Key election stop- in Townships

SHERBROOKE (CC) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau barnstormed into the Eastern Townships Thursday in an attempt to drum up support for Liberal candidates as the countdown to the July 8 federal election heads into the home stretch.

Mr. Trudeau will campaign in the Eastern Townships ridings of Brome-Missisquoi, Compton and Sherbrooke during his Quebec itinerary.

A major speech is on tap in Compton county where Liberal nominee Claude Tessier is pressing Social Credit incumbent Henri Latulippe.

After a strategy meeting in Montreal Thursday morning Mr. Trudeau will fly by helicopter to Cowansville where he is scheduled to host a picnic with citizens in front of the town hall at noon.

At 12:30 he will lunch at the Hotel Maurice in Cowansville before retiring to his hotel suite to rest until heading off to Coaticook. He is scheduled to give a speech in front of the Coaticook town hall before leaving by car to travel to Sherbrooke at 4:15 p.m.

After a conference at Sherbrooke's Le Baron Motel Mr. Trudeau will head to the regional shopping centre Carrefour de l'Estrie in the North ward where he will take time out to meet local residents.

He leaves Sherbrooke airport at 8:30 p.m. Just the fact that Mr. Trudeau is sweeping through the region shows the importance which the Liberals are placing on the Eastern Townships.

In Brome-Missisquoi he hopes to boost Liberal candidate Peter Turner who is involved in a tight race with Progressive Conservative incumbent Heward Graffey.

In Compton where Mr. Latulippe only captured a 980 vote majority in 1972 the Liberals feel that Lac Megantic mayor Claude Tessier, who finished second in the last federal election, has a strong chance of winning.

In Sherbrooke where Irene Pelletier is vying for a second term, the Liberals could face strong competition from the Social Credit nominee Andre Breton who, despite the fact he was chosen without a nominating convention, is gaining support daily.

Kindy launches his campaign

SHERBROOKE (CC) — Progressive Conservative candidate in Sherbrooke riding, Dr. Alexandre Kindy, launched his campaign at a press conference yesterday by publicly challenging the other candidates to open debate on inflation.

Claiming that inflation was the major problem confronting the voters Dr. Kindy proclaimed that he would defend his party's policies in an open debate and wondered if the other candidates could do the same.

But there were many contradictions during his press conference Tuesday. "I am with the Conservatives because I believe they have the programs to solve the problems but when I am elected I want to represent the people of my riding and not just my party," Dr. Kindy said.

But when he outlined his program it was exactly the same as the Progressive Conservative national platform. He did mention that help would be given to small and medium sized industry here but that too is in the national platform.

Later, during the conference, he claimed that it wasn't with the "faults" of the other candidates that he would be a better candidate. It was for that reason that he would "never denigrate" any of his adversaries.

But once again, moments later, he blasted another candidate for living outside of the Sherbrooke area. He explained the change in attitude as a question "which needs to be answered" and not an attack on an adversary.

Those two examples had an impact on the media men present. Also, some of them were surprised that Mr. Kindy did not have a concrete platform designed for specific projects in his county.

The Stanfield platform which he outlined was much the same as PC candidates are talking about throughout the country. Among the measures which would be implemented by the PCs and Kindy are some directed towards inflation, pensions, unemployment, housing and agriculture.

On the inflation question, the local psychiatrist who is seeking to win an election for the third time, promised reduced income taxes for persons earning less than $10,000, a 90 day price freeze with selective controls to follow and the abolition of sales tax on clothing and footwear.

He promised to increase old age pensions to $202 a month from the present $187 and to include an increase in relation to the cost of living index. The old age pensions starting age would be gradually reduced to 60 years while the husband or wife of a person receiving old age pension allocations would begin to receive theirs at the age of 50.

Unemployment would be reduced by encouraging the growth of small industry and minerals would be transformed into products in Canada creating many more jobs.

To ease the cost of housing problem Mr. Kindy said sales tax of 11 per cent on construction material would be abolished, mortgage interest rates would be reduced and a percentage of mortgage interest payments would be tax deductible.

In agriculture, programs would be started to get young people more interested in farming and to "give farmers a living standard comparable to the residents of urban areas."

Election round-up

Transportation and old age pensions are key issues

The Liberal party announced a sweeping plan Tuesday to take over railway passenger services operated by the two national railways and make major improvements in intercity bus services if the Trudeau government is re-elected.

The program, phase three of the Liberal transportation platform for the July 8 election, was announced by Liberal officials in Cornwall, Ont., one of several campaign stops made Tuesday by Prime Minister Trudeau.

They said the plan calls for establishment of a national passenger transport corporation to take charge of CP Rail and CNR passenger services. The agency would also have authority to operate and improve bus and other provincially-operated passenger services.

Details of the plan, which would take up to eight years to implement fully, were released to reporters before Mr. Trudeau spoke in Cornwall. He made no reference to the proposed passenger service corporation but said the Liberals will concentrate on cheap efficient rail transport if returned to power.

Officials estimated that the plan would cost $500 million over five years, plus added subsidy payments to offset expected profit losses. About $100 million in federal subsidies now is paid to the two railways.

Officials said the initial goal for higher-speed service would be trains operating at 120 miles an hour, increasing to 175 miles an hour over a seven-to-eight year period.

OUTLINED EARLIER

The first two phases of the Liberal transportation program, dealing with freight rates and urban transit, were outlined earlier by Mr. Trudeau.

The announcement Tuesday took the spotlight away from the other three national leaders who were campaigning elsewhere in the country.

Robert Stanfield, resuming his travels after a one-day break in Ottawa, flew to Victoria where he was greeted warmly by an outdoor crowd of more than 1,000 in downtown Centennial Square.

The Progressive Conservative leader shook hundreds of hands and won his biggest round of applause when he reiterated a Conservative pledge to raise old age pensions. More than 28 per cent of Victoria residents are over 65.

Later, in Vancouver, Mr. Stanfield reacted skeptically to the Liberal transportation announcement, telling a radio interviewer it would take the railways "off the hook for passenger services which are not profitable."

"I would like to consider if there isn't some alternative to the government assuming total responsibility for passenger services."

At an evening rally of 2,000 in West Vancouver, he attacked Liberal housing, transportation and inflation proposals, accusing Prime Minister Trudeau of running a campaign on instant policies.

AFTER PRICES

David Lewis carried his New Democratic campaign into Northern Ontario, challenging supermarkets and meat-packing plants to explain pork pricing practices to the public.

"I suspect there is a lot of unnecessary fat ... we'll trim it back," he told party supporters at a luncheon.

He singled out Dominion Stores and Safeway, two major supermarket chains, and Canada Packers and Burns, two large meat-packing plants, for specific mention. All four should tell the public what procedures they use to determine pork prices, he said.

He said farmers are getting less now for dressed pork than they were at the time of the last election in October, 1972. But meat packers were getting more.

He repeated an NDP pledge to set up a strong national price control board if the party is elected July 8. The New Democrats won 31 of 264 Commons seats in 1972.

Later at Kirkland Lake, he broadened his corporate criticisms to sugar companies, accusing major firms of boosting prices to unjustified levels. Five pounds of sugar sold for 85 cents in 1972 at Thunder Bay, Ont., but the price has soared since to $1.80, he said.

NO PROTECTION?

"The Trudeau government has allowed the industry to fatten its profits rather than protect the Canadian consumer."

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette had his schedule interrupted Tuesday in Halifax by fog.

Prior to leaving Halifax for Montreal, he said a party investigation will be carried out to determine why two Social Credit candidates were allowed to register for the Quebec riding of Labelle.

"If I find the least bit of political game in there, some one is going to catch it."

A letter from Mr. Caouette to electoral officials endorsed Wilfred Marin over J.-Noel Langois as the official party candidate. But it arrived too late to prevent both names from appearing on the ballot.

Today, Mr. Trudeau takes the day off in Ottawa while Mr. Stanfield campaigns in Cranbrook, B.C., and Calgary. Mr. Lewis will be in the Manitoba centres of Thompson and The Pas and Mr. Caouette will be back in his Quebec riding of Temiscamingue.

Language issue "insults and abuses"

QUEBEC (CP) — An English-language group left legislature committee hearings on Quebec's language legislation Tuesday feeling "insulted" and "abused" and saying this is the treatment being dealt most such groups.

"I certainly felt insulted the way they dealt with us," said James Boule, president of the Association of Protestant School Business Officials of Quebec. "But after listening to the hearings this morning that's what I expected."

The committee earlier had heard briefs from the Canada Committee and the Association of Directors-General of Protestant School Boards.

They and previous English-speaking groups, have run into obstacles in backing up their claims that the federal Official Languages Act and international charters support their stand for bilingualism in Quebec and for the "fundamental right" to freedom of choice in the language of education.

They ran into the constitutional points raised by Opposition Leader Jacques-Yvan Morin and the doubts of Education Minister Francois Cloutier. COME PREPARED

"English groups should be much better prepared in their analysis of Bill 22," Mr. Boule said, referring to committee questioning that has left some groups gasping for air and saying they are not legal experts.

"Maybe part of the problem is that we don't share the anxiety they seem to have about problems of French-speaking people not getting ahead in industry," he said, adding that in his home in the Bedford area of the Eastern Townships French-Canadians are promoted in business.

His group questioned in its brief that the French language in Quebec is being eroded and said they did not see the need of legislation like Bill 22 when the bilingualism of non-Francophones and the use of French in business and industry was increasing.

They said the bill would lead to an exodus of capital and people from the province and was too open in its present form to the abuse of technocrats.

Mr. Morin zeroed in on how much French someone like Mr. Boule used in his daily business.

Mr. Boule said he received a good deal of mail in French and "had no hesitation to answer in my bad French" if the situation warranted but defended his right to use English.

He was asked when this would be improved.

"When it becomes an economic necessity, in order to hold down my job I assure you I will do it and I will be able to do it," he said.

Through all the uproar of representatives of both linguistic groups demanding withdrawal of Bill 22, Mr. Cloutier said the government intends to carry through the principle of its bill to the end.

Objections have also been raised by cabinet ministers such as Municipal Affairs Minister Victor Goldbloom who told a meeting in Montreal Monday that if Bill 22 is not amended to guarantee English-language rights there will be no future for the English in the province.

Immigration Minister Jen Bienvue has called for the temporary withdrawal of the legislation until the teaching of English in French-language schools is improved.

He said the legislation as it now stands would lead to French unilingualism and contribute to the separatist cause in the province.

The Association of Directors-General of the Protestant School Boards recognized the necessity for the promotion of the French language but said the future for Quebec lay in bilingualism.

It deplored that Bill 22 does not recognize English as a language of instruction for those who choose it and does not recognize that Protestant school boards have entrenched constitutional rights under the British North America Act.

Section 93 of the BNA Act provides for Protestant and Roman Catholic school boards in all provinces but does not guarantee education along linguistic lines.

Mr. Morin asked if the group was aware that some countries had imposed official language on its minorities and that Manitoba had proclaimed English its official language.

Earlier, the Canada Committee, an organization promoting Canadian unity, was accused of defending the assimilation into the English-speaking community of francophone Quebecers.

The committee's brief supported parental freedom to choose the language of education, asked that the acquired rights of minorities be clearly spelled out in Bill 22 and stressed that French-speaking Quebecers must get a good grounding in English.

It said that particularly in Montreal the bicultural nature of Canada was affirmed and the two official languages recognized by the federal government live in the greatest harmony.

Mr. Morin said what was going on in Montreal was assimilation, adding that 70 per cent of Quebec francophones attending English-language schools would be found in Montreal.

He asked if this is what the group was defending with their emphasis on freedom to choose schools.

Louis Rochette, president of the Canada Committee, said that French-Canadians must be bilingual in order to be prepared for top jobs.

Cultural Affairs Minister Denis Hardy said the criticism showed lack of confidence in the judgment of francophones if it implied they would not see the necessity of learning English unless it were written into law.

The linguistics department of the University of Quebec at Montreal presented a brief saying the vagueness of Bill 22 and its support of bilingualism in effect made it an "insult to the intelligence or good sense of all Quebecers."

The group said that Quebec government had a duty to protect the "mother language" by stopping a too-hasty learning of English as a second language. Bilingualism can lead to unilingualism if one language comes to dominate the other, they maintained.

They called for an all-French public school system and said the teaching of French as a second language should be obligatory at the primary level in private schools, but the teaching of English as a second language at the primary level of the public school system should be banned.

Nixon statement shaken by tape

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's statements that he first learned of the Watergate cover-up March 21, 1973, have been shaken by evidence presented to the House of Representatives judiciary committee.

A taped presidential conversation heard by the committee Tuesday indicated to several members that Nixon was aware at least four days earlier that White House aides might be involved in the cover-up.

They said the apparent discrepancy raises doubts about Nixon's Watergate explanations. He has repeatedly given March 21 as the date he first learned of efforts centred in the White House to contain the spreading scandal.

The tape the committee listened to was an excerpt from one made June 4, 1973, while Nixon was listening to a number of tapes and commenting about them to aides Alexander Haig and Ronald Ziegler.

Members said Nixon's comments about a March 17 conversation he had with his former counsel, John Dean, indicated he and Dean discussed the Watergate cover-up then. Members could not hear the tapes Nixon was listening to.

STUNG BY LEAK

Stung by criticism of a new leak of a confidential committee memorandum, members were reluctant to discuss what they heard or to comment on the record.

But last May 21, in a press briefing, Chairman Peter Rodino (Dem. N.J.) had said the June 4 tape showed the March 17 meeting with Dean included "a discussion of the Watergate matter and the possible involvement of White House personnel and others."

"I'll stick by that statement," Rodino said Tuesday, and other members said after hearing the tape they agreed with it.

Asked whether he now has doubts that Nixon first learned of the cover-up March 21, Representative Edward Mezvinsky (Dem. Iowa) said: "Yes."

Some members, however, were not so certain. Representative Don Edwards (Dem. Calif.) said: "It's not open and shut." And Representative Charles Wiggins (Rep. Calif.) said that although Nixon got "an inkling" of the cover-up March 17, it was clear he did not get the full story until March 21.

"You could say the president should have been more alert," said Wiggins. "But you can't fault him for saying he first learned of it March 21."

TRANSCRIPT DIFFERS

The March 17 tape is one of 42 the committee subpoenaed April 19, but for which it got a White House-edited transcript instead. The transcript contains no reference to a discussion of Watergate.

Meanwhile, former attorney-general Richard Kleindienst told the Senate judiciary committee that he stayed deliberately aloof from the original Watergate investigation.

Kleindienst said that he was assured by his aides at the justice department that there was not enough evidence until April, 1973, to go beyond the original seven defendants in the June 17, 1972, Watergate break-in.

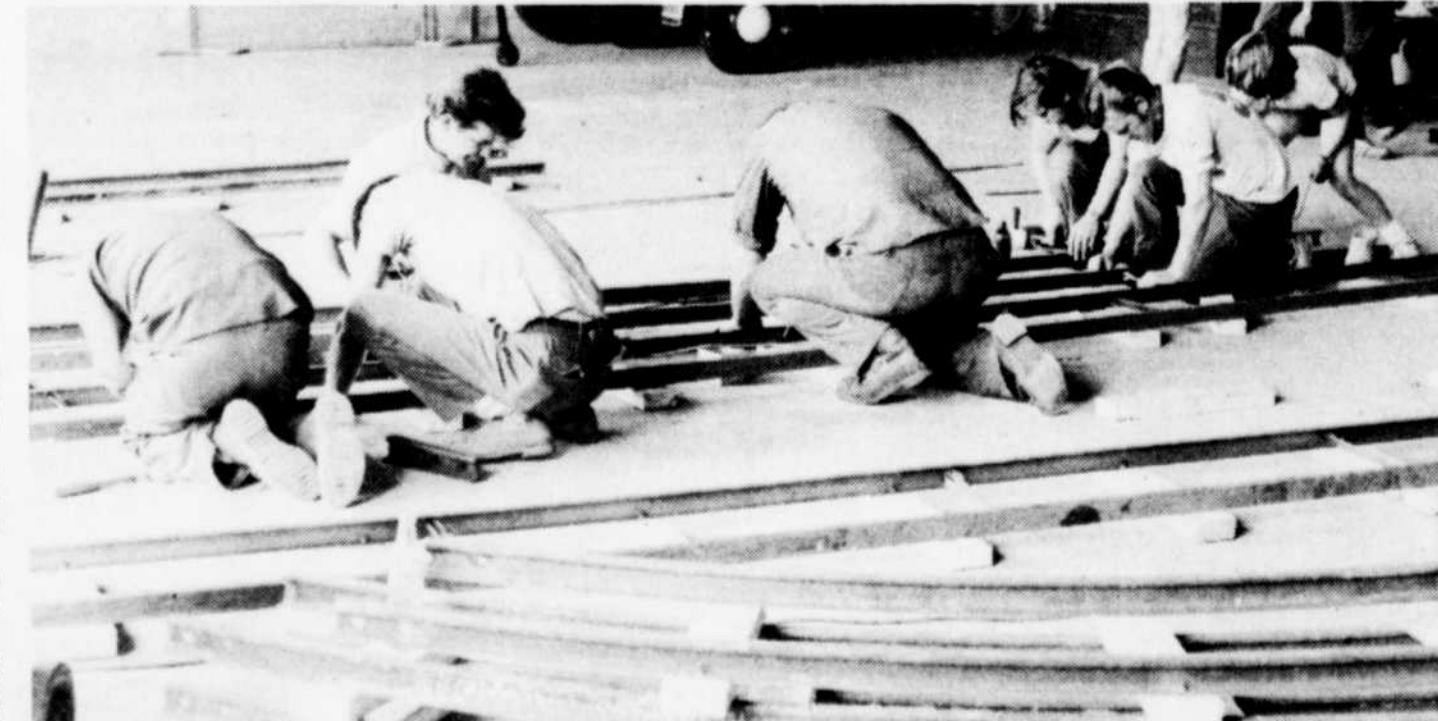

And the U.S. district court in Washington began disciplinary proceedings against Kleindienst, who has been convicted of refusing to answer certain questions about the ITT anti-trust litigation. The grievance committee of the court ordered that Kleindienst show cause within 30 days "why he should not, as a member of the bar of this court, be disciplined."

The new branch will "assume a larger role in Netherlands-Canadian trade development," the bank said.

Oil issues were mixed. Shell Canada fell 1/2 to $13 1/2, Pacific Petroleum 1/2 to $20 1/2, Petrofina Canada 1/2 to $23, Total Petroleum 1/2 to $8 and Gulf Canada 1/2 to $27 1/2 while Husky Oil was unchanged at $15 1/2 as was PanCanadian Petroleum at $9 1/2 and Pan Ocean Oil at $10 1/2.

Among speculative issues Ajas Minerals fell five cents to 10 cents after trading 29,000 shares.

Shares of the Bank of Nova Scotia are rated by most analysts as the most favored of Canadian chartered banks.

Using price-earnings multiples—the relationship between stock price and earnings per share—and profit prospects as a base, Scotia-bank fared the best.

Analysts say that when the squeeze on profit margins develops from falling interest rates, Scotia-bank will be better off than other banks because the bank has a considerable portion of its assets in consumer and mortgage loans. Interest rates on these loans adjust downward more slowly than on business loans that are directly related to the prime rate.

While other chartered banks tend to lend to larger companies at a rate just above the prime interest rate, Scotia-bank has a higher ratio of loans to smaller companies at a higher rate.

Analysts say Scotia-bank's solid position also arises from good timing in releasing its rights issue earlier this year. The $56 million in proceeds may be applied to high-yielding assets at a time when loan demand is high and at "no directly assignable costs", they say.

They say that if interest rates and money supply do not decline sharply, the bank should earn about $3.80 a share fully diluted in fiscal 1974 and $4.25 the following year.

SEES SHARE RISE

The price-earnings multiple on 1975 estimated profit is about 8.4 times but it could go as high as 11.5 times, one analyst says. That implies a share price of about $49 next year, up from the present price of about $35.

Toronto Dominion Bank was the next popular choice of analysts on the basis of its growth quality. But, they say, its shares are already at a healthy multiple. Estimated profit for fiscal 1974 is $3.60 a share. They say the bank is too heavily involved in international operations and the world monetary condition is uncertain.

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce is ranked as a good investment by several analysts because of its minimum of foreign investments and undervalued position.

Bank of Montreal was recommended because the share price is slightly depressed in light of 1974-75 prospects. Analysts say the bank appears to be overcoming its problems and should soon reap the benefits of a large expenditure made for Master Charge and computerization. But, they say, the bank needs a rights issue to help its capital position.

One analyst said Royal Bank is a hold because of its broad international and domestic participation and its general high quality.

Oil countries add new royalty

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) extended Monday for three months its freeze on crude oil prices but tacked on a two-percent increase in government royalty rates.

The increase means an 11-cent rise in the price of a barrel of crude—or about a quarter of a cent a gallon. The major oil companies have said they will pass on to consumers any rise in costs.

Saudi Arabia, the biggest oil producer by far among the 13 OPEC member countries, refused to go along with the royalty increase. Officials said it was because King Faisal's government is engaged in price negotiations with the giant Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco).

OPEC rules require that the organization's decision be unanimous, but Abderrahman Khene, the secretary-general, said the rule was disregarded this time because of the Saudi Arabian price talks.

Aramco announced last Monday that Saudi Arabia had taken over a 60-per-cent interest in the company, a prelude to an expected full takeover in the future.

Observers at the OPEC conference, however, said Saudi Arabia's decision not to affiliate itself with the OPEC royalty increase was more a reflection of Faisal's concern over the increase's economic effect on poor countries than a negotiating ploy with Aramco.

The decisions announced at the end of the three-day OPEC meeting represented a compromise between the other 12 countries and Saudi Arabia, which had advocated lower prices to ease pressure on poor countries caused by last year's fourfold increase in oil prices.

The others had urged some kind of increase to keep pace with inflation—either an outright rise in posted prices or increased taxes.

Khene announced the decisions at a news conference after a three-hour caucus. He said the royalty increase was necessary because "we are interested in protecting our purchasing power—cent by cent."

The industrialized countries, Khene said, "have failed to contain the alarming trend of inflation" while posted prices remained frozen during the first half of 1974.

He said the continued price freeze gives them another chance.

The decision on royalty rates, which vary to 16 per cent from 12 1/2 per cent among the OPEC members, was taken in the interest of uniformity, a conference statement said.

TAXES INSTEAD

Where a royalty increase is not applicable, the country will increase taxes to make up the same amount, the statement said.

For example, the royalty rate on Arabian light crude currently is 12 1/2 per cent. It will increase to 14 1/2 per cent, which will raise royalties by 23 cents to $1.69. But because production costs—about 10 cents in this case—and royalties are deducted from the posted price before calculating taxes, the net increase on a barrel is only 10 to 11 cents.

The posted price, used to calculate taxes and royalties, currently is $11.65 a barrel. The total government take on royalties and taxes has been about $7. Under the new royalty rate it will be $7.11.

The oil companies have been selling oil at between $9 and $9.50 a barrel.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto stock market were moderately lower in light trading Tuesday.

The industrial index, widely-based indicator of market trend, fell 41 to 191.91, golds 48 to 448.71, base metals .51 to 83.10 and western oils 1.69 to 190.89.

Eleven sub-components of the industrial index fell while five rose. Industrial mining, beverages and oil refining shares dropped the most while banks and utility stocks gained.

CHAMPLAIN UPDATES BANKING RESOLUTIONS

The board of governors has updated several of its resolutions dealing with banking signatures. According to the new board resolutions, Brian Ash will be authorized to sign, on behalf of the college, all contracts and legal documents which have been approved by the board. Formerly, Frederick Turley, retired director-general of Champlain College, was given similar authorization.

DR. BRIAN ASH

Dr. Ash was mandated to prepare an amendment to the resolution. At the board meeting, he had proposed that he should be given authorization to sign on behalf of the college "subject to approval by the board of governors", but the proposal was rejected on the grounds that it might paralyze the operation of the college.

CHAMPLAIN APPEALS PROCEDURE EVALUATION

The board of governors of Champlain Regional College has mandated the college administration to evaluate the appeal procedures presently in force in the institution and, if necessary, to prepare a proposal for a new procedure. The college prepared its appeal procedures during April, 1973, for the appeal made by Raymond McGrath, then director of the Lennoxville campus, against a decision made by Frederick Turley, then director-general, to transfer him from the campus to a research and development post at the college's central office. Since that time, the college has had to entertain one other appeal: by David Sewell, director of student services, against a decision to non-re-engage him for the academic year 1974-75. The present appeal procedure calls for the board to establish a five-person appeal committee consisting of three board members and one representative named by each of the superior and subordinate involved in a specific decision to dismiss, transfer or reassign an individual within the college's system.

CHAMPLAIN-BISHOP'S RENTAL AGREEMENT
According to Peter Hill, director of the Lennoxville campus of Champlain Regional College, the government has shown itself to be dissatisfied with an agreement reached between the college and Bishop's University regarding the rental of university facilities by the CEGEP.

Dr. Hill told members of the Champlain board of governors, at their last meeting, that the two local groups had negotiated a package agreement involving payment of $450,000 to the university by the college. He added, however, that officials of the government's ministry of education were anticipating an agreement calling for payment of $375,000-$400,000 to Bishop's.

"So what they've done," Dr. Hill elaborated, "is that they've told us to scrap the agreement and that they'll send us details of an agreement in a few days."

A similar situation arose when the two institutions prepared an agreement for rental of the university facilities, in 1971, and the government stepped in and rewrote the terms.

During the 1973-74 year, Champlain has paid Bishop's $330,000. During the previous year, the sum totalled $300,000. Of these amounts, the majority of the rental payments were in the form of special grants, although the college was obliged to find more than one-third of the total in its library, audio-visual and data processing budgetary allocations.

CHAMPLAIN ACCEPTS FIVE-YEAR PLAN
The board of governors of Champlain Regional College has endorsed an administration-prepared plan for development of the CEGEP's Lennoxville campus over the next five years.

The proposal is based on the assumption that the Lennoxville campus will have a population of 1,000 students. Peter Hill, Lennoxville campus director, explained to board members: "This does not mean that the campus will never exceed this figure, but rather that in the long term, the population of the campus will tend to level out at approximately 1,000 students."

In fact, Dr. Hill expects an enrolment of nearly 1,050 on the campus during the 1974-75 academic year.

In addition, the plan anticipates a shift in students' major areas of study from social science to technology and science programs. As Dr. Hill noted, this expectation is supported by trends evidenced in the registration of students for the 1974-75 academic year at the campus.

Finally, the proposal foresees development of new programs in the light technology area for the campus, including programs in the following fields: recreation, farm management, and communications. The campus also hopes to establish a two-year pre-university music option.

Reminding members of the board that the projections and proposals are estimates, Dr. Hill declared they are based on three factors: an analysis of current enrolment trends and population of feeder schools, an attempt to reflect the wishes of present and future students, and an effort to justify the maximum amount of possible space for the new building proposed for the Lennoxville campus.

Hospital representatives to get nod this evening

SHERBROOKE (CC) — A total of 22 user representatives are expected to be elected to the 11 boards of directors of the Eastern Townships hospitals this evening.

Elections are scheduled at the Sherbrooke, University Medical Centre, D'Youville, Hotel-Dieu, and St. Vincent de Paul hospitals in Sherbrooke; the Hospital Centre in Asbestos, the St. Louis de Windsor Hospital in Windsor, La Providence Hospital in Magog, St. Joseph and Frere Andre Hospitals in Lac Megantic and the Coaticook Hospital in Coaticook.

A total of 54 candidates will be vying for the user representative posts in the different institutions when elections get underway at 8:30 p.m.

The meetings are scheduled to start at 8 p.m. and elections will begin when 100 users are present. Voting will be by secret ballot.

A certain amount of time will be allocated for each candidate to explain why he or she should be elected. If 100 users are not present the candidates will be chosen by the Eastern Townships Health and Social Services Council, an advisory body set up under bill 65 which revamped health care in the province.

Of special interest to the readers of The Record will be the elections at the Sherbrooke Hospital where six candidates have filed nomination papers. Nominations had to be submitted 15 days before the election dates.

Seeking the two available seats at the Sherbrooke Hospital are James E. Atto, John D. Bowman, Mary E. Camber, Mrs.

Krystyna B. Kouri, Robert F. Roman and Florent Jacques.

Both Mr. Atto and Mrs. Kouri are the incumbent representatives. They were elected last year when the first user election was held.

Mrs. Kouri is a social worker from Sherbrooke while Mr. Atto, also of Sherbrooke, is a general contractor. Mrs. Camber is the director-general of the Cecil Butters Memorial Home in Austin where she lives. John D. Bowman is the treasurer of the Austin Glove Manufacturing Co. in Sherbrooke. He is a resident of Lennoxville. Mr. Roman, a purchasing agent with the Lennoxville School Board is a resident of Waterville while Mr. Jacques, a granite company controller, lives in Rock Forest.

During the last hospital elections there were seven candidates in the running at the Sherbrooke Hospital which is located in the North ward.

Hospital general manager Earl Gould said after nominations closed that the quality and the quantity of the nominees showed that the population cared about the operation of the hospital.

The elections at the Sherbrooke Hospital will take place at the student nurses residence located at 375 Argyle Street.

Every person of full age who has received health services in the hospital centre between June 1, 1971 and June 1, 1974, either for himself or herself or who has requested and received such service for a minor who is still his, or her, dependant has the right to vote in tonight's elections.

In Windsor five persons are vying for the two seats with elections scheduled at the St. Philippe School on St. Ambrose streets. In Asbestos there are four candidates seeking the seats. The elections there will be held in the hospital centre's community hall located on 3rd Avenue.

In Magog there are only two candidates but at least 100 persons have to show up in order to make their elections legal. Elections at La Providence are scheduled in the hospital auditorium on St. Patrice Street.

In Coaticook five nominees will face the voters during elections which will be held in the Sacre-Coeur School on St. Jean Baptist street.

In Lac Megantic there are three candidates seeking the posts at the Frere Andre Hospital where the election will be held at the hospital on Champlain street. At the St. Joseph Hospital there are six candidates with elections on tap at Sacre-Coeur School on Cousineau street.

In Sherbrooke elections will be held at each of the hospitals. Action seems to be heaviest at St. Vincent de Paul with eight candidates seeking the posts. There are five candidates at the University Medical Centre, three at D'Youville Hospital and six candidates at Hotel-Dieu Hospital.

The regional health council will supervise all elections.

Collegial diplomas for Champlain grads

LENNOXVILLE (MI) — The board of governors of Champlain Regional College last week recommended that the government convoke collegial diplomas on some 101 Lennoxville campus students.

In accordance with government-established regulations for operation of CEGEPs, boards of governors of colleges must recommend their students to the education ministry for such diplomas, once the students have attained all the objectives required by law.

The regulations involved include the requirements that students, to be eligible for graduation, must have completed 28 half-year credits. Of these credits, some four must be accumulated in each of the following areas: physical education, humanities, English and complementary electives.

More than 450 at buffet des nations

The 3rd annual Buffet des Nations, organized by the Service of Aid to New Canadians (S.A.N.C.), was held in the Arena at Bishop's University recently. The atmosphere was extremely relaxed and provided the opportunity for Canadians to get to know some of the New Canadians in the area.

There were more than 450 guests as well as about 150 volunteers. The arena was gaily decorated including fresh or artificial flowers on each table—the latter were made by students at St. Michel school.

The 30 tables of the buffet—each consisting of at least two main dishes and one dessert typical of the country concerned—were prepared by representatives of these countries who now live in the Sherbrooke-Lennoxville area. Many wore national costume which greatly added to the colour and air of festivity of the evening.

After the dinner there was a folklore programme with dances and music from Scotland, Italy, Argentina, Panama and Canada. The evening concluded with a dance for the guests and the representatives of the 30 countries.

According to all reports, S.A.N.C. Buffet des Nations 74 was a tremendous success and an evening enjoyed by all who attended.

Mr. Gresham explains that he's leaving the school boards because his family is grown up and because he believes the ETRSB has established for itself a good administrative operation. "I like to feel I'm leaving at a time when things are running fairly well," he declares.

He believes the regional board must still devote extensive attention to the pedagogical aspects of its system, but remarks that he already sees signs that improvement in this area is growing. ## Building on sand

Long after the present election campaign is history, Canadians will continue to face a large and serious problem. To fill its energy requirements Canada must raise and invest huge sums of capital, so huge, indeed, as to dwarf the investments of all past experience.

In a recent report, for instance, the government of Ontario, a major oil-consuming province, estimated that it will cost more than $1 billion to build one Alberta tar sands extraction plant with a relatively low oil production of 125,000 barrels a day. This is only a small beginning. As conventional oil supplies diminish, more plants will be required. In addition, the cost of a Mackenzie Valley pipeline is estimated at some $5 billion as a minimum. Besides these major projects most provinces have energy schemes of their own, costing many billions in total.

As a very rough guess the federal government reckons that Canada must invest about $60 billion in energy developments during the next decade and it does not yet know where the money is to come from. But capital alone will not solve the problem. Expert technicians are in even shorter supply. Already Premier Loughheed of Alberta is trying to find them in the United States, though it will soon need all its skilled labor if it is to become self-sufficient in energy, as the government promises. North America as a whole is running into grave difficulties of manpower and finance.

Canada finds itself ill prepared for them. According to the official (and dubious) figures, it suffers from high unemployment but many industries remain desperately short of workers who are either untrained or refuse to go where jobs are available. At the time when investment is most needed, government policy, federal and provincial, does little or nothing to encourage savings and much to restrain them. Not only is the saver heavily taxed if he makes a capital gain but he is taxed, at a current rate of 12 per cent annually, in any fixed investment, even if he takes a loss. That is the indirect but inescapable tax of inflation, a capital levy for the saver, an income tax for everyone. Yet the government boasts that it has reduced direct taxes, and so it has, by a much smaller and almost insignificant margin.

Inflation at anything like its current rate will have drastic effects on the nation's economy, apart from the cruel damage to individuals. If the rate continues all the cost estimates of energy production, among other essential investments, must be revised upward. If the federal and provincial governments continue to incur large budgetary deficits, their demand for borrowed money, just to pay their running costs, will compete in the capital market with industrial borrowers to push up interest rates. If the federal government continues to pay interest even at 9 per cent on its bonds, while the purchaser is losing about 12 per cent, every year through the erosion of the currency, how long will the bonds be saleable? And if governments keep raising total expenditures on the present lavish scale, how long can they avoid a heavy general tax increase in the near future?

The simple fact is that Canada, like many other countries, is allowing inflation to undermine all its planning, both governmental and private, for durable prosperity. The man who plans to build a modest house or the corporation that plans to build a pipeline faces the same consequences — a state of complete uncertainty and dwindling confidence.

To be sure, rich natural resources give Canada an advantage over nations lacking them, but these resources produce no usable wealth until they are developed, and they cannot be adequately developed without massive capital, far more than the nation yet realizes. Though much of it must come from other nations, Canadians could raise a substantial share if they were encouraged to save and if they knew that their savings would be repaid in reliable money. Existing government policy at all levels, however, could hardly be better designed to discourage the saver.

When the federal government tells him that his saved money must steadily lose value, the discouragement of direct taxes is compounded. And while all governments talk about grand plans of durable, long-term economic growth there can be no credible plans so long as these promises are built not on physical assets like the Alberta tar sands but on the sinking financial sands of unlimited inflation.

China's nuclear test finely timed

PEKING (Reuter) — China's latest nuclear test was a finely-timed move in the light of several of Peking's current foreign-policy objectives.

It acts as a prompt response to the Indian test last month and a reassurance to China allies, such as Pakistan, who feel threatened by the Indian blast.

The Chinese test also will take some of the heat of protest away from the controversial French test program in the Pacific, which China tacitly supports.

Moreover, with President Nixon's summit meeting in Moscow due later this month, China has underlined its determination to break the nuclear monopoly of the two superpowers.

On the debit side, the test will cost China some goodwill among those countries in the Asia and Pacific region who fear a threat to health from nuclear fallout.

The Chinese explosion during the weekend at the Lop Nor testing grounds in the desert of western China has not been confirmed in Peking. China normally waits several days before announcing its tests.

It is the 16th Chinese blast since the program started 10 years ago. China insists it is developing its nuclear arsenal for defensive purposes only and stresses it will never be the first to use nuclear weapons.

TO PERFECT PAYLOAD

The military aim of the blast is to perfect a nuclear payload for Chinese intercontinental missiles now under development.

The warheads of such missiles generally need a series of "proof tests" in static conditions which can be closely monitored.

China has deployed a small force of medium- and intermediate-range nuclear-tipped missiles with a range of up to 3,500 miles—enough to hit targets in the European part of the Soviet Union.

Western authorities have maintained for some years that China is working on an intercontinental missile with a range of about 6,000 miles, capable of reaching the United States.

So far no full-scale test of such a missile has been announced in China or detected in the West. Such a test would require impact areas in the Indian or Pacific Oceans.

China has been deterred from holding such tests in the past by the fear of repercussions in neighboring countries.

But now that India has joined the nuclear club with its test blast last month, Peking may regard these considerations as invalid.

America's economic woes incurable?

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA)

A friend who is an adviser to the government's policymakers is convinced no one has the ability to solve our economic difficulties. Not the President. Not Congress. Not the economic experts, government or private. Neither Republicans nor Democrats.

This is no usual man. He was at one time group vice president of one of the world's great corporations and is now a top-ranking consultant to a number of government departments. He has no solution and says: "my brain is not big enough."

We have become too inter-dependent, rich nations as well as poor, for food, oil, metals and other minerals and raw materials and for markets for our goods. It is impossible to forecast the actions of governments, logical and illogical, which may affect economic conditions in other nations. Inflation, shortages, recessions and monetary instability creep from country to country, continent to continent.

The roots of our economic problems reach into many countries and the resulting complexities are so great that human minds, however brilliant and however many computer they may employ, cannot cope with them. The situation is more difficult because what can be done economically to prevent disaster depends on what is politically practical. What will the President, any president, or Congress or the public go along with. No solution will work if there is not public acceptance.

Much lip service has been paid to the international aspects of our economic problems. A plethora of conferences has been convened these past years on world monetary systems, skyrocketing oil prices, or preventing producers of other raw materials from following suit, and on eliminating hidden tariff barriers.

Most meetings, unfortunately, have ended with a wringing of hands, pious statements and touted understandings which turn out to be agreements over trivia.

We have not adequately studied those international economic matters over which we have some control — the effects of U.S. funded multinational corporations, of Washington policies on international oil exploration and investments, of our encouragement or discouragement of investments in raw materials in Latin, African or Asian lands, of the economic aid we provide to countries around the world. We make policies and take actions in these matters piecemeal without understanding their over-all effects.

Despite talk to the contrary, our government these past decades has given short shrift to worldwide economics and its effects on our lives.

The State Department fairly recently made its top economics man an undersecretary. It has not put him in the top echelon of policymaking. The secretary of the Treasury handles international economics with his left hand. Read the reports of the President's Council of Economic Advisers; note that blame for our troubles is laid internationally. There's an outline of how this happened but little real thought and less analysis (though considerable words) on how the problem can be solved.

The White House, too, has had an office dealing with these matters. It has had little influence and not a great deal of intellectual depth.

Pay attention to our commonwealth

By Bruce Biossat

WASHINGTON (NEA)

When the so-called Ad Hoc Committee on improving United States-Puerto Rico status relationship meets here for three days starting June 10, the American mainland members will need to repair some serious damage done to the sensitive islanders a month ago.

Of the seven mainlanders on the group, five are members of Congress. Yet when they last met in Puerto Rico April 27, only one of these, Sen. Marlow Cook of Kentucky, the group's chairman, was present. Since Puerto Rico's Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon was then making the basic Puerto Rican case, this heavy absenteeism was a gross affront.

Whether the distractions of Watergate or some other reasons kept the other four members of Congress away does not really matter. Illness aside, there can be no legitimate excuse for such absences.

Even though two other mainland committee members showed up (former Illinois Gov. Richard Ogilvie and a Texas businessman), Puerto Rican leaders and their people were not assuaged.

Indeed, the whole April 27 episode was read by them as troubling evidence of mainland American indifference toward the island's needs at a quite critical turn in its history. Some hard-nosed types may contend that, weighed on the scale of magnitude with Watergate, the Middle East negotiations, detente, arms control talks, the problems of Puerto Rico are minor.

But we are talking about crucial matters pertaining to the freedom and well-being of three million people, numerically equivalent to such nations as Lebanon, Somalia, Uruguay, Paraguay, New Zealand and Laos. And we have a very special bond with these particular three million.

For more than two decades, Puerto Rico has held what is called commonwealth status, a relationship unique in America. It was intended to recognize the island's special cultural position as an Hispanic Caribbean entity, to take account of its geographic and hence economic separation from the mainland, to accept that such considerations required latitude in self-government not bestowed upon the several states.

Fundamentally the relationship has worked well, is still endorsed by mainland leaders, and in key vote tests has won overwhelming support from Puerto Ricans themselves.

But time has showed "commonwealth," as originally defined by Congress, to be damaskingly vague, flawed by misplaced emphasis, with U.S. law as applied to the island often working accidentally to its detriment.

The Ad Hoc committee now at work is bent, therefore, toward maturing and more sharply defining the relationship — to widen Puerto Ricans' freedom of choice, to prevent new inequities and, hopefully, wipe out those which have accumulated over the years.

In his basic testimony on April 27, the young governor, Hernandez, suggested a vital reversal in the legal presumption which has always underlined commonwealth status. Under the original enabling act, virtually all U.S. law was made to apply automatically to Puerto Rico unless it is specifically exempted. Laws governing shipping, communications, federal grants for social programs, even new environmental protection regulation, have worked either with hardship or foolish distortion as applied to this crowded, unique island.

Hernandez proposes that the thing be simply turned around: that it be understood that a new U.S. law NOT cover Puerto Rico unless Congress expressly extends it there for sensible reasons acceptable to Puerto Ricans.

This would not amount to "independence." Few islanders want that, most by far think of themselves as Americans and continue to wish for strong if somewhat looser bonds.

These hard-working, imaginative, friendly people stand, beleaguered, at a crossroads. They deserve to be met there by concerned, sensitive mainlanders who appreciate their needs.

"ELECTION SERENADE"

A new grave, a broken law

WASHINGTON — With actor Robert Redford as the chief pallbearer and TV cameras deployed to record the tender scene, the last remains of legendary mountain man and Indian fighter Jeremiah Johnson were laid to rest the other day at Old Trail Town, Wyo.

Warner Bros., which is now massively promoting the Redford movie about Jeremiah Johnson, happily provided the TV networks with film clips. Thus, a nationwide television audience was treated to a Redford portrayal of the old Indian killer, as his moldy bones were lowered into their new grave.

There was one problem, which was never mentioned in all the publicity. The removal of Jeremiah Johnson's bones from a less glamorous veteran's grave, apparently was quite illegal.

The idea of relocating his mortal remains originated with some students at the Parkview Junior High School in Lancaster, Calif., which is 50 miles by freeway from the Warner Bros. lot.

They discovered that Jeremiah, whose real name was John Johnston, had been buried around the turn of the century in a Los Angeles veteran's plot. They decided that the old "liver eater," as he was known in the Wild West, would be happier buried among the mountains of Wyoming than the freeways of Los Angeles.

The students presented their proposal to the Veterans Administration, which agreed to the transfer of Jeremiah's remains to the locale of his legendary exploits.

Rufus Wilson, the VA cemetery boss, explained to us that the decision was "a real historic thing." Allegations of commercialism, he said, were unfounded.

The celebrated reburial was challenged, nevertheless, by Rep. John Melcher, D-Mont., who told us the Justice Department had informally advised him that the project appeared to violate regulations.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

The national cemetery regulations state that burials are deemed to be "permanent and final." Disinterment is allowed only for "cogent reasons," including a court order or the written consent of all close living relatives.

After Melcher raised his objections, Wilson agreed to put a hold on the project. But the following day, he changed his mind and authorized the disinterment. He said the regulations had been incorrectly interpreted.

Congressional experts fear the case could set a bad precedent. "Under (Wilson's) interpretation of the rules," said one aide, "the next thing we'd expect the Chamber of Commerce of General Pershing's home town asking for his bones to be dug up."

Footnote: A spokesman for Warner Bros. denied that the moviemakers promoted Jeremiah Johnson's reburial, calling the event a "fluky publicity break." As for Robert Redford, he lives in the mountains and has a genuine interest in the mountain man he portrayed.

Senate Whispers: There have been whispers in the Senate cloakroom that, if too many embarrassing tapes are subpoenaed at an impeachment trial, the President may release some of his taped conversations with individual senators.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., acknowledged that he could be hurt by the release of his private talks with the President, because he probably used "the most embarrassing language" of any senator on the White House tapes.

If his conversations were released, said the candid Goldwater, "I would be sorely tempted — although I would try to resist — to vote (against the White House) on that basis alone."

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., said he remembered the "high points but not the low points" of his meetings with the President. If embarrassing conversations were made public, said the senator, "we'd have to say he (the President) lost stature in our sight."

Most senators agreed with Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott, who said the release of presidential senatorial tapes "would push senators over to the other side."

Washington Whirl: The House impeachment staff still is relying upon the investigations of others to build the case against President Nixon. House investigators haven't yet gotten around themselves to interviewing some of the key Watergate figures. The staff has placed great stress upon the White House tapes, including those President Nixon is still refusing to hand over. Some committee members contend the staff is counting, foolishly, on the President to hang himself. Justice Department specialists are worried about computer fraud. Embezzlers with a mastery of computers are able to cheat banks and businesses by manipulating the right buttons. The crime is difficult to trace and to prove through the maze of tangled computer tapes.

Ginger Allen, identifying herself as a "free lancer working on a deadline," picked up a press copy of a study on the B-1 bomber project the other day. She also attended a press conference on Capitol Hill where she asked at least one question. We have now identified her as an employee of Rockwell International, which has a big financial stake in the B-1 bomber. Another Rockwell employee, Doug Larsen, dispatched a messenger to Capitol Hill to pick up a copy of the press release. The messenger delivered the document, however, to an Air Force office at the Pentagon. "I wanted to make sure they had the thing," Larsen told us.

WI meetings

BROOKBURY — The regular monthly meeting was held on Monday evening, June 10, at the home of Mrs. Ernest Bennett with Mrs. Keith Bennett as co-hostess. The date of this meeting had to be changed from the regular date, the first Thursday of every month, due to the very sudden death of Mr. Clarence Vintinner, an uncle of some of our W.I. members, who was buried on that day.

The meeting was opened in the usual manner by all repeating the Ode, Collect for Club Women and Salute to the flag.

The Roll Call "Do's and Don't in the Sick Room" was answered by 10 members. Mrs. Ralph Coleman, the President, welcomed one visitor to this meeting.

The minutes of the May meeting were read and approved by the Secretary Mrs. Osborne Lowe.

Correspondence consisting of Thank You notes from donations to the Pope Memorial School and letter from the Minister of Welfare and Health concerning the closing of many of our Senior Citizens Homes Our Secretary had been asked to make inquiries about this matter at one of our previous meetings.

The treasurer's report showed a substantial amount of money on hand and a very profitable sale of our Cook Books since the last meeting. Several more were sold at this time and more ordered by some of the members. A few Cook Books which had been brought from Convention were also sold.

Conveners were reminded to send their reports to the County Conveners after this meeting according to the new ruling.

Mrs. Faye Coleman gave a brief report of the Annual Convention which she and Mrs. Sterling Batley attended for one day, but a more complete report will be given by our County President Mrs. Rufus Stevenson at some future meeting as she was unable to be present at this meeting.

Mrs. Keith Bennett gave a very full report of our Annual County Meeting held at our Brookbury Hall on May 6. She was thanked by the President for such a splendid report.

It was decided to have a Float at the Parade on July 1 and more plans will be made concerning it when we meet at the Brookbury Hall on June 19 at 1 p.m. to clean the hall for the many summer activities which are coming up.

Conveners reports consisted of short articles read by the conveners of Agriculture Mrs. Stuart Joyce and a comic article read by Mrs. Cliff Lowe, our publicity convener.

The Welfare and Health Conveners, Mrs. Lionel Allison then introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Erwin Watson who is the School Nurse at the A.G.R.S. Regional School and visits the Elementary Schools in the area as well.

Mrs. Watson explained the new system now issued in the schools and told us many interesting things about her work. She stated that there are many nutrition problems among school children and stated that they hoped to improve this a little at least by having more substantial and nutritional foods placed in the dispensers which are in the various schools so pupils will buy things which improved their health instead of the so-called junk foods which are now at their disposal.

Mrs. Watson was thanked for her interesting and helpful address and presented with a small gift as a token of appreciation for her effort.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses at the close of the meeting and all departed for home in a very bad thunder storm and heavy rainfall.

BURY — The June meeting of the Bury W.I. was held in the Bury Town Hall with Mrs. Herbert Rowell and Mrs. Dan Peleman as hostesses.

Motto: Learn from the mistakes of others. You can't live long enough to make them all yourself.

The Roll Call: Name a historical site you have visited and why historic.

There were fifteen members and one visitor present.

The meeting was opened in the usual way by the President Mrs. Alma Peleman, by singing the Opening Ode and repeating the Collect.

The Secretary, Mrs. Merlyn Coates read the minutes of the last meeting which consisted of Thank-you notes, a letter from the Dixville Home for Retarded Children, announcing an Open House will be held there.

A beautiful scroll had been sent to the Bury W.I. from Mr. Greaves, a veteran of Senneville Lodge.

It was decided that the scroll be framed and hung on the wall of the room upstairs in the Town Hall where the W.I. have most of their meetings.

The Citizenship Convenor, Mrs. Fitzsimmons announced that the Handi bags have been packed and would be sent the following day.

Mrs. Stuart Dougherty, delegate to the annual county Convention gave her report.

The Bury W.I. is supposed to serve doughnuts and coffee at the meeting of the Historical Society on June 29 in Eaton. The members can leave their doughnuts at Prangle's Store.

It was decided not to have a Float for July 1st this year.

Mrs. Herbert Rowell, delegate to the annual Convention at Macdonald College gave her report.

Mrs. Garnet Morrison gave the Treasurer's report in the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. Ross Goodwin.

It was decided to give a donation to the Dixville Home instead of sending food.

Conveners Reports: Agriculture: Mrs. Garnet Morrison read an article on Dutch Elm Disease.

Education: Mrs. Glen Olson read a copy of Bill 22 and the Petition protesting it sent in by Protestant School boards.

Health & Welfare: Mrs. Gilbert Wintle read an article on Millions Face Death by Starvation, in the absence of Mrs. Alan Matheson.

Home Economics: Mrs. R. Dougherty read an article on Lead Content in Electric kettles.

Publicity: Mrs. Dan Peleman read an article out of Mrs. George Parsons' scrapbook.

The meeting adjourned and Mrs. Fitzsimmons, who was in charge of the programme introduced Mrs. Ball who showed some very interesting slides of the work done by students in making pottery and other arts, 3 years ago in Sawyerville and Randboro.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Gilbert Wintle in Gould.

World Cup soccer finals tough test

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — With Brazil's soccer crown looking sadly tarnished, Latin America sets out again today in search of its first win of the 1974 World Cup series.

Argentina has the tougher task, facing Italy at Stuttgart in Group 4 of the 16-nation tournament. Uruguay takes on Bulgaria at Hanover in Group 3.

Other matches pair the Netherlands against Sweden at Dortmund in Group 3, and Haiti against Poland at Munich in Group 4. All kick off at 2:30 p.m. EDT.

Brazil's 0-0 draw against Scotland Tuesday kept the three-time champions still in the hunt for a fourth world crown, but did nothing to enhance their reputation.

They kept the Scots out only with a display of crunching tackles. Rivellino, Brazil's long-range scoring ace, collected a first-half caution from Dutch referee Arie Van Gemert and was fortunate not to be sent off for a series of second half fouls on Billy Bremner, the captain and midfield star of the Scots.

Scotland manager Willie Ormond criticized Brazil for his physical tactics. "Some of their tackles were so crude as to be unbelievable," he said. "I am a great admirer of Rivellino. But after being booked, I reckon he had three other tackles on Scottish players that could have meant the red card ordering off."

SCOTS BLAMED

Brazil Manager Mario Zagallo countered, "The Scots were the ones who started playing it rough. We could not just stand there and watch them hit us."

Yugoslavia slammed African champion Zaire 9-0, equalling the World Cup record set by Hungary over South Korea in 1954 and taking the lead in Group 2. Yugoslavia and Scotland each has three points in the group, but the Slavs lead on goals.

McAnally blasts two-hitter in 2-1 Expos win

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ernie McAnally, who has never had a winning season, sent Cincinnati Reds down with two hits Tuesday night, giving Montreal Expos a 2-1 victory and moving them within 1½ games of the lead in the National League East.

"It was the most satisfying win of my career," said McAnally, the last of the original Expo players. He was obtained in the 1968 expansion draft from New York Mets.

McAnally, 5-6, faced only 30 batters in outduelling Clay Kirby, 5-4.

"It was the best I've ever seen him pitch," said Reds' manager George (Sparky) Anderson. "It was the best game pitched this season."

McAnally retired the first eight batters in the game, then walked Kirby, who moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on Pete Rose's double for Cincinnati's only run.

PICKOFF PLAY

McAnally, who walked five difference.

Brazil follows with two points from two drawn matches. Zaire is last with none. Brazil must beat Zaire by at least 3-0 in its last first round match to be sure of a berth in the second round.

West Germany, the 1954 champion, made sure of advancing to the second round by defeating Australia 3-0 at Hamburg in Group 1.

East Germany and Chile, meanwhile, fought to a 1-1 draw in Berlin, keeping hopes alive for both teams.

Dusan Bajevic scored three of Yugoslavia's goals and became the leading scorer in the tournament.

GAME OF DAY

The game of the day was between Brazil and Scotland—a nerve-rattling affair of physical contact, rough tackling, goalmouth thrills and feverish atmosphere. More than 10,000 wildly cheering Scots were among the sell-out crowd of 62,000.

Brazil dominated the midfield at first and were technically superior, but in the second half, the Scots besieged the Brazilian goal. Bremner was like a man possessed, setting up one attack after another.

West Germany eased up and irritated their supporters who were hungry for more goals against Australia.

Wolfgang Overath, who has played in the last two World Cups, scored with a spectacular rising shot from outside the penalty area in the 12th minute. Bernhard Cullmann headed the second in the 34th minute.

Eight minutes after half time came a goal by Gerd Mueller, top scorer in the World Cup of 1970.

East Germany and Chile were tied 0-0 at halftime. Martin Hoffman shot East Germany into the lead in the 52nd minute, but an angled shot from Sergio Ahumada put Chile on even terms seven minutes later.

and struck out five, gave up the other hit to Dave Concepcion in the bottom of the fifth, then picked him off first base. He retired the final 16 batters he faced.

Kirby, meanwhile, parcelled out six hits to the Expos and was knicked for a run in the first inning when Mike Jorgensen walked, took second on a sacrifice and scored on Ken Singleton's single through the box.

The game remained tied until the ninth inning when, with the count 3-2, rookie Expos second baseman Jim Cox hit a bases-empty home run over the left field wall. It was his second of the year.

"It was," lamented Kirby, "a plain choke-up pitch—a hanging slider."

The loss ended his string of four victories.

"Cox excels in all phases of the game," said Expos manager Gene Mauch, "particularly in intelligence."

Rider veterans use Ottawa facilities

George Reed, president of the Canadian Football League Players' Association agreed Tuesday that the teams are within their rights to deny training facilities and equipment to CFL players.

"But I think it would be in team owners' best interest to help them," he said.

The nine CFL clubs Monday decided to withhold facilities and gear from league veterans who voluntarily resigned en masse on the weekend to avoid attending training camps until a contract dispute is settled.

But in Ottawa, Tuesday, the Rough Riders reversed field and decided to allow veterans players to use club facilities and equipment. The Rough Riders have no lease on Lansdowne Park, their home field, for this season and couldn't prevent the players from practicing there.

In the face of an offer by the city to allow the players use of dressing room facilities in the park, the football team relented and Rider veterans now have full use of the football team's facilities and gear.

The Riders, Grey Cup champions in 1973, are scheduled to meet the CFL All-Stars June 26 and the players' association has announced its determination to play the game despite the contract dispute.

Reed also said that he will attend a negotiation meeting in Winnipeg Thursday "with the idea we can solve this problem."

However, he said he was aware that team officials were threatening to use 25 United States imports on each 32-man roster if the strike by CFL players continues. The normal limit is 17 imports on each roster.

Reed said in an interview in Regina that the fact the club owners are considering such a course, indicates they can come up with the money to meet the players' demands, if necessary.

Reed also said the players have not refused to compromise on their money demands. Apart from Ottawa, veterans players Tuesday were conducting their own workouts at locations other than their home fields—mostly at University stadiums in their respective cities.

What is it?

GAME PLAN—Big identity crisis

TORONTO (CP) — Game Plan is suffering an identity crisis—it's worried that no one knows what it is.

In an attempt at alleviating the problem, the people involved in the sometimes-complicated program aimed at promoting athletic excellence held a news reception Tuesday to give a progress report.

Roger Jackson, chairman of Game Plan's technical committee, gave this example of the type of projects Game Plan has been promoting:

"Today, a 90-member track and field team leaves from Montreal for a five-week training and competition tour of Athens, Paris, Bucharest, Warsaw, London and Moscow."

"Never before has such a well-planned and well-coached tour occurred in the sport. Nine coaches will be working with 61 athletes."

NAME CHANGED

Game Plan, which began last February calling itself Game Plan 76, is an organization aiming to co-ordinate the efforts of federal and provincial governments, national sports governing bodies, the Canadian Olympic Association (COA) and Olympic Trust, the COA's financial agency.

In order to achieve its goal of international athletic excellence, Game Plan is making funds available for direct assistance to top-rated athletes, coaches and technical directors, for the staging of competitions and travel to competitions and for the purchase or hire of equipment and facilities.

Among Game Plan's programs is one which ranks top Canadian athletes in A, B and C categories.

Class A athletes are those rated among the top eight in their event in the world. B-class ranking means they are between ninth and 16th in the world. C-class athletes are those showing potential for moving up to the top two ranks.

In most cases, these top-ranked athletes are eligible for direct financial assistance, although some sports governing bodies, such as the Canadian Federation of Amateur Aquatics, choose to channel these funds instead to the member swimming clubs.

GIVES OUT RANKINGS

At Tuesday's reception, Game Plan released its first official list of 27 A-class and 30 B-class athletes and 30 coaches who are assisted by the program.

In his address, Jackson said Game Plan's short-term goal "is to significantly increase the number of A and B athletes by 1976 over that of Munich—in other words, to develop a depth of good performances rather than to set sight on specific numbers of medals."

But the program is not only aimed at improving Canada's position at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

"Game Plan is long-term," said Jackson. "It is not specializing in hot-housing athletes for success."

"As mentioned before, its goal is the energetic and planned technical development of sport, which is a necessary step before we can expect consistent international success."

Jackson said that Game Plan provides funds and technical assistance, but the task of developing athletes is that of the national and provincial sports governing bodies.

IT'S EASY FOR SOME

He said most of the larger sports groups, such as swimming and track and field, are able to make good use of the funds because they are well-organized, but smaller groups such as modern pentathlon and bobsledding and luge find it more difficult.

Jackson also confirmed reports that some sports groups and athletes had to wait a long time before receiving their cheques from Game Plan.

He said funds had been held up until recently because it was not determined until two weeks ago which provincial governments were going to participate and to what extent.

He said this now has been cleared up and all cheques have been mailed.

Game Plan money comes from the COA and Olympic Trust, the federal government, some participating provinces and the Olympic coin and stamp sale programs which are primarily aimed at raising funds to stage the Olympics in Montreal.

NHL players no go in WHA-USSR series

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey League Players' Association and owners shared a united front Tuesday, rejecting bids for NHL players to bolster the World Hockey Association in its fall series with the Soviet Union.

Alan Eagleson, NHLPA executive director, said Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins and goaltender Bernie Parent of the Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers had been approached by the WHA to play in the September series.

Esposito, who brought the matter before a meeting of the players-owners' council, said both he and Orr had been asked to join the WHA stars and "I heard that Bernie has also been approached."

The NHL was broached in February about reviving the Team Canada '72 concept of international competition in which the NHL stars scraped by the Russians in an eight-game series, winning the final three games to edge ahead in the showdown.

Renewal of the matches in September was rejected, Eagleson said, "because the timing itself was enough" to dissuade both the owners and players.

He said Hockey Canada and the various international hockey bodies were advised in February that the only series the players and owners might consider was one structured on a World Cup format in which teams from all the hockey powers could compete.

"We've said before we'd like to play a series on this basis, probably during the 1975-76 season, either midway into or at the end of the season," Eagleson said.

The Russians, he added, have already ruled out a late-season series, leaving the months of December and January in which to work out an arrangement agreeable to the NHL.

First start since '70

Giusti finds bullpen easier

Pittsburgh Pirates' starting rotation is a nice place to visit but Dave Giusti wouldn't want to live there.

"You get used to the pace in the bullpen and it's tough when you have to go out there for more than a few innings," the veteran relief ace said Tuesday night after making his first start since 1970 and blanking Los Angeles Dodgers for seven innings in a 2-0 National League baseball victory.

Houston's Mike Cosgrove would like to follow in Giusti's footsteps or at least the path Giusti made when he made 113 starts for the Astros in 1965-68 before he was traded first to St. Louis and then to Pittsburgh.

"I would like to think I've earned a starting assignment, but I don't think so," the young left-hander said after relieving Dave Roberts with one out in the first inning and holding Philadelphia Phillies to a pair of bunt singles the rest of the way in Houston's 1-0 triumph.

Elsewhere in the National League, Montreal Expos edged Cincinnati Reds 2-1, Atlanta Braves trounced New York Mets 6-1, St. Louis Cardinals blanked San Francisco Giants 3-0 and San Diego Padres whipped the Chicago Cubs 9-4.

REPLACED DEMERY

Giusti, who had made 255 relief appearances since his only Pirate start in 1970, was pressed into service when Larry Demery came up with a pulled leg muscle. He proceeded to limit the Dodgers to five hits over seven innings as the Pirates stretched their longest winning streak of the season to five games.

Bruce Kison pitched the eighth and then needed help from Daryl Patterson in the ninth. Los Angeles' Tommy John, 10-2, had his win streak snapped at five games.

"It's been a long time since I pitched well," said Giusti, who now has a 2-2 record this season. "I've been very sporadic. I'd pitch well in one game and then have two bad outings."

"He'll only start again in an emergency," said manager Danny Murtaugh.

ROBERTS HURT
Cosgrove, meanwhile, was relaxing in Houston's bullpen when Roberts pulled a shoulder muscle with runners at first and third and one out in the first inning.

Cosgrove worked out the first-inning jam and allowed only the two bunt hits and four walks the rest of the way. The Astros got the game's only run in the second inning on Tommy Helms' homer.

Ian Murrell drove in four runs with a bases-loaded triple and his first home run of the season and Atlanta rolled to its 23rd triumph in the last 31 games behind the seven-hit pitching of Roric Harrison.

The triumph left the third-place Braves three percentage points behind Cincinnati in the North Vancouver.

WHO IS GUILTY? — This pile of rubbish, maybe weighing a dozen tons, sits in front of Magog's tourist information office as a reminder to the public that keeping Lake Memphremagog clean is everyone's business. The varied array of items was taken from the Magog end of the lake on Saturday, June 15 by 175 frogmen who rallied at this site for the second clean-up operation of its type within a year. Other similar programs are planned.

Hunting meat with a bow

PORT HARDY, B.C. (CP) — The high price of rolled rump roast or rib steak at the local supermarket hasn't changed the eating habits of Ron Valdock.

Valdock gets all the meat he can eat for just $9—the price of his glass fibre hunting bow—and some dogged determination as he stalks game around this community on the northern end of Vancouver Island.

During the last bow-hunting season, which ran from August to December, the 35-year-old office manager got two deer, keeping him and his family in venison over the winter and spring.

Being a successful bow hunter takes more than the ability to shoot an arrow accurately, said Valdock. It also takes the willingness and ability to stalk an animal, sometimes for hours.

"When you're out in the woods, you're after a live animal," he said. "The whole point in bow hunting is stalking and getting close."

The successful bow hunter always stalks his quarry within 40 or 50 yards, Valdock said, and he personally gets within 30 yards before losing his arrow.

ARROW MORE HUMANE

The hunter believes bow shooting is more humane than using a rifle.

"A bullet takes in powder and other chemicals that cause a wound to fester, but a razor-sharp arrowhead produces a clean wound. So if an animal did get away, it would be more likely to live."

But Valdock added that he has never had a wounded animal escape.

There are three rules to bow hunting, Valdock said, keep downwind, keep silent and keep out of sight.

Some hunters use camouflage outfits, but Valdock prefers to use an old United States Army uniform to keep him inconspicuous in the woods.

Like many other bow hunters, he daubs his face with paint to lessen his chances of being seen.

"The face is the most obvious part of the body in the woods and the easiest thing to see," he said.

The bowman's main problem while travelling through the woods is remaining silent, Valdock said, and to help preserve the quiet, he ties his arrows on his wrist with a home-made quiver fashioned from a shag rug and a boot. The quiver keeps the arrows out of the way and lessens the chance of snagging one on a tree branch, causing a noise.

"The only problem comes when it rains," Valdock said. "The quiver weighs 50 pounds after a half-hour downpour."

Valdock has two tips for the beginning bow hunter—spend time learning to track animals while learning the woods and remember that when you shoot a deer, you have to pack it out by hand.

"Clean-up" keynote of rally held Saturday at Lake Memphremagog

MAGOG (CC) — "Clean-up" was the keynote to Saturday's scuba-diver rally at Magog last Saturday, June 15, when 175 frogmen and women plunged into Lake Memphremagog, retrieving several tons of rubbish, old logs and other items that were on the lakebed.

Organized by four enthusiastic diver hobbyists who are conservation-conscious, the project attracted participants from as far away as Toronto and parts of the United States. Gilles Pouliot, Marcel Courchesne, Jean-Louis Arsenault and Eric Whitehead ran a similar project last fall, when 75 divers took part. This year, determined to make people aware of the damage being done to our lakes, the men went after and gained national publicity.

"Maybe we haven't collected more than a thimbleful of rubbish compared to what lies in that lake, but we're making people aware that it's everyone's responsibility to practice conservation," a public relations spokesman aiding the project said.

The City of Magog also loaned a big hand in the event, which involved close to 500 persons. Having large crane equipment to lift items from the water, trucks with crews to haul junk away and a host of other personnel to help assist was Magog's contribution besides hosting a climactic party at city hall.

Many prizes were donated at the final party where Richard Martin, named top rated junk collector, was awarded $1,100 for performance. Lake Memphremagog has been threatened in recent years by abuse.

The idea of cleaning-up is widespread, and while projects like that held Saturday are but one of the big bids to make people aware of what is happening to the lake, organizers of the clean-up divers' field day want their work to serve as a cautionary reminder to the public besides the authorities.

"Just imagine what else there is in this lake, if we can collect tons from just one small area", an organizer stated. Unless the public cooperates, saving lakes like Memphremagog will become an impossible task. The Magog four who with the help of hundreds have taken this campaign on feel they are accomplishing their goal, but a lot is left to be done.

WI meeting

Death with dignity

Dear Ann Landers: This is an answer to "Argus-Eyed in Michigan," who criticized you for supporting "Death With Dignity." I have just had surgery for cancer and perhaps "Argus" might be interested in my thoughts.

As I lay here in the hospital after learning the bitter truth (terminal case—no hope), I wept for three hours, not because I am going to die but because of what medical science can do to keep me alive.

I lie here thinking of the money that will be wasted on me, money that could be used by my family for constructive purposes.

I am 70 years old. I had a happy childhood and a wonderful life. I spent nearly 50 years with a great husband and we raised a fine son. The doctors tell me I will have some "good" weeks when I recover from the surgery, perhaps several, but the cancer has gone too far and I cannot survive. When the pain becomes unbearable, I dearly wish the law would permit some kindly doctor to put me to sleep.

The best I can do now is to put my request in writing (and I will surely do so), asking that no extraordinary measures be taken to keep me alive. I will permit no further surgery or medication except pain-killers. "Argus" said, "Once this sort of thing gets started there will be no limit to who can be 'put to sleep!'" What an absurd statement! There are ways to write into the law protective provisions against murder. Is it humane to keep people like me alive to suffer when we wouldn't be so cruel to a beloved pet? Thank you for your concern! Ann.—M.P.

Dear M.P.: I must, once again, make it clear that I am not in favor of "mercy killing" (euthanasia), but am strongly opposed to keeping terminally ill patients alive. To put it more bluntly, I feel it is an indignity to refuse to permit them to die, by injecting needles, inserting tubes and using mechanical equipment.

Ask your doctor to load you up with as much pain-killer as you need, dear. And be sure to let your family know exactly how you feel. Too many terminally ill patients do not discuss this subject with their loved ones—and they should—openly and honestly. It can be a great release of tension for all concerned. My prayers are with you and God bless.

Dear Ann: Three years ago I became pregnant. My boyfriend was only 18 and still in high school. Don had no money, no diploma and no job. He told me he really didn't want to get married and I couldn't blame him. But my parents hounded him unmercifully and we were married one month before our baby was born.

This marriage is a nightmare. Don has been off work more than on. I have to take the child and go to my parents' house to get a decent meal. Don treats me rotten and ignores his son.

I am worried about the child. He is either in a depressed mood or so wild I can't handle him. My folks don't believe in divorce. What should I do?—Sue

Dear Sue: You made the mistake of letting your folks push you into this miserable marriage. Don't make another mistake by allowing them to keep you locked into it.

Your child needs counseling and you need a lawyer. If you don't do something about unwinding from this tragic mess soon, you'll need a doctor for your ulcers, migraines or whatever form the anxiety takes.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex—Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.$k

On behalf of the congregation of the Bulwer United Church, Mr. Stuart Merrill thanked Dr. and Mrs. Lovelace for their interest and concern in keeping this church open and wished them a long and happy retirement, and presented them with a "Mohair" throw.

Mr. and Mrs. Lovelace both expressed their thanks and appreciation and voiced the fact that they had enjoyed their warm and sincere relationship with the Bulwer Congregation.

Prior to the arrival of the guests of honor, the united Church Women held a short business meeting, with the president, Mrs. Murray Ward presiding. Mrs. Kenneth Johnston acted as Sec'y Pro Tem.

Confirmation and Dedication service

WINDSOR — On Sunday morning, June 9, Rev. P. Gaudine conducted a confirmation and dedication service at St. Andrew's United Church. A large congregation, with several visitors, were present. Danny Morel presided at the organ.

A brass collection plate, to be used in the Sunday School, was dedicated to the memory of the late Mrs. Charles Morey. The plate was presented by her grandchildren and was suitably engraved as follows: "In memory of our grandmother, Mrs. Charles Morey, presented by Karen and Kevin."

Eight young people were received into the membership of the church. They were: Karen Morey, Brenda Smeltzer, Debra Watson, Brenda McCourt, Karen McCourt, Michael Doyle, Don Paterson and Brian McCourt.

The new members each received a membership certificate and the gift of a Holy Bible, the latter from the U.C.W. The presentations were made by S.M. Paige, Clerk of the Session, assisted by Mrs. Henry Dubuc, Superintendent of the Sunday School. The elders, Messrs. H. Dubuc, M. MacMorine, F. Harper and D. Morey also came forward to extend the right hand of friendship to these young people.

Rev. Gaudine especially mentioned the interest that Mrs. Dubuc has taken in these young people, having watched them come up through the Sunday School from tots. The sermon, based on the thought, "The ability to listen" was most inspiring to all.

At the close of the service the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered.

Following the service a short congregational meeting was held. It was with regret that the members learned that Rev. Gaudine will be leaving this charge the end of June.

DR LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Please explain adrenal insufficiency

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please explain adrenal insufficiency. Some years back I was in poor health, losing weight, no appetite and exhausted. When I stood motionless I passed out. This led my doctor to suspect that it was caused by adrenal insufficiency. He gave me shots of ACTH. I was a new person. I took shots for about six years and regained my health. In fact, life took on a new meaning for me. I haven't had to take any medication, but I had gall bladder surgery, and I knew I'd be in trouble again. In the past I'd always had trouble after surgery. My nerves were a real problem for at least seven months after any operation.

I contacted my former doctor, and the night before my surgery I was given intravenous medication. I assume ACTH. It was such a different recuperation, none of the problems I had had previously. If I'd only known this years before I could have carried children.

My question is, "Why does the gland function at times and at other times it needs help?" I am 49 and going through the menopause beautifully.

DEAR READER — Adrenal insufficiency occurs when the outer shell of the adrenal gland fails to produce enough hormones. This outer shell is called the adrenal cortex. Its normal function depends on stimulation by a hormone from the pituitary gland that rests underneath the brain. That hormone is the adrenocorticotrophic hormone, abbreviated ACTH. The term ACTH then means a hormone that stimulates the adrenal cortex.

There are two ways that you can have adrenal insufficiency. One would be simple failure of the adrenal cortex itself because of some disease or disorder within the gland. The other cause would be a failure of the pituitary gland to form enough ACTH.

In your case apparently the doctor felt that your problem was inadequate stimulation of the adrenal gland and so he gave you ACTH. This in turn stimulated the adrenal cortex to produce more adrenal hormones and cause the changes in symptoms that you have noted.

If the fault lies in the adrenal gland itself, it's necessary to give adrenal cortical hormones, rather than ACTH, to replace the deficiency.

Patients with adrenal insufficiency usually have weakness, fatigue, weight loss, tendency to faint (which you've described), anemia, problems with their digestive tract and sometimes emotional and mental changes. When the adrenal gland itself is the cause, there is sometimes bronzing of the skin. This does not occur when the pituitary gland is the cause.

In more recent years it has been more generally accepted that mild forms of adrenal insufficiency can occur. In mild forms, you can have periods when the adrenal gland is not meeting the needs. Periods of stress, such as a surgical operation as you mentioned, may also place a greater demand on the adrenal gland. The important point is that almost all cases of adrenal insufficiency can be handled and treated to provide a normal, healthy life expectancy.

It's also important to realize that a lot of the symptoms associated with adrenal insufficiency are the same general type of symptoms that occur from anxiety neuroses and other problems. Fatigue, for example, has many causes, including depression and anemia, to mention just two. The proper diagnosis and treatment depend on careful tests to identify the real problem. This is particularly true if you are going to make an early diagnosis before the disease progresses to the stage of presenting all of the classic signs.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on menopause, send 50 cents to the same address and ask for "Menopause" booklet.

children gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Ward to help their elder daughter Paula celebrate her seventh birthday.

Outdoor activities were enjoyed until the rain forced them to continue the festivities inside. Indoor games were played with Paula winning 1st prize and her cousin Laurie Ward, second, for pinning the tail on the donkey. Charleen Smith won the balloon game. All the children received a prize.

At lunch time a pink and white birthday cake, decorated with ballerinas, centered the tea table. When the candles were lit, Paula asked her friends to join her, in blowing them out.

Paula enjoyed opening her gifts, taking time to thank each one individually as their gift was displayed. At the close of the afternoon Paula passed around favours to all present.

Those helping Paula celebrate were her sister Sandy, her cousins Laurie and Penny Ward of Sawyerville, Craig Logan of Birchton, Trudy Sparkes, Vicki Herring, Lisa Wall, Kellie and Angie King, Nelson Bullard and Charleen Smith. Tina Patten of East Angus was unable to attend.

— Did you know that the cantaloup was named after the town of Cantalupo (Italy)? This fruit, often referred to as 'the king of melons', is rich in vitamins A and C and low in calories. Half a cantaloup (60 calories) satisfies everyone's daily requirements in vitamin C, so important for building strong bones and teeth. Cantaloup may be enjoyed 'nature' or with ice cream, blueberries, strawberries, apples, grapes, etc. or in a fruit salad. Diced, thinly sliced, or formed into balls and flavoured with fresh mint or your favourite liqueur, cantaloup in season is, at low cost, a truly regal dessert.

Fighting between relatives

Dear Ann Landers: I read your column every day. I have to. I work for the newspaper. But I do enjoy it.

In regard to the bitter fighting between that daughter-in-law and mother-in-law, I'd like to tell them both, "Grow up!"

My own mother, an Italian, always told me, "If you want to know how your future husband will treat you, watch how he treats his mother."

When I met my future mother-in-law for the first time, I was impressed by the respect and affection he showed her. That made a big hit with me.

My mother-in-law is a fabulous person, and although there are many things we don't do the same way, she doesn't try to change me and I don't try to change her. My own mother is wonderful, too. She has never tried to run my life or my husband's.

The man I married isn't perfect, but then, neither am I. We accept each other as we are and get along great. Sign me — C. McC. in El Paso

Dear C.: You sound like a happy family. Thanks for a letter that doesn't have a beef — for a change.

Dear Ann Landers: I need some answers on adultery. Can you help me? You've heard the story many times. After 38 years of marriage the husband has an affair with a young girl. The marriage has been good, generally speaking. They have well-adjusted, independent children. The wife has kept herself attractive and interesting. The husband insists he has never loved anyone but her.

In spite of all this, the husband thinks his little fling was not such a terrible thing. He wants his wife to excuse him on the grounds that all his friends and co-workers have had affairs and nobody was hurt.

Question: Should I accept this and make the best of it? How many times should a wife "forgive and forget"? How can she be sure he means it when he says he is through playing around?

I am very much in love with my husband and will do whatever is necessary to save my marriage — if you think it's worth saving. — Tormented

Dear Tormented: I hate to sound like a broken record, but here I go again: Ask yourself this question: "Will my life be better or worse without him?" In other words, dear, what are YOUR alternatives?

My hunch is you'd better hang in there and let your husband know you are really willing to forgive and forget. And then, be sure you forget about what it was you forgave him for.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has been a heavy smoker for years. Three months ago he lost his fifth close relative to cancer and decided he had to quit smoking. So he took up a substitute that is making me sick. HE has started to chew tobacco, and it is more than I can stand.

The corners of his mouth and his teeth are always terrible looking from the brown stuff. He smells just terrible.

I get nauseated when I have to clean the sinks because he spits all over the house — in the kitchen, the bathroom, it makes no difference. Please tell me how to cope with this problem. It's driving me crazy. — Rope's End

Dear End: I can recall few questions that I couldn't answer myself or didn't know someone to call for help. This one has me stumped. Does anyone out there have a solution to this woman's problem? If so, please let me know so I can help her.

A no-nonsense approach on how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ragout Mistral is a hearty beef stew from southeastern France.

- 2 cups dry French white wine (or beef broth)
1 can (10½-ounces) condensed consommé
3 tomatoes, peeled and chopped
3 zucchini, cut into 1-inch thick slices
1 can (15-ounces) baby whole carrots, drained
1 can (14-ounces) hearts of celery, drained
¼ cup coarsely chopped olives
- Heat butter in a Dutch oven or kettle. Sauté garlic and shallots until golden. Sprinkle meat with salt and pepper and roll cubes in flour. Brown meat cubes on all sides in Dutch oven. Add wine, consommé and tomatoes. Cover and simmer gently, stirring occasionally, for 1½ hours or until meat is tender. Add zucchini and cook 10 minutes or until zucchini are tender. Add carrots and celery cut into halves, and olives. Reheat until bubbling. Serve with baguette (bread). Makes about 6 servings.

Ragout Mistral from Provence

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Few countries are without some form of a stew which began as a peasant's dish and is now accepted as a glorious discovery by those who like good, basic, properly seasoned dishes. These are dishes without pretension which evolved as the housewives threw whatever vegetables were in season in the pot.

In southeast France, the sunny, light-hearted Provence offers a profusion of fresh vegetables. From here comes a Ragout Mistral which has the basic ingredients of garlic, tomatoes and olives — and then whatever ingredients the cook wants to add.

Those who want to serve a wine with this stew may follow the example of the Provencal homemaker who often uses a dry white wine to prepare this dish, and serves a dry white wine — not red — with it. Suitable would be a Meursault from south of Beaune, for example.

Iced tea and lemonade devotees will find their summer favorites also go with this hearty French import. For dessert serve cheese and local fresh fruit in season.

RAGOUT MISTRAL

(French beef stew)

- ¼ cup butter
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 cup chopped shallots, leeks (or onions)
3 pounds lean chuck, cut into 1-inch cubes
Salt and pepper
Flour

Think a playboy's free? George Hamilton says no

BY DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD—(NEA)—Quick, now. What image pops into your head when you hear the name George Hamilton?

If you're like most people, you immediately think of a playboy. Handsome, suave, debonair. The kind of guy most men would like to be at least one weekend in their lives.

For poor George, that image is his problem. It was an OK image for a while but he thinks he's grown up now and has outgrown it. A couple of things have happened to help change the impression although it still clings to him like a particularly nasty leech.

The first thing that happened was that George made and starred in "Evel Knievel," a rousing action film about the motorcycle thrill man. He says that film brought him a whole new crop of fans.

"The kids are the ones who recognize me now," he says. "They loved that picture."

The other event that helped carve a new George Hamilton was his marriage to Alana Collins. Nothing can cool a playboy image faster than a marriage.

George says that becoming a husband has brought him something most newlywed guys claim they have lost—freedom. This peculiar inverse effect is worth examining.

"When I was a man-about-town," he says, "that whole dating thing tied me down. Every night, I'd have to go out, pick up my date, go somewhere, take her home. God help me if I stayed over a while—I wouldn't get home until two or three in the morning, with that cement feeling."

"Now I have freedom. I can stay home with Alana. I don't have to go out. I love being married."

GEORGE AND ALANA HAMILTON: The dating thing tied him down.

George and Alana are expecting their first child, due sometime in September.

"Boy or girl," George says, "its name will be Ashley Stevens Hamilton. I really don't care what it is, but I tell Alana I want a girl because I think that's what she wants to hear."

The "Evel Knievel" experience—George put the whole thing together—has been important in his life. Now he feels that that is where his future lies. He found he loved the wheeling and dealing, the watching of expenses, the supervising of the whole works.

He's now working on several other picture deals, beginning with one about the celebrated (in Los Angeles) C. C. Julian case—a wealthy oil man and his shenanigans involving movie stars, courts, politicians, even the Chinese.

Meanwhile, he's putting his new-found business acumen to another field. He's remodeling a house for himself and Alana and Ashley, whenever he/she arrives. He's been shocked at the money the building trades folks get. When he found an electrician making $1,500 a week, George told him how surprised he was.

"You're in the wrong business," the electrician told him. And George agreed.

his ace just as South had done, but then he would play out his last diamond. West would not have been able to ruff and a low heart would have been discarded from dummy. After that start South would cash his ace of hearts and ruff his last two hearts in dummy.

Jim: "The extra chance was that West had started with just two trumps. If West held a third trump, he would ruff; dummy would overruff and South could then try the heart finesse. He would still be down one because there had been no way to make the contract."
