Collecting the Admiral issue is not too expensive

Stamp corner

By Peter McCarthy

King George V became the King of England on May 6, 1910. However, it wasn't until December 22, 1910 that the first postage stamps bearing the King's portrait made and appearance. These became known as the Admiral issue. They were so named because of the king being portrayed in the full dress uniform of an admiral of the fleet of the Royal Navy.

The Admiral issue had a very long run, 1910 to 1925. Consequently, a large amount of each denomination were printed. Particularly in the lower values. As an example, the one cent green alone was issued in a quantity of three billion, two hundred and eighteen million, four hundred thousand. No, there's no mistake in these figures. This of course made it necessary to periodically lay down new plates and even new dies. Depending on how you want to go about collecting the Admirals, it can be relatively inexpensive issue to collect.

It's becuse of this and the fact that the manufacture of postage stamps had not reached the high degree of perfection that we know today that varieties exist in abundance.

Re-touches, re-entries, plate cracks and such were allowed to reach the public, being considered as unimportant. It has lead to the issue being one of the most interesting on the market today.

STAMP DESIGN

The design of the stamp is based on that of the Queen Victoria Leaf and Numeral issue and the Edward V11 issue. Namely that of a portrait within an oval on a rectangle. The vignette was prepared by Robert Savage while the head is from a portrait by W. and D. Downie and the chest and uniform are from a portrait by W. Burnett.

There were seven original values issued between December 22, 1911 and January 26, 1912. They were the 1,2,5,7,10,20 and 50 cents denominations. Over the years a 3 cents value was added in 1918, a 4 cents in 1922, the one dollar value in 1923 and an 8 cents value in 1925.

PRINTING METHODS

There were two distinct methods of printing attached to this issue. The original is known as the "wet printing method", the paper being moist during the printing. In this method, the gum was applied after the printing.

In 1922, the Canadian Bank Note Company introduced what became known as a "dry printing method". The stamps printed in this method were done on paper of a very low moisture content with the paper being pre-gummed.

There's a way of distinguishing between the wet and dry methods. The wet method caused the paper to shrink when drying. This occurs across the grain of the wove paper. Consequently, stamps printed on hortizontally wove paper are shorter while those printed on vertical wove paper are narrower.

In measuring the stamp to determine a wet or dry method of printing, the size from design edge to design edge is the governing factor and not from perforation to perforation. It must be noted that this in no way affected the perforation gauge of the stamp. All stamps are perforated 12 and coils are perforated 12 horizonally and 8 horizontally and vertically.

VAST QUANTITIES

The low value stamps were issued in vast quantities except for the four cent denomination. A mere 79,900,000 were printed. Most of the low values up to and including the five cents denomination are known to exist with hairlines, one of the main reasons for buying this issue in bundles of one hundred.

That's not to say that hairlines don't exist in the higher values. It's simply that none have yet been knowingly discovered.

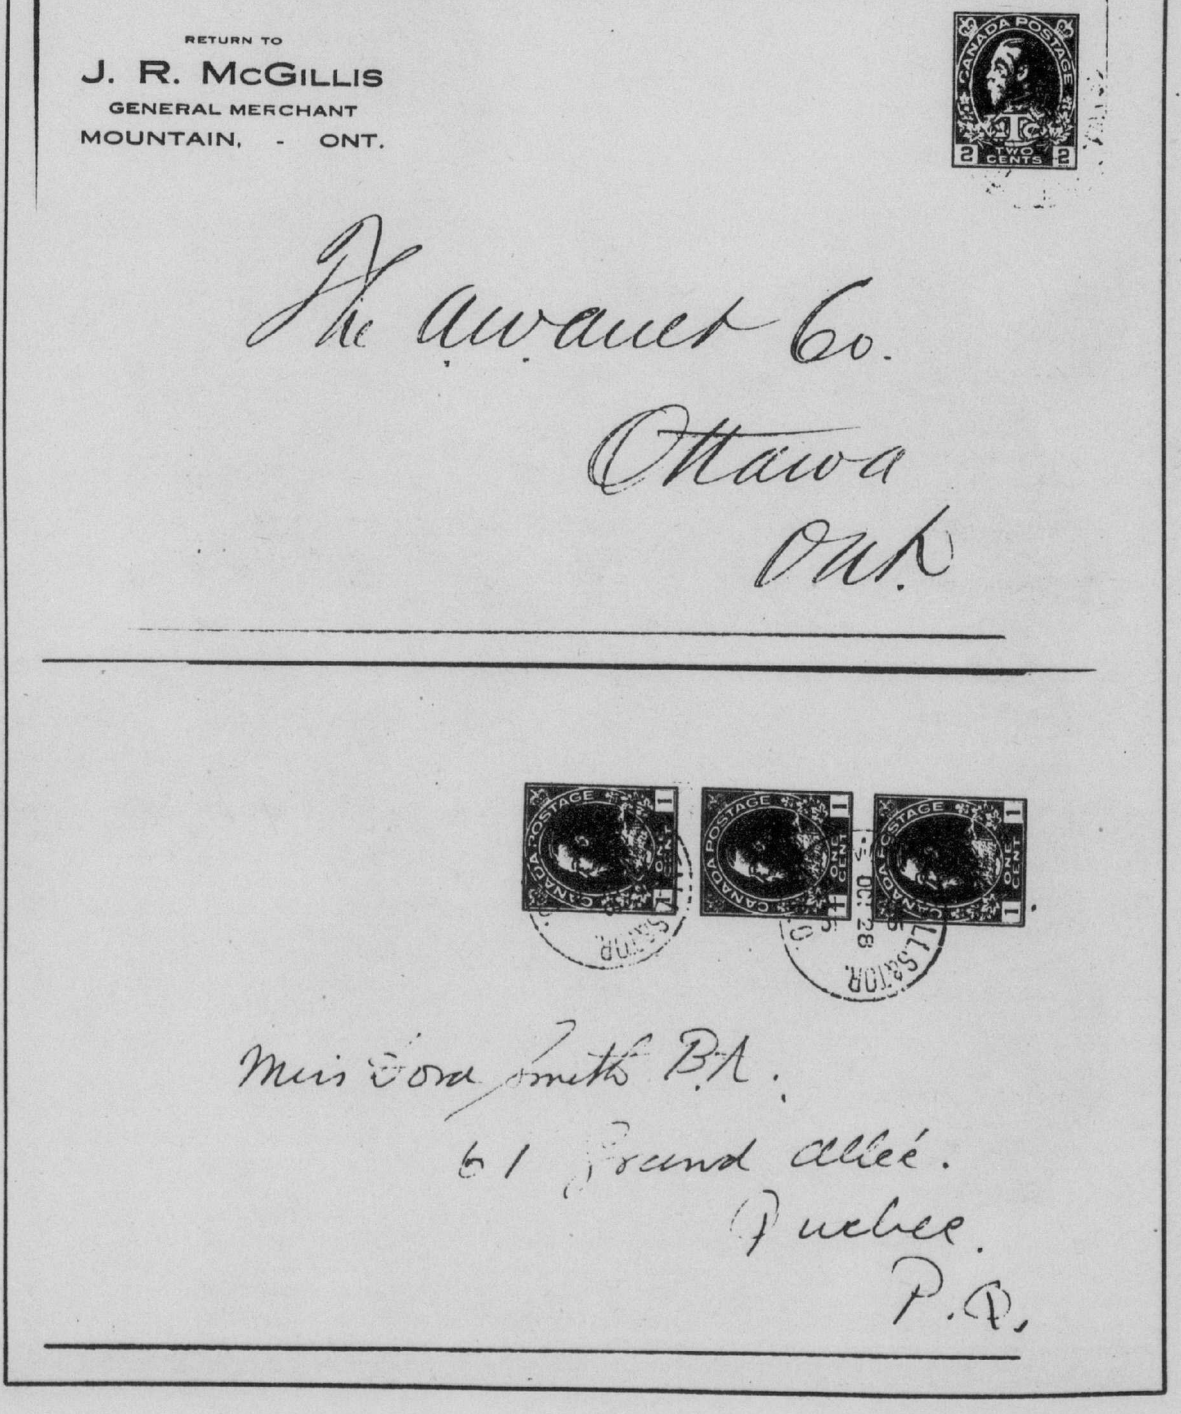

I'm inclined to agree with many who claim that the Admirals in mint form are very much overpriced. I do believe however, that no one may derive a great deal of pleasure from used singles and stamps on cover.

Here then are some of the uses for the different values of the Admirals. The one cent denomination was used for domestic and U.S.A. postcards. After these were increased to two cents, the one cent was continued to be used on local postcards.

The two cents was first used for Domestic, Empire and USA single letter rate up to one ounce and for Empire and UPU postcards.

The five cents was used for UPU single letter rate up to ½ ounce. The seven cents was used for domestic, Empire and U.S.A. single letter rate plus registration fee. The twenty, fifty cents and the dollar were used mainly for parcel post. There are many more rates including those of the War Tax Act. However, they really are too numerous to list here.

The Admiral issue of 1911 - 1925 is wide open and yours to enjoy. I've tried to eliminate the technical depth of the issue. This I leave up to you how deep you want to involve yourself. However, if you have any further questions, please don't hestitate to write. Your questions sometimes lead to a good article.

Quotable quotes that add up to a bunch of drivel

Who's who

By TADEUSZ LETARTE

WORTH REPEATING?

George Whatsisname at a press conference; "Partial is partial."

Maggie Iron-Drawers at the Nato conference; "When you sign up to something, you sign up to it. And that's that."

LA FRANCOPHONE

The Senegal Summit is over.

The Honorable Brian Baloney, Boubou Bourassa, Frank McKenna of New Brunswick, Joe Clark of External Affairs and Lucien Bouchard of Environment spread happiness and good cheer over that dusty African country like Robin Goodfellow and his Merry Pranksters. But Baloney begged off joining the conga dancers.

Paris's Le Monde reported the meeting was very useful in countering anglophone rule in the world but complained that Quebec has too much influence in France's affairs. It was France, of course, that pressured Baloney into allowing Quebec to become a separate and distinct member of the organization back in 1985.

This was the third meeting of La Francophonie, a 44-member family similar to the 60-member British Commonwealth that is dedicated to spreading French language and influence in the face of the growing threat of English.

France was roundly denounced for allowing the prestigious Institut Pasteur to begin publishing all its scientific journals in English and could only mumble that the Institut was independent of government. The Institut in turn claims English is the language of science throughout the world and it must publish in English to be taken seriously.

FAMILY SQUABBLING

There were many other squabbles in the family. First, barely 20% of the 450 million people represented actually consider French to be their mother tongue. Most look upon it as a foreign language and many as the language of oppressors yet it is often the only link between countries as disparate as Canada and Guinea-Bissau, France and Burkina Faso, Egypt and Vietnam, Belgium and Laos.

Senegal and Mauritania are actually preparing to go to war—and blame France for transferring populations from one country to the other in colonial days. Amnesty International denounced over 30 members for horrendous abuses of human rights and Canada wanted to talk about protecting the environment (which is why they took Lucien along) while the poorer countries were primarily concerned with feeding their hungry millions.

HERE HE COMES AGAIN

Tragedy struck when Baloney was walking along the beach. An impertinent little wave scurried up the sand when he wasn't looking and zapped him right in the Gucci loafers.

FITWEEK

For those loafers among us who may not have noticed, May 26 to June 4 has been proclaimed Canada Fitweek.

Superficial folk might think that means buying tailor-made clothes or getting hot under the collar over political chicanery but the serious-minded Ministry of Youth, Fitness and Amateur Sport calls it (with neither modesty nor explanation); "The largest celebration of physical fitness in the world!"

THE FOCUS

The focus this year is on those of us who find 'exercise' as hard to swallow as it is to spell, who believe jogging to be deadly boring and team sports childish. We are encouraged to find our own favorite physical activity—gardening, dancing, climbing trees, cycling, bending beer cans one-handed, a few vigorous hands of dominoes. Athletic sex is also encouraged—provided, of course, it remains an amateur activity.

The slogan this year is 'Give Your Life a Little Twist' and Health Minister Perrin Beatty (who tried to sell us those nuclear submarines last year) launched the campaign by publicly performing an energetic twist while our very own Jean Charest (whose figure is, shall we say, cuddly) got just a little fitter himself by applauding enthusiastically.

Tadeusz will do his part as always by exercising his imagination and stretching the truth.

OVERHEARD AT A CHURCH SUPPER:

He said:

"Yep. Been thinkin' of tradin' the old girl in on one of them newer models.

"Had her a longish time now, you know, and she's got a good many miles on her. Figured I'd get me one of them sporty new jobs, something fast and jazzy so folk will stand and watch us cruise by.

"But I don't know. I hear them new ones is kinda pricey and they don't make 'em like they used to. Don't hardly last any time at all, they say, and are always breaking down. I don't fancy getting a brand new one just broken in and then having to trade her again.

"So I figured, what the hey, I'll just hang on to the old one a while longer. A little body work, lick of paint here and there, few minor repairs and I can coax a few more miles out of her."

And she said;

"By the Moses, I'm the one as should do the tradin'. My jeesly old rust-bucket is getting past it.

"Idles to beat the band but don't expect him to take you any place. Besides, he's a good deal heavier than I need and the price of fuel and oil keep going up and up. If you don't keep him well oiled he won't move at all.

"Even then he creaks and groans and coughs, smokes like a chimney. His starter won't start, his battery won't bat and his pistons won't...work either."

PUT AN X SOMEWHERE

Now you know, and I know most journalisticelly bent, (warped in more ways than one) folks never, just never think about cars much. Leastways, not about washing the old heap ever, ever, ever. Do I have news for you.

This week, a bit of shiny chrome caught my eye, you know, the kind that goes around the wheels in these new-fangled hubcap affairs and usually doesn't shine at all after a winter or two with some driving on gravel thrown in.

It was unbelievable. The shock was almost too much. That bit of chrome, sitting there lewdly glowing belonged to none other the undauntable, albeit rather murky looking, editor. And horror of horrors, yes...it was his chrome — on his wheel — under his vehicle that was shining. That's right folks, Charlie, the new clean-car-freak Bury, actually washed, inside and out would you believe, his dusty excuse for a car. So, if you see a blinding flash screaming by your place, don't even scratch your head. It's him, out trying to hide that shiny body, those sparkling windows and worst, of all that telltale chrome trim on the wheels. It just isn't becoming to a person of his stature, (or is that status?).

Hulk Hogan wants to be a Hollywood movie hero

ATLANTA (AP) — Movie actor Rob Lowe's lawyer says his client probably will comment this week on allegations he induced an underage girl into having sex in an Atlanta hotel room and videotaped the action.

Lawyer Edgar Neely of Atlanta said he expects Lowe to say he is not the man who appears in the videotape, encouraging a 16-year-old girl to have sex with another woman.

"At this point, as far as I know he's denying it," the lawyer said.

Lowe, 25, who has appeared in such films as St. Elmo's Fire and About Last Night, has not commented publicly on the allegations, which are the subject of a lawsuit filed by the girl's mother and an investigation.

Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton has said he is convinced it is Lowe on the tape and is seeking to interview the actor.

Meanwhile, the New York News reported Sunday that copies of the videotape can be bought in Atlanta for $500 to $1,000 US, and that it is being shown at nightclubs around the city.

DALLAS (AP) — Hulk Hogan, star of the film No Holds Barred that opens Friday, says he wants to become the first pro wrestler to become a mammoth Hollywood box office attraction. He also wants to show that he's a nice guy.

"It hasn't been good in the movies for wrestlers, but that's a situation I hope our picture will change," Hogan said during a publicity tour stop in Dallas. "We're not just big dumb jocks who beat up on each other."

Hogan said other athletes have become screen stars, pointing out bodybuilder Arnold Schwarzenegger as an example.

"I'd love to be able to do something like what Arnold has accomplished, but keep it clean instead of going for all the violence that his movies have exploited," he said.

He mentioned the movie Terminator, in which Schwarzenegger played an assassin from the future.

"I'd like the kind of part where I show up from the future or space or somewhere and I'm the guy who helps people patch up their differences and get along with each other for a change," said Hogan, 35.

"I'm not worried about ruining my Hulkmania image by showing a more sensitive side," Hogan said.

WARSAW (AP) — American rock singer Stevie Wonder dropped in at Solidarity election campaign headquarters in Poland's capital and told a group of students and campaign workers he supports Solidarity in its election drive.

At one student's request Saturday, he sang I Just Called To Say I Love You, with the audience joining in on the refrains.

Wonder, who is blind, arrived Friday and gave a concert Saturday night.

After the Communist government reached a compromise with Solidarity labor union leaders, a parliamentary election was scheduled for June 4. The election is expected to be the least restricted in years. Solidarity-backed candidates are contesting hundreds of seats.

CHICAGO (AP) — Singer-songwriter John Mellencamp thinks it's a cause worth taking up — saving a rock 'n' roll shrine where Chuck Berry, the Rolling Stones, Muddy Waters and Bo Diddley made recording history.

Mellencamp and his band recorded a 90-minute performance aimed at generating support for the preservation of Chess Studios on Chicago's South Side. It will be broadcast in the Chicago area Wednesday night.

Mellencamp is asking the public to write to the Commission on Chicago Landmarks, urging it give the building permanent landmark status.

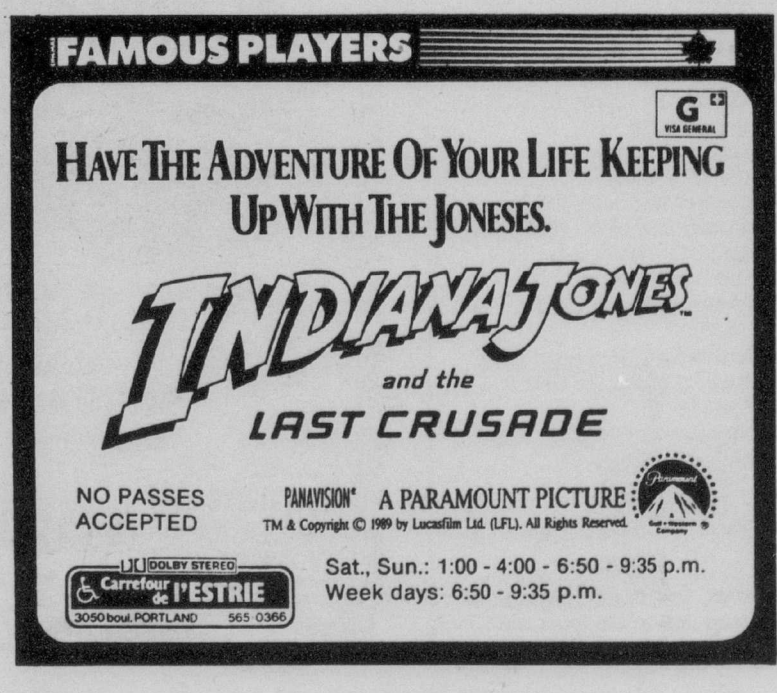

"All the songs that were done here were what you cut your teeth on as kids," Mellencamp said in a written statement from his publicist.

In its heyday, numerous hit records were cut at Chess Studios, including Muddy Waters's I'm Your Hoochie Coochie Man; Howlin' Wolf's Spoonful; Bo Diddley's You Can't Judge a Book by Looking at the Cover; Chuck Berry's Johnny B. Goode, and the Rolling Stones' (I Can't Get No) Satisfaction.

MELBOURNE (AP) — Australian pop singer and soap opera star Kylie Minogue celebrated her 21st birthday in style with boyfriend and co-star Jason Donovan.

Minogue, star of the top-rated Australian soap opera Neighbours but better known in North America as a singer, celebrated Saturday with Donovan and friends at a hotel in the Melbourne suburb of Albert Park.

Her international top 10 hits includ Locomotion and I Should Be So Lucky.

Can rap music's digital sampling legally raise copyright charges

By John Horn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Yo, James Brown! You may be sitting in jail, but your soul's on the loose in all kinds of songs, thanks to rap's booming use of a musical borrowing technique called sampling.

Mixing a hunger for instant recognition with a disregard for copyright law, rappers are exploiting sophisticated electronics to lift drum beats, guitar riffs and vocal phrases from old songs and plunk them into their new works.

Through digital sampling, for example, your typical cool rapper dresses up a song with Chuck Berry's guitar licks.

Both sampling and rap are so popular that American lawyers are loading up their litigation bags to handle the potential barrage of copyright lawsuits.

At the heart of the debate is whether rap is a legally protected, hip-hopping art form or just high-tech cattle rustling.

VIEWS DIFFER

"I don't see any protection for (sampling) anywhere, ever," said Peter Paterno, a music industry lawyer whose clients include Guns N' Roses. "I think every one of these guys who samples is going to lose (in court)."

Ricky Grundy, co-president and owner of Graffiti Talk Music, says there should be compensation for sampling. "The (rappers) are not being creative. They're using other talent to make up an idea."

However, rappers and their supporters insist that this pop-culture pastiche represents rap's essence. Without sampling, they insist, there wouldn't be any raps worth rapping.

"That's a part of rap — sampling," said Tone Loc, whose Wild Thing includes bits from Van Halen's Jamie's Crying, and whose Funky Cold Medina appropriates parts of Foreigner's Hot Blooded.

"You bring back old songs that you might have forgot about or never heard before," said Loc, one of the few rappers who seeks permission for his musical raids. "When you hear the little riff, that little tune in your head, it starts coming back to you, and it sounds good.

"We don't have live musicians to play for us. I never had a live drummer."

PLUCK A BIT

Today's digital technology reduces even the most complicated, multilayered songs to individual data bits. Thus, a single tambourine hit from a '40s classic that has been digitally rerecorded can be electronically extracted with surgical precision. It can then be stored in a computer for use with other music without missing a beat.

Discovering musical samples in current rap songs, therefore, can be a bit like Easter-egg hunts: some can't be missed; others require a painstaking search.

De La Soul's Eye Know borrows from Steely Dan's Peg and Otis Redding's (Sittin' on) The Dock of the Bay. G-Love-E's Suck on This contains a sequence from Three Dog Night's Mama Told Me (Not to Come).

But the biggest source of this digital dredging is James Brown, now serving a six-year sentence in South Carolina for aggravated assault and failing to stop for police.

Brown's work has been replayed by the Fat Boys, Ice-T, Public Enemy and a host of other rappers. "The music out there is only as good as my last record," Brown joked in a recent interview from jail with Rolling Stone magazine.

While an increasing number of rappers are following Tone Loc's lead by obtaining rights and paying fees of several hundred dollars for each sample, many do not.

BEASTIES SUED

The Beastie Boys, for one, are facing a copyright infringement suit over their song Hold It Now, Hit It. The case could be the first in the United States to establish a legal precedent for future sampling disputes.

It is alleged that the Beastie Boys lifted the words "Yo Leroy" and some drum beats from Jimmy Castor's 1977 single, The Return of Leroy (Part One).

Chuck Ortner, a lawyer representing Beastie Boys label Def Jam Recordings, said even if the rappers did sample from Castor — which he disputes — the band is protected in part by the Fair Use doctrine of the U.S. 1976 Copyright Act, the same doctrine that allows a college professor to photocopy a short article for a class.

BeBe & CeCe Winans are popular Gospel duo

By Peter Ramjug

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — When BeBe and CeCe Winans were small children, the punishment they feared the most from their parents was being told they couldn't sing in church.

"As young people ... anytime we couldn't go, it was a sad time for us 'cause we really enjoyed it," said Benjamin (BeBe), who along with his sister Priscilla (CeCe), make up one of gospel music's most entertaining duos.

Their latest album, Heaven, follows their immensely successful 1987 debut LP bearing their name. While it had inspirational gospel music as its backbone, BeBe, 26, and CeCe, 24, incorporated an unorthodox youthful taste.

The duo was nominated for three Grammy Awards, winning one, and in 1987 won the Gospel Music Association's Horizon Award, given annually to the industry's top artists.

BROTHERS FAMOUS

They credit their success to guidance from their famous brothers, Marvin, Carvin, Ronald and Michael, who together comprise the Winans, the mainstay family of gospel music.

"We're very thankful for our brothers because a lot of the mistakes we've seen them make we didn't have to make," said CeCe. "They opened up a lot of doors for us also. We've always been each other's critics and each other's fans."

BeBe and CeCe said in a Washington dressing room interview they have had offers to cross over to pop music, but they're not interested.

"We've had offers and sometimes you sit down and wonder — especially when it's big offers and it's surprising to know that someone would give you so much to switch — but its always been our purpose to sing what we sing," said the stocky BeBe, who writes most of the duo's material.

IDEAS IN CHURCH

His ideas for songs can come anytime, he said, but when he's in church the lyrics seem to flow much easier.

"Sometimes I'm in church and the preacher preaches a sermon that inspires me to write a song and then there's personal situations and experiences in my life that I get inspired from."

At the ages of 19 and 17, respectively, BeBe and CeCe Winans began singing as a duo on Jim and Tammy Bakker's PTL Club television program.

"It was a place where we learned about performing and TV cameras," said CeCe. "We learned how to deal with different types of styles of music, and that's where we started as a duet because they had us doing lot of songs together.

"They were good people. We're sad to see what happened to it (PTL) because ... they did a lot of good things for people but they just made some mistakes," she said, referring to the 1987 sex scandal that toppled the Bakkers' multimillion-dollar ministry.

Aside from their work as a duo, BeBe starred in the Broadway musical Don't Get God Started, along with gospel sensation Vanessa Bell Armstrong.

Perhaps the best way to sum up BeBe and CeCe Winans' impact on the gospel music industry is through a little sermon CeCe delivered at the beginning of their Washington concert:

"When you all leave here tonight," she shouted, "I promise that you won't feel the same way as when you came in!"

Johnny Paycheck to sing while in Ohio prison

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Johnny Paycheck will perform for his fellow prisoners at an Ohio prison next month and ex-convict Merle Haggard will join him.

Paycheck and Haggard will perform two concerts June 13 at the Chillicothe Correctional Institution, said warden Arthur Tate.

Paycheck, 50, is serving a seven- to 9½-year sentence for shooting a man in a bar in 1985. Paycheck is best known for his 1978 hit song, Take This Job and Shove It.

Haggard, one of country music's top singers for the past 25 years, spent three years in San Quentin Prison for burglarizing a cafe. He was paroled in 1960 and pardoned in 1972 by then-California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The prison concert will be recorded for release as an album, tentatively called Behind the Walls, Billy Don Burns, Paycheck's record producer in Nashville, said Friday.

ROGERSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dolly Parton's younger sister, singer-actress Stella Parton, says people always ask her what it's like to be in the shadows of a country music legend.

"I don't know what to compare it to," she said. "I've always been her sister since the day I was born."

Stella Parton, 40, prefers to focus on her own career, which includes spending 200 days on the road each year. She runs her own record and production companies from Nashville. She began singing with her sisters at age seven, but she has yet to score a big hit.

South Durham artist soon to make solo d ut

Patti Barrowman: an artist with a touch of genius

By Claudia Villemaire

SOUTH DURHAM — It's quite a piece from the main road, up and down, past freshly seeded fields where the tiniest hint of the palest green tells me corn or grain is just barely pushing up through the soil. I wind around tree shaded curves, up another hill and discover the farmstead where the Barrowmans operate both a farm and a machine shop.

But that's not all. Patti Barrowman is waiting in the big farm kitchen, one of her best buddies by her side. Perhaps she's a bit nervous because she'll show me yet another side of the Barrowman family, her own growing talent with oils and watercolors using as her star models her best friends, Yeller, the Golden Lab and Pay Day, the Apaloosa horse.

Barrowman graduated from the Halifax School of Fine Art some years ago, came with her father, brother Robert and his wife, (another lady named Pat), to the country about 11 years ago and set out to raise beef cattle (Belted Galloways and Charolais) with brother Bob seeing his dream of a machine shop beginning to take shape.

EVEN ON LINEN

Barrowman dabbled with her art, sandwiching time between chores with a growing herd and a family of horses, doing work on canvas and paper, sometimes even on linen, with her oil paints.

We climb the stairs to her work room where scores of paintings are in the process of being framed. Large and small are stacked in every available bit of space, paint pots line one shelf and an old-fashioned desk at the window suggests this is where it all begins.

"I suppose at some point one has to look a little further ahead, take a serious approach to marketing perhaps. Painting with oil is so expensive and framing is too. So, when Chris Severs suggested a solo exhibition out in Knowlton, I agreed," she admitted.

So Barrowman began to experiment with watercolors too. With Pay Day, her favorite model, almost always at hand and Yeller by her side, this soon-to-be-known artist goes about her chores with the eye of the artist ever on the alert. "When I see a particular scene I think would be nice to paint, I might draw a few quick sketches, make some notes on the colors or position of the animals, if that is the case, and I might start right away and finish in ten minutes. Or perhaps any given painting could take two years to complete before I'm satisfied," she explained.

MYSTICISM

Her work reflects the mysticism of the animal world. Paintings depict the fluidity of her favorite horse's spirit and the freedom her animal friends represent to her. She use of multiple shades of the same tone give her work an aura that is unique. A flowing style adds to the mystery, and almost every painting displays a silvery spirit/animal, sometimes almost obscure, other times quite distinct.

"Pay Day and I are best buddies," she says, as we walk to the pasture where horses and ponies stand waiting for the treats she brings. A halter and lead rope is all she needs to guide her four-legged friend and its immediately obvious the friendship goes both ways.

"I just love to have him close by and spend some time sketching or just thinking about doing a painting." The two friends were head-to-head, Barrowman seated in the grass just under his nose, the lead rope dangling, horse and woman face to face for a moment's communication and Yeller waiting patiently just across the fence.

DIFFERENT VIEW

Then the scene changes. She gets up, paper and pencil in hand, sitting astride Pay Day, getting a very different view of her world, five feet or more off the ground. "I try to see a scene from an artist's point of view," she says. "That means recognizing and remembering the colors, shadows and tones and that takes quite a while to develop. You don't get many second chances when a particular thing catches your eye. That's what the notes are about."

We left her four-footed friends in that green pasture as we walked back to the century-old farmhouse, while Barrowman talked about her garden where flowers and vegetables vy for space.

"I used to plant quite a bit near the driveway and near the edge of the lawn," she laughed. "But it seemed as though every year, just when everything was at its best, the whole damn herd would come thundering through. That was the end of the garden pretty well, so now I plant less in one spot and try to spread it around a bit.

But near the house, spring flowers bloom here and there. Daffodils, tulips, narcissus and lilacs announced their presence with a sweet mix of scents even before I spotted them.

TESTIMONY

"I just love the flowers, especially the roses," she said and a line of rose bushes near the cedar rail fence are a living testimony of her care.

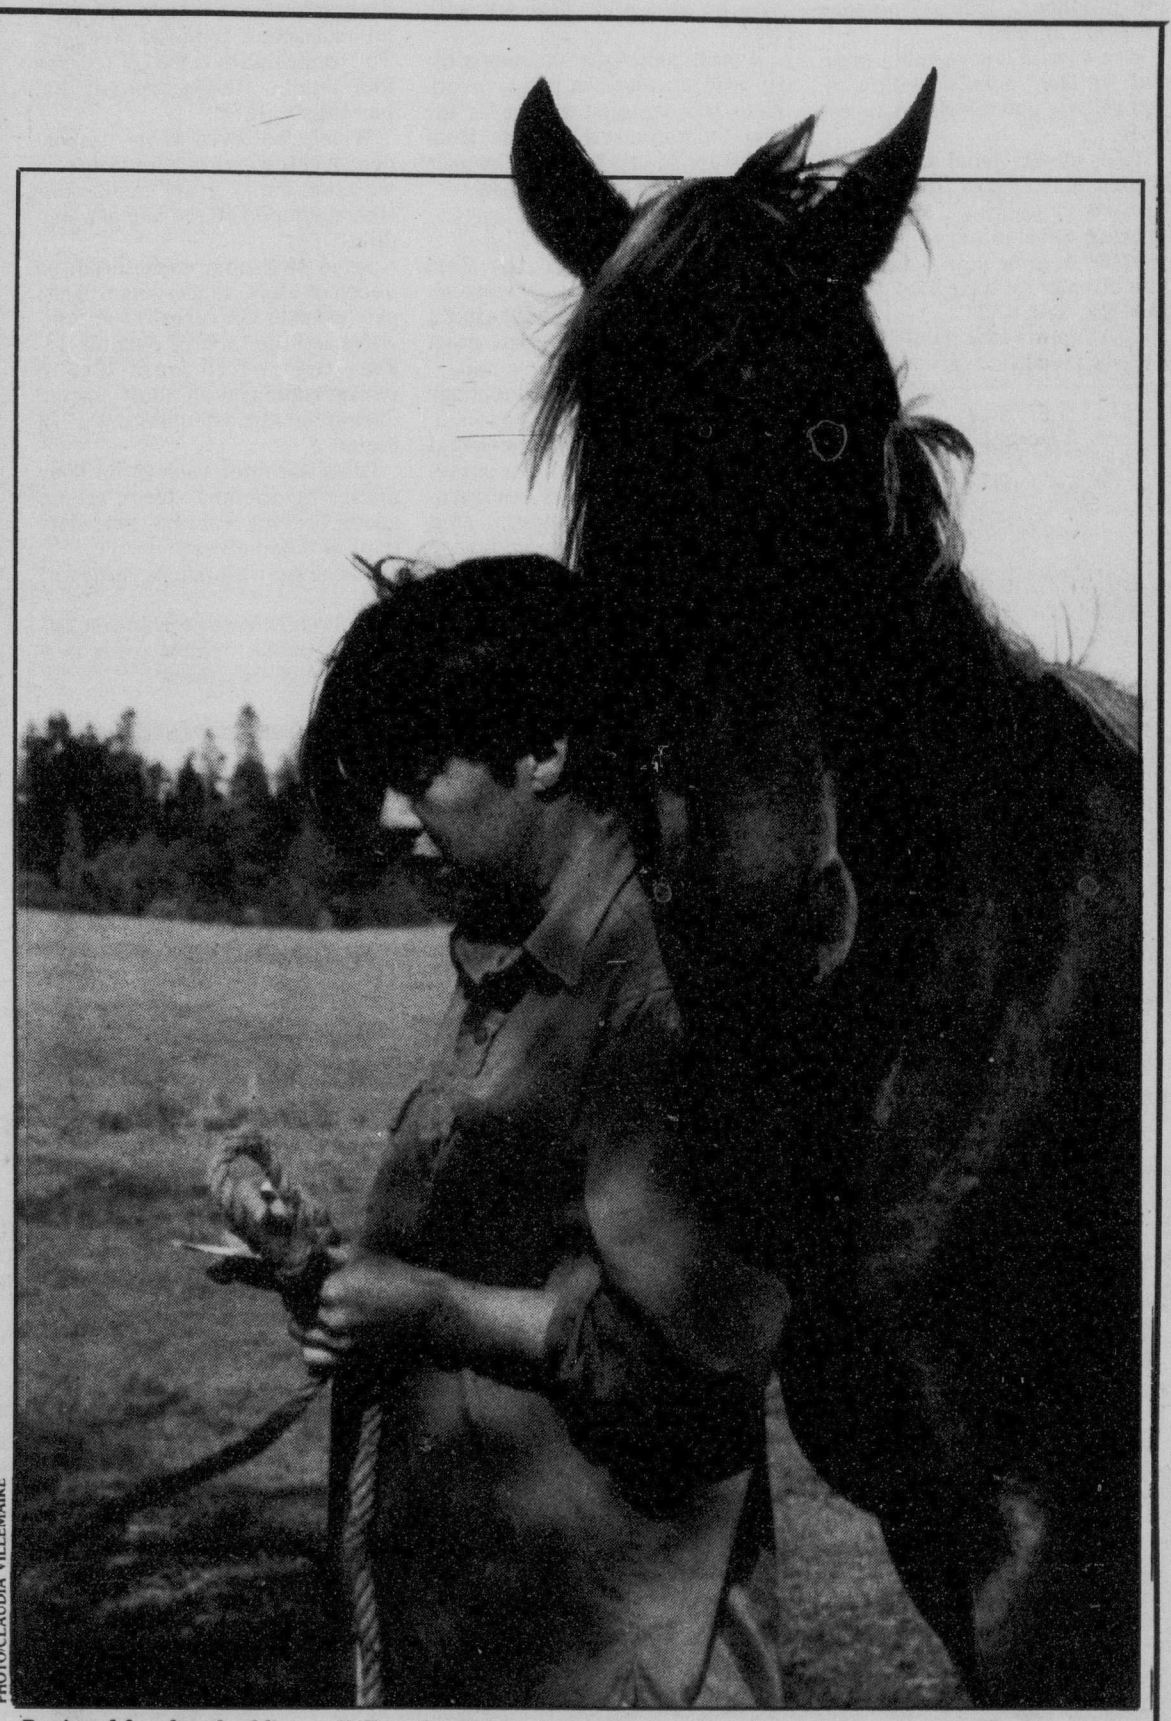

We chatt in the sunshine, Barrowman talking of her work and admitting that painting is a major activity since an allergy to farm and stable dust has keeps her from her animal friends much of the time.

"I find I must use more watercolors now too and the oil paint thinners and spirits seem to also affect this thing," she said quite disgusted. But friends and art connoiseurs have encouraged her career in art, and rave about her unique expression on canvas and paper. Already, an increasing number is clamoring for her work.

"I hope things work out. I admit I'd love to have a proper studio and perhaps my own farm someday. Even the cost of supplies and framing tends to cut down on one's ambition. I think very few artists ever make a satisfactory living from their art without some government intervention, and that, I don't want. So, the next step I guess is try and market some work."

The Rose Window art gallery in Knowlton will be her first solo stop with the exhibition opening July 15. It seems a friendly breeze is blowing Barrowman's way. Who knows, perhaps Knowlton will be a giant step toward fame and fortune for this lady and her good buddies, Pay Day and Yeller.

"I suppose at some point one has to look a little further ahead, take a look at marketing perhaps," she said.

Pop stars are created in Japan

By Anna Esaki

TOKYO (Reuter) — Like so many Frankenstein monsters, pop stars in Japan are created, not born.

The showbiz machine turns out hundreds of instant teenage idols every year.

To be considered, a girl must be in her early teens, virginal and painfully adorable. Talent is optional.

"I guess ability doesn't really matter as long as the person has the look," said a promoter at a major production company.

"An idol is cute and in her teens," said Kazuji Kasai, a television producer. "She is someone teenagers admire."

Once chosen and suitably groomed, an idol "debuts" with a record release and television appearance.

"Idols ideally debut at 13," said Minoru Kawamura, director of Theatre Academy, a school for training entertainers. "By the time they become 15 or 16 they may have already hit their peak."

MAY BE 'TALENT'

If she captures the public's imagination, the idol can graduate into becoming a "tarento" around the age of 20.

A "tarento" (talent) is an entertainer who can sing, act, be funny, or simply look cute. Television stations need vast numbers of them to fill out their endless talk and quiz shows.

Tens of thousands of young people, mostly girls, try out at auditions and idol contests throughout Japan. Between 200 to 300 "debut" each year. But only a handful succeed.

"Sometimes the face is good, but the singing is bad, or the face is bad but the singing is good," said Kasai. "You can put a lot of money into an idol and come up with zero."

A major television station recently held an audition for a prestigious free training course for the idols of tomorrow. Photos from 37,000 applicants between the ages of 14 and 19 came flooding in.

MEN PICK 40

A lucky 300 passed the first screening and of those, 40 were selected by an all-male panel after a parade in turquoise leotards and a camera close-up.

Judges asked a few questions about career choices.

"Although I may not appear that way now, people say I am exceedingly bright and cheery, almost to the point of being annoying," said one idol hopeful. "I would very much like to be a cute tarento."

Idols appear repeatedly on television programs, singing the same song, in the same way, over and over.

Winks, coy smiles and wind-up doll mannerisms are the idol's trademark. Wardrobes include outrageous, complicated outfits, from frilly pink party dresses to off-the-shoulder lush velvet gowns.

"You have to accommodate the tastes of those who are watching television," said Kawamura. "Maybe the entertainment world here has to grow up a bit."

NOT ALL HAPPY

Despite their sweet public facade, not all idols are squeaky clean. Popular newspapers often run scandal stories on their love lives.

Constant public visibility and deliberate self-composure can mask an adolescent, confused teenager. The tragic death in 1986 of teenage idol Yukiko Okada brought that painfully to light.

Widely believed to be despondent over the lack of attention from an actor many years her senior, Okada jumped off the roof of a building.

Seiko Matsuda, considered the queen of idols, made waves when she resumed her career after marriage and the birth of a child. Making the switch from idol to motherhood and an adult singing career is almost unheard of in Japan.

Other tarentos cash in on their names by opening stores selling goods bearing cartoon reproductions of themselves.

No one knows how long fame will last.

Said veteran movie producer Zitsuhiko Sonoda: "Idols come in a flash and go in a flash."

Jan Carr leads in NBC new Dear John show

By Jerry Buck

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It became the catch-phrase of the television season, Louise Mercer's voyeuristic inquiry of recently divorced new singles group members: "Any sex-u-al problems?"

Louise's recurring laugh line on NBC's Dear John almost didn't come with the now-trademarked, raised-eyebrow English accent.

"In the beginning they didn't know if I should play it as English or use an American accent," said Jane Carr, who has done an American accent on British television. 'The decision wasn't made until just before I tested. It's better for me. You don't have that added pressure of how to pronounce your words."

Louise's accent is one vestige of the roots of Dear John, which is based on a short-run British series.

SHOW RENEWED

In Dear John, which has been renewed for the fall season, Carr plays the leader of a Queens, N.Y., community group that serves the needs of newly single people, including John Lacey (Judd Hirsch), a schoolteacher whose wife ran off with his best friend. He soon befriends several members of the group, including Louise.

"Louise is inquisitive, independent, warm and loving," said Carr. "She really cares about these people. She loves the group."

More than Carr's accent was incorporated into the show. Because she was pregnant, so was Louise. Carr and her husband, American actor Mark Arnott (The Return of the Secaucus Seven), had a son, Dashiel, in February.

"I wasn't pregnant when we did the pilot," said Carr. "The costuming was fabulous. It wasn't apparent until the end. I stayed small until the eighth month, then I exploded. I just looked buxomly and matronly. People just thought I was putting on a little weight.... I only missed three shows. They wrote in my pregnancy and Louise has become a single parent. We'll have more on that next season."

DID DICKENS

Carr arrived in the United States from England with the New York and Los Angeles production of Charles Dickens's Nicholas Nickleby.

"By the time we finished the play I'd been here a year," she said. "I played different roles, such as Fanny Squeelas, Miss Snevelici and Peg Sliderskew. By the time we got to Los Angeles there was a lot of interest in me.

"In that naive way I thought I was going to be a Hollywood star in a minute. It doesn't work that way at all. It's very difficult.... Then I met Mark in my agent's office, and six months later we got married."

Carr made her film debut at the age of eight in Gary Cooper's last movie, The Naked Edge.

"Gary Cooper looked quite ill. My mother put me in a neat cardigan, but it got torn because I had to look more poverty-stricken. They tore a hole in it.... My family was poor. I kept pestering them for dance classes. It was a way to pay for my classes."

STAGE AND FILMS

She made her professional stage debut at 15 in a touring production of Agatha Christie's The Spider's Web. She originated the role of Mary McGregor in the West End production of The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie and made her film debut in the role.

She played one of the maids in Upstairs, Downstairs, the British production that became a big hit on PBS in the 1970s. She played an American in a BBC production of a Noel Coward short story, What Mad Pursuit.

"Doing an American accent in London is one thing, but doing it here is another thing," she said.

"I had a dialogue coach. I was supposed to be from Iowa, but I think I sounded like I was from Chicago. I was brought up in a Cockney area, and I had to have that accent knocked out of me. My sister still talks Cockney. I wonder what sort of accent my son will have."

U2's Bono to be a father

DUBLIN (AP) — Pop star Bono, leader of the top Irish rock group U2, has become a father for the first time.

The singer's 28-year-old wife, Ali, gave birth to a daughter in a Dublin hospital Wednesday, a group spokesman said Saturday. Mother and daughter were "doing splendidly," said the spokesman, speaking anonymously.

The baby hasn't been named yet, but fans in Dublin quickly dubbed her U3.

Bono, who celebrated his 29th birthday on the day his daughter was born, married Alison Stewart in Dublin seven years ago after meeting her at school. His real name is Paul Hewson.

CANNES, France (AP) — Of all the stars coming to the 42nd Cannes Film Festival, none has been awaited with as much anticipation as American actress Meryl Streep who arrived for the Saturday showing of her film, A Cry in the Dark.

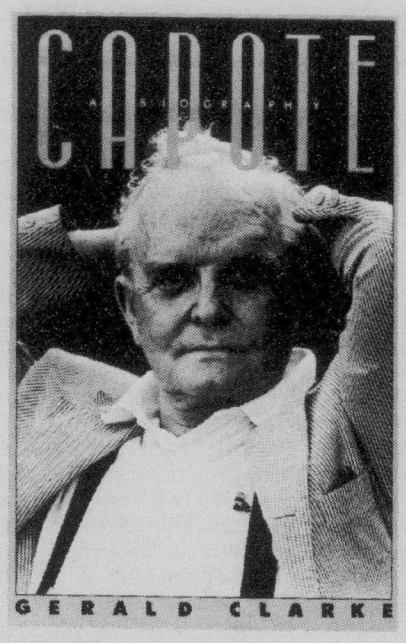

Her picture, on the covers of French Vogue and the film magazine Premiere, stares from newsstands throughout France and her film, by Australian director Fred Schepisi, is considered a major contender for the Golden Palm, the top prize of the two-week festival.

She told reporters at a packed press showing she came to France to help promote the film for European audiences, and "I actually forgot it was in the competition."

Streep was nominated for an Oscar for her performance in the film.

Gerald Clarke — author — saves the day with his fascinating writing style

Capote's life story a depressing, sordid account

Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

Capote by Gerald Clarke (SIMON AND SCHUSTER): $29:95, 631 pp.

Even though he never realized the position in literary history that he saw himself assuming — that of a modern-day Marcel Proust — Truman Capote certainly fits into the broad category of American gothic figures in literature who point to their southern upbringing as the formative quality in their literary lives.

Capote's life, as spun out by former Time magazine cover-story writer Gerald Clarke, begins sordidly and ends on a similar tawdry note when he died in the arms of Johnny Carson's ex-wife Joanne, in her Los Angeles home, on Saturday August 25, 1984.

Truman Capote was actually born with the name Truman Streckfus Persons, in Monroeville, Alabama, on Tuesday September 30, 1924, the son of Arch Persons and Lillie Mae Faulk. Biographer Clarke's book is obviously handicapped by the large amount of hearsay information that has to be relied upon to supply details about the early life of Capote. His southern upbringing featured stays with a household of eccentric aunts: "three quarrelsome sisters in late middle age, their reclusive older brother, and an atmosphere heavy with small secrets and ancient resentments."

CAPOTE'S EARLY YEARS

As Clarke points out, the early life of the abandoned Capote read like the text of Harper Lee's To Kill A Mockingbird. Even when he wasn't deposited with his peculiar relatives, Truman found himself often cast off by his wayward mother Lillie Mae (who later changed her name to Nina, just as Truman took on the name of his stepfather, Joseph Garcia Capote, one of Nina's string of lovers). Clarke argues that many of Capote's later insecurities, neuroses and psychological hang-ups were rooted in the depressing youth he endured, often locked in hotel rooms as a very young child, while his mother caroused and painted the town with various beaux.

When he finally was able to break free of the southern environment he did it with a flourish, arriving at the furthest possible polarity removed from the sleepy south — the intoxicating metropolis of New York City. Once there, Capote and his mother bounced around from Brooklyn and several other city addresses, until they ended up in Greenwich, Connecticut, while Truman's schooling included a stint at Trinity School, "one of New York's oldest and best private schools for boys".

As his mother faced the boys's formative years and the shock that his homosexuality was irrevocable, she found solace in the companion that buoyed up Capote's own declining years — the bottle. Truman, on the other hand, turned to writing short stories as a brash young twenty year old who began his literary career sorting cartoons and doing other odd jobs at the revered The New Yorker magazine where he was employed.

EARLY STORIES PRAISED

Soon Truman Capote's early stories were published to much acclaim and praise for his raw young talent — publications such as Harper's Bazaar, and Mademoiselle, once repositories of very fine short fiction, were soon vying for the stories from the flambouyant, audacious, upstart writer. Even as biographer Clarke etches in the background to Capote's literary life, he begins to trace the details of the many romantic interludes that the writer had with a succession of plain looking, fatherly figures, who were almost carbon copies of each other.

One of the earliest was Newton Arvin, a Smith College professor of English at Northampton, Massachusetts. Arvin, winner of a National Book Award in 1951 for his biography of Herman Melville, was an early and devoted lover of Truman — at least until Arvin was forced to suffer the shame of an arrest for being found in possession of large amounts of pornographic materials. Even in 1960, the Blue Laws of Massachusetts were severe and Arvin's homosexual affair with Capote suffered a setback.

CONFIDANT OF THE STARS

As Capote's fame grew, the result of his publication of short stories, novellas, and finally, in 1958, Breakfast At Tiffany's, the range and quality of his acquaintances and friends also expanded. He became known as the confidant and constant companion of such celebrity figures as Bill and Babe Paley, Lee Radziwill, Jacqueline Kennedy, Joanne Carson, Marella Agnelli, and a Who's Who of the international jet-set. A party animal of the first order, Truman Capote gave way to the demands of alcohol, drugs and gossip, squandering his talent and achievement as a meticulous miniaturist, and indulging in petty feuds with writers such as Gore Vidal and Norman Mailer.

Amid the steady decline in Capote's talents, wasted as he was by booze and bennies, and the serious ravages of cocaine, he rallied to make one dramatic contribution to American literature which will always stand as a measure of his ability. In Cold Blood, the meticulously researched (he devoted some eight years of his life to the book about the murder of the family of Herbert Clutter, amassing some 4,000 pages of typed notes about the area near Garden City, Kansas, where the infamous killings took place) book that he claimed had pioneered as a new genre — the nonfiction novel — had an immense impact on Capote's life and may even have hastened his decline.

Caught up in the legal wranglings that led to the eventual, tortuously prolonged judicial manoevers that led to the execution of Dick Hickock and Perry Smith, the two convicted killers of the Clutter family, Capote could not conclude his "novel" until he knew the outcome of the killers' appeals to stay their execution. After their execution in 1965, Capote turned to the daunting task of writing a book that had become so much a part of his life.

FINAL YEARS SKETCHY

Strangley enough, Clarke's treatment of the final two decades of Capote's life suffers more from lack of precise detail than the early chapters about his formative years did. In spite of his life that was lived out in pages of Liz Smith's gossip columns, and replayed on constant appearances on the Carson show and other late-nite talkies, Capote's final sordid years, when he bounced like a yo-yo from one male lover to the other are sketchily related.

Jack Dunphy was the "kept" lover that author Capote provided with a home next-door to his own on Long Island; John O'Shea was the family man, with a wife and four children, who Capote set up as the executive vice-president of his managerial company to handle the affairs of a much-published writer.

The tribulations resulting from lover's spats with each of these two men led to an deterioration of Capote's already precarious hold on emotional equilibrium and sobriety. His final decade reads like a profile of a sad, socially inept, drug-dependent and alcoholic figure whose writing has been replaced by petty jealousies, temper tantrums and inane ramblings about fellow authors.

Abandoned by the friends that he savaged, Somerset Maugham-fashion, in his roman a clef short story "La Cote Basque" (1965), careening in pinball fashion between lovers Jack and John, providing front-page news items for the New York dailies because of his drunken driving escapades or literary feuds, Truman Capote's final years are indeed depressing for the reader.

Credit must go to author Gerald Clarke, whose task in this biography was made even more challenging because of the public figure that his subject had become. One reader of Capote confessed that he really didn't care for the subject of the book very much, but found that he was fascinated by the style of its writer and the revelations about this eccentric American author.

Crossing Delaney (WARNER BROS. HOME VIDEO)

Taking a metaphorical cross-town bus and ending up smack in the middle of Woody Allen country might at first appear to be a foolhardy gamble on the part of film director Joan Micklin Silver, but the interesting results she obtains with Crossing delaney prove that the trip was worth while.

Very much a New York City film, Delaney is the study of a young woman who is faced with a perplexing choice to make: either be true to her roots of Jewish ethnicity that bind her tightly, or break free and immerse herself in the world of minor literary figures that fascinates her.

As Isabelle Grossman, Amy Irving is charming in the role of the batchelorette who has a respectable job as a manager of a small book store: her claim to fame is that she has the personal phone number of people like Isaac Bashevis Singer, and that she is able to mingle with much more minor literary figures as she books them for speaking engagements. Tearing her from this chosen existence is her grandmother, Bubbie Kantor, (Reizi Bozyk) who is determined to find the girl a "nice young man".

Bubbie resorts to the neighbourhood matchmaker whose prime candidate is a stoical young pickle store manager, Sam Posner (Peter Riegert), and while Izzy is charmed by the plain, soft-spoken entrepeneur she yearns for the attention of Anton Maes (Jeroen Krabble), an eccentric and passionate novelist. The title of the movie refers to the street which Izzy may cross into the bigger world than the one encompassed by her neighbourhood, and Director Silver is able to weave her characters into the New York fabric without burdening the viewer with a lot of Woody Allen's angst and psychoanalysis.

The simple choice of following the dictates of Bubbie's comic matchmaker or crossing Delancey into the world she aspires to keeps Amy Irving's character and the viewer engaged throughout this fast-moving, animated film. Rourke denies charges

CANNES, France (AP) — American actor Mickey Rourke, at the centre of a controversy over comments he made at the Cannes Film Festival last week, denied Sunday that he ever gave money to the Irish Republican Army.

Rourke was denounced by British MPs after a news conference Friday called to promote his latest movie, Francesco, in which he plays St. Francis of Assisi.

Asked then if he ever donated money to religious causes, Rourke replied: "Yes I have, to causes in Northern Ireland. Yes, to Joe Doherty, who is a prisoner in New York City."

Doherty, 33, was convicted of the murder of a British Army captain and sentenced to life in prison in 1981. He escaped from prison but was captured by the FBI in 1983 and jailed in New York.

Rourke issued a statement Sunday through a spokesman saying he had been involved only in humanitarian aid in Northern Ireland, never with the Irish Republican Army.

If people in England "choose to use this as a platform to persecute me as an Irish Catholic American, then that is their indulgence," he said.

O'Rourke has starred in Angel Heart, Barfly and The Pope of Greenwich Village.

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Comic Jay Leno was made an honorary member of the University of Nevada-Reno's class of '89 after taking humorous jabs at members.

Leno addressed about 1,000 seniors Friday at a graduation lunch.

To an art major, Leno quipped: "Art? So you want to live at home with your parents when you get out."

To a psychology major, he said: "Oh — so when you're out of a job, you'll know why."

Leno was given a silver buckle, a school tie, a plaque making him an honorary member of the Class of '89 and a bag of tortilla chips.

PHOENIX (AP) — A 26-year-old television journalist resigned after management learned she was the subject of a nude photo feature in the July issue of Playboy magazine, which hits newsstands this week.

Shelly Jamison, a news producer, reporter and fill-in anchor, is on the cover of the magazine with her clothes on, and on the inside with them off.

"If they don't fire me, I'll probably quit anyway," she told the Arizona Republic earlier in the week.

Jamieson could not be reached for comment on Sunday.

You remember the whale of a tale? The one about adopting a Beluga whale by sending money $10 to the CBC Quebec Community Network's Adopt-a-Whale campaign. Well, the idea caught on better than a tiny flame in dry grass. That's right, the Network has received $13,212 with one donation of $5000, enough to cover cost of one whale.

So, they will adopt two whales and money will go toward studying the endangered beluga whale and research into pollution in the St. Lawrence river.

Everyone who contributed ten dollars or more was eligible to win a weekend for two in Tadoussac along with a boat trip to see the whales. Winners are Vanessa and Patrick Seale from Lennoxville and Fred Bedford from Ste-Foy. There will be another drawing soon for the school that raised the most money for the fund.

Now, here's your chance to do your bit for fine arts without donning top hat and cape. Cost is $10, $20 for a family, $2 for students and $5 for senior citizens.

Something new is coming your way. A different approach to touring the Eastern Townships — by horseback — is being offered to anyone interested along with a brochure titled Québec à Cheval. The information includes trail riding events, including some with a sleep-over, horseshows and other equestrian activies. Diane Rawlins way off in Richmond tells me about a first-ever music fest planned for the park in this town June 11. Lots of musicians have shown interest, organizers will have everything but the instruments right there waitin', and folks, I hear, are getting downright excited about country and popular music right outside. Of course, if it rains, they have decided to either go to the Community Centre or hold-over 'til the next week. Seems last Saturday, Steve received not one, but TWO gifts from anonymous admirers and I have a letter from none other than an unnamed admirer of Jessie, Steve's wife. One of the ladies states flatly she admires much more than Steve's silky whiskers (?!?) and the letter addressed to Jessie warns Steve not to break his wife's heart because there are folks around who are keeping a close watch on things.

Now this is getting out of hand. We'll just have to find out who these mysterious paramours are. Anyone with a clue can let us all know while they're at it.

In the meantime, don't forget, come out to Cookshire, watch the fun and enjoy some good music too with Steve and his Country Fever band Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. You can be sure the music's good and so There's another St. Andrew's Sunday Afternoon coming up this weekend. Guest speaker is Ted Ellis, just in from missionary work in Taiwan. He promises to keep everyone on the edge of their seats as he describes the turmoil and tension that surrounds his mission. Time is 3, admission is free and the ladies are putting on a sumptious cold buffet for Sunday afternoon appetites. There will be a free nursery and organizers will have a collection plate nearby for donations.

A hint of coming events in conjunction with St. Andrew's 125th Anniversary are plans for a Garden Party at Annie and Marjorie Goodfellow's out on Scotch Road. More on that later.

Now here's a new approach. Did you know there's a Horse Driving and Touring Club in the E.T.? And what do you think of going off on a weekend of activities for horse-drawn vehicles? If your curiosity is aroused, then load up the horses, tie the wagon onto the truck or trailer, and truck on down to Ayer's Cliff June 10 and 11 for obstacle course competitions Saturday and a ride through the country on Sunday. Horses will be stabled at the fairgrounds, a security person will be on duty Saturday night and cost for the weekend is a trifling $30. We'll have lots more news next week.

A conference on designing and finishing wood, given by Niels Jensen is planned at Musée des Beaux Arts de Sherbrooke Monday June 5 at 7:30. The museum is located at 174 Palais and admission is free.

L'Ecole de Danse Janann Enr. with Pat Hurley and Dave Donnachie have dreamed up an evening of delight and entertainment and set the date for June 10. The event takes place at Haskell's Opera House in Rock Island and proceeds from the concert go to La Fondation Constance Langlois Inc. Tickets are $7 and are on sale at Provigo in Magog, Lennoxville and Rock Island.

THEATRE

Next week, Théâtre du Double Signe brings Jeux de Massacre to the stage. This is a workshop play, describing through black humor, the reactions of a population which finds its numbers decimated by a mysterious illness. Highly emotional, the play is expressed through rythm and movement with a choral accompaniment. Curtain rises at Parc Jacques Cartier at 8:40 through the weekend. Admission is $5.

The students at L'Option Theatre du Centre Culturel Pierre Lapointe will present their closing piece June 3 in the Petite Salle at University of Sherbrooke. The varied program will give local lovers of live comedy the chance to see promising comedians on stage for the first time. Show starts at 7:30 on June 3. Tickets on sale at the box office now.

Exhibitions

The Richmond County Historical Society will host an exhibition by well-known photographer Bob Paulette at their museum in Melbourne Sunday, June 4 from 2 to 5.

Arts Sutton Gallery will open an exhibition of children's drawings with the theme Creating Space from the University of Montreal on June 3. Gallery hours are 11 to 5, Thursday through Sunday.

At the Centre d'Exposition Léon Marcotte the public is urged to visit their latest exhibition entitled the Living Factories, a joint venture by the Semaine des Sciences de Québec and the National Museum of Science and Technology. Here one finds explanations about DNA, the secret of life. You can follow the growth of a single cell as it develops and prepares to do the specific job it was designed for. Charts and displays describe cell growth, define the difference between good and bad cells and give many examples of how bio-technology has identified the multiple uses and indispensability of micro-organisms. The exhibition touches on five important areas where biotechnology has made giant inroads; food, forests, medicine, agriculture and environmental protection. Guided tours are available for groups of students or adults and there's even a corner where visitors may conduct their own experiments. The exhibition will be in Sherbrooke until July 2.

The work of Jacques Bourbeau is on display at Jeannine Blais Art Gallery in North Hatley until June 5.

There's a Kimonos show at Beaulne Museum until Oct. Well worth a trip over to Coaticook to see the art work and stitchery that goes into these richly decorated traditional garments.

New exhibitions at the Horace Gallery on King West in Sherbrooke will feature the work of André Lavoie and Mario Pouliot. Lavoie is a sculptor whose work is a geometric representation based on his perception of interiors and exteriors. He works with steel and his main piece on exhibit is a massive obelisk, balancing on its elongated point with an illuminated interior surface.

Pouliot's work reflects a strong Japanese influence in the art of IKEBANA. His exhibition titled Shin-Gyo-So meaning work that contains the three elements inherent in this type of art. Gallery hours are Wednesday and Thursday - 12 to 5, Friday - 12 to 9, SAturday and Sunday - 12 to 5. The opening is tonight at 8.

At the Homestead Marilyn Faith comes home with an exhibition of her paintings. A native of Sutton, she moved to Ontario at an early age, returning only to finish high school and begin nursing studies at the Sherbrooke Hospital. Formal training in art began only in 1974 in Montreal with her first years spent almost exclusively doing oil painting. Faith has since turned to watercolors and it seems as though this is where she's best if past show records and public interest are any indication. Faith and her watercolors are out at the Homestead from June 3 to 16. The welcome mat is out for one and all.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Carr invite the public to an Open House at 40 Main Street, Sutton, Quebec this weekend. An exhibition of paintings by Cecil F. Carr and a sale of Folk Art are the special weekend highlights. The Carrs are prepared not only to show you around but they'll brew up a bit o'tea for all their visitors. That's June 3 and 4 - from 10 to 5.

In Granby at the Haut 3e Imperial, the Spring program gets underway with an exhibition titled Jardin de l'Imaginaire, a combination of works by Johan Berubé, Louise Dubé and Denise Legaré-Landry. Non-figurative styles let these three artists give free rein to their imagination, resulting in a display of work that explores the universe through the senses. Opening is June 7 from 4 to 8, gallery hours are Wednesday to Saturday - 1 to 5, Thursday and Friday - 7 to 9.

Rachel Perrea is the new artist with work on exhibition at Galerie d'Art de la Caisse Populaire de l'Est. Specialising in watercolor for the past five years, Perrea finds this the best medium for her work with still-life, especially landscapes. The show opened May 29 and continues until June 30. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday and Friday from 10 to 3, Wednesday from 10 to 5:45 and Thursday from 10 'til 10.

Jacinthe Couture of Acedemie de Musique de Montreal was in town last week finalizing plans for the Prix d'Europe competition beginning this weekend.

Movies

At the Carrefour de l'Estrie next week — Indiana Jones and the The Last Crusade. This is a film with all the wild action, familiar actors and special effects in place. Sean Connery is terrific and a marked decline in macabre scare tactics make this a flick for the whole family. Saturday and Sunday at 1, 4, 6:50 and 9:35 — weekdays at 6:50 and 9:35.

In Cowansville at Cinéma Princesse beginning Friday at 7:15 it's Renegades starring Kiefer Sutherland and Lou Diamond Phillips. It's blood and thunder on the city streets when the boys come back with their guns. At 9:15, Patrick Swaze playing a nightclub bouncer stars in one of the more ridiculous action adventure slugfests of the modern age — Roadhouse. Tuesday are special half-price days with admission at $2.75.

At Merrill's Showplace in Newport, next week K-9 with John Belushi stays on. Curtain rises Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 7 and 9:10, weekend matinées at 1:45 and Monday through Thursday at 7 and 9:05.

Second feature is once again Pet Sematary, from the book by Stephen King. It's a terrifying story about a family in rural Maine who encounter creatures from beyond the grave. Weekend showtimes are 7:10 and 9:15, Saturday and Sunday matinées at 1:55, Monday through Thursday — 7:10 and 9:10.

And Hulk Hogan comes to Merrill's in No Holds Barred a battle that has no ring, no referee and no rules. Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 7:20 and 9:20, Saturday and Sunday matinées at 2:05, Monday through Thursday — 7:20 and 9:15

Wheelchair hitchiker demands access with 'Keroul'

By Felicity Munn
The Canadian Press

Ten years ago, a young Montrealer named Andre Leclerc travelled to Chicoutimi to visit his girlfriend.

Chicoutimi is 500 kilometres northeast of Montreal, and Leclerc, then 22, didn't have much money, so he hitchhiked.

He got a ride as far as Quebec City, where he asked to be let off at the side of the highway. He was about to stick out his thumb again when a police cruiser came by, so Leclerc flagged it down to ask if it was OK to hitchhike there.

"They said to me, 'You must have escaped from your parents or an institution,'" Leclerc recalls, his expressive eyes warm with anger all these years later.

"And then they took me to the police station and checked my ID.

"I thought, my God, what IS this?"

Thus was born Keroul, a nonprofit organization that lobbies for accessible tourism facilities — transportation and hotels — for the handicapped.

WHEELCHAIR TRAVELLER

Leclerc, now 32 and about to become a father, has cerebral palsy and has been confined to a wheelchair most of his life.

Actually, confined isn't the right word in this case; the people who work with him at Keroul are only half-kidding when they say he is a menace on his motorized machine.

His body movements are jerky, and sometimes it is difficult to understand him because he speaks in a slow-motion drawl.

But he is a dynamic, energetic presence, and he gets his point across in no uncertain terms.

Keroul, he says, isn't just about making tourist facilities accessible to the handicapped. It's about integrating the disabled by dispelling the ignorance that so-called normal people have about them.

"The more access there is," Leclerc says, "the more the handicapped will get out and about and the less prejudice there will be. People react to us as if we're contagious.

"I go to a restaurant to have a meal with friends, right? And the waitress comes over." Pause. "And then she asks my friends what I want to eat."

QUEBEC FOCUS

Keroul (pronounced Kay-rule) has so far focused on improving the situation in Quebec. Its name stands for "Quebec roule" — Quebec rolls.

Now, to get the message beyond Quebec, Keroul has published a bilingual travel guide for the disabled.

Acces tourisme, or Tourism Access, provides advice for disabled travellers — for example, they should find travel agents that are attentive to special needs, and make sure that damage to a wheelchair during a trip is covered by insurance.

The guide also lists addresses and phone numbers of services and associations that can provide further help.

It would be most helpful for people planning to visit Quebec because it concentrates on the facilities in the province, providing comprehensive charts on accommodation and transportation.

But it also has short sections on national and international travel.

Leclerc's frustration over the Quebec City incident spurred him to found Keroul and he works full-time as its executive director.

PRESSING NEED

He says the need for better services is pressing because the population is aging and there are more and more people who have difficulty getting around.

Much has been accomplished, he adds, but much remains to be done.

In Quebec, for instance, a Keroul survey found that only eight per cent of tourist accommodations were accessible to the disabled, as were 20 per cent of recreational sites such as parks and summer camps.

For a copy of Acces tourisme, which sells for $10, write to: Keroul, 4545 Pierre-de-Coubertin Ave., Box 1000, Station M, Montreal, Que. H1V 3R2. The telephone number is (514) 252-3104.

Those interested in supporting Keroul — the annual fee is $8 — should inquire at the same address.

A similar organization is Freedom in Travelling — FIT — based in Islington, Ont.

Run by former travel agent Deborah Cousins, FIT can provide information on facilities at various destinations. Disabled travellers may also write Cousins if they have complaints, and she'll follow up.

Write to Freedom in Travelling, 65 Tromley Dr., Islington, Ont. M9B 5Y7, or telephone (416) 234-8511.

The Merritt Parkway has 40 distinctive underpasses

By Calvin Woodward

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (CP) — Serenity, shade and fanciful architecture are not often associated with highways, especially ones that lead to the traffic free-for-all into and around New York City.

But one Connecticut roadway has all those qualities, including an overpass with a noble set of wings.

The Merritt Parkway, a Depression-era road that sweeps under a lush canopy of mountain laurel, birch, cedar, oak and maple, is a tonic for the tired, huddled masses of motorists numbed from too many hours on Interstate 95.

And it's a detour that adds only minutes to a drive from Eastern Canada to New York City or points south along the Eastern Seaboard.

The 60-kilometre jaunt from the New Haven area to the chaotic gateway of New York City features more than 40 distinctive overpasses made in a variety of styles, from a metal Art Deco bridge painted bright blue to a classical winged arch that gives flight to the traveller's spirits.

Another bridge displays a sunburst medallion. On many bridges, ornamental panels feature old techniques like sgraffito, the chipping away of one layer of concrete in a pattern to reveal concrete of a different color underneath.

STILL GRAND

The Merritt overpasses, examples of the beautiful works fashioned out of the despair of the Depression, were designed by Connecticut architect George Dunkelberger.

"He was a genius," says George Larned, a state highways historian. "He could draw a picture using both hands at the same time, moving from the sides to the centre."

The eye-catching bridges and the soothing roadway — two lanes each way separated by a leafy esplanade — hark back to an era when New Yorkers escaped gracefully to weekend country retreats.

The parkway runs close and roughly parallel to I-95 but skirts the coastal urban congestion, bans trucks and trailers and, except during morning and evening rush hours, is almost as fast as the interstate.

Little known to out-of-state motorists and not strongly promoted by tourism officials, the Merritt is used largely by commuters from the suburbs — an astonishing number of whom drive Jaguars or Porsches.

QUICK TRANSITION

Even today, the parkway provides surprising evidence of how close you can get to a city of nearly eight million people, and a metropolitan area of more than 12 million, before the trees abruptly give way to concrete.

Named after Schuyler Merritt, a businessman, lawyer and politician, the parkway was conceived in the 1920s, Larned said, and the plan soon flowered beyond practical considerations.

The proposed route ran along expensive property, a state engineer noted at the time, and through country of natural beauty that "should not be marred by the more unfortunate works of man."

All the latest engineering was put to use. The median strip was a treat for drivers who were used to passing oncoming traffic at arm's length.

Each lane was almost four metres wide — ample room, it was said, "for drivers who find it difficult to stay in their own lane."

RUDE AWAKENING

Today the most glaring engineering defect is the lack of acceleration lanes. Cars turn almost directly on to the parkway from most entrance roads, making for some dicey moments at first for drivers coddled by superhighways.

To get from southbound I-95 to the Merritt, take Exit 38 at Milford, just past New Haven.

Drivers coming down Highway 91 from Hartford can experience an extra 40 kilometres of bucolic travel by taking the exit at Meriden and getting on the Wilbur Cross Parkway, which eventually becomes the Merritt. Both parkways are labelled Route 15.

Finally, just when it starts to seem like getting there was half the fun, the parkway system deposits you on Route 287 north of New York City.

You're back in the real world again, driving on one of the more unfortunate works of man.

Captain X helps stop fear of flying

By Alex Binkley
The Canadian Press

White-knuckle fliers take heart. There's a book that might help overcome your fear of flying.

Its title, Unfriendly Skies, may sound unnerving. The dust jacket says the book blows the whistle on an industry headed for disaster.

But inside is a highly readable, mainly straightforward explanation of how airlines work, what's involved in flying a plane full of people and what can go wrong.

And how to be a safety-smart passenger.

The book was written by a pilot at a major U.S. airline who's identified on the cover only as Capt. X, and by New York author Reynolds Dawson.

Capt. X says he didn't want to use his real name because he was uncertain about the reaction of his employer and fellow pilots.

"The industry doesn't want to talk about what goes on up there," Capt. X said in an interview.

NO SCARE TONE

"People seem to think I wrote the book to scare the public. But I wrote it because there's so much misinformation out there, and there's so much attention in the news media to the problems in the industry."

There are problems, says Capt. X, "but we are flying more people, more safely and cheaper than ever."

Deregulation of the U.S. airline industry came in the late 1970s, almost a decade ahead of Canada, and its effect there has been more dramatic than here. But it has spawned new airlines in both countries, increased air traffic and plenty of alarming incidents.

Capt. X says it has also changed the airlines' attitude.

"In the days of regulation we checked everything and rechecked it. Now we'll check once."

SEAT SALE?

The book isn't all serious. There are plenty of amusing anecdotes, notably the tale of the Chicago toilet-seat caper — an incident that will be left for readers of the book to discover.

But mainly the author wants the reader to see life from the cockpit of big jets. "There is nothing very boring about a takeoff or landing and there is certainly nothing boring about that ever-changing sky we fly through.

"A pilot isn't paid for all those hours when nothing is happening up there; he's paid for those seconds when suddenly there's a crisis confronting him."

Many of the newest planes have two members in the flight crew, not three. "We've streamlined our cockpit and got rid of a payroll entry, but we have two fewer eyes and one less head to help solve problems for us."

In the early 1960s, more than 70 per cent of airplane accidents were caused by mechanical failure, Capt. X writes; now they're 70-percent due to human error.

SYSTEM WORKS

"But the message I bring is that the job is quite sophisticated. Many, many hours are spent in the building of an airplane pilot. It's a credit to the system that it can take normal, frail humans and train them to the point that they can keep cool while the Reaper's grinning at them."

English playwright has sympathy for actors

By Michael Kuchwara

NEW YORK (AP) — Each day Willy Russell would drive past the Everyman Theatre in Liverpool, England, and see a huge banner proclaiming, "March 19, Willy Russell's new play opens."

Out of such positive statements — and rapidly approaching deadlines — new plays are born.

"I'd wake up in the middle of the night and think about having to give back the money to the poor people who already had purchased tickets," Russell recalls now. "It was then that this woman, Shirley Valentine, sort of came on to the page."

Since then, the one-woman play has become something of a cultural phenomenon. Shirley Valentine was a success more than two years ago in Liverpool, the city that spawned the Beatles. It was an even bigger hit in London's West End where it won the prestigious Laurence Olivier Award as best comedy of the year.

HIT IN NEW YORK

Shirley Valentine has played in West Germany, Australia, Israel, Scandinavia and has thrived in New York, where it was nominated for a Tony Award as best play of Broadway's 1988-89 season.

In New York, as in London, the play stars Pauline Collins as a bored, lonely, middle-aged English housewife who leaves her husband and grown children for an amorous adventure in Greece.

Collin was the saucy maid Sarah in the British TV series Upstairs, Downstairs.

At first, Russell was skeptical about writing a monologue.

"I probably have the same prejudice against the idea of spending two hours with the same character as anybody else," he says. "I knew I couldn't write just a one-woman show but rather a play that happens to have only one character present on stage. But you can't convince an audience of that in advance. They'll know that when they come out."

In productions around the world, the audience response has followed the same pattern — at first skepticism and no great advance sale, then terrific word-of-mouth from audiences and box-office success.

EDUCATING RITA

Shirley Valentine is the 42-year-old Russell's first Broadway play. North American audiences know an earlier work, Educating Rita, more from its film version, which starred Julie Walters and Michael Caine, than from its various theatre productions.

Russell followed a roundabout path to writing plays. Born in a suburb of Liverpool to working-class parents, he dropped out of school at 15. His father wanted him to become a printer, but Russell wanted to write — songs, poetry, even a novel.

"My family was intensely theatrical, I now realize," he says. "They told stories. They sang. They lived their lives through a sort of oral theatricality. I think that's why I now write for the stage and not the page."

His mother suggested he become a ladies' hairdresser, and he did.

For six years, he set hair during the day and at night hung around beat clubs like the Cavern and played the guitar.

HAD HIS MUSIC

"I was a terrible hairdresser but I couldn't do anything about it." However, Russell had his music, which by then was folk, and his performing.

"You could write a song and sing it in a club that night. You could get a reaction to it. I learned the dynamic of performance itself. That's why I have a great deal of sympathy for actors — because I performed. And because of that experience, I finally got out of hairdressing."

Russell realized that if he became a teacher he could have time off in the summer to write. In 1971, he went back to school and when a drama department production of Peer Gynt fell through, he offered to write a play.

"The second I began writing this play for the stage, I knew that all the years of trying to write poetry, trying to write the novel, I was struggling toward this particular moment."

TWO MUSICALS

Since those days, Russell has made a name for himself, not only as the author of Educating Rita, about a young female hairdresser who wants more out of life, but as the author of two successful British musicals, John, Paul, George, Ringo ... and Bert, and Blood Brothers.

Audiences have accepted a variety of performers in the title role of Shirley Valentine. Even the author.

At the Everyman Theatre in Liverpool, Noreen Kershaw played the title role, and she didn't have an understudy. When the actress fell ill, Russell himself took over the role. He presented the play as a reading for the last three weeks of its run.

"I just walked on and said to the audience, 'Believe that I'm a woman,'" he says. "They did. Beside, it's a very Shakespearean thing to do."

Prestigious Tony Awards honor stars of the stage

Angela Lansbury returns for third year as host

By Linda Sparkman

Whenever a Tony Award is presented, tribute is paid not only to the recipient of the award, but also to a significant figure of the American theater. Unlike the Oscars, the Emmys or the Grammys, which honor achievement in the motion picture, television and music industries, the Tony Awards have a namesake.

Who was Tony? The award was named for Antoinette Perry, an actress, Broadway star and director until her death in 1946.

The 43rd Annual Tony Awards, the presentation of the American Theatre Wing's 1989 Antoinette Perry (Tony) Awards, will be broadcast live Sunday, June 4, on CBS.

Antoinette Perry was a lovely, blonde actress who came to New York from Denver, and by the age of 18 was already a star. Two years later, in 1908, she retired to marry and raise a family.

After her husband's death in 1922, she returned to the stage and acted in several plays, including Minick by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber. Working in association with Brock Pemberton, she directed several memorable comedies, including Preston Sturges' Strictly Dishonorable and Mary Chase's Pulitzer Prize-winning Harvey.

During World War II, Perry was executive director of the American Theatre Wing, which greatly assisted members of the armed forces and their families. She was one of the movers behind the famous Stage Door Canteen, the Broadway haven for enlisted men. After the war, she helped start a drama school for returning veterans.

When she died, the Wing determined that she not be forgotten. They wanted a living tribute; not a plaque on a building. They wanted something that would keep her name alive for years to come. Created to fill that need was the Tony Award—a symbol of excellence.

THE TONY AWARDS, honoring achievements on the stage, will be presented for the 43rd time Sunday, June 4, on CBS.

The most prestigious award given in the Broadway theater, the Tony is a silver disk engraved with the masks of tragedy and comedy and attached at its axis to a silver moon.

The first Tony Award ceremonies were held on April 6, 1947 in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria. In 1967 the event was moved from a hotel to a Broadway theater and televised nationally for the first time.

This year the Tony Awards will be presented from the Gershwin Theater. Four-time Tony winner Angela Lansbury will host for her third consecutive year.

"We are delighted that Angela agreed to return," said Don Mischer, executive producer of the telecast. "For two years she has hosted the Tonys with grace, style and integrity, and her popularity transcends the worlds of theater and television."

Antoinette Perry would have been flattered by the esteem that surrounds the ceremonies and the award named in her honor. But she also would have been surprised, because Perry did not seek glorification. She only wanted to serve the theater.

Forty-three years after her death, she still does.

LOUIS "SATCHMO" ARMSTRONG

Q: Could you help me with a movie I saw years ago? It was about a horse, I think, and Satchmo Armstrong played "Jeepers Creepers" on the trumpet. Could you give me the correct title, who played in it and if it is available on tape? —Don Henry, Kingsport, Tenn.

A: Does the storyline "A sporting goods salesman poses as a jockey and has to ride a horse to victory" ring a bell? The film, Going Places was released in 1939 and starred Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Ronald Reagan, Louis Armstrong and Allen Jenkins. It is not available on tape.

Q: I've been reading your column lately and I enjoy reading it but, I never thought I would be writing to you—so here's my question. How can I get in touch with Roy Clark? I've tried my hand at songwriting and would like to write to Mr. Clark personally. —Sam Rhodes, Clayton, N.C.

A: I'm happy you wrote, Sam. Here's your answer. Write to Roy Clark c/o Jim Halsey Co. Inc., 3225 S. Norwood Ave., Tulsa, Okla. 74135.

Q: I hope you can help me. I'd really like to send a message to Jessica Lange. Do you suppose you could print an address I could use? —Stacy Johnson, Green Mnt., N.C.

A: I hope this helps. Write to: Jessica Lange c/o Jeff Berg, ICM Artists Ltd., 8899 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90048.

Q: My husband and I disagree on who played Gary Ewing on the early* Dallas series. He says it was Ted Shackleford, who plays Gary on Knots Landing. I say no! Can you settle this for us? —L. Gillum, Wilson, Okla.

A: The man of the house is right on this one. Ted Shackleford has played Gary Ewing from the very beginning. Sorry, Mrs. G.

Q: I have two questions. What breed of dog was Toto in* The Wizard of Oz? Is Kenny Price of* Hee Haw dead? —E. Wyatt, Atlanta, Texas

A: Toto was a female Cairn terrier. Kenny Price, the 300-pound singer known as "The Round Mound of Sound" died on Aug. 5, 1987. He was 56.

Q: Do you have an address I can write to Angela Lansbury concerning* Murder, She Wrote? —J.C. Stoddard, Creston, Calif.

A: Write to Angela Lansbury c/o Edgar Lansbury, Suite 501, 1650 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10019

TINY TRIVIA

The film Ode to Billy Joe was directed by Max Baer Jr., best known as Jethro Bodine of The Beverly Hillbillies.

CARROLL O'CONNOR and Howard Rollins team up as a small-town police chief and a big city detective who have very different styles on In the Heat of the Night, Tuesdays on NBC.

'In the Heat of the Night' works well for television

Carroll O'Connor handles drama as well as comedy

By Mary Ann Townsend

More than 20 years ago, Rod Steiger and Sidney Poitier teamed together to star in the acclaimed motion picture In the Heat of the Night, a film that was to become a five-time Oscar winner.

Now, Carroll O'Connor and Howard Rollins recreate the scenario on a weekly basis in an NBC series of the same name which airs Tuesdays.

In the 1967 motion picture, Steiger and Poitier joined forces, respectively, as a small-town chief of police and a big city detective to track down a killer whose identity was unmasked in a climactic scene. The significant element of the movie was not so much their different backgrounds as the fact that black and white found themselves for once working on the same side.

The TV version picks up with O'Connor starring as Sparta, Miss. Police Chief Bill Gillespie, the role created by Steiger, and Rollins as Philadelphia-based detective Virgil Tibbs, Poitier's role.

For Rollins, the role provides not so much a platform to make a statement about racism as it does the opportunity to work with an idol.

"I wasn't drawn to the part because of the race aspect," Rollins said. "It was the chance to work with Carroll O'Connor. I felt that Carroll and I might have a nice chemistry together."

That has proven to be the case, as In the Heat of the Night enters into its second season this year.

In his role as the small town police chief, O'Connor reminds his legion of fans that he can handle drama as well as comedy with equal ease.

As Archie Bunker in All in the Family (1971-79) and in Archie Bunker's Place (1979-83), O'Connor played one of the most memorable, and most bigoted, characters in television history. His Gillespie character, although also bigoted, must question his own prejudices in order to work with the black detective.

The road to NBA finals has been a long one

By Jeff Thompson

It's finally here, the week that pro basketball fans have been waiting for—the beginning of the NBA finals. Game 1 of the finals is tentatively set for Tuesday, June 6, with subsequent games slated for June 8, 11 and 13 on CBS.

The road to the finals has been a long one, what with the defending world champion L.A. Lakers, the Phoenix Suns, the Detroit Pistons and the New York Knicks going into the playoffs with unbeaten post-season records.

Having taken all four playoff games after winning their final five regular season games, L.A. was hot. Their motivation has been strong for another reason. "It's Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar's) career-ending playoffs, and there's got to be some sentiment involved for us," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "This could be a week for us, or it could be two months. Whatever happens, I hope we go out in a blaze of glory."

Certain teams have had their share of problems, as well. The Milwaukee Bucks had to work hard to counterbalance leading scorer Terry Cummings' injury. He was sidelined with a strained tendon in his right ankle.

Injury didn't escape the Pistons, either, as Isiah Thomas had to play with a partially dislocated shoulder. The injury wreaked havoc with Thomas' shooting motion, but according to teammate Bill Laimbeer, it's Thomas' leadership that matters most anyway. "It's not important for Isiah to score (lots of points)," said Laimbeer. "But his presence on the court dictates that the other guys play hard."

On the lighter side, New York Coach Rick Pitino said his team had a problem of a different kind when playing Chicago in the Eastern Conference semi-final matchup. "Chicago Stadium is a unique situation, Pitino said. "It's one of the loudest arenas in all of basketball. It's very difficult and noisy and you've got to be ready for that from the beginning."
