Country music

By DAVE MULHOLLAND

After seven years and a string of hits, Dave & Sugar have packed it in. Ironically, the decision wasn't Dave Rowland's, nor was it Melissa Prewitt's or Jamie Kaye's, the two woman who made up Sugar.

"Elektra Records had an option in my contract to pick me up as a solo act," Dave says, "and Jimmy Bowen (Elektra's boss in Nashville) decided to exercise the option. It was a surprise to me and the girls."

Dave says Melissa and Jamie have been shopping around for solo contracts, so it was a logical move at this time.

"I had mixed emotions about it," Dave says. "I loved having my group and we've been very successful, and then suddenly it comes to an end. But then I got real excited thinking about going on my own."

The former member of The Stamps Quartet, which toured with Elvis Presley, has hired two women to sing backup, so he can continue to perform Dave & Sugar hits such as Queen of the Silver Dollar, Tear Time, The Door Is Always Open, Gotta' Quit Lookin' At You Baby, I'm Knee Deep in Loving You, Golden Tears and New York Wine & Tennessee Shine.

Dave's first single as a solo artist is titled Why Didn't I Think of That. The flip side is titled Natalie, a tribute to five movie stars, including the late Natalie Wood.

His first solo album will be titled (Are you ready for this?) Dave Rowland - Sugar Free. "About a year ago Kenny Rogers and I were playing tennis, and he told me if I ever went on my own, I should call the first album, Sugar Free, so we're going with it," Dave says.

"I'd like that one big hit record that would make me a household name," says Iris Larratt. Instead of establishing herself with that "one big hit," Iris seems to be doing it with a succession of moderate hits.

In 1979 her very first single, You Can't Make Love To A Memory, bounded up the charts both here and in the United States. The song still receives a lot of airplay. She followed it with Sorry Doesn't Always Make It Right and She Won't Love You.

Her recent single, I've Got A Cowboy in the Saddle, made moderate gains in the U.S. and got as high as number 13 on RPM Magazine's national country chart. Her record sales have been good enough to land her Juno nominees as Country Female Vocalist of the Year in 1981 and again this year.

But if moderate success hasn't made Iris Larratt a household name, it's certainly established her with country broadcasters. They recently named her among their top three choices, along with Carroll Baker and Anne Murray, for Canadian country female vocalists.

As for the future, "Well, there's a new album coming any day now," Iris says. "It's more country than the last album; not as many strings and not as overly produced." Maybe it'll make her a household name.

Danny Hooper has a very good voice, but he has absolutely no soul. There isn't a false note in this slickly produced album. There also isn't any hint that Hooper has any emotional range.

The best song on the album is his own composition, Sick And Tired Of It All. It's well written and he manages to get some expression into his lyrics. But on the other nine songs, Hooper's singing is as squeaky clean as his picture on the album cover. Bland country.

S. Barry Blues Band benefit to aid ailing Sawyerville co-op

SAWYERVILLE — Another Townships landmark is in danger of disappearance. The seven-year-old Sawyerville Co-Op, The Corner Store is in dire financial straits and in danger of being dissolved.

Established as a liaison between the nutrition-minded and the community it served, the store was basically subsidized by profits and cash flow from the large co-op membership. The opening of l'Alentour in Lennoxville and the de-centralization of the co-op movement meant a decreasing subsidy, coupled with an increase in operating costs. This year, with the loss in profits from organic orange sales due to adverse weather conditions, the debts mounted quickly.

The Corner Store is considering a change in location, more dynamic community interaction, and a series of benefit functions to help cover operating costs. The store will continue its cooking courses, expanding them to include nutritional information on natural foods. An outdoor summer cafe is planned with the possibility of displaying local arts and crafts at low mark-ups.

The first benefit concert will feature Montreal's premier blues group, The Stephen Barry Blues Band. The group is no stranger to the area, having played in Sherbrooke to a loyal and increasingly strong audience twice. Their virtuosity is underscored by their recent choice as back-up group for top blues names in Montreal, including Buddy Guy and Big Mama Thornton. The rock 'n roll night will feature a heavy mix of basic R & R and Barry's laid-back approach to the blues.

Their one-night appearance will take place in Birchton, about 15 minutes from Lennoxville, Saturday, May 8, at the Cedrier du Prevert. Show time is at 8:30 p.m., with dancing going into the wee hours of the morning. Advance tickets and information are available at:

By Merritt Clifton

BRIGHAM — Young in years, furniture-maker Gilles Champigny practices his craft with the oldest of techniques. His hand-tool demonstrations highlighted the annual Maison Notre Dame des Erables arts and crafts fair in Brigham last weekend, and for the second year running, his traditional chests and buffets stole the show. Using pegs instead of nails, Champigny handrubs his creations with beeswax until only an expert could tell them from Quebecois craftsmanship of centuries ago.

Conceived to promote craft products from the Maison Notre Dame des Erables' own manual training workshops, the fair now includes artisans from the community, as well. Present last Saturday and Sunday were potter Richard Surette, who lives right across the street, weaver Rene Pincince of Bromont, and woodworker Georges Caron, offering a variety of plaques and cribbage-boards.

Woven goods and ceramic pieces by the Maison Notre Dame des Erables' mentally handicapped students dominated the exhibition, which also included small leather items, rag-dolls, and artificial flowers.

Critical comment: As usual at local exhibitions, schlock far outweighed quality. But that can't be blamed on the Maison Notre Dame des Erables kids, who, retarded or not, are obviously quite technically proficient at weaving, knitting, and whatever else they've been set to. On the whole, the kids, who don't sign their work, outshine the so-called professionals who do, and one suspects that they've been set to turning out schlock in many cases only because their professional instructors can't stand the competition.

Public judges professional photographers

The public is invited to judge the competition, then their results will be compared to those of the professionals. Kristian went around to all the 104 photos and pointed out what could have made them better. Below, the portrait would have been better if the hand was less prominent.

RECORD/PERRY BEATON

By Carla Straessle

Both Gordon Kohl and Bruce Aikman insist that the long-haired, horned and prehistoric-looking Highland Cattle from the Scottish Highlands and west coastal islands is the ideal breed for this country. Although it has failed to catch on in the east until only recently, it has been a far more common sight west of Quebec since the turn of the century.

The breed's merits are many, not least of which is its superior marbled beef, still relatively unknown here, but considered prime in the U.K. They are also very docile and hardy animals, easy on fences, and require only little and low-quality pasture land. Most of all, they thrive outdoors even in the harshest of Canadian winters thanks to their unusually thick hide and great profusion of hair which includes a downy undercoat and a long outercoat which may reach 13 inches. Aikman says, "The healthiest way to winter an animal is outside."

Kohl and Aikman are the proud co-owners of Gille Buidhe (Golden Boy in Gaelic) of Benmore, a bull they brought over from Scotland to, in Kohl's words, "beef up their stock." He is of very good lineage and both his owners say there will be an excellent market for his male progeny for breeding purposes as there are few of his calibre around. Aikman reports he's had "a tremendous amount of inquiries," and added, "everyone wants breeding stock, and it's hard to find." Inquiries came not only from Canada, but also from the U.S.

Aikman was the first of the two to experiment with this breed after having tried many others. He got his first Highlanders four years ago and was the only one in Quebec at the time with the breed, much to his surprise. "A good part of Eastern Canada is ideal for Highland Cattle. Quebec only produces 15 per cent of the beef it consumes. Most of it comes from Alberta. We could produce most of it if we used our land." He said other Quebecers had had them before but for some reason they didn't catch on. One explanation for this is that many farmers tend to conservatively follow their fathers footsteps, opting for the breeds they know, and also, people are often wary of the Highlanders' pointed horns.

Aikman prefers them by far to the other beef cattle he has raised. "They are the easiest thing on fences I've ever seen." His main fence consists of two strands of electric wire. "In the winter they could have walked over it, but they didn't." Aikman said that the breed's only possible drawbacks are the somewhat higher prices, for the moment, their thick hide which makes skinning a little more difficult, and their unsuitability for being raised in large quantities in a feedlot, only because of their long horns.

Kohl became interested in the breed because the only pasture land he had was overgrown fields. He discovered that he was practically neighbor with Aikman, one of Quebec's six registered Highland breeders at the time, whose farm near Way's Mills on the Old Stage Road is not far from Kohl's in Georgeville. Kohl bought his first three heifers a year ago from a breeder in Shelburne, Ontario and bred them to Aikman's old bull Patrick, about 10 months ago. By a freak of nature, he had the misfortune to lose his first calf early this year because of a breech birth. The calf was turned backwards inside the mother and drowns or suffocates if it doesn't come out quickly. Since this unfortunate incident, however, his two other cows have each delivered healthy calves which look more like furry, little teddy-bears than cattle.

Kohl laughs about it in retrospect, or at least consoles himself by considering the statistics released by an American Highland Cattle publication which state that while most cattle breeds have birthing difficulties about 5 per cent of the time, Highlanders do at a rate of only about 1 and a fraction per cent. Since his second calf was badly positioned and had to be moved around inside the mother, he classifies this, too, as a difficult birth. He stated, seeing the lighter side, "66.6 per cent of my cows have had trouble, so if these statistics are right, I'll never have trouble again."

After four years experience and 17 calves, Aikman says he feels it's usually best to leave a Highland cow whose mothering instincts are highly developed to her own

The reason there is such a low frequency of birthing trouble is the calves' small head size and short necks. In general, Highland calves only weigh about 45 pounds at birth while others such as Holsteins weigh up to 95, according to Aikman. He added. "This is no disadvantage in my books."

Mature Highlanders appear to be somewhat smaller than those of other breeds of beef cattle, but they are actually about the same size. Their short stocky legs are deceptive. They are long-bodied, deep and low-set animals. The average weight for a full-grown cow varies from 900 to 1,400 pounds depending on their age and condition. Bulls vary from 1,300 to 2,000 pounds and steers will reach 1,000 pounds or more. Aikman said that despite their somewhat clumsy looks, "They are good jumpers and can jump any fence." Both breeders told stories of how the cattle seem to have strong homing instincts, never wandering far and always returning to the fold.

The new bull, Gille, was flown in January from Scotland after an embargo for foot and mouth disease lifted at the end of October. The first space was available only in January because the animal must spend two weeks in quarantine in the U.K., then one month at Mirabel upon arrival. A three-month period is allowed in case problems develop.

His owners are very satisfied with his treatment at Mirabel because, contrary to their expectations, he had gained 15 pounds by the end of his stay there, and when he was delivered to Kohl's farm in a huge, disinfected van, he sauntered casually down the ramp, looking quite content.

Kohl and Aikman both remarked that a very good article on Highlanders in Harrowsmith, (Number 25, volume IV:5 of 1979) generated much interest in the breed. There are now about 50 registered breeders in Canada plus about 156 members of the Canadian Highland Cattle Society. They claim there are about 150 new registrations per year which include mostly new calves and some imports, but that there is also an indeterminable number of unregistered ones.

Highland cattle have a reputation of gaining weight more slowly than other breeds, but Aikman said this only depends on their diet. "They eat stuff Herefords wouldn't eat. If they get the same feed as others, they'll gain just as fast." They are slaughtered at about two years. For the moment, however, Kohl and Aikman will sell most of their calves for breeding. Aikman slaughtered one last year and said that despite the fact that it was hung only very briefly, "You could cut the roast with a fork."

Aikman has about 20 in his fold and aims for 25. One of his neighbors started a fold about the same time as Kohl. Aside from the other breeders in Quebec, there are a number of farmers who have just one animal for cross-breeding with Herefords and other breeds.

"Very few people see them here and know what they are, but elsewhere in Canada, they seem to know." This includes vets and other professionals such as government agronomes. Aikman said "They don't even realize there's a breed of cattle that would solve all their problems."

Kohl is a retired Montreal lawyer, who also raises goats, bees, chickens and basically strives towards self-sufficiency. Aikman, an engineer, has been farming for quite a while and does freelance engineering for a few months per year. But he says he won't continue for much longer. In addition to his cattle, he produces high quality maple syrup.

Both farmers have families, impressive root-cellars, dogs, and lots of enthusiasm about their discovery of this nearly perfect beast.

Bedford art equals Sutton efforts

By Merritt Clifton

BEDFORD — Sutton, supposedly, is the arts capital of Brome-Missisquoi, but over 30 Bedford artists are having none of that. Their group exhibition on display at the Bedford Masonic Hall until Sunday, 2 to 9 p.m., daily, offers talents as diverse, and as accomplished, as Arts Sutton group showings have demonstrated -- even if that sometimes isn't saying much. On the whole, for better or worse, the Bedford artists are more daring. And, more important to those seeking a bargain for the mantelpiece, they price uncommonly fairly.

Landscape painter Linda Tannahill draws top dollar among the Bedford group, $200-$250 per canvas, as well she should. Her 'Sugar House', 'St. Armand', and a scene of the Missisquoi River near Richford, Vermont, display scenic talent in the same bracket as Mary Martin (Dunham), watercolorist Faith Newton (St. Albans), and Gordon Ladd (Knowlton), whose work may be more familiar to Record readers. Cecile McNamara's 'Pres De St. Alexandre' also shows an eye for landscape in a conventional, realistic mode, and Claire Normandin's 'Debacle Des Glaces' offers promise, despite fuzzy images in paces and a tree whose top appears truncated only to give her room to include some sky.

Suzanne Malleur's 'Un Coin De Jeffersonville' offers a strikingly successful experimental landscape. The hour is either dawn or dusk. Slightly blurred white houses become ghosts of a bygone part of Townships history. Another landscape painter, Mildred Codham, is difficult to evaluate because her works range from the composition tour-de-force 'Richelieu At Noyan', where a heavy black bridge tries to overwhelm weak drawing, to the finely detailed, well-drawn, but dull 'Serenity' river scene, to the simple, exciting 'Mallard In Motion.'

Johanna Tardif-Smith's 'Self-Portrait' is most striking painting on display. Whether or not it's a good painting depends upon taste. Monchromatic pink with dark highlights and little perspective, it depicts the artist with her five favorite cats. I'd hang it in a coffeehouse, but not my home.

On the negative side, four Bedford and Stanbridge East artists offer variants of 'How Not To Paint A Waterwheel.' Living within shouting distance of the waterwheel at Stanbridge East, one might assume these four ladies would have some idea of how this rather simple contraption works. If in any doubt, they could always go have a look. But no.

Therese Roy's 'Souvenir De Autrefes' presents a dam dropping water a good two feel from the wheel, so that the wheel couldn't possibly turn with enough force to drip gallons from the backswing -- but it does, somehow. Moreover, the dam itself is too low to turn the wheel usefully, even if the wheel were within striking distance of the drop. And the wheel has no sluice to direct the flow into the blades.

Lillian Spracklin avoids such problems by covering her millpond with snow and ice, or whipped cream, or possibly froth from all the pig manure floating down the Pike; one can't be sure.

Diane Rhicard's attempt is most successful, appealing in a Grandma Moses kind of way, except that her lack of perspective makes one suspect the waterwheel is impaled against the bricks of the Stanbridge East museum by means of the sluice -- unless, of course, one lives there and knows better.

Then there's Joan Ditchan's plagiarism of Albrecht Durer's 'Melancholia', one of the more famous prints ever published. This, appropriately is hidden in the darkest corner of the gallery. There are myriad legitimate reasons why an artist might copy an old master -- for practice, as part of another, larger composition, or (snicker) for spite. But legitimate copies are so labeled: 'after so-and-so.' Not a word on either Ditchan's descriptive tag or her drawing itself hints that this isn't an original. Why is it here? Why is she asking $150 for it, a crude copy at that, when quality reproductions of the original run around $15? What the hell's going on here, Bedford?

And then one finds the usual run of imitation greeting-cards and schlock cluttering up the rest of the gallery, including a horse-and-buggy galloping merrily down Main Street somewhere with one wheel at right angles to the other. A match for Arts Sutton... from whom one expects better, if only because they pretend to be more than the Bedfordites.

Game of our Lives: A legend in the making

"The Game of Our Lives" by Peter Gzowski (McCLELLAND & STEWART): $18.95, 278 pp.

The Cinderella team for the eighties came crashing to the ice in the current Stanley Cup Puck Wars when it met the glitter boys from Los Angeles who wrote finis to any thoughts of a dynasty for the Edmonton Oilers. Peter Gzowski's book about the youthful hockey team from Lougheed Land is nevertheless an interesting companion when the TV fare starts to cause everything you view to take on a pale bluish tinge.

Popular journalist and communicator Gzowski (just recently named to replace Don Harron on CBC Radio's Morningside wake-up show) combined his boyhood fantasies with his professionalism and accompanied the Oilers for all of their home and away games during the 1980-81 season. "The Game of Our Lives" has a picture of The Kid tying his laces on the cover, but the book is not strictly an exploitative sop to the Gretzky fever that has gripped the NHL in 1981-82.

The Oilers are a team that is remarkable for its youth (average age, just over 25 -- almost certainly the youngest team in NHL history) and for the lesser publicized complements to Gretzky who conspired to oust Les Habs from the playoffs, and extended the Islanders to a tension-filled sixth game before bowing out of the 1981 post season play. Gzowski tells us of the strange ritual rites that welcome an Oiler to the NHL -- from the acquaintance made with Chicago Shirley, to the rude removal of most of a young player's hair -- concealed and in clear sight. The roster of the Oilers is made familiar to the reader -- the players, of course, and the characters from chippy coach Sather to the play-by-play broadcaster who is known to the team as "Road Trip".

The title of the book refers to the significance that Gzowski sees the game of hockey taking on in the lives of Canadian youth, and the author lets us share some of his insights into the way hockey becomes part of a youth's growing up process. He traces his own love affair with hockey back to the borrowed sealer rings that bound up shin-pads, and the fanatical attempt to use up Beehive Corn Syrup in prodigious quantities to be able to send the labels away for the glossy pictures of the stars. Thumbnail sketches of Canada's pantheon of hockey immortals are here too: Joe Malone, Morenz, Richard, Howe, Beliveau, Hull and Orr are given treatment by Gzowski who sees The Kid, Gretzky, as the latest edition of a hockey legend in the making.

The fact that the Year of the Kid recently became the year of the Oiler's demise in the playoffs -- their stunning setback by the lowly L.A. Kings a kind of bitter irony after the Edmonton club had jolted the Canadiens out of the playoffs a year earlier -- does nothing to lessen the readability of Peter Gzowski's The Game Of Our Lives. For hockey enthusiasts grown tired of the endless drivel written about the Leafs and the Habs, The Game of Our Lives is a reminder that the game is played in cities beyond Toronto and Montreal, and that pucks are ripping into the twine with a regularity that is as record-shattering as it is entertaining. Wait 'll next year.

LETTER O (A&M)

Detroit -- the musical topography of Motor City conjures up visions of either the influx of Motown on pop music in the sixties, or else the power rocking of Mitch Ryder and the Detroit Wheels. Black music, rhythm & blues or outright raunch -- hardly any compromise between the extremes. Enter Letter O, a Detroit quintet that serves us blended tracks full of harmony and British style hipness about the sounds that sell these days -- the Police, Split Enz, or even flashes of Little River Band are called up by Letter O's likeable approach to contemporary AOR radio.

Already established in the FM markets of the Hub City, Letter O has a lush vocal sound that is laid on backing tracks that are as various as American pop can make them. "Telephone Ring" sounds like it could be a hit record, with its strong hook and easy lyric. "Mona Lisa" is a bruising rocker, with bending guitar strings by Garrett Sussman, and Dick Coulson's hard-edged lead vocal. The status of Toronto's recording facilities is underlined in the fact that Letter O would journey to that town's Nimbus 9 Studio to lay these tracks, rather than avail themselves of the Detroit recording venues. Presumably the man listed as Executive Producer is the very same Jack Douglas who was working with John Lennon's songs the night the gritty Beatle was shot down. On the strength of DOUBLE FANTASY's impressive showing (well, John's half; Yoko's is atrocious), Douglas will likely enjoy the vogue that Richard Perry earned for a few years. Letter O has a likeable, easy command of the pop idiom, and can put Detroit's music into a new category with this exceptionally entertaining disc.

Glass Moon GROWING IN THE DARK (QUALITY)

A nondescript, obscure album that comes along with absolutely no advance publicity is a rarity -- no ballyhoo, nary a word in the trade, but when it's placed on the turntable, a knockout performance! Such a record is Growing in the Dark by Glass Moon. The fact that Glass Moon covers the great Hollies' hit "On A Carousel", is a directive as to the kind of music they play -- and the harmonies they so competently produce. Background vocal aid is supplied by Ian Lloyd -- presumably the same Lloyd who fronted the short-lived band, Stories. Basically Glass Moon is a four man gathering -- keyboards, bass, drums and guitars -- with piano man Dave Adams, drummer Chris Jones, and bassist Nestor Nunez doing the bulk of the writing.

Something for everyone at the local flea markets

By Joan McCoy Ling

BROMONT — Last Sunday was the opening day for many of the flea markets across the Townships. Vendors lined up at the Bromont gate at 8 a.m. waiting to get a choice spot for selling their wares.

For $15, they were allocated a piece of ground about 16 by 10 feet and were given a copy of regulations. They parked their trucks, vans, and station wagons and unpacked their goods, ready for their first potential buyer.

There were the old pros who had been patronizing flea markets for years, and there were the newcomers, perhaps a bit naive to the flea marketing business, but all were anxious to make a buck, selling anything and everything.

Eric and Robin Whitehead have a jewelry stand there. The necklaces and earrings are all hand made, and range in price from $1 for a pair of earrings to $10 for Mother of Pearl.

"There's more money in flea markets than in shopping centres," said Whitehead who has a boutique called Bijou de la Mer, in Les Galeries Orford in Magog.

"Tell me about the economy," he said. "I can sell my jewelry for half price here and I guarantee all my work. More people are shopping at flea markets than at shopping centres." Whitehead sells at three or four markets per week.

Lucy St. Pierre of Sherbrooke has a second-hand stand. "You never know what you'll sell here," St. Pierre said. "I've brought goods in on a Sunday and not sold a thing. The next week, I bring the same thing and it sells like hotcakes."

Price ranges here from 25 cents to $250 for a prized antique clock. "A lot of people are collectors," St. Pierre said, "and if they browse around the flea market, they'll find many pieces for their collections."

Obviously, you can't just clean out your garage to sell second-hand merchandise. "I buy at commission sales and auctions all winter, and resell it in the summer," said St. Pierre.

Doreen and Caroline Coates from Magog, work all winter preparing for the summer months. At their handicraft table you can buy ornaments like mice made from walnut shells for 50 cents to stuffed dolls in frilly dresses at $25. A good day at the flea market for them is $150 worth of sales.

If the kids need clothes, you can buy the little ones a new outfit for as little as $3 to $10. Although the vendor was reluctant to be photographed or identified other than Ray, he said he deals with contractors and end of lines and bankruptcies to be able to offer such affordable prices to the consumer.

Linda Singer is a pro at flea market trading. She started out selling costume jewelry but said she'd had better luck selling adult colouring books, and finally she switched to African Art.

Singer became aware of the flea market game the first year she was in it. "I came to the flea market with my car packed to the roof," she said. "I carefully unpacked all my goods and set them up on my table. I noticed that the other vendors had not unpacked yet. They came to my table and looked everything over, and bought everything I had. I was happy -- I had about $200 in my pocket and everything was sold before the crowd got there. Later I saw the other vendors had my goods on their tables with the prices jacked up at two or three times what they paid for it. I lost about $500 to $700."

Singer said many unsuspecting housewives, wishing to make a buck and unaware of the prices of things, are often taken in the same way until they learn the art of flea-marketing.

Singer said once you've got the flea market bug, you're hooked. "It's like being in show business or at the carnival," she said. "If you're into human nature, you'll find every kind of person here."

"Here the customer is not always right," she said. "When they start haggling over 50 cents, you can yell right back at them." Singer said that the end of the season is tiring. "Rather than sell for 50 cents less, I'd rather throw it on the ground and step on it."

"It's not the life for a straight nine-to-fiver," Singer said. "At the end of the day you're filthy, and some of the crap they feed you in some of the restaurants well, you could die from that stuff."

Singer said the consumer flocks to the flea market for five reasons:

-- To do something immoral on Sunday. If they don't drink or smoke, they do business. They buy something on Sunday.

-- To bargain. You can't talk someone down at Sears.

-- To get a buy. Things are cheaper there.

-- For collectables.

-- Just for the excitement of it all. It's fun to spend a day at the flea market.

"Soon this will be the only way to shop," she added.

"Unfortunately," Singer said, "there's always the possibility that stolen articles could be sold at a flea market. If it's a fairly new article and it's selling for a ridiculously low price, you should beware."

Lucy St. Pierre sells just about everything, all of it second hand.

Most markets watch for stolen goods and plainclothes police patrol often.

Visitors will find lots of cute little puppies, kittens, bunnies or even piglets penned up in cages, waiting for a good home. Policies concerning animals stipulate a child cannot buy one without parent's permission. Even so, a kitten will occasionally be left under a car when the people decide they really didn't want it after all.

There's furniture, appliances, leather goods, dishes and health food.

All in all, it was a good day though. I bought a Rubix Cube and a pair of jeans and a doll for my kids. And for me, a pair of very sore feet.

Events

The fifth annual MASSEY-VANIER COMMUNITY FLEA MARKET takes place Saturday in the school's cafeteria between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. No reservations are necessary and both visitors and vendors are welcome. For more information, call (514) 263-5684 or 243-0112.

The public FLEA MARKET continues in the Cine-Parc Bromont off exit 78 on the Autoroute. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and admission is free. The flea market is open every Sunday to October 31 and Saturdays in July and August.

Come let your body talk at the Mouvement Creatif et Danse classes offered by Andree Jette. Andree has been involved in teaching movement and dance for 12 years and is an experienced animator of large groups.

These classes have been created to let people, dancers or not, discover their own creative talent and energy.

Having just returned from New York city and eight weeks of studying with internationally-known movement specialist Gabrielle Roth, Andree is ready to share her new-found knowledge.

Participants can expect to move and let go to lively music in an atmosphere of permission. There will also be theatre. Take one class, or two or all - every Tuesday and Thursday - 8:00 - 10:00 p.m. at the dance studio of Bishop's Sports Complex. Pay at the door; price includes use of the Sports Complex that night. 842-4242, info.

Television

The life and work of controversial scientist J. Robert Oppenheimer father of the A-bomb, is detailed in a drama beginning May 11 and running for seven consecutive Tuesdays. OPPENHEIMER, starring Sam Waterston, was the winner of the 1981 Best Drama Series Award given by the British Academy of Film and Television Arts. The show is on AMERICAN PLAYHOUSE at 9 p.m. on Vermont ETV.

Also on Vermont ETV on Monday at 8 p.m. is a trilogy of short stories by Irwin Shaw. THE GIRLS IN THEIR SUMMER DRESSES AND OTHER STORIES BY IRWIN SHAW stars Charles Durning, Jeff Bridges, Carol Kane and Claudine Auger in three separate productions.

If you're in the mood for something light Sunday night, there's CADDYSHACK starring Bill Murray, Chevy Chase and Ted Knight. The story of the zany antics of a group of laid-back golfers at an overly-stuffy golf club on Channel 12's 9 p.m. movie.

A WOMAN CALLED GOLDA starring Ingrid Bergman spans the life of one of the 20th century's greatest women. The second of a two-part series on the former Prime Minister of Israel is aired Wednesday at 8 p.m. on Channel 12.

The Lansdowne exhibition of bird paintings continues at the museum of Seminaire de Sherbrooke.

Theatre

Just about the best bet for theatre this week is L'HOMME ELEPHANT the French-language version of the story of John Merrick. Germain Houde stars in this touching drama at the Salle Maurice O'Bready Saturday evening. Showtime is 8:30 and ticket prices range from $4 to $9.

Popular comedienne Rita Lafontaine stars in Michel-Pierre Boucher's L'HEURE D'AVANT APRES opening Saturday at the Theatre de l'Atelier. Lafontaine will play the role of Marie Cote, a 35-year-old woman making critical decisions about her future. The play runs Tuesday to Saturday until June 12. Showtime is 8:30 and reservations and information are available by calling 563-1778.

The QUEBEC DRAMA FESTIVAL tenth anniversary celebrations wind down Saturday with a final performance and an awards presentation during the evening. The competition, featuring 11 one-act plays from English-language community theatres, is at the Centaur theatre in Montreal.

Exhibitions

The Bibliotheque centrale de pret de l'Estrie presents an exhibition of sculptures and collages by DIANE BOUDREAULT. Boudreault, originally from Cowansville, uses jute, cheesecloth and fibreglass to achieve special effects in her collages. The exhibition continues until May 14 at the BCPE location 4155 Brodeur Street. Exhibition hours are 1 to 5 p.m. daily and 1 to 4 p.m. on Sundays.

Sutton photographer BILL NUNNELLY opens a one-man exhibition tonight in Outremont at La Luaison de l'Image. Nunnelly's work has often appeared in the Townships Sun and was featured in Townships Week last summer when he presented a show for local photographers at Arts Sutton. Nunnelly has also sold photographs to various national publications. The Outremont show, at 1016 Laurier St. West continues until May 19.

Sunday is the last day to see the works of local artists at the Masonic Hall in Bedford. This is the 14th annual show for the more than 30 Bedford artists who display oil paintings, acrylics, pen and ink sketches and original photographs. The hall is located on Academy street and doors are open between 2 and 9 p.m.

The National Museums of Canada continues the exhibition of Lansdowne Bird Paintings at the museum of Seminaire de Sherbrooke. Some 90 works by James Fenwick Lansdowne, considered to be one of the best bird painters in the world, are on display. The exhibition continues until June 23. Hours are 12:30 to 5 p.m. daily except Monday and 12:30 to 9 p.m. Thursday.

The Beaulne Museum in Coaticook presents an exhibition of the works of prize-winning Canadian painter RICHARD SYLVESTRE. The Montreal-born Sylvestre will be featured until May 30.

Quebec architecture between 1960 and 1980 is the theme of the Laurier Museum's latest display. The exhibition traces architectural developments since the Quiet Revolution through texts, photographs and illustrations. Local architecture firms will be presented in a special display. The museum opens Mother's Day. Hours are Tuesday to Friday 9 a.m. to noon and 1:30 to 5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday 1:30 to 5 p.m. Admission is charged.

The St. Lambert United Church Women hold their 15th annual Antique, Arts and Crafts show and sale today and Saturday. Some 16 antique dealers will be featured and the usual church bazaar fare -- home baked goods, novelties and hand-made items -- are on sale. The church is located at 85 Desaulniers Blvd. in St. Lambert.

Don Messer's Jubilee was one of the most popular programs on CBC television during the 1960s.* REAR-VIEW MIRROR *brings back a show from 1963 Sunday, May 9 at 2 p.m. It's followed by another 1963 program, Wilderness, a film about pioneers, trappers and prospectors in western Canada.

Music

This weekend at Le Vieux Clocher de Magog, folk singer MARIE-CLAIRE SEGUIN will be performing tonight and Saturday evening. Showtime is 8:30 and admission is $7.50. Seguin, who has been singing with various groups since the late sixties, has made several tours through France, Belgium, Germany and Canada.

The Bar J' at Le Vieux Clocher presents PIERRE LETOURNEAU next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, beginning at 8 p.m. Admission is $5. Le Vieux Clocher is located on Merry Street North.

Tomorrow is the final deadline to register for auditions with the Sherbrooke Youth Symphony. The auditions, which take place May 15 and 16, are open to musicians between the ages of 13 and 24. For more information, call Andree Pigeon at 566-1888 between 2 and 8 p.m.

Tuesday and Wednesday, MAUREEN FORRESTER, one of the greatest contraltos of our time, appears with the MONTREAL SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA and mezzo-soprano LOIS MARSH. Part of Les Grands Concerts series, the show begins at 8 p.m. For ticket information, call (514) 842-3402.

At Chez Rene, soft rock fans can hear the FLYERS from Monday to Wednesday evenings. Again, there is no cover charge. The event is part of a Retro rock and roll party.

ZOE HARLEN, just back from a tour of Newfoundland, is at the Del Monty in Rock Island tonight and tomorrow night. Show begins at 10 p.m. and admission is $1.

Next Friday at 8 p.m., the Massey-Vanier High School Band presents its annual Spring concert in the school auditorium. The band will play a variety of music including classical, Dixieland, ragtime, and popular music from the 70s and 80s. Also featured will be the Massey-Vanier Chorale. During the intermission, the audience is invited to view works of art done by the students of Massey-Vanier. Admission is free but donations will be accepted. For information, call (514) 263-3772.

Movies

MISSING, a powerful, fact-based story of an American businessman (Jack Lemmon) searching for his son in revolution-torn Chile, opens at the Capitol Thursday. Sissy Spacek gives a strong performance as Lemmon's daughter-in-law. Missing should not be missed. Also playing on the same bill is CONTINENTAL DIVIDE, starring the late John Belushi. In what was not one of his better performances, Belushi plays newspaper columnist Ernie Souchak, a hard-living city journalist who finds himself on assignment in the Rockies. Good for laughs, but basically a series of skits from Saturday Night Live. Check the ad in this issue for times.

The Cinema Carrefour will be showing BODY HEAT, a suspense thriller billed as a 'very adult movie'. Body Heat stars William Hurt and Kathleen Turner. Also featured on the same bill is THE END, a comedy about death starring Burt Reynolds, Sally Field and Dom Deluise. See ad in this issue for showtimes.

Clint Eastwood in ESCAPE FROM ALCATRAZ is the feature at the Derby Port Drive-in tonight and Saturday. Sunday Derby-Port shows THE INCREDIBLE SHRINKING WOMAN with funny lady Lily Tomlin. From Monday to Thursday, D.B. COOPER is the feature. Shows start at sundown and admission is $2 and children under 12 are admitted free.

Radio

Beatles fans should stay close to their radios this weekend as the CBC presents THE BEATLES AT THE BEEB on The Entertainers. The show, which will be aired on CBC Stereo Saturday at 10:35 a.m. and on CBC Radio Sunday at 1:05 p.m., features radio shows recorded by the Beatles on the BBC between 1962 and 1965. Some 39 songs, some never before heard on this continent, will be broadcast.

Hollywood seeks jocks

By Steve K. Walz

More and more aging athletes are beginning new careers in Hollywood.

Astros ace hurler Don Sutton, who is nearing the end of his major-league pitching career, signed a feature movie deal with an independent producer to play Grover Cleveland Alexander, the legendary pitcher of the 1920s. That role was once played by Ronald Reagan in the 1952 film, "The Winning Team."

There's also a report that Lee Meriwether ("Barnaby Jones") who has her own production company would like to have Reds fireballer Tom Seaver as her co-star in a project called "Scarsdale." Seaver has remained mum about a prospective movie career because he is preoccupied with recovering from a nagging back injury.

Yankee shortstop Bucky Dent tried his hand at acting a few years ago when he co-starred in the ABC-TV movie "Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders." After Bucky's uninspiring performance, it's best that he concentrate on his baseball career.

Two ex-pro football stars, Bubba Smith and Ben Davidson, have had moderate success playing tough guys in various movies and TV shows.

Two other sports movies are in the works, but the producers are looking to fill the lead roles with established actors.

Producer Gerry Gross has reportedly signed Joe Don Baker ("Eischeid") to play the title role in the "Babe Ruth Story," which is supposed to go before the cameras later this year. John Tracy is interested in having "Ragtime" star Howard Rollins play Jackie Robinson in a film to be made later this year.

There's also been talk of doing a movie based on the exploits of ex-Yankee skipper Billy Martin, now the manager of the Oakland A's. Casting the roles of Yankee owner George Steinbrenner and ex-A's honcho Charlie Finley should be interesting experiences.

FAME

By Steve K. Walz

LEGEND — Oscar winner Barbara Stanwyck will play Mary Carson, an Australian landowner, who tries to corrupt a handsome parish priest (Richard Chamberlain) in "The Thorn Birds," ABC's forthcoming mini-series. The last time Miss Stanwyck did long-form TV was when she starred opposite Linda Evans in "The Big Valley," which ran on ABC from 1965-69.

Richard Chamberlain

STAGELIGHTS — "Little House on the Prairie" is coming to Broadway next year. The new musical, which is based on Laura Ingalls Wilder's nine-book series, also will focus on the fictional Eastern family who moves to the barren Kansas plains in the 1860s. NBC recently announced plans to focus on the younger cast members of TV's "Little House."

TELE-BLIP — Yet another TV film on Prince Charles and Lady Diana is in the works. CBS intends to make "Charles and Diana: A Royal Romance" starting this month in London. No one has yet been cast. ABC also recently announced its intentions to make a TV movie on the royal couple.

Prince Charles

FOCUS — NBC's historical saga, "Marco Polo," which will air later this month, took 13 months to shoot. Ken Marshall, who stars as the legendary traveler claims, "Filming in so many exotic places and dealing with cultures so alien to my Midwestern background, I would often experience things as Ken Marshall that I would later use in scenes as Marco Polo. Just like Marco, this was my first real opportunity to travel and it turned out to be the best education I ever had."

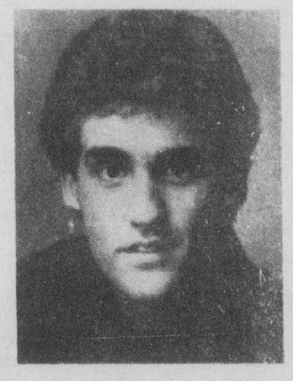
Speaking of Soap

By MARY ANN COOPER



John Wesley Shipp who plays Kelly Nelson on "Guiding Light".

For your enjoyment, this week's column features an interview with John Wesley Shipp who plays Kelly on the "Guiding Light".

Q.: You play a very, shall we say, naive, type of individual.

A.: Very trusting. I like to say trusting.

Q.: Do you have a problem playing a character like that? Do you wish he had a little bit more streetwise smarts?

A.: If he did it would be a different character. I have enjoyed the character a lot. I came on as the character that was in the mind of the new writer like the new young leading man on a soap whereas other actors have had to suffer through trial periods. I felt like this role was really padded from the beginning so I wouldn't knock it by saying I wish it were another character. I do find him unbelievably trusting and naive at times but that is part of the character.

Q.: It doesn't seem to affect his popularity as far as with young teenage girls. I think that says something about the audience out there as far as what they expect to see.

A.: They like variety. I mean, not everybody has to be Luke Spencer and not everybody has to be Kelly Nelson, you know, I think that is a mistake that people make a lot of times. They say, well, this sells over here so everybody is going to do it. Then it stops selling because everybody is doing it. Someone has the guts enough to try something else and that sells and then everybody copies them.

Q.: Tell us a little bit about your new album and tell us about the album images and is that still available?

A.: Yes. We did that on a limited release mainly through like soap magazines and to the soap public sort of to test the waters and we sold out our first pressing (which is kind of an unusual thing even on a major label) and so we are pressing ahead and starting work on a two sided single, first, and releasing that on a much larger scale.

THE DOCTORS -- Barney and Natalie threaten Billy with arrest for blackmail if he marries Nola. Billy showed Luke documents which prove Natalie was a prostitute in California. Billy plots with Katy to prevent Greta from getting full custody of Lee Ann. Theo and Greta discuss marriage.

PRIME TIME CORNER

KNOTS LANDING -- Gary and Abby's game is up when Karen and Lilimae spot them together in a lunchtime assignation; and Laura, believing that Richard is contemplating suicide, decides to move back in with him.

Val refuses to believe the rumors she has been hearing about Gary and Abby, until the night of the cocktail reception for the publication of her novel based on the Ewing family of Dallas, when neither Gary, who is expected, nor Abby, who is invited, shows up. Humiliated and outraged, she goes looking for him with murder in her eye.

DALLAS -- Even Miss Ellie seems to have lost all patience with J.R., which could severely hamper him in the custody fight for his son.

As J.R. prepares to challenge Sue Ellen for temporary custody of John Ross, his plans for discrediting her backfire. Meanwhile, Bobby desperately tries to find an adoptive child for Pam and himself as his wife's emotional stability declines to the extent she obviously needs medical help. Life is looking up for Cliff Barnes as he assumes the presidency of Wentworth Tool and Die and meets his stepsister, Katherine, for the first time. Ray, also, is enjoying his new rewards as a businessman but his wife shares his enthusiasm with a great deal of apprehension. The new Dr. Cooper saves a woman's life in an emergency procedure, but pride makes Mitch refuse the generous compensation offered by her husband, while his sister, Afton, asserts herself with J.R. but is forced to back down.

Gould makes TV debut in CBS's 'Rules'

An increasing number of film stars are now appearing on TV. Elliot Gould is the latest movie star to move to the small screen, although the veteran actor says that his once lucrative film career is "not dead yet."

Gould makes his television dramatic debut as a husband and father in the throes of a marital crisis in CBS's "Rules of a Marriage," airing on May 10 and 11. Elizabeth Montgomery co-stars in the four-hour drama.

The New York native was nominated for an Academy Award for his role in the 1969 film "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice." His co-stars, Robert Culp, Natalie Wood and Dyan Cannon, also have starred in TV projects.

"Though this is my first dramatic TV role, I found this to be a very good career opportunity and I'm very happy with it. In fact, I wouldn't even mind doing a TV series if the price was right," Gould says.

"Most of the network and movie executives don't know what they're doing. The networks and movie studios are just corporate appendages to the conglomerates that won them.

Elliot Gould

"And although I feel TV and movie production is at a stalemate in terms of evolution, things will return to normal. I mean, look at England. TV, especially, has to be more than a commercial medium."

"Despite my past, this was not an easy role for me becuase it was written by somebody else," says Gould, who at one time was married to singer-actress Barbra Streisand. "But I'll tell you what, this drama is totally contemporary as far as dealing with the trials and tribulations of marriage.

"I tried to make myself one with the material. To me, 'The Rules of Marriage,' are parallel to the laws of nature."

ROYAL VIDEO — The continuing media fascination with royalty — especially the saga of Monaco's Princess Grace and her two rebellious daughters and the interest in Britain's Prince Charles and Lady Diana — has created the third video trend for the network's fall '82 season.

At least three series pilots containing regal settings in fictitious kingdoms are in various stages of development. NBC's "Fit for a King" centers around a contemporary royal family in a small European country and stars Dick Van Patten ("Eight Is Enough") and Katherine Helmond ("Soap").

ABC is making "The Quest," which is also known as "Lands End to Lands End," on location in France. The story, by Stephen J. Cannell ("The Greatest American Hero"), concerns four Americans who have been determined to be heirs to the throne of the tiny Mediterranean kingdom of Glendora. Perry King, Noah Beery Jr., Karen Austin and Ray Vitte are the contenders for the throne.

The other two video trends are series in the "Raiders of the Lost Ark" genre and thrillers featuring hardboiled detectives modeled after Humphrey Bogart's Philip Marlowe.

STARDUST — Anne Archer will team up with veteran TV star Frank Converse in a "limited" NBC series, "The Second Family Tree," which will air sometime during the 1982-83 season.

Miss Archer, who received positive reviews for her movie work with Sylvester Stallone in "Paradise Alley" and John Ritter in "Hero at Large," will play a divorced woman with three children, one of whom is deaf. She marries Kevin Tree (Converse), who is also divorced and the father of a young son.

TELE-BLIPS — Judson Scott, who stars as "The Phoenix" on ABC is a hot commodity in Hollywood these days. The actor has two major flicks, which will open this summer. He will be featured in Twentieth Century-Fox's "I, the Jury" and in Paramount's "Star Trek — The Vengeance of Kahn."

GETTING RESPECT

Will Rodney Dangerfield finally get the respect he deserves? The answer can be seen in the comedian's first prime-time special, "The Rodney Dangerfield Show," airing WEDNESDAY, MAY 12 on ABC.

CHECK LISTINGS FOR EXACT TIME

PBS in the spotlight

Waterston as Oppenheimer

Sam Waterston stars in the American Playhouse presentation of "Oppenheimer," airing in seven one-hour segments beginning Tuesday, May 11 on PBS. (Air dates may vary; check local listings.)

Filmed on location in the United States and Britain, the story dramatizes the career of American physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer, who was known as "the father of the atomic bomb."

Oppenheimer is one of the most puzzling figures in contemporary American history. In 1945, he was considered a hero after successfully directing the Manhattan Project, which was the largest scientific research project in history. The project produced the world's first atomic weapons and brought about an end to World War II.

Yet in 1953, President Eisenhower was pressured to revoke Oppenheimer's security clearance until charges that he was a Soviet spy could be properly answered. The claim had its roots in Oppenheimer's early days as a left-wing intellectual and physics professor at the University of California at Berkeley.

"Oppenheimer" portrays the controversial physicist's rise and fall over a period of 15 years, from his Berkeley teaching days through setting up and operating the secret bomb laboratory in New Mexico in the early 1940s.

Movie Nostalgia

By Marie Iandiorio

Tennessee Williams' Pulitzer Prize-winning play "A Streetcar Named Desire" was brought to the screen by Warner Bros. in 1951. Directed by Elia Kazan, the film was nominated for seven Academy Awards and is recognized as a film classic.

Among the Oscar winners for "Streetcar" was Vivien Leigh, whose performance as the lonely Blanche DuBois won her her second Best Actress Oscar.

The two stars pictured here were also nominated for their performances, but only one of them received the coveted statuette.
