Mrs. Malo Concludes Her Evidence at the Investigation.

Ponice Magistrate Leprohon Would Not Stand Anything Funny on the Part of the Lawyers at His Expense — Adjourned Till the Inquest is Concluded.

[Special to The Herald.]

JOLIETTE, Oct. 18.—The cross-examination of Mrs. Malo, in the Hooper case, was continued by Mr. Corncllier, Crown Prosecutor, this morning. Little that was new was elicited and no contradiction in the evidence was shown. She said that she had learned of the death of Mrs. Hooper through her son Edmond, who had received a telegram to that effect. When the accused told her at the Hotel Rivard in Joliette that her daughter had thrown herself from the cars he did not say how it happened or where she was. She was positive that the accused had said that her daughter had tried for some time to commit suicide.

The accused spoke partly in English and partly in French and said "Georgie is dead" and some other words which she did not remember, but he made her understand that Mrs. Hooper had tried to destroy herself.

Mr. Cornellier—"Seeing your daughter sick, exposed to die as you have said, convinced as you were that she was going to die, why did you not go for a doctor?"

Mrs. Malo—"Because I knew that a doctor was not able to make her better."

Mr. Cornellier—"Why?"

Mrs. Malo said: "Because the doctor never made the dead come back to life. It was useless. We did not want a doctor. We were sure that she was going to die. She was a weak woman, and she had no blood. Consequently, she died. I did not know anything. I was not a doctor. I did not know how much money accused had spent on her in the past 10 years. It might be $25,000. Perhaps he sent more. This was while she was a widow. After she was married again, the accused gave her nothing but the $25,000. The accused was in the Hotel Rivard in Jolietville, Illinois. The accused was brought here on Sept. 2. The accused was in the hotel on Sept. 2. That witness had no money to eat and could not take care of his wife as well as any hospital. Witness never told anyone that the accused had used force to make her enter the carriage to go to the

"Come here, and she was satisfied to go. It was the stranger who was with tilt accused who made her understand that they were going to the parish. She wanted to understand that the accused wanted to put Mrs. Hooper in an asylum at the expense of the parish. She thought that it was necessary to go to the parish office to put a person in the asylum. She never sent an account to the accused because she was afraid that he would be aware that her husband had sent an account for $50. She could not speak of it. Detective Carpenter.

"The following: "Were you approached by Andre Tursoite, bailiff of Joliette, and A. Guibault, law student, at the house of A. Guenard, counsel for the accused, regarding the case of the accused, in connection with this affair to the benefit of the accused?"

"The bailiff objected to this question because at Mr. Renaud's request, withdrew it. He later explaining that he was obliged to consult with his witness to get an idea of the facts."

Cross-examined again by Mr. Renaud, she said that immediately after the death of Mrs. Hooper, accused sent a telegram saying that his wife was dead, and asking them to go there. She was not surprised when the accused told her in the hotel at Joliet, that Mrs. Hooper wished to kill herself, because she had proof that Mrs. Hooper was inclined to commit suicide.

At this point the proceedings were interrupted by an angry speech from Mr. Lophron, the presiding magistrate. He demanded, one of the counsel for the defence, in dictating to the clerk, the answers given by Mrs. Malo appeared to Mr. Cornelli to be ascribing to her words she did not say. The Crown Prosecutor objected to the answers, and Mr. Mallette said, in a joking way, that he supposed the objections of the Crown would be set aside just as those of the defence had been. The spectators in the room laughed at the joke, but the magistrate, thinking they were laughing at him, became very angry. He closed his books with a bang and declared that he would not sit there to be insulted, and that he would adjourn the trial to his own parlor. As he proceeded he became more excited, and now and then uttered such exclamations as "that was not a Dugas" or a "Demoyne with $3,000 or $4,000 a year, but a country magistrate who was trying to do his best." Mr. Malette having protested that no insult was intended, Mr. Leprohon calmed down and the trial proceeded.

Witness was positive that the accused did not say that Mrs. Hooper was dead, but that she wanted to destroy herself, and had thrown herself from the cars.

The Magistrate asked witness to translate into French the words "dead," "alive," "come here," "fact correctness." This finished Mrs. Malo's evidence, and the Court adjourned until Monday next to await the report of Dr. Ellis, analyst.

The first witnesses, when the trial is resumed, will be Mr. Malo, step-father, and Edmond Leblanc, brother of deceased. A stenographer will be engaged in order to expedite matters.

MR. HUGH MONTAGU ALLAN, the bridegroom, is the second son of the late Sir Hugh Allan, the founder of the Allan Line of Royal Mail Steamships. Although only thirty-six years of age, Mr. Montagu Allan has already made his mark in the commercial world, and a conservative estimate of his investments places them at not less than $3,000,000. He is a director of the Merchants' Bank, the Canadian Rubber Company, the Manitoba and North-western Railway, Acadia Coal Company, Canada Paper Company, Merchant's Manufacturing Company, Montreal Rolling Mills Company, and is largely interested in the Dominion Assurance Company, the Dominion Oilcloth Company, and in a number of banking, manufacturing, transportation, and industrial enterprises. In fact he is closely bound up in the commercial progress of Canada, both industrially and financially. He is a well-known member of the Board of Trade, having been a member of the council in 1890 and treasurer of the Board from 1891 to 1892. His palatial residence of Ravensara is one of the sights of Montreal, and now that it will shortly receive its young and lovely chateau it will again take its place as one of the centres of Montreal's society.

Mr. Hector Mackenzie, the bride's father, is well known as the senior partner in the old-established wholesale dry goods house of J. G. Mackenzie & Co. # WOMAN'S CORNER

PHILOSOPHY OF THE LAMP.

Causes of Smoke and Unpleasant Odors.
How These May Be Prevented.

How often we hear the queries, "Where comes the unpleasant odor from the use of the kerosene lamp, and what causes the lamp to smoke?" A writer of The Household says: "Several things will cause the latter, a stuffy room, without any means of ventilation and filled with people, is often the cause."

"If the lamp smokes or gives a dull, yellow light, the perforations in the burner, through which the current of fresh air passes, may be clogged with dust, and often the burned carbon of the wick is allowed to accumulate between the wick and the burner, and the lamp is then clogged and becoming saturated with oil, causing the unpleasant smell when the lamp is heated. In all lamps, where proper and complete combustion is maintained, there is no perceptible odor from any quality of oil sold in the market. Another cause of the unpleasant smell is that, for economy, perhaps, when leaving the room for a time, the wick is turned down. There is no economy in this, but there is danger to health and life."

"When a lamp is lighted, there is at first a time when the flame will not burn high without smoking, but after the lamp and chimney are properly heated and a full supply of oil established through the capillaries of the wick, a strong flame can be maintained. If, with this supply established, the wick is turned down owing to its decrease of burning surface, the supply of oil continues in the same ratio and what is not consumed in the flame being volatilized into gas, it is carried into the air of the room, vitiat-ing it and making it unwholesome as well as unpleasant to breathe. A lamp, therefore, ought never to be turned low down."

"Cleanliness is also essential to having a good light, preventing odors and smoke. It is a good plan to boil the wick tubes in soda and water two or three times during the season."

Capes of All Lengths.

Capes are of all lengths, from three-quarter up to waist length. One of the short capes, scarcely reaching to the waist, is a succession of narrow, overlapping ruffles, a revival of the old dirndl. A new effect is imparted by setting the ruffles on two straight pieces that meet on the shoulders under satin ribbon bows and fall open over the arms. The bright satin linings are a feature of the fancy capes.

Heavy felt cloth is employed for capes and coats. In the latter the large topped sleeves are made yet larger by round and round, close set cording of the material. The faced cloth, always so handsome, is more than usually attractive in the brown shades.

Furnishing a Narrow Hall.

The front hall is or ought to be a subject of careful consideration, in as much as it is there that the first impression of one's house is made. It is the narrow hall, however, that so severely taxes the feminine occupants of a house to attractively furnish. With a view to assisting these perplexed housekeepers, we here present a few hints on the subject. First, substitute for the tall angular hobnack, which tends to increase the narrowness, a hall settle, which comes now in attractive design and at moderate prices. Now that rugs come in all sizes it will be found a decided break and relief in the furnishing to have a square rug for the space between stairs and door, a long narrow one along the entry stretch and another oblong across the head of the basement stairs. This whatever the condition of the floor, as the poorest may be stained, shellacked and varnished for all the wear to which it will be subjected. Now that rich effects can be had in domestic rugs, these floor coverings are really within reach of everybody, and as in cities the expense of having carpets taken up and cleaned and relaid is an imperative one not to be got around the rug fashion is really an economical one.

Cleaning Willow Chairs.

A correspondent of The Art Interchange gives some information as to how to treat willow chairs that have become soiled by use. The treatment is simple enough and deserves a trial. She says wicker furniture only requires soap and water and the use of a stiff brush to make it look like new. Use any good soap and warm water, and after thorough rubbing turn on a hose or throw water on to remove all traces of the soap. Then leave in the open air to thoroughly dry, and when it is again put in place it will have the appearance of new furniture.

A Pretty Opera Bag.

Theater goers appreciate a convenient and at the same time a pretty receptacle in which to carry opera glasses. Such a one may be made of mauve silk, showing alternate stripes of satin. The lower part measures 7 by 10 inches. It is embellished with sprays of flowers wrought in silk embroidery. The corners are bound with a few gathers and the top caught down to describe a vandyke. The inside bag is in plain satin silk and matches the ground of the striped silk. It is drawn at the mouth with a cord. Bows in shot ribbon ornament either side.

CHAPTER VII.

"Eric, do give me a moment's peace," she cries out. "Go and play chess with your mother; and do not talk to Terry or Mr. Stevens; go and make love to Miss Hanford; go and smoke a cigar in the dew; anything, only leave me alone."

He starts up, his pride fairly stung. "As you please. As I am so disagreeable to you, suppose I take myself away from the Abbey altogether."

"I wish you would," she answers cordially, "for this week at least. You irritate me beyond measure haunting me in this way. Leave me alone, Eric, if you really care for my decision."

"If I really care!" he reproachfully repeats.

"The more generous you are, the better your chances will be. When the week is up, come back if you like—for your answer."

"France! and if the answer is favorable. If! Good Heaven, it must be," he cries.

"Then"—her voice trembles, she turns her face away from him in the glow of waxlights—"then you will never more hear me complain of your attentions."

He lifts her hand and kisses it. "I will go," he says, gently. "Forgive me, France, but the thought of losing you is so—"

"Don't," she says, in a voice that is almost one of pain. "Where will you go?"

"To Lincolnshire—to Sir Philip Carruthers' place. I have had a standing invitation to Carruthers' Court for the past two years."

"What's that about Lincolnshire?" Terry asks, appearing. "I'm off there—are you on the wing again, Eric?"

"For a week, yes—to Carruthers. You're a Lincolnshire man, Terry—do you know it?"

"Do I not? It is three miles from Starling vicarage. Shall be glad to meet you there, dear old boy. Capital fishing, best trout streams anywhere, prime shooting a little later on. We will—"

"We will hunt the bear and bison, we will shoot the wild raven, we will worship Mumbo Jumbo in the mountains of the Moon!"

spouts France. "There are nine pretty Misses Higgins aren't there, Terry? Don't let Eric pounce on your mother—it is in his line, you know."

France was herself again. The prospect of a week to quietly think the matter out was a great deal. And who knew what even a week might bring forth?

It was settled that they should go together; Lady Dymally's consent had been won at last.

"But, remember," she said at parting, looking anxiously into Terry's eyes, "you are to return in a week, and meantime you are to say nothing to Miss Higgins. This I insist upon. When you have heard what I have to say—"

He looked at her in anxious wonder. What could it be, he thought, to make Lady Dymally wait that face of pale affliction? What secret was there?

He would obey her in all things; she hardly needed the assurance, and yet it was with a dark troubled face she stood on the portico steps and watched the two young men disappear.

"Thank fortune," France breathed devoutly, "we shall have a quiet week. Men are so much more in a household, I begin to find. Like yeast in small beer, they turn the peaceful stream of woman's life into seething ferment."

"France," the elder lady said, taking both the girls' hands, and looking earnestly down into her eyes, "you are to give Eric his answer when he returns—I know that. When does he return?"

"In a week."

"And the answer will be—"

"Lady Dymally, you have no right to ask that. When the week ends, and he returns to claim it, the answer shall be given to him."

She dropped the hands and turned away with a heavy sigh.

"I will do my duty, I hope—I pray." France went on, quietly. "If Eric's happiness were involved—if, indeed, he loved me after the fact, consent I have given all these years—I would not hesitate one moment, at any sacrifice to myself. But he does not love me—he is incapable of loving anyone but himself. Oh, yes! Lady Dymally, even you must hear the truth sometimes about Eric. As a brother, I could like him well enough—be proud of his good looks, his graceful manner, as you are; as a husband, if he is ever that, I shall detest him."

"France!"

"I shock, I anger you, do I not? It is true, though, and it is of me before the house is over. If I marry, it will be a fatal mistake; and yet, if you all hold me to this compact, what is left me but to yield?"

"You are a romantic girl, France; you want a hero—a Chevalier Bayard—a Sir Launcelot. Dear child, there are none left. Like the fairies, they sailed away from England years ago—went out of fashion with tilt and tournament. You will marry Eric, I foresee, and make a man of him. He will go into parliament, make speeches, and be a most devoted husband to the fairest and happiest wife in England. Oh, France, take my boy! I love you so well that I will break my heart if this marriage does not take place."

"And I will break mine if it does," France answers, with a curious little laugh. "Let us not talk of it any more, now. We are due at De Vere's, are we not? We have a week's grace, and much may happen in a week. I have the strongest internal conviction that I will never be Lady Dymally."

CHAPTER VIII.

"WHO IS SHE?"

Scene, an old-fashioned country garden of an old-fashioned country house; time, the mellow, amber hour before sunset; dramatic personae, a young man and a young girl; names of dramatic personae, Mr. Terrence Dennison, Her Majesty's—th' Dignities, and Miss Christabel Higgins, eighth daughter of

Rev. William Higgins, Vicar of Starling, and beauty of the family.

A beauty? Well, as Tony Lumpkin says, "That's as may be." If you liked a complexion of milk-white and rose-pink, the eighth Miss Higgins had it; if you liked big, childish, surprised-looking, turquoise blue eyes, there they were for you; if you liked a dear little, dimpled, rosy mouth, there it was also; if you liked a low, characterless forehead, a round, characterless chin, and a feathery aureole of palest blonde hair, the eighth Miss Higgins rejoiced in all these pretty and pleasant gifts. If you fancied a waist you might span, a shape, small, slim, fragile as a lily-stalk, little Crystal would have been your ideal, certainly. Pretty? Yes, with a tender, dove-like, inane sort of prettiness, that does its work with a certain sort of men. Mind, she had none; depth, she had none; knowledge of this big, wicked world, she had none; in short, she was man's ideal of perfect womanhood, infringing on no claim whatever of the lordly sex. And Terry Dennison was her abject slave and adorer.

She was seventeen this sunny August afternoon. It seemed to Terry he had idolized her—idolized was the way Mr. Dennison thought it—ever since she had been seven. She knew she was pretty—dove-like innocence to the contrary—and rejoiced in that prettiness as thoroughly as the natural beauty, coquetted. Had she not been caressed, and kissed, and praised for those blue eyes and golden tresses ever since the bibs and tuckers? Had she not seen her seven elder sisters snubbed and passed over, and the cakes and the sugar-plums always presented to her? It would be so forever, Crystal thought.

In the eternal fitness of things it had been ordered so—the seven elder Cinderellas worked in kitchen and chamber, sewed, baked, and mended; she, like the lilies of the field, tottered not nor sun. The cakes and sugar-plums of life were to be hers always; they belonged by right divine to pretty people with pale yellow hair and turquoise eyes. Let the snub-noses and freckled complexions, and the dry-as-dust colored hair do the work. She would never be a Terry Dennison some day, and be, as Terry was, an offshoot of the aristocracy. The great lady, who was Terry's patroness and friend, would take her up, would present her at court, would invite her to her parties, and the world of her dreams would become the world of her reality. She would see this handsome Lord Dymally, of whom Terry never tired talking—this elegant Miss France Forrester, who was to marry him. And, who knew?—these beings of the upper world might condescend even to admire her in turn.

CONSIDERED IMPROBABLE.

In view of the competition in the Mantle trade during the autumn of 1892, it was thought improbable that our Mantle Department would show an increase of trade in September, over previous years. But the increase was done as usual.

THOUGHT IMPOSSIBLE.

The trade in our Mantle Department for September, 1893, has gone altogether past our expectations. In fact we ourselves considered it next to impossible to increase the sale this September, in this department.

THE ELLIS CASE.

There is not a single redeeming feature in the conduct of the New Brunswick judges in the Ellis "contempt of Court" case. From the inception of the action against Mr. Ellis, over six years ago, down to the infliction of the sentence the judges have cut a contemptible figure. They have displayed a spirit which shows how unfit they are for the discharge of those prerogatives which attach to their office. They have been plaintiff, prosecuting attorney, jury, judge and executioner; and Mr. Ellis stood about as much show for his liberty as the wretched peasantry of the West of England did for their lives when Jeffries went on circuit. They took up the Ellis' case in the mood in which Thomas Cromwell dealt with those who denied the supremacy in religious matters of Henry the Eighth. The private memorandum books of this worthy contained such memos for future observance as this: "July 16th to go to Norwich to try and to execute" so and so. Mr. Ellis was prejudged. He was deprived of his liberty to gratify the malice, and of his money to line the pockets of personal enemies.

The circumstances of the whole case are a lasting disgrace to the Canadian judiciary. At the general elections of February 1887 the electors of Queen's county, New Brunswick, chose for their representative in Parliament, George G. King, the Liberal candidate. His opponent, Geo. F. Baird, unfortunately for himself, was in a minority of over sixty votes. John R. Dunn, the returning officer, acting on legal advice obtained from Mr. Baird's law partner threw out the entire vote given for Mr. King, on the technical ground that his deposit was not in Dominion notes; and gave the seat to Mr. Baird. This shameful act, which affixes an irremovable stigma to the name of everyone connected with it, whether as participant or beneficiary, aroused the greatest indignation among the New Brunswick Liberals. An application to Judge Steadman for a recount was made and was granted. This recount would have given the seat to the man elected, leaving it to Mr. Baird to establish the illegality of Mr. King's candidature before a capable tribunal. But on the eve of the recount an injunction was granted by Judge Tuck forbidding it; and while this injunction held, the time for holding a recount ran out, and Mr. Baird got the seat. Mr. King, the rightly chosen member, had no recourse other than an appeal to Parliament. He took this, and received the treatment he no doubt expected. Baird's claim to the seat was pronounced good by a party vote, though on this issue J. C. Patterson, the present Minister of Militia, bolted, and both spoke and voted in favor of Mr. King.

Judge Tuck's action in legalizing this was sharply criticized by Mr. Ellis in The Globe. He charged Judge Tuck with partisanship. The Globe is noted for the moderation of its editorial utterances, but at this juncture it resorted to good terse Anglo-Saxon. Possibly it was too severe, but the provocation was undoubtedly great. Proceedings were instituted against Mr. Ellis for contempt of court, and after many delays and postponements he was adjudged guilty in 1889. An appeal to the Supreme Court was thrown out; and last Saturday Mr. Ellis was brought up for sentence. Chief Justice Allen said that he and Judges Fraser and Palmer had decided that the sentence should be 30 days imprisonment, a fine of $200 and the payment of all cost in the case aggregating $3000. An application for a stay in execution was then made to permit an appeal being made to the Privy Council. This was opposed by "counsel for the plaintiff," Mr. Curley (Mr. Baird's law partner) and was refused, on the ground that it was made too late. Mr. Weldon, the counsel for Mr. Ellis, was bold enough to inform the court that there was a general feeling on the part of the public that justice was not being done in this matter, and that the courts were acting as prosecutors, judges and executioners. Judge Palmer replied that he did not care if that was the public feeling. If public opinion was so strong upon these matters of contempt of court, it could get effect in the Legislature, and not until then would he observe it upon the Bench.

Two other features of the case tend to still more clearly show the maliciousness that underlay it. Mr. Ellis's offence was quasi-criminal, as the punishment of imprisonment shows. It is unheard of that a man on trial for an offence of this nature should have to pay not only for his defence, but for his prosecution as well. Yet that is what Mr. Ellis has been condemned to do. The prosecution of Mr. Ellis was not given to the Attorney-General, as it should have been, but was entrusted to a lawyer holding no official position. And that lawyer was Mr. Curley, the instigator of the Queen's County robbery, and the law partner of Geo. F. Baird, who profited by it! Mr. Ellis, for protesting against an act which gave to Mr. Baird that which did not belong to him, was prosecuted by Mr. Baird, acting for the judges, who were alike prosecutors and judges; and being found guilty was condemned to pay, not only his own costs, but Mr. Baird's charges as well. This is the case in a nutshell; and it is one which should not be possible outside of Russia.

The agitation, to which Mr. Ellis's imprisonment has given rise, should force a change in the law. The right of the judges to themselves take vengeance on their critics is one which can be safely abridged. The authority of a judge in a court-room should be such that he can visit immediate punishment for acts of disrespect or disobedience, but outside of that judges should have recourse to the ordinary law of libel when they consider themselves abused. Judges are men subject to human passions and practices, and to give them the power to decide themselves when they are unjustly assailed and what is the due punishment, is to make possible such an intolerable outrage against the liberty of the subject as that which we are now discussing. A journalist who would deliberately libel a judge could be thoroughly punished by a recourse to those means by which ordinary citizens protect themselves against the license of the press.

That there is warrant for this opinion is shown very clearly in the judgment of the Privy Council in the Yelverton case. Mr. Mosely, editor of the Nassau (Bahamas) Guardian, for refusing to reveal the name of the author of a letter strongly criticizing Chief Justice Yelverton, was committed to jail for contempt of court. Sir Ambrose Shea, Governor of the Bahamas, pardoned Mr. Mosely; but the right of the Chief Justice to imprison under the circumstances was questioned, and eventually the case reached the Privy Council. The decision of that court was condemnatory of Yelverton's action. The judgment said: "That the letter in the Nassau Guardian, though it might have been the subject of proceedings for libel was not, in the circumstances, calculated to obstruct or interfere with the course of justice or the due administration of law, and therefore did not constitute a contempt of court." Here we have the opinion of the chief law court of the realm that in a case not dissimilar to the Ellis one, there was found only an ordinary action at law and not for the automatic display of the prerogative of committing for contempt.

A DEMOCRATIC DUTY.

Disappointment is the portion of those that hoped that the progress of the Democratic party in the United States towards the triumph of the principles in the name of which it carried the country in 1860 and 1862 would be uninterrupted. The Democrats pledged themselves first of all to the reform of the tariff in such manner as to undo the hideous evils of protection. But upon their accession to a majority in each of the three branches of the legislature, they found that there had interposed itself between them and the performance of this lofty duty the imperative necessity for the removal of the evils that had been created by a measure which they had condemned as a "miserable makeshift." They had not foreseen that the silver question would supersede the tariff question in urgency. They would have been more than human had they known to prepare themselves for the application of a remedy to one of the most remarkable financial stringencies of the age, and for contest with a vested interest of which they had no cause to dread the immediate antagonism. The especial duty to which the people called them was superseded by one for the fulfilment of which they were not especially prepared, but to which every distressing circumstance added peculiar urgency. The people that had clamored for tariff reform before the presidential elections, began immediately afterwards to clamor for the repeal of the silver law. Dire distress prompted that clamor and impatience or disappointment has attended the failure to grant its demand.

"I told you so," is the spiteful commentary of the organs of the party that ridiculed the Democratic pretension to ability to direct the affairs of the nation. The Republican press at the beginning of the depression denied that it had been caused by the silver difficulty, and lay the blame upon what it called the Democratic threat of free trade. But the House of Representatives, by a majority made up of a majority of the members of each party, passed a measure for the repeal of the purchasing clauses of the Sherman Act, and the panic was arrested, confidence was restored, currency began to seek its accustomed channels, and a general industrial, commercial and financial revival was well under way when it began to be evident that the minority in the Senate would oppose the efforts of the repealers to the death, or to compromise. Thereupon the Republican organs changed their tune. It was no longer the Democratic threat of free trade that was responsible for the depression, but the public lack of confidence in the ability of the Democratic party to fulfil its pledges.

Such a lack of confidence would not be remarkable in a country which had been taught for years to regard itself as the ward of a single set of politicians. And it cannot be denied that the feeling of disappointment is gaining ground; but it is based largely upon public appreciation of the difficulties under which the Democratic party has labored, the advantages which it has gained in face of these difficulties, and its hesitancy in availing itself of those advantages. The people cannot forget that the Democratic party pledged itself to the repeal of the Silver law. But it cannot forget on the other hand that Mr. Cleveland in his message to Congress, called for an extraordinary session, declared for the unconditional repeal of the objectionable measure. They cannot forget that an overwhelming Democratic majority, forming part of an overwhelming majority of the House of Representatives, concurred in that declaration for unconditional repeal. They cannot forget that in spite of all rumors to the contrary, the administration still declares its unswerving allegiance to the principle of unconditional repeal, and its determination to accept no compromise. They cannot forget that a majority of the Democratic party in the Senate has declared down to comparative inaction in the contest with the filibustering Silverites by the knowledge that its Republican allies are pledged to repeal only so long as it suits their own interests. The people cannot forget that many of the Republican Senators that are pledged to vote for repeal, if the question should ever come to a vote, would sell their lukewarm interest in return for some assurance of assistance in their defence of protection.

The people can forget none of these things, but their disappointment, in the Democratic party for its failure to avail itself of the very marked public sympathy is gaining ground. They see that if the Democratic party is so easily balked in its attack upon the silver difficulty it will be utterly routed when, in its attempt to redeem its pledge of tariff reform, it encounters the might of the protectionists, and the Democratic and independent press makes demand without cessation for the application of drastic measures for the enforcement of the will of the majority in the Senate. The Philadelphia Ledger, an independent Republican journal, thus reviews the two most reasonable suggestions:

"It has been suggested that Vice-President Stevenson, if supported by a majority of the Senate, could force a vote on repeal by, in a measure, over-riding the rules of the Senate and refusing to entertain dilatory motions on the part of the Republicans. The floor for the purpose of making dilatory speeches. Vice-President Stevenson is scarcely the man for this great public service, however. If he is in sympathy with the repealers as all he has given no sign of it, but, apart from that, his position as presiding officer of the Senate only by virtue of his office forbids that he should play a part resembling that of a repealer. But if he should call to the chair a man of strong common sense, like Senator Smith, of New Jersey, the temporary presiding officer might make himself famous by sweeping away Senatorial rules and traditions in order to carry out the purposes of the Constitution. It would be better still, however, to amend the rules in this arbitrary way, and then, under new rules, force a vote on the repeal of the Sherman Act."

Inasmuch as brute force has already failed, the power of the most determined presiding officer might be broken in like manner. Moreover, the current debate has developed the fact that the Senate is no longer a body of which the dignity is sacred. To its better governance in the future a permanent provision might be deemed expedient. In the interests of the people, who have entrusted the Democratic party with a mission fraught with the fortunes of the Republic, the amendment of the rules of the Senate is vitally necessary.

Took Paris Green and Died.
Isidore Kenrick, 49 years old, a boarder at 249 Cadieux street, came to the conclusion that life was no longer worth living and at nine o'clock last night took a dose of that most agonizing poison, Paris green, in order to end it. He had not reckoned on the pain he would be compelled to suffer while the arsenite of copper ate away the mucous membrane of the stomach, and his cries of agony drew the attention of a fellow boarder. He had locked himself in his room to die, but the other broke the door down, and realizing the seriousness of his condition, telephoned at once for the Notre Dame Hospital ambulance. But by this time it was too late. The powerful corrosive had got a full grip, and despite the use of emetics and antidotes it was too late. Why intending suicides should choose this most painful of all means of shuffling off the mortal coil, it seems difficult to see. With all the range of stupefying narcotics and swift acting alkalis within their reach they deliberately seek a death of slow and agonising pain simply because it is cheaply and easily procured. It would be well if the sale of Paris green were more closely

THE GRANITE TEAM

The Champion Team of Quebec for this Season.

A Short History of Each Player—Splendid Races at Leptine Park—Tuckerites Again Defeat the High School—The Shamrock Dinner.

The group of ball tossers presented to The Herald readers this morning is from a photograph by D. Summerhayes, and that artist has done full justice to the athletes who are represented.

There seems to be some discussion among several of them as to who is the best looking man on the team, were it left to a vote who would win? However the Granite put up a magnificent game, and the season's one defeat was owing to the absence of several of their strongest players.

There is not a man on the team who can be classed as a "villain," they have all "chased the leather" for many moons.

CAPTAIN A. CUTBERT, called "Papa" by the boys, was born in Montreal 25 years ago, and is one of a family of ten boys, who are all ball players, and at one time they had a club composed of Cutberts. In the history of the great American game this is the only instance of nine brothers playing on one team.

In V. Wheeling, N.Y., 25 years ago. A man and his eight sons made up a team, and won the county championship. "Papa" Cutbert has been a most efficient captain, and to his excellent judgment on the field, and great playing behind the bat much of the result is due.

"JOE" BIRSE, Now comes the "Crackerjack" "Joe" the twirler, and what with his snake charming curves and his deceptive eye, however heavy hitters fell down before him like the inert "Casey" De Wolf Hopper tells us about. "Joe" did certainly snap them over the rubber in great shape, and did not pitch in a losing game. He first saw light in Montreal about 25 years ago, and has done all his playing hereabouts.

"BILLY" LITTLE, who is relegated to the back row in the picture was most emphatically in the front, when good steady playing was needed. "Billy" was found some 28 years back in Guelph, Ont., and for several years played on the Guelph team, who were known as "The Fire Eaters." His appearance on first base for the Granite was always a sure indication of success. He is regarded as one of the best amateur first basemen, who ever graced the green diamond.

W. HARRY BELL, is one of those versatile players that can cover about any position on the field, but, probably, excellent at 2nd base. A sure catch, a heavy hitter, and a good base runner. He comes from London, where he was born 26 years (3 ago), in his native town he was a leading player, and when he came to Montreal he was soon regarded as a great player, and has more than sustained the reputation which preceded him.

EDWIN VARNSEY, who is known as an actor of wide reputation, donned a Granite uniform and helped place the Granite standard in the front. There is no man in the team who was more anxious to win, and his well-trained lungs stood him in good need on the coaching lines, where he never failed to make a hit. "Ed" played in several positions during the season. A badly broken thumb caused him to retire before the season closed. He has 33 years marked to his credit and has a son who promises to be a wonder on the ball field. Mr. Varnsey is treasurer of the Queen's Theatre.

"JACK" MORRILL, "Little Jack" plays very tall ball and has covered 3rd base like a Nash. "Jack" comes from good old Puritan stock and put in his early playing in the Eastern States. His coming to Montreal gave the game new life. He is a good steady player and a valuable man on any team. He is just 29, but looks older.

J. A. HIGGS, is another Yankee who was brought up in Williston, Me., where he played for years on amateur teams. He later played in Minneapolis, Minn. He keeps on growing, and will soon be 30, but looks much younger. With his good ball playing he has a genial way about him that endears him to his fellow players.

EDDIE KING, Who wears his hair pompadour and is the envy of the others is a promising player. He comes from Brockville. That town has never heard of baseball, consequently "Eddie" has done all his playing in this city. He says he is 26—I guess he is.

WALTER CORNELL, The handsomest man on the team has played short stop in all the games and was worth. Walter is a natural ball player and a royal good fellow. He is one of the organizers of the team, and owing to his good selections is the team in its present shape. Walter is only 24.

J. GRANT CORNELL, his brother, is 27 and the father of an interesting miss who takes great interest in "papa's" club. "Grant" last season played on the Hawthorn team, which won the championship, and now he is looked upon as a mascot. He, too, is a native Montrealese and has been playing ball for 15 years. He is a good, heavy hitter and a sure man in the field.

E. CORNELL, VICE-PRES., a cousin to the two Cornells mentioned above, while not an active player, knows all the ins and outs of the game and takes a keen interest in the sport. Mr. Cornell has many qualities which recommend him to all lovers of amateur sport. Mr. Cornell is very popular with the players, and his only regret is that his superior officer, James Field, president, is not in the group. But as the photo was taken during the progress of the Vigilant-Valkyrie race, and Mr. Field's coupons were on the Valkyrie, his absence is explained as being away from the field.

Last, but not least, comes "BILLY" HONEYMAN, the Granite hon. secretary-treasurer. There is no young man in the city who has ever filled a like position who has more faithfully performed the many duties. No matter what question might come before the league, the Granite felt their interests secure with honest, handsome "Billy" at the helm. Mr. Honeyman is also hon. secretary-treasurer of the M. B. B. League, and a good ball player. On several occasions his playing helped save the day.

The club will soon have its annual concert, at which it is whispered a pleasing presentation will take place. In the meantime they are anxious for the man who offered the silver cup to come to the front. It is also said that the two leagues will join forces and be as one next season.

LACROSSE.

Sherbrooke vs. Young Shamrock. The Young Shamrock executive, in order to express their disapprobation of the endeavor of a few persons to resort to a method of protesting matches, have decided to meet the Sherbrookes again next Saturday and prove their claim to the title of being intermediate champions.

The Young Shamrock team has commenced practice again and will be seen every afternoon until today, so that they may be in prime condition when they meet the Sherbrookes for the last time this season.

A letter received from the Sherbrooke's manager to one sent by the Young Shamrock asking for suggestions regarding officials mentions the names of Messrs. Ross McKenzie, W. L. Mulvey and Wm. Pollock. The last named gentleman refused to act on the occasion of the Quebec Shamrock match, and the others are the only ones that can be chosen. The names suggested are most certainly very desirable and well fitted to occupy the position of officials.

The match will commence at three o'clock sharp, and judging from the pertinacity evinced by the Sherbrookes, and the unconquerable spirit manifested by the captain of their team, it would appear that next Saturday the devotees of lacrosse will be treated to a splendid exhibition of the game, which will not be inferior to the greatest of struggles for the senior championship during past seasons.

The Dinner to the Shamrocks. At a special meeting of the directors of the Shamrock Amateur Athletic Association, the final arrangements were made for the complimentary dinner to the Shamrock team, to be held at the Balmoral Hotel next Monday evening.

It was decided to invite the following guests: Presidents of the Montreal, Toronto, Capital and Cornwall Lacrosse Clubs, president of the N.A.A.U. president of the St. Patrick's Society and Young Irishmen's L. and B. Association, Hon. A. Desjardins, Mayor of Montreal, Mr. J. J. Curran, Solicitor General, Sir Donald A. Smith, M.P., Mr. P. Kennedy, M.P., and representatives of the press.

The toast list was also completed and includes: "Queen," "Canada, Our Home," "Our Team," "Our Affiliated Clubs," "Senior Lacrosse Clubs of Canada," "Press," "Ladies."

The tickets are selling fast, and the dinner now promises to be the event of the season in athletic circles.

THE RING.

A Fight Stopped by the Police. BROOKLYN, Pa., Oct. 18.—The fight between Dan Hurley of Niagara Falls, and John L. Sullivan of Buffalo, light-weights, for $500, before the Central Hose Athletic Club last night, was stopped by the police in the first round. The fight was wicked and bloody while it lasted, and Hurley had slightly the best of it, when Chief of Police Stanton and his men stopped it.

A Fight at the Olympic Club. NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 18.—Twenty-five hundred people witnessed the bantam battle at the Olympic Club last night between Jack Levy, of England, and Jim Gorman, of New York. In the first four rounds Gorman had the best of the fight and also did the cleanest work, hitting five, six and seven. In the eighth round there was a hot exchange in the middle of the ring. From the midst of a close rally which was fast and furious, Gorman swung his right on Levy's jaw and the latter fell on his face in the sand completely knocked out. Neither man was hurt, and not a scratch was on either when the fight was over. Gorman received an ovation.

FOOTBALL.

Tuckerites Again Defeat the High.

Yesterday was a big day with the Tuckerites, because their school beat the High on the Shamrock grounds. A match with the High is becoming with them an annual event, and to this they look forward with interest and pleasure. The day was bright and brisk, and the sun shone in a clear sky. At four o'clock both teams marched on to the ground where Mr. Ball, the popular instructor of gymnastics in the Y.M.C.A., was ready to referee the game. The grand stand was filled with the boys from the High, while the Tuckerites occupied the space of ground near St. Catherine Street. Both schools had put into the field their best men and both were confident, but luck did not abandon the Tuckerites. This is now their third year they have met and in no match has the High scored a single point against the Tuckerites. The Tuckerites won the toss and played with the sun in their back. Seagram kicked off for the High, but the ball was returned by Ewing, and after a series of hard scrimmages, Bond caught the ball, and after a fine run secured a touch. Russell failed to kick a goal. The rest of the first half consisted of scrimmaging. In the second half Ewing kicked off, but the ball was quickly returned by Seagram. It was caught by Lindsay, and after a brilliant run was carried up to the goal of the High. It was returned to half, then went into touch line where it was thrown out by McBean. Russell secured the ball and kicked it up towards the High goal. The ball was followed up by left wings when Hutchings was forced to ronge. At the close of the match the score stood five to nothing, in favor of the Tuckerites. Lindsay, Reid and Bishop played a brilliant game, and the Collegiates, and Seagram, Rankin and Hutchings for the High. To the referee, Mr. Ball, great credit is due for the mastery and impartial way in which he discharged his duties as referee. At the close of the match the Tuckerites formed in long line and walked down to the school, where they were received by Mr. Tucker in the large hall of the school. There was shouting and cheering and every Tuckerite looked the picture of happiness. The High was represented by Hutchings, Seagram, McLeod, Hyde, Rankin, Davidson, Mitchell, Radford, Butler, Lockyer, Henderson, Granger, Gammell, Cowans, and the Tuckerites by Bishop, Ewing, Russell, Collican, Lindsay, McBean, Evans, Reid, E. Vipond, Aylmer, Patterson, Norris, Bond, MacMaster and E. Vipond.

McGill Versus Montreal.

The above teams will meet on the M.A.A.A. grounds on Saturday, at 3 p.m., when an exciting Rugby game may be expected. McGill has little doubt as to the result, and hopes to win the three championship this year. The Montreal team is practicing hard, and will do their level best to carry the old red and black colors to the front once more.

WATER POLO.

Polo at the Laurentian Bath. The water polo match last night at the Laurentian Bath, between the Grand Trunk and Otters, was won by the Grand Trunk by ten goals to one. This match was the best that has been seen at the baths this season. On the first half, neither side scored a goal, all goals being secured in the second half. The Otters secured the first game in 23 minutes, and the next two games were secured by the Grand Trunk in 1 and 2 minutes respectively. The teams were as follows:

OTTERS.
R. Stark, Goal. H. Barlow, Point. A. Lindsay, R. Wall. J. McLean, F. W. E. Small, G. Forest, F. J. Kell, W. J. Nixon, A. S. Cobb.

THE TURF.

Great Races at Leptine Park. Those who like to see a good horse race should visit Leptine Park. The meeting now going on is one of the best yet seen in Canada. The second day's races took place yesterday, and in every respect were successful. The attendance was as large as could be desired, and each race was exciting. Everything passed off in first-class manner, and nothing but praise can be given for the manner in which the races were carried out. The first race of the day was the 230 class. This was won in straight heats by Banner Boy, but each heat was close and exciting. The race for Muscovite Colts was cancelled, and a named race trotted instead.

QUOTING.

Montreal Quoting Club. The regular monthly meeting of the Montreal Quoting Club takes place this evening at the club room, Windsor Street, at 7:30. A full attendance of members is requested to arrange the day for meeting the St. Gabriel Club in the final match.

Frank Claus, the Ontario Champion, Defeats Williamson. BRILEVILLE, Ont., Oct. 18.—Frank Claus, quoting champion of Ontario, and Geo. Williamson, of Toronto, pitched a match here to-day for $100 a side. The conditions were best of three games of 31, 61 and 41 points respectively. Claus won the first game by 31 to 19 and the second by 61 to 24.

Friends of the Poor. At the half-yearly meeting of the Protestant House of Industry and Refuge Board, held yesterday, the semi-annual report was received and voted of thanks tendered. The report shows that at present there are in the House 127 lunatics, and that the average number for the past year was 125. In 18 months there were given transient night lodgings to 10,309 applicants, being 2,200 more than during the corresponding period of 1892.

At the last semi-annual meeting the project was discussed of the building of an incinerator and convalescent home adjoining the main building. This has been since carried into effect and is rapidly approaching completion. Two requests are acknowledged by the Board from the estate of the late George Ross, $200, and $100, less ten per cent. government tax, from the late Hollis Shorey.

Shot at Sudbury.

Coroner McMahon held inquest yesterday afternoon on the body of a man who had died at the General Hospital. The evidence adduced showed that the deceased had been shot in Sudbury, Ont., about a week previous to his admission to the Hospital, and the jury returned a verdict to the effect "that the deceased had been murdered by a party whose name was unknown." They also ordered the hospital authorities for their laxity in not notifying the Police Magistrate in time to take a ante mortem statement. A woman named Granger is under arrest at Sudbury, Ont., charged with shooting the deceased, but the want of the ante mortem examination will greatly retard the course of justice.

The Late Mr. Carlyle.

The funeral of George Carlyle took place yesterday from the General Hospital, where he died Monday. Mr. Carlyle came to this city from Detroit about two months ago with the intention of starting a branch of the Standard Pearl Button Co. He was in the business in partnership with Mr. McGruthers, and owing to the financial depression in the States it was thought advisable to start a branch of the business in this city. Mr. Carlyle accordingly came here and was employed in getting plants together for starting up when he was taken ill, and died shortly after in the Hospital. The remains were taken by Mr. McGruthers to Detroit last evening, where they will be interred in Mount Forest Cemetery.

Changed Prisoners.

The enquete in the case of Collins and McGuire, the two tramps caught by Detectives Lafontaine and O'Keefe on Craig Street a short time ago, was commenced yesterday afternoon in the Police Court. The detectives were very much annoyed at the action of Governor Vallee in allowing parties to see the man Collins. When he walked out of the van yesterday morning they hardly recognized him, so changed was his appearance. He was clean shaven and had on a nobly new suit. How he got it is a mystery. The prosecutor is a boy, and it is claimed if such practices are allowed all the goods and chattels of the said defendant, seized in this cause, consisting of household furniture, etc., etc., will be lost. The case, B.S.C. Montreal, 19th Oct., 1893.

Montrealese Married at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—One of Ottawa's charming young ladies in the person of Miss Ida, daughter of Mr. J. C. Edwards, was wedded this evening to Mr. James W. Woods, of the firm of Hodgson, Sumner & Co., of Montreal. The wedding took place in the drawing room of her father's residence and the nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. Mr. Dixon, of St. Jude's Church, Montreal. Only the most intimate friends and the relatives of the bride and groom were present. Miss Edith Edwards was bridesmaid and Willie White, of Montreal, groomsmen.

The Wine Trade Gazette.

The Wine Trade, Breweries, Distillers' and Licensed Victuallers Gazette of Canada, is the name of a new publication printed in the city in the interests of the licensed and kindred trades of the Dominion by Mr. E. E. Mann. The journal has the support of all the principal brewers and distillers of Canada. Mr. Mann, who is also publisher of the Jewellers' Guide, will, no doubt, make a success of the new venture, the first number of which presents a very creditable appearance.

A Salvation Army Case.

A man named Edward Garland was badly thrashed last night in the Salvation Army Lighthouse (the old Joe Beef Canten), by one of the army's men. The ambulance was called and Garland taken to the Notre Dame Hospital, while his assailant, George Stevenson, was arrested by Detective Robinson.

Mrs. Mary Astor of Lewisburg, Pa., suffered untold agony from broken varicose veins, with intense itching and burning. On the recommendation of a physician she took Hood's Sarsaparilla and used Hood's Olive Ointment. Soon the rashes began to heal, the inflammation ceased, she was completely cured, and says, "I enjoy health as I have not for many years." "We are personally acquainted with Mrs. Astor and know the above to be true." J. S. Gifford & Son, Lewisburg, Pa.

It was Friday night when the bark Cambria left Quebec for this port, in ballast, and the heavy gale that night drove her ashore. She still lies in an awkward position, as the bottom there is rocky and the bark is far aground. Ballast has been drawn over to lighten her, and the tug are awaiting a high wind to raise the water so that the vessel can be pulled off.

THE MAYOR'S PARLOR.

A Letter From Mr. Louis Perreault Published in La Presse.

A letter appeared in La Presse on Tuesday night which made a great stir in civic circles, yesterday. It read as follows:

To the Editor La Presse:

A member of the City Council, Mr. Renauld, has called the attention of his colleagues to a rumor according to an alderman of having used through, caprice or economy, the Mayor's parlor for certain questionable purposes. An enquiry was ordered and was duly made, but the report of the committee was such as to show beyond a doubt that the Mayor had not sought to reveal all the facts of the case. In their report the name of the accused alderman is not mentioned and his explanation that it was merely a change of courtesy, and a desire to show the ladies the beautiful furnishings of the apartment that he had taken them by night to the Mayor's parlor, is graciously accepted as sufficient. Nevertheless, the committee took the precaution to recommend that in the future the doors should be kept locked. The Council cannot, without subjecting themselves to ridicule, allow such scandalous doings to be thus glossed over. The other aldermen cannot allow themselves to be suspected while protecting a colleague who does not dare to make himself known and to justify himself before the public.

For my own part, electors of the Centre, I fully trust that the alderman of this quarter will be the first to place their reputation beyond suspicion; if others hesitate to follow their example they will have but themselves to blame if any are innocently accused by the public.

(Sgd.) LOUIS PERREAU.
Ald. Rainville was met by a Herald representative yesterday, and said that Mr. Perreault was rather hard on the committee. He thought the committee could go further in the matter by going to Council. "Personally," he said, "I know nothing of the affair."

Ald. Farrell was rather surprised when asked if he knew anything about the affair. He replied in the negative.

Kossuth and the Hungarians.
Kossuth has written a letter to a lady in Budapest, who, when the Honved monument was unveiled, induced the women of Hungary to deposit a gigantic bronze laurel wreath upon it, and then sent Kossuth a copy of it in plaster. Kossuth begins by saying that the wreath is a beautiful thing, but that his hands do not tremble he is nearly blind and cannot read manuscript nor printed matter, and yet has just finished a book because he owed it to his publishers and to his people. It is the third volume of his memoirs. After speaking of the Hungarian woman's mission in political life as filling him with enthusiasm, he refers to the Honved monument and to the fact that the Hungarian Government was not represented at the unveiling. The Austrian papers only publish fragments of the letter, but for fear of offending against the Press Laws, but a correspondent in Budapest has communicated the following interesting passages: "The King refuses to identify himself with the Hungarian people, and the result is that friction between the monarch and the people is inevitable, which will certainly damage the cause of the country, for the King is in Vienna to see the Emperor, and the Emperor is in Vienna to see the King. How many hearts might the Austrian dynasty win among the Hungarian people if it would identify itself with its national way of thinking and feeling! What blessings might be brought about in consequence! Instead of that it was imagined in Vienna that one could rely upon armed force, even where the Hungarian nation is concerned. Now this contrast of feelings and opinion may some day be badly avenged in an hour of crisis, when the fate of the country no longer depends upon the dynasty, but upon the people." Kossuth concludes by ensuring the Premier, Dr. Wokierle, severely for having allowed the two speeches of the Emperor at Borszeles and Gims.

Annual Meeting of the N. L. & S. S. The annual meeting of the National Loan and Building Society was held in the Mechanics Institute yesterday afternoon. The financial statement read by the treasurer showed the Society to be prospering. Messrs. R. Bickerdike, J. Wright, H. Laporte, J. J. Beauchamp, H. Hamilton, S. J. Boivin and W. Sturdivant were elected directors for the ensuing year. A directors' meeting will be called at a future date for the election of officers.

ALL WERE CONFISCATED.

Gamblers' Money and Paraphernalia Must Go to the Government.

The Police Court was crowded yesterday morning by people who were anxious to see the outcome of the trial of eight men who were arrested on Saturday night last.

Mr. Guerin applied to Judge Dugas for the gambling paraphernalia seized on that occasion as well as the $5000 as it had not been established that they were used for gambling purposes.

Judge Dugas did not comply and at once confiscated and not only the apparatus, but also all the money seized, amounting to $8000, which will be handed over to the Government.

The alleged gamblers and followers then adjourned to another court room, where Judge Desnoyers presided, and the trial of the eight was at once commenced.

Mr. E. Guerin, who appeared for the accused, at once raised an objection to the proceedings claiming that the warrant under which they had been dragged to court was illegal according to the Criminal Code. Neither Hugh Constable Bissonnette or his son, as deputy, had any right to make a complaint. The only party who had that power was the Chief of Police or his deputies.

His Honor said he would consider the objection, but the case would proceed in the meantime.

The detectives who made the arrest then gave evidence for the prosecution, and the trial was adjourned until Friday morning, when His Honor will render his decision.

AGAINST THE PROPRIETORS.

The enquiry into the charge against the alleged proprietors of the gambling rooms, 22 St. Lawrence street, was begun yesterday afternoon in the Police Court. All were present except Messrs. Durkee and Fitzgerald, who are out of town. Messrs. R. E. Greenfield and R. C. Smith, who represented the prosecution and Mr. E. Guerin the defence.

FINANCIAL.

The Local Stock Market Was Dull And Weak.

Trading Restricted and at Lower Prices—Cable, Telegraph and Pacific Decline—New York Closes Strong—News From Washington.

Wednesday, Oct. 18.
The local stock exchange displayed more activity to-day than for some time, but the tone was very weak. Cable declined three points from yesterday's close, Telegraph two points and Pacific 2 points. The weakness was said to be in sympathy with New York yesterday. In this case a better market is expected to-morrow. Money is unchanged at 6 1/2 per cent. for call loans, while the sterling market is weak. Nothing doing in the New York market was better to-day and closed strong. This was according to a special despatch on account of Washington dispatches which indicated that the administration were against an adjournment of the Senate and Congress, while the present state of affairs in the Senate cannot be amended until the Silver Bill has been disposed of and this can only be gotten out of the way by compromise. Unconditional repeal cannot be accomplished.

In an interview in New York Judge Cooley says: "It is the duty of the Senate to break the existing deadlock. Members of the majority should make the proper motions and the presiding officer in the Senate should recognize them, which would bring the question to a vote at once." The Post, in its financial article, says: "Nothing could better illustrate the altered character of the situation, since the deadlock in the Senate began, than the common view of the investment problem. Six weeks ago, when the House of Representatives had cast its vote, early support to the markets from both home and foreign investors was anticipated. To-day the only question discussed is whether investors already in the market will not sell out. That they will not is not a certainty. Nor is it to this anyone a matter of surprise. The press of the whole world is canvassing the probabilities of dictation to the American people, by a dozen desperate and ignorant enthusiasts, on a financial question, the most critical character. One of these fanatics is on record as declaring, when the failure of Mitchell's Bank was announced to him last summer, that he was glad of it, and hoped that the rest of the national banks would follow. Another has proclaimed on the floor of the Senate that the opinion of no trained and eminent financier is worth a hearing. Several have protested and maintained in public that the panic of 1893 was deliberately planned at Mr. Williams' house by the Secretary of the Treasury and the New York Bank presidents and was forced upon the country with cool and calculating malice. Investors at home and abroad have read these mad deliriums. If a great congressional majority bends the knee in compromise to such a band of agitators, the watchers may be pardoned for imagining that a reign of terror in American legislation is near at hand. But for their confusion in steady demand and the price unchanged. Silver was up to 33 1/2, but closed weak on American selling. There were no applications to-day for India Council drafts. The stock market was neglected except for American, Holland sold at 100, but Cammick's broker coming in to buy Louisville's caused a bear stampede. Milwaukee & St. Paul also closed with the final prices the best.

To-day's highest, lowest and closing prices, the number of shares sold, and the net change from yesterday's closing prices for actual sales were as follows:

WILLARDS HAMLET

Boston Witnesses the Much-Talked-of Performance.

City Amusements—Some Good Attractions Promised—Facts About Downing—'Erminie' Under Rehearsal—'Lady Blarney' Coming Again.

Salvini presented "Ruy Blas" for the first time in Montreal at the Academy last night. From beginning to end the performance was of the same calibre as those of Monday and Tuesday. There was little cause for criticism, certainly as far as the star was concerned. From beginning to end the audience was fascinated and curtain calls were many.

THE QUEEN'S.
The program at the Queen's on Friday night, when the McGill "Meds" will attend for their theatre night, will include, in addition to the regular entertainment, a few features introduced especially for the occasion. Mr. James K. Hackett first came into prominence while a member of the Columbia College Dramatic Club. One of his greatest hits was an imitation of Carmichael, the famous Spanish dancer, who was so long the craze of New York. Hanging in the Queen's box office is a photo of Mr. Hackett as he is, and one in costume and make as Carmichael. The change is wonderful, and it is an interesting belief that he is the same man. The specialty will be introduced immediately after the last act, as the time required for the "make up" cannot be spared during the performance. Miss Louise Galloway, the little subrette, will sing several songs.

"ROMAN RYE."
That "Roman Rye," at the Royal, appeals to all classes and all ages is proven by the fact that crowds were turned away last night. It is a great show and has made a big hit.

AT THE THEATRE FRANCAIS.
The three-act comedy "Les Surprises du Divorce," which has been the attraction at the Theatre Francais for the past three nights of this week, was witnessed last evening by a good sized audience. The company is well adapted to comedy roles, as was evidenced by last night's performance. The story deals with the trials and tribulations of Henri Duval, a much-married man, who has an attraction to women in general, but the mother of his first wife in particular. This lady was a former ballet dancer and a veritable demon for creating discussions in the family circle. Through her instrumentality Duval became divorced from her daughter, his first wife. He subsequently marries the daughter of an old roue, Bourgeois, who then leaves for a continental tour. While on this trip the latter meets his son-in-law's former wife, and marries her after a three days courtship, believing her to be a widow. Bourgeois then returns to Duval's home, accompanied by his bride, and the redoubtable mother-in-law, intending to surprise the family. The scenes which ensue are intensely amusing, the poor son-in-law being saddled with two mothers-in-law, his former wife being a very clever. The usual accommodating friend, who is indispensable on such an occasion, makes his appearance; the old roue is divorced from his son-in-law's former wife and mother-in-law, and the latter drops on a peaceful family reunion. Messrs. Bisson and Girard interpreted the roles of Duval and Bourgeois in an exceedingly skillful manner, the honors being equally divided between them. Of the ladies Mme. Hovsey, Mme. Bonnard, as the mother-in-law, proved her ability as all around actress. Mme. Raymond, as Gabriel, the second wife, was very clever. The balance of the cast was well chosen, and the production and whole was entirely satisfactory. "Les Surprises du Divorce" will be repeated at the Saturday matinee. This evening, and for the ensuing evenings this week, "La Petite Marie" will hold the boards.

"ERMINIE" IS REHEARSED.
"Erminie," the well-known favorite comic opera, was rehearsed for the first time by the Montreal Amateur Operatic Club last night. From 8 to 10 o'clock last night Prof. Coture's library resounded with the good old catchy choruses, lullabies and songs of the dreamy opera. In fact it was not unlike a first performance in the opera's palmy days at the New York Casino. Everything points to a successful season for the club and the hits with the "Gendarmes" last year, it is safe to predict will be greater than ever. "Erminie." Besides the continuation of Prof. Coture's valuable services as director and conductor, and the popular principals including Messrs. Walker, Moylan, Hollinshead, and Ed. Yake, and Messrs. Cunningham and Bellhouse, much new talent has been added. The latter includes Messrs. Sobeski, Galarneau and Rickards who are all acquisitions for the cast. The chorus is splendidly augmented by both ladies and gentlemen with cultured voices. All took hold last night like professionals, and the phrasing, belting and flexibility of the voices presaged a delightful season for the amateur musicians. Prof. Coture made a happy complimentary inaugural speech to the members present, encouraging them to work hard and attend promptly and regularly every practice. Only one member of the caste has been assigned and that is the "Marquis" to Mr. Cunningham. In the soldiers' chorus of the first act, the marquis sings "A Soldier's Life," which is a poem, but Mr. Cunningham's voice is so admirably suited to it that few professionals could do better. Claxton Bellamy and Harry Paulson are the authors of the libretto, and Ed. Yake, and Messrs. Cunningham and Bellhouse, the music. The wealth of material to delight the eye, please the ear, pleasantly incite the risibilities and amuse, entertain and instruct.

DOWNING.
An American writer says: Robert Downing is one of the most successful actors who maintain in private life a popularity as commanding as the esteem in which they are held as actors. In his own home, Washington, D. C., he is the recipient of unusual social honors, and throughout the country he has already taken a warm place in the worthy of note that Mr. Downing is distinctively a man of the people. His career upon the stage has been a very successful one. Mr. Downing will be seen in repertoire all next week.

"LADY BLARNEY."
Annie Ward Tiffany will bring three daily hints from New York with her to the Queen's next week, during her performance of "Lady Blarney." This is Miss Tiffany's second visit to Montreal with her successful comedy she having appeared here last season, and scored an unmistakable "hit" for her excellent rendition of the jolly good natured quick witted Irish woman, a character true to life. She has surrounded herself with a company of exceptional talent, both for their ability as actors and actresses, as well as their reputation as vocalists, as singing has been introduced throughout the play this season. The sale of seats is now open.

MATTHEWS AND BULGER COMING.
From reports from other cities, it is more than probable that no better Vaudeville Company will visit this city during the coming theatrical season, than that which comes to the Theatre Royal next week. The organization, which is under the management of Alfred E. Aarons, is headed by Matthews and Bulger, two very clever comedians and parodists. They have been seen here before, and are deservedly popular with the great mass of theatre goers, who have listened to their funny songs and sayings. Prominent among the others in the company are Monroe and Mack in their funny black-face skits, the Navins, Dolan and Lenhar, Musical Dale, Minnie Kolin, Lillie Larkelle, Clara Bulger, Minnie Cascardi, Cella Mathers and May Vernon. The olio is followed by a rural farce-comedy in one act, written by Matthews and Bulger, entitled "Hey! Rub!"

MR. WILLARD IN HAMLET.
Mr. E. S. Willard gave his first performance of Hamlet at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, on Monday night. Extraordinary interest was taken in it; and the newspapers have elaborate criticisms of it. They do not agree by any means. The version was arranged by Mr. Willard himself from the folio of 1623, and very many familiar passages found a different rendering. He has cut the number of scenes from 18 to 10. He has also cut as far as possible the old-fashioned front scene, in which the lines of the play are generally spoken to the accompaniment of the noise of the hammers and voices of the scene-shifters. Those who can remember Mr. Fechter pausing in the front scene in the last act of "Hamlet" to remark upon the noise of the hammers and voices, "Horatio, when the carpenters are through with their noise, we will proceed with the play," will express no regret that Mr. Willard has dispensed with the front scene, although to accomplish that result he has had speeches introduced in unaccustomed places.

The New York Herald says: Mr. Willard has not copied his Hamlet after any one's else, but it is more Irving's than Booth's. His tendency to the melodramatic is irrepressible, and, though no passions are torn to tatters, on no occasion is an opportunity lost for comment; so that the effect upon an audience accustomed to Booth's studied and refined performance of this part is not satisfactory. Another noticeable thing in his performance is the offhand manner in which he reads some of Shakespeare's memorable lines. His soliloquies, beginning—"O, that this too, too solid flesh," and "To be or not to be," were too delivered in a manner below the standard of so scholarly and careful an actor.

The New York World says: The result of this endeavor of Mr. Willard was a triumph which has seldom been seen in Boston. The play was new, but not unfamiliar, but nothing for which a good and carefully founded reason could not be given. The first scene was, as was expected, a quiet one. Mr. Willard's version of the terrace scene, wherein Bernardo, Marcellus and Horatio meet the Ghost, was very quiet, and did not portray the vivid coloring of other tragedians. Mr. Willard's voice throughout was rich and resonant, penetrating every corner of the large theatre. Especially was this true in the ghost scene, in which he was rapturously applauded. His reading of the lines was most deliberate. Exceedingly strong was his delivery of the soliloquies.

In the fencing scene Mr. Willard discarded the time-worn use of foils, substituting in their place the long rapier and short dagger, which he handled in a masterly manner. The death scene was strong and stirring. The Boston Herald has signed articles from three Shakespearean critics. They agree substantially in saying that Mr. Willard's interpretation of the part is not tragic but melodramatic. The severest criticism was by Mr. Bull. A portion of this is given below:

Hamlet is an ambitious flight for Mr. Willard, as it is with, indeed, any actor. To make an even creditable appearance in the part is itself a victory; to achieve measurable success is a triumph. Bearing in mind the great actors I have seen in the part, I cannot honestly credit Mr. Willard with either. His entire performance was crude. It never on any single occasion rose above mediocrity, and for the most part fell below it. It appeared to be the effort of a schoolboy or an amateur; was ill digested and painfully lacking in a just and well defined comprehension.

In the great majority of Mr. Willard's readings he was entirely unsatisfactory, and he failed to give his lines that due force and volume which is their due. This was noticeable almost from the very start, and the delivery of his first soliloquy commencing,

"O, that this too, too solid flesh would melt, thaw and resolve itself into dew," was not only colorless, but it was delivered on a monotonous plane, and with an almost entire absence of elocutionary effort. The speech fell flat, and did not get a hand of applause.

With the long speech beginning

"Now I am alone, O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!" Mr. Willard ran to the other extreme, and for the most part he appeared to tear the passion to tatters, especially in that part of the speech:

An In a coward!
Who calls me villain? Breaks my pate across
Plucks out my beard and blows it in my face!
Tweaks me by the nose! Gives me the lie in the throat,
As deep as the lungs! etc.

That charming piece of philosophy, "To be or not to be," lost in force and dignity by being given by the actor seated in a chair, and with too much suggestion of the hands and arms, and the whole speech in its reflective nature had very little about it of "the pale cast of thought." The speech was delivered by Mr. Willard through the night was that to Horatio:

"Nay, do not think I flatter;
For what advancement may I hope from thee?
That no revenue had but thy good spirits
To feed and clothe thee?"

Yet the effort of this first grave digger, which Mr. Willard made in a chair, and Horatio kept all the time in a painful position. But as this was well delivered, and in an elocutionary point of view was the gem of the evening, so the famous advice to the players was about the worst effort of the night.

"In the interview with the Ghost, Mr. Willard was altogether too melodramatic; in that with Ophelia, where she returns his presents, he was too tame; but in the closet scene with his mother, he made some amendments, and acted and spoke judiciously.

"There was no piece of business in the graveyard scene which deserves severe condemnation, and which was, indeed, the step from the sublime to the ridiculous. It was the entrance of the second grave digger, with a large flag of liquor, which the first grave digger drinks while he is making the grave. It was repulsive to one's sensibility. There can be no doubt that grave-diggers drink while engaged in their occupation, but it is in very bad taste to show it upon the stage. All readers of Shakespeare know that the first grave digger says to his assistant: "Fetch me a stoup of liquor," but there is no edition of Shakespeare extant wherein the assistant returns, and the innovation is one not to be countenanced."

All the papers agree that the play is superbly staged. One of the Herald's critics says: "In the staging of the play Mr. Willard won a great success. Much of his new business is also excellent. His constant handling of the little crucifix, which hangs from his neck, is admirable and consistent with the character. The management for the night play is to be commended, and the conclusion of that scene is exciting and yet in perfect keeping with the spirit of the tragedy. His duel with Laertes, using both rapier and dagger is a happy thought, supported by the text. The use which is made of draperies is skilful and serviceable. The final scene of the play, full of action and is managed with excellent good judgment. Many other points of stage management might be cited and commended."

Mr. Willard's Hamlet will be seen in Montreal this season.

TEMPEST LEAVES HILL.
Miss Marie Tempest and Mr. J. M. Hill have parted company as star and manager. The troubles which caused the break have been brewing for some time, but the grand finale only came yesterday, when Miss Tempest wrote out and handed Mr. Hill her resignation and Mr. Hill accepted it—to take effect at once. It would appear that the cause of the split was the discharge from the company of Julieton Steger, the baritone, who sang favorite; and she now has a very respectable vote and is fourth in the competition. Mrs. McNally has a well-stocked news store. She carries stationery, books, periodicals, newspapers, toys, postage stamps and all the other articles that can be found in a good stationery store. The business was started five years ago. Mr. McNally died seven years ago, and since then Mrs. McNally has carried it on. It has grown steadily until now it is the biggest business of its kind in that section of the city. Mrs. McNally is very popular in the neighborhood, and she and her husband intend to try and send her to Chicago on a Herald ticket.

CITY HALL NEWS.
A Doubt as to Whether Amendments will be Made to the Charter.
Ald. Beausell has written a long letter to the Mayor protesting that the Board of Chairmen and the City Clerk have no right to petition the Legislature for charter amendments before first asking leave of the City Council to do so. He claims such an action is without precedent. The question will probably be discussed at next Monday's Council meeting. Mr. Davis said the Council was at liberty to accept or reject the proposed amendments, but as the question was an urgent one, the notices had to be advertised without the sanction of that body. The City Attorney has said the Board of Aldermen can do nothing, as Monday will be too late to authorize the amendments.

It is possible that there may be no amendments after all, and that the amendments which were proposed to increase the blocking of the plan.

It is understood that the Mayor has asked City Treasurer Robt. for a financial statement of the condition of the city treasury. It is said that the million dollar harbor loan has been temporarily for current expenses.

But the shanties which are not in it, as compared to the manner in which the city officials are tossed about with regard to the salary reduction question.

ROAD COMMITTEE MEETS.
The Road Committee held a short session yesterday afternoon and listened to a number of complaints. Mr. James Coristine was the only speaker. He presented a petition signed by the majority of the property owners of the street, the matter would be considered.

Mr. H. Roy, as a resident of Sherbrooke Street, next complained of the slowness of the street car. He said that the car had been completed from the west to St. Charles Borromeo Street, and from the east to St. Dominique Street. The work was now to be completed from the west to only about 200 feet remaining to be completed.

Mr. St. George explained that the reason the work was stopped was that the cement had not been properly prepared in such cold weather.

Mr. Roy also complained of the substitution of block stone crossings for the old flag stone. He considered the latter to have given much more general satisfaction.

REPAIRS FOR SEWERS.
The contract for the construction of sewers, "orders for which were called for some time ago, has been awarded to Mr. L. Bellumier. Mr. Bellumier's figures are as follows: Bourgeois street, from Leber to Nelson streets, $4.88; Claron street, from Leber to Dyke streets, $4.88; Montcalm street, from Craig to Notre Dame streets, $6.88. Rock excavation in each case, $4.

Ross' Cuban.
Five cents each: $3 per hundred. 29 Chabouli square, opp. No. 4 Fire Station.

Gentlemen wishing to have their clothes cleaned, dyed or repaired can have them done at Ross' Cuban establishment, 47 Beaver Hall Hill.

BREVITIES.

The case in connection with the St. Gabriel Church trouble comes up before the Court to-day.

A fire took place in the house of Mrs. R. Y. Sproner, 146 Peel street, yesterday at 6:30 p.m. caused by the bursting of some pipes. Damage about $500.

A 15-year-old boy named R. Brunet fell down The Herald stairs yesterday at noon and broke his ankle. He was conveyed to Notre Dame Hospital and is doing well.

It has been decided to continue the two divisions of the Enquete and Merits Courts until the end of the present month, and also to have the sitting continue through November.

Green, the man who was arrested on an alleged charge of robbery, Messrs. Solate Bros. of several thousand dollars, was brought up yesterday afternoon before Judge Dugas and remanded to jail until to-day for want of bail.
