Propane gas blast guts Cowansville home

EXPLOSION — The back wall of the Rudolph Tropper home is shown as it appeared after being blown out by the force of a propane explosion which destroyed the house's interior yesterday morning. (Record photo by Studio Eclair)

(Record staff reporter)

COWANSVILLE — (Staff)—Alerted by a blast that sounded like a thunderclap, a Cowansville resident ran to strip the burning clothes from two men and to beat out the flames with his bare hands.

Gratien Dube was just leaving his home to go to work when the blast, and debris flying from the nearby house of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Tropper, 129 Westmount Street, sent him running to the site of a propane gas explosion that resulted in injuries to four persons.

Injured are Rudolph Tropper, 129 Westmount Street who was suffering from nervous shock and his wife who suffered minor burns and was badly cut on her left arm.

The two men saved by Mr. Dube received second degree burns to their arms, faces, knees and backs. They were Fernand Charbonneau, 215 James Street, and Bruno Rivard, 205 Laroque Street, plumbers who were working in the basement of the Tropper home.

The tank exploded while the two plumbers were working on the water heating system in the Tropper's basement. The water is heated by propane gas.

The explosion, which occurred at 10:28 a.m., tore out walls and floors, leaving only a shell which, except for a few broken windows and a broken black stump of a chimney, looked almost untouched.

FIRE ONLY MINOR

The Cowansville Fire Department arrived on the scene almost immediately, but Cowansville Police Chief Ernest Deschamps told the Record that there was only a minor fire burning in the basement.

One of the first men at the site of the explosion was Gratien Dube, who lives just a few houses away.

Mr. Dube, who was on his way to work said that as he was leaving his house he heard a loud sharp noise that sounded like a thunderclap and saw debris thrown into the air.

He arrived at the Tropper home just in time to see one of the plumbers come running out of the side door with his clothes and hair aflame and screaming for help.

He was followed by the other plumber whose clothes were also on fire.

Mr. Dube stripped them both of their shirts and beat out the flames with his bare hands. He said that he was helped by someone else but he doesn't know who it was.

"While all this was going on," he said, "I was not looking around to see if anybody I knew was there."

Mr. Dube said that one of the plumbers was very badly burnt. "His right hand was wide open," he said, "and you could see the burnt flesh."

Both men, he said, were able to walk, and didn't seem to be too badly injured aside from their burns, which, he added, turned their skins beige and burnt all their hair.

Mr. Dube said that Mrs. Tropper came out of the house with a badly cut left arm and a large kitchen knife in her right hand. Mr. Tropper, who was reportedly lying down at the time of the explosion, staggered out in a daze.

Police say that it was a miracle that Mr. Tropper, who is 68 years old, managed to escape.

The police added that the damage was considerable, furniture wrecked and the walls and floors blown apart. However, no estimate of the damage has been made.

Laura Secord's cow a figment of folklore; there was no cow, no sentries, no fight

By JACK HUTTON

THE best-known animal in Canadian history is Laura Secord's cow, the docile beast which accompanied her when she set out to warn the British of an American attack in June, 1813.

Ask any schoolchild. He'll tell you that Laura led the cow from her Queenston home through sentry lines of U.S. troops to the headquarters of Lt. James Fitzgibbon who was able to defeat the attacking Americans near St. Catharines.

It's a charming tale, evoking among Canadians the pride in history which Americans find in such folk heroes as Davy Crockett and Daniel Boone.

But there are one or two flaws. First, there was no cow. There were no sentries. And Fitzgibbon's soldiers didn't fire a shot during the encounter near St. Catharines.

BOVINE MYTH
But even 153 years after Laura's trek, the cow lives on in history. It has more lives than a wily alley cat. A generation of historians have tried to dispel this bovine myth without success.

For the record, let's clear away the cobwebs by reviewing what actually happened 153 years ago.

The Americans had captured Fort George several weeks earlier on the Canadian side of the Niagara River, giving them control of that area. Queenston, about eight miles away, was also in their hands.

Laura, according to the stono mention of the incident. Yet he knew the family well. An affidavit written by Fitzgibbon in 1837 agrees that Laura made the walk. Why did she seek the affidavit?

In 1864, the cow was born — 51 years after the walk. Col. W. F. Coffin embellished the story of the walk with the cow in The War of 1812 and its Moral. (His authenticity might be judged by the fact that he changed "Laura" to "Mary.")

Laura finally won a pension of 100 pounds a year in 1860, granted by the visiting Prince of Wales. By the end of the century such pamphlets as The Story of the Woman Who Made Confederation Possible were common. A statue was unveiled to her memory.

And then, horror of horrors, scholars started rereading accounts of the time, including the testimony of American officers involved. The lid blew off in 1932 when Dr. W. S. Stewart (then with the University of Toronto) wrote a school history which did not include Laura.

In vain Dr. Stewart protested that he was not condemning the Queenston lady or her walk. A review of the historical evidence had convinced him that her walk had no effect on the battle.

Her story first appeared in public print in 1853 as a footnote to a magazine series on the War of 1812 (Anglo-American Magazine, Vol. III, P. 467). That started the ball rolling, although slowly at first.

LAURA AND HER COW IN HISTORICAL HOKUM

Some historians see a link between it and a petition which Laura made in 1839 for the ferry lease at Queenston. It was turned down.

In 1841, the year her husband died, Laura again wrote to Sir George Arthur, the Lieutenant Governor, requesting a pension and retelling her story. She was turned down again.

When did she first mention it to friends, relatives or neighbors? It's strange that a history of the war written by a Niagara schoolmaster, David Thompson, in 1832, makes and possibly Greenwich Village atmosphere."

According to provincial legislation the student rate of pay is 80 cents an hour plus tips. But, 10 cents an hour may be deducted for the first month (apprenticeship pay) and $15 per week may be deducted for room and board.

The former to be "reasonably furnished, properly lighted, heated and ventilated" but not a few students have found themselves paying their $15 for sleeping six in a room or on a mattress on the floor of a no-longer-rentable cottage.

Tippling at the small resort is negligible. So, although your student does get all the fresh air and swimming he wants for free, he's lucky if he makes $10 a week — a sum he probably scorned as an allowance the rest of the year.

Aside from low pay and questionable accommodation, what about the moral climate?

Though Banff is admittedly the go-go centre for the Junior Jet Set, students, albeit guardedly, admit that the warm sand and moonlight of any resort can do things to your no power.

Parents, teachers and church leaders spend the 10 school months seeing that your people have good companions, enough rest and safe surroundings.

But for two months each summer they let them consort, unchaperoned, with anyone who has the price of resort lodgings, work up to 10 hours a day for peanuts and sleep in potential fire traps.

What kind of summer madness is this?

UN concerned since Sputnik

Space law program is stalled by preoccupation with Viet Nam

By AARON EINFRAK

UNITED NATIONS—(TNS)—One sees—few tangible effects of the Vietnam war at the United Nations in New York, but oddly enough the war has stalled U.N. efforts to extend the rule of law into outer space.

Almost since the first Sputnik circled the globe in 1957, the U.N. has been interested in the peaceful use of outer space. In 1963 there was a big breakthrough in the U.N. effort when the General Assembly unanimously passed a declaration which laid down the following principles:

1. "Exploration and use of outer space shall be carried on for the benefit and the interests of mankind."
2. "Outer space and celestial bodies are free for exploration and use by all states on a basis of equality and in accordance with international law."
3. "Outer space and celestial bodies are not subject to national appropriation by the claim of sovereignty, by means or use of occupation, or by any other means."
4. "Activities of states in the exploration and use of outer space shall be carried on in accordance with international law, including the charter of the United Nations, in the interest of maintaining peace and security and promoting international co-operation and understanding."

The Assembly in 1963 also unanimously passed a resolution, which asked all states "to refrain from placing in orbit around the earth any objects carrying nuclear weapons or other weapons of mass destruction, installing such weapons in celestial bodies, or stationing such weapons in any outer space in any other manner." Although the U.S. and Russia expressed reservations as to whether the resolution outlawing weapons in space is binding in all circumstances, both big powers voted for the resolution as well as for the declaration.

Because of this Soviet-US unity, there was optimism that the Assembly's Outer Space Committee would have no trouble in drafting legally binding conventions or treaties concerning space matters.

However the Vietnam war has made the Soviets reluctant to get too publicly chummy with the Americans, probably because Moscow fears that such chummyism would cause Peking to step up its anti-Soviet propaganda attacks about the alleged "collusion" between the Americans and Russians in world affairs.

Two draft conventions currently stalled in the Outer Space Committee concern damage liability and the return of wayward astronauts and their spacecraft to the country of origin.

MONTREAL (CP)—A meeting of 400 members of the Quebec Provincial Police Association voted by a "strong majority" early today to go on strike next Thursday if their demands are not met by the Quebec government.

The association, which claims to represent 1,800 of the force's 2,300 men, issued a warning to the government Tuesday that the vote would be held. The poll was carried out by secret ballot.

Meanwhile, it was learned in Ottawa Friday night that three companies of the Royal 22nd Regiment—about 430 men—and four RCAF Hercules transport planes were standing by near Quebec City for possible police duties if the strike occurs.

The association is asking immediate recognition of their organization, source deduction of union fees from pay cheques and submission of any problems between the association members and the justice department to an impartial body for consideration.

The exact figures of the balloting were not immediately available. However, Robert Burns, legal adviser to the association, said he estimated "about 80 per cent" of those attending voted in favor of strike action.

It is expected a committee will be named today, Mr. Burns said, to consider setting up plans for staffing essential services only. These would include the homicide, traffic and robbery services.

News in brief

MP under fire

OTTAWA (CP)—A Quebec Liberal MP wants the Commons committee on privileges and elections to look into "irresponsible" statements by a Quebec Creditiste MP.

Auguste Choquette (L.—Lotbiniere) raised the matter during a supply debate in the Commons Friday.

He said statements by Raymond Langlois (Creditiste—Me-gantic) in the Commons Wednesday had blackened the reputation of the Quebec village of Notre-Dame-de-la-Grande.

Named to post

OTTAWA (CP)—Keith T. Bradley, 43, of Knowlton, Que., has been appointed co-ordinator of community development series in the forestry department's rural development branch, the department announced Friday.

Strike protest

QUEBEC (CP)—Some 1,600 striking professional employees of the Quebec government are planning to march on the provincial legislature here next Wednesday in protest of alleged slowness in negotiating by the government representatives.

A union spokesman said Friday, Andre Marcoux, president of the six-union council of the Professional Public Employees Union, an affiliate of the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions, made the announcement in a statement issued here.

Big promises

MONTREAL (CP)—Keeping promises made in the heat of an election campaign can be an expensive proposition.

In the campaign for Quebec's June 5 provincial election, Premier Jean Lesage has announced plans for projects expected to cost more than $500,000,000.

Talks Monday

OTTAWA (CP)—Emergency talks aimed at settling the strike by longshoremen at three Quebec ports resume in Montreal Sunday following a seven-hour session in Ottawa Friday night.

Claims US plot

HAVANA (AP)—Prime Minister Fidel Castro said Friday night he is convinced the United States is planning "armed aggression" against Cuba and ordered a state of alert for Cuba's 100,000-man armed forces.

Students may face sweat-shop job

By GLADYS TAYLOR
(Record book page editor)

WHAT ABOUT that resort job? This is the time of year when thousands of students are dumped on the labor market. Many of them are so thankful to get a job they will take anything.

At the same time their parents buy the fresh air and swimming that goes with a resort job, so everyone agrees junior's summer employment is a steal. But is it?

In Canada the national focal point for resort employment is Banff. Promise of free transportation gets young people from coast to coast vying for jobs there. Others, hearing that all the action is in the foothills, talk their parents into a summer arts course or an after-exams rest cure there. With the result that Banff is rapidly becoming Canada's mid-summer answer for Fort Lauderdale's Easter bacchanalia.

Father Paul O'Byrne, president of the Banff Welfare Council, is concerned. Of the young people who flock there in their thousands he says: "They are underpaid for their work and overcharged for their accommodation. We have sent letters to many communities urging parents to keep their children at home. Banff is no place for the unattended teen-ager under 18."

Students who went the resort job route last summer say: "If you work at a posh lodge, you're all right. Tips are good and they have dorm mothers."

"But, if you get a job at one of the smaller resorts — and these make up most of the jobs available — you may be in for sweat-shop wages, Dickensian accommodations and possibly Greenwich Village atmosphere."

According to provincial legislation the student rate of pay is 80 cents an hour plus tips. But, 10 cents an hour may be deducted for the first month (apprenticeship pay) and $15 per week may be deducted for room and board.

The former to be "reasonably furnished, properly lighted, heated and ventilated" but not a few students have found themselves paying their $15 for sleeping six in a room or on a mattress on the floor of a no-longer-rentable cottage.

CBC 'regrets'

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC board of directors said Friday that Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre, co-hosts of the television program This Hour Has Seven Days, will not be returned to the program. But it left the door open for them to work in other corporation productions.

The board said it regrets that management by-passed executive producer Douglas Leiterman in making the decision not to renew the hosts' contracts, but added that it "still believes" the reasons for the decision "are cogent and that the action based on them... was justified."

In a recent duplicate game every South pair played some contract in hearts, most of them were in game. The hand could be described as a lay-down in that it should be made, but about half the declarers overlooked the winning line of play.

South ruffs the second diamond and can count 10 potential winners. Five trumps, four clubs and a spade. The difficulty lies in the fact that South cannot afford to draw trumps until after he establishes all his side suit winners. Those declarers who drew trumps never got to make their

Blossom time picture time in ET

This week the leaves unfurl in a matter of hours and the wild cherry trees with thousands of blossoms now compete the beautiful spring picture. Blossom time is picture time because it gives a variety of color to green fields. It contrasts with the surrounding countryside when taking landscape scapes.

Either black and white or color film can be used for interesting pictures but when using black and white, attention must be given to composing the scene. Camera angles that give the most pleasing effect are had by watching where the blossoms covered trees are in relation to the background such as mountains or hills.

Close-ups of branches covered with blossoms are another way to capture the Maytime mood.

Exposure must be carefully judged or a meter should be used as overexposure will destroy the detail of the petals and pastel coloring which make up the shape of blossoms.

Filters can be of use to darken the blue sky for contrast against white petals.

When using color film, contrast is automatic as the different colors will pick out your subject. Composition and exposure are your main problems.

Whether you use color or black and white a few close-ups are a good rule as they give variety to a slide show and also make fine enlargements when using black and white.

Some of your best color pictures can be taken at this time of year. Young leaves and grass are fresh and clean like a new coat of paint.

However, it suffers from being too similar. All the greens in grass and leaves are in the same hue. But because of their freshness the mood of spring is evident everywhere and blossom laden trees make very beautiful and interesting pictures.

Whether black and white or color, blossom time is picture time so don't forget the close-ups.

WE HAVE A NEW CORRESPONDENT with us this week, who likes to go under the name of Miss X. The school she reports from is ASJM High in Thetford Mines. Miss X writes that she considers High Times interesting and informative. She tells us that on May 20 the school held its first annual track and field meet. It was a great success as the teachers judged the events throughout the whole day for both lower grades and high school students. Ribbons were awarded to winners in all activities which included high jump, broad jump, shot put, hundred yard dash, and many others. Our new correspondent agrees that although studies and grades are in the student's minds these days the latter is getting more attention. The one at Miss X's school is on June 3. A South Seas Island theme is promised.

AND THEN THERE WAS Marymount High's Grad Dance entitled Sun over Naples. The kids at the dance really amused themselves. The band was very good and that was the most important thing. The decor was an Italian wine cellar, where grape juice was served as refreshments. Balloons formed the false ceiling which was let down near mid night and then you should have heard the noise. Many parents brought movie cameras, and until past 10 p.m. parents could be seen taking pictures.

LAST NIGHT Sherbrooke High had its Graduation Dance. Many students of the school and several teachers were present. Next week we shall be able to go into more details of the Grad Dance. Because this is the tail end of High Times and the presses of the Record are about to move.

RENE "REG" BOILEAU, a former student at St. Pat's, has made it big on the pop music scene with his band "THE MUNKS" (They wear monk robes and sandals no less) who are one of Montreal's top groups. They have just released another 45 for Columbia Records called "Long Time Coming." It's worth a listen.

Quebec Odd Fellows open sessions

Financially aiding the purchase of 17 wheelchairs in Quebec is one of the ways the Independent Order of Odd Fellows meets the challenge of present day needs for fraternalism.

Sovereign Grand Master James Main of British Columbia as guest speaker at last night's banquet in New Sherbrooke Hotel of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Quebec annual two-day sessions described the evolution of the order and its role in the modern world.

Mr. Main pointed out that the order was first set up so members could help each other in time of need.

However, in today's welfare state the only meaningful role is to help everyone in need since the state has taken over part of the order's responsibility in helping people.

Having a tremendous force for good in the world, the order bases its philosophy on what it can do to help others, Mr. Main said.

What are projects within this framework undertaken by the order?

In Quebec the major project of the past year has been to financially aid the purchase of 17 wheelchairs which are available for loaning to anyone in need.

Projects of the order throughout North America include sponsoring homes for children or the aged; donating $625,000 through an invested share for the study at John Hopkins Hospital of eye disease; a pilgrimage by high school students to visit the United Nations in New York to better understand the organization; lending money at low rates for university education.

Annual sessions were held yesterday and continue today in the Unity Lodge Rooms on Wellington Street North. Melville McHugh of Lennoxville was elected Grand Patriarch of the Grand Encampment Friday.

The Rebekah Assembly of Quebec session convenes today in the New Sherbrooke Hotel under the chairmanship of President Mrs. Jennie Helm of Huntingdon. Meanwhile the Grand Lodge of Quebec opened sessions this morning in the Unity Lodge with Grand Master Preston Schoelcraft presiding.

Two hundred and 15 members attended last night's banquet and guest Odd Fellow members were present from Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, Rhode Island, California, Ontario, the Maritimes.

Mr. Allan has been a member of the Bishop's College School faculty since 1964. From 1960 to 1964 he was a mathematics teacher in Montreal. He is a graduate of McGill University.

Fined $300 for assault

A Windsor man was fined $300 yesterday in Sherbrooke's Court of Sessions in connection with assault and causing bodily harm to a Windsor woman.

Paul Simoneau, 39, pleaded guilty before Sessions of the Peace Judge Benoit Turmel to the charge.

According to Windsor Police Simoneau hit Mrs. Neil Cyr yesterday with his bare fists on the face, legs and arm. She was taken to St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, Sherbrooke, where she was released later the same day.

Crown Prosecutor Guy Blanchette told the court that Simoneau had a previous conviction on the same charge.

According to the Crown Prosecutor the crime occurred when Mrs. Cyr wanted to enter her car but Simoneau refused to allow her to do so. Simoneau became angry and attacked her.

TRAVELLING TECHNICIAN — Miss Margaret Merrill of Lennoxville sets off for a trip to a patient's home, perhaps in Sherbrooke or maybe as far as Cookshire. As the Sherbrooke Hospital pathology laboratory's travelling technician, she visits patients who are not well enough to travel to the hospital and not sick enough to occupy a hospital bed. On the request of their doctor she collects from them body fluid samples such as blood which are brought back to the laboratory for tests, revealing the patient's progress to the attending physician.

The Pathology Laboratory - 3 Hospital services go to the patient

By BARBARA STEVENSON (Record Staff reporter)

A woman on the move at Sherbrooke Hospital is Margaret Merrill whose job as travelling lab technician plays a vital role in the hospital's ever-increasing community services.

Each day Miss Merrill sets off for either a local home in Sherbrooke or Lennoxville or perhaps 20 miles away to one of the surrounding small towns. Since she has lived in the Townships all her life, Miss Merrill knows the area inside out.

With her she brings equipment to gather samples of body fluids such as blood from patients who are not well enough to travel to Sherbrooke Hospital but are not sick enough to occupy a hospital bed.

The unique idea of tying in distant patients to Sherbrooke Hospital was put into action in 1959 by its pathologist, Dr. Walter Kintzen.

"Sherbrooke Hospital lives with its community and there is no nobler task to serve the community than making it easy for our elderly citizens to get the necessary requirements," he explained.

Few other hospitals operate such a service.

Many of Miss Merrill's visits are made to elderly patients or people who are just home from being hospitalized. Often she returns to the same patients, becoming well-acquainted with them.

In many a way, she is a right hand to the country doctor with his five senses and instincts to discover a patient's illness and required cure. Once a specimen of blood, for example, is collected, the technician returns to the Sherbrooke Hospital pathology laboratory where scientific tests tell the patient's doctor just what he wants to know.

They can find out if their patients have a heart disease, perhaps anemia or appendicitis from tests lab technicians carry out. His load is thus lightened as is the patient's since he does not have to travel to the hospital while ill.

Such trips are only made on the request of the treating physician.

The hospital which has continued this service for the last six years is now planning its annual fund-raising campaign which aims to collect $65,000. Held from May 9 to 31, the campaign is necessary to raise funds to carry on Sherbrooke Hospital's high standard of medical care.

Librarians to study association

During their annual meeting in Sherbrooke over the weekend, some 80 librarians from the province will spend a large share of their time in the study of a project for the establishment of a professional corporation. The proposal for the creation of a corporation of professional librarians follows a year-long study of the professional status of librarians in Quebec by a joint committee of the Canadian Association of French Language Librarians and the Quebec Librarian Association (a bilingual organization).

The suggested proposal is being discussed at a round table on Saturday afternoon session in the University Library of Sherbrooke. Panelists participating will be: Mr. G. Forget, director of the Documentation Centre at Laval University Library, Mr. K. Crouch librarian of St. George's Williams University, Professor R. Lachapelle, from the Faculty of Law of Montreal University and Reverend Father E. Desrochers, librarian of the Maison Bellair.

The librarians' congress, taking place between Saturday morning and Sunday afternoon, will end up with the voting on resolution and the election of the executive. Saturday night, during a dinner at Hovey Manor in North Hatley, the guest speaker will be Jacques Simard, industrial and town-planner, president of Franco-American Chemical Co. and of the magazine "Vie des Arts".

Miss Miriam H. Tees, librarian of the Royal Bank of Canada in Montreal, and president of the Association will chair the meetings. Sunday, the delegates will visit the libraries of Bishop's University in Lennoxville.

Experimental Farm plans buildings

The Experimental Farm in Lennoxville, plans to build two new additional buildings to the farm this fall.

Still in the planning stage is a barn designed to accommodate 122 dairy cows and 72 calves; construction is planned for October.

In the more advanced stage of the farm's development is a building designed for storage of experimental service experiments.

This building will be of the prefabricated variety and construction is slated to start this summer.

The plans for the dairy barn are being prepared by the firm of architects, Boulanger, Faucher and Gagnon.

Facts and figures for tourists brought up to date by the city

Three detailed, up-to-date brochures on the "Queen City of the Eastern Townships" were presented to Sherbrooke's Tourist Bureau by Alderman Robert Gauthier Friday morning.

The brochures, prepared by the King Street tourist bureau directed by Louis-Philippe Demers answered more than 65,000 requests for information, marking a six per cent increase over the previous year.

Already the increase in activity at the bureau has reached about eight per cent more than normal. With the addition of an assistant to Mr. Demers, Miss Madeleine Champoux, the bureau will soon remain open from 9 to 5 p.m. through out the year and until 9 p.m. during the busiest tourist season. The office closes Saturday only from 12 to 1:30 p.m.

The booklets recently published are brightened by many photos of Sherbrooke land marks such as Magog River dams, local industries, churches, the municipal zoo, the court house and Howardene Residence.

The future is not ignored either as models of Sherbrooke's centennial fountain project and chalet for the 1967 world ski championships are included.

Outlining the city's history, one brochure terms Sherbrooke the hub of activity in a territory of more than 600,000 inhabitants. All roads lead to Sherbrooke: Eastern Townships Autoroute, Highways 1, 5 and 22.

A third brochure gives detailed facts of Sherbrooke set out in straightforward, alphabetical order. Included are lists of streets and their locations, highways, bridges, parks, hotels, motels, camping, tourist homes, transportation, interesting sites and industries.

Facts and figures are included which many Sherbrooke residents perhaps do not know: the city's population has more than doubled in 25 years, from 35,965 in 1941 to 72,058 now. 82 per cent of the population are French, 18 English and other. The total number of beds in the five hospitals is 957; 123 people are employed by the fire department; and 135 work in the police department while 26 are trainees.

Canadian forces linger in Cyprus

Canadians will give sympathetic understanding to the vexation displayed by United Nations Secretary-General U Thant over the situation in Cyprus.

He is critical of the fact that while UN troops, including Canadian regiments, have been stationed on the troubled island for 30 months, the dispute between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots seems no nearer a solution than when the international army first landed.

Due largely to the UN peacekeeping force, the warring factions have been separated and their guns silenced. But the island's economy remains severely depressed, resulting in widespread unemployment and privation with the accompanying dissatisfaction which breeds racial hatred.

Mr. Thant has voiced the opinion that the United Nations Security Council should try to break the impasse so he could get the troops out of there.

This view will be shared by the families of Canadian servicemen who are carrying out the unpleasant task of maintaining an uncertain peace on the island and by the Canadian government which must foot the bills for its contingent.

The Congo has proved that some issues can eventually be resolved to the point where UN forces can be withdrawn.

However, the antagonists being kept apart by United Nations forces elsewhere are not likely to fade away as the Congolese rebels did. Time is one of the most important elements in any effort to soften adamant attitudes and it may lead gradually to some sort of accommodation.

Thus there is some consolation for Mr. Thant and the Canadian troops in the thought that the United Nations has been effective in keeping these troubled areas relatively quiet.

Thus the diplomats are given the badly-needed time in which to work.

If the boss is as dumb as some employees say, how did he get to be boss?

Hayden S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR:

Bobolink a bird like no other one

There is no bird to compare with the bobolink. When meadow grasses are heading and golden hearted daisies star the green carpet, bobolinks pour out bubbling, rollicking music. Notes tumble forth so rapidly one can scarcely follow them. The spirit of true spring is in the music; it is joyful with the gladness of new life. It is part of the basic goodness and heart lift of a new season.

The male is a handsome fellow with a black head, mustard yellow neck, cream buff hues on his back and a patch of white on his shoulders. The males arrive a week or two ahead of the females, and it is after the latter arrive that the exuberant music begins. Across the fields and meadows the males dash hither and yon, pouring out torrents of song. Sometimes when a male is courting his lady love, he lights on the ground, spreads his tail and drags it in the manner of a pigeon.

The nest is usually on the ground, well concealed in grasses with four or five grayish eggs streaked with brown. When housekeeping time arrives, the male stands guard. After the eggs hatch, this harlequin of the meadows does his full share in providing crickets, bugs and other food. But now the bobolinks are filled with the joy of the season. Through long sunny days, the music tumbles from their throats. In their irrepressible, gleeful notes, the daisy field musicians are part of the life surge of a new season.

Other papers say:

Hard workers not wanted by union

It seems that the best way to hold on to one's job these days is to avoid working too hard.

At least, that seems to be the philosophy of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers which recently exhibited the kind of childish, narrow behavior which is such a discredit to the trade union movement.

Recently, a group of university students were hired as electricians' helpers by Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. to work on a northern development project.

For many students, a summer job means a great deal, and these jobs are often hard to come by. The money which a student earns during this four-month period is vital if he is to finance his way through the coming university year.

But, the young people hired as electricians' helpers up north apparently made a mistake. So anxious were they to prove their worth that they worked too hard. The trade-unionist electricians objected to such evidence of willingness to do an honest day's work. They objected to the presence of the students. They threatened to quit their jobs if the young people were retained.

In retaliation against their show of industry, the students were dismissed.

Western Liberals must be united

Mr. Gildas Molgat should receive wide support across the prairies for his views on the need for a united Liberal voice from the West at the next convention of the party, and also on Mr. Walter Gordon's economic policies for Canada as they would affect this part of the country.

As the Manitoba Liberal leader pointed out, the prairies cannot afford any substantial cutback in foreign capital investment, as proposed by the former minister of finance. Alberta oil prosperity is built on foreign investment. Foreign capital underwrote Saskatchewan's potash industry, and that province's latest economic plum, the mill at Prince Albert, is partially the result of foreign capital also.

If Mr. Gordon's economic policies had been in force, it is probable that Alberta's oil industry would be much smaller than it is today; Saskatchewan would have no potash industry; Manitoba would have no Nelson River development. The implementation of Mr. Gordon's ideas now would certainly mean a slowdown in Western development, for the very good reason that if the West were to depend on Eastern capital to finance its natural resources it would wait a long, long time before these resources were developed.

The concentration of power within the Liberal party lies in central Canada — in Ontario and Quebec. As a result, party policy has been directed largely towards holding and consolidating these provinces. The West has been badly neglected.

Admittedly the blame is not all on one side. There has been too little co-ordination and co-operation among Liberals in the three prairie provinces. They have, in the past, spoken with three rather weak and disjointed voices at party gatherings.

Co-operation, of the kind proposed by Mr. Molgat, would weld the three voices into one, immeasurably louder and stronger. The idea deserves the unconditional support of all Western Liberals.

The finest words build no houses

On Saturday we remarked, in this space, on the soaring costs of housing.

The same subject has been worrying Industry Minister Drury. In a speech last week he noted that the Economic Council of Canada had estimated that by 1970 expenditures on residential construction alone will increase by 50 percent over the 1963 level. The council was concerned about the need to improve productivity to meet this demand.

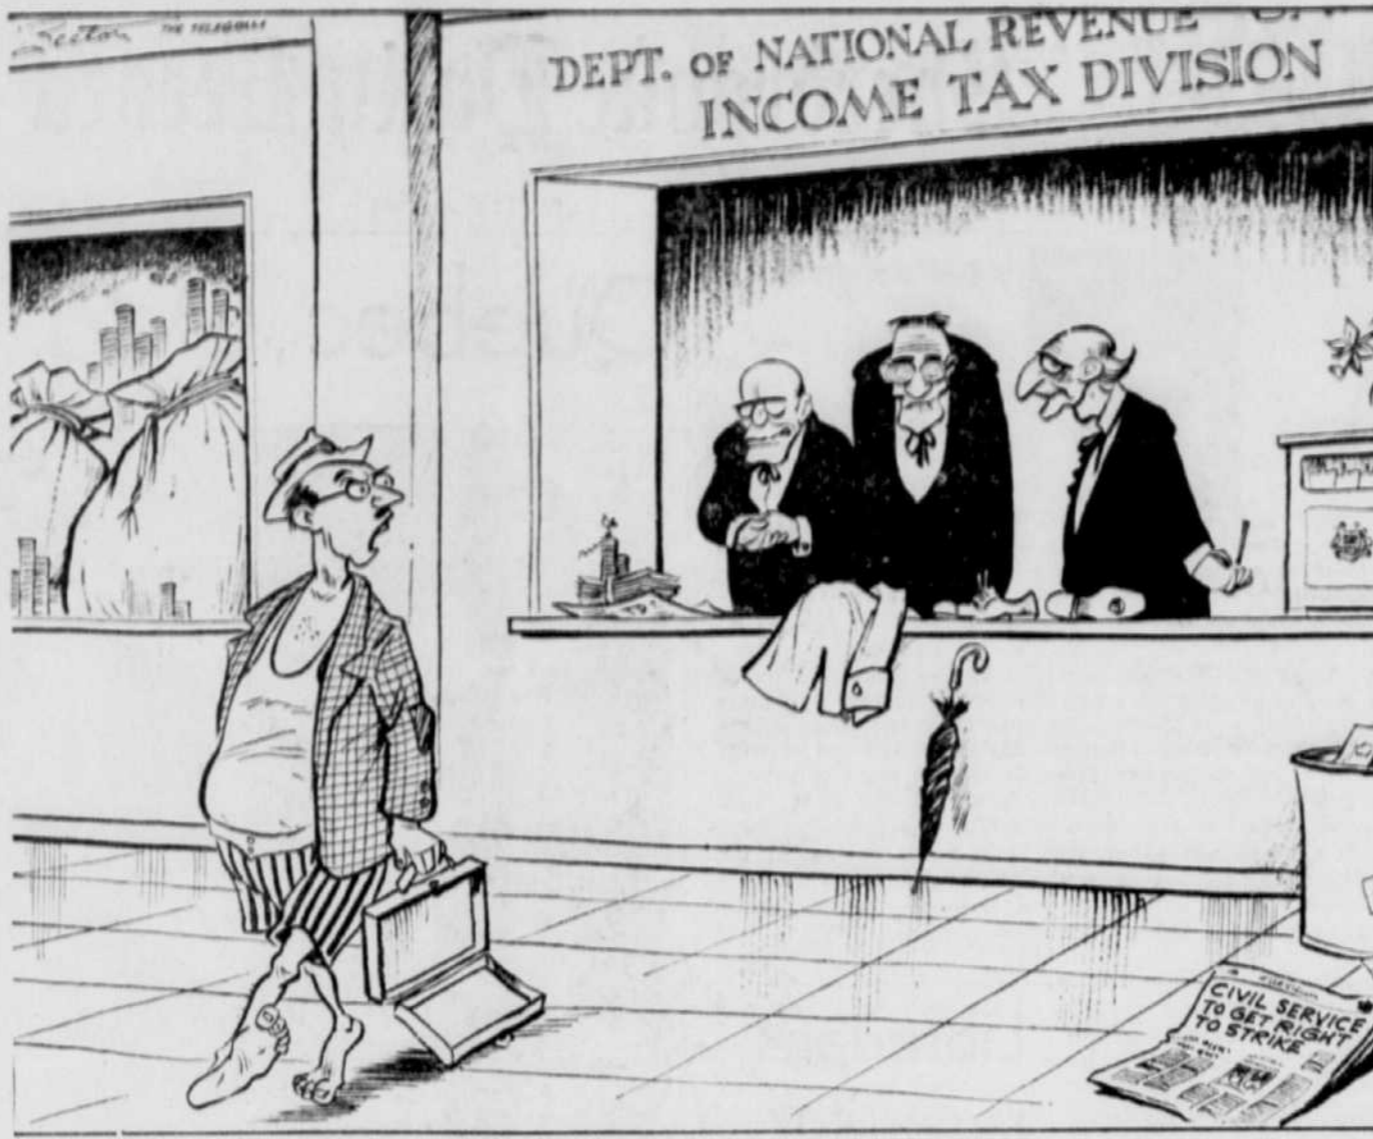

(The Ottawa Journal)

Mr. Drury shared the council's anxiety. He remarked that the growth in productivity of the manufacturing industries was more than double that of the construction industry during the period 1950-63.

So a difficulty of interest to countless thousands of Canadians is delineated. Poor productivity increases the cost of houses for rich and poor, great industry and small farmer.

And what do those having authority propose to do about it? Mr. Drury talks of educational programs, management training courses and building codes. To people of modest means who want to build a home it sounds like the same old stuff. Governments and ministers have a way of making a problem appear solved when they have stated it. But ministerial talk of what might be builds no houses.

Adventures with God

Letter to Karen on her wedding and to all brides; play your role

Open letter to a bride in particular, and brides in general.

Dear Karen: Shakespeare penned a truism when he wrote: "All the world's a stage, and all the men and women merely players." But you are a special kind of player. The acting art is your profession, and you met your chosen one while following your profession at Stratford. He was a Joeboy, trimming the lawns, and you fell in love with him, and on your first date you learned that under the work clothes was a budding doctor of psychiatry. And he learned that under your stage clothes was a simple, unsophisticated, loving young woman whose heart and ears were open to the love call of a virile Joeboy. Today you take your vows.

Too many girls of your age are looking for professional that of marriage. Today you are the leading lady in a drama, which, we hope will run to the end of time. We pray that when the curtain goes down on the last act, you will receive a standing ovation for your brilliant performance.

Such an accomplishment will not be easy. There are three phases in the drama of marriage. The first phase is one of Blaze and Glory, and might be subtitled The Bride and Groom. The second is the Bide and Gloom phase: a time of Haze and Gory. The last phase is entitled Praise In Story.

When the play of life is over and you stand together under the footlights may the critics as well as the viewers applaud your performance.

Act 1 — Your Shining Hour:

Cameras will click to record the glories of this day, when the starry blue-eyed, petit blonde, sheathed in shimmering gown and veil, trips to the altar to say: "I do" and "I will take this man to be my wedded husband;" when your beloved Joeboy will place a ring on the third finger of your left hand, and there will be a lingering embrace (with the magnetic pull of a seizer counter) and the lit of the Wedding March and the song of mating birds.

COMMENT

by Lubor J. Zink

OTTAWA (TNS)—Recurrent speculation about the feasibility of an American-Soviet coalition designed to contain Red China until a less militant regime takes over in Peking makes fascinating reading. At best it is a sort of political pornography, for it is capable of seducing ideologically innocent minds. For the benefit of those who may have forgotten their history, the believers in Soviet-Western entente usually start by listing the numerous instances of switches in alliances. They point out how often and how suddenly the constant fluidity of history has turned seemingly implacable hostility into great friendship, and they conclude by posing the question: Why not again? the

And why not?

Indeed, why not? Hasn't France at one time become England's staunchest ally after being her bitterest enemy? Look at the fantastic switch in Germany's alignment less than a decade after Hitler's downfall, and at Japan's emergence as our friend. Why should it be inconceivable for the Soviet Union to switch partners?

Apart from the fact that the West had first to defeat the aggressive regimes of Germany and Japan before it could strike friendly relationship with the people of those two countries, there is one big flaw in this reasoning. It is the familiar pitfall of seemingly persuasive analogies which mix apples and hand grenades as if they were one and the same thing.

To be sure, historical examples of shifts in alliances are perfectly legitimate and valid arguments. But they concern conversions from enmity to friendship among nations subscribing to basically similar or parallel social attitudes. There may, at times, have been considerable differences in their form of government, but the fundamental realities of their socio-economic systems were chips off the same block.

The Soviet system differs not in degree but in kind. It is intrinsically hostile to and incompatible with the concept of individual and social life evolved by the Western democracies (and adopted by postwar Japan). Regarding itself as the historically inevitable wave of the future, it seeks to undermine, des-stroy and replace our way of life.

SHOTGUN MARRIAGE

It is true that in one instance this system found it necessary to seek survival in alliance with the West. The sheer expedience of that contract, entered into only after Hitler's betrayal of the 1939 deal between totalitarians, was clearly demonstrated by the postwar imposition of Communist regimes on the nations of eastern and central Europe.

It was this breach of trust and wartime agreements which started the Cold War and the East-West arms race.

DOESN'T LAST LONG

The PRAYER FOR TODAY FROM The Upper Room.

As we were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, but God. (I Thessalonians 2:4).

PRAYER: O Father, Thou who art all-wise and all-powerful, we thank Thee for Thine everlasting love. We pray that we may never forget the need to tell others of Thee, nor neglect the privilege. Help us to walk in Thy steps this day. Hear our prayer, O Lord, offered through Christ Thy Son, our Redeemer. Amen.

At 11 a.m. tomorrow the ringing of a church bell will mark a noteworthy anniversary for the Bulwer Church will celebrate its hundredth birthday.

BULWER UNITED CHURCH

Built in the summer of 1866 as a community church, the building was under the control of the Wesleyan Methodists, but the House was to be freely occupied by any evangelical minister when not in use by the Methodists.

Until the year 1894, the church building was used by the Baptist congregation as well as the Methodists. However in that year, differences as to hours of service led to the building of a separate church by the Baptists. In the year 1935, the second church was closed, and since that time nearly all the residents of Bulwer have joined the United Church to make it truly the church of the community. At date, the Session of the church numbers among its seven members, elders who were previously of Anglican, Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist origins, a fact that is indicative of the breadth of outlook that has always characterized the church and community of Bulwer.

Prior to the building of the church in 1866, services of worship were held in a nearby schoolhouse or in private homes. On March 5th of that year, at a meeting held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Drake, with the Rev. George Washington of Sawyerville acting as chairman, the people of the community voted unanimously in favour of building a church. The building committee appointed on that occasion lost no time, and before May 1st, a site had been purchased, the area cleared and levelled and a contract made with Danforth Haselline to carry out the construction, for which he was to be paid the sum of six hundred dollars, and later the sum of four hundred fifty-three dollars to finish the interior of the building in all respects.

From 1866 to 1871, the church and congregation formed part of the Eaton Mission, with a resident minister at Sawyerville, serving ten preaching appointments. In 1871, with the division of the Eaton Circuit into two missions to be known as Sawyerville and Cookshire, Bulwer became part of the Cookshire Mission. Later, in 1894, the second Eaton Mission was established by the division of the Cookshire Circuit. This Mission with churches at Eaton, Birchton and Johnville as well as Bulwer, developed into the Birchton - Bulwer Charge of the United Church of Canada, and so remained until 1965 when the Neweaston Charge was organized, comprising the churches of Birchton, Bulwer, Cookshire and Island Brook.

During the hundred years, the church has been faithfully served by thirty-five pastors as well as several assisting ministers. Under their leadership, the growth of the congregation has been gradual but continuous down to the present time. Being a rural church, most of the youth that have grown up under the influence of this church and its leaders are today scattered from coast to coast in Canada and in many areas of the United States. The passing years have brought changes both within the church building and in its surroundings. The horse sheds, so essential in the early days of the church, fell into disuse with the coming of the motor age, and have been removed. A large hall was built in 1930 as an annex to the church to serve the Sunday School and the various other church organizations, and in turn, a commodious kitchen has been added to the hall. Improvements in the church's interior have also been numerous, the most recent of which has been the installation of coloured glass windows, donated as memorials.

The centenary will be marked by two services on May 29th, at which the Rev. Victor Rose will be the guest speaker. Lunch and tea will be available after both services affording adequate opportunity to renew acquaintances. In addition, the United Church Women are sponsoring a community evening on Friday, May 27th, when a program will be given in the Church Hall.

The centennial committee have published a seventy-five page booklet entitled, "The Bulwer Church - 100 Years of Service", which booklet, they feel, will create a band of union across the intervening years. Copies of this booklet will be available on the occasion of the centennial celebrations - May 27th - May 29th.

Friends fele bride-elect at Hatley shower

HATLEY - Miss Rena Nutbrown, St. Catharines, Ont., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Nutbrown, Hatley, was guest of honor at a miscellaneous bridal shower in the Guild Hall on May 20, prior to her marriage to Wendell Harrison, St. Catharines, Ont., on May 21. The bride-to-be was met at the door by Mrs. Gerald Johann who presented her with a corsage. She was escorted to a decorated chair by her cousin, Miss Judy Nutbrown.

The color scheme was green and yellow. Several bouquets of daffodils were used about the hall. Mrs. Beaven Bowen presided at the piano.

Mrs. Johann welcomed Miss Nutbrown and the guests, after which Mrs. William Sharman gave a reading. Advice to the Newly-Weds.

Candy Nutbrown, sister of the bride and Heather Nutbrown, her cousin, carried in a decorated basket, filled with gifts, which was replenished several times.

The bride-to-be was assisted in opening the packages by her mother, Mrs. Rupert Nutbrown, and the mother of the groom, Mrs. George Harrison, of Sherbrooke, and Miss Judy Nutbrown, one of her attendants.

After the gifts had been opened, Miss Nutbrown expressed her thanks for the gifts and to the Ladies Guild for the shower. Refreshments were served by members of St. James Guild. The shower cake, made in the form of a watering can, iced in yellow and decorated in green, was made by Mrs. Geo. Hartwell.

Former pastor shows slides of South Africa

BURY - On May 18, Rev. Richard Blyth, Lennoxville, recently priest-in-charge here, showed slides in the Legion Hut, on various scenes of his homeland, near Johannesburg, South Africa.

His vivid commentary on these scenes was most interesting, showing the many problems with which these people have to contend, in comparison to those in this country.

Mr. Blyth was thanked by Rev. Jones, who expressed, on behalf of the gathering, appreciation of his stay here, regretting that it had been of so short duration.

A purse of money was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Roch St. Laurent, who are moving to Sherbrooke, and who have been most active in church affairs while living here. Both Mr. and Mrs. St. Laurent expressed their appreciation.

Perfect secretary needed more than perfect wife

LONDON (AP) — "Most businessmen need a perfect secretary more than a perfect wife," said the 35-year-old Countess of Dartmouth.
Addressing a group of secretarial students, she added: "But don't fall in love with the boss. Falling in love with the boss is the cardinal sin in the office."
"A girl must be a friend to her boss, his public relations officer, his colleague and nurse if necessary—but she should never love him."
"Nothing is more irritating or boring to the boss's friends and colleagues than an adoring and possessive secretary."
"We once had a doctor whose secretary was so in love with him that she hated the patients taking up his time."
"She married the man in the end—but he lost most of his practice."
"She warned the girls against dressing in the more outlandish styles and suggested that thigh-high skirts are not for business."

FROM SKIRTS TO SKORTS — Latest fad on the Vancouver teen scene is Bad Boy Skorts, imports from London. Made of fake fur, suede or leather, they reach about half-way down the thigh.

Girls' current fashion, Boy Skorts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bad Diana Ricardo, fashion editor for the Vancouver Sun, says this of them:
"At first sight, the girls in these tiny skorts remind one of little European boys decked out in their Sunday-best leathers. They're an import from London. One thing's for sure, they'll wear well. But knowing these have had half a chance to wear out."
Miss Ricardo finds a contradiction in current fashion directives. Noting that one London designer has said all stockings must be replaced by all-in-one stocking tights, she says:
"On the one hand propriety is thrown to the winds, on the other hand it is zealously protected."

Ruth Millett

So what's so great about "His" public image?
My women readers, from Pittsburgh to Podunk, are after me for printing one man's list of candidates for the most unattractive women he sees in public places.
The gist of their indignant replies to his horror of hair curlers and such is: "Who are the men to talk? Are they so well-groomed and gentlemanly they can afford to criticize the public image of the American woman?"
Listen to a few lines from a typically irate letter. "I know the American woman is the constant target of attack, especially from the sainted American male. But I wonder if the self-satisfied American male is ever reminded of his terribly unattractive public and private image?"
"If a woman does not say 'Thank you' when a strange man holds a heavy door for her it is probably because she is speechless from shock — being used to having heavy doors slammed in her face instead of held by a gallant gentleman."
"Men who complain if their wives go around wearing curlers would complain even more if their wives spent money at a beauty shop, or never bothered to put their hair up."

Hutchins-Whittier vows exchanged

MAGOG — A pretty spring wedding took place on Saturday, April 30, at 11 o'clock in St. Paul's United Church, Magog, when Brenda May, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Whittier, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Hutchins, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hutchins, of Georgeville. Rev. Ron N. Nichol officiated at the double-ring ceremony. The organist, Mr. Clifford Force, played the traditional wedding music. The church was decorated with tall standards of white chrysanthemums tinted with red centers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white organza over taffeta with lace appliques embroidered in seed pearls, the long sleeves ending in points over the hands. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a headdress of flowers of the same material as her dress. Her only jewelry was a chain holding a tiny pearl teardrop and she carried a nosegay of red and white carnations with long white streamers.

Mrs. George Ducharme, cousin of the bride, as matron of honor, wore a street-length pink linen dress, with a matching crown headdress, pink shoes and long white gloves. She carried pink and white carnations.

Mr. Carl Whittier, of Washington, D.C., brother of the bride, acted as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Phillip Hutchins, brother of the groom, and Mr. Larry Whittier.

Questions readers ask

Q—My grandmother, who was born in Germany, insists that Lieckerkranz is a strictly German cheese. I always thought it was American.

A—You are right, grandma wrong, despite her memories of the old country. Lieckerkranz was first made, quite by accident, in 1882 by an apprentice cheese maker in New York. When members of a singing society in Lieckerkranz Hall sampled it, they were excited about it and gave it the name "Liederkrantz" (meaning "Wreath of Songs"). It has been an all-American product for a long time. Since 1926 it has been made in Van Wert, Ohio.

Q — What do you mean when you say without honeybees you can't have good fruit crops? I'm puzzled. In my book, bees are for honey.

A—Honeybees are the most important flower-visiting insects in practically all agricultural areas. Transfer of pollen from plant to plant, flower to flower, is so essential to seed and fruit production that beekeeping is necessary if our nation's agriculture is to remain profitable. Many beekeeper rent the services of their bees to growers for a period of from four to six weeks.

Mrs. Whittier, mother of the bride, chose an embossed pink tulle dress on Empire lines, with a black breton hat, matching black accessories, and fur stole. Her corsage was of yellow rose-buds.

Mrs. Hutchins, the groom's mother, wore a midnight blue two-piece lace jacket, suit, with a black shell hat covered in tulle, black accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at The Cabana Lodge, where a hot luncheon was served. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom standing under an arch of flowers, flanked on either side by

Recommended for Americans

China behind pro paganda

CHINA: One fourth of the world. By CHARLES LYNCH; Canadian Best Seller Library; paperback, 95 cents. It is a pity Canadian journalists are not more widely read in the United States than they are. In the present frozen state of relations between the US and Red China, there is almost no other way Americans can get a clear, unbiased and accurate first-hand picture of what life in Red China today is like. Most Americans must settle instead for second-hand impressions, distorted by the national phobia concerning mainland China or State Department propaganda of the second-rate variety. Charles Lynch, who is chief of Southam News Services wrote the articles collected in this paperback during and after a visit to Red China for his service in April and May of last year.

It must be said first of all, the Mr. Lynch is one of the finest of Canadian journalists. In addition, he has genuine literary talent. His only bias in these articles is to approach Red China and her people with a sympathetic mind, tempered with objective analysis. The result is a collection in which the pervading flavor is one of gentleness — surprising as the description "gentle" may be when applied to reports on Red China. Mr. Lynch has spun his tales around the people, rather than the policies of China. The two are inescapably intertwined. But by shifting the emphasis of his reporting to the human element, Mr. Lynch has done a great deal to illuminate the heart as well as the mind of the most populous nation on earth.

Sixth - and last - in a series on Canadian writing - written for CANADIAN SCENE and reprinted with permission. In a previous column we considered the books and writers most often associated with the Western part of Canada. This week we will consider the Eastern provinces and again I think it would be interesting if readers would test themselves - before reading my lists - to see what books they think of first in connection with each province.

NEWFOUNDLAND. I am reminded first of E. J. Pratt because although he spent most of his life in Ontario, his poetry never lost the rock strength and salt-lick of his Newfoundland birthplace. At the same time the picture of this province is not complete without bearded and bumptious Farley Mowat who, although born in Ontario, began a courtship with Canada's rocky borders when he wrote his PEOPLE OF THE DEER and has since made it a marriage by moving to Newfoundland to write a history of the island inhabitants.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND. It must be frustrating for all the writers who have lived there since to know that no Canadian ever thinks of this island without also thinking of a winsome heroine named Anne and her creator L. M. Montgomery.

NOVA SCOTIA. Is it the strong smell of the fishing wharves or the black sweat of the coal mines which make men writers dominate the Nova Scotian scene? Whatever the reason, ever since Thomas Chandler Haliburton wrote his Sam Slick stories to the present with Thomas Raddall and Will R. Bird pursuing oddly parallel courses in searching out and fictionalizing its history, the men have held centre stage.

NEW BRUNSWICK. The names of two cousins, Bliss Carman and Sir Charles G.D. Roberts, immediately spring to mind. Although Sir Charles was equally at home with prose, both men are best known for their poetry and oddly enough, with the exception of novelist David Walker, New Brunswick is still best known for its poets, among them being Fred Cogswell and Alden Nowlan.

QUEBEC. Though William Kirby's THE GOLDEN DOG and Louis Hemon's MARIA CHAPDELAINE light up the Quebec scene of the past, for most modern readers HUGH MACLENNAN and his TWO SOLITUDES - the title of which is perhaps the most apt description yet coined for the French-English relationship - is the first that one thinks of Quebec is the one province which can boast two literatures. Among the best-known French language writers - probably because their works proved such popular T.V. serials - are Roger Lemelin (Plouffe Family) and Germanie Guevrement (Le Survenant). Despite being a minority, English language writers have produced a formidable amount of good writing. Among the best known are probably Mordecai Richler, Leonard Cohen and the indestructible Irving Layton. The Leslie Gordon Barnard was an often under-rated writer of short stories while Ralph Gustafson, the Eastern Townships favorite son has not always been given the promotion, via CBC or literary magazines, that lesser poets have received. The only Quebec writer who could have laid claim to having a leg in both the English and French camps was another Bishop's graduate, William Henry Drummond's attempts at reconciling the two races have often been condemned as crude and bumbling. There is little doubt that many an adult Anglo-Saxon in the rest of Canada has had his introduction to the French-Canadian by way of "Leetle Bateese". And intellectual arguments aside it may have been a better introduction than today's querulous CBC-newspaper image of the French-Canadian.

CENTENNIAL SERIES — This picture taken from REMEMBER YESTERDAY (127 pp. McClelland & Stewart) is appealing, timely and representative of a delightful series of books known as The Canadian Centennial Library. Editor-in-chief of the series is Pierre Berton, art director is Frank Newfeld and Managing Editor is Ken Lefolli. Published in conjunction with WEEK-END MAGAZINE, the first three volumes are already on the stands and if the rest turn out to be as attractive to the average reader as these are, this series might well prove to be the most popular of 1967's reading feast. Of the first three, REMEMBER YESTERDAY appeals to me the most. However a woman I know has already taken GREAT CANADIAN SPORTS STORIES by Trent Frayne and Peter Gowksi to her Home and School group and suggested they buy the whole series of books for their school library. Faintly ill-bred humor

Martini-bikini set arrives to ridicule

ALL THE CRICKETS LOOK ALIKE by Bill Davidson; Longmans; 164 pages; $25.

There is nothing outstandingly original about "ALL THE CRICKETS LOOK ALIKE". The colorful jacket gushes, quite optimistically, that this book adds up to PLEASE DON'T EAT THE DAISIES, MR BLANDINGS and FROM BERGDORF'S TO ROSE BLIGHT, THE HARD WAY all in one. The only kernel of truth in this is that the book does deal with the transition of city dwellers to the country. It tells of the exodus of the sophisticated Davidsons from their New York apartment to an eighteenth century farmhouse in Connecticut.

Author Bill Davidson is an established journalist with a large sense of humor. His wife, Muriel, is a successful free-lance magazine writer. It is, therefore, quite understandable that much of the book's humor is written at the expense of the local people in the new neighborhood. Throughout the book there is a sort of smart-alecky type of fun-poking that, while perhaps unintentional, is rather unkind. The book will attract readers. Many enjoy this sort of clever, slick malice that exploits every phase of the warmth, the humor, even the tacturnity of country people unfamiliar with the more glossy type of living. Other readers may resent this intrusion of the martini-bikini set into the slow, peaceful life of a rural countryside. It is a matter of choice. Certainly the book is light and easy reading. Parts of it are bound to amuse this flippant and faintly ill-bred type of humor. KATHARINE SNOW, Waterloo.

Takes low pay for prestige

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hugh O'Brian turned down a $100,000-plus movie offer to appear for three weeks in a New York play opening June 8 for about $150 a week.

"Prestige," said the handsome tough guy, television's former Wyatt Earp. "You've got to convince the Bel Air circuit (movie producers) that you're not a TV actor. You've got to do what you believe in. I do two pictures a year, but I've still got a way to go before I get where I want to be."

The square-jawed bachelor O'Brian plans his career moves from a luxurious, tree-hidden hilltop home. His strategy is as careful as a general's in battle.

Royal recipes interesting but intimidating

Mrs. McKee's Royal Cookery Book; Ryerson; 206 pages; $5.75.

Mrs. McKee's regal recipes are scarcely likely to supersede the new Chatelaine Cookbook on the Canadian housewife's kitchen shelf, but she will certainly enjoy "browsing" among these culinary reminiscences by a former cook to H.M. the Queen and H.M. the Queen Mother. Anyone interested in royal little-tattle won't find anything more enthralling than the news that the Queen Mother likes ice cream and that Prince Charles enjoyed rice pudding during his nursery days. The Queen always eats potatoes (in small amounts). Princess Margaret is willing to sample new dishes (such as braised cucumbers). Aside from such innocuous observations, Mrs. McKee's memories all concern food, and indeed, judging by the complexities of the recipes, she must have been far too busy scraping, chopping, straining, measuring and beating in the kitchen to know or care who the Queen was having in for lunch, let alone any more intimate details of the Royal menage.

Some of the dishes she describes involve a great deal of meticulous labor; no doubt Mrs. McKee had several assistants. Many ingredients would be unavailable in this country — what are "Cox's apples", "Comice pears", "Tidman's sea salt and patna rice", Demerara sugar, Danish gammon and similar items might be hard to come by, let alone all the game so dear to the English heart: grouse, wood pigeons, partridges, pheasants. Mrs. McKee confesses that she found it a relief when the hunting season was over.

Secret serviceman's life absorbing, but propaganda-rife?

SPECIAL AGENT by Frank J. Wilson and Beth Day; Holt, Rinehart and Winston; 256 pages.

The function of the United States Secret Service is twofold: to protect the currency and to protect the President. Founded in 1865 for the sole purpose of dealing with counterfeiting, it took on the duty of safeguarding the President and his family starting in 1894. Under the leadership of Frank J. Wilson, 1936-1946, its methods were revised and it became what it is today.

It would appear that Mr. Wilson's capabilities do not extend to writing a book which would simply be the story of his career, which he well knew, told in correct grammar, with proper spelling, punctuation, and paragraphing, such as should have been learned in school. So he took on a collaborator, and authorship of the book is credited to both persons equally. It is impossible for the reader to tell what part of the work is his and what that of the collaborator. Too much of the Secret Service seems to have rubbed off on him!

A novel told in the first person singular by a team of two or more writers is appropriate enough, as "I" does not, in the case of a novel, mean the author, but having two writers undertake to tell a true story in the first person singular, which would mean only one of them, is incongruous; and yet this is the way Mr. Wilson's story is told in "Special Agent" by Frank J. Wilson and Beth Day.

While this book is the story of Wilson's career in the United States government service, it is more than that. It gives much interesting historical information about government activities in the 20th century, for it goes back to the assassination of President McKinley in Buffalo in 1901 when Wilson was 13 years old. Wilson wanted to be a policeman, like his father, but he was nearsighted and during the First World War he entered the government service as an investigator. He became Chief of the Secret Service in 1936 and retired in 1946.

In his work he rubbed elbows with many important people in the world and became acquainted at first hand with many exciting and news-making activities. All of this makes the book absorbing reading. There is Al Capone's tax evasion, the Lindbergh baby kidnap story, Huey Long's Louisiana empire, and Roosevelt's Casablanca flight to name a few of the episodes related in "Special Agent."

However, it is not clear whether the motivation for this book has been vanity on the part of the retired chief in telling his story, or to enlighten the public in regard to happenings of which he was a part, or to provide pro-Roosevelt propaganda.

In any case, it makes interesting reading, is well organized, and on the whole is probably accurate in its information, although there

The state of the contemporary American novel leaves many of us wondering if anyone will ever again write a lasting work of fiction. But a look at the past provides a reassuring perspective. In the 100 years since the American novel took its place in world literature scarcely a dozen outstanding novels have been written.

Why then should we be disappointed when one fails to appear on each year's best seller list? Why not turn instead to a re-reading of some of the old favorites that have become the classics of American literature?

There's Hawthorne's THE SCARLET LEITER, the unforgettable story of sin and guilt in Puritan New England; or Herman Melville's MOBY DICK, an exciting tale of adventure at sea combined with an examination of man's metaphysical dilemma.

The contrast between American and European civilization of the 19th century is beautifully described by Henry James in his two psychological novels, THE WINGS OF THE DOVE, and THE AMBASSADORS.

The outstanding books of the early 20th century were Theodore Dreiser's AN AMERICAN TRAGEDY, and Dos Passos' USA, a trilogy of three panoramic novels of American life.

Highlights of the twenties and thirties included F. Scott Fitzgerald's scrutiny of American values, THE GREAT GATSBY; Ernest Hemingway's A FAREWELL TO ARMS, the romantic war story of an American ambulance driver and an English nurse, and THE SUN ALSO RISES, a look at the lost generation of the twenties; Katherine Ann Porter's PALE HORSE, PALE RIDER, which was so beautifully dramatized on CBC's Festival two years ago; William Faulkner's stream-of-consciousness picture of a decaying Southern family, THE SOUND AND THE FURY; and Thomas Wolfe's autobiographical novel of his youth, LOOK HOMEWARD, ANGEL.

A return to the present shows that only a few of the novels of the past 15 years seem to be surviving the test of time.

Collecting

in the

Townships

The members of the St. Francis Stamp Club are making plans for their annual picnic and outing and the tentative date is Saturday, July 16. The picnic will once again be held in Dixville at the home of the writer. The event has attracted many collectors and their friends from a wide area of the Townships with guests from Montreal and other places. Final plans are not yet complete but it is hoped to have some special attractions for you this year. The opening of the stamp office of Philmar Reg'd will take place at the same time. The stamp clubs in the various centres of the Townships have had a successful season and interest seems to be on the upswing in most clubs. Stamp clubs play a most important part in stamp collecting and have much to offer collectors, so, if you haven't visited your local club to date then do so in the coming weeks. With the good weather there should be no problem with road conditions.

The postal administration of Sharjah is now operating its own philatelic bureau and the stamps will not be sold by the Crown Agents. This country has issued some fascinating stamps during the past few months, and although we do agree with the rather expensive souvenir sheets, there can be no doubt that the stamps are popular. Collectors could probably receive the new issue news from this postal administration by writing to the following address — Government of Sharjah & its Dependencies, General Post Office, Sharjah. The envelopes will be franked with stamps from this country. Please mention that you read about this in the Sherbrooke Daily Record stamp column.

The United Nations will issue a UNICEF set this fall that could very well be a "best seller." This set will consist of three stamps depicting a train with children of many races; the complete design will take in the three stamps. It is interesting to note that Great Britain plans to issue a special stamp, or stamps, for the Christmas season this year. The United States Circus stamp is quite a departure from the usual design of a stamp and on cover is most attractive. The stamp world is still at odds over the stamp issued to mark the wedding of the Netherlands Princess — many still insist that the two "Love Birds" are male species.

There have been many comments about the Highway Safety stamp issued by Canada. Some collectors believe that it looks like a stamp from a chain store, others believe that it is well executed.

The Republic of the Congo has issued a set of stamps to mark the first World Festival of Negro Arts. The Festival was held last month in Senegal, another young African Republic. Negro artists — including painters, sculptors, poets and performers — from many countries converged on Dakar, capital of Senegal, to present to the world the richness of the Negro people's cultural heritage. Each of the four Arts Festival stamps depicts two pieces of typical African sculpture. The eight works shown demonstrate the combination of the primitive background and modern impulse that influence much of Negro art today.

Increased interest in the official stamps of Canada has caused prices to increase in many instances. The perforated stamps are rather difficult to obtain for some values. If you haven't completed your official collection it would be wise to do so at once. The perforated stamps were not popular for many years and this was probably due to the lack of listing them in the Scott Catalog. The publishers' policy is not to list stamps which have been perforated, even if this was done officially.

It appears that interest in these stamps, and in coil stamps, has come about because more and more collectors are finding that the older stamps are quite expensive and they have turned to other fields in Canadian philately. Many collectors have, for instance, added used blocks and strips to their collections. This increased interest and higher prices will continue simply because of the coming centennial and the addition of thousands of new collectors of Canadian stamps.

The increase in the value of Canadian stamps has never been spectacular but of all the stamps in the world none have increased as steadily over the years, mint blocks of the issue prior to 1900 are eagerly sought after by collectors and should you possess such blocks do not break them in singles for a good friend.

Mystery differs; not a whodunit but is she she?

HELEN by E. V. Cunningham; Doubleday; 185 pages; $4.75

In Helen we are introduced to a rather different type of mystery story. The mystery is not who has committed the crime but rather what sort of woman is the murderer and what is her background.

The facts of the case are ordinary. A prostitute, Helen Pilasky, has murdered one of the leading citizens of San Verdo, Judge Knowton whose mistress she has been. Apparently she did it in cold blood and with premeditation. She has admitted committing the crime.

Blake Eddyman who has been ordered by the district attorney of San Verdo to defend the prostitute can find no defence. He realizes as soon as he meets Helen that she is no common prostitute. She appears to be beautiful, talented and intelligent but almost devoid of any sign of emotion. He is attracted to her from the beginning and becomes almost frantic in his attempt to find some shred of evidence in her defence, as the facts of her past come to light he is convinced that the Helen Pilasky before him can not be the Helen Pilasky of the records.

His belief in her is useless for he soon realizes that the justice of the town is in the hands of the machine called the syndicate which controls the entire town. Blake Eddyman himself is nothing more than a political pawn given this hopeless task because of his naivety. When he realizes his hands are tied and also that he is in love with Helen he begins to question his religious beliefs. Could she be a messenger of God? Is she telling the truth when she says she murdered the thoroughly despicable Judge Knowton so that his wife would be free of him?

Would-be professionals dominate DDF prize list

VICTORIA — (CP) — Two amateur groups with professional ambitions won more than half the awards at the Dominion Drama Festival.

The MAC Theatre Society of Calgary won four awards, including the Canadian Association of Broadcasters Trophy and $1,000 for the best production in the week-long festival which ended Saturday.

Also taking four awards was Le Mouvement Contemporain, a Montreal group which carries Europe's contemporary theatre to Quebec. Andre Brassard, a named best director for his work in the Montreal group's Les Bonnes by Jean Genet, said: "I want to get into professional theatre as soon as I can."

"That is the whole idea of Le Mouvement Contemporain," said Mr. Brassard, at 19, possibly the youngest director ever to win the high festival honor. Both winners of the best acting awards, Michael Ball and Sharon Pollock, said they want to turn professional.

Miss Pollock, who co-starred with Mr. Ball in the Calgary group's production of The Knack by Ann Jellicoe, said: "The final goal of almost any amateur enterprise is becoming good enough to be professional."

"I'm no exception," said the young mother of five. Calgary's fourth win was the $200 prize which went to James Eberley as the best actor under 25.

In addition to the best director award, the Montreal troupe earned the best visual production title and the best French-language play. Two of its three cast members, Rita Lafontaine and Frederique Collin, will share a Quebec government $3,000 scholarship as the most promising members of a group in the festival.

AN INVITATION TO STAMP COLLECTORS

We would like to meet our many mail-order friends, and other collectors, so we extend a cordial invitation to visit us. If you are out on a drive in this area then drop in to see us. There is plenty of room for the children to play. We will welcome the opportunity to talk stamps and stamp collecting with you. It would be wise to telephone to make sure we are home — 849-2021.

Scouting and Cubbing

By KEN BARTLETT

In mid-summer weather conditions the First and Second Lennoxville Troops spent the Victoria Day weekend at Lovering Lake. Thirty-two lads from Second and seventeen from First Lennoxville enjoyed a varied program of camping, badge-training, canoeing and outdoor games. The Scouts were organized in the patrol system and one of the features of the camp was excellent cooking. In this regard each patrol was asked to cook a six lb. roast of beef and the results were surprising. On both Saturday and Sunday a different patrol went on a canoe expedition to the outlet of Lovering Lake. On Saturday evening Don Van Horn was chief of campfire activities, and on Sunday evening Arthur Halsall organized a wide game for everyone. For the very hearty ones, there was swimming on Sunday afternoon and Monday morning. Skipper Bill Van Horn reports the water was "cool" but refreshing. Two Scouts from Second Lennoxville, Peter Heath and Randy Speck were invested and one from First Lennoxville, Peter Master-son. First Lennoxville Troop leaders present were Scoutmaster Harold Bench and Assistant Jeff Cronin. Scoutmaster Bill Van Horn and Assistant Bill Aird led the Second Lennoxville Group.

CUB RALLY

The annual Wolf Cub Rally for Sherbrooke District is planned for next weekend at the Waymer Laberee property at Bulwer. Weather permitting, it will be held on Saturday afternoon. In case of rain it will be rescheduled for Sunday afternoon. The Rally will be run along the lines of last year's. The emphasis will be on fun for everyone. A number of games will be played. The chief area of competition will be for the "special project". Judging by work activities of late, a lot of group has gone into these individual projects. The results will be on display Saturday.

COUNCIL REPORT

Lord's Island in Lake Memphremagog, six miles south of Magog has been offered for the use of the Sherbrooke District Boy Scouts. In a report to the District Council meeting held last Tuesday in Bury, President Ray Thorne said the Association had received a letter from Mr. Edward Fisher of Montreal. The letter states the S.C.O.T.s could have unrestricted use of his island all summer long. The meeting decided to accept the offer, and in the meantime, local officers will soon have a look at the property. Several veteran Scouters stated that Scouts of former years had often camped there. A camp report to the meeting stated that the road to the Lovering Lake camp had recently been gravelled and improved. The boats are being repaired and two big signs will be erected on the entrance road. The camp drinking water is being checked by public health officers. Camp attendance this year will surpass all former records. Badge Secretary Les Humphries stated that 18 Cub and 7 Scout Badges had been awarded this month. Mr. Humphries also attended the United Church Youth Conference in Magog on May 15th. The awarding of Religion and Life Badges had come in for some discussion at the Magog meeting. Most of the Scout leaders would like to see a more uniform set of requirements for this award, and the gathering drew up a resolution to this effect. The District Council will draw this to the attention of the next Provincial Council meeting. Uniform Scouters were cautioned by President Thorne not to plan a week long camp without obtaining a permit directly from the Provincial office in Montreal. It was also stated that more than one Cub Group can be accommodated at Lovering Lake at any given time. District Scoutmaster Owen Phalen (Training) said an 'A' and 'B' training course was held last weekend at Spooner Pond for Troop Leaders. It is unlikely another course will be scheduled here this year. If there is enough demand, however, one could be planned for the Fall. District Cubmaster, Dick Tracy was not available for his report owing to the fact that he was in Montreal attending the Arctic Scout Committee meeting. The next council meeting is planned for Sept. 27th, but an Executive meeting will be held at Don Lyon's office on June 14th.

Hunting and fishing in the ET

By NORM NICHOLL

Next Sunday as we are all aware is election day in our Province. In reading many letters to the editor and in talking to many sportsmen the issue of voting on Sunday has taken a precedent over the basic issue of voting into office the members of the Legislature who will be governing us. While we may feel that voting on Sunday has taken away some of our time for relaxation either fishing or being with our families, we should at least use our right and vote and work to having such Sunday voting abolished before another election. This year above all with the voting age being reduced and the number of candidates running we should look as to what will happen to ourselves and families if some of these candidates were to be elected. Would it not be to your advantage and to our future, to vote? Plan you next weekend to coincide with the polling hours which are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Last weekend the restocked ponds opened and many fishermen were trying their luck. However, the fish weren't co-operating. The number of fish taken was below last year's figure. Later in the week they were biting better and possibly this weekend will be better fishing.

The Department of Tourism's, Protection Service has released the listed infractions during the month of March, 1966. A total of 203 infractions were listed and netted a total of $4,021 in fines. The infractions prosecuted were: Moose 34, deer 33, fur-bearing animals 13, partridge 2, migratory birds 5, miscellaneous 34, fishing 82. Listing the number of infractions for each of the districts of the Province they break down as follows: Abitibi 2; Chicoutimi 25 for 172; Gaspé 18 for 140; Hull 9 for 170; Quebec 26 for 90; Rimouski 10 for 123; Temiskaming 4 for 25; Sept-Isles 16 for 130; Trois-Rivières 19 for 95; Montreal 60 for $2,981; Sherbrooke 5, fur-bearing animals - 1, miscellaneous - 6, fishing - 14 for a total of 14 and netted $95.00 in fines. Does not represent court costs or time spent in jail.

Next Wednesday evening, June 1st, at 8 p.m. in the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec City, the Migratory Birds Committee of the Quebec Wildlife Federation will be holding a meeting to discuss the regulations that will apply to migratory birds for the coming season. These regulations are made in conjunction with the Federal government, the USA and Mexico. Everyone is welcome to attend this meeting however voting privileges will only be extended to members of the Quebec Wildlife Federation.

Lake Elgin is still producing some wonderful speckled trout. Lake Elgin Fish and Game President, G. A. Munday sent me this photo of two beauties that were caught by Mr. Charland of Sherbrooke.

One weighed nearly three pounds while the second weighed close to five pounds. The Club has been putting a lot of effort into restocking the Lake and intends to carry on this work for the improvement of fishing in this lake.

In reply to some inquires as to whether or not a new breed of lake trout was shown in last week's picture. No, it was a regular grey trout and did at one time have a tail, but somewhere along the line before reaching the press the picture was clipped leaving the fish without a tail.

New York sinks Chicago 4-1, Twins slumping, lose tilt 5-4

The sagging Chicago White Sox sank past the surging Yankees into eighth place in the American League Friday night as Mel Stottlemyre pitched a three-hitter for a 4-1 New York triumph.

It was the 10th loss in the last 12 games for Chicago, and they made it easy for New York with three errors helping the Yankees to two unearned runs.

That was all Stottlemyre needed as he set the Sox down on just three singles and retired

Sir Express Allie dies in Quebec

Sir Express Allie, six-year-old horse owned by Ernest Laporte of Ayer's Cliff died Friday morning in Quebec City.

He had been moved to Quebec to take part in a race for a purse of $800 Thursday evening but during the day fell sick and was scratched. During the night the vets tried to find out the trouble but to no avail.

It hasn't been determined just what caused the death but Mr. Laporte stated that he had eaten some grass which had been sprinkled with a weed killer and maybe this poisoned him. An autopsy will be performed in Quebec City to try and determine the cause.

Sir Express Allie had a lifetime mark of 2.08 2/5 with earnings of $5,217. He raced here last Sunday and won in 2.09 1/5 and always has been a steady performer. Guy Robichaud was the trainer and he considered him as one of the top horses in his string.

Sherbrooke Alouettes open '66 home season tomorrow

If there are some things of a rough slide into second base in a game with Coaticook Canadiens last week.

However, Kaiser has no intentions of remaining off the playing field for very long, as his intentions are to ever second base in tomorrow's game. Needless to say, with the roster packed as it is, every effort is needed to gain a permanent season position with the team. Although he was hospitalized by the thigh scrape, he is now back, practising slowly.

Paul Molloy, general manager of the Als, has offered a strong optimistic voice during the six exhibition games played, and during these tilts, Molloy had the opportunity to examine the players' abilities, along with Coach Andre Pratte.

The GM is keeping the roster full during the first couple of weeks, and is anxious to audition new players, the majority

Canadian football clinics

Bishop's is a regional site

By RICHARD WILSON
(Record Sports Reporter)

Bishop's University has been chosen one of five regional centres for football clinics, sponsored by the Canada Fitness Council in affiliation with the Canadian Rugby Union and the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union, it was disclosed yesterday.

Bruce Coulter, Athletics Director at Bishop's University in Lennoxville, told the Record that Health Minister Alan MacEachern signed a bill for the Canada Fitness Council, giving them the green light to sponsor these five clinics simultaneously across the nation, on a trial basis.

Bishop's will serve the regional clinic for the Province of Quebec and the Ottawa Valley on the weekend of June 17, 18 and 19.

Fifty-three coaches from various football leagues in the province will be invited to attend the clinic, receiving helpful hints and advice from coaches of the Canadian Football League and the Continental League clubs.

Other centres for this athletic scheme are at St. Mary's, in Halifax, serving the Maritime Provinces; McMaster University, in Hamilton, for all but the northern portion of Ontario; the University of Manitoba, in Winnipeg, covering Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Northern Ontario; and also the University of Alberta, in Edmonton, serving British Columbia and Alberta.

Bruce Coulter, head coordinator and director for the Quebec clinic at Bishop's, will be assisted by Sam Etchevery, O. K. Dalton and Ralph Goldson, assistant coaches of the Montreal Alouettes; Bill Smyth, defensive coach of the Ottawa Rough Riders; Marvin Bass and George Brancato, head coach and assistant coach of the Montreal Beavers respectively.

Dr. John Palmer, physician for Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference, termed the while affair "non-sense."

"Both dexedrine and tinal are commonly used by prescription and this whole affair is a lot of nonsense," Dr. Palmer said in an interview Friday night.

Two of Percival's associates, Dr. Hudson Kerr and George Arnold, both denied knowledge of drugs being given the athletes.

Dr. Percival said he is being guided by legal counsel.

"I'm not interested in anything but complete clearance of these charges concerning me, my associates in the Don Mills Track Club and my athletes of the Don Mills Track Club, and I intend to pursue this to the ultimate."

The case has been forwarded to Pete Beach of Toronto, national track and field chairman of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Dr. Percival said he is being guided by legal counsel.

Dr. Kerr, the Don Mills club's physician, said that to his

Bishop's draws with B of M

In a mid-week game at Lennoxville, Bishop's College School (145 for 9 wickets) drew with Bank of Montreal C.C. (111 for 9).

With each team batting to an equal time limit, the School put up the better performance. High scorers for the School were Anido (46) and McConnell (29), with Tishaw and McLellan each taking 2 wickets; for the Bank, Grant (43 runs and 3 wickets), Arklay (3 wickets), and McKenzie (2 wickets) had the best records.

Members of the Fitness Council and the CRU will attend the clinic to observe and evaluate the proceedings, which will weigh heavily upon the decision to continue or not.

Because of the limit of 53 coaches permitted to attend this clinic, an examining committee has been set up in Montreal to study each application. Over 100 applications have been received by the CRU to date.

All transportation, accommodation, and meal expenses for the selected 53 will be paid by the Federal government. They will be staying on the Lennoxville campus, in Abbott Hall residence.

Bruce Coulter said that many applications were received by him from coaches of the teams in the Ottawa - St. Lawrence Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and other physical education instructors of institutions in the immediate Eastern Townships area.
