Drama blossoms at a maximum security penitentiary

By Mark Tunney
Saint John Telegraph Journal

DORCHESTER, N.B. (CP) — It's Wednesday afternoon at the Dorchester maximum-security penitentiary. For most prisoners, it's another day like so many others, stacked end to end endlessly.

But for Darrel Forsyth and a small troupe of prison actors, it's showtime. They're playing to "the suits" — a collection of senior Corrections Canada officials in Dorchester for meetings. And they're nervous.

After Theatre New Brunswick performed at the institution last year, a small group of prisoners decided to try it themselves. Originally, they just hoped that, with the help of Theatre New Brunswick, they might be able to perform some play.

But then Forsyth decided to write something of his own.

"Writing is a good way of expressing things I feel I need to get out, and then gain some insight and understanding of myself," he says. "A lot of writers do that, on the street. They have their own demons to expel."

This is no Hollywood melodrama about the big house and the screws. Forsyth's one-act play, The Wall, set against a graffiti-drenched wall the prisoners are ordered to paint over, shifts into a series of flashbacks where a prisoner relives tough relationships with his mother, school and finally the law, when he steals a leather jacket and runs away.

ON THE RUN

Forsyth knows what it's like to be on the run.

That's been the 31-year-old's natural state on the brief occasions when he's been out of prison during adulthood. The Fredericton native is now serving 17 years for armed robbery and attempted murder.

"I understand why I did what I did," says Forsyth.

"I feel bad for the person I robbed. He was probably paranoid for months. But to me it was just a matter of economics...I wanted to put drugs on the table."

In The Wall, characters Manny and Roman work towards breaking down the walls of self-deception. In real life, the actors feel they're making breakthroughs themselves.

"Before, I never really thought about the past that much," says actor Sam Gagnon.

"It forces you to focus on the past rather than always looking ahead."

Says Forsyth: "The general public thinks criminal is synonymous with idiot. But there's a small group here who are really interested in plays. There are only about 30 guys but they give us a standing ovation."

NOVEL NEXT?

Last year, Forsyth won first prize in Corrections Canada's poetry competition.

Now he's thinking about writing a novel. He wants to talk about prison's survival-of-the-fittest moral code and the violence he believes lies in everyone.

"People think criminals are criminals because of sickness, because they can't function in society. Sometimes, it's more a matter of economics and the willingness to step over the line and take a risk, whether that means dealing coke or robbing someone at gunpoint.

"From my own experience and others involved in violence, you sit down and talk to them and they're just ordinary people."

The walls Forsyth writes about don't disappear quickly, he says, but if you let a little light in through those prison bars by writing or acting or just showing the rest of the population that you're alive, there's a chance to break out of the shadows.

"The whole play is to lead them to a better understanding of those walls in their life and transcend them," he says.

"For some guys in here, any bit of light they get is stretched out. They save it."

Madonna a knockout in Dick Tracy

By Ina Warren
The Canadian Press

Dick Tracy — this summer's stylish, slam-bang movie — was produced and directed by Warren Beatty and stars him as Chester Gould's famous comic-strip gumshoe. But pop singer Madonna is the one laughing all the way to the bank.

The Disney movie also provides her with the best music video of her platinum career and should do a swell job of selling her new album, I'm Breathless: Music From and Inspired by the Film Dick Tracy.

Dick Tracy cost $30 million US, runs 100 minutes and features Al Pacino, Dustin Hoffman, James Caan and a gang of other superb actors disguised as pluggily villains out to rule an unidentified metropolis and destroy Tracy, the virtuous cop.

And Madonna's Breathless Mahoney, a sinful nightclub singer with a hot torch for Tracy, certainly won't hurt Ms. Blond Ambition's future in Hollywood. With Vittorio Storaro's silvery lighting lending her white flesh the allure of a moonlit lily, Milena Canonero's slinky gowns caressing her assets and Stephen Sondheim's lyrics lading some class into that bee-stung pout, Madonna's a knockout.

Her on-screen singing and strutting scenes go on for so long that sometimes they just about KO the mood of Beatty's short-of-terrific movie.

SWEET MOMENTS

The movie's best moments aren't the hyped-up seduction scenes between Tracy and Breathless — not much happens other than a lot of heavy breathing — but the sweet and sentimental ones between the detective and Tess Trueheart.

Red-head Glenne Headly registers the right 1930s tone as Tracy's shy but savvy florist girlfriend who'd like the crime-avenger in the yellow raincoat and matching fedora to settle down to a police desk job.

"You could have a wife — I mean a life," says Tess, biting her tongue.

And to see Beatty, Hollywood's legendary loverboy, playing a shy, true-blue cop who always fumbles his romantic pitch to Tess, is sweet justice indeed.

Another bonus is 11-year-old Charlie Korsmo as The Kid, the tough, freckle-faced orphan who pulls at the heartstrings of Tracy and Tess. Korsmo just about steals the movie.

In the tradition of Fritz Lang's Metropolis and Stanley Kubrick's 2001, Dick Tracy will be remembered as a classic of cinema style. Batman, last summer's blockbuster, was a visual hodgepodge in comparison with Dick Tracy's celluloid comic-book look.

PAINTBOX BLUES

Designer Richard Sylbert keeps the movie's tones in magenta reds, banana-cream yellows and paintbox blues.

But comic books are only as good as their villains and that's where Dick Tracy excels. The bad guys have faces like rubber washboards, voices like barking dogs and names like Pruneface, Flattop and Lips.

The mob kingpin is the power-hungry Big Boy Caprice, played in tour-de-force style by Pacino, unrecognizable under layers of latex and a feral snout.

For his part, Hoffman does marvellously comic things with his small role as the unintelligible thug Mumbles, while Mandy Patinkin demonstrates a chilling sliminess as Breathless Mahoney's piano player, 88 Keys.

Beatty has also recruited a gallery of comic book faces that hardly needed any disguise in character actors like Seymour Cassel, Michael J. Pollard and Charles Durning, who plays Police Chief Brandon.

As for the 53-year-old Beatty, he looks terrific in a banana-yellow Burberry, but a tad tired in closeups.

Nothing rivals the righteousness & pomposity of a patriot

"Now is not this ridiculous —
And is not those preposterous?
A thorough-paced absurdity —
Explain it if you can."

W.S. Gilbert

The Age of Aquarius has blundered into the Age of Absurdity. It's not yet clear whether this is a step forward or back.

Absurdity reached some sort of watershed last week when eleven of the most powerful men in the country sat down to dinner on Sunday evening and threw up a dog's breakfast in the wee hours of the following Sunday pretending they'd appeased Quebec and won peace in our time. Every last one of them knew Quebec was already preparing new demands.

Journalists haunted those precincts night and day and were so starved for news that they kept interviewing each other. Jacques Parizeau leader of opposition to the accord in Quebec, was solemnly reported offering advice to Bourassa, complaining he was not being consulted and that the premier wouldn't return his phone calls.

And while the premiers were in the throes of Senate reform, those cheeky little rascals voted themselves a $153 tax-free bonus for every day they showed up at the office — confirming all suspicions that their $52,000 annual salaries and $9,800 tax-free expense accounts were merely government pensions.

About the only sane and sensible thing around this entire confabulation was that we were spared any more interviews depicting François Gérin sacrificing himself for principle.

Lord protect us from patriots. Anybody willing to sacrifice himself for the honor of his country is uncomfortably generous about sacrificing others.

Who's who

When walls are coming down everywhere — economic, cultural and political — our dear queer Quebec persists in building new ones all the time. There are twice as many English dailies published in Tokyo as there are in all Quebec yet Guy Bouthillier and his Mouvement Quebec Français still see Quebec anglos as a deadly peril. "The language is threatened", he cries without offering one shred of evidence and proposes reductions in English radio stations to reflect the diminishing English community along with the complete elimination of federal minority language assistance.

Last January, Gary Caldwell reported to the Townshippers' Association that the feds spent $262 a year on every francophone in Newfoundland but only $3.20 on each anglophone in Quebec. Now that Meech Lake's 'distinct society' clauses limits the federal government to 'preserving' minorities while Quebec 'preserves' and promotes its French majority, tough beans on the anglos.

The Conseil de la langue française recently proposed creating new Quebec French dictionaries to overcome the bothersome problem of those from France allowing English and American expressions to creep in and corrupt the language. There's a fable somewhere about a king who sealed himself inside his castle to save himself from the plague — and discovered he'd locked the plague in with him and all assistance out.

Nothing rivals the pomposity and self-righteousness of a devoted patriot quite so much as a crusading feminist. One in Calgary recently mailed a letter to the editor of most English newspapers in the land which scaled new heights of absurdity.

"Dear Sir," she began, oddly enough. "I have heard one too many ads for products for the working woman. We have shoes for the working woman, clothes for the working woman, even recipes for the working woman. This implies something very sinister — that there exists a non-working woman who is therefore not in need of classy clothes or labor-saving devices. This is quite an insult to women."

Last December's tragic massacre at the Ecole polytechnique produced a radical feminist tract that describes it as "a misogynistic act of such horrifying sexism" that it became "a turning point in the history of relations between men and women."

"How is it possible to deny the sexual and orgasmic character of his act?" cried Monique Panaccio, a Montreal psychoanalyst. "An armed man, smiling with that force that comes from being all-powerful, who ejaculated his blasts of bullets, mortally pene-

"How is it possible to deny the sexual and orgasmic character of his act?" cried Monique Panaccio, a Montreal psychoanalyst. "An armed man, smiling with that force that comes from being all-powerful, who ejaculated his blasts of bullets, mortally penetrating those women's bodies, bodies left full of holes, raped."

Last weekend's international conference on Women and Power led off with protests against the $500 registration fee and a $25,000 donation by Hydro-Québec. "Our values as women is to protect the world," said the spokeswomen of the ecological feminists. After all, the conference rode madly off in all directions at once and ended in a spectacular screaming match.

A blast of refreshing fresh air was brought by Nina Lopez-Jones, spokeswoman for the London-Based Collective of Prostitutes. She said, "A lot of feminists forget that prostitutes are also women" and startled a male reporter who suggested pornography encourages violence against women with: "I come from Argentina. When the army was in power, pornography was banned but there was a lot more violence against women in Argentina than there is in England where pornography is more or less tolerated."

And in London last month (where Lopez-Jones revealed the astonishing news that many prostitutes "have been practicing safe sex for hundreds of years"), Marion Aken, alias Miss Whiplash and Lindi St. Clair, appeared in court dressed in black leather (with cat-o'-nine-tails and handcuff accessories) on a charge of income tax evasion. Inland Revenue had noticed her when she incorporated as Lindi St. Clair (Personal Service) Ltd. and honestly declared the company business to be prostitution. The High Court later quashed that preposterous registration as being for an unlawful purpose but ruled that she still had to pay $120,000 in back taxes plus legal costs.

"The tax man is a pimp!" she told reporters and none there cared to deny it.

Aerosmith Artist of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Aerosmith, the hard-driving rock band, was named artist of the year at the second annual International Rock Awards on Wednesday, while Toronto singer Alannah Myles was honored as best newcomer.

Tom Petty's Full Moon Fever was named album of the year, while Don Henley won songwriter of the year, said Liz Fort, a spokesman for the awards.

Eric Clapton previously had been named living legend of the year, she said.

Myles dominated the recent Canadian Juno Awards with her self-titled debut album, winning six of the music awards. The album has sold more than 800,000 copies in Canada.

Her single, Black Velvet, hit No. 1 on the U.S. Billboard chart in February and another single, Love Is, is now in the chart's Top 20.

Festival Lake Massawippi expands Antique & Folk Art Show

By Bruce Macfarlane

SHERBROOKE — Organizers of the Festival Lake Massawippi will be presenting their third North Hatley Antique and Folk Art show in July — with this year's show promising to be extraordinary.

With over 27 exhibitors displaying antique items ranging from Quebec pine furniture to oriental objects, the Festival Lake Massawippi is adding a touch of art to the show.

For the first time ever, an exhibition of over 30 Canadian artists will display their paintings during the three day event starting on July 13 at the North Hatley Elementary school.

Bertrand Lapalme, coordinator of the art exhibition, said some of the most renowned Township artists will be featured in North Hatley.

"All the pieces of artwork will be judged by a three member jury panel," Lapalme said during a Tuesday morning press conference.

"The best pieces will then be displayed at the primary school," Lapalme said.

Festival organizers have three objectives with the addition of the art exhibition to the July antique show.

The first objective is to promote and expose the artists to their own quality of work.

The festival is also trying to offer to visitors a wide choice of quality work and displaying the best paintings selected by a jury.

Lapalme said that all artists will receive a certificate of excellence with the top three artists awarded a cash bursary.

As art lovers browse through the elementary school, antique and folk art buffs can visit the local curling club and community centre where the region's top dealers present their best antiques.

Antique show coordinator Maggie Gallagher said her committee had one major criteria for dealers to meet — quality.

"We didn't just put an ad in the local rag sheet," Gallagher said.

"We have limited space," she said. "It's a vedded show by dealers in the past who know about the quality of the show." Gallagher said the antique show has grown in popularity in conjunction with the quality of dealers.

Michelle Picard of Robert Picard Antiques said the reputation of the old antique shows has brought the dealership to the local village for three years.

"In the beginning we heard about North Hatley and we never displayed at an exhibition until we came to North Hatley," Picard said.

Residents of the lakefront town have seen antique dealers come and go through North Hatley.

Back in 1960, the North Hatley antique show took place every summer for 17 years.

TRADITION REVIVED

After an 11 year absence, the Festival Lake Massawippi decided to revive the annual summer tradition. "I think one of the main reasons it closed down was it used to be held in the town hall in North Hatley but it burned to the ground," said executive committee member Sam Pollock.

Pollock said organizers felt there was no place to hold the show in the village so they decided to move out of town.

"After a year or two they moved it to Lennoxville," Pollock said. "It's hard to present the North Hatley Antique show in another town." After an 11-year absence, Pollock said they started to revive the annual tradition.

"Three years ago we started in the North Hatley Elementary school," he said. "Of course, we expanded it greatly." With the ever growing popularity and limited space in the elementary school, festival organizers decided to relocate.

"We think that the curling club is more adaptable along with the community centre," he said.

Pollock hopes with the addition of a jury art exhibiton to the annual antique and folk art exhibition, attendance should increase in great numbers.

"I don't think there is any doubt that it is going to increase our attendance greatly," he said.

"What you have now is a truly outstanding folk art and antique show along with some reknowned artists," he said. "That's broadened the interest not only from the community but also the visitors." The Festival Lake Massawippi opens the show on Friday July 13 and closes the doors two days later on the Sunday.

The antique and folk art show will take place in the curling club and community centre with the juried art exhibition and sale in the North Hatley Elementary school.

Sam Pollock, executive committee member for the Festival Lake Massawippi Antique and Folk Art Festival and confrère Jean Sylvestre were the bearers of good news about the event scheduled for July at a recent press conference held in Toronto.

TV mini-series, Traffik — about the heroin industry, wins award

By Gwen Dambrofsky

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — A mini-series about the international heroin trade led a British assault on the Banff Television Festival's annual awards Friday night.

Traffik, produced by London's Channel 4, won the grand prize of $5,000 and best limited series. The comprehensive drama begins with the destruction of a major drug ring, then tells how the route is rebuilt over the next six months.

It also looks at all sides of the heroin industry, from a poor Pakistani farmer's economic dependence on his poppy fields to an anti-drug politician's struggles with his junkie daughter.

Americans also scooped up a number of Rockies, most notably director David Lynch's bizarre night-time soap Twin Peaks in the continuing series category.

A telegram from co-creator Mark Frost thanked the festival's jury before offering fans of the murder mystery a tantalizing postscript: "The midget did it."

Actress Bea Arthur, star of NBC's The Golden Girls, was lauded with the festival's award of excellence.

"I'm slightly overwhelmed, looking at the list of previous winners," Arthur told reporters before the ceremony.

In past years, the award has been given to Gregory Peck, Dinah Shore and Ed Asner, among others.

Ironically, the comedy category suffered from a lack of plausible American submissions. Not even last year's winner, The Wonder Years, was entered. Instead the prize went to Channel 4's Norbert Smith — A Life, which parodied a documentary on the career of Laurence Olivier.

POIGNANT MOMENT

It was a poignant moment when the award for children's program was presented to Living With Dinosaurs, produced in Britain by late puppeteer Jim Henson.

"He would have been delighted at winning this award, because it's not a glitzy, glamor award," said Henson Organization spokesman Larry Mirkin.

The film tells the story of a nine-year-old boy and his extroverted friend Dog, a stuffed dinosaur.

Another American winner was the National Geographic Society science program Journey to the Forgotten River, produced by WQED in Pittsburgh. It chronicles the life and death struggle of animals caught in a drought during their desperate search for water.

Canada won two prizes. Best television feature was given to The Paper Wedding, a Montreal-produced made-for-TV movie.

Paper Wedding, which stars Genevieve Bujold and Manuel Aranguiz, is the story of a Chilean political refugee and his fight with Canadian immigration.

Best performance special went to For the Whales, by Rhombus Media of Toronto. The program brings Canadian artists such as novelist Margaret Atwood and composer John Cage together with whales in their natural environment.

The short drama award went to Germany for The Mine — Lemon Fizz, about two children who try to defuse a floating mine.

Australia's arts documentary Difficult Pleasure — A Portrait of Brett Whitely won for its profile of the gifted painter.

Korea took the social documentary category for Overseas Adoption, a look at the difficulty of getting Koreans to adopt children.

A new "award of courage" was inaugurated this year to honor those who have "used TV for more than making a buck or simply entertaining," said presenter Patrick Dromgwole, managing director of a Welsh television network.

Roland and Daniel Lépine will show off some of their collection at the Steam & Gas Meet

Steam powered engines — mighty giants of another era

By Claudia Villemare

WATERVILLE — At first glance, Daniel Lépine doesn't look like a steam engine fanatic at all.

You would expect someone rather short, slightly chubby, wearing a railroad-type cap. Or perhaps a middle-aged, chatty man, slightly stooped from stoking fires and tending steam gauges. However, Lépine is well over six feet tall, sports a dashing moustache, neither smokes nor wears railroad caps and is 24-years-old.

This athletic young man is the proud owner of what is probably the only operating steam engine tractor in Quebec — a behemoth that develops over 34 horsepower with its 200-gallon tank and eight and a half inch cylinder.

Now, in this age of computer games and science fiction, it seems a strange passion for one so young — collecting steam engines and spending every spare moment either repairing and restoring these ancient iron workhorses or searching for the books and manuals that will tell him how.

LOVE AFFAIR

Lépine fell in love with steam-powered motors and stationary gas engines almost before he was old enough to join the boy scouts. Roland Lépine blames his own love of turn-of-the-century gas motors on his young son.

"It's all his fault," he claims. "Daniel saw a gas engine sitting in a corner of a shed, asked what it was, and stated flatly he would like it."

"That was the first one I bought and the first thing you know, as we got better acquainted with these interesting motors, I was collecting the gas-fueled variety while Daniel looked for the steam-powered machines," he added.

The two Lépinés have been collecting for about 12 years now.

"You know, when he was just a little gaffer, we bought him a tiny, miniature steam engine, the kind you can fire up with lighter fluid or kerosene and be rewarded with a few huffs and puffs of smoke," Daniel's mother Claudette recalled.

"He loved that gift more than any other and I think he still has it. Steam engines — I think he was born with that love for them," she said, laughing, adding that no problem seems to puzzle her mechanic son.

ENVY OF COLLECTORS

Crowded into almost every corner of 'the Lépine shed' are gas motors in varying state of repair and age that would turn other collectors green with envy.

Roland Lépine restores these ancient mechanical workhorses himself, poring over instruction manuals and catalogues, making sure every detail is brought back to its original role and shine, using only authentic replacement pieces if possible.

With the Gas and Steam Meet coming up this weekend in Stanstead, the Lépinés have been working double time getting their gas and steam motors in working order, even down to polishing the carefully moulded fittings that were, back in the 'good old days' made of moulded brass.

Some of the elder Lépine's gas motors date back to 1900 and he has one he claims is the oldest and only one of its kind in the province. Some of these motors are equipped with water basins that are decorated with beaver and the maple leaf. Iron casting was a matter of pride among the former manufacturers and it is not unusual to see various types of decorative curliques and emblems on piston casings, wheels and water basins.

PIECE DE RESISTANCE

Daniel's 'pièce de résistance' — a George White steam powered tractor, completely restored down to the driver's platform and brass whistle-flutes. This is a giant with a smoke stack that soars nearly to the roof of the shed. Its rear wheels are at least four feet high, the giant flywheel a forty-inch diameter cast iron wheel weighs around four hundred pounds.

"She produces about 34 horsepower and the steam-motor inspectors will let me take the pressure up to 100 pounds per square inch," Dan Lépine says proudly.

He points to the inside of her 200-gallon tank where water tubes fill the interior and steam gathers in the front chamber. Then he climbed onto the driver's platform and manipulated the handle of a long shaft to demonstrate how one shifts from low to high gear.

"See, the gears are right out in the open, in front of you. To find neutral, you place the shifting lever in between the two speed gears," he said. He examined the clutch, made of sections of wood hardened and bolted into the mechanism of a spoke wheel.

IN DEMAND

"Spoke wheels of this era are very much in demand," he explained. "You see, welding and soldering as we know it today hadn't been invented so they cast the spokes then welded them on the wheel using a forge, heated rods and powdered metal. You can imagine if the job was well and consistently done, the workman who did the job had to love his work." Lépine added.

"And if you want to shift into reverse, you just reverse the motor," he added with a chuckle. "You see, the motor takes power from both ends of the 8½ inch cylinder which, by the way, has an 8½ inch stroke too."

"But there's one thing you can't do — that is go up a hill," he said.

"This was a flat-land tractor, probably used in grain crop country around 1917 or 18," Roland Lépine adds. "They were manufactured in London, Ontario and Brandon, Manitoba."

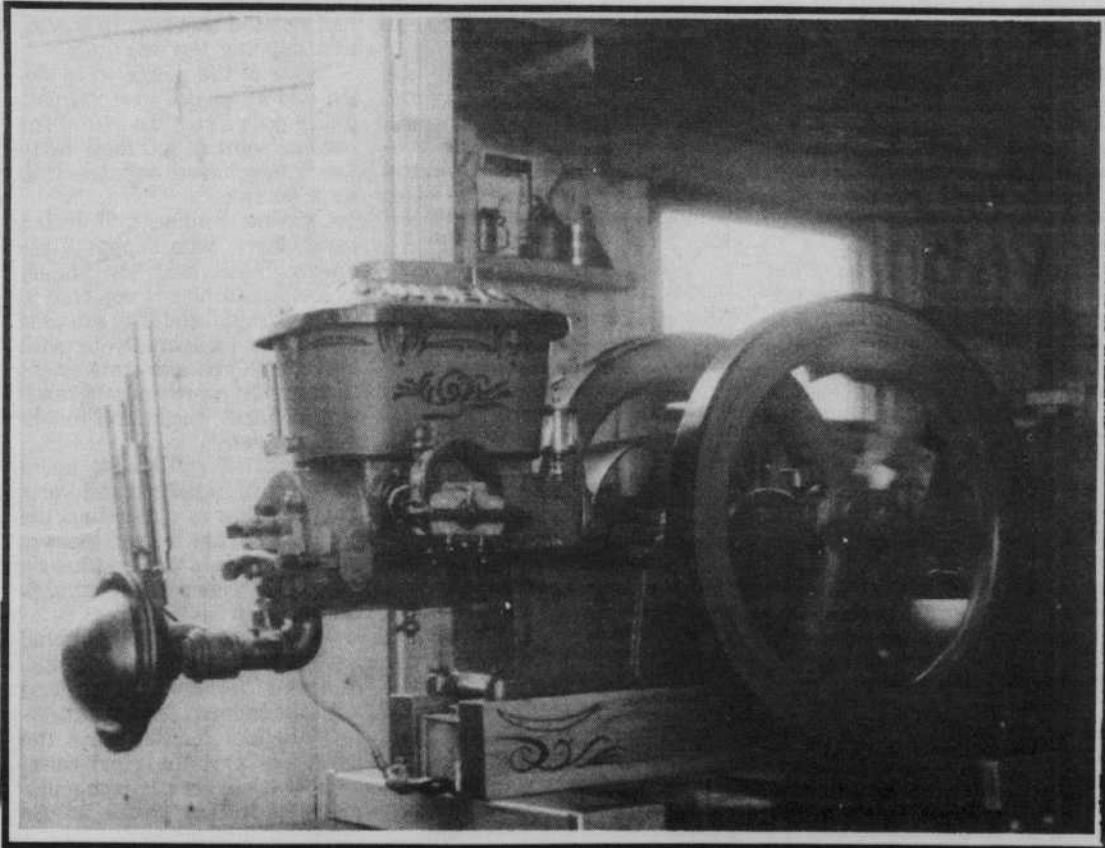

Anyone who has never heard the 'thwup, thwup...THWUP' of a steam or stationary gas motor has missed quite an experience and the Gas and Steam Meet in Stanstead this weekend is a great place to get acquainted with these large and small giants from another era.

This weekend the hiss of steam from the safety valve or the scream of those brass whistle-flutes on the Lépine steam engine will be a fitting introduction to the workmanship and mechanical ingenuity that began to blossom around the turn of the century. It may not turn the audience into avid steam or gas motor collectors, but the exhibition will certainly emphasize the giant obstacles mechanical engineering has overcome as we compare today's technology to yesterday's inventions.

"It's Dan's fault that I became a collector. He persuaded me to buy that first stationary gas engine," Dan's Dad said.

Cyrano — a romantic swashbuckler in spoken verse

By Ina Warren

MONTREAL (CP) — A rose is a rose is a rose. But it takes a nose to create the sweet smell of box-office success.

Cyrano de Bergerac, starring Gerard Depardieu as the romantic hero doomed by his outsize nose, swept into Montreal during the weekend fresh from its triumph in France where it's the No. 1 movie.

Jean-Paul Rappeneau, the film's modest director, accompanied by Anne Brochet, the 23-year-old actress who plays Roxanne, spent a week promoting the movie in Montreal and Quebec City.

Cyrano was given its gala North American premiere at Montreal's Place des Arts, but Depardieu was unable to attend.

The busy French actor is currently in New York shooting Green Card, his first English-language movie directed by Australian Peter Weir.

In any case, movie-goers in English-Canada will have to wait until December to see an English sub-titled version of Cyrano, a two-hour-and-20-minute romantic swashbuckler in spoken verse.

The movie is liberally based on Edmund Rostand's 19th-century play, with the action unfolding in mid 17th-century France.

TRANSFORMS HERO

The real Cyrano was a flamboyant swordsman, soldier and poet who met an ignoble death in 1655, when a plank fell on his head. The mishap — only alluded to in the play — is graphically depicted in Rappeneau's movie.

Indeed, Rappeneau's realistic rendering and Depardieu's heart-rending performance have transformed Cyrano from the cardboard caricature of the stage — not to mention the 1950 Hollywood version starring Jose Ferrer — into a tragic hero.

"I wanted to rid the work of its comic aspect," Rappeneau explained in an interview: "It simply didn't interest me.

"I thought, instead, of developing Cyrano's dark and suffering side. After all, Cyrano is a man who does not like himself.

"He says that it's his monstrous nose that has cut him off from women and the world. But he's the one who's exaggerated its importance, so that he may isolate himself in internal exile."

Depardieu's performance brought the acclaimed 41-year-old actor his first best-actor award from the Cannes Film Festival, even though he has been a contender 11 times.

The movie also received an award at Cannes for best photography.

At $25 million, Cyrano is said to be the most expensive French-language movie in history, yet by Hollywood standards that wouldn't even buy a Gremlins 2.

Still, Rappeneau feared he might have an epic box-office flop on his hands, because young people in France today have hardly heard of Cyrano.

"If you ask them," remarked Rappeneau, "they say 'Who? Cyrano. Oh, was he the guy with the big nose or something?'"

Brochet read the play for the first time when she decided to audition for Roxanne.

"But the incredible and delicious surprise for us is that it's the young people who're making Cyrano such a success," said Rappeneau. "We were afraid that a historical movie in verse wouldn't appeal to them. And frankly, this nagged me all during the five-month shoot.

"But not only are they going to see Cyrano, they're going back three and four times!"

Cyrano is a movie without sex or nudity, in which both hero and heroine die virgins.

So what's the appeal?

"I really don't know," the director admitted, shaking his head. "Perhaps, it's nostalgia for a time when romantic feelings were more noble and discreet."

Summer — when blockbusters & sequels bloom at every box office

By Ina Warren

The Canadian Press

His bountiful biceps glistening like a pair of rotisserie hams, mega-star Arnold Schwarzenegger has landed the first major blow in what's shaping up as a gruesome battle for the summer's movie box office.

Tri-Star's $50-million sci-fi film Total Recall, starring The Silent One as a Martian with amnesia, was one of the first Hollywood blockbusters to roar into the overcrowded summer movie lane and grab the No. 1 spot.

With last summer's box office pulling in a record $2 billion, the studios gambled that film-goers would be ready for another feeding frenzy this summer.

So between June and September, the marketplace will be inundated with over 40 Hollywood movies, many of them fat flicks with even fatter hype.

What's uncertain is whether the public will take the bait, weekend after weekend, especially with first-run movie tickets nudging $8.

BEATTY'S FRIENDS

It will be hard to avoid the Disney company's $26-million Dick Tracy, directed by and starring Warren Beatty as the square-jawed detective.

Naughty video-queen Madonna, Beatty's real-life squeeze, is cast in the movie as good-girl-gone-wrong Breathless Mahoney.

Beatty also lined up pals Dustin Hoffman, Al Pacino and James Caan for cameo roles as nasties Mumbles, Big Boy Caprice and Spaldoni.

So with friends like that, who needs hype?

Dick Tracy does if it's going to become the kind of mega-hit that Batman was last summer and Who Killed Roger Rabbit? was the previous year.

Today's young movie-goers weren't raised on Dick Tracy in the Sunday comics, and the 53-year-old Beatty, who has made only two movies in the last nine years, is getting a bit long in the tooth to be considered a box-office dream date.

Still, if Dick Tracy doesn't do it for Disney, the versatile company has other summer releases: the sci-fi movie Arachnophobia, the animated feature Ducktales — The Movie, and a reissue of the animated classic Jungle Book.

SEQUELS GLUT

Sequels, a sure symbol of creative bankruptcy, are also glutting the summer lineup.

They're not a sure formula for success. Both Rambo III and Ghostbusters II did disappointing business.

Already out there is Universal's Back to the Future Part III — a misnomer if ever there was one, since this Michael J. Fox clunker is set in the Wild West.

Twentieth Century-Fox has also succumbed to sequelmania.

Bruce Willis is back in Fox's Die Hard II, Die Harder — the studio can't make up its mind — as detective John McClane, the gumshoe who turned a white cotton vest into a sex symbol.

And a posse of younger sex symbols will ride into movie theatres again as Young Guns II reunites Old West rebels Emilio Estevez, Kiefer Sutherland and Lou Diamond Phillips in another saga of Billy the Kid. This one is billed as the ultimate showdown, which should mean no Young Guns III, but don't count on it.

Another big-buck sequel is Paramount's Another 48 Hours, with Eddie Murphy and Nick Nolte reprising their roles as a cop-and-crook team bound by mutual loathing on the streets of San Francisco. The movie cost $50 million, which works out to a bit more than $1 million for each hour of the title.

BLOOD AND GORE

And if Total Recall's exploding heads, shredded bodies, popping eyeballs and amputated arms don't satiate the mass craving for celluloid violence, there are Terminator II, Robocop II and Predator II to blast away the rest of the summer doldrums.

Such special-effects action movies don't come cheap, usually costing from $20 million to $60 million.

Said one studio exec, explaining the astronomical budgets: "It costs a lot of money to blow things up and replace them and blow them up again."

Sure to blow eardrums will be Days of Thunder, reuniting Academy Award nominee Tom Cruise and director Tony Scott in a drama set in the world of stock-car racing and the Daytona 500.

The $55-million flick is considered an unofficial sequel to the ear-splitting Cruise-Scott hit Top Gun, which was set in the gung-ho world of navy bomber pilots.

Just to prove how long Hollywood can stretch a sequel, The Exorcist III: Legion, comes to the screen 17 years after the Linda Blair original, and 13 years after Exorcist II: The Heretic.

Apparently Exorcist III won't answer the question, Who is possessed? but rather, How many are possessed?

A better question might well be: Who cares?

Bolivian Indians want antique weavings back

By Peter McFarren

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Centuries-old tapestries depicting gods, animals and people in natural dyes of blue, brown, red and indigo have become the stuff of legal argument.

At issue is not their beauty, which is undeniable, but whether they are private property or the spiritual heritage of an Indian town.

Collectors abroad pay handsomely for such weavings made by Indians of the Andes Mountains from the wool of alpacas, llamas and vicunas.

A prolonged legal battle in North American courts pits international dealers in antiquities against the Aymara Indians of Coroma, 290 kilometres south of La Paz by dirt road, and has involved the Bolivian, U.S. and Canadian governments.

It is a contest between the concept of private property and the communal ownership in which Indian cultures find religious significance, rooted in the lucrative traffic in antiquities and artifacts from Latin America.

Elders in Coroma, where about 10,000 Aymaras live in thick-walled adobe huts, seek the return of weavings they describe as sacred.

ARTIFACTS SEIZED

In 1988, U.S. customs agents in San Francisco seized 56 textiles of the pre-Columbian and colonial eras from dealer Steven Berger.

In Halifax, police confiscated about 6,000 Bolivian artifacts, including an unspecified number of Coroma weavings, from Roger York, a former partner of Berger.

All the goods are being held pending court rulings on whether they were exported from Bolivia illegally.

Town elders say some people in Coroma sold the cloths, which are kept in families for generations, to Bolivian middlemen without community authorization, and the middlemen sold them to the foreign dealers. The villagers involved have been ostracized, and in some cases jailed.

The weavings are used in religious rites, and community leaders say their loss has disrupted spiritual life. Some blame the absence of the cloths for troubles in the town and surrounding countryside.

In La Paz, Maria Bedoya, director of the Bolivian Culture Institute, who is helping with the town's case, said she was confident the cloths would be returned.

IN GOOD FAITH

Speaking by telephone from San Francisco, Berger denied he had violated any laws in buying and shipping the weavings.

"None of the pieces were stolen and all pieces were purchased in good faith," he said. "The Indians want to sell their textiles. I purchased textiles that were for sale."

Cristina Bubba, a Bolivian psychologist who supports the town's efforts, said "the history of the community is depicted in the weavings," and they are used as oracles to communicate with ancestors. "The ancestors orient or direct the community in resolving political, social and individual problems."

About 1.5 million Aymara Indians live in Bolivia and Peru. Their culture is older than the Incas, who are better known, and always has put a value on tribal weavings at least equal to that of gold.

The Centre for Constitutional Rights, based in New York City, is among the agencies working with the Indians. Its legal director, Michael Ratner, said the effort was "part of a larger movement to try to get back the patrimony of Indian tribes in the Western Hemisphere."

Sunset Manor — a story aging, told from the inside

Sunset Manor by Richard B. Wright (SEAL BOOKS): $19.95, 180 pp.

Marking twenty years since the publication of The Weekend Man, author Richard Wright chooses a subject that also deals with the passing of time for his current novel, Sunset Manor.

In this book Wright attempts an investigation of those private institutions that are beginning to appear everywhere as our populations inevitably move into the "golden years". Wright's novel focuses on the denizens of one of those ubiquitous homes for the aged which invariably utilize "sunset" or "manor" in their names.

Taking the popularized Arthur Hailey tactic used in his exploration of hotels, Detroit, or the evening newscast, Wright introduces us to a small group of residents in the manor, beginning with Miss Kay Ormsby. Miss Ormsby is the epitome of every high school English teacher who ever combined a love of literature with spinsterhood and eccentric behavior. When she checks into Sunset Manor it becomes obvious that her lifestyle will be at direct variance with the accepted behavior of residents such as her neighbour Mrs. Lucas.

No sooner has Kay Ormsby taken up residence than Mrs. Lucas begins to complain to the matronly Mrs. Rawlings about the late-night chanting and loudly played music coming from the newcomer's room.

Miss Ormsby is determined that her love of literature, which is responsible for the muted poetry readings she indulges in, and her love of music, revealed in the selections of recordings she delights in playing, will neither be abated by her adjusting to new quarters or by nosy neighbours.

With this potential conflict put into train, Wright adds in complications created by the sexual proclivities indulged in by Mr. Arthr Wilkie, whose eighty years have not diminished his fascination with the fair sex. Another character who is carefully drawn by author Wright is Lorne Truscott, who's introspective musings reveal to us that he has a penchant for tormenting Mrs. Lucas. Disturbed by her cranky demeanor, Truscott arranges to have giant pizzas and Chinese dinners for twelve delivered to the lady, as well as making her the amazed recipient of all kinds of TV-ad, mail-order gimmickry.

As the overseer of these well-defined characters, Wright reveals Mrs. Rawlings to be as tyrannical in her own understated, sycophantish way as any keeper of a nineteenth century "bedlam". (That word which derived, incidentally, from the London cockney's mangled pronunciation of Bethlehem Hospital for the mentally insane!)

With Miss Ormsby out of her

By RICHARD LONEY

room Mrs. Rawlings uses her pass-key to check out the eccentric lady's record and book collections, and proves to be an indifferent arbiter when Mrs. Lucas is complaining about Lorne Truscott's rude interruptions of her moments of solace in her bathroom.

Aside from these character types created to represent old age in its many faces, Wright is more successful in his attempts to get inside the minds of the Sunset Manor citizens, particularly as they deal with such everyday dilemmas as abandonment by their children, the strange tricks of fading memories, and the special interpersonal skills required by adults of eighty years or older. Miss Ormsby is allowed to reminisce about her chequered past and unorthodox life as a smalltown schoolteacher, as memories of these days well up spontaneously while she listens to Mozart or reads her naughty Byron.

All of these characters, in fact, are used by Richard Wright to offer insight into the wide range of problems encountered by the elderly, and with Sunset Manor he reveals that they can provide as interesting material for a novelist as the youthful or middle-aged.

RECORD REVIEWS

Trip Shakespeare Across the Universe (A&M)

If you were looking for a group that matches the inspired madness and unorthodox approach to a pop song evinced by Trip Shakespeare, probably the last place you'd look would be Minneapolis, Minnesota.

But the midwest must be tired of being considered the halfway point between New York and Los Angeles, musically speaking, and that's why some of the most interesting young bands keep cropping up in middle America. First it was Husker Du, a short-lived experiment in mod rock, then the Replacements, and now, in the same bloodlines, the madcap Trip Shakespeare.

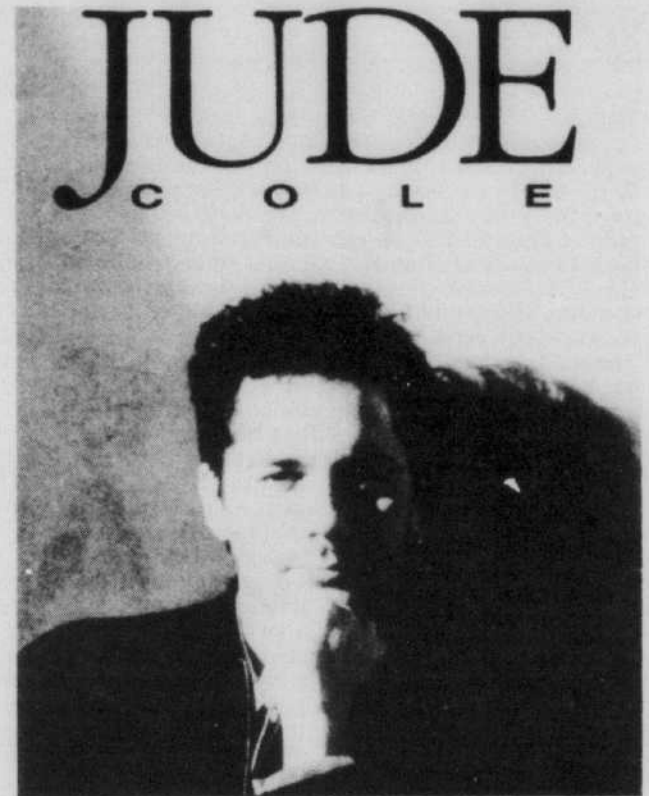

They are indeed a trip, this original and reportedly-outrageous-in-concert quartet composed of drummer Elaine Harris, six-foot-six bassist John Munson, and the second set of Wilson siblings to make it in rock after Heart's ladies, Dan and Matt Wilson. The male trippers handle the vocals and they are layed on with loving attention on these little mini-epic songs.

One such is "Snow Days", which extols the forbidden delights of giving in to the wintry deluge of a mid-west snowstorm: "There's a blessing on your town/ On a lucky Monday, Mrs. Braintree/ All your lanes are waxen silver/ And the stores are loot for vagabonds...Go home! Go home and take a snow day, Mrs. Braintree!"

A song like "Late", with its message of sincere love, is played out like an operetta, as Trip Shakespeare takes outrageous chances with their dynamic voicings; on "Pearle" they give a clinic in sounding like the great sixties vocal group The Association, right down to the harmony patterns and cute chord changes reminiscent of "Cherish" or

"Wendy"

With their wry sense of humour, Trip Shakespeare's writers (mainly the Wilson brothers) can write about paranoia in the face of a pinching economy in "The Crane", or turn modern love into surrealistic nonsense in "Gone, Gone, Gone". Most of all, Trip Shakespeare's songs are vibrant with a witty, imaginative approach to songwriting that is altogether lost on the sequined, blush 'n' glow boys with their dry ice smokescreens and empty minds.

Trip Shakespeare should rocket to the top of the College Album charts by grace of their enigmatic songwriting talents and the attention they paid to every detail of these challenging songs. Jude Cole A View From 3rd Street (REPRISE — WEA)

Imagine Richard Marx with a generous addition of grit and gonads and you might have some impression of how Jude Cole's hard-edged rock performances come across. The pride of East Moline, Illinois hails from what he calls "a real rural midwestern background". At age five he passed the time listening to Elvis and playing the broom.

From that point onward, Jude knew precisely what he planned to do with his life. (My father played George Jones and Merle Haggard, my sister was into rock. I loved the Beatles and Deep Purple. Growing up, I was completely inspired and supported.)

Anyone within listening or watching distance of an FM radio or a rock video show will know that "Baby, It's Tonight" is the hard charging single release that has finally brought Jude Cole's new talent to light.

As with most solo rockers who hit the spotlight, tales of Cole's formative years and dues paying would fill a small rock biography. Leaving Illinois for the glamour of L.A., Cole worked as co-lead singer with Moon Martin & The Ravens, toured with bands like the Police and Blondie, then joined the British band The Records, only to end up touring Australia with the likes of the late Del Shannon and Dwight Twilley, among others.

Moving onto east side Los Angeles's 3rd Street, Cole dedicated himself to writing some 88 songs over a two year period, the fruitful results of which sparkle forth on this, his second album. "Baby, It's Tonight" was not chosen for initial release because it is the strongest thing on Jude Cole's album; many listeners might nominate "Get Me Through The Night" for sheer drive and unrelenting rhythmic sparkle, or "Time For Letting Go" for barely-restrained emotional appeal.

Equally impressive is Cole's command of guitars — rhythm, leads, slide and all solos — of notable importance because usually an album such as this one would feature a bevy of Van Nuys studio demons to ensure that everything clicked perfectly.

Cole had the benefit of his producer David Tyson adding keyboards to the record, as well as drum programming, and Lee Sklar contributes most of the bass work. The vocal backgrounds, manifest on tracks such as "Stranger To Myself" or the Beach Boys acapella opening to "This Time It's Us", are virtually all supplied by the multi-talented Cole.

Totally accessible songs, which bristle with as many hooks as a tackle shop, should guarantee that Jude Cole has an impressive string of deserved hits to be drawn from his portraits of love in the '90s as seen from A View From 3rd Street.

WHAT'S ON

Notes

Once again it's Arts and Crafts Show time.

The summer schedule in the Eastern Townships includes the Steam Meet at Rock Island this weekend — June 16 and 17 — at Sunnyside School. The show also hosts a Tai Kwan Do demonstration Saturday and a parade of antique and classic vehicles Sunday. The whole affair — excluding the gas and steam engines which will be outside — takes place in the Sunnyside Elementary School where handicrafts of all kinds will be on display. Read about a father-son team of steam engine restorers on page five and — better yet — take a drive, enjoy the scenery and end up at the Standstead Gas and Steam Meet. For more info or applications for exhibitors and/or vendors call Allan Nourse — (819) 826-5092 or 876-5318 or Arlene Probyn at (819) 876-7266 or 876-5889.

This has been a busy week again as we renewed acquaintance with a pair of beaver, tipped our hats to a mallard duck and her family of 14 ducklings out for an evening cruise. We chatted with an elderly farmer as he picked stones, his faithful horse standing patiently by waiting to draw the loads away in an old farm wagon. We stopped to watch a red-wing bathe in a grassy puddle and held our breath as a tiny woodchuck skittered across a busy highway. It was a busy week for all concerned!

Exhibitions

Renowned watercolorist Mary S. Martin will display her recent work at the Brome County Historical Society Museum in Knowlton beginning June 23 and continuing until July 1 — 10 to 5 daily.

An exhibition of watercolors by Joyce Schweitzer-Cochrane continues at the Memphremagog Library Inc., 61 Merry St. North, Magog. Titled Earth and Sky Celebration, Schweitzer says, "The title I've chosen for this show implies, without saying, WATER, which is found in both places." The show continues until June 30.

Works by self-taught artist Marie Jo Radenac will be exhibited at Galerie Jeannine Blais, 100 rue Main, North Hatley until June 18.

An exhibition of work by Christiane Duplessis local artist continues at La Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke-Est on Bowen Street. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday and Friday from 10 to 3, Wednesday from 10 to 5:45 and Thursday from 10 to 8.

At Galerie Horace — Alain Lizotte with an exhibition titled Rite.

The story of wildlife in the city continues this week at Centre d'Exposition Léon-Marcotte on Frontenac Street. The display features the many species of wild animals that have adjusted their lifestyle to the rhythm of the city, and have survived. Sounds like an eye-opener! The centre is open from 12:30 to 5 every day except Monday.

The Sherbrooke District Scouting Association display continues at the Uplands Museum in Lennoxville. The museum is open from 1 to 5 weekdays (except Mondays). The exhibition includes a history of scouting in the area and much more. You'll find the museum at 50 Park St. in Lennoxville.

The Sherbrooke Historical Society exhibition continues in Pavilion III, Domaine Howard. Entitled Allez aux colonies (go to Canada). The exhibition takes the viewer on a journey back in time to the days when the first settlers arrived in the Eastern Townships.

At Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke Est is an exhibition by Alain Desrochers, another self-taught artist. His show is called Et La Lumière Fut. The gallery is at 2 Bowen Street South, and hours are Monday, Tuesday and Friday from 10 to 3, Wednesday from 10 to 5 and Thursday from 10 to 8.

Arthur Villeneuve, self-taught artist specializing in scenes of the Quebec countryside joins several other self-taught artists in a collection that remains on display until September 23 at Musée Laurier, 16 rue Laurier, Arthabaska. The museum is open Monday to Friday from 9 to 5 — Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5.

Beaulne Museum presents the recent works of artist Sylvie Lauzon and Luc Tanguay until June 17. The museum is open every day from 11 to 5 and is located at 96 Union St. in Coaticook.

There will be two summer shows at Equipax Gallery — the first featuring Lucien Day the distinguished American painter from Craftsbury, Vermont and Jean Massey, a Canadian sculptor from Stukely, Quebec. This exhibition continues until June 30. Regular gallery hours are from 10 to 8:30 Thursdays and Fridays, from 10 to 3 on Saturdays. Sunday through Wednesday visiting is by appointment. The gallery is located in The Hood Building at 30 Coventry St., next to the U.S. Post Office in Newport. For info call (802) 334-8054.

An exhibition titled Femmes à la Une, presented weekends until June 24, continues at the Louis-St-Laurent National Historic Site in Compton. The display puts into perspective the evolution of the status of Quebec women over the past five decades. The site is open Tuesday to Sunday from 10 to 5 until June 24 and is located at 6 Principal St. South in Compton. Admission is free. For info call (819) 835-5448.

The North Hatley Library presents Anita Elkin with an exhibition of lithographs and woodcuts until June 16. Elkin's display may be viewed during regular library hours — Tuesday to Friday from 10 to 12:30, Wednesday evening from 6:30 to 8:30 and Saturday from 10 to noon. Another exhibition of recent watercolors by Barbara Mathews opens June 17.

The Arts Sutton Summer School '90 opens July 3 with a five-day workshop exploring direct block printing and monoprinting techniques as well as silk-screening, creating fabrics, T-shirts, yard lengths or working on unprimed canvas. Marianne Revenko is the guest professor for the weekend. The course is for all levels, non-toxic and costs $215 with materials. The school is situated in the Eastern Townships, Brome Missisquoi County. The building is a restored church located near Dunham. Accommodation is available. For more info, call (514) 248-3969.

The Stanstead Historical Society presents an exhibition titled From Past to Present featuring quilts from the past Colby Curtis Collection, modern quilts by Adaire Chown Schlatter and pottery Richard Surette. Opening day is June 15 and the show continues until September 30.

The Musée des Beaux Arts on rue Palais in Sherbrooke will exhibit nearly 500 works from their permanent collection during the summer months. The museum is open every day except Monday. For info call (819) 821-2115.

Yvon-M. Daigle Studio, specialising in supporting and exhibiting the work of self-taught artists will open a group exhibition on June 14 at 2. The studio is located just west of St. Denis de Brompton at 1190 Chemin Marois, off Rte 222. For info call (819) 846-3606.

Movies

At the Capitol Theatre, on King East again this week is Back to the Future III, starring, among others, Michael J. Fox. Curtain rises at 7 and 9:20 Monday to Friday with matinées Saturday and Sunday at 2 and 4:30.

This week at La Maison du Cinéma in Sherbrooke — Cadillac Man starring Robin Williams and Tim Robbins, a perennially funny duo. Curtain rises at 7:05 and 9:25 every day.

The Carrefour de l'Estrie's cinema offers three English films this week — a startling but pleasant surprise. That adds up to more English movies in town for a week than we've seen in many moons. Wow!

Another 48 Hours, restricted to 14 years and over, plays at 12:50, 3, 5:10 and 7:20 on Saturday and Sunday. Weekdays showtimes are 7:20 and 9:30.

The second bill is Total Recall the film that has Arnold Schwarzenegger in his greatest role so far. Curtain rises at 12:30, 2:45, 5, 7:15 and 9:30 on Saturday and Sunday. Weekdays showtimes are 7:15 and 9:30.

Also turning up at Cinéma Carrefour is Gremlins 2, a continuation of the tale of those wild and wacky creatures with big eyes and long bony fingers. Curtain rises at 12:30, 2:45, 5, 7:15 and 9:30 on Saturday and Sunday. Showtime is 7:15 and 9:30 on weekdays.

Cowansville's Princess Theatre hangs on to Back to the Future: Part III for another week. But they are also being invaded by little Gremlins too, so Cowansville region movie-goers can catch this wacky, weird film at the Princess too. Gremlins 2 opens on Friday. Curtain rises at 7:15 and 9:15 with special rates on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

South of the border in Newport, Merrill's Showplace this week Total Recall, starring Arnold Schwarzenegger. Curtain rises at 7:10 and 9:25 Friday to Thursday. Matinées are at 1:50 Saturday and Sunday.

Bird on a Wire, opens this week starring the comedy team of Mel Gibson and Goldie Hawn. Showtimes are 7 and 9:20 Friday to Thursday with matinées Saturday and Sunday at 1:40.

And, also turning up in Newport — Back to the Future — Part 3. Curtain rises at 6:50 and 9:15 Friday to Thursday. Weekend matinées begin at 1:30.

Competitive fares in Montreal-Ottawa-Toronto triangle

By Felicity Munn
The Canadian Press

Widescale air fare wars in Canada are largely a thing of the past since Canadian Airlines International swallowed War-dair last year.

But there's one region where competition remains heated.

"If you want fare wars in Canada, look to the triangle," says Canadian Airlines spokesman Jack Lawless, referring to routes in the Toronto-Montreal-Ottawa triangle.

With their high-frequency business travellers, those routes are the most lucrative in the country.

And the competition — in frequency, service and airport facilities as well as fares — has been intensifying since Intair came on the scene last autumn.

The Montreal-based carrier already has about 15 per cent of market share in the triangle, making it the third largest airline in Canada.

BARGAIN START

Intair used to be Inter-Canadian, a connector carrier for Canadian Airlines. But after the two airlines "divorced," Inter-Canadian became Intair and started flying Toronto-Montreal at the bargain fare of $89 one way.

That has since risen to $109 one way, but, subject to certain conditions, Intair also offers a $109 round-trip fare for passengers who fly both ways after 7:30 p.m.; an excursion fare of $99 return with a minimum-stay requirement of three days; and a weekend excursion fare of $99 round trip with a minimum-stay requirement of one Saturday night.

That's cheaper than the regular Via Rail return fare of $130 between Montreal and Toronto, although booking five days in advance reduces the Via price to $78.

Intair boasts that its fleet is among the newest in North America. It flies Fokker 100 jets on its Montreal-Toronto and Montreal-Ottawa runs from Dorval airport and ATR-42 turboprops on flights to Toronto from St-Hubert airport, south of Montreal.

Business-class travel on Intair costs a minimum add-on of $25 each way. Its frequent-flyer program, Intair-Bonus, is a partner in the programs at KLM, American Airlines and Sabena.

WANTS TO BE GOOD

Spokeswoman Beatrice Pepper says Intair's aim is not to compete with the majors but to build a reputation for consistent service and appeal to people from small and medium-sized firms concerned about the cost of business travel.

Intair's presence has not impelled the majors to reduce their base fares in the triangle. One way full economy fare between Montreal and Toronto on either Canadian Airlines or Air Canada's Rapidair flights is $175, and it's $196 in business class.

But Intair's excursion fares have elicited a response.

Both Air Canada and Canadian are offering summer promotional fares of $99 and $108 return between Toronto and Montreal, subject to availability.

Air Canada, long No. 1 in the triangle, has also increased its frequency with Rapidair Metro, a new turbo-prop service operated from Toronto Island Airport to Montreal and Ottawa by one of its connector carriers, Air Ontario.

Fares are the same as Rapidair fares, passengers have a choice of airports in Toronto — Island or Pearson — and they may also accumulate or redeem travel points on Aeroplan, Air Canada's frequent-flyer plan, on either airline.

UPGRADE LOUNGES

Air Canada also recently renovated its Rapidair boarding lounges at Montreal's Dorval and Toronto's Pearson airports. At Pearson the renovations marked the start of a major upgrading of Terminal 2, the hub for the airline's network, slated for completion in 1992.

Try the Lake Champlain area for your summer fun this year

BURLINGTON, Vt. — This summer, discover the blue lakes, green mountains, history, the arts and fun of the Lake Champlain region of Vermont.

Burr Vail, chairman of the Lake Champlain Regional Chamber of Commerce said, "This is a summer of fun — dozens of activities, good eating and shopping. With one of America's most beautiful lakes at our doorsteps and with a major destination for tourists — and for locals who just can't leave Vermont summers."

Tour a chocolate factory and Vermont brewery or indulge yourself at a New England clam-bake. Picnic at the magnificent Shelburne Farms Estate while listening to Mozart performed by world-renowned musicians. Stroll along Church Street or visit the Ethan Allen Homestead for a tour of the home of the state's founder and revolutionary hero.

Tap your toes and snap your fingers to the sounds of jazz throughout the streets, in the buses, restaurants and shopping centres of Burlington during the sixth annual Discover Jazz Festival.

Relax by the shores of Lake Champlain any evening throughout the summer or take out a canoe, rowboat or sailboat. Take a shoreline cruise on the Spirit of Ethan Allen or the ferries.

Cast your line and fish for salmon, trout, pike and major prizes at international fishing derbies.

Or bring home a piece of the past at any of seven top-rated antique, craft and art shows or go to the Big Apple Circus in August at the Shelburne Museum. Stroll through the museum's 37 historic buildings and period homes on 45 parklike acres. Or you can tour the S.S. Ticonderoga, a sidewheeler that once transported passengers in elegant style up and down Lake Champlain now. The ship is now berthed on the grounds.

Finish up this summer at the Champlain Valley Fair — Vermont's largest fair, where Reba McEntire and Willie Nelson will perform and family fun includes hundreds of rides and exhibits.

For a free brochure of summer events happening in and around the Burlington area, write Lake Champlain Regional Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 453, Burlington, Vt. 05402-0453 — or call (802) 863-3489.

Prosperity helps make Taiwan a 'land of lust'

By Annie Huang

TAIPEI (AP) — If you step off the plane needing a trim and shave, don't go into that neon-lit barbershop with a facade resembling the Great Pyramid.

Hundreds of such gaudy establishments line the streets of Taipei, Taiwan's capital. They deal primarily in sex, not the tonsorial arts.

Prostitution, like the economy, is flourishing in Taiwan.

"Taipei is a city of lust," city Councilman Yen Chin-fu said. "Girlie restaurants and bars are everywhere, even in residential and school areas. Some are next to police stations."

Several feminist groups are fighting back, but with little success.

"As our society gets richer, it is also getting more corrupt," said Chen Yi-chen of the Women's Rescue Foundation.

Yen estimated at least 5,000 restaurants, bars, "barbershops" and other establishments were selling sex in Taipei.

Procuring women for clients has become part of the business culture. It helps explain the success of such restaurants as Flower of Flowers, a vast expanse of 100 intimate dining rooms, where 250 hostesses sing, flirt with customers and often leave with them.

In the barbershops, behind exteriors depicting pyramids, Chinese palaces or Hawaiian beaches, are masseuses in chi-paos, the tight, traditional Chinese dresses with high slits at the thigh.

Because Taipei has few barbershops that do not offer sex, many men go to beauty salons for haircuts.

Every street has a small hotel offering short-time rates for "xiuxi," or resting.

They cater to men who do not want to be seen with their mistresses or with prostitutes. Many offer "completely automatic service," which enables customers to choose rooms and pay bills without seeing anyone.

In some neighborhoods, pimps stand at streetcorners and often try to drag men into their brothels by physical force.

Taipei has 40 licensed brothels. All are in the Wanhua district, where red lights line alleys behind a main thoroughfare noted for shops selling snake and turtle soups, said to enhance virility.

All the prostitution outside Wanhua is illegal, but critics of the government say police are paid to do nothing.

A city official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said: "There is nothing we can do unless we catch the girls undressed or scarcely clad."

Newspapers say many housewives and women college students work in the sex industry either part time or full time, but that only a few hundred are licensed and receive periodic medical checks.

Chen of the Women's Rescue Foundation and other activists say girls nine to 16 account for about half of the estimated 200,000 prostitutes.

"Taiwanese men have the misconception that the minors are cleaner and more innocent," Chen said. She added that many girls have up to 40 clients a day and take no precautions against sexually transmitted diseases, such as AIDS.

Les (Carrot-Top) Anderson opens country music festival

KEREMEOS, B.C. (CP)—Les (Carrot-Top) Anderson is returning to his roots.

And that means picking up his steel guitar.

Anderson, who built a name for himself as a guitar player with the Bob Wills Texas Playboys, has invited some of the other Playboys to join him at the inaugural Bluegrass and Western Swing Music Festival.

Anderson and his wife Betty are organizing the Okanagan festival, slated for June 22-24.

About 50 years ago, Anderson was a household name on stage and radio in the United States. He had a fan club and children begged their parents for a flashy "Carrot Top" western outfit.

But the highlight of his career came in the early 1940s, playing with Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys.

"They were world renowned," says Anderson. "It was a tremendous experience."

He spent four years as a Playboy, touring 48 states and part of Canada.

IN HOSPITAL

It was a career that was rather unexpected in the beginning. At age 17, the red-headed Anderson had been lying in a hospital bed and had never touched a steel guitar. He was told he'd "never be able to lift anything heavier than a chair" again.

He had been working in construction when he suffered serious heat stroke, putting him in bed for eight months.

But Anderson was determined not to accept the doctor's verdict.

"As I was recuperating I listened to all these western bands on the radio," he recalls. "I decided I would get a band together and manage it to try to make a living."

He didn't play an instrument, but had some success at arranging. So Red Anderson and his Missourians began practising.

But there was one thing missing — a steel guitar.

It was all the rage at the time, but few people knew how to play. MAKES PLEDGE

"I hunted for a player and couldn't find anybody. Finally I said to the boys, 'If you want a guitarman that bad, you can buy a steel guitar and I'll learn to play it.'"

Red Anderson and his Missourians broke up when the war came. Because of his health problems, Anderson was exempted from the draft. But by then he had mastered steel guitar and was picked up by Bob Wills.

In 1947 he left Wills to again form his own band, the Melody Wranglers.

He and Betty, his wife of 40 years, have worked together since he retired from music in 1961. He spent three years with a show band in Las Vegas before moving to Idaho and then Vanderhoof, B.C., in 1972.

They went into the real estate business in Burns Lake. And there, as president of the Chamber of Commerce, Les found himself back into music in a benefit concert — another fluke.

The Andersons organized the first Burns Lake Bluegrass Festival in 1986 and it's still going strong.

When they moved south to Keremeos a year ago, it seemed natural to start up another festival.

Bands scheduled to play include Ted Scott and the Radio Ramblers and Chilquotin, both of Vernon. The Sawtooth Mountain Boys from Oregon, Just for Fun group of Burns Lake, Rocky Mountain Bluegrass Boys of Abbotsford and Dusty Acres of Sardis.

Montreal's Jazz Festival like a massive ten-day concert

By Ingrid Abramovitch

MONTREAL (CP) — Jazz...it's supposed to be played in smoke-filled joints on the wrong side of town, right?

Not according to organizers of the Montreal International Jazz Festival.

Jazz's seedy-cool aura has never really permeated the 11-year-old festival.

As organizer Alain Simard admits, the festival is designed more as a massive 10-day party than a pure jazz event, with outdoor concerts that attract crowds of up to 100,000 revellers.

In recent years, the festival's emphasis has been as much on crowd-pleasing world music as on jazz, which has a more limited audience.

This summer's lineup continues that trend.

Latin salsa stars Celia Cruz and Oscar D'Leon will headline the centerpiece of the festival, the Alcan free outdoor show on July 3.

Last year, city favorite Pat Metheny's free concert drew some 100,000 fusion-jazz fans, while South African star Johnny Clegg attracted 60,000 people the previous year.

The flamboyant Cruz, who is widely known as the "Queen of Salsa," has recorded nearly 70 albums since beginning her career in the 1940s.

Venezuelan salsa bassist and singer Oscar D'Leon accompany Cruz, and special guests will include saxophonists David "Fathead" Newman and Chico Freeman.

In addition to the salsa show, the festival has scheduled jazz and world beat groups from each of the world's continents.

EASTERN EUROPE

Eastern European jazz, largely unknown in the West, will be represented by two groups performing free shows. From Czechoslovakia, Ornette Coleman disciple Jiri Stivin will play with his quartet. Hungary's Bop-Art Orchestra, a European music festival favorite that mixes rock, classical music and traditional jazz, will also perform.

World beat offerings range from New Orleans master Dr. John, with the Louisiana Luminooids, Brazilian "Tropicalismo" star Caetano Veloso, Jamaica's Toots and the Maytals and Nigeria's Fela.

This year's jazz lineup seems a bit perfunctory, with performances by several performers who have been here before.

"I'm disappointed there aren't some of the younger, more interesting names in jazz," said Ken Druker, Jazz Association of Montreal executive director, in an interview.

"The schedule is filled with established festival circuit performers."

Among the circuit performers stopping by are pianist Tommy Flanagan, last here in 1986, and Parallel Realities, a touring super-group starring Jack DeJohnette, Herbie Hancock, Dave Holland and Metheny.

A festival debut is the piano and cornet combination of Dick Hyman and Rudy Braff, two older players who seldom perform. Other interesting shows include shows by Elvin Jones, who used to be John Coltrane's regular drummer, the duo of Randy Weston and Billy Harper, Dominican piano jazz great Michel Camilo, trombonist Ray Anderson and several others.

Vocal performances by Anita Baker and Cassandra Wilson should also be highlights.

The Montreal International Jazz Festival runs from June 29 until July 8, with indoor concerts requiring tickets and free outdoor shows in downtown Montreal. For information, call the Info-Jazz line at (514) 871-1881. Tickets are available through Ticketron or at the pectrum de Montreal, 318 Ste-Catherine St. W.

Sub Pop label promotes music resembling punk rock

By Jane Stevenson

SEATTLE (CP) — Pop philosopher Jonathan Poneman sees rock 'n' roll as "the glorification of everything that is raw, teenage and stupid."

But don't try telling him the bands on his Sub Pop record label are playing with less than a full deck.

"I don't think I have a dumb band on the label," says Poneman, sitting in Sub Pop headquarters on the 11th floor of a downtown Seattle office building.

Poneman, 30, and his partner Bruce Pavitt, 31, are no dummies either.

For the last three years the two have been making records with some of the best new underground bands in the United States — including Soundgarden, Mudhoney, Nirvana, the Fluid, the Walkabouts, and Tad.

Sub Pop specializes in a brand of music closer to punk rock than heavy metal. The vocals often veer more toward yelling than singing over a wall of raw sound punctuated by pulsating guitars and heavy bass. Unbelievable as it might seem, however, most of the material is quite melodic.

VIBRANT SCENE

The music has made Sub Pop the focal point for what Poneman calls the "Seattle sound."

"There is this notion that Seattle has got a much more vibrant, happening scene than everywhere else in the country, and frankly it does," says Poneman.

"It's akin to San Francisco in the '60s."

Poneman and Pavitt established Sub Pop as "that loud, grungy independent record label in Seattle" because of their fondness for aggressive rock 'n' roll. Sub Pop titles include Mudhoney's Touch Me (I'm Sick), Nirvana's Negative Creep and Tad's Sex God Missy.

One of the first groups on the Sub Pop roster was Soundgarden, now with A and M Records and playing to sell-out crowds in England.

"It wasn't like we ever broke things off with Sub Pop," says Soundgarden guitarist Kim Thayil. "It was just we were ready to make another record and they didn't have the funds to do it at the time."

ON VARSITY RADIO

Thayil, 29, met Poneman while they both worked for KCMU radio at the University of Washington in the early '80s.

Poneman's life changed the night he ventured into the Rainbow Room, a former Seattle nightclub, and saw Thayil on stage with Soundgarden.

"I hear this band who sounds like Deep Purple or Steppenwolf or Black Sabbath," Poneman recalled. "I knew it was music that I equated with my youth only it was even more aggressive."

"It had this real sort of punk rock urgency to it. It was obvious they were on to something."

Of the 10 bands now on Sub Pop, Mudhoney and Nirvana are leading the way in sales. "Mudhoney has sold 50,000 (albums) worldwide," says Poneman.

FISCAL STRATEGY

Stores that stock Sub Pop records pay cash on delivery, so the company gets paid soon after the albums are shipped out.

"A lot of other independent labels have to wait for months, sometimes years, yes years, to get paid and they die," Poneman says.

Sub Pop also has a single-of-the-month club that gives subscribers a different single by a different artist each month for $35 US a year.

A few stores in Vancouver buy directly from Sub Pop. Independent distributors handle Sub Pop releases in the rest of Canada, Australia, Denmark, England, Italy and even Brazil.

Poneman looks like anything but a business wunderkind. Slumped in front of an appallingly messy desk, he comes across as a typical rocker.

He was up late the night before in a nearby recording studio, which may account for his uncombed hair and ratty black T-shirt and jeans.

DESIGN STYLE

Meanwhile, Pavitt, Sub Pop's marketing specialist, is away on his honeymoon in Costa Rica.

"He's much more in tune to pop culture than I am," Poneman says of his partner, who is responsible for the label's bold, distinctive album covers.

"You can look at a record and say, 'Ah, that record is a Sub Pop record,'" adds Thayil.

And to maintain a consistency in sound, Jack Endino is used as the producer on almost all of the albums that are recorded at Reciprocal Studios in Seattle.

But Poneman vehemently denies all Sub Pop bands sound the same.

"If somebody doesn't want to listen closely, if all they want to do is draw the determination that all our bands are is about hair and a lot of guitars, then they're missing out."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor John Cusack, who starred in the teenage love movie Say Anything, can't slip behind a wheel for 90 days and must pay an $876 fine for driving drunk and crashing his rented Jeep into a car.

Cusack, 23, who also appeared in the film The Sure Thing, pleaded no contest to a first-time misdemeanor charge of driving under the influence of alcohol.

He sent his lawyer to the sentencing Friday and didn't appear in court, prosecutor Greg Lawler said.

Cusack's sentence was standard for the charge in California on a first offence, Lawler said.

Authorities said Cusack's blood alcohol level was .17 per cent, more than twice the state's legal limit of .08, after the Feb. 23 collision in West Hollywood.

Neither Cusack nor the other driver was hurt.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former variety-show host Merv Griffin, who created and produces Wheel of Fortune, says the game show is considering whether to stop giving furs away to contestants.

Griffin encountered a handful of animal-rights activists demonstrating outside a radio station where he appeared on a call-in show Friday.

The members of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals held a banner saying Wheel of Fortune and chanted: "Buy a vowel, not a fur."

Griffin, in his limousine, did not stop to talk with the demonstrators. But he said afterwards he had asked the game show's management to reconsider the practice of giving away furs. He said a decision should be reached soon.

But Griffin also questioned whether there aren't more important issues. "There are major diseases we are all contending with and there are all the homeless, and there are the ecological problems on the planet."

Griffin was host of The Merv Griffin Show for 23 years until 1986.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Zsa Zsa Gabor peddled pedigreed animals, classy clothes and celebrity souvenirs Friday at a celebrity auction that she organized as penance for slapping a policeman.

The celebrity guest list included entertainers Valerie Harper, Sally Struthers, Michelle Phillips, Cesar Romero, Esther Williams and comedian Fred Travalena.

The actress, dressed in a Christian Dior outfit, shrugged off a judge's order that her auction did not count as community service time for her conviction.

Proceeds — hopes ran around $60,000 — from the affair go to the Low Income Elderly United-Community Assistance Program, which operates a shelter for homeless mothers in the beach community of Venice.

Gabor was ordered to work for the shelter to fulfill community service provisions of her sentence for slapping Beverly Hills police Officer Paul Kramer on June 14, 1989.
