QUEBEC, FRIDAY, NOV. 5, 1886.

MR. JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M. P.

To-night everyone is going to hear Mr.
JUSTIN MCCARTHY tell the story of Ireland's great struggle for Home Rule. The lecturer knows his story well, for he is one of the strong lights of the great movement, the able lieutenant of Mr. Parnell, and his heart and mind overflow with the importance of his subject. The theme itself is full of interest to the student of history and of political thought and motive. Our people are indeed fortunate in having the exceptional privilege of hearing Mr. Mc-Carthy tell of the rise and progress of an agitation, which has made itself felt in every quarter of the habitable globe. His story is described as graceful and pleasing. Of his force as a writer and thinker there can be no doubt, for his work in several departments of literature, is well known to all reading and studious men.
He visits our city, we believe, for the first time in his life, but he is no stranger to America, or its institutions, for some sixteen or seventeen years ago, he went to the United States, lived there for a while, and completed a course of lectures in a number of the principal towns and cities. During the last fortnight Mr. McCarthy has been lecturing in the Maritime Provinces, and though he comes to us avowedly without a mission, his interesting deliverances on politics, literature and social life and character, have been everywhere received with delight and enjoyment by people of all classes. Mr. McCarthy's style is simple, yet earnest. He is a man of the world, ripe in scholarship and thoroughly familiar with the political and social activity of his time. Trained to the duties of a journalist, he brings to bear on his higher work all the better features of that arduous profession. He began life as a reporter, and steadily climbed the ladder until he became editor-in-chief of one of the strongest daily newspapers in the great metropolis.
This post he resigned in 1868, a change in the management of the paper, and he came to take the place of John Jay Foote, who was conducting the paper, and about the same year he undertook a visit to America, which lasted three years, during which time he travelled over thirty-five of the American States.
While on this side of the ocean he formed the acquaintance of Richard Grant White, one of the most noted SHAKESPEAREAN scholars of his day, who was then conducting the Century, a New York magazine of high standing, which afterwards became amalgamated with the American Monthly of Boston. Mr. WHITE secured Mr. Mc-Carthy's services as a contributor to his serial, and some of his brightest literary work appeared in its attractive pages.
On the return of our author to London he at once attached himself to the Daily News, the leading organ of the Liberal party, and accepted the engagement of Parliamentary leader to that important journal.
This position he still holds, we understand.
Eight years ago, Mr. McCarthy became a tribune of the people and entered on the career of public life, to which he was entirely fitted by education and taste, and in which he is destined to occupy even a far higher place than he does to-day, high and important as that place undoubtedly is.
He was elected for Longford, and speedily began to take a prominence in the councils of his party which amply fulfilled the great expectations of his friends. Mr. PARNELL was soon drawn towards him and his brilliant pen and eloquent speech, ever ready for the cause of Ireland, were liberally brought to bear in behalf of the movement, which occupied so strong a place in his heart. The two men, differing from each other in many respects, were on an unit on the great question of Home Rule, and it was not long before the people discovered that Mr.
PARNELL's ablest officer was JUSTIN Mc-CARTHY, historian, novelist and editorial writer. But though Mr. McCarthy had been an earnest student of the Irish question, since 1848, it was not until 1877 that he resolved to take an active and moving interest, as a leader in the agitation. With dash and courage he threw his whole soul into the cause, and in the brief space of half a dozen years, he has gained a reputation as a parliamentarian which few men have been able to make in two decades of time.
But McCarthy is no ordinary man. Like the elder LYTON, he has failed at nothing which he has attempted, but has been successful in all things. To-night he will speak to our people on a burning question of great public moment and the audience which his fame will attract, may expect to hear a very clear and seductive story, told in graceful language, forcible in measure, but not at all ungenerous in its scope and purpose. It need be said of Mr. Mc-Carthy that he was not a ferocious critic.
On the contrary, he is a reasoner and an historian of liberal and broad views.
Accustomed to weigh facts and motives, his story of the Irish struggle is not at all sensational, but independent, and truthful, and rich in a coloring, which fascinates and carries conviction. We hope to see a crowded house, and our wish, we believe, has every chance of being gratified.

But we are not done with our distinguished guest yet. He is a many-sided man, and those who care little for politics and public questions, have long ago learned to esteem and appreciate McCarthy the novelist. Fiction was his first love, and while politics did not spoil a good novel-writer, it cut sadly into his leisure, and of late years the Lady Juniors, the Donna Quixottes and the Lady Desires of earlier days who charmed all readers of sound, healthy romance, have remained without new companions to lighten the idle hour. And capital stories they are.
Every one of them is worth reading at least twice, and in these days that is saying a good deal, more than could be said twenty-five years ago, when we had DICKENS and THACKERAY and BULWER and ANTHONY TROLLOPE, though perhaps, we ought to leave the author of "The American Senator" out of the set, he being more of a contemporary of McCarthy's than the others.
McCarthy's tales are marvels of clever story-telling. They are full of character, and human love. Their individuality is marked, and the incident with which they abound is skilfully drawn and developed.
Of all his work in this direction, perhaps,
"Dear Lady Disdain" is the strongest and most characteristic. Certainly it made its way into public favour easily, and kept its place longer than the others, though "My Enemy's Daughter" and "A Fair Sinner" were very near it, in point of value. Long ago, it must be all of twenty years, "Paul Messer" interested us, and it was then that McCarthy first introduced us to a novelist. We have not seen his book since we read it first, and our recollection of it, is a trifle hazy, but we know that it gave us many hours of real pleasure.

But, Mr. McCarthy is more than a novelist, in a literary way. He is an historical writer of marked ability and power.
In 1878-9 he gave us samples of what he could do in the higher plane of letters.
He told the story of our Own Times in four brilliant, and striking volumes, every one of which proved as entertaining as one of his own charming romances. The History, at a bound, became immensely popular, and like MACAULAY's luminous and picturesque history it rapidly replaced the last fashionable novel in the household.
It dealt with the affairs of yesterday and to-day, described the men and women of our own time, and discussed events which were within the memory of everybody who took the volumes in his hand. The idea was new and bold. It was faithfully carried out, and Mr. McCarthy again realized that he was a famous man, and that the writing of history was to him at least, as delightful an occupation as constructing a plot for a story or developing the character of one of his own creations.

The historians of our own times, the public man and the novelist speaks to us to-night from the platform of the Academy of Music. He will be warmly welcomed to Quebec by his many admirers. Just here, we may prize the graceful sonnet from the pen of MARY ELIZABETH BLAKE, one of Boston's most musical singers:—

JUSTIN MCCARTHY.
(Boston Pilot)

To meet such Fortune grants a single boon, And lo! upon his kindly look as dawn Shines, from his face, the price of life is won, And from his bright garland cometh life's own son.
But here is one whose hapier lot hath known A fourfold gift to make his fellow Irish In danger and distressing long his pith:
For he to Fate's fair realm hath flown,
And won his knightly rank; hath plucked The truth
From history's making, and laid bare her face;
The patriot's spirit in his age as youth; Chorus for his worth and bid the emblem stand:
The four-leaved Shamrock of his native land!

—ROLLER SKATING.—There was a very large attendance at the rink last night to witness the exhibition of fancy bicycle riding by Prof.
Hutchinson. His exhibition was much better than the night before, and it seemed as if he would perfect them. There seemed to be no end to his graceful movement and tricks and he promised to introduce new and interesting tricks at the next night's session. He is a really fine artist, and it will be well to visit the rink before he leaves Quebec.
All the tricks which he performed, when riding on his bicycle, were of the most extraordinary kind, and he was much admired by the hundreds of skaters who merely enjoyed themselves.

—HIGHWAY ROBBERY ATTEMPTED.—Report says that some days ago, as a countryman was driving home to St. Roch's, he was suddenly jumped out from the side of the road, seized the horse by the head, and pointing a revolver at the driver, demanded his money.
The farmer, alarmed for his life, handed him his purse, which happened to be empty.

—THE HIGHWAYMAN examined the purse, but finding nothing in it, he threw it back to the farmer, with the remark, "You're not the man I'm looking for." He then stepped back towards the side of the road, and has not been seen since.

—ORGAN REPTIL.—There was a very large attendance last night at the first of this season's series of organ recitals given by E. A.
Bishop, Esq., in the Royal Grand Theatre.
The programme performed was as follows:—
Concerto in F (last movement).....Handel Andante with variations (Septuor).....Keech Toccata and Fugue in D minor.....Bach
"Adieu".....Schubert
Prelude in B flat.....G. W. West
"Fare thee Parton".....Robert Macfarlane Prelude March.....Smart Offertoire in A flat.....Bistate Priore et Marche Religieuse.....Meyerbeer All the items were played with that brilliancy of execution and faultless style which characterize Mr. Bishop's performances, and those present enjoyed a very rich treat.
The recital was a complete success in every respect. A collection was taken up to defray the expenses.

—SHOCKING CASE OF AGGRAVATED DEATH ON SUNDAY.—John Savage, aged 47, laborer, residing in Little Champlain street, was killed at an early hour yesterday morning on board the s.s. "Vancouver." Deceased was assisting in the loading of the ship when a box of bacon weighing some 200 lbs., fell upon him in the hold, through some of the tackle giving way. Deceased was struck on the head and his companion, Mr. John Kaine, of Champlain street, was also injured by the box striking him on the side and knocking him down. Kaine was able to make his own way home, and seek medical attention, but poor Savage had to be carried on a stretcher. When his home was reached it was found that he had been killed, and that his life was extinct. The deceased leaves a large family and was a member of No. 1 Section of the Quebec Society. An inquest was held yesterday afternoon by the Coroner, Dr. A. G. Belland, at which the following jury was sworn:—Messrs. Henry Black, James Weir, James Carrel, Patrick Fitzgerald, James Hume, Thomas Farrell, Francis Beauchamp, James Hayden, John Maloney, Michael Tierney, William Doran, Thomas Fitzgerald, Louis Fink, The M. J. Ahern was appointed to make the post-mortem examination. After hearing all the evidence, the jury returned the following verdict:—That John Savage died from internal injuries caused by the fall of a box of bacon on deceased, the said box having been carelessly thrown from the side of the ship, and the jurors are of opinion that the deceased should be held in the place of grips for the harmful effects of this act.

—SALVATION ARMY.—The meeting at the Jury Hall School-room last night was very large, and attracted upwards of three hundred persons being in attendance. The singing of the hymns was kept up by a large force of police, under Colonel Voll. The meeting was very materially helped by the additional help of an electric lamp erected in front of the building, and no disturbance of any kind occurred either inside the building or out. The service was conducted by Captain Simpson and all the members of the Army took part in the proceedings, which were wholly in the French language. During the service the audience sang of the hymns, and attempted to create a disturbance, but they were immediately checked when told that deceased were in the building taking their names. The singing lasted about nine o'clock the audience filed out and dispersed immediately. Taken altogether the meeting was a success, and the following citizens are serving of great credit for the quiet and patient behavior given the Army last evening.
The complaints lodged before the Police Board by parties who claim the police came into contact on Tuesday as reported in yesterday's CHRONICLE were considered by the Board, but no definite results reached.
It appears that Mr. T. J. Molony, advocate, and late City Councillor, was violently assaulted with a hatchet by Constable Ryan (No. 40), although working quietly on the street, and had been near the scene of the alleged riot. Mr. J. J. Martin, advocate, was twice at the scene with Constable Ryan, and was violently assaulted by him. Mr. J. J.
L. Pelletier, H. Chase and J. P. Roy, the advocates, and the audience were there entirely without provocation, and the defence of Col. Voll was that he had been driven from the scene by the crowd. The Mayor said the duty of the police was to arrest these men who were throwing stones, or any of them as they could, without regard to the social position of the offenders. Mr.
Voll said the crowd had been not fired to disperse as soon as the meeting was over.

—A Bonnet for the Theatre.
(From a New York Letter)

Such a nuisance has the fashionable high bonnet become in the theatre—it is impossible for any one sitting in the rear to see over them and not always possible to keep out of their range—that, at the suggestion of manager Augustus Daly, several of the society leaders, like Mrs. John Bigelow, will introduce a theatrical bonnet—a flat head-covering that will permit an unobscured view of the stage by those behind. I am sure that this joke, but it is not. If the fashionable high hat which, according to all accounts, is to be worn in the theatre, the managers will have to pyramidically raise their seats or confine the ladies to the back row.

—Borsford's Acid Phosphate
In General Debility.
Dr. W. Hill, Glens, Falls, N. Y., says: "I have used it in cases of nervous and general debility, and always with success. It is an excellent remedy for atonic dyspepsia, or any low state of the system."

—ADVICE TO MOTHERS.
Miss Winkless's SCOTTISH SWATH should always be used for children's clothing. It softens the child, softens the game, allays pain, cures colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Twenty-five cents a bottle.
