

Brilliant spring sunshine made the freshly fallen snow sparkle on the country road — then suddenly thirty or forty Bluebirds swept down from the sky, landing but a few yards ahead of us.

S.P.C.A. WARNS 'HELP STOP EASTER CRUELITIES'

Easter chicks don't have a chance at life, without proper care and facilities.

Homes aren't designed to serve as chicken houses, a fact not too apparent to many well-intentioned but poorly informed parents who yield to childish pleas for a gaily colored Easter chick.

The same is true for the ducklings and rabbits purchased as Easter pets.

Every year, hundreds of these creatures, many of them bedraggled and bruised by improper care and handling, are turned over to the SPCA. They are placed on farms where there are adequate facilities to care for them properly, or, unfortunately, they have to be humanely put away.

SPCA has campaigned for years against the sale of chicks, ducklings and rabbits as Easter pets. We are happy to report that many retail outlets have halted such sales as a result of this effort. But the battle against such cruelty is not yet won.

How ironic that this joyous season of Easter must result in pain and suffering. Members and friends of the SPCA are asked to do what they can to help eliminate the sale of these helpless creatures.

An appeal against the sale of Easter chicks, ducklings and rabbits as pets is again being made to stores and pet shops in Montreal and the vicinity.

Christian Science

Easter sermon

The ministry of Christ Jesus, his crucifixion according to Luke, and his resurrection according to John, form the basis of the Lesson-Sermon to be read on Easter Sunday in all Christian Science churches.

The Responsive Reading will include this verse from Isaiah: "Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you."

Pertinent passages from the Christian Science textbook will include: "There were rock-ribbed walls in the way, and a great stone must be rolled from the cave's mouth; but Jesus vanquished every material obstacle, overcame every law of matter, and stepped forth from his gloomy resting place, crowned with the glory of a sublime success, an everlasting victory."

St. Andrew's 'The Glory of Easter'

Easter — the greatest day in the year! "The Glory of Easter" is the title of the Sermon by Rev. Dr. D. M. Grant at the eleven o'clock Worship Service on Sunday. The Junior and Senior Choirs, directed by Gordon White, will sing some of the outstanding music of Easter. In the Crib Corner and Nursery, infants and other small children will be cared for while their parents are in Church.

These are great days in the Christian Year! St. Andrew's misses its much-loved Sanctuary, but in the well-appointed Auditorium of the Westmount High School, the members worship happily together. Last Sunday twenty new members were received and welcomed at one of the largest Communion Services in years, and next Sunday all will share in the wonder and glory of Easter.

Mary Robb the secretary of the Auxiliary of the Douglas Hospital wrote us to say:

"It is my pleasure to write to you on behalf of the board of our hospital to say thank you for all your interest and the publicity you have afforded us through the year in your pages.

We thank the writer very much for her appreciation, and we would like to invite other organizations and clubs which have a connection with Westmount and which have not been using our columns to do so.

Copy should be sent to us 7005 Kildare Road in care of the Women's editor to arrive not later than Tuesday morning of each week, as our publishing date is now Thursday. It should be written, of course, on one side of the paper only, and if possible typewritten, double spaced.

Any notice which asks for the sale of tickets or which is to publicise an event for raising money must be entered under the heading 'Coming Events' and a fee of one dollar is charged. All other copy we are glad to use, without charge and we hope that we can be of service to all organizations.

Diet dispensary asks milk for maternity clinics

Free milk for pregnant mothers attending public maternity clinics was called for by Mrs. Agnes Higgins, Executive Director of The Montreal Diet Dispensary at the Red Feather agency's annual meeting recently. To support her demand for distribution of a quart of milk a day, Mrs. Higgins marshalled facts gathered over the last three years in two maternity clinics of The Royal Victoria Montreal Maternity Hospital where the agency conducts a prenatal project providing diet supplementation and diet counselling.

Mrs. Higgins stated 608 cases have now been completed. "It is difficult to reconcile the fact that 64 percent of all the mothers attending the clinics in our study did not have enough money to buy the necessary foods they required within a land of plenty," she declared. She noted that the percentage of women needing a supplementation increased each year.

"As the average daily deficit in calories and protein found in the mothers' initial diet histories is similar to the amount of calories and protein in one quart of milk, it would seem a practical solution to supplement the nutrition of public maternity patients with one quart of milk daily," Mrs. Higgins declared.

Moving? be prepared

This time of the year many households are planning a change of domicile, in fact it is just about a national custom to move on May the first. If this is your year for it, (we hope that you will not be moving away from our city,) and if you are not in the habit of moving every year or so you may appreciate a few reminders from those of us who have not been so lucky.

The very first thing to do is to arrange a date with your mover, and do not be surprised if he is all booked up already. Try to arrange a day other than the first of May. (In fact everybody will be doing so this year as May 1 comes on a Sunday). Unless you are lucky enough to have the first time of the morning, in which case you will have to be up at a very early hour, be prepared for a long wait when your time arrives. The ability to gauge the time it takes to move the people ahead of you is more than even experienced movers can do.

It is as well to take such delays in your stride, as the day is going to be a long one anyway, and if you have saved out the electric kettle and some tea bags you may be able to calm the new tenants to your former home when they arrive with their first load to find your chattels still in place, and the horizon empty of any sign of approaching vans.

The next thing is to make sure that your public facilities are notified of the date that the move will take place, these are of course gas, electric, phone and post office. The post office will supply a little card to help you, which can be mailed well in advance to such suppliers of service and goods as the stores you have charge accounts with, your bank and insurance company, magazines and newspapers you subscribe to by mail, friends and even people to whom you owe money. The post office will also promise to forward all mail addressed to your old address to your new one for a period of three months.

With all this accomplished it is still too early to start the serious business of packing, although it is a good idea to start to eliminate the things you will not be taking with you. Some things will be sold and some given, the Salvation Army is a real help in clearing out such pockets of accumulation as you may have in the basement and the back cupboards. This is the time too to measure the new windows, to plan what needs to be bought and what can be used and where. Draperies and slip covers can be sent to the cleaners and delivered fresh to the new house, rugs can be picked up and shampooed also and will arrive ready to put in place and you will save much trouble by making such arrangements.

Assuming that you will be tackling the chore of packing yourself here are a few ideas from experienced movers.

1: Pack only soft things in chests of drawers, and pad well the items you leave in desk drawers and table. Rope chests of drawers with soft clothes line wrapping the rope around the chest, twisting it around the drawer pulls, so that the drawers do not come open on the journey.

2: Pack books and heavy articles in small cartons, remembering that these have to be carried.

3: Mark each carton with the contents and the room it is destined to occupy, and on moving day have a member of the family at the door to direct the movers as they carry in your possessions.

Diet Dispensary ask milk for clinic

She added that since Quebec is the greatest milk producer in Canada, public policy should be established to see that "rich and poor alike" benefit from this asset. With milk, the most nutritious of all food, so plentiful, we should have the lowest prenatal mortality rate of all the provinces, instead of the highest. She said that there is a large surplus of fluid milk available. That in the Montreal area alone, in 1964, thirty-five and a half million quarts of fluid milk of Grade 1 quality had to be sold as industrial milk.

Mrs. Higgins noted the advantages to both mothers and infants when the mother's nutrition was improved during pregnancy. The toxemia rate for the mothers in the study was 69 per cent below the rate for mothers not in the study, but attending other maternity clinics in the same hospital. The infant mortality rate in the study was less than one-half the rate for Quebec and for Canada. This, in spite of the fact that the patients in the study are all public patients, who usually have higher than average infant mortality rates. The rate for prematurity was down 12 percent and for foetal malnutrition by 21 percent as compared to the rates for those infants born in the public clinics of the same hospital and not in the study.

As the sun struck their bright blue backs, surely, we thought, there was never a more beautiful sight. "Bluebirds for happiness," we quoted.

But that was twenty years ago. Where are they now?

When winter had scarcely departed, large flocks of these soft-voiced singers with the stunning blue plumage, flying in loose formation, used to appear from the south. Sometimes they left behind abundance of food, encountered snow-storms on their northern journey, and arrived in Canada where suitable food was still skimpy. But food is not now their chief problem.

With the advance of civilization nesting sites for all birds that use holes in wood are becoming scarcer and scarcer every year. Wooden fences furnished homes for House Wrens, Chickadees, and Tree Swallows as well as Bluebirds; but they are practically things of the past as wire has almost entirely taken the place of wood.

Old tree cavities were favourite places for bird homes. Now old trees are cut down in our "cleaning up" process. Any suitable natural cavity left by man is speedily taken over by English Sparrows or Starlings. So the Bluebird is fast being displaced by those unwanted imports. If we see a flock of a dozen or find one nesting pair in a year we count ourselves lucky.

The Bluebird's song resembles a Robin's, but is softer, less joyous, and more plaintive, easily identified once heard. There is also a flight call: a couple or maybe three liquid notes. But when did you last hear the voice of a Bluebird?

Besides its aesthetic value, the Bluebird is useful to us because of its choice of food. Grasshoppers, crickets, beetles, and caterpillars are eaten, and when insects are not in season poison ivy is taken.

The executive director reported that during the year the agency gave counselling to 793 individuals, 97 percent of whom were referred by hospital social service departments and the remainder by health and welfare agencies. In 73 per cent of the cases, the reason for referral was pregnancy, while malnutrition and the need for special diets accounted for the balance. Some 70 percent of clients were Roman Catholic, 26 per cent were Protestant, 46 percent were French and 44 percent English-speaking.

A total of five courses of lectures from homemakers on family nutrition, cooking, meal planning and food buying were given with 141 homemakers attending. In addition, 15 lectures were given to community groups.

The Dispensary received 143 requests for consultation and information from public and private health and welfare agencies, hospitals, labor and industrial groups and educational institutions.

Students and professional workers receiving instruction or training at the Dispensary totalled 1012 and included dietician internes from the Montreal General and Royal Victoria Hospitals, and public health nurses from McGill University School for Graduate Nurses.

In the president's report, Mrs. K. W. MacIntyre noted that the provincial government has manifested its desire to improve health and welfare in the province and that it is hoped that the food supplements supplied by the Dispensary before long will be provided by the Quebec government in the form of increased public assistance, more adequate family allowances and other benefits. "This will allow the agency to expand its nutrition education program, and I hope make further explorations in the research field," Mrs. MacIntyre stated.

Mrs. Arthur Guthrie, chairman of the committee for the auxiliary groups, paid tribute to the work done by the auxiliary members of the Dispensary since the formation of the first group in 1961. Now numbering five, the groups have been of "inestimable value" to the Dispensary, Mrs. Guthrie declared. They have made it possible to carry an addition of 85 cases and have provided needed layettes and maternity clothes.

Presenting the treasurer's report, Mrs. A. T. McLean said the sum of $17,564 had been spent during the year on food supplements and reported that income and expenditures of $50,073 balanced.

Officers elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. K. W. MacIntyre; honorary president, Mrs. Paul Drummond; past president, Mrs. C. Douglas Reid; vice-presidents, Mrs. R. C. B. Love, Mrs. R. J. Racey; recording secretary, Mrs. David B. Gill; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. H. Gillelan.
