TWO-TIME MUSIC CHAMP — Chantalle Juliet, 13, won the top honors in the Eastern Townships' finals of the Quebec Music Competitions held Sunday evening at Bishop's University. Chantalle, who plays violin, won the golden award for the second year running. She is seen receiving the award from contest judge Pierre Max Dubois of the University of Paris.

Saw helicopter hit by rocket

SAIGON (CP) — Hank De Voll said Sunday he saw the tail of the helicopter in front of him blow up as it was hit by a rocket. The aircraft was slowly dropping out of sight, the blade still whirling as he banked his own helicopter sharply to the right.

"Why didn't you try to make a run for it?" one of his buddies asked in a hotel reunion as the slim, 23-year-old pilot recounted the April 7 episode in northern South Vietnam in which the first aircraft crashed and his own was forced down by machine-gun fire.

"I didn't even think," the former United States Army pilot replied. "I just instinctively headed for the ground. I never would have made it out of there. That's all Viet Cong territory. I wouldn't have had a chance."

De Voll, a civilian pilot working under contract for the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS), said he leaped for a ditch as his helicopter came down on a dirt road. Snipers peppered the aircraft with fire, he said.

"I landed right on top of Master Cpl. Robert LaPlante, the Canadian," De Voll said. "You couldn't separate me from the Canadians. I stuck to them like glue."

FEARED FOR HIS LIFE

De Voll said he feared that the survivors, or at least the American pilots, would be killed by the Viet Cong. LaPlante, native of Melochville, Que., promised him there would be no separation. De Voll, and his co-pilot, Mark Hotchkiss of Butte, Mont., also leaned heavily on Capt. Ray Parsons of Red Deer, Alta.

"You should have seen Capt. Parsons grab the PRG (representative of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government) and put him on the road to get the snipers to stop firing. The PRG was shaking. He wanted to stay in the ditch."

De Voll said he is sure that the crash and the grounding of his own helicopter occurred about six miles west of Khe Sanh, not 15 miles southeast of the former U.S. marine base as the Viet Cong claim.

"We saw the airstrip below us. We passed right over it. We were on the approach to Lao Bao, our destination when I saw the leading chopper, about one-quarter mile ahead of us, starting to crack up. I radioed that we were receiving fire and then I started down."

ALMOST CERTAIN

De Voll said he is almost certain if that he went back to the scene he could tell whether the wreckage of the helicopters had been moved.

Three bells, all's well

OTTAWA (CP) — Bong, Bong, Bong.

Three o'clock passed this morning and all remained well on Parliament Hill despite the threat of a bomb going off.

A young woman telephoned House of Commons security guards at about 9:10 p.m. Sunday, demanding money in exchange for the location of a bomb on the Hill, which she said was timed to explode at 3 a.m.

Well-rehearsed security arrangements immediately went into effect with the Commons security staff scouring the building located on the Hill and the RCMP checking every nook and shadowed spot outside the buildings.

While the RCMP have the responsibility for patrolling the grounds, the buildings and their contents are the responsibility of the Commons staff.

Nothing was found in the search and, while the RCMP refused comment on the matter, a Commons security spokesman appeared not greatly concerned.

"It was a demand for money," he said not mentioning the amount.

"We searched everywhere and are satisfied there is nothing."

He also mentioned that, because of the solid stone construction of the three buildings on the Hill, it would take a bomb of considerable proportions to do a great deal of damage.

And, as the great Peace Tower clock pealed out the hour, the confidence of the security spokesman was upheld.

Two die accidentally

SHERBROOKE (CC) — Accidents claimed two lives over the weekend in the Eastern Townships.

Killed were Jean March Carrier, 21, of Main street in Mansonville and Alain Desrosiers, 17, of 52 Allen street in Windsor.

Jean March Carrier perished Friday in a head-on collision which occurred on Route 40 about two miles from Farnham. He was pronounced dead on arrival at the Brome-Missisquoi-Perkins Hospital in Cowansville.

Alain Desrosiers was killed when the car in which he was riding rolled over on Route 5 in Warwick and Arthabaska county. The accident took place at about 10:30 p.m. Friday and was investigated by the Victoriaville detachment of Quebec Police Force. The accident in which Carrier was fatally injured occurred shortly after 3 p.m. Friday. Also hurt in the crash were Oscar L'abbe, 22, of Mansonville, Andre Geroux, 21, of Farnham and Daniel Beauregard, 18, Farnham.

Both Geroux and Beauregard were released after treatment from the Brome-Missisquoi-Perkins Hospital. L'abbe, who suffered multiple fractures to the jaw was transferred to the Montreal Neurological Institute.

Police described both vehicles as total losses and roughly estimated damages to the vehicles at approximately $4,000.

A blast from the past?

SOUTHOE, England (AP) — Reg Darnell, an old age pensioner, got a shock Friday—he may be living on a pile of Second World War bombs.

The first indication he may be sitting on top of a powder keg came Thursday when two explosions rocked his home. He was in the village pub at the time.

Officials believe the house, built after the war, could have been constructed on the spot where a load of German anti-personnel bombs was dropped more than 30 years ago.

Police suspect vibrations from trucks rumbling along a road outside the house may have detonated a couple of the charges.

Darnell, however, is not too worried.

"It's exciting really," he said. "It's like what the disc jockey blokes say on the radio when they play those old records—you know, 'A blast from the past'."

An election in the offing?

Liberals woo Ontario...

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and members of his cabinet were out in force wooing Ontario Liberals during the provincial party's annual convention which ended here Sunday.

He told about 850 delegates Saturday that if the Commons permits, there will be no election for some time but when it does come Ontario will be the key to victory.

Mr. Trudeau told the delegates they would be "shock troops" in the election battle, and brought them to their feet cheering when he gave them a firm commitment to stay on as leader as long as possible.

"The message I want to give you is that I am in for good... for keeps," the prime minister said.

Ontario's Liberal leader,

Robert Nixon, said "the odds are 99-1" against his running when the provincial Liberals hold their leadership convention in Toronto Oct. 27-28.

"KEEP NIXON" BUTTONS

But pressure is building within the party to have him stay on and 500 "Keep Nixon" buttons were quickly picked up by the delegates early in the three-day convention.

One federal cabinet minister, Finance Minister John Turner, publicly urged Mr. Nixon in a speech Saturday to keep the job.

Ontario Liberals have often complained privately that they are ignored by their federal counterparts. The full attention of the federal members was focused on the provincial delegates during the convention.

Mr. Trudeau and 13 members of his cabinet took part in a question-and-answer session Saturday. Three cabinet ministers also delivered speeches and others took part in panel discussions.

HERE TO GOVERN

The prime minister told the delegates that "we are here to govern not only this session but other sessions if the Commons lets us."

If the Conservative party is anxious, "let them blow their fuse."

Earlier, in reply to questions, Mr. Trudeau said there is no "necessity for unemployment" in Canada.

But people must realize that there can never be full employment in a free economy, he said. The government was committed to creating jobs at the fastest possible rate, but there would always be at least three per cent unemployment.

During an informal interview session with newsmen Saturday, Mr. Trudeau said he was not inclined to intervene in the dispute over the price of natural gas between Alberta and Ontario.

Ontario's imposition of a seven-per-cent energy tax puts the province "in a poor position" in the dispute.

Mr. Trudeau said he "can't personally blame Mr. (Peter) Lougheed for raising prices. It's a seller's market."

The price of gas can't be all that high when Ontario Premier William Davis sees fit to impose a tax, he said.

PREFERS MINORITY

The prime minister also said he found running a minority government, with 109 Liberals in the 264-seat house, "more exciting" than governing with a majority.

"It's like a tightrope. You've got to make progress. There's not much room for error."

Transport Minister Jean Marchand said it would be senseless to expect all of Canada to be bilingual.

Government spokesmen must stop "frightening people" and each region of Canada must be told what it is getting from this country, he said.

Finance Minister Turner, another speaker, said Ontario's sales tax increase from five cents to seven cents on the dollar, announced by the provincial government last Thursday, was the equivalent of about a 16-per-cent increase in provincial income tax.

He was critical of Ontario Treasurer John White who imposed a seven-per-cent energy tax and who suggested Ontarians conserve energy by turning down thermostats and putting on sweaters when it gets chilly.

"I don't know if this is a thermostat budget or a pullover budget, but I'll tell you—Mr. White is not pulling the wool over the eyes of anybody," the finance minister said.

He also defended his proposed tax concessions for corporations saying the government's motive was to protect jobs and allow Canadians to compete "in a tough new trading world."

Among resolutions adopted by the convention, delegates endorsed the federal foreign investment legislation over the protests of former Liberal member Eric Kierans.

Mr. Kierans advocated a ban on all sales of Canadian businesses to aliens.

As Stanfield plans in Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield Sunday outlined his party's Quebec strategy for the next federal election, emphasizing regional development and organization.

Speaking to reporters at the end of a three-day provincial convention, Mr. Stanfield said his party is weak in some areas of the province, and much grassroots work must be done to establish a wider base of support.

The Conservatives elected only two candidates from Quebec in last October's election. Mr. Stanfield has said he needs at least a dozen Quebec members of Parliament to form the next government.

"I can't help but believe that we already have a much stronger position in the province of Quebec," he said.

The party intends to nominate candidates in Quebec "early enough" so that voters in the next election will have time to become acquainted with them and with party policy.

Mr. Stanfield said he intends to increase his personal involvement in the province and already has planned visits to the Eastern Townships and the Gaspé Peninsula this spring.

He said he has no desire to see the present government remain in office, labelling it "a menace to the Canadian people."

BLAMES LIBERALS

However, his party will not try to bring down the Liberal government "just for the sake of it," and it is willing to support legislation that it finds suitable.

In a speech to about 400 party members at a downtown hotel, the PC leader blamed the Liberal government for causing "confrontations" between provincial and federal authorities.

"For my part, I have always believed in a flexible and decentralized federalism," Mr. Stanfield said, adding that provincial priorities must be recognized "in essentials as well as non-essentials."

Speaking mostly in French, the PC leader condemned the Liberal government for "imposing its views and priorities on health care on the provinces" in the past, and "looking for an easy way out."

after the cost of health care exceeded forecasts.

"Not only is the government saying today that it is dissatisfied with these programs, but also it has the indecency to want to limit its financial responsibilities—while forcing the provinces to maintain theirs."

SUGGESTS WITHDRAWAL

Mr. Stanfield said the government should consider withdrawing from shared-cost health program, and giving the provinces a larger share of tax revenues so that they could continue these programs on their own.

This proposal "would recognize the right of the provinces to establish their own priorities in an essential area, without any federal intervention."

Following Mr. Stanfield's address, convention delegates elected a new slate of executives including Claude Dupras, 40-year-old engineer who was named president of the provincial association.

Mr. Stanfield took part Saturday in workshops and question-and-answer periods on economic and social problems and current events.

Quebec in focus

No election Bourassa says...

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa said Sunday his Liberal government is not preparing for an early election and intends to fill its mandate until it ends in April, 1975.

Speaking to 600 party supporters, Mr. Bourassa said his government's goal continues to be "cultural independence" within a secure economic framework to improve the future of all Quebecers.

But Dupuis promises showing...

QUEBEC (CP) — The Ralliement Creditiste will do better than the Parti Quebecois in Montreal in the next provincial election, Creditiste Leader Yvon Dupuis said Sunday.

Mr. Dupuis told 200 party supporters at a regional convention here that he is prepared to run against PQ Leader Rene Levesque in Montreal-Dorion riding in the next provincial election.

The Creditiste leader, elected to his post in February, said the PQ fared well in Montreal in the last election because they capitalized on a movement of general dissatisfaction with the established parties and also because the Creditistes did not have enough time to organize in the region.

The PQ won seven Montreal-area seats in the April, 1970 election won by Robert Bourassa's Liberals. Dorion was not one of them and Mr. Levesque ran unsuccessfully in Laurier.

Mr. Levesque has already been nominated as his party's candidate in Dorion.

And Real is ready...

MONTREAL, Que. (CP) — Real Caouette said Sunday the Social Credit party is ready for the next federal election.

"It's simple, our party electoral funds are always ready because we function without electoral funds," the national Social Credit leader said in a telephone interview.

Mr. Caouette said he felt Robert Stanfield, Progressive Conservative leader, is less and less anxious for an election following the results of recent popularity polls and David Lewis, New Democratic Party chief, will continue to support the minority Liberal government because he fears the Conservatives in the West and the Liberals in Ontario.

Mr. Caouette and the 15 Social Credit members of Parliament met here during the weekend to plan their next party convention in Quebec, scheduled for May 5-6 in Drummondville.

Mr. Caouette said he intends to force the government to reveal its plans for a guaranteed annual income as advocated in the Jan. 4 throne speech.

"The government has a chance to try the system which we have recommended for a long time and I hope they will reveal their plans as soon as possible," he said.

And Masse expected to run

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Dupras, newly-elected president of the Quebec Progressive Conservative Association, said Sunday he expects Marcel Masse to announce soon his intention to run for the PCs in the next federal election.

Mr. Masse, who attended the association's annual convention during the weekend, made no formal announcement and fended off reporters' questions about his status within the party.

Mr. Masse, now an independent member of the national assembly, was registered at the convention and voted in the election of the new provincial executive.

Mr. Masse, who represents Montcalm in the legislature, was a Union Nationale minister, but left the party after he was defeated by Gabriel Loubier at a leadership convention.

Rail workers unhappy with union

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 2,500 railway workers in the Greater Vancouver area are expected to attend a mass union meeting Wednesday night to air grievances about leadership of their unions.

"British Columbia railway workers have become very unhappy lately with the way their unions are run," Fred Court, secretary-treasurer of the Vancouver Joint Council of Railway Unions, said Saturday. The Wednesday meeting has been organized by the joint council.

He said 10 top officials of international railway unions had been invited to attend the meeting to account for their leadership but added that several have "begged off due to other commitments."

Mr. Court said the meeting was called so rail workers "can tell their complaints directly to their leaders and perhaps get some action from them."

Last Monday, two top officials of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers were booed at a meeting of the Vancouver local, who have been involved in a lengthy dispute with the union executive over negotiations with Canadian National Railways. The Vancouver membership accused Vice-President Bert May of Winnipeg and Joe Speare of Edmonton, general chairman for the four western provinces, of poor leadership.

NOT ISOLATED

Mr. Court said the current unrest is not confined to CNR locomotive engineers and yardmen, who launched a dues strike against their international unions in protest against what they described as poor top leadership.

"Workers in other unions and railway trades here have also piled up a lot of grievances and one of the big ones right now is that we're really the working poor of B.C.," said Mr. Court.

"We have fallen behind in wages paid in other industries and the settlements shaping up in current negotiations make the situation even worse."

SPRING FEVER — The sun shone brightly yesterday, giving Eastern Townshippers a glimpse of things to come as winter slowly exits and bicycles and roller skates replace sleighs and toboggans in our playgrounds. A perfect day as well for a long stroll or a pleasant chat with someone special.

Blind often see more

Dear Ann Landers: I read your column every day. Well, I don't actually read it, but I know every word you write because someone reads it to me. I am blind. I've decided the best way to pass the word is through Ann Landers. If she prints your letter you have a pipeline to millions. I hope I make it.

I became blind ten years ago, the result of a gun accident. (My friend didn't know it was loaded.) Since I know what it's like to be both sighted and sightless, may I offer a few suggestions?

Remember, even a blind person wants to know who is in the room. When you enter, say, "Hello, Jim. I'm Ed. It's good to see you."

Most blind people can locate and handle silverware and they can cut meat and poultry. But they appreciate a little help with the salt and pepper shakers, the meat sauce, sugar bowl, and so on. Don't forget to hand him these articles and identify them.

Don't feel that you must avoid any reference to blindness. We are accustomed to it, and to the questions, too.

Never treat a sightless person as if he is seriously handicapped. Often he is less handicapped than those who can see, but are blind to the beauty of nature, brotherhood and love.—Des Moines Reader

Dear Reader: Thank you for opening our eyes. Your letter has helped to educate millions.

Dear Ann Landers: Print this please. Call it "An Open Letter to All Wives." If your husband isn't cheating now, he might cheat later. Don't think you are safe because you have spent your life making home a wonderful place to be, raising a family, filling his emotional and physical needs, sharing his sorrows and failures and helping him become a success. Take my word for it. No woman is safe. One day you could wake up and get the news. You don't know where you messed up, but you did because he wants out of the marriage. Why? Because he thinks he is missing something and he wants to grab it before he is too old and it's too late. What is he missing? He doesn't know, but he's going to find out.

Offering to help him find it inside marriage is useless. He wants something new. Different. Probably younger.

So you do your best to make him look less than lousy to the kids. You hold your head up and hope friends and relatives don't ask too many personal questions. You are determined not to talk against him. You will keep your dignity. But it's hard because you are bitter and you hurt.

If anyone had told me two years ago that this could have happened to me I would have said they were insane. But here I am — another statistic. Tell me, Ann Landers, where did I fail?—Discarded in Warren, Ohio

Dear Friend: I'm not sure you failed. It sounds to me as if your husband failed. Pick yourself up, dust yourself off and carry on. Perhaps the best is yet to come.

Corrupt DREE official charged

TORONTO (CP) — A former official of the department of regional economic expansion (DREE) was charged Monday with illegally accepting four trips to Florida and a promised $60,000-a-year job with stock options.

Gerald McKendry, who was dismissed last year from his post as director of DREE, was originally charged with accepting an unlawful benefit in connection with the approval of $736,000 in grants by his department to Silver Shield Mines Inc. of Toronto.

Details of the charges were disclosed in documents filed at the start of a preliminary court hearing.

Norton Cooper, president of Silver Shield Mines, was charged with giving an unlawful benefit to a government official. Hearing of his case was remanded to May 14.

The grants, which were never paid, were originally intended to assist the company in construction of a silver refinery and a private mint at Cobalt, 300 miles north of Toronto.

The company avoided bankruptcy earlier this year by making a partial settlement with creditors and recently sold controlling interest of the mining assets, not including the refining smelter and mint, to a United States-based company.

P.E.I. steps back

WALLACE, N.S. (CP) — Visitors to eastern Prince Edward Island can be forgiven this summer if they get the feeling they've stepped back in time.

By June, a quarter-size reproduction of the 17th and 18th centuries will be cutting through the waters off that section of the island's sandy coastline, her squarerigged sails filling out in the wind.

The 40-foot Hispaniola is being built at a boatyard in this northern Nova Scotia town for Keith Altass, a shipyard employee in Georgetown, P.E.I., who says she'll be the realization of a dream he's had for years.

Garnet MacPherson, owner of the boatyard, said the Hispaniola will have three masts and reproductions of 26 cannon showing over her sides. The ship will also have an auxiliary engine.

The builder says his yard usually is occupied making pleasure craft and fishing boats built to his own plans. But he wasn't hesitant about taking on construction of the Hispaniola, working from plans Mr. Altass obtained in Britain.

Mr. Altass said he had to have the boat built here because he couldn't find anyone in P.E.I. willing to take on such a task.

According to Regional Development Council

Sherbrooke industrial park risks area planning

By WENDY McMULLEN
Record Reporter

SHERBROOKE — The Eastern Townships Regional Development Council (RDC) warned Friday that the establishment of the so-called 'regional' industrial park in Sherbrooke might be detrimental to more global development plans for the entire Eastern Townships area.

While not at present opposed to the Sherbrooke industrial park a spokesman for the development council, said he does not think it will necessarily benefit other municipalities. The RDC also fears that the grant of $3 million from the provincial government given to finance this park may lead the population to believe there will be other grants.

According to a communiqué from the RDC the $3 million granted Sherbrooke is only one-fifth of what the region needs. The RDC believes the possibility of Sherbrooke being made a Special Zone, discussed for the past year, has disappeared. Now the question of a regional development program is also in doubt.

As indication of the lack of governmental will to establish regional development plans, president of the Regional Development Council, Jean Jacques Lafontaine, cites the deferment of the Regional Administrative Conference which, he contends, is essential to any regional development plans. This conference, which all provincial ministers would have attended was scheduled for September 1972.

"It has been deferred to the point where one must question the good will of our governors to follow the mission of planification and the hopes of the population," Mr. Lafontaine asserted.

As a result of this the population is becoming sceptical as to the outcome of the recommendations made in the recent White Paper on the economic situation of the Eastern Townships, the regional council's administrators claim.

The council feels that its work in seeking for recommendations from the population on regional economic redevelopment is being undermined by the government's attitude.

"There is an evident danger in calling for the participation of the population to define their own development without being able to supply even a minimum guarantee that the process will be continued," the council's communiqué complains.

"It is very difficult to interest the community in problems of development when it has the impression that it will not be followed through," the communiqué continues. "It arouses fear, suspicion and defeatism."

The Regional Development Council will bring up the issue of lack of government support for regional development schemes at the Agricultural Teach-In at the Sherbrooke CEGEP on April 28. Mr. Lafontaine indicated.

East Angus council plans many projects

EAST ANGUS (CC) — The municipal council of East Angus is on the verge of implementing many projects which should greatly benefit the town's residents.

Within the next two years a new town hall will be built, new police and fire quarters will be constructed, an industrial park will be established, a municipal garage will be built and many public works projects will be undertaken.

At a council meeting last week the council approved a resolution requesting the government to allow the municipality to finance the projects over a 20-year period.

East Angus councillor Robert Fournier told The Record the municipality had made requests for government aid to help finance the projects but had not yet received an answer. He said the municipality would be contributing approximately $1 million to the projects.

"The municipality," he said, "has already invested $500,000 in a new covered arena."

The arena, under construction for most of the winter, should be opened around the beginning of May.

"The arena will change many things for the residents," Fournier said. "It should influence their recreational lives. East Angus has never had a covered arena."

Construction of a new town hall, fire, and police station should start in July or August. The municipality has been forced to build the new hall because the old one, a 75-year-old building, has been condemned by the provincial government.

"We have to demolish the town hall," Fournier said. "The government says it's unsafe for more than 10 persons. We have three sites already chosen for the new building."

The fire and police station will be housed in the new building.

The municipality decided to establish an industrial park because a new industry will be moving into the area. Mr. Fournier said the industry will start being constructed as soon as the industrial park is established. "The industry will create 220 new jobs," he said, although he declined to name the company.

"There is no question the company won't come here," he said. "They have already brought their machinery." The council has already homologated the land for the industrial park.

The municipal garage could easily be installed in the industrial park or near the town hall, councillor Fournier added.

Another project which the municipality is working on is the construction of buildings at their parks and recreational games areas. A tourist information bureau is also to be built and run by the municipality.

"We have accomplished a lot but we haven't been given much credit for our work," Mr. Fournier claimed. "And the councillors are giving as much as they can to see the town grow."

To help in their projects the council has decided to engage a recreation director on a year-long basis. He is to be paid up to $5,000 but his salary is negotiable.

Mr. Fournier said Sunday all plans have been prepared for the different projects and it wouldn't be long before tenders are requested.

"All the projects should be finished by 1974," he said.

No elections for SC executive

By CROSBIE COTTON
Record Reporter

SHERBROOKE — Despite discontent within the rank and file of the Sherbrooke County Social Credit party, no one has requested a new election for the party's executive. The executive's term of office ended last week.

Local party secretary Jim Butler said Sunday the executive can be considered to have been re-elected by acclamation because no one has challenged the executives' offices.

"There is nothing in the constitution about this," Mr. Butler said. "We will bring up the question in Drummondville, May 5, but I think we can say the executive has been re-elected by acclamation."

A two-day meeting of the Social Credit party is scheduled in Drummondville May 5-6 to discuss the position of the party as well as the problems it faces.

Mr. Butler added that the Sherbrooke County executive would be issuing reports within the next week so local party members will be able to determine what has been done in the county. The reports will include an analysis of the funds spent by the executive.

"Some people have charged we have wasted their money," Mr. Butler said. "When the reports are out they will be able to see what we have done."

"The executive ended their term on April 9," Mr. Butler continued. "I had told the members who weren't happy with the way the party was being run in Sherbrooke they could call an election. All they had to do was collect a petition with 20 names of party members asking for an election."

According to Butler no one asked for an election. The Social Credit party in Sherbrooke has grown enormously since the executive took over.

"In 1971 when I started as secretary we had 25 members in the local party," Mr. Butler said. "The last report I sent to Ottawa (party headquarters) showed a total of 1,222 paid members."

"When I started the party didn't even have a bank account," he claimed. "Today we have an account and there is money in the bank."

Asked about contentions made by Maurice Couture defeated SC candidate in the last federal election, Mr. Butler said the local party had contributed to Couture's campaign.

"We don't have much money," he explained. "Of the $5 membership $2 goes to the party newspaper and $1 goes to the national party. We are supposed to receive $2 but the provincial branch has been keeping 50 cents. That means we are only getting $1.50 for each party member."

Mr. Butler believes local party members will be surprised when the figures concerning the local party expenditures are released this week.

"It will open a few people's eyes," he said. "They think we have lots of money."

"I was an honest man and I am an honest man. I don't need the party's money. I make a good living. In fact I spend my own money for the party."

The executive in Sherbrooke is to meet later this week to decide what will be done this year. The party executive had decided to hold a nomination convention March 18 to elect a candidate to run in the next federal election. That decision was subsequently over-ruled by the national executive.

Until a written notice is received or 20 party members present a petition calling for an election the local party executive will continue as though nothing has changed.

"I know some people are unhappy but they know what they have to do," Mr. Butler said.

Garage strike ended

SHERBROOKE (CC) — The garage workers strike is over. Workers in Eastern Townships garages, on strike since February 22, are expected to return to work today.

The workers, in a meeting held Friday, voted 76.7 per cent in favor of returning to work. A total of 540 union members voted Friday. Some 383 votes were cast in favor of accepting the management offer.

The agreement was worked out in negotiation between union and management representatives last week. The contract calls for an immediate reduction to a 42½ hour work week. A further reduction to a 40 hour work week is to come in 1975.

The garage workers will work from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. during the first stage of the contract. Throughout their seven-week strike the garage workers sought a 40-hour work week. Other details of the contract were not released although both sides said the contract was fair.

Bruck Mills employees are still on strike in Sherbrooke although they returned to work in Cowansville and St. Jean a few weeks ago. Union leaders in Sherbrooke said Sunday they are willing to "wait the company out."

The contract for the Cowansville and St. Jean employees was signed over the weekend, a company official said.

Healy says grant is 'all right'

LENNOXVILLE (CC) — Bishop's University principal and vice-chancellor Dr. Dennis Healy said Sunday Quebec's grant to Bishop's University for the 1973-74 academic year is "all right."

The provincial government announced Thursday that Bishop's University would receive a grant of $1,713,000 for the year. The University of Sherbrooke was awarded $18,125,000.

Quebec universities will receive a total grant of $230 million from the government for the 1973-74 year. The grants are up 9.5 per cent over the 1972-73 amount of $210 million.

"I think that amount sounds all right," Dr. Healy said. "It's more than last year but we are expecting more students."

"Last year we had 660 students," said Dr. Healy. "This next year we will have about 850 students."

"The reason for the small number of students this year was because we had a small graduating class. The small class was due to the government creation of CEGEPs."

The government grant is based on a per-capita basis depending on the number of students enrolled in an institution.

Following is a breakdown of the grants given to other universities:

Laval, $41,270,000; Montreal, $47,858,000; Hautes Etudes commerciales, $3,181,000; Montreal Polytechnique, $6,761,000; University of Quebec, $44,896,000; McGill, $38,707,000; Sir George Williams, $14,106,000.

An additional $13,383,000 in grants has not yet been awarded as the government is still studying the budgets of certain institutions.

41 die accidentally

A 22-year-old Burlington, Ont. woman clung for several minutes to a third-storey window ledge of a burning apartment building before falling 30 feet to her death Saturday.

Michelle Hartley was among at least 41 persons who died accidentally across Canada during the weekend. Her husband, Christopher, also fell to the concrete below and suffered a broken ankle, burns and cuts.

The survey does not include known suicides, industrial accidents or slayings.

Laviolette laid to rest

QUEBEC (CP)—The body of Capt. Charles-Eugene Laviolette, 42, killed when the helicopter he was travelling in was shot down in Vietnam, was buried in a bare, windswept cemetery here Saturday after a full military funeral.

More than 1,000 people lined the route of the funeral cortege and swarmed over the square in front of Ste. Monique Church in the Les Saules district of the city where the funeral service was held.

The procession, made up of 175 members of the 12e Regiment Blindé du Canada and directed by Capt. P. Robert Bova of Ottawa, marched slowly along the quarter-mile route as the Royal 22nd Regimental Band played funeral marches by Chopin and Beethoven.

Police nab two SHERBROOKE (CC) — Police apprehended two individuals in what police believe was an attempt to rob La Place des Syndicats on Acadie street Sunday night.

Police said the two were arrested as they were allegedly loading stolen merchandise into a truck in the rear of union headquarters.

Police said approximately $5,000 worth of office equipment had been removed when police halted the robbery in mid-stream. The arrests came shortly after 11 p.m.

The two men are to appear in court today.

We must stand together or..

The Western world in the 1970s will be vastly different from that familiar to statesmen who have fashioned Western foreign and defence policies since the end of the last war. To understand it and evolve the new concepts required to guide Western nations, seminars, meetings and assemblies have been convened on both sides of the Atlantic. The large Amsterdam assembly, a meeting whose importance may yet be recognized in the future even by Canadians who, regrettably, missed the occasion of making their voice heard, has been fully reported in this paper.

A smaller meeting was held in Winnipeg, where last week prominent British spokesmen discussed with their local counterparts the triangular relationship that has always been the foundation of Atlantic policies: that between the United States, Canada and Western Europe, a Europe that is steadily moving towards unity.

The problems that affect this triangular relationship can be schematized under three basic headings: politics, defence, economics and finance. Politics remains the overriding concept that will govern the development of both economics and defence. The enthusiastic British European, Dick Taverne MP, who attended the Winnipeg seminar, sees integrated European defence as the key factor in the collective alliance.

The European Community, he believes, is developing into something entirely new, a body without any historical precedent, less than a federation but considerably more than a mere economic confederation. Such a development is bound to be accelerated as the Brussels commission assumes more and more power and the European Parliament is elected directly, with candidates standing for election in their home constituencies rather than being appointed by their parties from national parliaments. Sovereignty, Mr. Taverne argued, was outdated, and an anti-nationalist Europe, informed with a true spirit of internationalism, remains a noble aim.

Even those who did not entirely accept Mr. Taverne's optimistic vision, such as Lord Terence O'Neill, shared his belief in the ultimate realization of European unity. The difference was in time-scale rather than concept. However, many feared that dangerous obstacles would soon impede progress towards a better international understanding. The balance-of-payments deficit in the United States cannot but be aggravated by the increased energy consumption and the Arab demands for a higher price for their oil.

At present, the only way of solving the balance-of-payments crisis would be for the United States to export as never before. This, in turn, could not but lead to a trade rivalry of monstrous proportions. Trade war is the biggest threat to our civilization and, while the ruinous competition could be avoided were the "triangle" to agree on the long-mooted Atlantic Free Trade Association (AFTA), it would require the Canadians to exert all their diplomatic skills to convert the United States in her present mood to a belief that AFTA is a viable alternative to super-power nationalism.

The Western world thus faces a threat of political disunity, economic rivalry and financial chaos while, without the gates, the enormous power of the Soviet Union hovers ready to pounce. Most Europeans today consider the withdrawal of a substantial part of the American forces in Europe as inevitable. And as Lord Gladwyn writes in the April issue of Foreign Affairs, unless the West, faced with the ever-increasing Soviet conventional and nuclear potential, adopts altogether new and non-aggressive methods of collective self-defence, "we are all in real danger not so much of physical defeat as of moral collapse, that is to say, in a failure to grasp the fundamental purpose of our collective life."

Lord Gladwyn's proposal, also put forward by speakers at the Winnipeg seminar, was an integrated European defence based on the latest in technological weaponry, including an American-style "air cavalry" capable of halting any Soviet probing in Europe without the use of even tactical nuclear weapons. The defences, manned by highly professional forces, would be backed by a strong militia that could be mobilized at short notice.

A special grouping of Arctic countries, whose strategic importance is now no less than that of central Europe, has been proposed in Amsterdam, by Lord Gladwyn in the Foreign Affairs article and also mentioned in Winnipeg. It could provide a new vehicle for NORAD and a closer link within NATO for the Canadians and Scandinavians, protected, as they must remain, by the American nuclear umbrella.

It is so much easier to stir emotions than to apply cool reason, a maxim that obtains in defence as in economics. Finance Minister Turner has warned that unless the world monetary crisis is solved, Canadian exports will collapse — and Canada lives by foreign trade. Unless the American balance of payments is solved, we shall face a suicidal trade war. And unless Western democracies have a common foreign and defence policy, and adopt a common attitude towards the Soviet Union, they cannot but founder. A very tall order indeed.

Hidden mining riches spark battle

By DENNIS BELL

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP)

The perennial battle over who owns the fabulous mineral resources of the Yukon is heating up once again with the territory's $120-million mining industry poised on the brink of another phenomenal leap forward.

At the moment, the federal government enforces exclusive jurisdiction over resources in the 207,000-square-mile territory and has demonstrated a marked reluctance to surrender its authority. Ottawa says northern resources should be developed for the benefit of all Canadians.

But a burgeoning political autonomy movement among the 20,000 Yukoners says the primary benefits of resource development should accrue to northerners. The movement, led by members of the elected territorial council, sees internal control of resources as a necessary prelude to the Yukon becoming Canada's 11th province.

In the context of the Yukon, the phrases provincial status, political autonomy, resource ownership and economic stability are closely interrelated, often interchangeable.

The federal government has said repeatedly that in order to achieve provincehood, the Yukon must first prove its economic and social stability. And the autonomy supporters ask how this can be accomplished if Ottawa refuses to give the territory control over its own resources.

Hilda Watson, councillor for Carmacks-Kluane and one of two elected members of the five-member governmental executive committee, offered a succinct summation of the Yukon's resources dilemma:

"In the provinces, the natural resources belong to the people of the provinces and not to the federal government," she said. "In the Yukon, there has never been any clear statement from the federal government that the resources of the territory belong to the people of the Yukon."

If Yukoners go along with the federal position, "we are saying that we will never own our resources, that we are content forever to be a subservient non-self-supporting state."

Control of the mining industry is the key to the Yukon's drive for provincial status. It is essentially the only major source of wealth other than tourism. The territory has few service industries, no secondary manufacturing, and although it has huge timber reserves, it can't compete internationally yet in forest products with neighboring British Columbia.

Commissioner James Smith, Ottawa's top man in the Yukon, says the ownership question "is something that will never be resolved satisfactorily." He maintains that both sides in the controversy would be much wiser to concentrate on a comprehensive development timetable.

The key is to undertake a resources inventory so that you know the point in time when you can no longer reasonably export a given resource and have to begin processing it at home," said the 52-year-old commissioner.

Mining has been both a curse and a blessing to the Yukon. It was the Klondike Gold Rush of 1896 that brought 60,000 people into the territory. And it was the collapse of the gold rush just two years later that all but emptied the Yukon.

"The day of the placer mining syndrome is pretty well over with," said Commissioner Smith.

"The Yukon's economy is gradually gearing itself to be the crown jewel of Canada's northland. We have taken a tremendously rich area of North America and turned it from a have-not into a have area. I think that in the next 20 to 25 years it will be impossible for anyone to live in North America without being to a degree dependent on Yukon resources."

The territory managed to weather several years of wildly fluctuating world prices for base metals in relatively sound condition. Now that prices for copper, lead, zinc, silver and gold have stabilized, the mining industry has shown a pattern of zesty growth.

The value of mineral production shot from $12 million in 1966 to $50 million in 1970 and an estimated $120 million last year. The outlook is excellent.

This winter and spring saw feverish exploration activities in five large areas of the eastern Yukon. The territory now has six producing mines and there are predictions that this could rise to nine or 10 during the next 12 months.

Amex Exploration has outlined a huge tungsten deposit on the Yukon-Northwest Territories border near Mount Allan. The company estimates there are more than 30 million tons of tungsten-bearing rock, graded at 9 per cent.

Hudson Bay has a major exploration program under way at Macmillan Pass on an estimated five-million-ton lead-zinc-silver deposit. And Placer Development staked more than 5,000 claims in another lead-zinc area near the Yukon-N.W.T. border during the winter.

Atlas-Dynasty has a massive exploration program under way on silver and lead deposits in the Bostock Range of the Hess Mountains, about 110 miles north of Ross River. The potential mining area is 12 square miles.

And several companies are busy in the Anvil Range, a 600-square-mile region about 35 miles north of Ross River. Mining engineers claim that the Anvil Range contains the most valuable mineral deposits yet discovered in the Yukon.

However, there are two major problems forestalling big-league mining developments—the lack of adequate rail transportation to the Pacific Coast and the fact that the Yukon is already straining its electrical generating capacity to the limit.

At present, there is only one railway in the Yukon, the White Pass and Yukon Route's narrow-gauge line from Whitehorse southwest to tidewater at Skagway, Alaska. This means that virtually all the Yukon's mineral production has to be trucked to the railroad in Whitehorse or down the Alaska Highway into B.C.

In terms of power, the Yukon last year generated 244 million kilowatt hours. The rated capacity of all existing generating facilities is 250 million kilowatt hours.

"Hi, Mr. Lang! Er, how's it looking for a little something in advance?"

Justice department study warns of summer

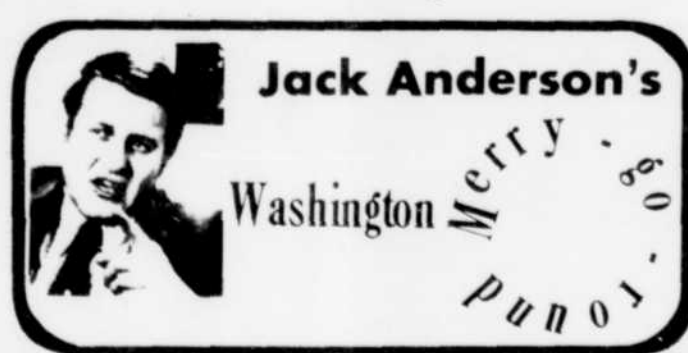

WASHINGTON — Ominous reports, locked in the files of Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, flatly dispute his public statement that the days of racial tension in the cities "might possibly be behind us."

The truth is that the Justice Department is deeply apprehensive about trouble in the streets this summer. A survey of possible trouble spots, intended for official eyes only, warns that tensions are rising in city ghettos, minority communities and distressed areas across the country.

The survey, conducted by the Justice Department's Community Relations Service, suggests the trouble could be triggered, ironically, by President Nixon's cutbacks in social programs. We have seen a copy of the findings, which Kleindienst and his top aides are keeping under lock and key.

Typical is this report from San Diego: "First reaction by minorities to the President's budget action was stunned disappointment and confusion. Now these feelings are being transferred into anger and resentment. Seven hundred teachers are being fired. Most of them are minorities. Child centers are closing. Mothers who relied on child care centers cannot work. Unemployed fathers are further discouraged by longer unemployment lines."

DEFEATISM
"Talk on the streets is defeatist and sometimes militant... Youth are hardest hit and represent the greatest threat to the community tranquility. According to a Neighborhood House counselor, they cannot contain for long their anger and frustration without some outlet or success. The counselor said,

"I'm worried and scared."

Up the coast in Los Angeles, according to the survey, the peace may be threatened this summer by "youth gang activity" and "threatened cutbacks of federal programs."

Warns the survey: "Fears have been expressed that the phaseout of federal categorical grants will force thousands of teenagers into idleness... The Los Angeles Indian population is the largest in the United States (50,000-70,000). There is no predicting with accuracy how they will react to conditions arising out of Wounded Knee."

Across the country in New York City, states the survey, there are "grumbles" about resorting to "violence."

It describes "polarization between the white ethnic communities and the black and Latino communities over community control" and cautions against "potential violence during the spring between Afro-American, Puerto Rican, Asian and other groups on the college campus."

NEWARK
Across the Hudson, "factors fueling tensions in Newark include the polarization between blacks and whites; the phaseout of federal programs; unemployment among police brutality..." the report alleges. "Many black communities are organized and have capacities for immediate confrontation with police should a precipitous act occur. The potential for conflict during the summer is very real."

Mass demonstrations over education, unemployment and injustice are also "in the planning stage and will come as early as May and can be expected to be well organized before the summer is over." In Birmingham, "there are widespread rumors of plans by the poor to take to the streets in protest over antipoverty program cuts."

Racial tensions are also reported in Georgia, and a black-white confrontation is expected in the "racially tense rural town" of Sparta. "A number of towns, including Lavonia, Columbus, Augusta and Valdosta," adds the report, "continue to have police-community problems which are producing tension."

Indeed, "racial tensions are expected to increase generally over the state."

Finally, "demonstrations will probably occur throughout the spring and early summer" in the nation's capital.

The report speaks of "interdepartmental police tension" and "increased use by police of physical force," adding: "There is some concern in the inner city surrounding the circumstances in the arrest of the two suspects in the (Sen. John) Stennis shooting." Concludes the report: "The local temperament, combined with the nationally organized demonstrations, will increase the tension in D.C. throughout the summer."

End of the U.S. dollar?

WASHINGTON — Everyone talks about the "energy crisis." But that phrase merely sketches the surface of the problem. What threatens us — what has started already, in fact — is a permanent currency crisis, which will also mean a permanent inflation crisis.

In 1975 — only two years from now — we shall have to find $15 billion to pay for our oil imports. And this assumes that world oil prices do not go up, either because of another dollar devaluation or simply because of the enormous pressure of demand from Western Europe and Japan as well as the United States.

A little further down the road, the projections are a bit more uncertain. The more optimistic forecasts for 1980 have us paying out $24 billion for foreign oil in that year. The pessimists raise this sum to $30 billion. As for 1985 — when children born last year will just be entering high school — the optimistic-pessimist spread is between $30 billion and $70 billion for our foreign oil costs!

The optimists' figures for the future, it must be added, again make no allowance either for further loss of value of the dollar or for further increases in world oil prices. They are like weather forecasts, in truth, that make no allowance for storms that any sane weather forecaster ought to allow for.

Furthermore, these are (ital) not (unital) oil company figures, although they parallel the projections recently made by the Shell Oil Co. Instead, they come from briefings now being given to senators and leading congressmen by the staff of the Congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. The sponsors are the committee chairman, Mel Price of Illinois, Rep. Chet Holifield of California and Sen. John Pastore of Rhode Island. All are Democrats, and Sen. Pastore, a strong liberal Democrat, has personally begged all other senators to give ear to the dire facts.

The figures also mean an energy crisis, of course. There will be local fuel shortages this summer. At least in a fair number of states, there may be gasoline rationing in the summer of 1974. The independent oil and gas distributors are due to suffer shockingly, if not to be wiped out. Short supply is the basic reason. Another reason is the greed of the big companies.

Yet inconvenience for many and heavy loss for a few are mere trifles compared to the national tragedy of a dollar with ever-lessening value. And even this is only the first chapter of the horror story.

But it does not end there, by any means. American energy demand is growing ceaselessly, while American production, especially of natural gas, is also beginning to decline.

In 1975 — only two years from now — we shall have to find $15 billion to pay for our oil imports. And this assumes that world oil prices do not go up, either because of another dollar devaluation or simply because of the enormous pressure of demand from Western Europe and Japan as well as the United States.

Hawks win 5-4

By IAN MACLEISH

CHICAGO (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks did a complete turnaround from Game 1 when they edged New York Rangers 5-4 Sunday to even the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final at a game apiece.

The Rangers rallied from a 3-0 deficit to tie the contest early in the second period before the Hawks put the finishing touches to it with a power-play goal by Dennis Hull, his second score of the game, and Dick Redmond's fourth playoff score that restored a two-goal Chicago lead.

"Not what you'd call playoff hockey," said Chicago Coach Billy Reay. "But an exciting game, eh?"

Defenceman Pat (Whitey) Stapleton, with his first two playoff goals, got the Hawks away to their early margin with the help of several Rangers.

On the first, Chico Maki out-muscled Ron Harris for the puck in the corner and fed to Stapleton at the point who fired wide of the New York goal. But the puck caught Jean Ratelle's stick blade, banked off defenceman Jim Neilson and went in off the goal post.

The second was almost a duplicate, but this time the puck bolted over goaltender Eddie Giacomin's right shoulder off team-mate Dale Rolfe's skate.

HULL SKATING BETTER

Then Hull, who skated better in this game than he has in recent weeks, blistered one from the side of the net that caromed off Giacomin's glove hand, which was protecting his face, and dribbled over his shoulder into the net.

"You never want to come out," Giacomin said when asked his first reaction to being replaced by Gilles Villeneuve to open the second period.

"There was no explanation," he replied, when asked whether coach Emile Francis had approached him to find out how he was. "He just said that Gilles was going in."

"Now I know how a pitcher feels," Giacomin added, shaking his head with a smile.

"Sometimes a change can switch things around," Francis said of the change. Eddie's played some tough games this series.

"With Gilles in there, maybe we'll get them to go a little harder up front."

GILBERT STARTS IT
 The Rangers did get going at 18:54 of the first period on Rod Gilbert's first of two goals to narrow the Chicago margin. Jean Ratelle and Bill Fairbairn tied it.

"And we had them going until that guy (referee Wally Harris) called a tripping penalty on (Steve) Vickers," said Francis. "He was digging for the puck." Francis added of the incident in which Vickers upended Chicago's Bill White during a Ranger power play.

"They took advantage of the power play and went ahead again."

"Rangers had a short-handed break in the Chicago end," Hull recalled later in the dressing room, "when one of the Rangers oversteered the puck."

"I picked it up and threw it ahead to Louis (Angotti) and suddenly Jim (Pappin), Louis and myself had a 3-on-1 going the other way."

"Lou pulled the defenceman (Rolfe) and goalie to the right and gave me the puck."

SURPRISED GIACOMIN

Hull said his first goal, that trickled over Giacomin's shoulder to make it 3-0, "wasn't too hard a shot."

"He was in a crouch and I just think it took him by surprise."

Francis credited both goalkeepers, Villeneuve and Chicago's Tony Esposito, for their performances in the scoreless third period.

"Both clubs had good scoring opportunities, but Esposito had to be real sharp on (Bruce) MacGregor and Gilles kept us in there a few times, too."

Chicago defenceman Keith Magnuson, who broke his jaw in at least two spots when he stopped a shot by Rangers' Brad Park, is expected to be ready to play by at least the fifth game of the series, back here next Sunday.

The next two games of the series are scheduled for New York's Madison Square Garden Tuesday and Thursday with a 9:05 p.m. EST starting time necessitated by circus matinees at the Garden.

FAST-PACED GAME
 The wide-open hockey pleased the 20,000-plus fans, but had Reay shaking his head.

"This happens when you get ahead 3-0," he said of the tempo of the game that picked up when Chicago took the early lead.

"They (Rangers) had to open up. They threw caution to the wind and it worked. They tied the score."

Aaron homers, 38 to go

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hank Aaron's countdown continues and the numbers are getting better all the time.

With the 1973 baseball season nine games old for the Atlanta Braves, Aaron has managed only three hits which is not very good. But each of those hits are home runs and that's awfully good. That's 676 homers for Aaron's fabulous career and 38 away from his target—Babe Ruth's legendary 714.

Aaron's latest homer came Sunday in a losing cause as the Braves bowed to Los Angeles Dodgers and Al Downing 6-2.

In other National League games Sunday, New York Mets edged Philadelphia Phillies 2-1, Pittsburgh Pirates slugged Montreal Expos 8-3, Chicago Cubs beat St. Louis Cardinals 8-6, San Diego Padres swept a doubleheader from Houston Astros, winning the first game 5-1 and taking the second 4-0, and Cincinnati Reds swept a pair with San Francisco Giants, romping 11-0 in the first game and winning the second 7-3.

Aaron did not have a hit in the Braves' first four games this season. But sunny California changed all that for the Braves' slugger and he has reached the seats three times on Atlanta's West Coast trip.

DODGERS EXPLODE
 No 676 couldn't prevent the Braves from bowing to Downing and the Dodgers on a four-hitter.

That's because Von Joshua, who had not hit a major league homer since 1970, tagged a three-run shot as Los Angeles exploded for six runs in the seventh inning to break open a tight game.

Cincinnati softened up San Francisco's pitching with 18 runs and 28 hits in the doubleheader sweep.

The first game romp included five hits by Cesar Geronimo, who scored four times. Joe Morgan slugged a pair of home runs in the second game and stole five bases in the two games, running almost at will.

Pirates down Carnivals

BRADENTON, Fla. — Sherbrooke Pirates ended their training camp on a winning note Saturday as they defeated their league rivals the Quebec Carnivals 9-3. It was the Pirates' last exhibition game before coming to Sherbrooke on April 18.

Outfielder Rimp Lanier led the Pirate romp going four-for-four. Veteran Luther Quinn also had a perfect day at the plate going three-for-three.

The Pirates home opener is scheduled for April 28 against the Waterbury Dodgers. Pirate pitchers yesterday were Duane Mason and Jim Sedowski.

Remparts take 1-0 series lead

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Remparts spotted Cornwall 2-0 lead in the second period and then exploded for seven straight goals en route to a 7-5 win over the Royals in the first game of the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League final series.

The second game in the best-of-seven series will be played Wednesday night in Cornwall.

Team captain Andre Savard scored three goals to lead Quebec, who outshot Royals 36-35 before 12,410 fans. Other Remparts' marksmen were Yvon Dupuis, Jacques Locas, Daniel Beaulieu and Andre Deschamps.

Dan Lupinette with two, Kevin Treacy, Gary McGregor and Blair McDonald scored for Cornwall.

McGregor's goal at 1:11 of the second period broke a scoreless tie and Lupinette made it 2-0, with his first goal, 3½ minutes later.

Dupuis scored for the Remparts at 5:45, triggering an outburst in which Quebec scored six goals in 12 minutes in the second.

In overtime

MacLeish's memory helps Flyers win

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Rick MacLeish remembered something coach Fred Shero had told him about goaltender Ken Dryden and as a result Philadelphia Flyers today hold a 1-0 lead in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final round against Montreal Canadiens.

MacLeish took advantage of a slip by veteran Frank Mahovlich of the Canadiens deep in the Montreal zone Saturday night to score the winning goal at 2:56 of the first overtime period and earn the Flyers a 5-4 win and the edge in the series.

Fred told me to shoot high on him (Dryden) when I got in close and it worked," MacLeish, a 50-goal scorer in his second National Hockey League season said.

It was MacLeish's third goal of the playoffs and capped a two-goal performance by Simon Nole and single goals by rookie left winger Bill Barber and right winger Gary Dornhoefer for the Flyers win.

The Canadiens got a first-period goal from Yvan Cournoyer, two from defenceman Guy Lapointe and the tying marker by centre Jacques Lemaire at 15:25 of the final period that sent the contest into overtime. Cournoyer now leads all playoff scorers with six goals and four assists.

The second game of the series is scheduled here Tuesday night and will be televised nationally by the CBC.

While Montreal coach Scotty Bowman was upset by the loss and by the way the winning goal came about, he refused to criticize Mahovlich.

"There's no way you're going to get me to say anything bad about Frank Mahovlich," Bowman said. "Let's not even ask about a goal like that."

Mahovlich said he had been trying to pass the puck while deep in his own zone, "but the puck got stuck in a puddle of water and MacLeish picked it up." He wasted no time in rattling a high hard drive behind Dryden.

And while most of the attention following the win was centred around MacLeish and his game-winning goal, the Flyers would not have reached the overtime stage in this game had it not been for work of goaltender Doug Favell.

Favell continued as the bulwark of the Philadelphia defence as he stopped 41 shots by the Canadiens—many of them of the difficult variety. His performance overshadowed the work of Vezina Trophy winner Dryden at the other end. Dryden blocked 32 of 37 drives by the Flyers.

Favell had been a big factor in Philadelphia's quarter-final victory against Minnesota, appearing in all six games before the Flyers eliminated the North Stars.

"I'm not saying we've got them (Canadiens)," Favell said.

"It was a tough game and the further you get, the tougher the games get."

NOT ROUGH

With Philadelphia the most penalized team in the National Hockey League this season with 1,754 minutes and with four players—Dave Schultz, Bob Kelly, Andre Dupont and Don Saleski—all over the 200-mark, it had been expected to be a rough contest. But not one fight erupted, although rookie Montreal defenceman Larry Robinson and Schultz did make motions early in the game.

Referee Bryan Lewis and his linesmen sorted that one out in a hurry and no penalties were called. Lewis called eight minor penalties throughout.

During regular-season play the two teams played five games and wound up in a perfect split. Each won two games, lost two and tied one, while scoring 24 goals against each other.

And the opener appeared just that close.

COURNOYER STARTS

Cournoyer opened the scoring at 4:48 of the first period when he deflected a Savard drive beyond Favell's reach. But Barber backhanded a short shot behind Dryden just after a faceoff deep in Montreal territory.

The second period also was a saw-off, with Nole and Lapointe contributing their first goals of the game for the Flyers and Montreal respectively. Lapointe's was the only power-play goal of the game and came at 17:28 with Dupont in the penalty box.

Lapointe opened the third period scoring with his fifth goal of the playoffs, another long shot from the Philadelphia blue line. That was at 8:58. But Nole made it a 3-3 tie less than two minutes later with his second goal.

Kneeling from left to right are the bantam winners. They are: D. Cline, P. Johnson, D. Blenkhorn, K. Stansbury, L. Evans, D. Beaudoin, C. Fournier, and R. Cabana. In the middle are the junior champs. They are: D. Pritchard, T. Grace, D. Brock, P. Jones, C. Day, M. Bresee, J. Mills and P. Bishop. The winners in the senior section in the back are: S. Brault, R. Hart, L. Gauvreau, J. Beliveau, A. Mountain, B. Naeve, R. Boivin and M. Skena.

AGRHS birdie tourney a success

LENNOXVILLE (BP) — "It was a great meet. I'm very impressed."

That's how organizer Rod McKell summed up the exciting action at the second annual Alexander Galt Regional High School Invitational Badminton Tournament held at AGRHS over the weekend.

Competition was divided into three sections — senior, junior and bantam. Students numbering 187 from local French and English schools participated in the 148 games played during the five hours of fast and furious action.

The winners in the senior division were:

Boys' Single, B. Naeve, AGRHS; Boys' Doubles, R. Boivin, M. Skena, AGRHS; Girls' Single, S. Brault, East

Angus; Girls' Doubles, A. Mountain, J. Beliveau, Richmond Regional; Mixed Doubles, L. Gauvreau, R. Hart, RRHS.

The junior champions are: Boys Single, M. Bresee, AGRHS; Boys' doubles, P. Bishop, J. Mills, AGRHS; Girls' Single, C. Day, RRHS; Girls' Doubles, T. Grace, D. Pritchard, D. Massey-Vanier Regional; Mixed Doubles, D. Brock, P. Jones, RRHS.

Victorious in the bantam section were:

Boys Single, R. Cabana, Seminaire de Sherbrooke; Boys Doubles, D. Beaudoin, C. Fournier, Seminaire; Girls' Single, D. Cline, RRHS; Girls' Doubles, P. Johnson, D. Blenkhorn, AGRHS; Mixed Doubles, K. Stansbury, L. Evans, AGRHS.

The Galt team copped the total tournament championship by netting the most points in the final matches. Three points were allotted to a winner, while the runner-up received one.

Mr. McKell also noted that all schools were well represented, mentioning the senior boys' doubles as an example in which two Galt pairs faced each other, with Boivin and Skena eventually overcoming the Bronson-Butterfield duo in a thrilling 18-16 victory.

McKell commented that although MVRHS came out third in the standings, they were runners-up in five final games, which could have turned the final standings around.

WHA roundup

Jets win, advance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chris Bordeleau may be out with an injured ankle but veteran Bill Sutherland sent Minnesota Fighting Saints home limping Sunday night.

Sutherland proved to be the perfect replacement on Winnipeg Jets' top line with Bobby Hull and Norm Beaudin as the Jets hammered the Saints 8-5 to advance to the semi-finals of the World Hockey Association playoffs.

Sutherland, a journeyman forward for five National Hockey League teams over the last 10 years, scored two goals and assisted on four others as Winnipeg won the best-of-seven quarter-final 4-1.

New England Whalers, meanwhile, got a sudden-death overtime goal from Mike Byers Saturday night to oust Ottawa Nationals 5-4 and wrap up their quarter-final 4-1.

The Whalers will go against Cleveland Crusaders, who eliminated Philadelphia Blazers in four straight, in one semi-final starting Wednesday night in Boston.

The Jets, meanwhile will have to wait until Houston Aeros and Los Angeles Sharks are finished with each other.

AEROS WIN

The Aeros took a 3-2 lead in that series with a 6-3 win in a rugged game at Houston Sunday night. The sixth game is scheduled for Tuesday at Los Angeles and a seventh, if necessary Thursday at Houston.

Sutherland, a 5-10, 176-pound centre has 10 points in the playoffs, nearly half of the 22 points he piled up on six goals and 16 assists during 49 games this season.

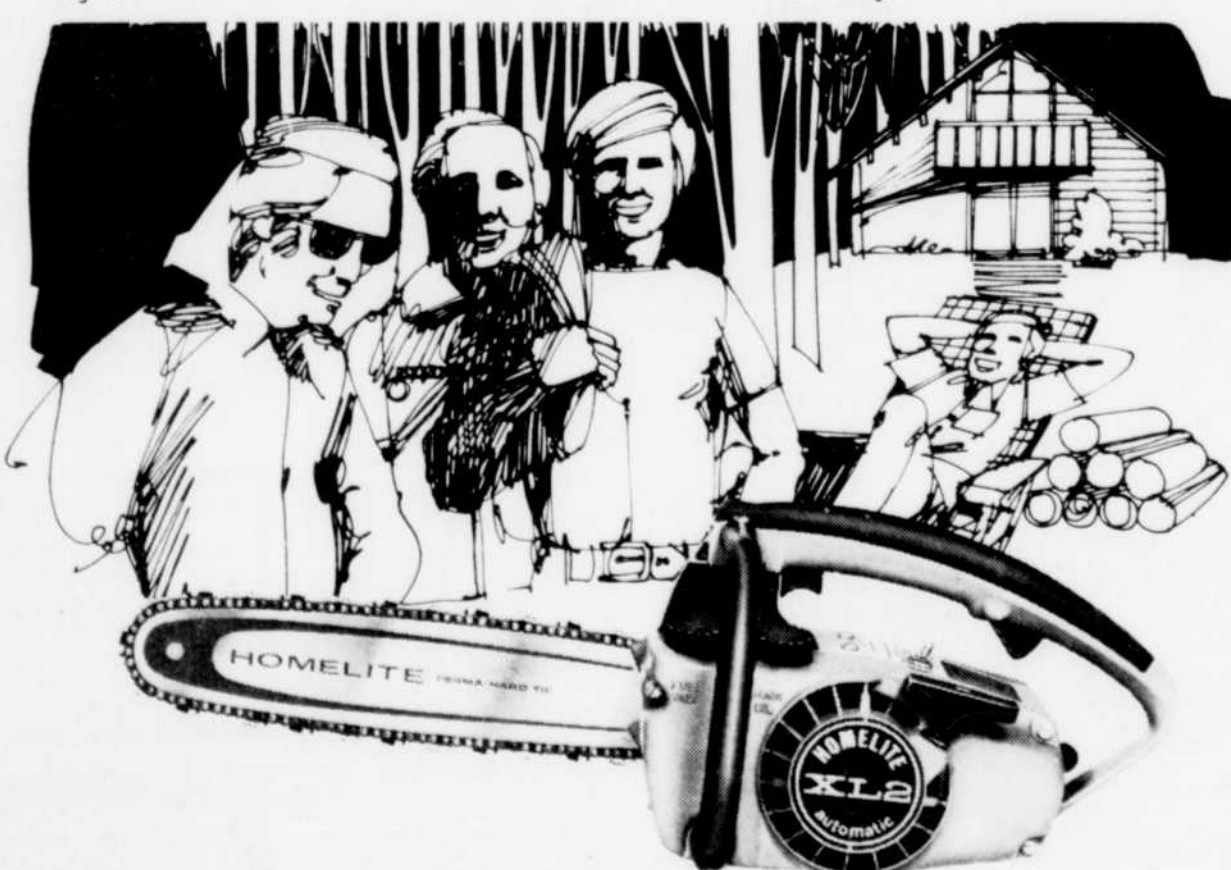

The Regina native scored the first goal in a four-goal outburst early in the second period that sparked the Jets.

Beaudin, who finished the season with 103 points, fired three goals and added four assists to run his playoff scoring to 14 points while Hull picked up four assists to give the potent line 17 scoring points.
