'Specific plan' made to fight Quebec terrorism

QUEBEC (CP) — A total of $60,000 in reward money has not yet produced any obvious results, but Premier Jean Lesage says police now have a "specific plan" of action against terrorist activity.

He made the statement Tuesday following a meeting of top-ranking police, army and civilian authorities in the Quebec cabinet chambers.

The 90-minut meeting was called by Mr. Lesage to coordinate efforts to track down those responsible for time-bomb blasts, mainly in the Montreal area, over the last 11 weeks.

No details of decisions reached at the conference were disclosed. Mr. Lesage said police are doing everything in their power to find the terrorists, and told Quebecers "there is no reason to get panicky."

Later, in a televised press conference carried by the CBC's French - Language network, he said the $50,000 reward offered by the government for information on the terrorists is simply "an encouragement to the people of Quebec to do their duty."

"It is the duty of all citizens to denounce those in the terrorist organization."

CITY OFFERS REWARD

The city of Montreal has offered a similar, $10,000 reward.

The wave of bombings has been attributed by authorities to Le Front de Liberation Quebecois, a group pledged to win independence for Quebec by force and devoted particularly to the destruction of such "colonial" (federal) institutions as the RCMP and armed forces.

The latest blast was a single, powerful bomb that exploded Monday behind the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers armory in Montreal.

There were no injuries. Time-bombs exploded Friday in mail boxes in the Montreal suburb of Westmount. Some were dismantled by experts before they exploded, but an army sergeant-major was critically injured when one went off in his hands.

Sgt.-Maj. Walter Leja was still unconscious and in critical condition early toay.

The only death blamed on FLQ terrorism was that of an elderly night watchman, W. V. O'Nell, killed in a bomb blast behind an army recruiting office in Montreal April 20.

Tuesday, Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson issued a prepared statement referring to the government's reward offer as "a sordid thing."

The Union Nationale leader said the offer was indicative of incompetence on the part of Attorney - General Georges Lapalme and Josaphat Brunet, director of Quebec Provincial Police.

Property Owners' League raps bridge plans

By JAMES DAVIES
(Record staff reporter)

Members of the Sherbrooke Property Owners' League last night denounced city plans to build a bridge across the St. Francis River between Montreal and Terrill Streets.

Main points of the arguments advanced by the opponents of the project (most of them from the North Ward) were:

- the city's plan lacks foresight;
- the cost would be higher than Sherbrooke officials have made known;
- the traffic circles proposed would complicate the traffic problem instead of solving it;
- the site chosen by the city is inappropriate.

Forty members of the association gathered at the Central school mainly for election of officers, and when the bridge was mentioned on the list of projects to be studied by the city-wide organization, several members raised strong opposition to the project.

SPECIAL MEETING

A special meeting to consider the Montreal-Terrill Street plans in their entirety has been scheduled for the Mitchell School for Monday May 27 at 8 p.m.

Among those opposing the bridge was North Ward resident Jeff Wilson. Mr. Wilson termed the plan "impractical" and assured those in attendance of the lack of foresight of municipal officials in proposing it.

With traffic converging on Sherbrooke from the Eastern Townships Autoroute (once completed) and from such centres as Scotstown, Richmond, Windsor and Cookshire in the future, the roads that will be affected by the added flow of traffic "just will not be able to take it," Mr. Wilson said.

He suggested that the city build the bridge 'higher up.' He explained, 'there is not enough land to have this bridge here . . ."

He was sceptical of the final cost of the project.

Another member of the group who blasted the plan was George Leclerc. The basis for Mr. Leclerc's opposition, he said, was that not only would the system of projected traffic circles (part of the project) not remedy the traffic situation, it would aggravate it further.

Said Mr. Leclerc, "The intention of the system is not to increase the traffic problem but rather to reduce it."

"With those circles we will block the traffic from all directions. We must produce plans to relieve the situation. The purpose is for decongestion not to produce a bottleneck."

Mr. Leclerc added: "I remember how the traffic circles failed on Decarie Street in Montreal. The city had to admit that it was a failure after those things had lasted only five years. The present site proposed by the city is nonsense — the bridge should be built higher up."

A third member of the association who said he was against the bridge to link North and East Wards at Montreal and

Liberals ride out no-confidence vote

OTTAWA (CP)—The young minority Liberal government hurdled its first and probably highest obstacle of the immediate future Tuesday night when it survived by 11 votes a non-confidence motion based on its decision to acquire nuclear warheads.

The House of Commons, after a day-long throne speech debate reviving all of the nuclear arguments of the April 8 election campaign, rejected the New Democratic Party non - confidence motion 124 votes to 113

The motion expressed regret at the government's decision to acquire nuclear arms on Canadian soil, "thereby lessening the chances of nuclear disarmament and increasing the danger of nuclear war."

The vote scrambled some party lines.

The lineup against the government was 79 Conservative votes, 17 Social Credit, 16 NDP and one independent Social Credit.

Backing the government were 118 Liberals, two Conservatives and four Social Crediters.

This made a total of 237 votes in the 265-member House. One M.P. Eugene Rheaume (PC—Northwest Territories) has not yet taken his seat because of technical delays in preparing his election writ.

The 27 other uncast votes were accounted for by 12 absent conservatives, nine missing Liberals, two absent Social Crediters, one NDP member unavailable, two MPs who were paired with absent opposites and the Speaker, who votes only in case of a tie.

The two Conservative votes for the government were those of former defence minister Douglas Harkness, who resigned from the cabinet before the election on grounds the Conservative government had broken a commitment to acquire nuclear arms, and Jack McIntosh, from Swift Current-Maple Creek.

National Leader Robert Thompson of Social Credit led the other three English-speaking party members in support of the government. Deputy Leader Real Caouette and 16 Quebec followers supported the NDP motion.

One Liberal was paired with a Conservative absentee, as was one Conservative.

A second non-confidence vote is scheduled for Thursday night on a motion moved by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker. In addition, a further action could be moved today by the Social Credit group. This also would be voted on Thursday night.

Passage of any non-confidence motion during the throne speech debate means the defeat of the government and a new election.

CITES RESOLUTION

Mr. Diefenbaker recalled what he called "sinuous turnings" by Mr. Pearson on nuclear policy over the years, capped by the Ottawa Liberal party rally in January, 1961, which had adopted a resolution reading:

"A new Liberal government should not acquire, manufacture or use such (nuclear) weapons under separate Canadian control or under joint United States-Canadian control."

Says tip-offs made before police raids

QUEBEC (CP) — Attorney-General Georges Lapalme says he has reason to believe tipoffs have been given by provincial police before some raids for liquor law infractions.

He told the legislature Tuesday night that in some cases brought to the attention of police, checks were made by special officers whose reports might show 125 to 175 people using the spot in question.

"Once he had the report of the special officer we gave instructions to the police to go and make a raid and as chance would have it police find only five or six people, including the owner and his wife.

"We have reason to believe there has been leakage in the police."

He gave no further details.

Three opposition members roundly attacked the government, charging that Liberals were accepting payoffs for liquor permits issued by the Quebec Liquor Board.

Mr. Lapalme said the cases mentioned were based on "hearsay evidence" and could not be proved. He said he could charge that a night club owner in his riding had told him of operating for years without a permit but had been forced to pay off the Union Nationale each week.

CAN'T PROVE IT

"But I can't prove it," he said. "What would my statement be worth?"

In the discussion during study of the attorney-general's $30,000,000 estimates, the Union Nationale got a ticking-off from Mrs. Claire Kirkland-Casgrain, only woman member of the house and minister without portfolio.

She quoted Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson as demanding how anyone could say there were 2,000 cases of toleration of illegal liquor outlets under the Union Nationale.

Setback reported for Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John was reliably reported today to have suffered a new and severe setback in his illness. One of Italy's leading surgeons was said to have spent the night at his bedside.

The 81-year-old ruler of the Roman Catholic Church cancelled his regular weekly general audience in St. Peter's Basilica but appeared at his apartment window to bless a crowd of 15,000 in St. Peter's Square below.

The Pope stood at the third-floor window about three minutes. Seen through binoculars, he appeared very pale. But his voice, carried through microphones, was vibrant and strong as he gave his blessing.

The audience in the Basilica was cancelled 40 minutes before it was to have started.

The cancellation of the audience was the first since last November, when a similar weekly audience was called off at the last minute.

The Vatican later announced that the Pope was suffering from a stomach disorder and anemia.

Denies plans to provide A-arms to W. Germany

OTTAWA (CP)—NATO Secretary-General Dirk Stikker has emphatically denied that proposals for an inter-allied nuclear force are intended as a means of getting nuclear arms into the hands of West German fighting men.

Charges to this effect have been made by Soviet Russia.

The nuclear force plan, expected to be endorsed in general terms at the NATO ministerial meeting opening here today, has "nothing to do" with either satisfying or pacifying West German demands, Mr. Stikker told a press conference Tuesday night.

Every country will contribute what it wants to the allied force, said the secretary - general. There had never been any discussion within the NATO council on preventing Germany from doing certain things.

The agreements under which Germany was brought into the Western Alliance eight years ago still stand, said Mr. Stikker. Under these agreements Germany forswore an independent nuclear role.

STUDY PACT

Mr. Stikker said there is no chance that one country will ever decide by itself whether the weapons assigned to an allied nuclear force are to be used. The decision always would be a multilateral one.

The alliance is carefully studying the possibility of a non-aggression pact between NATO and the Warsaw Pact, he told reporters. However, it would only "complicate" matters to conclude such a pact before certain political issues dividing the two camps are settled.

Pre-conference reports were that there already had been agreement among NATO members for creation of the U.S.-proposed inter - allied nuclear striking force under the command of a new deputy to U.S. Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer, NATO's supreme commander. These reports said the post of deputy commander likely would be filled by an officer from one of the smaller European NATO countries, such as Holland, Belgium or Italy.

The conference opening today is the first such meeting to be held in Ottawa since 1951. Some official delegates from NATO's 15 member countries are attending. In addition, there are more than 200 persons on delegation staffs and a 150-member NATO secretariat.

MET BY HELLYER

Canadian Defence Minister Paul Hellyer, greeting U.S. Defence Minister Robert McNamara at Uplands Airport Tuesday, said he hoped the secretary's visit would be the beginning of a long, fruitful association between the Canadian and U.S. defence departments.

Mr. Stikker told reporters that a "great many" NATO countries have operational forces with U.S. nuclear weapons available to them. He declined to name the countries.

He denied that the inter-allied nuclear force is primarily political in concept. The military position of NATO would be completely changed by the force, he contended.

New role for state secretary

OTTAWA—The Secretary of State for Canada—the office now held by J. W. Pickersgill—would become something of a domestic ambassador between the federal government and the 10 provinces of Canada under the terms of a private member's bill standing on the House of Commons order paper under the name of Heward Grafftey, Progressive Conservative member for Brome-Missisquoi.

Mr. Grafftey's plan would pattern the State Department, now one of the lighest government portfolios, after the External Affairs Department in many respects. It would draw on the talents of all other government bureaus and agencies.

Federal-provincial programs had grown like Topsy over the years, with some departments not knowing what others planned. His scheme would co-ordinate the work of all departments which touch on provincial affairs, and would provide long-range planning and constant review of current problems.

The bill, given first reading in the Commons Monday, stands 21st on the Commons order paper for debate during the limited time allocated to private members.

However, Mr. Grafftey, a 34-year-old lawyer and businessman, intends to press for action on it. He has been considering the measure for three years and hoped to have it adopted by the former Conservative government before its defeat this sprinfg.

Study situation

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Matthew Dymond said Tuesday an organizational meeting will be held here June 12 to set up a study into the nursing situation in Ontario. Metropolitan Toronto Chairman William Allen said last week that a shortage of qualified nurses has delayed the opening of the new $8,000,000 Riverdale Hospital. Mr. Dymond has said there is no shortage of nurses in the province.

Powdered milk price increases may boost the price of bread

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rising prices of powdered milk across Canada could lead to higher prices for bread, diary industry spokesmen say. But the men who should know, the bakers, are non-committal.

The milk powder increases were sparked by the removal of a federal government subsidy to farmers of 25 cents for 100 pounds of whole milk.

A survey by The Canadian Press shows powered milk prices have gone up an average of three cents a pound.

One of the heftiest jumps will probably be in Nova Scotia where a large grocery distributor said a one-pound package will soon cost eight cents more than the current price of 32 cents.

One of Nova Scotia's largest bakeries said the price of bread will have to be raised this year because of a general increase in commodities used in making bread.

PRICES WILL CLIMB

Saint John, N.B., reports a 2½-cent increase in wholesale powered milk prices within the last 10 days. A bakery spokesman said the increase will have a bearing on future bread prices.

The price of powered milk is on the upward trend in Montreal, but bakers says it's still too early to say whether their prices will be affected.

An Ottawa broker reports wholesale powered milk prices rose to $1.60 for a 36-pound pack and will probably be reflected at retail level in an increase of five cents a pound.

The broker said the fluctuation was due to a recent federal government decision to buy unspecified amounts of dried skim milk powder at a maximum rate of 11 cents a pound compared with 8.3 cents last year.

In Winnipeg, H. E. D. Stephenson, president of McKenzie-Stephenson Limited, a manufacturers' agent, says wholesale prices of powdered skim milk have gone up about three cents a pound.

FACE OTHER INCREASES

He said he believes the increase will make it difficult for bakers, who also face increases in other products, such as sugar.

In Regina, where the price of powdered milk has been fluctuating for 12 months, the cost has gone up three cents a pound.

Show Business

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — On Saturday night west coast members of Actors Equity will gather at a Beverly Hilton banquet to salute the stage union's 50th birthday. An honored guest will be Ed Wynn.

Younger members of Equity probably are unaware of the significance of the Wynn honor. The fact is that Wynn played a major role in the success of Actors Equity, the first major union in show business.

I went out to Disney Studios to hear about the comedian's serious role in the union movement. He had just returned to earth after flying with Julie Andrews on wires for the fantasy, Mary Poppins.

"This shows you what actors have to do to get work nowadays," he commented.

He and other performers in the movie were being paid handsomely for their flights, of course. Wynn reminisced of a time when performers weren't so protected.

NO REHEARSAL PAY

"Before the Equity strike, actors weren't paid anything for rehearsal time," he said. "They might rehearse six weeks for a show that closed in a week. That meant they were paid for one week when they put in seven weeks' work.

"There was one Winter Garden musical in that time that rehearsed 16 weeks and played only two. The chorus girls were getting $18 a week. That amounted to $36 for 18 weeks' work."

He cited other grievances: Contracts allowed actors to be paid half-time for Easter and pre-Christmas weeks, traditionally the worst in show business. Some contracts allowed no pay during election week; one producer invoked the clause

Charles Boyer and Hope Lange in a delightful scene from Martin Poll's Technicolor Panavision comedy "LOVE IS A BALL" opening today at the GRANADA Theatre, co-stars Glenn Ford and Ricardo Montalban.

About Television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The Soviet cocktail party has its business uses. In fact, had it not been for a high-level embassy party in Moscow in honor of Nikita Khrushchev, NBC might never have been able to penetrate its high walls to make The Kremlin.

The program, showing portions of the city-within-a-city never seen before on television, will be shown tonight.

Lucy Jarvis, an attractive brunette with long experience in public affairs and news shows, mothered and nursed the project, with the official title of co-producer. She got permission largely through fine contracts, good offices—and simple persistence. First break was knowing Alexei Adzhubei, editor of Izvestia and Khrushchev's son-in-law, with whom she became acquainted while working on his freedom - of - the - press television debate with Pierre Salinger a couple of seasons ago.

Once she reached Moscow to wrap up plans and get started on making the tour of the Kremlin, she encountered frustrating bureaucratic delay after delay.

SPEAKS RUSSIAN

Then at the cocktail party, she met Khrushchev. Speaking Russian didn't hurt, for she poured out her plans. He turned on the green light — and last September the shooting started.

The program was made by a handful of NBC staff members with major assists from Soviet film makers and television.

Mrs. Jarvis is happy about the whole thing.

"Everybody—or almost everybody—thinks the Kremlin is a dark, somber place surrounded by walls like a prison," she said. "It isn't at all—parts of it are absolutely beautiful. And if this one goes off well, I hope to go back and do another program on their Hermitage Museum which houses one of the greatest collections of art in the world."

while a show was playing in Canada.

"Some producers would cancel contracts when they felt like it," Wynn added. "Actors had no recourse."

Because of such conditions, Actors Equity went on strike Aug. 6, 1919. Although he wasn't a member, Wynn walked out of his show, Shubert's Gaieties of 1919. Broadway was virtually shut down but the theatre men stood firm.

JOINED AFL

Wynn recalled a strike meeting at which he advocated taking Equity into the American Federation of Labor.

"I was hissed from the floor," he said. "I argued that the strike wasn't going to succeed unless the actors got some support. They wouldn't listen to me until Ethel Barrymore got up. With her commanding presence, she convinced the members that my idea might have merit."

Wynn's suggestion was heeded and he personally got a charter from Samuel Gompers, president of the AFL.

Equity won the month - long strike a few days after the AFL charter was granted. And Wynn was made a life member.

Helicopters displace 'Old Paint' in Fort Garry Horse's operations

SOEST, West Germany (CP) Some Canadian Army pilots can give the RCAF lessons in low flying.

They are the pilots of the seven helicopters of the reconnaissance squadron of the Fort Garry Horse, a tank unit serving with the 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade group in West Germany.

Their specialty is contour flying or, as they call it, "nap of the earth" flying. This means hugging the ground—within one to six feet at times—and flying up gullies and folds in the ground to spot an enemy before he spots them.

"Our job is the locating of enemy ground defences, the confirmation of strengths, equipment and probable intentions," said Capt. Lorne Glendinning of Vancouver, commander of the helicopter unit based at Fort Chambly near here.

STRAIN ON PILOTS

Flying a few feet above the ground in their CH-112 Hiller machines at nearly 100 miles an hour, the pilots have to watch constantly for power lines, trees and fences. They fly in all kinds of weather.

"The physical and mental strain is terrific," Capt. Glendinning said.

In the last year the unit has flown 1,800 hours without even a minor accident.

Capt. Hugh Ross of Lacombe, Alta., the unit's second - in-command, said:

"We're pioneering a new type of battlefield reconnaissance using helicopters in conjunction with scout cars. All our pilots were experienced armored corps officers before they took helicopter training so it wasn't difficult for us to adapt armored corps tactics to air operations."

COVER EACH OTHER

"A group of tanks advancing in battle is always covered by other tanks as it moves. We do the same with our aircraft. One pops up from behind cover, takes a look, pops down and moves to right or left before moving forward again. When the pilot finds a good position from which to observe he calls the other aircraft forward."

Other pilots in the unit are Lieut. Brian Caldwell of Toronto, Lieut. Bruce Muelaner of Edmonton, Lieut. Peter March of Hampton, N.B., Lieut. Terry Jones of Camrose, Alta., Lieut. Bill Pollock of Grenfell, Sask., Capt. Fred Zeggil of Singhampton, Ont., and Capt. Harold Swain of Springside, Sask.

Each helicopter also carries an observer. Sgt. Art Brown of St. Catharines, Ont., an observer, said: "I'm doing the same kind of a job I did as a scout car commander but there's a big difference due to the speed. We may be travelling anywhere from 40 to 100 miles an hour. You've only got seconds to study the ground, identify the area you're after and look for enemy positions."

Pure-air town becomes a centre for lung research

CHILLIWACK, B.C. (CP) — This city in the heart of the Fraser Valley farm belt has been enlisted as part of a study of the causes of lung disease.

One aim is to determine whether lack of air pollution is matched by decreased incidence of such conditions.

A seven-week survey of 600 adults was started May 15. The results will be compared with those of a similar survey made in 1961 at Berlin, N.H.

The New Hampshire city, a pulp and paper centre, has considerable atmospheric pollution. Chilliwack, in a rural setting, has hardly any.

The researchers are Dr. Donald Anderson, assistant professor of medicine and preventive medicine at the University of British Columbia, and Dr. Benjamin Ferris Jr., associate professor of environmental health and safety at Harvard University's school of public health.

Dr. Anderson says the survey has three objectives:

1. Is there the same amount of respiratory disease in a clean, pollution-free city when differences in smoking habits and age are taken into account?

2. What is the prevalence of various respiratory symptoms such as coughing, production of mucous and colds and wheezing in a normal, healthy population?

3. What is the prevalence of indigestion and ulcer symptoms?

"Our interest in this kind of study stems from the fact that chest diseases such as chronic bronchitis, asthma and pulmonary emphysema (a term applied to the final stages of lung disease) are the fastest growing cause of death in North America," says Dr. Anderson.

Plane crash

To hold inquest May 29

GRANBY (Staff) — Ten witnesses have been called to give evidence at an inquest to be held May 29 in Granby into the deaths of Montreal businessman Hyman Y. Ginsberg, and his wife Adele, who were killed April 21 when their light airplane crashed on a flight from Montreal to Sherbrooke.

The bodies were found in the wreckages of the plane near Racine, about 20 miles northeast of here, after a five-day ground and air search.

Granby coroner Dr. Henri Picard said the witnesses would include officials of the federal department of transport and the Quebec Provincial Police who investigated the crash, a relative of the Ginsberg, and people living near the crash scene.

Fire guts home at Canterbury E.

CANTERBURY EAST — (Special) — Fire believed to have started in the chimney gutted the home of Mr. and Mrs, Douglas Mayhew here May 19.

Mr. and Mrs. Mayhew were attending the christening of their grandson, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. McGrory and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. D. McGrory of Montreal when Mr. Mayhew's father, Harold, rushed to the church to tell them of the fire.

By the time the Mayhew's and friends reached the home, high winds had fanned the flames to a nearby implement shed. Men were able to save machinery in the shed and a few items from the downstairs rooms of the home. The personal belongings of both McGrory families, house guests, were also lost.

The Mayhew's are now living in the school-house.

Plan to close Wellington St. for summer festival in July

Wellington Street will be closed to traffic and a pedestrian shopping mall will be set up July 2, 3 and 4, during the Sherbrooke summer festival.

This was announced Tuesday by Marcel Dufresne joint director of sales promotion for Molson's Brewery, who told the Sherbrooke Rotary Club that the Wellington Street merchants and the city fathers had joined in the effort to "make it Christmas in July".

The street will be closed from Albert to King Streets for the three days, he said, and there would be music with entertainment artists performing on a stage.

Special summer sales have been organized, he said and it was hoped that this year's festival would be the biggest ever.

The festival this year would run from June 28 to July 14, he said, and celebrations would include parades by 35 majorette corps and by bugle corps with demonstrations in the ball park, a repeat of the aerobatics display by the RCAF Golden Hawks July 1, baseball, boxing, and little league ball.

Designed to bring people to Sherbrooke, the festival would be supported by a province-wide advertizing campaign by Molsons, including press conferences in Sherbrooke and Montreal.

Mr. Dufresne said the idea of the summer festival had been developed by Molson's, and the firm hoped it would eventually become as big as the Quebec Winter Carnival.

"We were in on the start of the Quebec Carnival," he said, "and we are still active in it as well as in the St. Maurice Valley Canoe Race. After the Quebec Carnival got so big we pulled out of the organizing, and this is what we hope to do in Sherbrooke."

He said Sherbrooke was in an ideal position to attract people. It was near the American border, and also well situated for people from other parts of the province.

Bottle drive at Danville on Wednesday

DANVILLE — The citizens of Danville are advised that the Danville branch of the Canadian Legion will conduct a bottle drive Wednesday evening. All types of old bottles and jars will be collected for salvage.

For many years various organizations have participated in paper drives to raise funds whie at the same time offering the residents an opportunity to clean out the waste paper which collects in a home.

The Danville Legion feels that bottles and jars are other items which tend to collect in sheds and basements of homes and are seldom used. This collection will offer the residents of Danville an opportunity to clean out their shelves of unused bottles.

Allen Royal reports that the Legion plans to sort and store these bottles on their premises until a market is found. Funds realized from the sale will be used to help youth organizations in the town.

Danville residents are asked to leave the bottles on the edge of the sidewalk or lawn Wednesday evening between 6 and 9 for easy pick-up.

QPP report bomb scare at U of S

Quebec Provincial Police in Sherbrooke Tuesday investigated a telephoned tip that a bomb had been placed in a students' residence at the University of Sherbrooke.

A search of the premises revealed the call to have been a hoax, as was the call to municipal police Monday to the effect that a bomb had been placed in an unspecified building in Sherbrooke.

Last month, men of the RCMP, the Quebec police and the Lennoxville force evacuated both the Lennoxville post office and Bishop's University on the same day after telephoned bomb warnings.

Richmond coliseum renovated

RICHMOND — (Special) — The local coliseum is undergoing repairs and being enlarged.

There will be more rooms for players. The restaurant will be more spacious to accommodate the fans and visitors and offices will be built for the Richmond Hockey Association. The group will hold its meetings in the new quarters after completion.

The building is being insulated and a new furnace installed to provide better heating. There will also be a medical room in which to treat injured players and spectators attending the hockey games.

RHA president, Dr. Roland Bernier, said work should be completed on time for re-opening next fall.

Budget allotments exceeded

Treasurer warns of overspending

Sherbrooke City Treasurer Olivier Routhier warned Tuesday evening that "unless strict orders are given", expenditures in four municipal departments for the present year will "far exceed" budget allotments.

The warning was contained in a report submitted to council for the purpose "of bringing to your attention once again several expenditures which exceed the budget estimates."

The four departments mentioned were hygiene, electricity, gas and public works.

Mr. Routhier gave the budget estimates provided for until May 14, 1963, and the outlays up to the same date.

The most significant discrepancy appeared between figures on garbage collection. Here the difference amounted to $18,665.71 (estimate was $72,200 while expenses reached $90,865.71).

Alderman M. Savard, finance committee chairman, explained the difference by stating that the reason for this was cold weather. This made garbage collection more difficult and time consuming, he said. Alderman Savard added that the increase in actual cost over the budget estimate in the maintenance of the lighting system could be accounted for by the same reason.

In the electricity department, the expenditures to May 14 amounted to $20,083.77 compared to a budget allotment of $12,000. However, Alderman Savard indicated that in all probability the original (final) budget estimate will not be surpassed. Complete cost for this department is predicted at $32,000.

He offered the same reason for the $5889.06 difference in the sewage maintenance department. Estimates here were $13,875 while expenses reached $19,764.06.

Other figures released in the treasurer's report were as follows: Street cleaning costs were estimated at $26,250 while the actual expenditures amounted to $30,182.55; upkeep of the principal pipes (gas service) came to $3,760.34 although the estimate here was $1,875.

In the gas service, the upkeep of the meters amounted to $2,662.44; the forecast here was $1,500. The item listed under public works noted that in the North Ward the upkeep of rural roads exceeded by $10,254.09 estimates. The total for the year is $10,000.

At Canton, Ohio

To inspect water system in early June

Sherbrooke city officials will visit Canton, Ohio, during the first week in June, Alderman J. M. Jeanson said Tuesday night, for the purpose of inspecting the water purification system in operation there.

Alderman Jeanson said that the reason city officials are postponing the visit is because they are awaiting the return to Sherbrooke of an engineer who will also go with the delegation.

Sherbrooke officials have already made a similar trip to Chateauguay, (near Montreal) and examined the "aquifer" system which they judged "perfect" but have decided to go to Canton to see how effective a similar system is in this larger city.

The Chateauguay population served by running water through underground deposits of gravel is considerably smaller than the population in this city. Canton is a city of about 115,000 people.

Alderman Jeanson added that those to make the visit include members of the water committee and Mayor Nadeau.

If city officials deem the system suitable for Sherbrooke, they will experiment locally with it within one month, according to Alderman Jeanson. Mr. Jeanson also noted that one of the three systems under study by Sherbrooke city authorities will be selected within one month.

Steps taken to obtain grants to construct a new city hall

Minister without Portfolio Carrier Fortin advised Sherbrooke council in a letter Tuesday evening that he has taken steps to obtain special grants for the city to build a new city hall.

Mr. Fortin, MPP for Sherbrooke, said he has had the project included in the list of special works which various municipalities have proposed be undertaken to mark the centenary of Confederation.

He also informed Sherbrooke authorities that a meeting with the Quebec minister of public works, Rene St. Pierre, could not be arranged for another 15 days. Officials want to discuss the project with Mr. St. Pierre.

The provincial government authorities have already told Sherbrooke council they intend to co-operate if a new city hall is built. Part of the building would be occupied by provincial offices.

Mr. Fortin had previously noted that the provincial government has indicated it would need about 20,000 square feet of space.

The new city hall would be erected at the site of the old Central School building on King Street West which is owned by the city. In charge of the project is a special committee formed of Aldermen Everett Nicol, Marcel Jeanson, Marcel Savard and Felix Thibault.

East Ward garage damaged by fire

Twelve Sherbrooke firemen and two officers fought for almost two hours a gasoline fire in a private garage in East Sherbrooke early this morning. No one was injured.

The origin of the fire has not been determined. Firemen report that damage was "considerable" to the garage, behind 473 Conseil Street, and to the car it contained. The car was the property of G. Fisette.

Sherbrooke's number four fire station answered the call at 1.39 a.m., and the men returned to the station at 3.45 a.m.

Tourist trade seminar set for June 10 here

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce has announced a regional seminar of the tourist trade to be held June 10 at the New Sherbrooke Hotel.

Representatives of all Chambers in the Sherbrooke district will be invited to hear experts speak on how local tourism can best be promoted.

The sponsor of the seminar is the Canadian Tourist Association, with the Quebec Chamber of Commerce—through its Sherbrooke chapter—collaborating. The chamber did not announce speaker's names.

Following the same directors' meeting which confirmed the tourism conference, the Chamber announced it had named Ernest Grigsby and Eddy Echenberg, vice-president and director respectively, to represent it at the May 23 meeting of the Quebec Chamber's administrative council in Quebec.

In other announcements, the Chamber noted that Mayor Armand Nadeau would preside at the swearing-in of new officers at the Chamber's annual meeting at the Social Club June 6, and thanked City Hall for its reception of the recent Chamber brief on industrial promotion.

Fund drive to be held

A campaign to raise funds to help young men study for the Roman Catholic priesthood will be held in Sherbrooke May 26 to June 1, Mrs. Robert Butler of the diocesan federation of Les Dames de Sainte Anne announced Tuesday.

Roman Catholic families will be visited and asked to contribute to the fund. Another purpose of the drive is to acquaint the public with the needs for priests in the R.C. church.

The development of hybrid corn has given yields on an average 50 per cent higher than ordinary varieties.

To crack down on speeders in Sherbrooke

Complaints from every part of the city of Sherbrooke that people are racing cars and generally driving dangerously fast have resulted in a police crackdown on speeders.

Captain Armand Genest of the municipal force said Wednesday that a systematic program will insure a check in all areas of the city.

"We are going to catch a lot of speeders," he said, "and when we do, I think the judge will be pretty tough on them."

Municipal Judge Pierre Beaudry could not be reached for comment, but the police drive within the city follows closely the words of Judge Redmond Hayes of the Court of sessions of the peace.

He said in court last week that he intended to make an example of young drivers "who think the roads belong to themselves alone." He promised higher fines and longer licence suspensions.

Captain Genest said that the police "will do what police everywhere do to catch speeders. How we are going to do it is police business.

"We have to stop this speeding. We don't want any more children to get killed."

He explained that motorists charged with speeding for the first time had the choice of appearing before the municipal court or of paying a $25 fine.

Any further offences require the person to appear in court, he said, and the penalty to be imposed is up to the judge.

Restraint needed on private bills

Judging from the flood of private members' bills which already have appeared on the order paper of the House of Commons, a substantial number of back-benchers are unwilling to display any degree of self-discipline in the drive for speeding up the major measures planned by the Government.

With the sittings less than a week old a total of 84 such bills have been given first reading and referred back for later debate.

Some of these proposed measures may be in the national interest or of importance to a substantial number of the electors but the great majority of them are of little or no importance to anybody but the Member concerned or to a few of his friends.

Even those that hold a degree of general interest deal with matters that cannot be considered urgent in the light of the major problems facing Parliament at this session.

Eight of the original list deal with consumer credit and interest rates, seven of them cover paid statutory holidays in industry and the granting of collective bargaining rights to civil servants.

Others propose the establishment of lotteries and sweepstakes and amendments to the election laws.

Most of these are hardy perennials which have been debated at session after session only to be talked out. Those of any relative importance are generally incorporated in Government legislation.

The right of private members to introduce bills of their own choosing must be preserved but it would seem that any member really interested in the welfare of the nation might show some reserve at cluttering up the work of Parliament at an unusually crucial time in the country's history.

Similarly, members might be expected to show a more reasonable attitude in the questions addressed to members of the cabinet.

A plan of action to stop terrorism

It apparently required a trip to Europe to make Premier Lesage realize the serious ill effects terrorism in Quebec is having on the province.

As Mr. Lesage set up a special meeting yesterday of police authorities, he said that potential investors in Europe are viewing the situation here with alarm.

And well they might. It has become increasingly obvious that as the acts of terrorism grow in seriousness, the spirit behind them is not just a passing fad. There appears to a hard, if extremely tiny core of extremists who mean what they say when they talk of attempting to achieve Quebec independence through violence.

No doubt, Mr. Lesage's concern for investment here includes possible effects of terrorism on the tourist industry, a big one in Quebec. There can be no doubt that unless bombings and threats cease, the only tourists visiting Quebec this summer will be those with a yen for danger and few thoughts for their own personal safety.

While it appears to some that Mr. Lesage is a trifle tardy in acting, nevertheless now that he has acted, he is doing so with speed, with firmness and with an obvious determination to wipe out terrorism in Quebec.

Out of yesterday's meeting, there surely must have emerged a plan of action that will be effective. For, with all sympathy for the problems of law officers, and with all due respect to them and their superiors, it must be said that authorities have been appallingly ineffective so far.

Murder, destruction of property, threats to life and limb and hundreds of bomb hoaxes have become almost everyday occurrences in some parts of the province.

It must be stopped at all costs.

Negroes seek an end to temporizing

While it is understandable that the U.S. government wishes to move with as much prudence as possible in the explosive racial situation in the deep South, there is such a thing as too much prudence.

There are good reasons for believing that the time for slow evolution from segregation to integration has long since past.

It was put rather nicely in a letter to the editor of a Montreal newspaper recently. The writer pointed out that the view of many so-called Southern moderates is that integration will come eventually, but "not in our time." He points out that this is exactly what the Southern moderates were saying 80 and more years ago.

In other words, ever since the Emancipation Proclamation, the whole ideal of integration has been pursued as something that must happen, but only in the very distant future. Nothing but temporizing, the author of the letter said.

There is much in what he says. While in many parts of the Deep South, integration has taken place relatively quietly, there is no indication that the hard core of racism—which is rather a big entity south of the Mason-Dixon line—is in any way softening. On the contrary, the politics of eventualism have preserved segregation, as such, as a sound policy to follow.

The leaders of the Negro revolt appear to realize this. They are obviously not impressed by temporizing. They are forcing a crisis. And, in many ways, it is a crisis that must come.

Other papers say:

Indicates future plans of Chinese

Why did President Liu of China use "smiling phrases" in his visits to Indonesia, Burma, and Cambodia and sound the trumpet of violence in North Vietnam?

Christian Science Monitor

There doubtless were multiple reasons, as usual. The main ones probably were these:

- He wants to persuade non-aligned governments that there is a way to avoid attack by China, such as the attack that struck India last fall. It is to lean toward communism even more than Mr. Nehru did—and as the leaders of Indonesia, Burma, and Cambodia are now ostensibly doing.
- He wants to persuade Asians that only when the "imperialists" of the capitalist West are at work in Asia, will China respond with violence. And that violence in these cases—such as the Communist guerrilla war in South Vietnam—is justified and necessary.
- He is justifying China's increasing intervention in Laos which is changing the picture there. If this trend continues, Laos will pass out of the category of Soviet willingness to make a deal under pressure into Chinese intransigeance.
- He is preparing his case for the forthcoming doctrinal talks with the Russian Communists at Moscow.

The thread which binds these points together deserves the most careful scrutiny. Who will say confidently that Liu is not deluding Sukarno, Ne Win and Sihanouk as Chou En-lai deceived Nehru—only to turn on him? If Liu is pressing the war in Vietnam and softening up the areas next in line, only a decisive policy of restraint will suffice.

matter of fact

Pure-food-and-drug acts go back as far as ancient Athenian laws against the adulteration of wine with color or flavoring agents. In England during the reign of William the Conqueror, brewers were fined for adultering beer, and in the 14th century the artificial coloring of butter was prohibited in Paris.

Whence Hope Had All But Fled

Mr. Manning in driver's seat

Little hope seen in Alberta for those opposed to Social Credit

EDMONTON — Still smarting from the near trip to oblivion they received at the hands of voters four years ago, Alberta's opposition parties now have the formidable task of trying to dent a Social Credit government stronger now than when it took power 28 years ago.

They plan to turn the humiliation of that defeat into zeal as they prepare one of the strongest assaults ever waged on the Manning government for the June 17th provincial election.

But despite their ambitions, Premier Manning makes political hay with the achievements that oil and his government have wrought for this boom province, which has the third largest budget in Canada.

As far as Premier Manning is concerned, the only issue in this election, which comes during his 20th year as premier, is whether or not the people of Alberta want to continue the broad program of development recently announced as an extension of his $500,000,000 five-year program which began in 1959.

In 1959 the Socreds came within a whisker of taking all 65 seats in the provincial legislature — 1,200 more votes would have done it. If most governments become lethargic after too many years in office, this hasn't been the case here.

It was the opposition parties who were lethargic in '59; but today they are working harder than ever, believing Manning's stranglehold in the legislature and the government's age make it more vulnerable than it has been before.

The New Democratic Party has come alive through the workings of the new leader, Neil Reimer, a political novice but experienced labor organizer. The NDP has the best organization at the moment, apart from the Social Credit machine, which has a minimum of 10 organizers in every poll.

Reimer is a moderate Socialist who says there should never be nationalization for nationalization's sake.

In this sphere he sometimes appears to the right of new Liberal leader Dave Hunter, a former provincial chamber of commerce president, who is campaigning on a policy of public power.

Well acquainted with the oil and gas industry, Reimer is attacking on two flanks — an alleged sellout of the province's natural resources to American interests and the need for a stronger opposition.

Hunter also has his organization shaping well, but he has run into internal trouble over the power issue.

The issue is distasteful to many old guard Liberals, who have threatened to run their own non-public power candidates as independent Liberal opponents against all of Hunter's men. This group has not come out into the open but has been meeting secretly, attempting to form a provincial organization.

They hope to force Hunter to drop the power issue, but he's committed to it and that isn't likely.

A self-educated ex-lumberjack, Roger Lebeuf of Calgary, formed the Alberta Unity Movement. His aim was to gather around him the organizers of all opposition parties in each constituency and have them agree to a single candidate, run him under any banner suitable, and make it a straight two-way fight with Social Credit.

He met with little success and now is defeating his intentions by indicating he will run as many as 10 Unity candidates, causing a further split in the votes.

Lebeuf's political action began with his Citizens Mineral Rights Justice League which he promoted in oil field territory, arousing farmers with charges they were being victimized by the government and oil companies. Lebeuf hopes the aroused farmers will support his Unity Movement.

The Conservative Party is running far behind. Its only member of the legislature, Ernest Watkins of Calgary, is disgruntled with their choice of an inexperienced Calgary lawyer, Milton Harradence, as leader. He's an admirer of Premier Manning and has announced he'll not seek re-election.

Harradence is fiery in speech, flits about the country at 400 mph in a World War II Mustang aircraft, but so far has failed to arouse any support, even within his party.

★ ★ ★

And so the opposition parties don't present a very strong or glamorous picture.

Premier Manning nonchalantly dismisses opposition claims for larger representation in the House with the assertion that Alberta has not suffered, but progressed, with strong Socred government.

Some of his closest colleagues say this will be his last term, and that he'll retire to his ministry.

Others speculate that he'll enter the federal field, possibly as head of a new political alignment of right-wingers. He often speaks of this new alignment which he thinks must come to head off socialism.

Man on the hot seat

Finance minister plays it cool

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet member who holds down the hot seat in the Liberal government's "60 days of decision" is playing it cool.

Finance Minister Walter Gordon is carrying probably a heavier load than any other minister except Prime Minister Pearson during the opening weeks of the new administration.

Not only must he present a budget speech by about mid-June, but he's also responsible for preparing at least two major legislative measures for the new Parliament.

"In just under two months it has to be done—it will be done," he said, flatly and calmly, in an interview.

The 57-year-old Toronto businessman is tackling perhaps the toughest job in government with less than a year's experience in Parliament.

But as a former senior partner in a leading firm of management consultants, Walter Lockhart Gordon is an old hand at advising governments how to run their affairs.

USED TO PRESSURE

The pressure of a 60-day deadline on his budget is nothing new either. As chairman of the 1955-57 royal commission on Canada's economic prospects, which conducted an exhaustive survey of the economy, he set himself a demanding 18-month deadline for his preliminary report. He reached the target.

Mr. Gordon said that setting a 60-day deadline for the new government's immediate economic program "was a good thing to have done—there was so much indecision in the past."

"If we had more time there might be advantages. But I'm a great believer in deadlines."

He doesn't expect to work 18 hours a day, as a steady diet, as did the former Conservative finance minister, Donald Fleming.

"If people work 18 hours regularly, they don't know how to delegate work," he said, sounding like the efficiency expert he is.

Mr. Gordon, a graduate of Upper Canada College, Toronto, and Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., is the father of two married daughters—"both have made me a grandfather" and—a son still at school.

He confesses to having no favorite hobbies or activities. "I usually enjoy whatever's going on."

KEY MAN IN PARTY

The new finance minister, a quiet-spoken man with a dry wit, looks like a cross between a thoughtful professor and a tweedy gentleman farmer. In fact he does have a farm at Schomberg near Toronto.

In business, however, he was a take-charge man in many industrial management problems. When he entered active politics late in 1959 he soon became a take-charge man in the Liberal party.

He was chairman of the key policy committee at the 1961 National Liberal Rally and soon afterwards was picked by Mr. Pearson as chairman of the party's national election campaign committee, a job he handled in both the 1962 and 1963 elections.

He won personal election on his first try in Toronto Davenport in 1962 with a 2,388-vote lead, and widened his margin this year to 6,500 votes.

He had been a close friend and economic adviser to Mr. Pearson ever since Mr. Pearson became party leader, and it was almost a foregone conclusion he would become finance minister in the new government.

It's a job that many people consider something of a personal liability for a politician. The man who levies taxes isn't always the most popular in government. But Mr. Gordon shrugs that off.

"That's fine for me," he said. "I'm 57 years of age. This is what I was asked to do and it's all right by me. I don't think anybody's thinking about their political futures."

PLAN LOAN FUND

Right now Mr. Gordon is thinking about his budget. Though he is necessarily secretive about what might be in it, there are plenty of clues in the party's election platform and campaign speeches by him and Mr. Pearson.

In short: Some tax incentives for industry, an effort to move closer to a balanced budget, but no big new social welfare plans this year to add to budgetary expenditures.

The Liberals have said welfare improvements will come later when they can be afforded, and that an early extension of the old age pension system will be on a contributory basis, not adding to the government's budget.

On top of the budget task, Mr. Gordon is responsible for preparing two major measures, both of which will break new ground in government activity.

One will establish a municipal development loan fund to provide low-cost federal loans for municipal projects.

The other will set up a Canadian Development Corporation for funelling federal funds into industrial development projects where private capital is inadequate. It has been suggested that the corporation might also act as a pool for some private investment capital.

Mr. Gordon is also a key member of the nine-man cabinet committee on economic, trade and employment problems.

Thus the finance minister's office is likely to be a busy place for some time. Mr. Gordon is not worrying about that.

RESIGNED PARTNERSHIPS

"I've been senior partner of two very active firms, with 85 partners, and most of them had new ideas every minute," he said. "So things aren't going to be so different."

The firms are Woods, Gordon and Company, management consultants, and Clarkson, Gordon and Company, chartered accountants. The Toronto - born Mr. Gordon joined the latter firm in 1927 and became a partner in 1935. He resigned his partnership in both when he entered the cabinet.

The new finance minister isn't new to government service. He came to Ottawa at the start of the Second World War and helped to organize the Foreign Exchange Control Board. In 1940-42 he was special assistant to the deputy finance minister, Clifford Clark—a job held soon after by Mitchell Sharp, now trade minister.

In 1945 he was chairman of a royal commission on the federal civil service and in 1958 chairman of a special committee studying the Ontario government's organization. His firm also carried out special studies on reorganization of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission and on mail-handling methods in the post office department.

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — It has become increasingly apparent in the last two or three weeks that there will be no significant tax relief for the ordinary citizen in Finance Minister Gordon's first budget. But now it's beginning to look as if the pendulum is swinging further. In two words: higher taxes.

The new government is reliably reported to have found the country's finances in a worse state than the previous government had revealed or the incoming administration had imagined. Speaking with knowledge of the situation, Prime Minister Pearson has referred to the "terrific deficit" run by the Diefenbaker government in the year that ended March 31.

Cabinet ministers hint darkly that the country is nearly bankrupt. On April 10 of last year Finance Minister Fleming budgeted for a $745 millions deficit. The June austerity program was to have cut that by about $200 millions. But now scores of litigations are being launched in the Exchequer Court here by companies seeking refunds of the special tariff surcharges they paid after this austerity tax was improved by order-in-council in June.

This tax was never submitted to Parliament for legislative action, and when in opposition the Liberals contended that it was an illegal tax. Now they perforce take the position of the law officers of the Crown in the Department of Justice that it was a legal tax—but if the court rules otherwise, upholding the Liberals' pre-election contention, the Liberal administration will be further in the hole by an estimated $100 millions.

While the size of the surplus or deficit of the immediately past year is usually kept secret until the finance minister brings in his budget for the new year, the references of Pearson and other ministers suggest that Diefenbaker, Fleming, Nowlan & Co. may have left them with a billion dollar deficit.

A cabinet minister told a Liberal party organizer the other day that "for the next year you may be ashamed of being a Liberal".

This comment was made in a discussion of national finances. It could have been a hint at higher taxes to come in Gordon's budget next month. Even before the election Pearson warned that some of his government's decisions would be hard and unpopular.

☆ ★ ☆

While the Throne Speech was largely a re-run of the Liberal's election promises, the program it detailed will be a costly one both in terms of money to be spent and of revenues from corporation taxes to be cut as incentives to industry.

It's generally true that you have to have money in order to spend it, and the main way government gets money is from taxation.

Another way is by borrowing. But this siphons off capital which, if the government's economic expansion program is to succeed, should be devoted to industrial expansion. Nor is foreign capital the answer, for the government is seeking to reduce foreign ownership of Canadian industry. Nor is borrowing from the Bank of Canada the answer, because this results in an inflationary increase in the money supply, and the money supply has already been substantially increased in the last few months.

That brings Mr. Gordon back to the ordinary taxpayer. You and me, Joe.

QPP testifies in French; accused objects

Language is barrier in courtroom

By PAT BOUGIE
(Record staff reporter)

SWEETSBURG — What could easily have been a language barrier here Tuesday between an English-speaking resident of Knowlton charged with speeding and a Granby provincial police officer testifying against him was quickly ironed out when the Crown Prosecutor, with the task of seeking a conviction, acted as a translator.

Georges Chaput, a 33 year old provincial police officer with the Granby detachment took the witness stand to testify against Brandon Sykes, a 34 year-old Knowlton merchant, who was charged with speeding at Saxby Corner about 3.30 p.m. March 4.

Constable Chaput began testifying in French after being questioned in the same language by Crown Prosecutor, Gilles Therriault, of Granby.

Mr. Sykes, who acted as his own defence attorney, immediately objected, claiming that he wished that the testimony be given in English.

Prosecutor Therriault counte,ed, claiming that the witness had the right to testify in the language that he wished and when asked in which language he preferred to testify, Constable Chaput replied, "French, I don't understand English too well."

Mr. Sykes persisted and Prosecutor Therriault told him to hire an official translator.

Both the Crown Prosecutor and Mr. Sykes ended the discussion in a stalemate, and finally, Prosecutor Therriault offered to act as a translator, which Mr. Sykes accepted.

Constable Chaput then told the court that he arrested Mr. Sykes at Saxby Corner March 4, for speeding after police had followed Mr. Sykes for more than two miles.

Constable Chaput stated that he arrested Sykes for travelling 70 miles per hour in a 50 mile per hour zone.

Under cross examination by Mr. Sykes, Chaput admitted that he arrested Sykes not in a 50-mile-per-hour zone but in a 60 mile per hour zone.

Chaput's testimony was corroborated by Marc Coalier, another provincial police officer, who was with Chaput March 4.

Coalier added however, that he had also stepped out of the police car to speak with Sykes.

Testifying on his own behalf, Sykes told the court that at no time whatever, Coalier spoke to him or even got out of the police car.

Sykes added that when first arrested and approached by Chaput, the officer told him "very politely" to put on his new license plates on his car.

"It was after telling me about my plates that he then told me I was speeding," he said.

Sykes claimed that when arrested he had checked his speedometer because he knew the police were following him and that he was travelling between 54 to 56 miles per hour.

Judge Delaney postponed the case until next Tuesday following the request from Sykes on grounds that he had another witness to testify in his favor.

To harness Hamilton Falls

Work may begin in 1964 on world's greatest hydro-electric development

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP) — If Joey Smallwood's hopes are realized, a start will be made within a year on one of the world's great hydro - electric power developments.

The Newfoundland premier declared in mid-April he hopes work will begin by early 1964 to harness Hamilton Falls in the heart of Labrador, a region he has often described as his province's treasure chest.

What is involved is a water course with a hydro potential of 7,000,000 horsepower. A 10-year development project would employ 5,000 men and cost an estimated $1,500,000,000, an undertaking as large in scope as the St. Lawrence Seaway.

British - Newfoundland Corporation (Brinco), Newfoundland government agent, owns 80 per cent of the Hamilton Falls development, and publicly owned Hydro - Quebec the remaining 20 per cent.

Brinco was established in 1953, primarily with British capital, to develop Newfoundland's natural resources. It holds a 99-year lease on the Hamilton River drainage basin.

NINTH HEAVIEST FLOW

With a drop of 245 feet, Hamilton Falls is higher than Niagara's Horseshoe Falls, at 160 feet. In average rate of water flow — 30,000 to 40,000 cubic feet a second—it ranks ninth in the world, the biggest being South America's Guaira Falls at 470,000.

The Canadian and American falls at Niagara, where about 6,000,000 horsepower is produced, average 212,200 cubic feet a second and have the steadiest flow of any in the world's waterfalls.

An important factor in plans for Hamilton Falls is that it lies on terrain ideally suited for inexpensive hydro development. The topography eliminates the need for expensive concrete dams usually associated with power projects.

At Twin Falls, 12 miles west of Hamilton Falls, Brinco saved an estimated $70,000,000 because it was able to put up earth dams for its 120,000-horsepower hydro-electric station.

"That's what is different about Labrador," says Dr. Richard L. Hearn of Toronto, probably Canada's best - known hydro consulting engineer. "Nature does all that work for us."

WOULD DIVERT RIVER

The Hamilton River drains a 25,000-square-mile plateau. The area, 2,000 feet above sea level, is muskeg dotted with hundreds of lakes.

Brinco's four-year project to develop the river's hydro potential is called the "channel scheme" and would harness 4,000,000 of the 7,000,000 potential horsepower.

The scheme involves diverting the river four miles above the falls through a series of lakes to a mountain on the same level as the falls 22 miles downstream. There, engineers can develop a greater head (water plunge) of 1,040 feet. Through vertical penstocks in the mountain, the diverted flow would drop to an underground power house 1,000 feet deep in solid rock.

A horizontal tunnel at the base of the powerhouse would carry the water 1 1-3 miles back to the Hamilton River at a point 400 feet above sea level. Immense turbine units of 275,000 horsepower each would be installed in the mountain.

The project would be tackled in four stages.

In the first stage, several 16-mile long earth dams at the foot of Jacopie Lake would be constructed to divert the Hamilton River around the falls to the powerhouse, creating enough flow to develop the first 1,000,000 horsepower.

SEAL OFF RIVER

The second stage would add 3,470 square miles to the catchment by absorbing the drainage from the Michikamau Lake area. Two dams on the Fraser and Fremont lakes would be enough to swing the drainage through the Michikamau, Lobstick and Sandgrit lakes to the Hamilton River. This would provide a second 1,000,000 horsepower.

Stage three would add a third 1,000,000 horsepower by merely boosting the storage capacity in the Michikamau. By the fourth stage, engineers visualize sealing off the mouth of the 35-mile-long Unknown River to create an even greater reservoir for a total 4,000,000 horsepower capacity. Another 2,000,000 horsepower could be generated with two plants on the lower part of the Hamilton River.

But this power would be more expensive than that produced in the channel scheme, says Brinco, and uneconomical at the present.

Wild and mostly uninhabited 10 years ago, the upper country of the Hamilton River basin is building rapidly. Thanks to development of the area's rich iron ore resources, the basin now has 150 miles of roads, two commercial airstrips, two hydro-electric plants, two mining towns—Labrador City and Wabush City—and a rail connection to the north shore of the St. Lawrence River.

SERVES MINE TOWNS

Twin Falls power, to be boosted another 120,000 horsepower within the next year, serves the twin mining towns of Labrador City and Wabush City, across the Wabush Lake from each other.

The Iron Ore Company of Canada made its first shipment last year from Labrador City, and is working at an annual production rate of 7,000,000 tons of concentrates. Wabush Mines is expected to go into production in 1965 with 6,000,000 tons of concentrates annually. About 20,000 people will live in the two company towns.

Soviet engineers have been keeping in close touch with Brinco on development of the Hamilton. They are said to be chiefly interested in the problem of transmitting power over long distances. There is a plan to build a national power grid in the Soviet Union that would require 1,500 miles of transmission lines and voltages of 800,000 or more.

W. Gillies Ross, writing in the Canadian Geographical Journal, says that by using high voltage direct current "a transmission distance of 1,000 miles is not considered impractical, either technically or economically." A line of this length, he says, could deliver Hamilton power to Quebec, Montreal or Toronto. Canada's longest transmission line at the moment is the 400-mile long grid that links Montreal with Hydro-Quebec's Bersimis River project.

Negotiations to have Hamilton's power transmitted on Hydro - Quebec lines have been going on for more than a year.

Transmission lines would be hooked into the Hydro-Quebec network, with Newfoundland and Quebec getting first call on the power and the remainder going to other Canadian or United States buyers.

In the Maritimes, Hamilton power could be carried on a line less than 700 miles long, using submarine cable to carry the power under the St. Lawrence River.

TO HARNESS FALLS — Work may begin early in 1964 to harness Hamilton Falls in Labrador, potentially one of the world's greatest hydro-electric power developments. The falls, higher than Niagara's Horseshoe Falls by 85 feet, ranks ninth in the world in average rate of water flow. The 10-year project would employ 5,000 men and cost an estimated $1,500,000,000.

Tenders are called for construction of industrial plant

WATERLOO— (Special) — Tenders for the construction of a new industrial plant here have been called for. Tenders must be in by June 3.

Council announced at their monthly meeting held May 13 that additional water and sewer facilities will have to be provided for on Lewis Street here to supply the new factory. A new street will also be opened up where the new factory is being built and will run between the Town of Shefford line and the Town of Waterloo on Lewis Street towards the lake.

* * *

Council also approved May 13 a loan of $150,000. This money is to be used for the purchase of a new tractor and back digger. The loan will also cover the costs of repairing sidewalks and surfacing on Western Avenue and repairs to Steven's bridge.

A new by-law was also passed regarding building permits in the Town. Also a by-law was passed whereby owners of dogs will have to keep them on their own property or on a leash when not on their property.

PASS THE BINOCULARS — A view into the back garden of Buckingham Palace is one of the prize attractions of a new hotel in London's West End. But security officials say guests at the 20-storey Hilton hotel won't be able to look into the Queen's apartments even with powerful binoculars.

West Germany army officers must be polite to men under their command

BONN, Germany (AP) — You've got to be polite to your men these days if you want to be an officer in the West German Army.

There was the case of the artillery corporal who asked for an evening pass.

"No," said the lieutenant sharply, "I don't encourage prostitution."

The lieutenant was made to apologize.

It was one of 5,736 complaints investigated last year by the office of Helmuth Heye, chief civilian complaint officer. This institution is borrowed from Sweden, which takes pride in a long tradition of respect for everyone's rights and dignity, even soldiers'. It's a departure from German military tradition.

Heye, once an admiral, spent 109 days last year visiting West German troops, including those stationed in France, Britain and the United States as well as at home.

He found a good many of the complaints to be about verbal rudeness. Such as that of the officer who told a not-too-bright soldier:

"If you were as tall as you are stupid they'd have to shoot the chow into your silly face with a cannon."

SMEARED FACE

A mother wrote that a lieutenant had ordered mud smeared on the face of her soldier son. It turned out that the lieutenant was trying to get his men to camouflage themselves on a field manoeuvre. When he threatened that anyone who did not apply the mud would have it applied for him, two corporals grabbed the hesitant soldier and did the job.

The lieutenant got a reprimand and the two corporals sharp warnings.

One type of complaint Heye's office can't deal with —food. An assistant said these complaints usually come from homesick draftees who miss the specialties of their own region.

Saucy TV show goes into mothballs; Britons face lonely Saturday nights

LONDON (CP) — Once again in Britain, Saturday night is the loneliest night in the week.

That's because the television program called That Was The Week That Was—more familiarly known as TWTWTW or TW3—is off the air until September, leaving BBC viewers with an aching void and forcing table-talk fanciers to look around for a new topic of conversation.

As the weekly show went into mothballs, you could almost hear a faint whoosh of subsiding tension. Seldom has Britain seen anything like TWTWTW. In the brief seven months of its existence, it left in its saucy wake a cacophony of jangled nerves and shrieks of approval.

Some abhorred it; others couldn't wait for the Saturday night spot to come round again. It became a national byword; headline writers worked endless variations on the show's catchy title; the stars of the show, most of them fresh from university, became celebrities; people cancelled Saturday night social activities, suddenly remembering a last-minute excuse for staying glued to the TV set.

BASED ON SATIRE

Satire is TWTWTW's strong point, and they serve it up fresh and hot. Royalty, religion and politics are among the favored targets. There is a strong sense of topicality, since as the program's title implies most of the skits deal with items from the week's news.

The cast is scarcely wet behind the ears. The master of ceremonies, David Frost, is a brash young man of 23 whom hardly anyone would take for a minister's son, though in fact he is. A singer who is also a talented actress, Millicent Martin, does most of the musical numbers. Other performers include William Rushton, Roy Kinnear, Kenneth Cope, Al Mancini and Lance Percival.

In its crusading, youthful zest, TWTWTW sometimes spilled over into cheapness and vulgarity, using words obviously chosen for their shock value. Double meanings were occasionally used to get a few guffaws. But many viewers were willing to accept the odd embarrassing moment in return for a hard-hitting, anything-goes entertainment that made the average TV program seem mealy-mouth.

HAS OWN APPEAL

One newspaper chided TWTWTW for its air of "tatty amateurism," but for many the air of undergraduate enthusiasm had its own appeal. What seemed to be a greater danger was that producer Ned Sherrin would have a hard time maintaining the early standard week after week.

TWTWTW is the latest manifestation of a British fondness for satire that has some experts worried. Peter Cook, one of the stars of Beyond the Fringe and himself a talented lampooner, commented from his present vantage point in New York that England is "going down, giggling, in a sea of satire."

Others seemed to think that the taste for mockery and ridicule is a sign of a new vitality at a time when critics are concerned with Britain's decline as a power in the world.

With TWTWTW on vacation, one TV actor enjoys a monopoly in the satire field. He is Vancouver's Bernard Braden, whose weekly show On the Braden Beat bears some similarities to TWTWTW, and comes on at the same time Saturday night.

Why every typewriter in your office should be an Electric

Nowadays, if you have 20 girls in your typing pool, you need 20 electric typewriters. It's the easiest way to get better work in a hurry. Businesses using the IBM Electric can increase the output of their typing pool 20% or more so that, with no extra effort, five typists do the work of six, twenty typists have the same output as twenty-four.

Ask the girls in your office if they think the IBM Electric will increase their output. They'll tell you there's nothing faster.

How does the IBM Electric do it? There are many ways. To start with all the controls are neatly grouped right at your fingertips. The return key, for instance, is strategically placed to save typists a second or more at the end of each line (2000 lines = 33 minutes). Your typists get fast response with just the lightest touch. More speed, less fatigue. The highly-sensitive key-response lever lets every typist adjust the keyboard to her individual touch. And she can increase the striking power to get up to ten crisp carbon copies.

And, no matter how hard or lightly keys are struck, each character impression is identical. Periods are never blacker than other letters. O's don't leave holes in the paper.

The IBM Electric Typewriter is built to give you quality as well as speed.

The best way to prove all this is have two or three IBM Electrics installed in your office for a free demonstration. Your IBM representative will be happy to arrange it. He's listed in the Yellow Pages.

Alabama governor tries to defy integration order

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Governor George C. Wallace, thrusting state rights into the path of federal authority, has set out to block court-ordered desegregation of the University of Alabama.

The Alabama governor laid his authority on the line Tuesday after the university board of trustees had agreed to admit two Negroes and U.S. District Judge H. Hobart grooms refused to delay the June 10 enrolment.

"I embody the sovereignty of this state," said Wallace a veteran of battles with the federal government," and I will be present to bar the entrance of any Negro who seeks to enrol at the university. . . ."

Thus, Wallace embarked upon the same course followed last fall by governor Ross Barnett of Mississippi who greeted Negro James H. Meredith with an interposition statute and barred him from the University of Mississippi. Meredith later enrolled behind federal forces.

Attorney - General Richmond Flowers, a political opponent of Wallace, warned defiance of federal court orders may lead to violence. He said those who defy such orders may be to blame if federal troops are used in Alabama as they were in Mississippi.

WOULD ACCEPT NEGROES

A sampling of sentiment of students and faculty members at the university campus at Tuscaloosa indicates that while white students may not like the idea, they are willing to accept Negro class mates peacefully.

This would be in contrast to the rioting which erupted almost seven years ago when Autherine Lucy, a Negro, was admitted to the university under federal court orders. She later was expelled for making unproved statements accusing school officials of conspiring with the mob.

Otherwise, the simmering Birmingham racial situation remained quiet as 3,000 federal troops stood by at military bases and more than 1,300 state, county and city law enforcement officers kept watch over a 28-block area where rioting broke out May 12.

A hearing was scheduled during the day in federal court on a request for reinstatement of more than 1,000 negro pupils suspended or expelled from Birmingham schools for taking part in antisegregation demonstrations.

Installation of modern machinery has increased N.Z. newsprint output

AUCKLAND (CP) — Installation of a fast modern machine has doubled New Zealand's output of newsprint. When in full production, the plant now in operation will produce 220,000 tons of newsprint a year.

By the end of this year, New Zealand is expected to be the world's fifth largest newsprint exporter.

Nor is the industry planning to halt there. Already it is looking to a dramatic new era of expansion in which paper and other forest products will become one of the country's major industries.

The most striking proof of expansion is the urgent call by leaders of the industry for large-scale planting of new forests to keep pace with the demand. As recently as 10 years ago there were wide predictions that planted forests would mature and go to waste in a vast unusable surplus through lack of productive capacity.

New Zealand at present has about 2,100,000 acres of readily millable native forests and 940,000 acres of millable planted, or man-made, forests.

PINE GROWS QUICKLY

Native forests are used largely for timber for housebuilding, furniture and similar purposes. The pulp and paper industry operates almost entirely from man-made forests.

Varieties of pine such as pinus radiata mature much more quickly in New Zealand than in their native habitat in the northern hemisphere. Large artificial forests were planted on wastelands during the 1920s and 1930s. Many have already matured and others now are in full production.

The milled areas have all been replanted and are growing new crops of trees. But even the quick-growing man-made forests are not keeping pace with the expansion of the industry. It has passed the rate of forest growth and is forging farther ahead.

The industry now is producing newsprint, pulp, brown and white paper, tissues, cardboard, and a vast range of packaging and building board. The Tasman Pulp and Paper Company, which now has a $120,000,000 installation, is the largest single industrial plant in New Zealand.

EXTENDS MARKETS

Exports surplus to New Zealand requirements are going at present chiefly to Australia, which has taken a financial interest in some of the major New Zealand companies. Markets are extending to other parts of the Pacific and Far East.

Sir James Fletcher, chairman of Tasman, declares that the only limiting factor in the expansion of the pulp and paper industry is availability of forests to support it.

A dramatic increase in planting is needed now, he says. "Lack of forest resources will not impede expansion in the immediate future, but even in New Zealand a forest does not grow overnight. We will continue to plant forests, mainly because the company will need them, but also as a contribution to a national policy of greatly accelerated afforestation."

Plans are to increase the area under man-made forest to more than double by planting 1,000,000 more acres before the end of the century.

K. of C. members learn about other religions

TORONTO (CP) — Colin Venning is an officer of the Knights of Columbus who believes that inter-faith understanding can be most effectively promoted by small groups working at the local level.

Since last fall he has been the moving force in a program designed to test this philosophy.

As Grand Night of K. of C. branch 4976, Mr. Venning and other members of the Roman Catholic organization have been guests at a synagogue, visited an Anglican parish and attended a meeting of the Muslim Society of Toronto.

In each case, they have learned about the practices of other religions.

The K. of C. followed up by inviting members of a dozen faiths to St. James' Catholic church to talk about the differences between the various religions. Among those represented were Anglicans, Baptists, Moslems, Buddhists, Mormons, Lutherans, Jews, Presbyterians and members of the United Church.

Mr. Venning, security officer for a transport company, says he feels it's important that laymen take part in the ecumenical movement.

"If we don't work from the bottom we won't get anywhere."

Tigers belt Senators 22-1 while Red Sox down White Sox 18-9 in opening tilts of Little League

Tigers and Red Sox won the opening games in the Sher-Lenn Little League last night at the Parade Grounds. Tonight the Senators and Red Sox tangle while the Tigers take on the Twins. The game between Indians and Yankees has been postponed until a later date. Ground conditions being the cause of the delay.

Tigers with a barrage of twenty hits drove in twenty-two runs had rather an easy time winning their game against the Senators. A lone single by young Alex Cook was all the Senators could get from Guay's deliveries. Scoring almost at will the Tigers got runs in every inning. Big hitters in their lineup were Guay, with three hits one home run, Houle, with four-for-five, one a bases loaded homer, and Dussault, who had three-for-five. Cook crossed the plate for the Senators in the sixth inning for their lone tally. Tigers showed lots of power in this one, Senators will improve as the season progresses. Delisle, Clark and Webb handled the game.

Red Sox with John Marc Brodeur on the mound for the first three innings ran all over the White Sox building up a 14-2 lead. White Sox after their shaky start settled down and when Brodeur lost his stuff, in the top of the fourth, they tallied seven runs to put a scare into the Red Sox. Red Sox came up with four more runs in the last of the fourth to salt away the decision winning on the long end of a 18-9 result.

Red Sox in this one showed lots of promise and should be a threat all season. Their pitching with more practice will add strength to their defence. White Sox will settle down after a few more games, the new players were nervous but will improve.

Roy, Littler and Aiken were the umpires. Umpire-in Chief Bill Webb was well satisfied with his new men in the opening games.

President Campbell rejects new proposal for universal draft, NHL to adopt wait-and-see policy

BRANDON, Man. (CP)—The president of the National Hockey League Tuesday rejected the suggestion of an immediate universal professional draft of amateur players.

Clarence Campbell told a press conference a universal draft is completely premature and even if it eventually became acceptable it is still at least four or five years away.

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, holding its annual meeting here, is scheduled to consider a proposal for a universal draft of over-age junior hockey players.

Campbell's stand appeared to end any hope of it going into effect, which it cannot do without NHL participation.

Campbell paid a brief visit here Tuesday to outline the NHL's partial amateur draft. First selections will be made June 5 in Montreal at the NHL's annual meeting. Under the partial draft each NHL club owner may draft four 16-year-olds. When the drafted players reach 18, the drafting club has first call on professional rights.

The plan proposed at the CAHA meeting is far wider in scope.

It would replace the whole professional sponsorship system under which players are protected with a single professional draft each year when the amateur players have completed their junior careers.

At the press conference Campbell said the NHL has adopted a wait and see attitude on the universal draft.

The club owners want to see how the partial draft works out before going any further.

Under the partial draft each of the six NHL clubs annually select four players just before their 17th birthday. When the selected player reaches 18 the drafting club has professional rights to him. Once exposed to the draft a player cannot be drafted again.

Officials say one reason for the partial draft is that NHL clubs may still control rights to players through sponsoring clubs' negotiation lists and other means.

But players thus protected are still eligible for the partial draft.

Campbell said professional hockey is not yet prepared to abandon sponsorship because "we don't know what would take its place."

"Sponsorship has been successful. Nearly all the NHL active players come from pro-sponsored leagues," he said.

Under the partial draft the NHL will pay $2,000 for each player selected to his last amateur club.

AROUND THE GOLF WORLD

with Gene Sarazen

27—Taking Stock

Take stock of your basic swing.

The grip and the stance are the same for all, but everybody develops tiny mannerisms that make his swing different from the next fellow's.

Once you have discovered the swing that works best, resist all efforts on the part of those who want to make you over in their image.

If your swing isn't working, it undoubtedly is because you are violating one of the basic principles of the grip or stance. Good golf is played with the hands, bad golf with the shoulders and body.

If your grip is correct, it will make a correct stance second nature. Never forget that the hands are the leaders.

A correct grip and a proper stance lead naturally to a one-piece swing that is fluid and smooth, regardless of what idiosyncrasies you introduce into it.

62 horses listed for tonight's program 3/4 mile race to be held, trot and pace classes main events

The first mid-week program of the Sherbrooke Racing Club will be presented this evening at the local oval with Post Time 8.15 p.m. 62 horses will be competing for a total of $1,325 in purses.

As an extra attraction a ¾ of a mile event will be staged. This was added in order to break the two-class system. The horses in this class will first compete in the ¾ event and then in the Ninth race will go the full distance, a mile.

The main features on tonight's card are Trot and Pace classes both for purses of $250 each. Eight starters are listed in each race and should turn into a real battle before the winner crosses the wire.

Rene Claing, who posted three wins on Sunday's opening card, will be gunning for more victories this evening with three horses entered. Claing has Merry Bars Girls in the Seventh and Mighty Peter in the Tenth. He also has Edge wood Direct in the Second race on the card.

Claing, who has the reputation of going all out in every race, gets his horses to a flying start in all classes and from then on sets the pace to his liking and ability of his horse. He never wastes any time and using his system he gets the jump on the rest of the drivers who figure on catching him in the late stages of the race but Claing always has enough horse to maintain his early lead right to the wire.

Amedee Beaudoin will be making his first start this evening and has three horses entered. Lise Directly will start in the Third race while Lynn Ibaf goes in the Seventh with Prince Gerry C in the final event of the evening. Lynn Ibaf and Prince Gerry C posted big wins earlier in Montreal but since then were placed on the Steward's List and had to quality over again. Tonight is their first start since returning from the list.

Rudy Pilous fired as coach of Black Hawks

Rudy Pilous was the most successful coach in Chicago Black Hawks history. But today, the victim of his own success, he's looking for another National Hockey League job.

Pilous has learned the hard way that in Chicago, security as a coach is about as easy to hold as a hat on a windy day.

The Hawks Tuesday fired Pilous "because the management decided to make a change." That was the only reason given in the statement, drafted by general manager Tommy Ivan and issued in Chicago even though Ivan is vacationing in Miami.

A successor to Pilous was not named but rumors are that former Toronto Maple Leaf coach Billy Reay will get the job. Reay last season coached Chicago's American League farm club, Buffalo Bisons, to their first league and playoff title.

At St. Catharines, where he lives in the summer, Pilous said the announcement was a disappointment but not a surprise. It had been rumored for nearly a week that the 48-year-old Winnipeg-born Pilous would not be back with the Hawks next season.

SOME WERE CRITICS

Some members of the Hawks said since the 1962-63 season ended that Pilous was responsible for the club's collapse at the end of the campaign which saw Chicago drop out of first place, lose the NHL title by a point to Toronto and then be eliminated in the semi - final playoffs by Detroit Red Wings after winning the first two games against Wings.

Pilous refused to comment about the reported dissatisfaction among the players.

"I think I always got along with the players," he said. "And I wish them and the whole organization the very best of everything, including success, in the future."

Bobby Hull, the dynamic left winger with the Hawks and one of the players reported ' have cast disparaging remarks about Pilous' coaching ability, denied the report.

"We could have a bit more talent on the team," charged Hull, who has a reputation for not mincing words when he doesn't think things are as they should b...

HULL COMMENTS

"If a bunch of grown men can't get up for the game themselves, it's not the coach's fault."

Hull said injuries also played a key part in the club's fall from first place. Defenceman Pierre Pilote and forwards Stan Mikita, Ron Murphy and Hull himself were among Ha ks who suffered injuries it. the latter part of the season.

As for the future, Pilous says he has received offers from three professional teams and a couple of organizations outside hockey. He says he will listen to any other offers that come along and then, after thinking about them for a couple of days, take some more time to make up his mind.

When asked about reports that he will join the Leafs, Pilous said he had not been officially approached by any of the Leaf directors.

CONN SENT ME

It was Conn Smythe, then president of the Leafs, who was one of the men who advised Norris to give Pilous a shot at the Hawk coaching job in 1958.

At the time Pilous was owner and coach of the St. Catharines Teepees in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. St. Catharines is a Chicago farm team and has produced such stars as Hull, Mikita, Pilote and defenceman Elmer Vasko.

That Pilous succeeded where most of the 19 men before him had failed as coach of the Hawks is borne out by his record.

Since joining Hawks Jan. 4, 1958, when Chicago was last and had made the playoffs only once in the 12 previous seasons, Pilous moved them up to fifth place by the end of the 1957-58 season. Then they went to third place in each of the next four years. Last season they finished in second place and had the most wins (32) and points (81) in the club's history.

WON CUP

In 1960 - 61 Pilous coached Hawks to their first Stanley Cup title since 1938 and only their third in history. In addition, the five straight years Chicago made the playoffs under Pilous was a team record.

Pilous coached Hawks in 383 regular - season games. They won 161, lost 148 and tied 74. By comparison, in the 387 regular-season games between the start of the 1952-53 campaign and the time Pilous took over, Chicago won 98 games, lost 217 and tied 72.

Hull, however, probably summed up the situation best:

"I think Norris wanted the NHL championship this year. And then losing to Detroit in the playoffs capped the whole thing. It is another example of a cruel fact in sport: When the axe must fall, it falls on the man in charge. The coach takes the blame for the players."

Convention of Quebec Fish & Game Clubs to be held in Sherbrooke, R. Daigneault re-elected president

The provincial convention of the Quebec Federation of Fish and Game Clubs and associations of the Province of Quebec will be held in Sherbrooke December next, announced Rouville Daigneault of Sherbrooke, one of the directors of this provincial group.

This declaration was made at the annual meeting of the Eastern Townships Conservations Clubs Association's held at the New Sherbrooke Hotel, Monday night.

Mr. Daigneault, who is also chairman of the regional group, in his report noted that the Eastern Townships group has grown considerably during the last twelve months, and that is progress continues, the membership should be doubled within a year or so.

As for past realisations, the repeal of the .22 rifle law is the work of the Regional Group and the Fisherman's and Hunter's Camp exhibition held in March of this year.

For future projects, one is that the Association will take steps to acquire visual and audio equipment to retrace lost hunters during the hunting season. This decision came about when mention was made of two deaths last year.

The general convention of the Quebec Federation of Fish and Game Clubs will be held in Sherbrooke at the beginning of December and hundreds of delegates from Conservation Associations of the Province are expected to attend together with delegates from other provinces and of course, the heads of the Department of Tourism, and Fish and Game of the Province of Quebec.

Last Monday an election of the Eastern Townships Conservation Club Association took place with the following results: Rouville Daigneault, of Sherbrooke was unanimously reelected chairman; Henri Belleau of Thetford Mines, first vice-president and Win. Hunter of Huntingville, second vice-president.

Davis' funeral attended by thousands

The service, scheduled for Monumental Baptist Church, was shifted today to the First Baptist Church, which can accommodate 900 persons.

Nearly 10,000 persons filed through the gymnasium of Neighborhood House Tuesday to pay respects to the 23-year-old athlete voted the outstanding collegiate football player in the United States in 1961. Davis died Saturday in Cleveland of leukemia.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

Pitching — Jim Maloney, Reds, struck out record-tying eight consecutive batters, fanned total of 16 and allowed only two hits for 8 1-3 innings before needing relief help in 2-0 victory over Milwaukee.

Batting — Mickey Mantle, Yankees, hit his seventh and eighth homers, driving in five runs to power New York to 7-4 triumph over Kansas City.

Racing fans fail to cash their tickets

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Why do racing fans fail to cash winning tickets on a horse?

Churchill Downs would like to know. It has 274, worth $4,398, still outstanding on Chateaugay, winner of the Kentucky Derby May 4.

Also uncashed are 325 tickets, worth $2,465 on Never Bend, who ran second, and 193 tickets, good for $894, on the favored Candy Spots.

These totals probably will recede as lady horseplayers discover the tickets in the depths of their purses. Some will be mailed in from distant points

But altogether there are about 8,000 tickets worth more than $70,000 still out on Derby horses that were in the money in the last 20 years.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

New York — Luther (Sonny) Murphy, 194¼, Phoenix, Ariz., outpointed Joe Shotgun Shelton, 184½, Passiac, N.J., 8.

Sacramento, Calif. — Joe Brown, 136, Houston, stopped Joe Lopes, 137, Sacramento, 7.

Mantle belts two homers as Yanks dump As 7-4, Orioles trim Tigers, Twins belt Red Sox, Senators win

Baltimore Orioles trimmed Detroit Tigers 4 - 2 Tuesday night, with lefty Mickey Lolich the pitching victim in his first big league start. Baltimore has compiled an amazing 11-1 record against left-handers so far this year and 13 straight southpaws have failed to finish against them.

Mickey Mantle drove across five runs with a pair of well-tagged homers, powering the Yanks over Kansas City 7-4. That made the Bombers 3-for-3 against the As, a club they have manhandled outrageously since it moved west from Philadelphia eight years ago.

The Orioles' victory was their seventh in the last eight games and kept them tied for the league lead with the Chicago White Sox, who outlasted the Washington Senators 4-3.

In the night's other American League game, Minnesota's surging Twins poured across seven runs in the third inning and whacked Boston 8-2. The Red Sox and the As dropped two games behind the league's co-leaders and a game behind the Yanks, who have also won seven of their last eight. The Los Angeles Angels - Indians game at Cleveland was rained out.

MANTLE HOMERS

Baltimore nailed it down against Detroit in the sixth, breaking a 1-1 tie with two runs on singles by Al Smith and Boog Powell, a sacrifice fly by Joe Gaines, and another single by Jackie Brandt. Gaines also homered, in the second.

Norm Cash had a homer for the Tigers off winner Chuck Estrada.

Mantle poled a three - run homer in the first inning against Orlando Pena, then struck the deciding blow for the Yanks in the fifth when he connected with one on off Diego Segui.

Roger Maris also homered for the Yanks, and Elston Howard rapped three singles.

Jim Bouton won for the fifth time in six starts although far from overpowering. He gave up six hits, including homers by Norm Siebern and Gino Cimoli, and five walks before being replaced by Steve Hamilton in the sixth.

The White Sox built up a 4-0 lead at Washington with the help of a three-run sixth inning, but barely outlasted the Senators.

Reds' Jim Maloney ties strikeout record, fanning 16 to blank Braves 2-0, Podres stops Mets, Giants win

Jim Maloney, 22 - year - old right-hander who admits "I babied my arm too much" in his early days with Cincinnati Reds, tied the modern major league record of eight consecutive strikeouts and fanned a total of 16 in a 2-0 victory over Milwaukee Tuesday night.

Signed by the National League club for an estimated $100,000 bonus in 1959, Maloney has had a slow rise to fame, but now stands as one of the aces of the Reds' staff.

Things weren't so good for Maloney last year. "I babied my arm too much, and I learned," says Maloney, "that I couldn't last nine innings just by standing out there on the mound and humming the fast ball.

Maloney apparently learned quickly. He finished the 1962 season with Reds, posting a 9-7 record, and now is 6-1 with a sparkling 2.25 earned average. He is third in the league in strikeouts with 57, behind Los Angeles' Sandy Koufax and one behind Dodgers' Don Drysdale.

DODGERS WIN

The Dodgers got a five-hit pitching performance from Johnny Podres to defeat New York Mets for their seventh straight victory 4-2 and remained one game behind league-leading San Francisco.

The Giants beat Philadelphia 3-2 as Billy O'Dell won his sixth without a loss.

St. Louis edged Chicago's Cubs 5-4 and Pittsburgh nipped Houston 6-5 in other games.

Maloney allowed only two hits in the 8 1-3 innings he worked. He started his string of eight straight strikeouts with Eddie Mathews in the first inning and kept whiffing Braves until Hank Aaron grounded out in fourth inning. He had fanned 15 in the first seven innings, and had a good chance to tie or surpass the single game record of 18 held by Bob Feller and Koufax. He managed only one the rest of the way, however.

Maloney left after walking two men in the ninth and running the count on Norm Larker to two balls and no strikes. Bill Henry took over and finished up without any trouble.

Canada's youngest University head deplores 'illiberal' educations

TORONTO (CP) — His mind whirling with plans for his new university, Dean Tom Symons, Canada's youngest university president, stared out the window at a bleak Toronto day.

His thoughts were far away in Peterborough County, at Nassau on the green summer banks of the Otonabee River, where Trent University officially opens July 1.

The 33-year-old Dean of Devonshire House residence at the University of Toronto has a lot of new ideas about running a university. It's been suggested that he's close enough to his own university days to realize from a student's point of view what a university should be. Take his ideas on a "liberal education," for instance.

"When people talk of a liberal education they usually mean literature, philosophy, history—that sort of thing," he said in an interview.

"We'll stress a broad education mixing arts and sciences. A liberal education offering arts without sciences in the 20th century is dangerously illiberal."

SPORTS FOR ALL

Sports will be different at Trent too. Mr. Symons deplores the organized shrieking and hero-worshipping of spectator sports such as football.

"Yelling at football games doesn't really indicate college spirit," he said. "The real college spirit is what makes graduates turn their minds back gratefully and give thanks for the things their university gave them in education and character."

Trent's site will be ideal for skiing in the winter and rowing and golf in summer — sports that students can enjoy for the rest of their lives.

"We hope to have 500 acres," Mr. Symons said. "Think of that! With Champlain's river running right through the middle, and Peterborough, a perfect university town, close by."

Mr. Symons graduated from U. of T., squashed into the centre of a vast city. He wants to avoid the big city influence on Trent.

"Universities should be away from major centres of population so students can experience leaving their home environment."

'TOWN AND GOWN'

Trent will be strongly residential, allowing each student to develop what Mr. Symons calls "total commitment" to the university career. Peterborough poses no threat to this. In fact, Mr. Symons believes it is sufficiently small to supplement the university, to inspire and encourage students.

"We want a 'town and gown' tradition with good relations between the city of Trent. After all, Peterborough is a very old Ontario city with great cultural traditions and historical interest. It can contribute a lot to the university, and we hope we can contribute to it too.

"The area is the cradle of Upper Canada's literature, some of it pretty great. It's no coincidence that Peterborough has, apart from some of the huge metropolitan dailies, the greatest newspaper in Canada."

Colleges will be the unit of expansion at Trent and they will be kept small.

"In a large university, a student can get lost," Mr. Symons said. "A small college gives him something to hold on to."

LITERARY LEGACY

Through his family, Toronto-born Mr. Symons has always had close connections with Ontario and with its literature. His father Harry was the first winner of the Stephen Leacock Medal, for his book Ojibway Melody in 1946. His grandfather was president of the Ontario Society of Architects.

Since he returned from Oxford University, where he took his master's degree specializing in history, Mr. Symons has been offered careers in fields including the diplomatic service, but he turned them all down.

"They keep asking but I want to be at a university. I'm intensely fond of Canada. Although I've been at universities in Europe and the United States, Canada is my home and I could never live anywhere else for long."

Although Trent's first academic year officially starts this fall, only staff members will be in the temporary headquarters in Peterborough's South Central School.

"New universities are usually expected to start operations as soon as they open," Mr. Symons said. "We tried to avoid confusion by having a year of organization without students."

CAMPUS DONATED

Approval of proposals for Trent University's establishment was announced by Premier Robarts last June on recommendation of the province's university affairs advisory committee. Mr. Symons had been chairman of Trent's academic planning committee, so that his appointment as president was not unexpected.

The Canadian General Electric Company donated 100 acres as the campus core. Gradually, by gift and purchase, the whole 500 acres will be obtained.

Dean Symon's hobbies include gardening. In his bachelor quarters at the U. of T. there is a cramped plant in a huge glass bottle. Uneasy in the steel and stone city, Mr. Symons looks forward to the day when he and his plants can escape to Trent.

He looked out the window at Trinity College's red brick walls. The fire in the fireplace had died down. The room was quiet. Mr. Symons was back on the banks of the Otonabee.

OSTEOMALACIA — GROWNUPS' VERSION OF CHILD'S RICKETS

Q — What causes osteomalacia? Can it be helped?

A — Osteomalacia is a failure of proper bone formation. In children it is called "rickets." In adults, "osteomalacia." It may be due to an insufficient intake of vitamin D, or failure of the digestive tract to absorb the vitamin D in the diet.

Since the body makes its own vitamin D when the skin is exposed to sunlight, insufficient exposure to sunlight may be a contributing factor.

Another factor may be a decrease in the blood level of calcium or phosphorous. The chief manifestations are loss of appetite, pain in the bones, softening of the bones with deformity, weakness, kidney stones, and infection of the urinary tract."

Treatment usually consists of giving calcium in the form of milk, with supplementary doses of calcium lactate, gluconate, or chloride. Vitamin D is also given, but should not be continued after the disease is cured, since too much vitamin D can do harm.

If failure of absorption of vitamin D is due to a persistent diarrhea, this must be controlled before the treatment can be effective. If the disease is due to too great a loss of calcium gluconate and sodium citrate should be given.

In any case, skillful management by your doctor should bring about lasting improvement.

Q — What laxative do you recommend for older persons? I have to take something every day.

A — You must have been absent from school the day I talked about generally harmful effects of laxatives.

For you and any others who may have come in late, I will merely say that eating the amount of vegetable and fruit that you individually require to produce a formed stool will obviate the necessity of taking any laxative.

Don't worry about skipping a day. If you go 48 to 72 hours without a bowel movement, use an eight-ounce warm water enema which you must hold for at least five minutes before passing. If you have to take an enema more than once a week, see your doctor.

Q — A friend and I are having an argument about multiple sclerosis and arteriosclerosis. Please tell us the symptoms of each and how they differ.

A — The symptoms of both diseases are so variable that no definite answer can be given to this question.

Multiple sclerosis is a process in which the insulating myelin sheath surrounding individual nerve fibers is lost. The symptoms depend on whether the nerve fibers involved carry motor impulses from the brain or sensory impulses to the brain, and what part of the body the affected nerves supply.

Arteriosclerosis is hardening of the arteries. It starts at birth and continues throughout life. Until the process becomes far advanced it produces no symptoms and, since it is not a uniform process, it may affect the heart in some and the brain or kidneys in others.

When sufficiently advanced it may seriously reduce the blood supply to the affected organ, or small hemorrhages may occur. In either case, the function of the affected organ would be seriously impaired.

New solicitor-general professes a 'warm feeling for the underdog'

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's new solicitor-general is a Prince Edward Island lawyer who professes a "warm feeling for the underdog."

There may be significance in the remark because 58-year-old J. Watson MacNaught will have a lot to say about whether convicted murderers live or die.

"I have always had a profound belief in the inherent goodness of humanity," Mr. MacNaught said in an interview shortly after moving into his new office in the justice building.

"Most people are trustworthy. People want to be good."

Mr. MacNaught, who prefers to be on the defending side in a case, has found himself on both sides during his legal career. For several years he was crown prosecutor for Prince County. Later he was defence lawyer in his only murder trial, winning acquittal for his client.

It is with murder cases that he will be occupied most as solicitor-general. He is the minister who presents to the cabinet reports on all capital cases for a decision on whether the death sentence should be carried out or commuted to life imprisonment. It is he who recommends whether the cabinet should exercise its prerogative of mercy.

MOST COMMUTED

During its period in office, from 1957 to 1963, the Conservative government attracted widespread attention for the number of death sentences it commuted to life imprisonment—52 of the 66 that came before it for decision.

The new Liberal government will be watched with interest by those wondering whether it will follow the same pattern.

After a six-year absence from Parliament, the tall, pipe-smoking Mr. MacNaught regained his old riding of Prince from the Progressive Conservatives in the April 8 federal election.

He is the Liberal party's first cabinet representative from the island province since 1944. He originally won the seat, formerly held by wartime defence minister J. L. Ralston, in 1945, and held it until 1957.

During the St. Laurent administration Mr. MacNaught was parliamentary assistant to the fisheries minister. In 1953 he headed the Canadian delegation at the organization of the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission in Washington. Two years later he was adviser to the Canadian delegation to the Tokyo meeting of the commission.

TO STUDY CAUSEWAY

While his presence in the cabinet will require attention to many matters of national concern, there is one of considerable local importance that will involve him.

That's the projected causeway across Northumberland Strait to link P.E.I. with the New Brunswick mainland.

Before the June 18, 1962, election, John Diefenbaker announced that his government had decided to proceed with construction of the causeway.

Asked about the Liberal government's plans, Mr. MacNaught said:

"We plan to ascertain as soon as possible whether the causeway is feasible. We shall make a thorough study of all the reports and information made available in the last six years."

Mr. MacNaught, a native of Coleman, P.E.I., whose roots in the island's red earth go back several generations, is a graduate of Dalhousie University, Halifax. He says he has been involved with politics in one form or another for most of his life.

FORMER ACTOR

From 1935 to 1941 he was law clerk to the P.E.I. legislative assembly and then became clerk of the assembly.

At home he leads a quiet life with his wife, Eva Maude. They have two sons, John William, 29, and David Alexander, 21.

At work he dressed conservatively—"with a very small c"—and wears glasses when dealing with papers.

During his leisurg hours, he leans to sports jacket and flannels, particularly when staying in his summer home at North Bedeque, P.E.I. Curling and swimming have been his chief outdoor recreational activities.

An avid reader, he is especially fond of the English 19th century classic novels and of Elizabethan plays—in keeping with a lifelong interest in drama. Last year he was chairman of the P.E.I. Drama Festival and before the war, as a member of the Summerside Little Theatre, won the MacLaren medal for individual acting for the Maritime provinces.

Public broadcasters to discuss TV service for Commonwealth

OTTAWA (CP) — The desire of Commonwealth countries to set up television services—and the problems they'll face doing it—will come to the fore when broadcasters of 15 Commonwealth countries meet in Canada this spring.

The three-week meeting will be the fifth session of the Commonwealth Broadcasting Conference, and the first to be held in Canada.

The conference, begun in 1945, is a loosely knit association of publicly owned broadcasting organizations formed to exchange ideas, technical information and programs.

This process will continue in the field of radio broadcasting. However, since the conference last met in India in 1960 the younger, ddeveloping nations of the Commonwealth have been moving closer to the day they can jump into the exciting, challenging and expensive field of television.

William Armstrong, a CBC official who is conference secretary, says this will likely be one of the major areas of discussion at the meetings of the conference which will open May 27 at Montreal, switch to Toronto June 9 and end at Banff, Alta., June 13-16.

MEETING PRIVATE

Conference membership is restricted to publicly owned broadcasting bodies in independent Commonwealth nations. This excludes Trinidad and Tobago, where broadcasting is by private stations.

But most if not all of the others are expected to attend. The list includes India, Australia, Britain, Cyprus, Ghana, Jamaica, New Zealand, Nigeria, Ceylon, Malaya, Pakistan, Uganda, Sierra Leone and Tanganyika.

The meetings won't be large, however. The chief executive, and perhaps also the chief engineer, will represent each national broadcasting service. Sessions will be private and closed to the press.

Mr. Armstrong, who has been working for a year in preparation, said in an interview that the conference will make no policy decisions.

"It's a very loosely knit organization, with no constitution, laws or anything else," he said.

But it already had done a great deal in the way of exchanging technical information, program ideas and technical help through the lending of experts.

RADIOS FOR INDIA

One example is Canada's Farm Radio Forum—a technique of stimulating farm community discussions and spreading information of value to farmers. The idea was picked up by India's radio system as a means of improving the lot of its half-million rural villages.

But the co-operative idea was carried one step further. The Canadian Farm Radio Forum began a campaign to raise money to purchase radios for Indian villages, many of which had no radios at all. So far about 100 radios, costing $110 each, have been given so that Indian villagers can gather around loudspeakers for their forum discussions.

Now, television is the coming thing for many of the developing Commonwealth countries.

"The older Commonwealth members naturally have a great deal to contribute," Mr Armstrong said.

TV engineering techniques are one area where help could be given. An exchange of TV programs was another possibility to meet the "simply tremendous" demand for programs to fill broadcasting time. The costs would be prohibitive if a small country had to do all its own programming.

Feeding the habit is a challenge for gallantry

One of the fringe benefits of manhood — and the sternest test of gallantry — is the privilege of helping the girls through the ceremonial rites of the nicotine habit.

Here are some types of lady smokers familiar to most men:

"Perky Pam" — This little doll thinks it is cute to droop a cigarette from the corner of her mouth, stand on tiptoe, look you square in the adam's apple, and then demand in a sexy drawl: "Light me, big boy, light me."

"Sandra Showoff" — This female powerhouse likes ostentation as well as attention. She waits until she's at the far corner of the room before pulling out her cigarette, thus forcing you to gallop over before everybody to ignite it.

"Golddigger Gertie" — No matter where you meet her, the cigarette she pulls out is always her very last one. Somehow, somewhere, you have to manage to get her another pack immediately—if you're any kind of man at all.

"Thelma Twitchy" — The gabby type. Keeps talking as you try to light her up, and the cigarette bobs around in all directions like a weathervane. When the match finally burns your fingers and you cry "ouch!," she asks loudly: "What's the matter? Got the shakes again? Maybe you'd better lay off the stuff for a while."

"Exotic Erica" — Can't stand anything except highly perfumed Oriental cigarettes which she puffs away at from the near end of a two-foot black and silver holder. After half an hour by her, you reel away smelling like an old Chinese temple.

"Bertha Beatnik" — She's the Bohemian type. Thinks cigarettes are strictly for the cowbirds at the party. Prefers herself an imitation corncob pipe encrusted with rhinestones. Gets ashes on rug by knocking pipe against her shoe heel. One nice thing about Bertha: Your wife never invites her back again.

"Smudge - pot Nell"—This human chimney is a chain smoker who feels socially insecure unless she has at least three cigarettes going for her at all times. A man really needs a blow torch to keep her lit up.

'Seeds' in brain to help young boy develop normally

ADELAIDE (Reuters) — A 16-year-old south Australian boy has arrived home from London with two tiny radioactive "seeds" of gold in his brain to help him grow taller.

He is Devon Vigar, of Warooka, who had the "seeds" planted in his brain at London's Hammersmith Hospital.

For the last five years, Devon's height has remained almost stationary, at less than five feet, while his weight has increased to 157 pounds.

A specialist at Adelaide's Queen Elizabeth Hospital, who arranged Devon's treatment in London, said the radioactive "seeds" would reduce over-activity of the boy's pituitary gland.

This in turn would end overstimulation of a suprerenal gland above the kidney, which was producing excessive amounts of cortisone, and preventing Devon from growing normally.

Movie idol, Brando spouts off on United States political issues

NEW YORK (AP)—He spoke with a slow, painful intensity torturing his mind to get the right word, the exact phrase to express his meaning.

"People want identity more than they want money or anything else in life," said Marlon Brando. "And that hunger for identity and self-respect can have disastrous political effects.

"Where people have weak identities of their own, they will seek identity with the strong. But nationalism is on the swing everywhere now."

Brando, who portrayed a fighting diplomat in Southeast Asia in his latest film, The Ugly American, has been keenly interested in politics for some time.

Something of a rebel all his own life, he has been openly critical of the U.S. government's treatment of minorities at home and its attitude toward revolutionary movements that have sprung up abroad since the end of the Second World War.

"We've called ourselves the saviors of the democratic way of life," remarked Marlon, "and I think we must now simply implement and literally support that point of view—or abdicate from it."

MUST SPEAK UP

Movie idols don't usually spout off on political issues, and Brando acknowledged that it had been suggested to him he'd do better to button his lip except when before the camera lens.

"I've been asked: 'Who are you to shoot your mouth off? You're just an actor. Your rightful organ of communications is the scandal sheet, or the movie magazine.'

"But if me and my family—and my country—are going to be threatened by extinction, I've got something to say about it. I just can't blithely stand around and accept whatever fate befalls me.

"I have as much right to my opinion as a U.S. senator has to his."

The truth seems to be that Brando thrives on controversy as some people do on praise. Listening to him, you get the feeling that he himself is still groping for the real nature of his identity. He feels too many values today are measured by price tags.

"People don't realize how much of our lives is controlled by money generally," he said, stabbing thoughtfully at the remnants of a $5.50 luncheon steak.

"Everything is bought and sold today — people, magazines, new ideas, motion pictures, whisky and motor cars. And very little distinction is made between the merchandising potential of ideas, people and material things."

Doris Clark

Successful living

DEAR DORIS:

My family had always been cery close. But now my husband and I live in the same city as his family. They are reserved, never demonstrative with their children. His mother is without tact or humor or compassion. Never gives the grandchildren a birthday present or has any of us for dinner.

O.K., I wouldn't mind that except for my husband. He constantly tries to buy their love; calls her up, gives her gifts, acts like a child in order to get some attention from them.

But worst of all he treats our children like his parents treat him; constant carping, never any praise. He's mean and petty. It isn't good for them. I tried going to a social agency but he refused to go. Yet he is just as unhappy as I am.

Unhappy.

DEAR UNHAPPY:

She may be mean, but her domination over him is as strong as ever. He clings to her, yet takes out his unconscious resentment on his children. Go back to the agency to gain insight yourself and further moral support.

I wouldn't give up without a struggle.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:

1. What is the procedure as to the trousseau tea: how far ahead of the wedding should it be held? Do the ladies that pour tea wear hats?

2. For the wedding, is a fur stole worn over a cocktail dress or left of, being that it will be early in June?

3. Who stands first in the receiving line at the reception? Both parents of the couple to be married are attending.

4. What are the responsibilities of the bride's parents as to what they buy and pay for?

Needing Help.

DEAR NEEDING:

1. One or two weeks ahead. The ladies who pour wear hats, if the tea is held in the afternoon, unless they are members of the household where the tea is being held.

2. Not the date but the weather should decide this.

3. Mother of the bride.

4. Parents of the bride providing the wedding and all the trimmings: invitations, bridal outfit, photographs, food, church music and decor, transportation to and from the church for the bridal party. Groom may take over responsibility for bridal bouquets, boutonnieres; and definitely pays for license and minister's fee.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:

I am 19 years old and engaged to a very sweet guy, or at least I thought he was. Lately he has been acting very strange. We argue a lot and he seldom tells me he loves me or shows any affection towards me.

What should I do? I still love him but feel very hurt and let down. How can I believe anything he tells me in the future?

Hurt.

DEAR HURT:

You can't. He has failed to explain himself or apologize. Does he need a little longer to play the field?

* * *

(Don't just muddle along. A letter to Doris can guide you to successful action about your particular human problem.)

Abominable snowman expert

Gives a course in catching yeti

AUCKLAND (CP) — A New Zealand explorer has been giving a course in how to catch a yeti, or abominable snowman, in one easy lesson.

In startling contrast to most teachers, he admits at the outset that the course is not much good, since it has never yet led to the capture of a yeti. But then again, it is just as likely to work as any other procedure For it is far from certain that any such creature exists.

The yeti "expert" is Lieut Peter Mulgrew, friend and associate of Everest - conqueror Sir Edmund Hillary. Mulgrew went with Hillary to the South Pole and later took part in an almost-fatal attempt to conquer the Himalayan giant, Makalu without oxygen.

Mulgrew collapsed when within a few hundred feet of the summit, was rescued more dead than alive, had to have both legs amputated owing to frostbite, and was fitted with artificial limbs. But a setback like that was not enough to deter the New Zealand naval officer who plans to return to the Himalayas, if not as a member of a climbing party, at least to assist at lower levels.

Meanwhile, he has been perfecting yeti-hunting techniques This was one of the major objectives of the expedition on which he met his mishap.

The official verdict of the expedition was that there is no yeti and that some of the evidence for its existence is probably caused by the Himalayan blue bear. But Mulgrew does not go all the way with the verdict. He says he left Nepal still somewhat confused.

Mulgrew gives yeti - hunters the warning that the eagerness of Sherpas to help in the quest makes the job more complicated. They are so anxious to produce evidence that they describe practically any mark in the snow as that of a yeti—even tracks made by the expedition itself.

Also, contrary to some beliefs, their tracking ability is not high. Mulgrew mentions occasions when they led searchers backwards along sets of tracks.

Even more elusive than the yeti itself is the Sherpa who has actually seen one. Every Sherpa knows of an aged grandfather, or someone in another village, who has seen a yeti. But it is exceedingly difficult to track down the yeti-sighter himself.

Mulgrew's course also gives some tips on the pitfalls of modern yeti-hunting methods. Tranquillizer guns, for instance, require a calculation of the amount of drug to use after sighting the yeti and estimating its body weight.

The difficulty with this system is that by the time these calculations have been made "the yeti could well be chewing your arm off."

Mulgrew's advice is being carefully studied by would - be yeti-hunters. They agree that it can hardly help them to catch a yeti if there is no such creature.

Hospital W.A. holds annual tea at Sweetsburg

SWEETSBURG — The Women's Auxiliary of the B.M.P. Hospital commemorated Florence Nightingale's birthday with its annual tea, held in the staff house on May 10, when the auxiliary was At Home to its friends and supporters.

Guests were received by the president, Mrs. A. J. B. Milborne assisted by the first vice-president, Mrs. J. O. Senay.

The tea room as attractively decorated with bowls of spring flowers and pink candles, was the work of the decorating committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. R. K. Morse and her assistants.

Miss Alice Draper, Mrs. Paul Rowe and Mrs. W. F. Parry were in charge of the tea, assisted by past presidents, Mrs. R. Desourdy, Mrs. H. LeRoy Shaw, Mrs. J. O. Senay and Mrs. A. Gordon Scott.

Pourers were Mrs. J. B. Moore, Mrs. J. Shower, Mrs. I. Haines and Miss McIntosh.

There was a display of articles from the Gift Shop, an attractively - decorated Maypole basket filled with surprise packages; and a display of the handiwork done by the Doctor Douglass Group of Knowlton, under the convenership of Mrs. Harry Seal.

Apart from the knitting and smocking, there were beautiful copper-tooled pictures, done by the members, and many attractive articles made and donated by Mrs. Agnes Duncan, of Knowlton, in appriciation of the care she received while a patient in the hospital.

On view in the tea room was the auxiliary's Memorial Book and Stand, from the funds of which, life-saving and life-giving equipment is purchased. A sample, the anaesthesia machine for the maternity floor was exhibited, this was purchased at a cost of $1,150.

Just prior to the tea, this machine was officially presented by Mrs. Milborne, on behalf of the auxiliary to J. F. Meunier, chairman of the hospital board. Assisting at the presentation was Miss Gwen Hewitt, who had been chairman of the Memorial Fund since its inception, and whose beautiful lettering appears in the Book of Remembrance. Mrs. H. C. Winch is the present chairman, but was unfortunately out of town when the presentation was made. Memorial donations may be sent to Mrs. Maurice Halle, treasurer, in care of the hospital.

Annual spring tea and sale held

The annual Spring Tea and Sale sponsored by the Aldershot Chapter I.O.D.E. was held recently at the I.O.D.E. House on Moore Street, under the general convenership of Mrs. L. Page.

The regent, Mrs. S. K. Barnes and the convener Mrs. L. Page greeted the guests who were ushered into the gaily decorated rooms where the Spring-motif was carried out with pussy-willows and spring flowers.

The tea table, presided over by Mrs. A. A. Munster, Miss F. Macdonald, Mrs. R. M. Loughheed and Mrs. G. Smith, was covered by a lace tablecloth and centered with a arrangement of flowers. Mrs. R. Wheeler acted as replenisher.

Serving at the invidual tables, which were centered with brown candles in crystal holders, decked with yellow-eyed susans, were Mrs. M. Lafreniere, Mrs. Price, Mrs. A. Wright, and Mrs. B. McAuley.

During the tea, Mrs. U. Ilves played the piano.

The kitchen conveners were Mrs. H. Durrant, Mrs. M. Loughheed, and Mrs. P. Legallais.

The food table which was laden with delicacies was supervised by Mrs. B. Wallace and Miss S. Murray. Mrs. N. Munkittrick sold cards and novelties, and Mrs. G. Bennett acted as cashier.

A door prize which was drawn for at the close of the tea was won by Mrs. R. A. Smith.

Build personality for later years

Do you have any idea of the kind of person you will be when you are old?

One of my readers who describes herself as "just turned middle-aged" has already decided what kind of person she intends to be when she is old.

Here are her reminders to herself under her own heading, "When I grow old." They are offered in the hope that other middle-aged women will make their own lists to live by in later years:

"I intend to become increasingly careful about my appearance, since it is so easy for older persons to become careless.

"I will try even harder to really listen when others talk, since wanting to do more than one's share of talking seems to be a bad habit that grows worse with age.

"I will fight to maintain my independence, even though my children should—in their misguided love—want to do things for me that I could not do myself.

"I will do my best to keep making friends as long as I live.

To outlive all of one's friends is one of the saddest things that can happen to an older person.

'I will look for the best in others—particularly in the young, who are so often criticized by their elders. Age need not make anyone intolerant of others.

"I will throttle the feeling that it is my duty to complain what's wrong with the world and how much better everything was in the old days.

"I will try to do all that I can for contemporaries less fortunate than I am, instead of wondering why younger people don't have more time to do things for me.

"I will try to look on each new day as a gift from my Maker, to be accepted with gratitude rather than to be endured.

"I will use my mind and my hands and my heart, as long as I can command them."

Beauty budget for teen-ager

A teen-ager taking her first stab at make-up is faced with a bewildering array of beauy preparations. You can budget beauty dollars by selecting the basics and by elminating nonessentials.

Starting from scratch, you should be able to put together your beauty chest for about $7.50. Mistakes can be costly if a wrong choice is made, so shop. Take advantage of free counseling at beauty counters.

Regardless of how good your complexion may be, a make-up base is an asset. Young skins can attractively wear liquid make-up indoors and out. Set aside a good portion of your budget for this important item. A fine textured creamy base is best for dry and normal skins, while a edicated or water-base foundation is best for oily types. One powder shade is all you will need.

You will need two lipsticks—one in a pale pink and one in a deeper coral. Use separately or apply one over the other for a range of lip colors that will go with all your clothes. Invest in a lip brush to give you neatly outlined lips.

As for eye make-up, a natural, unmade-up look is the most becoming. Invest in an eyebrow pencil from the five-and-dime if you have light eyebrows. A bottle of baby oil is the only other eye make-up you will need now. The oil will add sheen to your eyelids and eyebrows.

Also use the baby oil as a lubricant to keep your skin smooth and supple, and as part of a simple weekly facial. To round out your basic beauty wardrobe, select witch hazel for a skin freshener. Pat this on after washing your face or after removing make-up.

Beauty Tips

Cheek rouge is important. Learn to apply it properly and discreetly for the best effect. Your cheek rouge should reflect the color of your lipstick. If you choose to wear a red, pink or orange dress or other clothes in the warm color range, you will need very little rouge. You will need more color if you wear green, blue or lavender.

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY — Spring is here and gardenerse have to get a good grip on the rake and long-handled shovels. I have taped about six inches of the handles of my garden tools with adhesive-backed tape and find I just cannot lose my grip.—VIC.

GIRLS — There is another nice man coming to our rescue with a helping hand.—POLLY.

DEAR POLLY—And Girls—Do you stop at the grocery on the way to the bridge club and then store the perishables in your hostess' refrigerator? After a delightful afternoon, do you thank the hostess, go merrily on your way, and arrive home to find that you have no meat for dinner? My family nearly faded away from malnutrition before I discovered that if I put the car keys in the refrigerator along with my packages, I would not leave without the packages—MRS. C. M.

GIRLS — If all the bridge club members came to my house carrying their groceries and then put them AND their car keys in my refrigerator, I wonder where I would put the refreshments they were going to be served. —POLLY

Rhubarb cobblers are spring signs

The rhubarb season means pies, cobblers and sauce. But first let's talk about cobblers—fresh red rhubarb sweetened, with a crusty, golden brown top with a nut-like flavor—baked and served in individual dishes.

That's one way to tell the family spring is really here.

RHUBARB COBBLERS
(Serves 6)
Base

- 3 cups 1-inch pieces fresh rhubarb
- ¾ cup sugar
- ¼ cup sifted all-purpose flour
- 6 tablespoons water

Topping

- 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- 2 tablespoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ cup shortening
- ¾ cup rolled oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked)
- ¼ cup milk

Heat oven to 400 degrees (hot). For base, divide rhubarb evenly into six 7-oz. ovenproof casseroles. Combine sugar and flour; sprinkle over rhubarb. Add 1 tablespoon water to each casserole.

For dough, sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar into bowl. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in oats. Add milk; stir lightly until dry ingredients are moistened. Spoon topping over rhubarb in each casserole. Sprinkle topping lightly with sugar, if desired. Place casserole on cooky sheet. Bake in oven preheated to 400 degrees about 20 minutes or until tops are golden brown.

Couldn't marry man she wanted

Glad to be a spinster

VANCOUVER (CP) — Norma Christie says she couldn't marry the man she wanted and wouldn't marry the man who wanted her, so she stayed single.

"I'm glad I'm a spinster," she told the Vancouver branch of the Zonta Club, an international business and professional women's group.

Miss Christie, a criminal lawyer, has advice for today's youth: "Stay single while you're young."

"Get shackled early and you'll never see Hong Kong in the moonlight. Nor will that trip to Paris or Rome ever come true.

"Men marry young because the girls chase them relentlessly until they're pinned down."

A WREN officer in the navy's disciplinary branch during the Second World War, Miss Christie said she doesn't care at what age youngsters get married.

"But young men should have a serious look at the world before getting shackled to a affairs information office in London.

A graduate of the University of Alberta, she graduated from University of British Columbia in 1954 and was admitted to the bar in 1955.

Following her naval service Miss Christie spent five years in the department of external woman."

Dynamite retailer quits

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — For 33 years Mrs. William Morning worked with dynamite and never had an accidental detonation. But now, because others lack confidence in her, she has had to surrender her licence to handle explosives.

The petitie, grey-haired widow was forced out of business as a dynamite retailer when two councils refused to approve sites for a magazine.

Mrs. Morning took over the business in this town 25 miles north of Toronto when her husband died in 1960. She ran the business until the farm on which she stored the explosive and detonator caps was sold.

The new owner didn't care for the idea of having the magazine on his property and asked her to move. She managed to line up two sites, one in King Township and another in Whitchurch Township.

"I wanted everything to be open and above board so I went to the councils to be sure there were no objections," Mrs. Morning said.

Both objected. King said the site was too near a proposed residential subdivision, Whitchurch felt it would be a strain on the nerves of residents.

Mrs. Morning finds it difficult to understand their fears.

"My husband used to say that dynamite was nothing to worry about as long as it was treated with respect. I've always followed that advice."

They jolt modern consciences

Prophets are too strong for us

NEW YORK (AP) — If you get closely acquainted with the prophets of old, the effect may be jolting in the present.

It is "the end of complacency," says a man who has delved deeply into the lives of those ancient seers.

"They upset our peace of mind. They force us to face the naked realities of life."

This is a basic reason why the world today shies away from those disturbing, bygone messengers, says Rabbi Dr. Abraham J. Heschel, one of the world's great Jewish scholars and an authority on the prophets.

"They seem too strong for our emotions," he said.

"They are outraged at injustice. They challenge our indifference to it. Instead of comforting us and reducing the demands on us, which is the effect of most reading today, they provoke us and intensify our sense of responsibility."

Dr. Heschel, a meditative man of 55, with warm, penetrating eyes, a trim beard and greying, undisciplined hair, feels that modern civilization needs the conscience - stirring thrusts of the prophets. He wants to make them better known.

* * *

"It is my dream," he said in an interview in his book-cluttered office at New York's Jewish Theological Seminary of America where he is professor of Jewish ethics and mysticism. "We need to recapture these strange individuals and their outlook as part of our education and general intellectual situation."

Around him, the ceiling-high bookshelves bulged with aged volumes and documents, accumulated in his research and teaching in Europe and America. His own latest book, The Prophets, published by Harper's, is a probing, vivid analysis of those olden sages who spoke for God.

"Our culture respects many great men of the past, Plato Dante, Socrates," he said. "But the prophets are relatively unknown."

If their influence was more sharply felt, it might shake the rafters of modern religious institutions, he conceded, adding:

'Our religions have yielded largely to the philosophy of comfort, of withdrawal into dogma. But the prophets insisted that God is involved in history and has a stake in what happens to man and what man does to man."

* * *

His soft voice rose. "Religion without this responsibility to and concern for concrete human problems is worse than idolatry. It is an abomination."

But just what manner of men were these impatient, disquieting divines who castigated society and gave the world the Bible? Dr. Heschel writes in his book:

"The prophet is a man who feels fiercely. God has thrust a burden upon his soul and he is bowed and stunned at man's fierce greed. Frightful is the agony of man; no human voice can convey its full terror. Prophecy is the voice that God has lent to the silent agony, a voice to the plundered poor, to the profaned riches of the world. It is a form of living, a crossing point of God and man. God is raging in the prophets' words."

The secret they reveal is "God's hidden pathos," Dr. Heschel writes.

Come To The Woods

I'd like to go to the woods today
Where new life reigns supreme
To see once more the fresh spring flowers
Lifting their heads from mossy bowers
Cared for by hands unseen.

Under damp leaves "arbutus trails"
In pretty bunches of white and pink
And trillium too-like great white stars
Lending their charm from near and far
Where violets bend to drink.

So come with me thro' that wooded path
Where the sun like spots of gold
Creeps silently thro' to kiss the dew
To war their hearts all thru' and thru'
And help the buds unfold

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

SOUTH COMMITS BRIDGE CRIME

Today's hand comes from an Oregn reader. His comments were "in my opinion the worst bid a bridge player can make is to pass one trick below game. If the hand plays badly the contract won't make. If it plays well there will be overtricks and game would be there for anyone who had had the sense to bid it."

It seems that the bidding had gone as in the box. West had opened the deuce. of hearts. East rose with the ace and returned the suit. My correspondent, who was South, went after spades and wound up losing two spades and two hearts. Since the club finesse was on for him there was no defense to beat three no-trump and South was annoyed at his partner.

I agree with South in part.

Anyone who gets in the habit of passing his partner's two no-trump bids is going to miss plenty of games, but this time North had a good reason. He had heard his partner's original pass and felt that it was most unlikely that three no-trump could make.

Hence in my opinion the blame for missing the game rests 99.99 per cent on South's shoulders. South had committed a real bridge crime. He had passed an opening bid!

Even then he had a chance to correct things. No one was twisting his arm and ordering him to bid two no-trump. He could have jumped right to three no-trump and saved all the trouble.

Gardeners build their own schoolnear Victoria

VICTORIA (CP) — Nearly 100 years ago, men who ran afoul of the law sweated on a chain gang to build a roadway up the steep bluff to the site of the provincial Government House overlooking south Victoria.

Once again, 15 young men are laboring without pay in the same area, this time creating a new five-acre development.

But today's men are linked only by a love of their work and the hope of one day being referred to as graduates from the country's finest school of gardening.

The men, aged 18 to 22, are members of the first class in a new provincial government plan to answer a serious shortage of garden experts.

"We've searched right across Canada and in England for thoroughly trained people," said a spokesman for the public works department.

"Finally we decided that with Victoria's garden reputation and the fact that the Pacific Northwest produces more garden species than any other place on the continent, we should be turning out the best gardeners.

"That is the aim of the course."

PAID ON COURSE

The course is sponsored by the department of education, vocational training department.

For five months, applicants selected for their potential (they require only Grade 10 education) receive classroom and indoor instruction under W. J. Steel of the education department and Leonard Butterworth, Victoria area provincial gardening superintendent.

They have a classroom in the Government House basement and receive their practical training in the gardens of Government House, among the finest in British Columbia.

When they complete this training the department will place them with private companies as apprentices for four years additional on - the - job training.

During this period they will earn up to $250 a month rising to $325 after two years with journeyman status. Potential earnings run as high as $400.

Government officials hope one day to produce gardeners as famed as graduates of the course given in Kew Gardens in London, England.
